QUEEN ANNA'S NEW WORLD OF WORDS

Transcriber's Note

Throughout the Dictionary two different forms of the letters E and O are used, to represent the different sounds they can have in Italian. The close E is displayed in its normal form (E — e), the open E with a special character the author had made for this very purpose: it has here been rendered with Ē — ě. The close O has an oval shape, and is shown in italics, while the open O has its normal appearance.

A brief table of contents, not present in the original text, has been added for the reader's convenience.

Hir humblest seruant I. F. wisheth all the true felicities, that this world may affoord, and the fullest fruition of the blessednesse that heauen can yeeld.

This braine-babe (ô pardon me that title most absolute supreme Minerua) brought with it into the world, now thirteen yeers since, a world of words: Since, following the fathers steps in all obseruant seruice of your most sacred Maiestie, yet with a trauellers minde, as erst Columbus at command of glorijs Isabella, it hath (at home) discouered neere halfe a new world: and therefore as of olde some called Scotia of Scota, and others lately Virginia, of Queenes your Maiesties predecessors: so pardon again (ô most Gracious and Glorious) if it dare be entitled QVEEN ANNA'S New world of words, as vnder your protection and patronage sent and set forth. It shall be my guard against the worst, if not grace with the best, if men may see I beare Minerua in my front, or as the Hart on my necke, I am Diana's, so with heart I may say, This is QVEEN ANNA'S, as the Author is, and shall euer be

Your Soueraigne Majesties inuiolablydeuoted subiect and most obliged seruant

TO ALL READERS.

To be a Reader, requires vnderstanding; to be a Critike, iudgement. A Dictionarie giues armes to that, and takes no harme of this, if it mistake not. I wish thee both, but feare neither, for I still rest

Resolute IOHN FLORIO.

Maiestie of our sacred Mistris.

*I am, all that I am, Florio, thy debter:
Many men owe thee more. yet thou of all
Oblig'd to thee in deepe affections fetter,
Doest for this testimoniall tribute call
But to three more; who haue discharg'd it better:
I say but this (but this is too-too small)
Great is thy Masters-prize, thy MISTRIS greater,
At whose foot praises, phrases, poem's fall.
Th' analogie is short. SHE is of worth
A wondrous Anacephalaiosis;
A None-pareil, sans parallel: set forth
To shew perfections Abstract. So is this.
Italian honor's hir, Italian SHE.
That language thou adorn'st, that language thee.*

Il Cándido.

To my deare friend and brother M. Iohn Florio,
one of the Gentlemen of hir Maiesties Royall
Priuy-chamber.

*I stand not to giue praise before the face
Of this great worke, that doth it selfe commend:
But to congratulate the good and grace
That England com's thereby to apprehend:
And in hir name to thanke your industry
Laborius Flório, who haue so much wrought
To honour hir in bringing Italy
To speake hir language, and to giue hir note
Of all the treasure that rich tongue containes:
Wherein I cannot but admire your paines
In gathering vp this vniuersall store,
And furniture of words for euery arte,
And skill of man: So that there seem's no more
Beyond this search, that knowledge can impart.
Which being a worke that would take vp the powers
Of more then one whole man, I wonder how
You could substract so many serious howres
From that great summe of seruice that you owe.
But that it seemes the beaming Gracefulnesse
That lightens from the most refulgent QVEENE
Our sacred Mistris, work's that ablenesse
As mak's you more, then els you could haue beene.
Wherein the power of Princes well is seene
That can infuse such force, and make age greene.
And it were well, if in this season, when
They leaue erecting Churches, Colledges,
And pious monuments, they would build men
Who of their glory may be witnesses,
And what they doe be theirs: As Mazons raise
Work's not for them, but for their masters praise.
For, would they but be ples'd to know, how small*

*A portion of that ouer-flowing waste
Which run's from them, would turne the wheeles and all
The frame of wit, to make their glory last:
I thinke they would doe something: but the stirre
Still about greatnesse, giues it not the space
To looke out from it selfe, or to conferre.
Grace but by chance, and as men are in place.
But that concern's not me, It is ynow
I doe applaud your worke. Thus from my Plow.*

Samuel Daniel.

To my dearely-esteemed friend M.
Iohn Florio.

*Kinde friend, the strictnesse of these few-few lines
Can not expresse thy worth, nor my goodwill:
As for thy worke, I leaue it to the skill,
And sharpest censure of the best engyn's.
Nor can thy choise be better'd, who propynes
Th' industrious labor's of thy painefull quill
To one who is, and was, and shalbe still
That Phæbe, who in fulnesse euer shin's.
She shalbe great Protectrice of thy paines,
And she will weigh this worke at no small rate;
I know hir high Heroike heart disdain's
To show it selfe forgetfull or ingrate:
Els she should wrong that race from whence she spring's B'ing Daughter, Sister, Mother, wife to Kings.*

Italian Dictionarie, called QVEEN ANNA's

*Florio, thou doest deserue a world of flowers,
No garden can supply thy store of merit;
A garland made out of Parnassus bowers
Must girt thy temples and adorne thy spirit.*
*Thy FORMER WORLD, built vp thy Fames high-towers,
Whereby eternall praise thou doest inherit;
But this NEW WORLD, giuen thee by sacred powers
Doeth to a neuer falling height now reare it.*

Could haue bin giuen vnto so rare a child?
It's fit, whose Sire liues in the Princes eye,

For she with him, and he with hir doeth share.*
