I would build that dome in air,

That sunny dome! those caves of ice!

And all who heard should see them there,

And all should cry, Beware! Beware!

50 His flashing eyes, his floating hair!

Weave a circle round him thrice,

And close your eyes with holy dread,

For he on honey-dew hath fed,

And drunk the milk of Paradise.

1797-98 1816

Frost at Midnight

The Frost performs its secret ministry,

Unhelped by any wind. The owlet's cry

Came loud—and hark, again! loud as before.

The inmates of my cottage, all at rest,

5 Have left me to that solitude, which suits

Abstruser musings: save that at my side

My cradled infant¹ slumbers peacefully.

'Tis calm indeed! so calm, that it disturbs
And vexes meditation with its strange io And extreme silentness. Sea, hill, and wood,
This populous village! Sea, and hill, and wood,
With all the numberless goings-on of life,
Inaudible as dreams! the thin blue flame
Lies on my low-burnt fire, and quivers not;
15 Only that film,² which fluttered on the grate,
Still flutters there, the sole unquiet thing.

Methinks its motion in this hush of nature

9. A harplike instrument, said to foretell the arrival of an unexpected guest, 1. Coleridge's eldest son, Hartley, a nephew called "strangers" (lines 26, 41).

2. Bits of soot fluttering in a fireplace; in folklore,

FROST AT MIDNIGHT / 811

Gives it dim sympathies with me who live,
Making it a companionable form,
20 Whose puny flaps and freaks the idling Spirit
By its own moods interprets, everywhere
Echo or mirror seeking of itself,
And makes a toy of Thought.
But O! how oft,
How oft, at school, with most believing mind,
25 Presageful,⁰ have I gazed upon the bars, foretelling
To watch that fluttering stranger! and as oft
With unclosed lids, already had I dreamt
Of my sweet birthplace, and the old church tower,
Whose bells, the poor man's only music, rang 30 From morn to evening, all the hot Fair-day,³

So sweetly, that they stirred and haunted me
With a wild pleasure, falling on mine ear
Most like articulate sounds of things to come!
So gazed I, till the soothing things, I dreamt,
35 Lulled me to sleep, and sleep prolonged my dreams!
And so I brooded all the following morn,
Awed by the stern preceptor's⁰ face, mine eye schoolmaster's
Fixed with mock study on my swimming book:⁴
Save if the door half opened, and I snatched 40 A hasty glance, and still my heart leaped up,
For still I hoped to see the stranger's face,
Townsmen, or aunt, or sister more beloved,
My playmate when we both were clothed alike!⁵
Dear Babe, that sleepest cradled by my side,
45 Whose gentle breathings, heard in this deep calm,
Fill up the interspersed vacancies
And momentary pauses of the thought!
My babe so beautiful! it thrills my heart
With tender gladness, thus to look at thee,
so And think that thou shalt learn far other lore,
And in far other scenes! For I was reared
In the great city, pent 'mid cloisters dim,
And saw nought lovely but the sky and stars.
But thou, my babe! shalt wander like a breeze
55 By lakes and sandy shores, beneath the crags
Of ancient mountain, and beneath the clouds,
Which image in their bulk both lakes and shores
And mountain crags: so shalt thou see and hear

The lovely shapes and sounds intelligible
60 Of that eternal language, which thy God
Utters, who from eternity doth teach Himself in all, and all things in himself.
Great universal Teacher! he shall mold
Thy spirit, and by giving make it ask.

3. M a r k e t day, o f t e n a t i m e of festivities.

5. In early childhood, w h e n boys a n d girls wore

4. I.e., seen unclearly b e c a u s e of e m o t i o n .

t h e s a m e kind of i n f a n t s ' clothing.

8 1 2 / S A M U E L T A Y L O R C O L E R I D G E

65 Therefore all seasons shall be sweet to thee,
Whether the summer clothe the general⁰ earth generative, vernal

With greenness, or the redbreast sit and sing
Betwixt the tufts of snow on the bare branch
Of mossy apple tree, while the nigh thatch
70 Smokes in the sun-thaw; whether the eave-drops fall
Heard only in the trances of the blast,
Or if the secret ministry of frost
Shall hang them up in silent icicles, Quietly shining to the quiet Moon.

1798 1798

The Rime of the Ancient Mariner

I N S E V E N P A R T S

Facile credo, flares esse Naturas invisibles quam visibiles in rerum

universitate. Sed horum [sic] omnium familiam quis nobis enarrabit?

et gradus et cognationes et discrimina et singulorum munera?

Quid

agunt? quae loca habitant? Harum rerum notitiam semper ambivit ingenium humanum, nunquam attigit. Juvat, interea, non diffiteor, quandoque in animo, in tabula, majoris et melioris mundi imaginem contemplari: ne mens assuefacta hodiernae vitae minutiis se contra-hat nimis, et tota subsidat in pusillas cogitationes. Sed veritati interea invigilandum est, modusque servandus, ut certa ab incertis, diem a nocte, distinguamus.

T. BURNET6

Part I

An ancient Mariner

It is an ancient Mariner

meeteth three Gal-

lants bidden to a

And he stoppeth one of three.

wedding feast, and

—“By thy long gray beard and glittering eye,

detaineth one.

Now wherefore stopp’st thou me?

The Bridegroom’s doors are opened wide, 5

And I am next of kin;

The guests are met, the feast is set:

May’st hear the merry din.”

He holds him with his skinny hand,

“There was a ship,” quoth he. io

“Hold off! unhand me, graybeard loon!”

Eftsoons⁰ his hand dropped he. straightway

6. Thomas Burnet, seventeenth-century English

do not doubt that sometimes it is well for the soul theologian, from his Archaeologiae Philosophiae: “I to contemplate as in a picture the image of a larger can easily believe that there are more invisible than and better world, lest the mind, habituated to the visible beings in the universe. But of their families, small concerns of daily life, limit itself too much degrees, connections, distinctions, and functions, and sink entirely into trivial thinking. But mean-who shall tell us? How do they act? Where are they while we must be on watch for the truth, avoiding found? About such matters the h u m a n mind has extremes, so that we may distinguish certain from always circled without attaining knowledge. Yet I uncertain, day from night.”

T H E R I M E O F T H E A N C I E N T M A R I N E R /
8 1 3

The Wedding Guest

He holds him with his glittering eye—

is spellbound by the eye of the old seafar-

The Wedding Guest stood still,

ing man, and con-

And listens like a three years' child:

strained to hear his tale.

The Mariner hath his will.

The Wedding Guest sat on a stone:

He cannot choose but hear;

And thus spake on that ancient man,

The bright-eyed Mariner.

“The ship was cheered, the harbor cleared,

Merrily did we drop

Below the kirk,⁰ below the hill,

church

The Mariner tells

Below the lighthouse top.

how the ship sailed

southward with a good wind and fair

The Sun came up upon the left,

weather, till it reached the line.

Out of the sea came he!

And he shone bright, and on the right

Went down into the sea.

Higher and higher every day,

Till over the mast at noon—”

The Wedding Guest here beat his breast,

For he heard the loud bassoon.

The Wedding Guest

The bride hath paced into the hall, heareth the bridal

music; but the Mari-

Red as a rose is she;

ner continueth his

Nodding their heads before her goes tale.

The merry minstrelsy.

The Wedding Guest he beat his breast,

Yet he cannot choose but hear;

And thus spake on that ancient man,

The bright-eyed Mariner.

The ship driven by a

“And now the STORM-BLAST came, and he storm toward the South Pole.

Was tyrannous and strong;

He struck with his o’ertaking wings,

And chased us south along.

With sloping masts and dipping prow, 45

As who pursued with yell and blow

Still treads the shadow of his foe,

And forward bends his head,

The ship drove fast, loud roared the blast,

And southward aye we fled. 50

And now there came both mist and snow,

And it grew wondrous cold:

And ice, mast-high, came floating by,

As green as emerald.

814 / S A M U E L T A Y L O R C O L E R I D G E

The land of ice, and

And through the drifts the snowy eliftsc cliffs

of fearful sounds

where no living thing Did send a dismal sheen:

was to be seen.

Nor shapes of men nor beasts we ken—

The ice was all between.

The ice was here, the ice was there,

The ice was all around:
It cracked and growled, and roared and howled,
Like noises in a swound!⁰
Till a great sea bird,
At length did cross an Albatross, called the Albatross, came through the Thorough the fog it came;
snow-fog, and was
As if it had been a Christian soul, received with great joy and hospitality.
We hailed it in God's name.
It ate the food it ne'er had eat,
And round and round it flew.
The ice did split with a thunder-fit;
The helmsman steered us through!
And lo! the Albatross And a good south wind sprung up behind;
proveth a bird of good omen, and followeth The Albatross did follow, the ship as it returned And every day, for food or play, northward through fog and floating ice.
Came to the mariners' hollo!
In mist or cloud, on mast or shroud,⁷ 75
It perched for vespers⁰ nine;

evenings

Whiles all the night, through fog-smoke white, Glimmered the white Moon-shine.”

The ancient Mariner “God save thee, ancient Mariner!

inhospitably killeth

the pious bird of good

From the fiends, that plague thee thus!— omen.

Why look’st thou so?”—With my crossbow

I shot the ALBATROSS.

Part II

The Sun now rose upon the right:

Out of the sea came he,

Still hid in mist, and on the left 85

Went down into the sea.

And the good south wind still blew behind,

But no sweet bird did follow,

Nor any day for food or play

Came to the mariners' hollo! 90

7. Rope supporting a mast.

T H E R I M E O F T H E A N C I E N T M A R I N E R / 8 1 5

His shipmates cry out And I had done a hellish thing, against the ancient

Mariner, for killing

And it would work 'em woe:

the bird of good luck. For all averred, I had killed the bird

That made the breeze to blow.

Ah wretch! said they, the bird to slay,

That made the breeze to blow!

But when the fog

Nor dim nor red, like God's own head, cleared off, they justify the same, and

The glorious Sun uprist:0

thus make themselves Then all averred, I had killed the bird

accomplices in the crime.

That brought the fog and mist.

‘Twas right, said they, such birds to slay,

That bring the fog and mist.

The fair breeze con-

The fair breeze blew, the white foam flew,

tinues; the ship enters

the Pacific Ocean,

The furrow followed free;

and sails northward, We were the first that ever burst

105 even till it reaches the Line.

Into that silent sea.

0

equator

The ship hath been

Down dropped the breeze, the sails dropped down, suddenly becalmed.

‘Twas sad as sad could be;

And we did speak only to break

The silence of the sea!

All in a hot and copper sky,

The bloody Sun, at noon,

Right up above the mast did stand,

No bigger than the Moon.

Day after day, day after day,

We stuck, nor breath nor motion;

As idle as a painted ship

Upon a painted ocean.

And the Albatross

Water, water, everywhere,

begins to be avenged. And all the boards did shrink;

Water, water, everywhere,

Nor any drop to drink.

The very deep did rot: O Christ!

That ever this should be!

Yea, slimy things did crawl with legs

Upon the slimy sea.

About, about, in reel and rout

The death-fires⁸ danced at night;

The water, like a witch's oils,

Burnt green, and blue and white.

8. Either St. Elmo's fire—light from atmospheric caused by the decomposition of putrescent matter electricity on a ship's rigging (regarded as a portent in the ocean, of disaster)—or ignis fatuus, “foolish fire” (Latin)

816 / SAMUEL TAYLOR COLERIDGE

And some in dreams assured were le m r i o n e o f f r e d ° f t h e S P i r i t t h a t p l a g u e d u s s o ;

invisible inhabitants Nine fathom deep he had followed us of this planet, neither From the land of mist and snow.

departed souls nor

angels; concerning whom the learned few, Josephus, and the Platonic Constantinopolitan, Michael Psellus, may be consulted. They are very numerous, and there is no climate or element without one or more.

And every tongue, through utter drought, 13=
Was withered at the root;
We could not speak, no more than if
We had been choked with soot.

The shipmates, in

Ah! well-a-day! what evil looks their sore distress,

would fain throw the Had I from old and young!

whole guilt on the

Instead of the cross, the Albatross ancient Mariner: in sign whereof they

About my neck was hung.

hang the dead sea

bird round his neck.

Part III

There passed a weary time. Each throat
Was parched, and glazed each eye.
A weary time! a weary time!
How glazed each weary eye,
The ancient Mariner When looking westward, I beheld beholdeth a sign in the element afar off.
A something in the sky.
At first it seemed a little speck,
And then it seemed a mist;
It moved and moved, and took at last
A certain shape, I wist.
knew
A speck, a mist, a shape, I wist!
And still it neared and neared:
As if it dodged a water sprite,
It plunged and tacked and veered.
At its nearer
With throats unslaked, with black lips baked, approach, it seemeth
him to be a ship; and We could nor laugh nor wail;
at a dear ransom he Through utter drought all dumb we stood!
freeth his speech from the bonds of thirst.

I bit my arm, I sucked the blood,
And cried, A sail! a sail!
With throats unslaked, with black lips baked,
Agape they heard me call:

A flash of joy;

Gramercy! they for joy did grin,
thank heavens!

And all at once their breath drew in, 165

As they were drinking all.

And horror follows. See! see! / j c r i e c]) s h e tacks no more!

tor can it be a ship

that comes onward Hither to work us weal; benefit

without wind or tide? Without a breeze, without a tide,
She steadies with upright keel!

T H E R I M E O F T H E A N C I E N T M A R I N E R / 8 1 7

The western wave was all aflame.

The day was well nigh done!

Almost upon the western wave

Rested the broad bright Sun;

When that strange shape drove suddenly 175

Betwixt us and the Sun.

It seemeth him but

And straight the Sun was flecked with bars,

the skeleton of a ship. (Heaven's Mother send us grace!)

As if through a dungeon grate he peered

With broad and burning face.

Alas! (thought I, and my heart beat loud)

And its ribs are seen H q w f a s t ^ n e a r s a n (J n e a r s !

as bars on the face of . . -i l l l c

the setting Sun Are those her sails that glance in the sun,

T. I , I so cobwebs

Like restless gossameres: I

The Specter-Woman Are those her ribs through which the Sun and her Deathmate,

and no other on

Did peer, as through a grate?

hoard the skeleton

And is that Woman all her crew?

ship.

Is that a DEATH? and are there two?

Is DEATH that woman's mate?

Like vessel, like crew! [Jer [jps w e r e rec]]ier looks were free, 190

Her locks were yellow as gold:

Her skin was as white as leprosy,

The Nightmare LIFE-IN-DEATH was she,

Who thickens man's blood with cold.

Death and Life-in-

The naked hulk alongside came,

Death have diced for the ship's crew and

And the twain were casting dice;

she (the latter) win-

“The game is done! I've won! I've won!”

neth the ancient Mariner.

Quoth she, and whistles thrice.

No twilight within

The Sun's rim dips; the stars rush out:

the courts of the Sun. At one stride comes the dark;

With far-heard whisper, o'er the sea,

Off shot the specter-bark.

At the rising of the

We listened and looked sideways up!

Moon,

Fear at my heart, as at a cup,

My lifeblood seemed to sip!

The stars were dim, and thick the night,

The steersman's face by his lamp gleamed white;

From the sails the dew did drip—

Till clomb0 above the eastern bar climbed

The horned Moon, with one bright star

210

Within the nether tip.

One after another, One a (' t c r o n e ? b y t h e Star-dogged Moon, Too quick for groan or sigh,

818 / S A M U E L T A Y L O R C O L E R I D G E

Each turned his face with ghastly pang,

And cursed me with his eye.

215

His shipmates drop

Four times fifty living men, down dead.

(And I heard nor sigh nor groan)
With heavy thump, a lifeless lump,
They dropped down one by one.

But Life-in-Death

The souls did from their bodies fly—

220 begins her work on the ancient Mariner. They fled to bliss or woe!

And every soul, it passed me by,

Like the whizz of my cross-bow!

Part IV

The Wedding Guest

“I fear thee, ancient Mariner!

feareth that a Spirit is talking to him;

I fear thy skinny hand!

225

And thou art long, and lank, and brown,

As is the ribbed sea-sand.

I fear thee and thy glittering eye,

And thy skinny hand, so brown.”—

But the ancient Mar-

Fear not, fear not, thou Wedding Guest!

iner assureth him of his bodily life, and

This body dropped not down.

proceedeth to relate his horrible penance. Alone, alone, all, all alone,

Alone on a wide wide sea!

And never a saint took pity on

My soul in agony.

He despiseth the

The many men, so beautiful!

creatures of the calm, And they all dead did lie:

And a thousand thousand slimy things

Lived on; and so did I.

And envieth that they I looked upon the rotting sea, 240

should live, and so many lie dead.

And drew my eyes away;

I looked upon the rotting deck,

And there the dead men lay.

I looked to heaven, and tried to pray;

But or ever a prayer had gushed,

A wicked whisper came, and made

My heart as dry as dust.

I closed my lids, and kept them close,

And the balls like pulses beat,

For the sky and the sea, and the sea and the sky

Lay like a load on my weary eye,

And the dead were at my feet.

T H E R I M E O F T H E A N C I E N T M A R I N E R /
8 1 9

But the curse liveth

The cold sweat melted from their limbs, for him in the eye of the dead men.

Nor rot nor reek did they:

The look with which they looked on me

Had never passed away.

An orphan's curse would drag to hell

A spirit from on high;

But oh! more horrible than that
Is the curse in a dead man's eye!
Seven days, seven nights, I saw that curse,
And yet I could not die.

The moving Moon went up the sky,
And nowhere did abide:

In his loneliness and Softly she was going up,

265 fixedness he yearneth towards the journey-

And a star or two beside—ing Moon, and the stars that still sojourn, yet still move Her beams bemoaned the sultry main, onward; and every-

Like April hoar-frost spread;

where the blue sky belongs to them, and

But where the ship's huge shadow lay,

is their appointed

The charmed water burnt away

270 rest, and their native country and their

A still and awful red.

own natural homes, which they enter unannounced, as lords that are certainly expected and yet there is a silent joy at their arrival.

By the light of the
Beyond the shadow of the ship,
Moon he beholdeth
God's creatures of the I watched the water snakes:
great calm.

They moved in tracks of shining white,
And when they reared, the elfish light 275

Fell off in hoary flakes.

gray or white

Within the shadow of the ship
I watched their rich attire:
Blue, glossy green, and velvet black,
They coiled and swam; and every track
Was a flash of golden fire.

Their beauty and

O happy living things! no tongue their happiness.

Their beauty might declare:
A spring of love gushed from my heart,

He blesseth them in

And I blessed them unaware:

his heart.

Sure my kind saint took pity on me,
And I blessed them unaware.

The spell begins to

The self-same moment I could pray;
And from my neck so free

The Albatross fell off, and sank
Like lead into the sea.

Part V

Oh sleep! it is a gentle thing,

Beloved from pole to pole!

820 / S A M U E L T A Y L O R C O L E R I D G E

To Mary Queen the praise be given!

She sent the gentle sleep from Heaven, 295

That slid into my soul.

By grace of the holy

The silly buckets on the deck, lowly; harmless

Mother, the ancient

Mariner is refreshed

That had so long remained,

with rain.

I dreamt that they were filled with dew;

And when I awoke, it rained. 300

My lips were wet, my throat was cold,

My garments all were dank;

Sure I had drunken in my dreams,

And still my body drank.

I moved, and could not feel my limbs: 305

I was so light—almost

I thought that I had died in sleep,

And was a blessed ghost.

He heareth sounds

And soon I heard a roaring wind:

and seeth strange

sights and commo-

It did not come anear; 310

tions in the sky and

But with its sound it shook the sails, the element.

That were so thin and sere.⁰ dry; withered

The upper air burst into life!

And a hundred fire-flags sheen,⁹

To and fro they were hurried about! 315

And to and fro, and in and out,

The wan stars danced between.

And the coming wind did roar more loud,

And the sails did sigh like sedge;¹

And the rain poured down from one black cloud;

The Moon was at its edge.

The thick black cloud was cleft, and still

The Moon was at its side:

Like waters shot from some high crag,

The lightning fell with never a jag,

A river steep and wide.

The bodies of the

The loud wind never reached the ship, ship's crew are inspired, and the

Yet now the ship moved on!

ship moves on;

Beneath the lightning and the Moon

The dead men gave a groan.

They groaned, they stirred, they all uprose,
Nor spake, nor moved their eyes;

9. Shone. The “fire-flags” may be St. Elmo’s fire ning.

(see note 8, p. 815), the Southern Lights, or light- 1. Rushlike plants bordering streams and lakes.

T H E R I M E O F T H E A N C I E N T M A R I N E R / 8 2 1

It had been strange, even in a dream,
To have seen those dead men rise.
The helmsman steered, the ship moved on; 335
Yet never a breeze up-blew;
The mariners all ‘gan work the ropes,
Where they were wont to do;
They raised their limbs like lifeless tools—
We were a ghastly crew. 340
The body of my brother’s son Stood by me, knee to knee:
The body and I pulled at one rope,
But he said nought to me.

But not by the souls

“I fear thee, ancient Mariner!” 345

of the men, nor by demons of earth or

Be calm, thou Wedding Guest!

middle air, but by a ‘Twas not those souls that fled in pain,

blessed troop of angelic spirits, sent

Which to their corses⁰ came again, corpses

down by the invoca-

But a troop of spirits blest:

tion of the guardian

saint.

For when it dawned—they dropped their arms, 350

And clustered round the mast;

Sweet sounds rose slowly through their mouths,

And from their bodies passed.

Around, around, flew each sweet sound,

Then darted to the Sun; 355

Slowly the sounds came back again,

Now mixed, now one by one.

Sometimes a-dropping from the sky

I heard the sky-lark sing;

Sometimes all little birds that are, 360

How they seemed to fill the sea and air

With their sweet jargoning!0 warbling

And now 'twas like all instruments,

Now like a lonely flute;

And now it is an angel's song, 365

That makes the heavens be mute.

It ceased; yet still the sails made on

A pleasant noise till noon,

A noise like of a hidden brook

In the leafy month of June, 370

That to the sleeping woods all night

Singeth a quiet tune.

Till noon we quietly sailed on,

Yet never a breeze did breathe:

8 2 2 / S A M U E L T A Y L O R C O L E R I D G E

Slowly and smoothly went the ship,

Moved onward from beneath.

The lonesome Spirit

Under the keel nine fathom deep,

from the South Pole carries on the ship as From the land of mist and snow, far as the Line, in

The spirit slid: and it was he obedience to the angelic troop, but

That made the ship to go.

still requireth

The sails at noon left off their tune, vengeance.

And the ship stood still also.

The Sun, right up above the mast,

Had fixed her to the ocean:

But in a minute she 'gan stir,

With a short uneasy motion—

Backwards and forwards half her length

With a short uneasy motion.

Then like a pawing horse let go,

She made a sudden bound: 390

It flung the blood into my head,

And I fell down in a swoond.

The Polar Spirit's fel-

How long in that same fit I lay, low demons, the invisible inhabitants I have not² to declare;
of the element, take
But ere my living life returned,
part in his wrong;
and two of them
I heard and in my soul discerned relate, one to the Two voices in the air.
other, that penance long and heavy for the ancient Mariner “Is it he?” quoth one, “Is this the man?
hath been accorded
By him who died on cross,
to the Polar Spirit,
who returneth south-
With his cruel bow he laid full low ward.
The harmless Albatross.
The spirit who bideth by himself
In the land of mist and snow,
He loved the bird that loved the man
Who shot him with his bow.” 405
The other was a softer voice,
As soft as honey-dew:
Quoth he, “The man hath penance done,

And penance more will do.”

Part VI

FIRST VOICE

“But tell me, tell me! speak again, 410
Thy soft response renewing—
What makes that ship drive on so fast?
What is the ocean doing?”

2. I.e., have not the knowledge.

THE RIME OF THE ANCIENT MARINER / 8 23

SECOND VOICE

“Still as a slave before his lord,
The ocean hath no blast; 415
His great bright eye most silently
Up to the Moon is cast—
If he may know which way to go;
For she guides him smooth or grim.
See, brother, see! how graciously 420
She looketh down on him.”

FIRST VOICE

The Mariner hath

“But why drives on that ship so fast, been cast into a trance; for the angelic Without or wave or wind?” power causeth the vessel to drive northward faster than

SECOND VOICE

human life could endure.

“The air is cut away before,
And closes from behind.
Fly, brother, fly! more high, more high!
Or we shall be belated:
For slow and slow that ship will go,
When the Mariner’s trance is abated.”

The supernatural

I woke, and we were sailing on motion is retarded;
the Mariner awakes,
As in a gentle weather:
and his penance
‘Twas night, calm night, the moon was high;
SIMS anew.

The dead men stood together.
All stood together on the deck,
For a charnel-dungeon fitter:
All fixed on me their stony eyes,
That in the Moon did glitter.
The pang, the curse, with which they died,
Had never passed away:
I could not draw my eyes from theirs,
Nor turn them up to pray.

The curse is finally

And now this spell was snapped: once more expiated.

I viewed the ocean green,
And looked far forth, yet little saw
Of what had else been seen—
Like one, that on a lonesome road
Doth walk in fear and dread,
And having once turned round walks on,
And turns no more his head;
Because he knows, a frightful fiend
Doth close behind him tread.

8 2 4 / S A M U E L T A Y L O R C O L E R I D G E

But soon there breathed a wind on me,
Nor sound nor motion made:
Its path was not upon the sea,
In ripple or in shade.

It raised my hair, it fanned my cheek
Like a meadow-gale of spring—
It mingled strangely with my fears,
Yet it felt like a welcoming.

Swiftly, swiftly flew the ship,
Yet she sailed softly too:
Sweetly, sweetly blew the breeze—
On me alone it blew.

And the ancient Mar- Oh! dream of joy! is this indeed iner beholdeth his native country.

The lighthouse top I see?
Is this the hill? is this the kirk?

Is this mine own countree?
We drifted o'er the harbor-bar,
And I with sobs did pray—
O let me be awake, my God
Or let me sleep alway.
The harbor-bay was clear as glass,
So smoothly it was strewn!
And on the bay the moonlight lay,
And the shadow of the Moon.
The rock shone bright, the kirk no less,
That stands above the rock:
The moonlight steeped in silentness
The steady weathercock.
And the bay was white with silent light,
Till rising from the same,
The angelic spirits
Full many shapes, that shadows were,
leave the dead bodies, In crimson colors came.
A little distance from the prow
Those crimson shadows were:
And appear in their
I turned my eyes upon the deck—own forms of light.
Oh, Christ! what saw I there!
Each corse lay flat, lifeless and flat,
And, by the holy rood!
cross of Christ
A man all light, a seraph^o-man,

angel-like

On every corse there stood.

This seraph-band, each waved his hand:

It was a heavenly sight!

T H E R I M E O F T H E A N C I E N T M A R I N E R /
8 2 5

They stood as signals to the land,

Each one a lovely light; 495

This seraph-band, each waved his hand,

No voice did they impart—

No voice; but oh! the silence sank

Like music on my heart.

But soon I heard the dash of oars, 500

I heard the Pilot's cheer;

My head was turned perforce away

And I saw a boat appear.

The Pilot and the Pilot's boy,

I heard them coming fast: 505

Dear Lord in Heaven! it was a joy

The dead men could not blast.

I saw a third—I heard his voice:

It is the Hermit good!

He singeth loud his godly hymns 510

That he makes in the wood.

He'll shrieve³ my soul, he'll wash away

The Albatross's blood.

Part VII

The Hermit of the

This Hermit good lives in that wood

Wood

Which slopes down to the sea.

How loudly his sweet voice he rears!

He loves to talk with marineres

That come from a far countree.

He kneels at morn, and noon, and eve—

He hath a cushion plump:

It is the moss that wholly hides

The rotted old oak stump.

The skiff-boat neared: I heard them talk,

“Why, this is strange, I trow!

Where are those lights so many and fair,

That signal made but now?”

Approacheth the ship “Strange, by my faith!” the Hermit said

—

with wonder.

“And they answered not our cheer!

The planks looked warped! and see those sails,

How thin they are and sere!

3. Set free from sin.

826 / S A M U E L T A Y L O R C O L E R I D G E

I never saw aught like to them,

Unless perchance it were

Brown skeletons of leaves that lag
My forest-brook along;
When the ivy tod0 is heavy with snow, bushy clump
And the owlet whoops to the wolf below,
That eats the she-wolfs young.”
“Dear Lord! it hath a fiendish look,”
The Pilot made reply,
“I am a-feared”—“Push on, push on!”
Said the Hermit cheerily.
The boat came closer to the ship,
But I nor spake nor stirred;
The boat came close beneath the ship,
And straight a sound was heard.
The ship suddenly Under the water it rumbled on,
sinketh.
Still louder and more dread:
It reached the ship, it split the bay;
The ship went down like lead.
The ancient Mariner Stunned by that loud and dreadful sound, is saved in the Pilot’s boat.
Which sky and ocean smote,
Like one that hath been seven days drowned
My body lay afloat;
But swift as dreams, myself I found Within the Pilot’s boat.
Upon the whirl, where sank the ship,

The boat spun round and round;
And all was still, save that the hill
Was telling of the sound.

I moved my lips—the Pilot shrieked 560
And fell down in a fit;
The holy Hermit raised his eyes,
And prayed where he did sit.

I took the oars: the Pilot's boy,
Who now doth crazy go, 565
Laughed loud and long, and all the while
His eyes went to and fro.

“Ha! ha!” quoth he, “full plain I see,
The Devil knows how to row.”

And now, all in my own countree, 570
I stood on the firm land!
The Hermit stepped forth from the boat,
And scarcely he could stand.

T H E R I M E O F T H E A N C I E N T M A R I N E R / 8 2 7

The ancient Mariner «Q shrieve me, shrieve me, holy man!”
earnestly entreateth . . . , . . .

the Hermit to shrieve I ne Hermit crossed⁴ his brow.

him; and the penance “Say quick,” quoth he, “I bid thee say-of life falls on him.

What manner of man art thou?”

Forthwith this frame of mine was wrenched

With a woeful agony,

Which forced me to begin my tale;

And then it left me free.

And ever and anon

Since then, at an uncertain hour,

throughout his future

life an agony con-

That agony returns:

straineth him to

And till my ghastly tale is told, travel from land to

land;

This heart within me burns.

I pass, like night, from land to land;

I have strange power of speech;

That moment that his face I see,

I know the man that must hear me:

To him my tale I teach.

What loud uproar bursts from that door!

The wedding guests are there:

But in the garden-bower the bride

And bridemaids singing are:

And hark the little vesper bell,

Which biddeth me to prayer!

O Wedding Guest! this soul hath been

Alone on a wide wide sea:

So lonely 'twas, that God himself

Scarce seemed there to be.

O sweeter than the marriage feast,

'Tis sweeter far to me,

To walk together to the kirk

With a goodly company!
To walk together to the kirk,
And all together pray,
While each to his great Father bends,
Old men, and babes, and loving friends
And youths and maidens gay!
And to teach, by his Farewell, farewell! but this I tell own example, love
and reverence to all
To thee, thou Wedding Guest!
things that God made]-[e prayeth well, who loveth well and loveth
Both man and bird and beast.
He prayeth best, who loveth best
All things both great and small;
4. Made the sign of the cross upon.
8 2 8 / S A M U E L T A Y L O R C O L E R I D G E
For the dear God who loveth us,
He made and loveth all.
The Mariner, whose eye is bright,
Whose beard with age is hoar,
Is gone: and now the Wedding Guest 620
Turned from the bridegroom's door.
He went like one that hath been stunned,
And is of sense forlorn:0 forsaken
A sadder and a wiser man,
He rose the morrow morn. 625

1797-98 1817

Dejection: An Ode

Late, late yestreen I saw the new Moon,

With the old Moon in her arms;

And I fear, I fear, my master dear!

We shall have a deadly storm.

*Ballad of Sir Patrick Spence*⁵

Well! If the bard was weather-wise, who made

The grand old ballad of Sir Patrick Spence,

This night, so tranquil now, will not go hence

Unroused by winds, that ply a busier trade

5 Than those which mold yon cloud in lazy flakes,

Or the dull sobbing draft, that moans and rakes

Upon the strings of this Aeolian lute,⁶

Which better far were mute.

For lo! the New-moon winter-bright!

io And overspread with phantom light,

(With swimming phantom light o'erspread

But rimmed and circled by a silver thread)

I see the old Moon in her lap, foretelling

The coming-on of rain and squally blast.

15 And oh! that even now the gust were swelling,

And the slant night shower driving loud and fast!

Those sounds which oft have raised me, whilst they awed,

And sent my soul abroad,

Might now perhaps their wonted⁰ impulse give, usual

20 Might startle this dull pain, and make it move and live!

A grief without a pang, void, dark, and drear,

A stifled, drowsy, unimpassioned grief,

5. An early modern ballad (see p. 103).

a set of strings that vibrate in response to air cur-

6. The wind harp (named after Aeolus, Greek god rents.

of the winds) has a sounding board equipped with

DEJECTION: A NODE / 829

Which finds no natural outlet, no relief,

In word, or sigh, or tear—

25 O Lady! in this wan and heartless mood,

To other thoughts by yonder throstle⁰ wooed, song thrush

All this long eve, so balmy and serene,

Have I been gazing on the western sky,

And its peculiar tint of yellow green:

30 And still I gaze—and with how blank an eye!

And those thin clouds above, in flakes and bars,

That give away their motion to the stars;

Those stars, that glide behind them or between,

Now sparkling, now bedimmed, but always seen:

35 Yon crescent Moon, as fixed as if it grew

In its own cloudless, starless lake of blue;

I see them all so excellently fair,

I see, not feel, how beautiful they are!

3

My genial⁰ spirits⁰ fail; creative I energies

40 And what can these avail

To lift the smothering weight from off my breast?
It were a vain endeavor,
Though I should gaze forever
On that green light that lingers in the west:
45 I may not hope from outward forms to win
The passion and the life, whose fountains are within.

4

O Lady! we receive but what we give,
And in our life alone does Nature live:
Ours is her wedding garment, ours her shroud!
50 And would we aught behold, of higher worth,
Than that inanimate cold world allowed
To the poor loveless ever-anxious crowd,
Ah! from the soul itself must issue forth
A light, a glory, a fair luminous cloud
55 Enveloping the Earth—
And from the soul itself must there be sent
A sweet and potent voice, of its own birth,
Of all sweet sounds the life and element!

5

O pure of heart! thou need'st not ask of me
60 What this strong music in the soul may be!
What, and wherein it doth exist,
This light, this glory, this fair luminous mist,
This beautiful and beauty-making power.
Joy, virtuous Lady! Joy that ne'er was given,
65 Save to the pure, and in their purest hour,
Life, and Life's effluence, cloud at once and shower,

Joy, Lady! is the spirit and the power,

830 / SAMUEL TAYLOR COLERIDGE

Which wedding Nature to us gives in dower

A new Earth and new Heaven,

70 Undreamt of by the sensual and the proud—

Joy is the sweet voice, Joy the luminous cloud—

We in ourselves rejoice!

And thence flows all that charms or ear or sight,

All melodies the echoes of that voice,

75 All colors a suffusion from that light.

6

There was a time when, though my path was rough,

This joy within me dallied with distress,

And all misfortunes were but as the stuff

Whence Fancy made me dreams of happiness:

80 For hope grew round me, like the twining vine,

And fruits, and foliage, not my own, seemed mine.

But now afflictions bow me down to earth:

Nor care I that they rob me of my mirth;

But oh! each visitation

85 Suspends what nature gave me at my birth,

My shaping spirit of Imagination.

For not to think of what I needs must feel,

But to be still and patient, all I can;

And happily by abstruse research to steal

90 From my own nature all the natural man—

This was my sole resource, my only plan:

Till that which suits a part infects the whole,

And now is almost grown the habit of my soul.

7

Hence, viper thoughts, that coil around my mind,

95 Reality's dark dream!

I turn from you, and listen to the wind,

Which long has raved unnoticed. What a scream

Of agony by torture lengthened out

That lute sent forth! Thou Wind, that rav'st without,

100 Bare crag, or mountain tairn,^o or blasted tree, pool

Or pine grove whither woodman never clomb,

Or lonely house, long held—the witches' home,

Methinks were fitter instruments for thee,

Mad lutanist! who in this month of showers,

105 Of dark-brown gardens, and of peeping flowers,

Mak'st devils' yule,⁷ with worse than wintry song,

The blossoms, buds, and timorous^o leaves among. timid

Thou actor, perfect in all tragic sounds!

Thou mighty poet, e'en to frenzy bold!

110 What tell'st thou now about?

'Tis of the rushing of an host in rout,

With groans, of trampled men, with smarting wounds—

At once they groan with pain, and shudder with the cold!

7. A w i n t e r storm in spring; h e n c e an u n n a t u r a l or “devils' ” C h r i s t m a s .

R O S E A Y L M E R / 8 3 1

But hush! there is a pause of deepest silence!

And all that noise, as of a rushing crowd,

With groans, and tremulous shudderings—all is over—

It tells another tale, with sounds less deep and loud!
A tale of less affright,
And tempered with delight,
As Otway's self had framed the tender lay—
'Tis of a little child
Upon a lonesome wild,
Not far from home, but she hath lost her way:
And now moans low in bitter grief and fear,
And now screams loud, and hopes to make her mother hear.
Tis midnight, but small thoughts have I of sleep:
Full seldom may my friend such vigils keep!
Visit her, gentle Sleep! with wings of healing,
And may this storm be but a mountain birth,
130 May all the stars hang bright above her dwelling,
Silent as though they watched the sleeping Earth!
With light heart may she rise,
Gay fancy, cheerful eyes,
Joy lift her spirit, joy attune her voice;
135 To her may all things live, from pole to pole,
Their life the eddying of her living soul!
O simple spirit, guided from above,
Dear Lady! friend devoutest of my choice,
Thus mayest thou ever, evermore rejoice.

1802 1802

W A L T E R S A V A G E L A N D O R

1775-1864

Rose Aylmer1

Ah what avails the sceptered race,
Ah what the form divine!
What every virtue, every grace!
Rose Aylmer, all were thine.
5 Rose Aylmer, whom these wakeful eyes
May weep, but never see,
A night of memories and of sighs
I consecrate to thee.

1806, 1831, 1846

8. Thomas Otway (1 6 5 2 - 1 6 8 5) , poet and drama-
1. The Honorable Rose Whitworth Aylmer (1 7 7 9 - 1800), whom Landor had known in Wales, died (1680), a work thought to have influenced Cole-suddenly, in Calcutta.
ridge.

8 3 2 / W A L T E R S A V A G E L A N D O R

Past Ruined Ilion Helen² Lives

Past ruined Ilion Helen lives,
Alcestis³ rises from the shades;
Verse calls them forth; 'tis verse that gives Immortal youth to mortal maids.
5 Soon shall Oblivion's deepening veil
Hide all the peopled hills you see,
The gay, the proud, while lovers hail
In distant ages you and me.
The tear for fading beauty check,
10 For passing glory cease to sigh;

One form shall rise above the wreck,
One name, Ianthe,⁴ shall not die.

1831

Dirce⁵

Stand close around, ye Stygian set,⁶
With Dirce in one boat conveyed!
Or Charon, seeing may forget
That he is old and she a shade.

1831, 1846

To Robert Browning⁷

There is delight in singing, though none hear
Beside the singer; and there is delight
In praising, though the praiser sit alone
And see the praised far off him, far above.

5 Shakspeare is not our poet, but the world's,
Therefore on him no speech; and short for thee,
Browning! Since Chaucer was alive and hale,
No man hath walked along our roads with step
So active, so inquiring eye, or tongue
io So varied in discourse. But warmer climes

Give brighter plumage, stronger wing; the breeze

2. Helen of Troy ("Ilion"), whose abduction Countess de Morlande and with whom he con-brought about the Trojan War.

duct ed a long-term affair.

3. In Greek mythology, Alcestis sacrificed her life

5. In Greek mythology, the wife of King Lycus, for her husband, who was stricken with a mortal killed by being tied to a bull's horns .

illness. She was then brought back from the under-

6. The shades of the dead who were ferried by world by Hercules .

Charon over the river Styx to Hades .

4. The name given by Landor to Sophia Jane

7. English poet (1812 - 1889 ; see pp. 1009 - 41) .

Swift, an Irish woman who eventually became

WRITTEN AFTERSWIMMINGFROMSE STOSTOABYDOS/833

Of Alpine heights thou playest with, borne on

Beyond Sorrento and Amalfi, where

The Siren waits thee, singing song for song.⁸

1845

Dying Speech of an Old Philosopher

I strove with none, for none was worth my strife:

Nature I loved, and, next to Nature, Art:

I warmed both hands before the fire of Life;

It sinks; and I am ready to depart.

1849

GEORGE GORDON, LORD BYRON

1788-1824

Written after Swimming from Sestos to Abydos¹

i

If, in the month of dark December,

Leander, who was nightly wont^o accustomed

(What maid will not the tale remember?)

To cross thy stream, broad Hellespont!

2

5 If, when the wintry tempest roared,
He sped to Hero, nothing loath,
And thus of old thy current poured,
Fair Venus! how I pity both!

3

For me, degenerate modern wretch, io Though in the genial month of May,
My dripping limbs I faintly stretch,
And think I've done a feat today.

4

But since he crossed the rapid tide,
According to the doubtful story,

8. In Greek mythology, the Sirens drowned themselves in despair when Odysseus escaped the lure of their song. Sorrento and Amalfi: towns near Naples that Browning visited on his second trip to Italy in 1844 and that figure in some of his early poems.

834 / G E O R G E G O R D O N , L O R D B Y R O N

15 To woo—and—Lord knows what beside,
And swam for Love, as I for Glory;

5

Twere hard to say who fared the best:
Sad mortals! thus the gods still plague you!
He lost his labor, I my jest;
20 For he was drowned, and I've the ague. 0 chills and fever
1810 1812

She Walks in Beauty

i

She walks in beauty, like the night
Of cloudless climes and starry skies;
And all that's best of dark and bright
Meet in her aspect and her eyes:

5 Thus mellowed to that tender light
Which heaven to gaudy day denies.

2

One shade the more, one ray the less,
Had half impaired the nameless grace
Which waves in every raven tress, io Or softly lightens o'er her face;
Where thoughts serenely sweet express
How pure, how dear their dwelling place.

3

And on that cheek, and o'er that brow,
So soft, so calm, yet eloquent,
15 The smiles that win, the tints that glow,
But tell of days in goodness spent,
A mind at peace with all below,
A heart whose love is innocent!

1814 1815

The Destruction of Sennacherib²

i

The Assyrian came down like the wolf on the fold,
And his cohorts were gleaming in purple and gold;
And the sheen of their spears was like stars on the sea,
When the blue wave rolls nightly on deep Galilee.

2. Assyrian king, whose armies, while besieging Jerusalem (701 B.C.E.), were attacked by a violent plague (2 Kings 19.35).

W H E N W E T W O P A R T E D / 8 3 5

2

5 Like the leaves of the forest when summer is green,
That host with their banners at sunset were seen:
Like the leaves of the forest when autumn hath blown,
That host on the morrow lay withered and strown.

3

For the Angel of Death spread his wings on the blast, io And breathed in the face of the foe as he passed;
And the eyes of the sleepers waxed deadly and chill,
And their hearts but once heaved, and forever grew still!

4

And there lay the steed with his nostril all wide,
But through it there rolled not the breath of his pride;
15 And the foam of his gasping lay white on the turf,
And cold as the spray of the rock-beating surf.

5

And there lay the rider distorted and pale,
With the dew on his brow, and the rust on his mail:
And the tents were all silent, the banners alone,

20 The lances unlifted, the trumpet unblown.

6

And the widows of Ashur⁰ are loud in their wail, Assyria

And the idols are broke in the temple of Baal;s

And the might of the Gentile,⁴ unsmote by the sword,

Hath melted like snow in the glance of the Lord!

1815 1815

When We Two Parted

i

When we two parted

In silence and tears,

Half broken-hearted

To sever for years,

5 Pale grew thy cheek and cold,

Colder thy kiss;

Truly that hour foretold

Sorrow to this.

The dew of the morning

io Sunk chill on my brow—

It felt like the warning

3. Deity of t h e Assyrians. 4. A non-Jewish person; h e r e , S e n n a c h e r i b .

8 3 6 / G E O R G E G O R D O N , L O R D B Y R O N

Of what I feel now.

Thy vows are all broken,

And light is thy fame;

15 I hear thy name spoken,

And share in its shame.

3

They name thee before me,
A knell to mine ear;
A shudder comes o'er me—
20 Why wert thou so dear?
They know not I knew thee,
Who knew thee too well—
Long, long shall I rue thee,
Too deeply to tell.

4

25 In secret we met—
In silence I grieve,
That thy heart could forget,
Thy spirit deceive.
If I should meet thee
30 After long years,
How should I greet thee?—
With silence and tears.

1815 1815

So We'll Go No More A-Roving

i

So we'll go no more a-roving
So late into the night,
Though the heart be still as loving,
And the moon be still as bright.

2

5 For the sword outwears its sheath,
And the soul wears out the breast,

And the heart must pause to breathe,
And Love itself have rest.

3

Though the night was made for loving,
io And the day returns too soon,
Yet we'll go no more a-roving
By the light of the moon.

1817

1830

D O N J U A N / 8 3 7

*From Don Juan*⁵

Fragment on the Back of the Ms. of Canto I

I would to Heaven that I were so much clay,
As I am blood, bone, marrow, passion, feeling—
Because at least the past were passed away,
And for the future—(but I write this reeling,
5 Having got drunk exceedingly to-day,
So that I seem to stand upon the ceiling)
I say—the future is a serious matter—
And so—for God's sake—hock⁶ and soda-water!

From Canto the First

i

I want⁰ a hero: an uncommon want, lack
When every year and month sends forth a new one,
Till, after cloying the gazettes⁷ with cant,
The age discovers he is not the true one;
5 Of such as these I should not care to vaunt,
I'll therefore take our ancient friend Don Juan—

We all have seen him, in the pantomime,⁸
Sent to the Devil somewhat ere his time.

2

Vernon, the butcher Cumberland, Wolfe, Hawke, io Prince Ferdinand, Granby, Burgoyne, Keppel, Howe,⁹ Evil and good, have had their tithe⁰ of talk, due tribute
And filled their sign-posts then, like Wellesley now;
Each in their turn like Banquo's monarchs stalk,
Followers of Fame, "nine farrow" of that sow:¹
15 France, too, had Buonaparte and Dumourier Recorded in the Moniteur and Courier.²

3

Barnave, Brissot, Condorcet, Mirabeau, Petion, Cloutz, Danton, Marat, La Fayette³
Were French, and famous people, as we know;

5. Pronounced in the English fashion, Don Joo-
"heroes," such as Wellesley (line 12), the duke of
un. The hero is a legendary Spanish nobleman, a Wellington, who defeated Napoleon at Waterloo.

notorious seducer of women; in most versions, but

1. Cf. Shakespeare's Macbeth 4.1, lines 80 - 81 not Byron's satire, finally carried off to hell. Canto

("Pour in sow's blood that hath eaten / Her nine

I comprises 222 stanzas; stanzas 1—119, given farrow") and 118—19 ("shall Banquo's issue ever /

here, conclude with the beginning of the romance

Reign in this kingdom?"). The sow, Fame, eats her between Don Juan and Donna Julia.

offspring—i.e., the heroes just listed.

6. Rhine wine, a supposed remedy for the hang-

2. “Buonaparte” is Napoleon, and Dumourier a over.

French general, both of whose victories and

7. Official notices or newspapers.

defeats were chronicled in the French newspapers

8. I.e., on the stage, in one or another of many

Gazette Nationale; ou le Moniteur Universel and le adaptations.

Courier Republicain.

9. British military leaders of the eighteenth cen-

3. French generals and politicians connected with tury, their fame extinguished by more recent

the French Revolution, many of them guillotined.

838 / G E O R G E G O R D O N , L O R D B Y R O N

20 And there were others, scarce forgotten yet,

Joubert, Hoche, Marceau, Lannes, Desaix, Moreau,⁴

With many of the military set,

Exceedingly remarkable at times,

But not at all adapted to my rhymes.

4

25 Nelson⁵ was once Britannia’s god of War,

And still should be so, but the tide is turned;

There’s no more to be said of Trafalgar,

‘Tis with our hero quietly inurned;

Because the army’s grown more popular,

30 At which the naval people are concerned;

Besides, the Prince is all for the land-service,
Forgetting Duncan, Nelson, Howe, and Jervis.⁶

5

Brave men were living before Agamemnon⁷

And since, exceeding valorous and sage,

35 A good deal like him too, though quite the same none;

But then they shone not on the poet's page,

And so have been forgotten:—I condemn none,

But can't find any in the present age

Fit for my poem (that is, for my new one);

40 So, as I said, I'll take my friend Don Juan.

6

Most epic poets plunge "in medias res"⁸

(Horace makes this the heroic turnpike road),

And then your hero tells, when'er you please,

What went before—by way of episode,

45 While seated after dinner at his ease,

Beside his mistress in some soft abode,

Palace, or garden, paradise, or cavern,

Which serves the happy couple for a tavern.

7

That is the usual method, but not mine—

50 My way is to begin with the beginning;

The regularity of my design

Forbids all wandering as the worst of sinning,

And therefore I shall open with a line

(Although it cost me half an hour in spinning),

55 Narrating somewhat of Don Juan's father,

And also of his mother, if you'd rather.

4. Other French military men; most of these died

7. Commander of the Greeks at the siege of Troy.
in battle.

8. In Ars Poetica 148—49, the Roman poet and sat-

5. British naval hero, fatally wounded at the Battle irist Horace (65—8 B.C.E.) asserted that the writer of Trafalgar (1805).

of an epic should rush his readers “into the middle

6. British naval commanders. The Prince: the of the story.”

prince of Wales.

D O N J U A N / 8 3 9

95

In Seville was he born, a pleasant city,

Famous for oranges and women—he

Who has not seen it will be much to pity,

60 So says the proverb—and I quite agree;

Of all the Spanish towns is none more pretty,

Cadiz perhaps—but that you soon may see;

Don Juan's parents lived beside the river,

A noble stream, and called the Guadalquivir.

9

65 His father's name was Jose⁹— Don, of course,—

A true Hidalgo,¹ free from every stain

Of Moor or Hebrew blood, he traced his source

Through the most Gothic gentlemen of Spain;²

A better cavalier ne'er mounted horse,

70 Or, being mounted, e'er got down again,
Than Jose, who begot our hero, who Begot—but that's to come—Well, to renew:

1 0

His mother was a learned lady, famed
For every branch of every science known—75 In every Christian language ever named,
With virtues equaled by her wit alone:
She made the cleverest people quite ashamed,
And even the good with inward envy groan,
Finding themselves so very much exceeded,
so In their own way, by all the things that she did.

11

Her memory was a mine: she knew by heart
All Calderon and greater part of Lope,³
So, that if any actor missed his part,
She could have served him for the prompter's copy;
85 For her Feinagle's⁴ were an useless art,
And he himself obliged to shut up shop—he Could never make a memory so fine as
That which adorned the brain of Donna Inez.

1 2

Her favorite science was the mathematical,
90 Her noblest virtue was her magnanimity,
Her wit (she sometimes tried at wit) was Attic⁵ all,
Her serious sayings darkened to sublimity;

9. The Spanish spelling is Jose, but Byron's meter de Vega (1562—1635), preeminent Spanish dramrequires Jose.

artists.

1. Spanish noble of minor degree.

4. Gregor von Feinagle (1765—1819), originator of

2. Descended from the Visigoths, who conquered mnemonics, a method of memorization. He lec-Spain in the fifth century.

tured in England in 1811.

3. Calderon de la Barca (1 6 0 0 - 1 6 8 1) and Lope

5. Athenian; i.e., refined, learned.

8 4 0 / G E O R G E G O R D O N , L O R D B Y R O N

In short, in all things she was fairly what I call

A prodigy—her morning dress was dimity,

95 Her evening silk, or, in the summer, muslin,

And other stuffs, with which I won't stay puzzling.

1 3

She knew the Latin—that is, “the Lord's prayer,”

And Greek—the alphabet—I'm nearly sure;

She read some French romances here and there,

100 Although her mode of speaking was not pure;

For native Spanish she had no great care,

At least her conversation was obscure;

Her thoughts were theorems, her words a problem,

As if she deemed that mystery would ennoble 'em.

1 4

105 She liked the English and the Hebrew tongue,

And said there was analogy between 'em;

She proved it somehow out of sacred song,

But I must leave the proofs of those who've seen 'em;
 But this I heard her say, and can't be wrong,
 110 And all may think which way their judgments lean 'em,
 " 'Tis strange—the Hebrew noun which means 'I am,'⁶
 The English always use to govern d n."⁷
 Some women use their tongues—she looked a lecture,
 Each eye a sermon, and her brow a homily,
 115 An all-in-all sufficient self-director,
 Like the lamented late Sir Samuel Romilly,⁸
 The Law's expounder, and the State's corrector, Whose suicide was almost an anomaly—
 One sad example more, that "All is vanity"⁹—
 120 (The jury brought their verdict in "Insanity!")
 1 6

In short, she was a walking calculation,
 Miss Edgeworth's novels stepping from their covers,
 Or Mrs. Trimmer's books on education,
 Or "Coelebs' Wife"¹ set out in quest of lovers,
 125 Morality's prim personification,
 In which not Envy's self a flaw discovers;
 To others' share let "female errors fall,"²
 For she had not even one—the worst of all.

6. The name of God, "I am that I am" (Exodus

1. A novel by Hannah More (1745-1833; see 3.14).

pp. 707-11), who like Maria Edgeworth (line 122)

7. English gentlemen traveling on the European and Sarah Trimmer (line 123) was a writer Byron continent were sometimes known as "God dams," could not take seriously.

from their habitual profanity.

2. Quoted from Alexander Pope, The Rape of the

8. Lawyer for Byron's wife in a suit for separation.

Lock 2.17. Errors: frailties or foibles.

9. Cf. Ecclesiastes 1.2.

D O N J U A N / 8 4 1

Oh! she was perfect past all parallel—

130 Of any modern female saint's comparison;

So far above the cunning powers of Hell,

Her Guardian Angel had given up his garrison;

Even her minutest motions went as well

As those of the best time-piece made by Harrison;³

135 In virtues nothing earthly could surpass her,

Save thine "incomparable oil," Macassar!⁴

1 8

Perfect she was, but as perfection is

Inspid in this naughty world of ours,

Where our first parents⁵ never learned to kiss

140 Till they were exiled from their earlier bowers,

Where all was peace, and innocence, and bliss,

(I wonder how they got through the twelve hours),

Don Jose, like a lineal son of Eve,

Went plucking various fruit without her leave.

19

145 He was a mortal of the careless kind,
With no great love for learning, or the learned,
Who chose to go where'er he had a mind,
And never dreamed his lady was concerned;
The world, as usual, wickedly inclined 150 To see a kingdom or a house o'erturned,
Whispered he had a mistress, some said two.
But for domestic quarrels one will do.

20

Now Donna Inez had, with all her merit,
A great opinion of her own good qualities;
155 Neglect, indeed, requires a saint to bear it,
And such, indeed, she was in her moralities;⁰ moralizing
But then she had a devil of a spirit,
And sometimes mixed up fancies with realities,
And let few opportunities escape
160 Of getting her liege lord into a scrape.

21

This was an easy matter with a man
Oft in the wrong, and never on his guard;
And even the wisest, do the best they can,
Have moments, hours, and days, so unprepared,
165 That you might "brain them with their lady's fan";⁶
And sometimes ladies hit exceeding hard,

3. John Harrison (1693—1776) improved the 5. I.e., Adam and Eve; see Genesis.

accuracy of watches and chronometers. 6. Modified quotation from Shakespeare, 1 Henry 4. A much-advertised hairdressing. 7V2.4.19.

842 / GEORGE GORDON, LORD BYRON

And fans turn into falchions⁰ in fair hands, swords

And why and wherefore no one understands.

22

‘Tis pity learned virgins ever wed

170 With persons of no sort of education,

Or gentlemen, who, though well born and bred,

Grow tired of scientific conversation:

I don’t choose to say much upon this head,

I’m a plain man, and in a single station,

175 But—Oh! ye lords of ladies intellectual,

Inform us truly, have they not hen-pecked you all?

23

Don Jose and his lady quarrelled— why,

Not any of the many could divine,

Though several thousand people chose to try,

iso ‘Twas surely no concern of theirs nor mine;

I loath that low vice—curiosity;

But if there’s anything in which I shine,

‘Tis in arranging all my friends’ affairs,

Not having, of my own, domestic cares.

24

185 And so I interfered, and with the best

Intentions, but their treatment was not kind;

I think the foolish people were possessed,

For neither of them could I ever find,

Although their porter afterwards confessed—

190 But that’s no matter, and the worst’s behind,

For little Juan o'er me threw, down stairs,
A pail of housemaid's water unawares.

25

A little curly-headed, good-for-nothing,
And mischief-making monkey from his birth;
195 His parents ne'er agreed except in doting
Upon the most unquiet imp on earth;
Instead of quarrelling, had they been but both in
Their senses, they'd have sent young master forth
To school, or had him soundly whipped at home,
200 To teach him manners for the time to come.

26

Don Jose and the Donna Inez led
For some time an unhappy sort of life,
Wishing each other, not divorced, but dead;
They lived respectably as man and wife,
205 Their conduct was exceedingly well-bred,
And gave no outward signs of inward strife,

D O N J U A N / 8 4 3

Until at length the smothered fire broke out,
And put the business past all kind of doubt.

27

For Inez called some druggists and physicians, 210 And tried to prove her loving lord was mad,
But as he had some lucid intermissions,
She next decided he was only bad;
Yet when they asked her for her depositions,
No sort of explanation could be had,

215 Save that her duty both to man and God
Required this conduct—which seemed very odd.

28

She kept a journal, where his faults were noted,
And opened certain trunks of books and letters,
All which might, if occasion served, be quoted;
220 And then she had all Seville for abettors,
Besides her good old grandmother (who doted);
The hearers of her case became repeaters,
Then advocates, inquisitors, and judges,
Some for amusement, others for old grudges.

29

225 And then this best and meekest woman bore
With such serenity her husband's woes,
Just as the Spartan ladies did of yore,
Who saw their spouses killed, and nobly chose Never to say a word about them more—230 Calmly she heard each calumny that rose,
And saw his agonies with such sublimity,
That all the world exclaimed, "What magnanimity!"

3°

No doubt this patience, when the world is damning us,
Is philosophic in our former friends;
235 Tis also pleasant to be deemed magnanimous,
The more so in obtaining our own ends;
And what the lawyers call a "malus animus"⁷
Conduct like this by no means comprehends:
Revenge in person's certainly no virtue,

240 But then 'tis not my fault, if others hurt you.

31

And if our quarrels should rip up old stories,

And help them with a lie or two additional,

I'm not to blame, as you well know—no more is

Any one else—they were become traditional;

245 Besides, their resurrection aids our glories

By contrast, which is what we just were wishing all:

7. Malicious i n t e n t (Latin).

844 / G E O R G E G O R D O N , L O R D B Y R O N

And Science profits by this resurrection—

Dead scandals form good subjects for dissection.

32

Their friends had tried at reconciliation,

250 Then their relations, who made matters worse.

(‘Twere hard to tell upon a like occasion

To whom it may be best to have recourse—

I can't say much for friend or yet relation):

The lawyers did their utmost for divorce,

255 But scarce a fee was paid on either side

Before, unluckily, Don Jose died.

33

He died: and most unluckily, because,

According to all hints I could collect

From Counsel learned in those kinds of laws,

260 (Although their talk's obscure and circumspect)

His death contrived to spoil a charming cause;0 legal case

A thousand pities also with respect

To public feeling, which on this occasion
Was manifested in a great sensation.

34

265 But ah! he died; and buried with him lay
The public feeling and the lawyers' fees:
His house was sold, his servants sent away,
A Jew took one of his two mistresses,
A priest the other—at least so they say:
270 I asked the doctors after his disease—
He died of the slow fever called the tertian,⁸
And left his widow to her own aversion.

35

Yet Jose was an honorable man,
That I must say, who knew him very well;
275 Therefore his frailties I'll no further scan,
Indeed there were not many more to tell:
And if his passions now and then outran
Discretion, and were not so peaceable
As Numa's (who was also named Pompilius),⁹ 280 He had been ill brought up, and was born bilious.⁰ bad tempered

36

Whate'er might be his worthlessness or worth,
Poor fellow! he had many things to wound him.
Let's own—since it can do no good on earth—
It was a trying moment that which found him
285 Standing alone beside his desolate hearth,
8. A f o r m of malaria.

9. Ancient Roman king, famed for the comparative peace of his forty-three-year reign.

D O N J U A N / 8 4 5

Where all his household gods lay shivered⁰ round him: broken

No choice was left his feelings or his pride,

Save Death or Doctor's Commons⁰ so he died. divorce courts

37

Dying intestate,⁰ Juan was sole heir leaving no will 290 To a chancery suit,¹ and messuages,⁰ and lands, household lands

Which, with a long minority² and care,

Promised to turn out well in proper hands:

Inez became sole guardian, which was fair,

And answered but to Nature's just demands;

295 An only son left with an only mother

Is brought up much more wisely than another.

38

Sagest of women, even of widows, she

Resolved that Juan should be quite a paragon,

And worthy of the noblest pedigree,

300 (His Sire was of Castile, his Dam from Aragon):

Then, for accomplishments of chivalry,

In case our Lord the King should go to war again,

He learned the arts of riding, fencing, gunnery,

And how to scale a fortress—or a nunnery.

39

305 But that which Donna Inez most desired,

And saw into herself each day before all

The learned tutors whom for him she hired,

Was, that his breeding should be strictly moral:
Much into all his studies she inquired,
310 And so they were submitted first to her, all,
Arts, sciences—no branch was made a mystery
To Juan's eyes, excepting natural history.

40

The languages, especially the dead,
The sciences, and most of all the abstruse,
315 The arts, at least all such as could be said
To be the most remote from common use,
In all these he was much and deeply read:
But not a page of anything that's loose,
Or hints continuation of the species,
320 Was ever suffered, lest he should grow vicious.

41

His classic studies made a little puzzle,
Because of filthy loves of gods and goddesses,
Who in the earlier ages raised a bustle,
But never put on pantaloons or bodices;
1. Drawn-out legal proceedings over inheritance 2.
Before he should come of age.
of property.

846 / GEORGE GORDON, LORD BYRON

325 His reverend tutors had at times a tussle,
And for their Aeneids, Iliads, and Odysseys,
Were forced to make an odd sort of apology,
For Donna Inez dreaded the Mythology.

42

Ovid's a rake, as half his verses show him,
330 Anacreon's morals are a still worse sample,
Catullus scarcely has a decent poem,
I don't think Sappho's Ode a good example,³
Although Longinus⁴ tells us there is no hymn
Where the Sublime soars forth on wings more ample;
335 But Virgil's songs are pure, except that horrid one Beginning with "Formosum Pastor Corydon. "s

43

Lucretius' irreligion is too strong
For early stomachs, to prove wholesome food;
I can't help thinking Juvenal was wrong,
340 Although no doubt his real intent was good,
For speaking out so plainly in his song,
So much indeed as to be downright rude;
And then what proper person can be partial
To all those nauseous epigrams of Martial?⁶

44

345 Juan was taught from out the best edition,
Expurgated by learned men, who place,
Judiciously, from out the schoolboy's vision,
The grosser parts; but, fearful to deface
Too much their modest bard by this omission,
350 And pitying sore his mutilated case,
They only add them all in an appendix,⁷
Which saves, in fact, the trouble of an index;

45

For there we have them all "at one fell swoop,"⁸

Instead of being scattered through the pages;
 355 They stand forth marshaled in a handsome troop,
 To meet the ingenuous youth of future ages,
 Till some less rigid editor shall stoop
 To call them back into their separate cages,
 Instead of standing staring all together,
 360 Like garden gods⁹—and not so decent either.

3. These lines name Greek and Roman classic and times of obscene satirists.

erotic poets.

7. "Fact! There is, or was, such an edition, with all

4. The presumed author (first century C.E.) of the obnoxious epigrams of Martial placed by the treatise on "the sublime" in literature.

selves at the end" [Byron's note].

5. "Handsome Shepherd Corydon": opening

8. Allusion to Macduff's reaction upon learning of words of Virgil's Second Eclogue (a pastoral the death of his family: "What! All my pretty chick-poe m), concerned with love between young men.

ens and their dam / At one fell swoop?" (Shake-

6. Like Lucretius (line 337) and Juvenal (line speare, Macbeth 4.3.219-20).

339), a Roman poet. Lucretius was a philosophic

9. Statues of fertility deities, often phallic.

atheist; Juvenal and Martial were severe and some-

D O N J U A N / 8 4 7

The Missal too (it was the family Missal)
Was ornamented in a sort of way
Which ancient mass-books often are, and this all Kinds of grotesques illumined; and how they,
365 Who saw those figures on the margin kiss all,
Could turn their optics to the text and pray,
Is more than I know—But Don Juan's mother Kept this herself, and gave her son another.

47

Sermons he read, and lectures he endured, 370 And homilies, and lives of all the saints;
To Jerome and to Chrysostom¹ inured,
He did not take such studies for restraints;
But how Faith is acquired, and then insured,
So well not one of the aforesaid paints
375 As Saint Augustine² in his fine Confessions,
Which make the reader envy his transgressions.

48

This, too, was a sealed book to little Juan —
I can't but say that his mamma was right,
If such an education was the true one.
380 She scarcely trusted him from out her sight;
Her maids were old, and if she took a new one,
You might be sure she was a perfect fright;
She did this during even her husband's life—
I recommend as much to every wife.

49

385 Young J u a n waxed in goodliness and grace;
At six a charming child, and at eleven
With all the promise of as fine a face
As e'er to man's maturer growth was given:
He studied steadily, and grew apace,
390 And seemed, at least, in the right road to Heaven,
For half his days were passed at church, the other
Between his tutors, confessor,⁰ and mother. private chaplain
5°

At six, I said, he was a charming child,
At twelve he was a fine, but quiet boy;
395 Although in infancy a little wild,
They tamed him down amongst them: to destroy
His natural spirit not in vain they toiled,
At least it seemed so; and his mother's joy
Was to declare how sage, and still, and steady, 400 H e r young philosopher was grown already.

1. Saints a n d t e a c h e r s of t h e e a r l y C h u r c h . biography candidly describes his worldly life b e f o r e 2. A n o t h e r e a r l y f a t h e r of t h e C h u r c h ; his a u t o - conversion.

848 / G E O R G E G O R D O N , L O R D B Y R O N

51

I had my doubts, perhaps I have them still,
But what I say is neither here nor there:
I knew his father well, and have some skill
In character—but it would not be fair
405 From sire to son to augur good or ill:
He and his wife were an ill-sorted pair—

But scandal's my aversion—I protest Against all evil speaking, even in jest.

52

For my part I say nothing—nothing—but 410 This I will say—my reasons are my own—
That if I had an only son to put
To school (as God be praised that I have none),
'Tis not with Donna Inez I would shut
Him up to learn his catechism³ alone,
415 No—no—I'd send him out betimes to college,
For there it was I picked up my own knowledge.

53

For there one learns—'tis not for me to boast,
Though I acquired—but I pass over that,
As well as all the Greek I since have lost:
420 I say that there's the place—but "Verhum sat,"⁴
I think I picked up too, as well as most,
Knowledge of matters—but no matter what—
I never married—but, I think, I know
That sons should not be educated so.

54

425 Young Juan now was sixteen years of age, Tall, handsome, slender, but well knit: he seemed Active, though not so sprightly, as a page;
And everybody but his mother deemed
Him almost man; but she flew in a rage
430 And bit her lips (for else she might have screamed)
If any said so—for to be precocious

Was in her eyes a thing the most atrocious.

55

Amongst her numerous acquaintance, all

Selected for discretion and devotion,

435 There was the Donna Julia, whom to call

Pretty were but to give a feeble notion

Of many charms in her as natural

As sweetness to the flower, or salt to Ocean,

3. A brief summary of Christian teaching.

4. A word to the wise suffices (Latin).

D O N J U A N / 8 4 9

Her zone to Venus,⁵ or his bow to Cupid,

440 (But this last simile is trite and stupid.)

56

The darkness of her Oriental eye

Accorded with her Moorish origin;

(Her blood was not all Spanish; by the by,

In Spain, you know, this is a sort of sin;)

445 When proud Granada fell, and, forced to fly,

Boabdil⁶ wept: of Donna Julia's kin

Some went to Africa, some stayed in Spain—

Her great great grandmamma chose to remain.

57

She married (I forget the pedigree)

450 With an Hidalgo, who transmitted down

His blood less noble than such blood should be;

At such alliances his sires would frown,

In that point so precise in each degree

That they bred in and in, as might be shown, 455 Marrying their cousins—nay, their aunts, and nieces,
Which always spoils the breed, if it increases.

58

This heathenish cross restored the breed again,
Ruined its blood,⁷ but much improved its flesh;
For from a root the ugliest in Old Spain
460 Sprung up a branch as beautiful as fresh;
The sons no more were short, the daughters plain:
But there's a rumor which I fain would hush,
'Tis said that Donna Julia's grandmamma
Produced her Don more heirs at love than law.

59

465 However this might be, the race went on Improving still through every generation,
Until it centered in an only son,
Who left an only daughter; my narration
May have suggested that this single one 470 Could be but Julia (whom on this occasion
I shall have much to speak about), and she Was married, charming, chaste, and twenty-three.

60

Her eye (I'm very fond of handsome eyes)
Was large and dark, suppressing half its fire
475 Until she spoke, then through its soft disguise
Flashed an expression more of pride than ire,

5. The magical girdle ("zone") of Venus, Roman

6. The last Moorish king of Granada, a province goddess of love and beauty, made its wearer sexually attractive.

ally attractive.

7. Bloodline, i.e., pure lineage.

850 / GEORGE GORDON, LORD BYRON

And love than either; and there would arise

A something in them which was not desire,

But would have been, perhaps, but for the soul

480 Which struggled through and chastened down the whole.

61

Her glossy hair was clustered o'er a brow

Bright with intelligence, and fair, and smooth;

Her eyebrow's shape was like the aerial bow,⁰ rainbow

Her cheek all purple⁰ with the beam of youth, rosy

485 Mounting, at times, to a transparent glow,

As if her veins ran lightning; she, in sooth,

Possessed an air and grace by no means common:

Her stature tall—I hate a dumpy woman.

62

Wedded she was some years, and to a man

490 Of fifty, and such husbands are in plenty;

And yet, I think, instead of such a ONE

'Twere better to have TWO of five-and-twenty,

Especially in countries near the sun:

And now I think on't, "mi vien in mente, "8

495 Ladies even of the most uneasy virtue

Prefer a spouse whose age is short of thirty.

63

'Tis a sad thing, I cannot choose but say,
And all the fault of that indecent sun,
Who cannot leave alone our helpless clay, 500 But will keep baking, broiling, burning on,
That howsoever people fast and pray,
The flesh is frail, and so the soul undone:
What men call gallantry, and gods adultery,
Is much more common where the climate's sultry.

64

505 Happy the nations of the moral North!
Where all is virtue, and the winter season
Sends sin, without a rag on, shivering forth
('Twas snow that brought St. Anthony to reason);⁹
Where juries cast up what a wife is worth, 510 By laying whate'er sum, in mulct,¹ they please on
The lover, who must pay a handsome price,
Because it is a marketable vice.

65

Alfonso was the name of Julia's lord,
A man well looking for his years, and who
Was neither much beloved nor yet abhorred:

8. It comes to my mind (Italian). snow as a remedy for lust.

9. St. Anthony recommended the application of I. As a fine.

D O N J U A N / 8 5 1

They lived together as most people do,
Suffering each other's foibles by accord,
And not exactly either one or two;

Yet he was jealous, though he did not show it,
520 For Jealousy dislikes the world to know it.

66

Julia was—yet I never could see why—
With Donna Inez quite a favorite friend;
Between their tastes there was small sympathy,
For not a line had Julia ever penned:
525 Some people whisper (but, no doubt, they lie,
For Malice still imputes some private end)
That Inez had, ere Don Alfonso's marriage, Forgot with him her very prudent carriage;⁰ behavior

67

And that still keeping up the old connection, 530 Which Time had lately rendered much more chaste,
She took his lady also in affection,
And certainly this course was much the best:
She flattered Julia with her sage protection,
And complimented Don Alfonso's taste;
535 And if she could not (who can?) silence scandal,
At least she left it a more slender handle.

68

I can't tell whether Julia saw the affair
With other people's eyes, or if her own Discoveries made, but none could be aware 540 Of this, at least no symptom e'er was shown;
Perhaps she did not know, or did not care,
Indifferent from the first, or callous grown:
I'm really puzzled what to think or say,

She kept her counsel in so close a way.

69

545 Juan she saw, and, as a pretty child, Caressed him often—such a thing might be Quite innocently done, and harmless styled,
When she had twenty years, and thirteen he;
But I am not so sure I should have smiled
550 When he was sixteen, Julia twenty-three;
These few short years make wondrous alterations,
Particularly amongst sun-burnt nations.

70

Whate'er the cause might be, they had become Changed; for the dame grew distant, the youth shy, 555 Their looks cast down, their greetings almost dumb,
And much embarrassment in either eye;

852 / G E O R G E G O R D O N , L O R D B Y R O N

There surely will be little doubt with some
That Donna Julia knew the reason why,
But as for Juan, he had no more notion 560 Than he who never saw the sea of Ocean.

71

Yet Julia's very coldness still was kind,
And tremulously gentle her small hand
Withdrew itself from his, but left behind
A little pressure, thrilling, and so bland
565 And slight, so very slight, that to the mind
'Twas but a doubt; but ne'er magician's wand
Wrought change with all Armida's2 fairy art

Like what this light touch left on Juan's heart.

72

And if she met him, though she smiled no more, 570 She looked a sadness sweeter than her smile,
As if her heart had deeper thoughts in store
She must not own, but cherished more the while
For that compression in its burning core;
Even Innocence itself has many a wile,
575 And will not dare to trust itself with truth,
And Love is taught hypocrisy from youth.

73

But Passion most dissembles, yet betrays
Even by its darkness; as the blackest sky
Foretells the heaviest tempest, it displays 580 Its workings through the vainly guarded eye,
And in whatever aspect it arrays
Itself, 'tis still the same hypocrisy;
Coldness or Anger, even Disdain or Hate,
Are masks it often wears, and still too late.

74

585 Then there were sighs, the deeper for suppression,
And stolen glances, sweeter for the theft,
And burning blushes, though for no transgression,
Tremblings when met, and restlessness when left;
All these are little preludes to possession,
590 Of which young Passion cannot be bereft,
And merely tend to show how greatly Love is Embarrassed at first starting with a novice.

75

Poor Julia's heart was in an awkward state;

She felt it going, and resolved to make

595 The noblest efforts for herself and mate,

2. An enchantr^{ess} whose duces Christian knights in Tasso's epic poem Jerusalem Delivered (sixteenth century).

D O N J U A N / 8 5 3

For Honor's, Pride's, Religion's, Virtue's sake:

Her resolutions were most truly great,

And almost might have made a Tarquin³ quake:

She prayed the Virgin Mary for her grace,

600 As being the best judge of a lady's case.

76

She vowed she never would see Juan more,

And next day paid a visit to his mother,

And looked extremely at the opening door,

Which, by the Virgin's grace, let in another;

605 Grateful she was, and yet a little sore—

Again it opens, it can be no other,

'Tis surely Juan now—No! Fm afraid

That night the Virgin was no further prayed.

77

She now determined that a virtuous woman

610 Should rather face and overcome temptation,

That flight was base and dastardly, and no man

Should ever give her heart the least sensation,

That is to say, a thought beyond the common

Preference, that we must feel, upon occasion,

615 For people who are pleasanter than others,
But then they only seem so many brothers.

78

And even if by chance—and who can tell?

The Devil's so very sly—she should discover
That all within was not so very well,

620 And, if still free,⁴ that such or such a lover

Might please perhaps, a virtuous wife can quell

Such thoughts, and be the better when they're over;

And if the man should ask, 'tis but denial:

I recommend young ladies to make trial.

79

625 And, then, there are such things as Love divine,

Bright and immaculate, unmixed and pure,

Such as the angels think so very fine,

And matrons, who would be no less secure,

Platonic, perfect, “just such love as mine;”

630 Thus Julia said—and thought so, to be sure;

And so I'd have her think, were I the man

On whom her reveries celestial ran.

80

Such love is innocent, and may exist

Between young persons without any danger.

3. In Shakespeare's Rape of Lucrece (based on woman renowned for her chastity.

Roman legend), the rapist of a Roman noble- 4. I.e., if she were not already married.

854 / G E O R G E G O R D O N , L O R D B Y R O N

635 A hand may first, and then a lip be kissed;

For my part, to such doings I'm a stranger,
But hear these freedoms form the utmost list
Of all o'er which such love may be a ranger:
If people go beyond, 'tis quite a crime,
640 But not my fault—I tell them all in time.

8 i

Love, then, but Love within its proper limits,
Was Julia's innocent determination
In young Don Juan's favor, and to him its Exertion might be useful on occasion;
645 And, lighted at too pure a shrine to dim its Ethereal luster, with what sweet persuasion
He might be taught, by Love and her together—
I really don't know what, nor Julia either.

82

Fraught with this fine intention, and well fenced
650 In mail of proof—her purity of soul—
She, for the future, of her strength convinced,
And that her honor was a rock, or mole,⁰ breakwater
Exceeding sagely from that hour dispensed
With any kind of troublesome control;
655 But whether Julia to the task was equal
Is that which must be mentioned in the sequel.

83

Her plan she deemed both innocent and feasible,
And, surely, with a stripling of sixteen
Not Scandal's fangs could fix on much that's seizable, 660 Or if they did so, satisfied to mean

Nothing but what was good, her breast was peaceable—
A quiet conscience makes one so serene!

Christians have burnt each other, quite persuaded
That all the Apostles would have done as they did.

84

665 And if in the mean time her husband died,
But Heaven forbid that such a thought should cross
Her brain, though in a dream! (and then she sighed)

Never could she survive that common loss;

But just suppose that moment should betide,

670 I only say suppose it— inter nos:5

(This should be entre nous, for Julia thought

In French, but then the rhyme would go for nought.)

85

I only say, suppose this supposition:

Juan being then grown up to man's estate

5. J u s t b e t w e e n ourselves (Latin).

D O N J U A N / 8 5 5

675 Would fully suit a widow of condition,

Even seven years hence it would not be too late;

And in the interim (to pursue this vision)

The mischief, after all, could not be great,

For he would learn the rudiments of Love,

680 I mean the seraph0 way of those above. angelic, pure

86

So much for Julia! Now we'll turn to Juan.

Poor little fellow! he had no idea

Of his own case, and never hit the true one;

In feelings quick as Ovid's Miss Medea,⁶ 685 He puzzled over what he found a new one,
But not as yet imagined it could be a Thing quite in course, and not at all alarming,
Which, with a little patience, might grow charming.

87

Silent and pensive, idle, restless, slow, 690 His home deserted for the lonely wood,
Tormented with a wound he could not know,
His, like all deep grief, plunged in solitude:

I'm fond myself of solitude or so,

But then, I beg it may be understood,

695 By solitude I mean a Sultan's (not A Hermit's), with a harem for a grotto.

88

"Oh Love! in such a wilderness as this,
Where Transport and Security entwine,
Here is the Empire of thy perfect bliss,
700 And here thou art a God indeed divine."

The bard⁷ I quote from does not sing amiss,

With the exception of the second line,

For that same twining "Transport and Security"

Are twisted to a phrase of some obscurity.

89

705 The Poet meant, no doubt, and thus appeals

To the good sense and senses of mankind,

The very thing which everybody feels,

As all have found on trial, or may find,

That no one likes to be disturbed at meals
710 Or love—I won't say more about "entwined"
Or "Transport," as we knew all that before,
But beg "Security" will bolt the door.

6. In Ovid's Metamorphoses, the young Medea 7. Byron's contemporary, Thomas Campbell, finds herself irresistibly infatuated with the hero whose Gertrude of Wyoming is here paraphrased.

Jason.

856 / G E O R G E G O R D O N , L O R D B Y R O N

90

Young Juan wandered by the glassy brooks, Thinking unutterable things; he threw 715 Himself at length within the leafy nooks
Where the wild branch of the cork forest grew;
There poets find materials for their books,
And every now and then we read them through,
So that their plan and prosody are eligible,
720 Unless, like Wordsworth,⁸ they prove unintelligible.

91

He, Juan (and not Wordsworth), so pursued
His self-communion with his own high soul,
Until his mighty heart, in its great mood,
Had mitigated part, though not the whole 725 Of its disease; he did the best he could
With things not very subject to control,
And turned, without perceiving his condition,
Like Coleridge,⁹ into a metaphysician.

92

He thought about himself, and the whole earth,
730 Of man the wonderful, and of the stars,
And how the deuce they ever could have birth;
And then he thought of earthquakes, and of wars,
How many miles the moon might have in girth,
Of air-balloons, and of the many bars
735 To perfect knowledge of the boundless skies;—
And then he thought of Donna Julia's eyes.

93

In thoughts like these true Wisdom may discern Longings sublime, and aspirations high,
Which some are born with, but the most part learn 740 To plague themselves withal, they know not why:
'Twas strange that one so young should thus concern
His brain about the action of the sky;
If you think 'twas Philosophy that this did,
I can't help thinking puberty assisted.

94

745 He pored upon the leaves, and on the flowers,
And heard a voice in all the winds; and then
He thought of wood-nymphs and immortal bowers,
And how the goddesses came down to men:
He missed the pathway, he forgot the hours,
750 And when he looked upon his watch again,
He found how much old Time had been a w i n n e r -
He also found that he had lost his dinner.

8. William W o r d s w o r t h (1 7 7 0 - 1 8 5 0 ; see 9. S a m u e l Taylor Coleridge (1 7 7 2 - 1 8 3 4 ; see pp. 7 6 3 - 8 0 5) . pp. 8 0 5 - 3 1) .

D O N J U A N / 8 5 7

95

Sometimes he turned to gaze upon his book,
Boscan, or Garcilasso;1—by the wind 755 Even as the page is rustled while we look,
So by the poesy of his own mind
Over the mystic leaf his soul was shook,
As if 'twere one whereon magicians bind
Their spells, and give them to the passing gale, 760 According to some good old woman's tale.

96

Thus would he while his lonely hours away
Dissatisfied, not knowing what he wanted;
Nor glowing reverie, nor poet's lay,
Could yield his spirit that for which it panted,
765 A bosom whereon he his head might lay,
And hear the heart beat with the love it granted,
With—several other things, which I forget,
Or which, at least, I need not mention yet.

97

Those lonely walks, and lengthening reveries, 770 Could not escape the gentle Julia's eyes;
She saw that Juan was not at his ease;
But that which chiefly may, and must surprise,
Is, that the Donna Inez did not tease
Her only son with question or surmise;
775 Whether it was she did not see, or would not,
Or, like all very clever people, could not.

98,

This may seem strange, but yet 'tis very common;
For instance—gentlemen, whose ladies take Leave to o'erstep the written rights of Woman, 780 And break the—Which commandment is't they break?

(I have forgot the number, and think no man Should rashly quote, for fear of a mistake;)
I say, when these same gentlemen are jealous,
They make some blunder, which their ladies tell us.

99

785 A real husband always is suspicious,
But still no less suspects in the wrong place,
Jealous of some one who had no such wishes,
Or pandering blindly to his own disgrace,
By harboring some dear friend extremely vicious;
790 The last indeed's infallibly the case:
And when the spouse and friend are gone off wholly,
He wonders at their vice, and not his folly.

1. Spanish poets of the early sixteenth century.

858 / G E O R G E G O R D O N , L O R D B Y R O N 100

Thus parents also are at times short-sighted:
Though watchful as the lynx, they ne'er discover,
795 The while the wicked world beholds delighted,
Young Hopeful's mistress, or Miss Fanny's lover,
Till some confounded escapade has blighted
The plan of twenty years, and all is over;

And then the mother cries, the father swears,
800 And wonders why the devil he got heirs.

101

But Inez was so anxious, and so clear
Of sight, that I must think, on this occasion,
She had some other motive much more near
For leaving Juan to this new temptation,
805 But what that motive was, I shan't say here;
Perhaps to finish Juan's education,
Perhaps to open Don Alfonso's eyes,
In case he thought his wife too great a prize.

102

It was upon a day, a summer's day—
810 Summer's indeed a very dangerous season,
And so is spring about the end of May;
The sun, no doubt, is the prevailing reason;
But whatso'er the cause is, one may say,
And stand convicted of more truth than treason, 815 That there are months which nature grows more merry in,—
March has its hares, and May must have its heroine.

103

'Twas on a summer's day—the sixth of June:
I like to be particular in dates,
Not only of the age, and year, but moon;
820 They are a sort of post-house, where the Fates
Change horses, making History change its tune,
Then spur away o'er empires and o'er states,

Leaving at last not much besides chronology,
Excepting the post-obits² of theology.

104

825 'Twas on the sixth of June, about the hour
Of half-past six—perhaps still nearer seven—
When Julia sate within as pretty a bower
As e'er held houri³ in that heathenish heaven
Described by Mahomet, and Anacreon Moore,⁴
830 To whom the lyre and laurels have been given,

2. Postobit bonds : loans repaid from the estate of

4. Byron's friend, Thomas Moore, author of a person after his or her death ; probably referring Oriental tales in his long poem Lalla Rookh and to rewards or punishments in the afterlife.

translator of love poems by the ancient Greek poet

3. A beautiful maiden said to entertain faithful Anacreon.

Muslims in paradise.

D O N J U A N / 8 5 9

With all the trophies of triumphant song—
He won them well, and may he wear them long!

105

She sate, but not alone; I know not well
How this same interview had taken place,
835 And even if I knew, I should not tell—
People should hold their tongues in any case;
No matter how or why the thing befell,
But there were she and Juan, face to face—

When two such faces are so, 'twould be wise,
840 But very difficult, to shut their eyes.

106

How beautiful she looked! her conscious heart⁵
Glowed in her cheek, and yet she felt no wrong:
Oh Love! how perfect is thy mystic art,
Strengthening the weak, and trampling on the strong!
845 How self-deceitful is the sagest part
Of mortals whom thy lure hath led along!
The precipice she stood on was immense,
So was her creed⁰ in her own innocence. trust

107

She thought of her own strength, and Juan's youth, 850 And of the folly of all prudish fears,
Victorious Virtue, and domestic Truth,
And then of Don Alfonso's fifty years:
I wish these last had not occurred, in sooth,
Because that number rarely much endears,
855 And through all climes, the snowy and the sunny,
Sounds ill in love, whate'er it may in money.

108

When people say, "I've told you fifty times,"
They mean to scold, and very often do;
When poets say, "I've written fifty rhymes," 860 They make you dread that they'll recite them too;
In gangs of fifty, thieves commit their crimes;
At fifty love for love is rare, 'tis true,
But then, no doubt, it equally as true is,

A good deal may be bought for fifty Louis.⁶

109

865 Julia had honor, virtue, truth, and love

For Don Alfonso; and she inly swore,

By all the vows below to Powers above,

She never would disgrace the ring she wore,

Nor leave a wish which wisdom might reprove;

870 And while she pondered this, besides much more,

5. H e r d e e p e m o t i o n .

6. F r e n c h g o l d c o i n s .

860 / G E O R G E G O R D O N , L O R D B Y R O N

One hand on Juan's carelessly was thrown,

Quite by mistake—she thought it was her own;

n o

Unconsciously she leaned upon the other,

Which played within the tangles of her hair;

875 And to contend with thoughts she could not smother

She seemed by the distraction of her air.

'Twas surely very wrong in Juan's mother

To leave together this imprudent pair,

She who for many years had watched her son so—

880 I'm very certain mine would not have done so.

H I

The hand which still held Juan's, by degrees

Gently, but palpably confirmed its grasp,

As if it said, "Detain me, if you please";

Yet there's no doubt she only meant to clasp

885 His fingers with a pure Platonic squeeze;

She would have shrunk as from a toad, or asp,
Had she imagined such a thing could rouse
A feeling dangerous to a prudent spouse.

1 1 2

I cannot know what Juan thought of this,
890 But what he did, is much what you would do;
His young lip thanked it with a grateful kiss,
And then, abashed at its own joy, withdrew
In deep despair, lest he had done amiss—
Love is so very timid when 'tis new:
895 She blushed, and frowned not, but she strove to speak,
And held her tongue, her voice was grown so weak.

“3

The sun set, and up rose the yellow moon:
The Devil's in the moon for mischief; they Who called her CHASTE, methinks, began too soon 900 Their nomenclature; there is not a day,
The longest, not the twenty-first of June,
Sees half the business in a wicked way,
On which three single hours of moonshine smile—
And then she looks so modest all the while!

114

905 There is a dangerous silence in that hour,
A stillness, which leaves room for the full soul
To open all itself, without the power
Of calling wholly back its self-control;
The silver light which, hallowing tree and tower,
910 Sheds beauty and deep softness o'er the whole,

D O N J U A N / 8 6 1

Breathes also to the heart, and o'er it throws
A loving languor, which is not repose.

” 5

And Julia sate with Juan, half embraced
And half retiring from the glowing arm, 915 Which trembled like the bosom where 'twas placed;
Yet still she must have thought there was no harm,
Or else 'twere easy to withdraw her waist;
But then the situation had its charm,
And then—God knows what next—I can't go on;
920 I'm almost sorry that I e'er begun.

116

Oh Plato! Plato! you have paved the way,
With your confounded fantasies, to more Immoral conduct by the fancied sway
Your system feigns o'er the controlless core 925 Of human hearts, than all the long array
Of poets and romancers:—You're a bore,
A charlatan, a coxcomb—and have been,
At best, no better than a go-between.

” 7

And Julia's voice was lost, except in sighs,
930 Until too late for useful conversation;
The tears were gushing from her gentle eyes,
I wish, indeed, they had not had occasion;
But who, alas! can love, and then be wise?
Not that Remorse did not oppose Temptation;

935 A little still she strove, and much repented,
And whispering “I will ne’er consent”—consented.

118

‘Tis said that Xerxes⁷ offered a reward
To those who could invent him a new pleasure:
Methinks the requisition’s rather hard,
940 And must have cost his Majesty a treasure:
For my part, I’m a moderate-minded bard,
Fond of a little love (which I call leisure);
I care not for new pleasures, as the old
Are quite enough for me, so they but hold.
” 9

945 Oh Pleasure! you’re indeed a pleasant thing,
Although one must be damned for you, no doubt:
I make a resolution every spring
Of reformation, ere the year run out,
But somehow, this my vestal vow takes wing,
950 Yet still, I trust, it may be kept throughout:
7. King of Persia, fifth century B.C.E.

862 / GEORGE GORDON, LORD BYRON

I’m very sorry, very much ashamed,
And mean, next winter, to be quite reclaimed.

1818 1819

Stanzas

When a Man Hath No Freedom to Fight for at Home

When a man hath no freedom to fight for at home,
Let him combat for that of his neighbors;
Let him think of the glories of Greece and of Rome,

And get knocked on his head for his labors.
s To do good to mankind is the chivalrous plan,
And is always as nobly requited;
Then battle for freedom wherever you can,
And, if not shot or hanged, you'll get knighted.

1820 1830

On This Day I Complete My Thirty-sixth Year

Missolonghi,⁸ January 22, 1824

'Tis time this heart should be unmoved,

Since others it hath ceased to move:

Yet, though I cannot be beloved,

Still let me love!

5 My days are in the yellow leaf;

The flowers and fruits of love are gone;

The worm, the canker,⁰ and the grief deep infection

Are mine alone!

The fire that on my bosom preys

is lone as some volcanic isle;

No torch is kindled at its blaze—

A funeral pile.

The hope, the fear, the jealous care,

The exalted portion of the pain

15 And power of love, I cannot share,

But wear the chain.

But 'tis not thus—and 'tis not here—

Such thoughts should shake my soul, nor now,

8. A town in Greece, where Byron had gone to support the Greek war for independence from Turkey, and where he died, April 19, 1824.

T o W O R D S W O R T H / 8 6 3

Where glory decks the hero's bier, 20 Or binds his brow.

The sword, the banner, and the field,
Glory and Greece, around me see!
The Spartan, borne upon his shield,
Was not more free.

25 Awake! (not Greece—she is awake!)
Awake, my spirit! Think through whom
Thy life-blood tracks its parent lake,
And then strike home!

Tread those reviving passions down,
30 Unworthy manhood!—unto thee
Indifferent should the smile or frown
Of beauty be.

If thou regrett'st thy youth, why live?
The land of honorable death
35 Is here:—up to the field, and give Away thy breath!

Seek out—less often sought than found—
A soldier's grave, for thee the best;
Then look around, and choose thy ground,
40 And take thy rest.

1824 1824

P E R C Y B Y S S H E S H E L L E Y

1792-1822

To Wordsworth¹

Poet of Nature, thou hast wept to know

That things depart which never may return;
Childhood and youth, friendship and love's first glow,
Have fled like sweet dreams, leaving thee to mourn.

5 These common woes I feel. One loss is mine,
Which thou too feel'st, yet I alone deplore;
Thou wert as a lone star whose light did shine
On some frail bark in winter's midnight roar;
Thou hast like to a rock-built refuge stood io Above the blind and battling multitude;
In honored poverty thy voice did weave Songs consecrate to truth and liberty;—

1. William Wordsworth (1770 - 1850; see pp. 763 - 805), who had ceased to champion the liberal and revolutionary ideas of his youth and, in Shelley's view, had compromised himself.

864 / PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY

Deserting these, thou leavest me to grieve,
Thus having been, that thou shouldst cease to be.

1814-15

Mutability

i

The flower that smiles today

Tomorrow dies;

All that we wish to stay,

Tempts and then flies.

5 What is this world's delight?

Lightning that mocks the night,

Brief even as bright.

2

Virtue, how frail it is!
Friendship how rare!
io Love, how it sells poor bliss
For proud despair!
But we, though soon they fall,
Survive their joy and all
Which ours we call.

3

15 Whilst skies are blue and bright,
Whilst flowers are gay,
Whilst eyes that change ere night
Make glad the day,
Whilst yet the calm hours creep,
20 Dream thou—and from thy sleep
Then wake to weep.

1815-16

Hymn to Intellectual Beauty²

i

The awful shadow of some unseen Power
Floats though unseen among us—visiting
This various world with as inconstant wing
As summer winds that creep from flower to flower—
5 Like moonbeams that behind some piny mountain shower,
It visits with inconstant glance
Each human heart and countenance;
Like hues and harmonies of evening—

2. Beauty perceived not by the senses b u t by spir- 3. Used as a verb, itual illumination.

H Y M N T O I N T E L L E C T U A L B E A U T Y / 8 6 5

Like clouds in starlight widely spread—

10 Like memory of music fled—

Like aught that for its grace may be

Dear, and yet dearer for its mystery.

2

Spirit of BEAUTY, that dost consecrate

With thine own hues all thou dost shine upon

15 Of human thought or form—where art thou gone?

Why dost thou pass away and leave our state,

This dim vast vale of tears, vacant and desolate?

Ask why the sunlight not forever

Weaves rainbows o'er yon mountain river,

20 Why aught should fail and fade that once is shown,

Why fear and dream and death and birth

Cast on the daylight of this earth

Such gloom—why man has such a scope

For love and hate, despondency and hope?

3

25 No voice from some sublimer world hath ever

To sage or poet these responses given—

Therefore the names of Daemon, Ghost, and Heaven,

Remain the records of their vain endeavor,

Frail spells—whose uttered charm might not avail to sever,

BO From all we hear and all we see,

Doubt, chance, and mutability.

Thy light alone—like mist o'er mountains driven,
Or music by the night wind sent Through strings of some still instrument, wind harp
35 Or moonlight on a midnight stream,
Gives grace and truth to life's unquiet dream.
Love, Hope, and Self-esteem, like clouds depart
And come, for some uncertain moments lent.
Man were immortal, and omnipotent,
40 Didst thou, unknown and awful as thou art,
Keep with thy glorious train⁰ firm state within his heart.
company Thou messenger of sympathies,
That wax and wane in lovers' eyes—
Thou—that to human thought art nourishment,
45 Like darkness to a dying flame!
Depart not as thy shadow came,
Depart not—lest the grave should be,
Like life and fear, a dark reality.

5

While yet a boy I sought for ghosts, and sped
50 Through many a listening chamber, cave and ruin,
And starlight wood, with fearful steps pursuing
866 / P E R C Y B Y S S H E S H E L L E Y
Hopes of high talk with the departed dead.
I called on poisonous names⁴ with which our youth is fed;
I was not heard—I saw them not—55 When musing deeply on the lot
Of life, at that sweet time when winds are wooing
All vital things that wake to bring

News of birds and blossoming—
Sudden, thy shadow fell on me;
60 I shrieked, and clasped my hands in ecstasy!

6

I vowed that I would dedicate my powers
To thee and thine—have I not kept the vow?
With beating heart and streaming eyes, even now
I call the phantoms of a thousand hours
65 Each from his voiceless grave: they have in visioned bowers
Of studious zeal or love's delight
Outwatched with me the envious night—
They know that never joy illumed my brow
Unlinked with hope that thou wouldst free
70 This world from its dark slavery,
That thou—O awful LOVELINESS,
Wouldst give whate'er these words cannot express.

7

The day becomes more solemn and serene
When noon is past—there is a harmony
75 In autumn, and a luster in its sky,
Which through the summer is not heard or seen,
As if it could not be, as if it had not been!
Thus let thy power, which like the truth
Of nature on my passive youth
so Descended, to my onward life supply
Its calm—to one who worships thee,
And every form containing thee,

Whom, SPIRIT fair, thy spells did bind
To fear⁵ himself, and love all human kind.

1 8 1 6 1 8 1 7

Mont Blanc⁶

Lines Written in the Vale of Chamouni

i

The everlasting universe of things

Flows through the mind, and rolls its rapid waves,

4. Possibly alluding to a t t e m p t s to s u m m o n spirits

7. T h r o u g h the C h a m o u n i valley flows the river of the d e a d by m e a n s of magic rites.

Arve, w h i c h originates in a glacier on the m o u n t a i n

5. P e r h a p s in t h e old sense of “regard with rever-a n d e m p t i e s into Lake Geneva, f r o m w h i c h flows e n c e a n d awe.”

the R h o n e , w h i c h r e a c h e s the M e d i t e r r a n e a n .

6. T h e highest of the Alps.

MONTBLANC / 8 6 7

Now dark—now glittering—now reflecting gloom—

Now lending splendor, where from secret springs

5 The source of human thought its tribute brings

Of waters,—with a sound but half its own,

Such as a feeble brook will oft assume

In the wild woods, among the mountains lone,

Where waterfalls around it leap for ever,

10 Where woods and winds contend, and a vast river

Over its rocks ceaselessly bursts and raves.

2

Thus thou, Ravine of Arve—dark, deep Ravine—
Thou many-colored, many voiced vale,
Over whose pines, and crags, and caverns sail
15 Fast cloud-shadows and sunbeams: awful scene, awesome
Where Power in likeness of the Arve comes down
From the ice-gulfs that gird his secret throne,
Bursting through these dark mountains like the flame
Of lightning through the tempest;—thou dost lie, 20 Thy giant brood of pines around thee clinging,
Children of elder time, in whose devotion
The chainless winds still come and ever came
To drink their odors, and their mighty swinging
To hear—an old and solemn harmony;
25 Thine earthly rainbows stretched across the sweep
Of the ethereal waterfall, whose veil
Robes some unsculptured image; the strange sleep
Which when the voices of the desert fail
Wraps all in its own deep eternity;—
30 Thy caverns echoing to the Arve's commotion,
A loud, lone sound no other sound can tame;
Thou art pervaded with that ceaseless motion,
Thou art the path of that unresting sound—
Dizzy Ravine! and when I gaze on thee
35 I seem as in a trance sublime and strange
To muse on my own separate fantasy,
My own, my human mind, which passively
Now renders and receives fast influencings,
Holding an unremitting interchange

40 With the clear universe of things around;
One legion of wild thoughts, whose wandering wings
Now float above thy darkness, and now rest
Where that or thou art no unbidden guest,
In the still cave of the witch Poesy,⁸ 45 Seeking among the shadows that pass by Ghosts of all things that are, some shade of thee,
Some phantom, some faint image; till the breast
From which they fled recalls them, thou art there!

8. The power of the imagination.

8 6 8 / PERCY BYSSHE S H E L L E Y

3

Some say that gleams of a remoter world
50 Visit the soul in sleep,—that death is slumber,
And that its shapes the busy thoughts outnumber
Of those who wake and live.—I look on high;
Has some unknown omnipotence unfurled
The veil of life and death? or do I lie
55 In dream, and does the mightier world of sleep
Spread far around and inaccessible
Its circles? For the very spirit fails,
Driven like a homeless cloud from steep to steep
That vanishes among the viewless⁰ gales! invisible
60 Far, far above, piercing the infinite sky,
Mont Blanc appears,—still, snowy, and serene—
Its subject mountains their unearthly forms
Pile around it, ice and rock; broad vales⁰ between valleys
Of frozen floods, unfathomable deeps,

65 Blue as the overhanging heaven, that spread
And wind among the accumulated steeps;
A desert peopled by the storms alone,
Save when the eagle brings some hunter's bone,
And the wolf tracks her there—how hideously
70 Its shapes are heaped around! rude, bare, and high,
Ghastly, and scarred, and riven.—Is this the scene
Where the old Earthquake-demon⁹ taught her young Ruin? Were these their toys? or did a sea
Of fire envelop once this silent snow?
75 None can reply—all seems eternal now.
The wilderness has a mysterious tongue
Which teaches awful¹⁰ doubt, or faith SO mild, profoundly disturbing
So solemn, so serene, that man may be,
But for such faith, with nature reconciled;¹
so Thou hast a voice, great Mountain, to repeal Large codes of fraud and woe; not understood
By all, but which the wise, and great, and good Interpret, or make felt, or deeply feel.

4

The fields, the lakes, the forests, and the streams,
85 Ocean, and all the living things that dwell
Within the daedal² earth; lightning, and rain, Earthquake, and fiery flood, and hurricane,
The torpor of the year when feeble dreams
Visit the hidden buds, or dreamless sleep
90 Holds every future leaf and flower;—the bound

With which from that detested trance they leap;
The works and ways of man, their death and birth,
And that of him and all that his may be;

9. Personification of geologic forces.

may have “faith” that they are in harmony.

1. A debated passage; perhaps to be paraphrased

2. Intricately made, as by Daedalus, the legendary as: the “tongue” may teach either that the cosmos Greek craftsman.

and the human mind are deeply at odds, or that we

MONTBLANC / 869

All things that move and breathe with toil and sound

95 Are born and die; revolve, subside, and swell.

Power dwells apart in its tranquility,

Remote, serene, and inaccessible:

And this, the naked countenance of earth,

On which I gaze, even these primeval mountains

100 Teach the adverting mind. The glaciers creep

Like snakes that watch their prey, from their far fountains,

Slow rolling on; there, many a precipice,

Frost and the Sun in scorn of mortal power

Have piled: dome, pyramid, and pinnacle,

105 A city of death, distinct with many a tower

And wall impregnable of beaming ice.

Yet not a city, but a flood of ruin

Is there, that from the boundaries of the sky

Rolls its perpetual stream; vast pines are strewing

110 Its destined path, or in the mangled soil

Branchless and shattered stand; the rocks, drawn down
From yon remotest waste, have overthrown
The limits of the dead and living world,
Never to be reclaimed. The dwelling-place
ii5 Of insects, beasts, and birds, becomes its spoil
Their food and their retreat for ever gone,
So much of life and joy is lost. The race
Of man flies far in dread; his work and dwelling
Vanish, like smoke before the tempest's stream, 120 And their place is not known. Below, vast caves
Shine in the rushing torrents' restless gleam,
Which from those secret chasms in tumult welling
Meet in the vale, and one majestic River,
The breath and blood of distant lands, for ever 125 Rolls its loud waters to the ocean-waves,
Breathes its swift vapors to the circling air.³

5

Mont Blanc yet gleams on high:—the power is there,
The still and solemn power of many sights,
And many sounds, and much of life and death.
BO In the calm darkness of the moonless nights,
In the lone glare of day, the snows descend
Upon that Mountain; none beholds them there,
Nor when the flakes burn in the sinking sun,
Or the star-beams dart through them:—Winds contend 135 Silently there, and heap the snow with breath
Rapid and strong, but silently! Its home
The voiceless lightning in these solitudes

Keeps innocently, and like vapor broods
Over the snow. The secret Strength of things
HO Which governs thought, and to the infinite dome
Of Heaven is as a law, inhabits thee!⁴

3. Cf. Coleridge, "Kubla Khan," lines 12-24 4. I.e., Mont Blanc,
(p. 809).

870 / P E R C Y B Y S S H E S H E L L E Y

And what were thou, and earth, and stars, and sea,
If to the human mind's imaginings
Silence and solitude were vacancy?

July 23, 1816 1817

Ozymandias⁵

I met a traveler from an antique land
Who said: Two vast and trunkless legs of stone
Stand in the desert ... Near them, on the sand,
Half sunk, a shattered visage lies, whose frown,
5 And wrinkled lip, and sneer of cold command,
Tell that its sculptor well those passions read
Which yet survive, stamped on these lifeless things,
The hand that mocked them, and the heart that fed:
And on the pedestal these words appear:
io "My name is Ozymandias, king of kings:
Look on my works, ye Mighty, and despair!"
Nothing beside remains. Round the decay
Of that colossal wreck, boundless and bare
The lone and level sands stretch far away.

1817 1818

Stanzas Written in Dejection, Near Naples

i

The sun is warm, the sky is clear,
The waves are dancing fast and bright,
Blue isles and snowy mountains wear
The purple noon's transparent might,
5 The breath of the moist earth is light,
Around its unexpanded buds;
Like many a voice of one delight,
The winds, the birds, the ocean floods,
The City's voice itself is soft like Solitude's.

2

io I see the Deep's untrampled floor
With green and purple seaweeds strown;
I see the waves upon the shore,
Like light dissolved in star-showers, thrown:
I sit upon the sands alone—

15 The lightning of the noontide ocean

5. Greek name for the Egyptian monarch Ramses II (thirteenth century B.C.E.), who is said to have erected a huge statue of himself.

ENGLAND IN 1819 / 871

Is flashing round me, and a tone
Arises from its measured motion;
How sweet! did any heart now share in my emotion.

3

Alas! I have nor hope nor health, 20 Nor peace within nor calm around,
Nor that content surpassing wealth

The sage in meditation found,
And walked with inward glory crowned—
Nor fame, nor power, nor love, nor leisure.
25 Others I see whom these surround—
Smiling they live, and call life pleasure;
To me that cup has been dealt in another measure.

4

Yet now despair itself is mild,
Even as the winds and waters are;
30 I could lie down like a tired child,
And weep away the life of care
Which I have borne and yet must bear,
Till death like sleep might steal on me,
And I might feel in the warm air
35 My cheek grow cold, and hear the sea
Breathe o'er my dying brain its last monotony.

5

Some might lament that I were cold,
As I, when this sweet day is gone,
Which my lost heart, too soon grown old,
40 Insults with this untimely moan;
They might lament—for I am one Whom men love not—and yet regret,
Unlike this day, which, when the sun
Shall on its stainless glory set,
45 Will linger, though enjoyed, like joy in memory yet.

1818 1824

England in 1819

An old, mad, blind, despised, and dying king⁶—
Princes, the dregs of their dull race,⁷ who flow
Through public scorn—mud from a muddy spring;

Rulers who neither see, nor feel, nor know,
5 But leechlike to their fainting country cling,
Till they drop, blind in blood, without a blow;

6. George III (1738—1820), who lived for years in regent, later George IV, whom Shelley detested, a state of advanced senility. The “Princes” of line 7. The “Hanoverian” line of English monarchs, 2 are George III’s sons, including the prince- beginning in 1714 with George I.

872 / P E R C Y B Y S S H E S H E L L E Y

A people starved and stabbed in the untitled field—
An army, which liberticide⁸ and prey
Makes as a two-edged sword to all who wield;
10 Golden and sanguine laws⁹ which tempt and slay;
Religion Christless, Godless—a book sealed;
A Senate—Time’s worst statute¹ unrepealed—
Are graves, from which a glorious Phantom² may Burst, to illumine our tempestuous day.

1819 1839

Ode to the West Wind³

i

O wild West Wind, thou breath of Autumn’s being,
Thou, from whose unseen presence the leaves dead
Are driven, like ghosts from an enchanter fleeing,
Yellow, and black, and pale, and hectic red,
5 Pestilence-stricken multitudes: O thou,
Who chariotest to their dark wintry bed
The winged seeds, where they lie cold and low,
Each like a corpse within its grave, until Thine azure sister of the Spring shall blow

io Her clarion⁴ o'er the dreaming earth, and fill (Driving sweet buds like flocks to feed in air)
With living hues and odors plain and hill:
Wild Spirit, which art moving everywhere;
Destroyer and preserver; hear, oh, hear!

2

15 Thou on whose stream, mid the steep sky's commotion,
Loose clouds like earth's decaying leaves are shed,
Shook from the tangled boughs of Heaven and Ocean,
Angels⁵ of rain and lightning: there are spread
On the blue surface of thine aery surge,

20 Like the bright hair uplifted from the head

8. Destruction of liberty. An allusion to the Peterloo Massacre. On August 16, 1819, a cavalry troop on a day when that tempestuous wind, whose temperature is at once mild and animating, was collected a crowd at a peaceful political rally in St. Peter's Field, near Manchester. Peterloo ironically conflate St. Peter with the Battle of Waterloo.

Dante, the fourteenth-century poet whose master-

9. Laws bought with gold and causing bloodshed.

piece, The Divine Comedy, originated terza rima,

1. Probably the Act of Union (1801), uniting Ireland to England and excluding Roman Catholics tion," pp. 2040 - 41).

from exercising full citizenship.

4. Trumpet-call.

2. I.e., the spirit of liberty.

5. In Greek derivation, messengers or divine mes-

3. "This poem was conceived and chiefly written sengers.

in a wood that skirts the Arno, near Florence, and

ODE TO THE WEST WIND / 873

Of some fierce Maenad,⁶ even from the dim verge

Of the horizon to the zenith's height,

The locks of the approaching storm. Thou dirge

Of the dying year, to which this closing night

25 Will be the dome of a vast sepulcher,

Vaulted with all thy congregated might

Of vapors,⁰ from whose solid atmosphere clouds

Black rain, and fire, and hail will burst: oh, hear!

3

Thou who didst waken from his summer dreams

30 The blue Mediterranean, where he lay,

Lulled by the coil of his crystalline streams,

Beside a pumice isle in Baiae's bay,⁷

And saw in sleep old palaces and towers

Quivering within the wave's intenser day,

35 All overgrown with azure moss and flowers

So sweet, the sense faints picturing them! Thou

For whose path the Atlantic's level powers

Cleave themselves into chasms, while far below

The sea-blooms and the oozy woods which wear

40 The sapless foliage of the ocean, know
Thy voice, and suddenly grow gray with fear,
And tremble and despoil themselves: oh, hear!8

4

If I were a dead leaf thou mightest bear;
If I were a swift cloud to fly with thee;
45 A wave to pant beneath thy power, and share
The impulse of thy strength, only less free Than thou, O uncontrollable! If even
I were as in my boyhood, and could be
The comrade of thy wanderings over Heaven,
50 As then, when to outstrip thy skyey speed
Scarce seemed a vision; I would ne'er have striven
As thus with thee in prayer in my sore need.

Oh, lift me as a wave, a leaf, a cloud!

I fall upon the thorns of life! I bleed!

6. Frenzied dancer, worshiper of Dionysus (Greek 8. "The vegetation at the bottom of the sea ...

god of wine and fertility). sympathizes with that of the land in the change of 7. Near Naples, Italy. seasons" [Shelley's note].

874 / P E R C Y B Y S S H E S H E L L E Y

55

A heavy weight of hours has chained and bowed
One too like thee: tameless, and swift, and proud.

5

Make me thy lyre, even as the forest is:

What if my leaves are falling like its own!

The tumult of thy mighty harmonies

60 Will take from both a deep, autumnal tone,

Sweet though in sadness. Be thou, Spirit fierce,
My spirit! Be thou me, impetuous one!
Drive my dead thoughts over the universe
Like withered leaves to quicken a new birth!
65 And, by the incantation of this verse,
Scatter, as from an unextinguished hearth
Ashes and sparks, my words among mankind!
Be through my lips to unawakened earth
The trumpet of a prophecy! O Wind, 70 If Winter comes, can Spring be far behind?

1819 1820

The Cloud

I bring fresh showers for the thirsting flowers,
From the seas and the streams;
I bear light shade for the leaves when laid
In their noonday dreams.
5 From my wings are shaken the dews that waken
The sweet buds every one,
When rocked to rest on their mother's breast,
As she dances about the sun.
I wield the flail of the lashing hail,
10 And whiten the green plains under,
And then again I dissolve it in rain,
And laugh as I pass in thunder.
I sift the snow on the mountains below,
And their great pines groan aghast;
15 And all the night 'tis my pillow white,
While I sleep in the arms of the blast.

Sublime on the towers of my skyey bowers,
Lightning my pilot⁹ sits;

In a cavern under is fettered the thunder,

20 It struggles and howls at fits;⁰ intervals

9. Electrical energy, here represented as directing the cloud in response to the attraction of opposite charges (“genii,” line 23) under the sea.

T H E C L O U D / 8 7 5

Over earth and ocean, with gentle motion,

This pilot is guiding me,

Lured by the love of the genii that move

In the depths of the purple sea;

25 Over the rills, and the crags, and the hills,

Over the lakes and the plains,

Wherever he dream, under mountain or stream,

The Spirit he loves remains;

And I all the while bask in Heaven’s blue smile,

30 Whilst he is dissolving in rains.

The sanguine Sunrise, with his meteor eyes,

And his burning plumes outspread,

Leaps on the back of my sailing rack,¹

When the morning star shines dead;

35 As on the jag of a mountain crag,

Which an earthquake rocks and swings,

An eagle alit one moment may sit

In the light of its golden wings.

And when Sunset may breathe, from the lit sea beneath,

40 Its ardors of rest and of love,

And the crimson pall of eve may fall

From the depth of Heaven above,
With wings folded I rest, on mine aery nest,
As still as a brooding dove.
45 That orb'd maiden with white fire laden,
Whom mortals call the Moon,
Glides glimmering o'er my fleecelike floor,
By the midnight breezes strewn;
And wherever the beat of her unseen feet,
50 Which only the angels hear,
May have broken the woof of my tent's thin roof, fabric
The stars peep behind her and peer;
And I laugh to see them whirl and flee,
Like a swarm of golden bees,
55 When I widen the rent in my wind-built tent,
Till the calm rivers, lakes, and seas,
Like strips of the sky fallen through me on high,
Are each paved with the moon and these.
I bind the Sun's throne with a burning zone, belt
60 And the Moon's with a girdle of pearl;
The volcanoes are dim, and the stars reel and swim,
When the whirlwinds my banner unfurl.
From cape to cape, with a bridgelike shape,
Over a torrent sea,
65 Sunbeam-proof, I hang like a roof—
The mountains its columns be.
The triumphal arch through which I march
With hurricane, fire, and snow,
1. Wind-driven clouds.

876 / P E R C Y B Y S S H E S H E L L E Y

When the Powers of the air are chained to my chair, 70 Is the million-colored bow;
The sphere-fire above its soft colors wove,
While the moist Earth was laughing below.
I am the daughter of Earth and Water,
And the nursling of the Sky;
75 I pass through the pores of the ocean and shores;
I change, but I cannot die.
For after the rain when with never a stain
The pavilion of Heaven is bare,
And the winds and sunbeams with their convex gleams upward-arching
so Build up the blue dome of air,
I silently laugh at my own cenotaph,²
And out of the caverns of rain,
Like a child from the womb, like a ghost from the tomb,
I arise and unbuild it again.
1820 1820
To a Skylark
Hail to thee, blithe Spirit!
Bird thou never wert,
That from Heaven, or near it,
Pourest thy full heart
5 In profuse strains of unpremeditated art.
Higher still and higher
From the earth thou springest
Like a cloud of fire;

The blue deep thou wingest,
io And singing still dost soar, and soaring ever singest.

In the golden lightning
Of the sunken sun,
O'er which clouds are bright'ning,
Thou dost float and run;
15 Like an unbodied joy whose race is just begun.

The pale purple even Melts around thy flight;
Like a star of Heaven,
In the broad daylight
20 Thou art unseen, but yet I hear thy shrill delight,
Keen as are the arrows
Of that silver sphere,^o star

2. M o n u m e n t honoring a person who is buried elsewhere.

T o A S K Y L A R K / 8 7 7

Whose intense lamp narrows
In the white dawn clear
25 Until we hardly see—we feel that it is there.

All the earth and air
With thy voice is loud,
As, when night is bare,
From one lonely cloud
30 The moon rains out her beams, and Heaven is overflowed.
What thou art we know not;
What is most like thee?
From rainbow clouds there flow not Drops so bright to see

35 As from thy presence showers a rain of melody.
Like a Poet hidden
In the light of thought,
Singing hymns unbidden,
Till the world is wrought
40 To sympathy with hopes and fears it heeded not:
Like a high-born maiden
In a palace tower,
Soothing her love-laden
Soul in secret hour
45 With music sweet as love, which overflows her bower:
Like a glowworm golden
In a dell of dew,
Scattering un beholden
Its aerial hue
50 Among the flowers and grass, which screen it from the view!
Like a rose embowered
In its own green leaves,
By warm winds deflowered,
Till the scent it gives 55 Makes faint with too much sweet those heavy-winged thieves:
Sound of vernal showers
On the twinkling grass,
Rain-awakened flowers,
All that ever was 60 Joyous, and clear, and fresh, thy music doth surpass:
Teach us, Sprite⁰ or Bird, spirit

What sweet thoughts are thine:
I have never heard
Praise of love or wine
65 That panted forth a flood of rapture so divine.
878 / P E R C Y B Y S S H E S H E L L E Y
Chorus Hymeneal,³
Or triumphal chant,
Matched with thine would be all
But an empty vaunt, 70 A thing wherein we feel there is some hidden want.
What objects are the fountains
Of thy happy strain?
What fields, or waves, or mountains?
What shapes of sky or plain?
75 What love of thine own kind? what ignorance of pain?
With thy clear keen joyance Languor cannot be:
Shadow of annoyance
Never came near thee:
so Thou lovest—but ne'er knew love's sad satiety.
Waking or asleep,
Thou of death must deem Things more true and deep
Than we mortals dream,
85 Or how could thy notes flow in such a crystal stream?
We look before and after,
And pine for what is not:
Our sincerest laughter

With some pain is fraught;
90 Our sweetest songs are those that tell of saddest thought.
Yet if we could scorn
Hate, and pride, and fear;
If we were things born
Not to shed a tear,
95 I know not how thy joy we ever should come near.
Better than all measures
Of delightful sound,
Better than all treasures
That in books are found,
100 Thy skill to poet were, thou scorner of the ground!
Teach me half the gladness
That thy brain must know,
Such harmonious madness
From my lips would flow
105 The world should listen then—as I am listening now.

1820 1820

3. As for a wedding (from Hymen, Greek god of marriage).

ADONAIS / 8 7 9

Adonais⁴

An Elegy on the Death of John Keats, Author of Endymion, Hyperion,

*etc.*⁵

OTOTTJP jtpiv UEV e/.AUJREG EVI ‘ COJOLOIV ewog, vftv de davwv ^anjteig EcrjtEpog ev cjjOinEvoig.⁶

PLATO

1

I weep for Adonais—he is dead!

Oh, weep for Adonais! though our tears
Thaw not the frost which binds so dear a head!
And thou, sad Hour, selected from all years
5 To mourn our loss, rouse thy obscure compeers,⁰ equals
And teach them thine own sorrow, say: with me
Died Adonais; till the Future dares Forget the Past, his fate and fame shall be An echo and a light unto eternity!

2

io Where wert thou mighty Mother,⁷ when he lay,
When thy Son lay, pierced by the shaft which flies
In darkness? where was IornŪrania abandoned
When Adonais died? With veiled eyes,
'Mid listening Echoes, in her Paradise
15 She sate, while one, with soft enamored breath,
Rekindled all the fading melodies,
With which, like flowers that mock the corse⁰ beneath, corpse
He had adorned and hid the coming bulk of death.

3

Oh, weep for Adonais—he is dead!
20 Wake, melancholy Mother, wake and weep!
Yet wherefore? Quench within their burning bed Thy fiery tears, and let thy loud heart keep Like his, a mute and uncomplaining sleep;
For he is gone, where all things wise and fair
25 Descend:—oh, dream not that the amorous Deep
Will yet restore him to the vital air;
Death feeds on his mute voice, and laughs at our despair.

4. A name derived from Adonis, in Greek mythology a young hunter beloved of Aphrodite and killed by a wild boar. The root meaning of his name, "Ere thy fair light had fled— / Now, having died, thou art as Hesperus, giving / New splendor to the dead" [Shelley's translation], Venus is both Hesperus (also Adon, is "the lord," and in the form Adonai appears in Hebrew scriptures as a synonym for God), the evening star, and Lucifer, the morning star.

5. Keats died, in Rome, on February 23, 1821; for

7. Urania, "heavenly one," Venus invoked as the Muse (divine inspirer) of noble poetry. Adonais is his poetry, see pp. 905—41.

Muse (divine inspirer) of noble poetry. Adonais is

6. "Thou wert the morning star among the living, represented as her son.

880 / PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY

47

Most musical of mourners, weep again!

Lament anew, Urania!—He died,

30 Who was the Sire of an immortal strain,

Blind, old, and lonely, when his country's pride,

The priest, the slave, and the liberticide,⁰ destroyer of liberty

Trampled and mocked with many a loathed rite

Of lust and blood; he went, unterrified,

35 Into the gulf of death; but his clear Sprite⁰ spirit

Yet reigns o'er earth; the third among the sons of light.⁹

5

Most musical of mourners, weep anew!
Not all to that bright station dared to climb;
And happier they their happiness who knew,
40 Whose tapers yet burn through that night of time
In which suns perished; others more sublime,
Struck by the envious wrath of man or God,
Have sunk, extinct in their refulgent⁰ prime; shining
And some yet live, treading the thorny road,
45 Which leads, through toil and hate, to Fame's serene abode.

6

But now, thy youngest, dearest one, has perished,
The nursling of thy widowhood, who grew,
Like a pale flower by some sad maiden cherished,
And fed with true-love tears, instead of dew;
50 Most musical of mourners, weep anew!
Thy extreme⁰ hope, the loveliest and the last, highest, latest
The bloom, whose petals nipped before they blew
Died on the promise of the fruit, is waste;
The broken lily lies—the storm is overpast.

7

55 To that high Capital,⁰ where kingly Death Rome
Keeps his pale court in beauty and decay,
He came; and bought, with price of purest breath,
A grave among the eternal.—Come away!
Haste, while the vault of blue Italian day
60 Is yet his fitting charnel-roof! while still
He lies, as if in dewy sleep he lay;
Awake him not! surely he takes his fill

Of deep and liquid rest, forgetful of all ill.

8

He will awake no more, oh, never more!—

65 Within the twilight chamber spreads apace

The shadow of white Death, and at the door

Invisible Corruption waits to trace

8. Milton, who also invoked the aid of Urania (see 9. Rivald as a poet by only two predecessors, Paradise Lost 1.6—16, p. 421 above). Homer and Dante.

ADONAIIS / 8 8 1

His extreme way to her dim dwelling-place;

The eternal Hunger sits, but pity and awe

70 Soothe her pale rage, nor dares she to deface

So fair a prey, till darkness and the law

Of change, shall o'er his sleep the mortal curtain draw.

9

Oh, weep for Adonais!—The quick0 Dreams, living

The passion-winged Ministers of thought,

75 Who were his flocks, whom near the living streams

Of his young spirit he fed, and whom he taught

The love which was its music, wander not—

Wander no more, from kindling brain to brain,

But droop there, whence they sprung; and mourn their lot

so Round the cold heart, where, after their sweet pain,

They ne'er will gather strength, or find a home again.

10

And one with trembling hand clasps his cold head,

And fans him with her moonlight wings, and cries,

“Our love, our hope, our sorrow, is not dead;

85 See, on the silken fringe of his faint eyes,
Like dew upon a sleeping flower, there lies
A tear some Dream has loosened from his brain.”
Lost Angel of a ruined Paradise!
She knew not ‘twas her own; as with no stain
90 She faded, like a cloud which had outwept its rain.

n

One from a lucid⁰ urn of starry dew

luminous

Washed his light limbs as if embalming them;
Another clipped her profuse locks, and threw
The wreath upon him, like an anadem,⁰ garland

95 Which frozen tears instead of pearls begem;
Another in her willful grief would break
Her bow and winged reeds, as if to stem
A greater loss with one which was more weak;
And dull the barbed fire against his frozen cheek 12

IOO Another Splendor on his mouth alit,
That mouth, whence it was wont to draw the breath
Which gave it strength to pierce the guarded wit,¹
And pass into the panting heart beneath
With lightning and with music: the damp death
105 Quenched its caress upon its icy lips;
And, as a dying meteor stains a wreath
Of moonlight vapor, which the cold night clips,⁰ envelops
It flushed through his pale limbs, and passed to its eclipse.

1. The defensive analytical mind.

8 8 2

/ PERCY BYSSHE S H E L L E Y

And others came ... Desires and Adorations, 110 Winged Persuasions and veiled Destinies,
Splendors, and Glooms, and glimmering Incarnations
Of hopes and fears, and twilight Phantasies;
And Sorrow, with her family of Sighs,
And Pleasure, blind with tears, led by the gleam
115 Of her own dying smile instead of eyes, Came in slow pomp;—the moving pomp might seem Like pageantry of mist on an autumnal stream.

J 4

All he had loved, and molded into thought
From shape, and hue, and odor, and sweet sound, 120 Lamented Adonais. Morning sought
Her eastern watch-tower, and her hair unbound,
Wet with the tears which should adorn the ground,
Dimmed the aerial eyes that kindle day;
Afar the melancholy thunder moaned,
125 Pale Ocean in unquiet slumber lay,
And the wild Winds flew round, sobbing in their dismay.
Lost Echo² sits amid the voiceless mountains,
And feeds her grief with his remembered lay,
And will no more reply to winds or fountains,
no Or amorous birds perched on the young green spray,
Or herdsman's horn, or bell at closing day;
Since she can mimic not his lips, more dear

Than those for whose disdain she pined away
Into a shadow of all sounds:—a drear
135 Murmur, between their songs, is all the woodmen hear.

16

Grief made the young Spring wild, and she threw down
Her kindling buds, as if she Autumn were,
Or they dead leaves; since her delight is flown
For whom should she have waked the sullen year?

140 To Phoebus was not Hyacinth³ so dear,

Nor to himself Narcissus, as to both

Thou, Adonais; wan they stand and sere^o dry; -withered

Amid the faint companions of their youth,

With dew all turned to tears; odor, to sighing ruth.^o pity

17

145 Thy spirit's sister, the lorn^o nightingale, lost, abandoned

Mourns not her mate with such melodious pain;

2. In Greek mythology, a nymph, or minor nature

3. Youth loved by Apollo ("Phoebus," Greek and goddess, who loved Narcissus and who pined away

Roman god of sunlight, prophecy, music, and into a mere voice when that youth fell in love with poetry), who killed him by accident.

his own reflection in a pool.

ADONAIIS / 8 8 3

Not so the eagle, who like thee could scale

Heaven, and could nourish in the sun's domain

Her mighty youth,⁴ with morning, doth complain,

150 Soaring and screaming round her empty nest,

As Albion⁰ wails for thee: the curse of Cain⁵ England
Light on his head⁶ who pierced thy innocent breast,
And scared the angel soul that was its earthly guest!

18

Ah, woe is me! Winter is come and gone,
155 But grief returns with the revolving year;
The airs and streams renew their joyous tone;
The ants, the bees, the swallows reappear;
Fresh leaves and flowers deck the dead Seasons' bier;
The amorous birds now pair in every brake,⁰ thicket
160 And build their mossy homes in field and brere;^o briar
And the green lizard, and the golden snake,
Like unimprisoned flames, out of their trance awake.

19

Through wood and stream and field and hill and Ocean,
A quickening life from the Earth's heart has burst 165 As it has ever done, with change and motion,
From the great morning of the world when first
God dawned on Chaos; in its stream immersed
The lamps of Heaven flash with a softer light;
All baser things pant with life's sacred thirst;
170 Diffuse themselves; and spend in love's delight,
The beauty and the joy of their renewed might.

20

The leprous corpse touched by this spirit tender
Exhales itself in flowers of gentle breath;
Like incarnations of the stars, when splendor
175 Is changed to fragrance, they illumine death

And mock the merry worm that wakes beneath;
Nought we know, dies. Shall that alone which knows
Be as a sword consumed before the sheath
By sightless lightning?—the intense atom⁷ glows
180 A moment, then is quenched in a most cold repose.

21

Alas! that all we loved of him should be,
But for our grief, as if it had not been.
And grief itself be mortal! Woe is me!
Whence are we, and why are we? of what scene
4. In folklore, an eagle could recapture its youth
6. The anonymous critic whose venomous review by soaring close to the sun.

of Keats's "Endymion" had hastened, Shelley

5. God's curse upon Cain for having slain his believed, Keats's death.

brother Abel was that nothing should grow for him

7. Indivisible and indestructible unit of anything and that he should be homeless (Genesis 3.11-that exists. Sightless: unseeing and unseen.

12).

884 / P E R C Y B Y S S H E S H E L L E Y

185 The actors or spectators? Great and mean Meet massed in death, who lends what life must borrow.
As long as skies are blue, and fields are green,
Evening must usher night, night urge the morrow,
Month follow month with woe, and year wake year to sorrow.

22

190 He will awake no more, oh, never more!
“Wake thou,” cried Misery, “childless Mother, rise
Out of thy sleep, and slake, in thy heart’s core,
A wound more fierce than his with tears and sighs.”
And all the Dreams that watched Urania’s eyes,
195 And all the Echoes whom their sister’s song
Had held in holy silence, cried, “Arise!”
Swift as a Thought by the snake Memory stung,
From her ambrosial rest the fading Splendor immortal / Urania
sprung.

23

She rose like an autumnal Night, that springs
200 Out of the East, and follows wild and drear
The golden Day, which, on eternal wings,
Even as a ghost abandoning a bier,
Has left the Earth a corpse. Sorrow and fear
So struck, so roused, so rapt Urania;
205 So saddened round her like an atmosphere
Of stormy mist; so swept her on her way
Even to the mournful place where Adonais lay.

24

Out of her secret Paradise she sped,
Through camps and cities rough with stone, and steel,
210 And human hearts, which to her aery tread
Yielding not, wounded the invisible
Palms of her tender feet where’er they fell:
And barbed tongues, and thoughts more sharp than they,

Rent the soft Form they never could repel,
215 Whose sacred blood, like the young tears of May,
Paved with eternal flowers that undeserving way.

2 5

In the death-chamber for a moment Death,
Shamed by the presence of that living Might,
Blushed to annihilation, and the breath
220 Revisited those lips, and life's pale light
Flashed through those limbs, so late her dear delight.

“Leave me not wild and drear and comfortless,
As silent lightning leaves the starless night!

Leave me not!” cried Urania: her distress

225 Roused Death: Death rose and smiled, and met her vain caress.

8. The Echo in line 127.

ADONAIIS / 8 8 5

2 6

“Stay yet awhile! speak to me once again;
Kiss me, so long but as a kiss may live;
And in my heartless breast and burning brain
That word, that kiss, shall all thoughts else survive,
230 With food of saddest memory kept alive,
Now thou art dead, as if it were a part Of thee, my Adonais! I would give
All that I am to be as thou now art,
But I am chained to Time, and cannot thence depart!

2 7

235 “O gentle child, beautiful as thou wert,

Why didst thou leave the trodden paths of men
Too soon, and with weak hands thoughji mighty heart
Dare the unpastured dragon in his den?
Defenseless as thou wert, oh! where was then 240 Wisdom the mirrored shield, or scorn the spear?⁹
Or hadst thou waited the full cycle, when Thy spirit should have filled its crescent sphere,
The monsters of life's waste had fled from thee like deer.

28

“The herded wolves, bold only to pursue;
245 The obscene ravens, clamorous o'er the dead;
The vultures, to the conqueror's banner true,
Who feed where Desolation first has fed,
And whose wings rain contagion;—how they¹ fled,
When like Apollo, from his golden bow,
250 The Pythian of the age² one arrow sped
And smiled!—The spoilers tempt no second blow,
They fawn on the proud feet that spurn them lying low.

29

“The sun comes forth, and many reptiles spawn;
He sets, and each ephemeral insect then 255 Is gathered into death without a dawn,
And the immortal stars awake again;
So is it in the world of living men:
A godlike mind soars forth, in its delight Making earth bare and veiling heaven, and when 260 It sinks, the swarms that dimmed or shared its light Leave to its kindred lamps the spirit's awful night.”

3°

Thus ceased she: and the mountain shepherds came
Their garlands sere, their magic mantles rent;

9. An allusion to the Greek hero Perseus, who

2. Byron (1788-1824; see pp. 833 - 63), Shelley's killed the monster Medusa, evading her gaze, friend, who attacked the critics in English Bards which could turn him into stone, by using his and Scotch Reviewers (1809); here compared to shield as a mirror.

Apollo the Pythian, who slew the monster Python

1. Critics, here characterized as beasts and birds near Delphi.

of prey.

886

/ PERCY BYSSHE S H E L L E Y

The Pilgrim of Eternity,³ whose fame

265 Over his living head like Heaven is bent,

An early but enduring monument,

Came, veiling all the lightnings of his song

In sorrow; from her wilds Ierne^o sent Ireland

The sweetest lyrist of her saddest wrong,⁴

270 And love taught grief to fall like music from his tongue.

31

Midst others of less note, came one frail Form,⁵

A phantom among men; companionless

As the last cloud of an expiring storm,

Whose thunder is its knell; he, as I guess,

275 Had gazed on Nature's naked loveliness,
Actaeon-like,⁶ and now he fled astray
With feeble steps o'er the world's wilderness,
And his own thoughts, along that rugged way,
Pursued, like raging hounds, their father and their prey.

32

280 A pardlike⁷ Spirit beautiful and swift—
A Love in desolation masked;—a Power
Girt round with weakness;—it can scarce uplift
The weight of the superincumbent⁰ hour; heavily resting
It is a dying lamp, a falling shower,
285 A breaking billow;—even whilst we speak
Is it not broken? On the withering flower
The killing sun smiles brightly: on a cheek
The life can burn in blood, even while the heart may break.

33

His head was bound with pansies overblown, 290 And faded violets, white, and pied,⁰ and blue;
multicolored
And a light spear topped with a cypress cone,
Round whose rude shaft dark ivy-tresses grew
Yet dripping with the forest's noonday dew,
Vibrated, as the ever-beating heart
295 Shook the weak hand that grasped it; of that crew
He came the last, neglected and apart;
A herd-abandoned deer, struck by the hunter's dart.

34

All stood aloof, and at his partial moan⁸

Smiled through their tears; well knew that gentle band
300 Who in another's fate now wept his own;

3. Byron, as author of Childe Harold's Pilgrimage.

bathing. She transformed him into a stag, and he

4. Thomas Moore (1779-1852), poet, author of was torn to pieces by his hounds.

Irish Melodies.

7. Leopardlike; the leopard was sacred to Diony-

5. Shelley, as poet-mourner, here wearing sus.

emblems of Dionysus, Greek god of wine.

8. Expressing a bond of sympathy (partiality)

6. Actaeon, a young hunter, offended Diana, god-toward Adonais.

dess of the forest, by discovering her while she was

ADONAIIS / 8 8 7

As in the accents of an unknown land,

He sung new sorrow; sad Urania scanned

The Stranger's mien,⁰ and murmured: "Who art thou?" expressions

He answered not, but with a sudden hand

305 Made bare his branded and ensanguined brow,

Which was like Cain's or Christ's—oh! that it should be so!

What softer voice is hushed over the dead?

Athwart what brow is that dark mantle thrown?

What form leans sadly o'er the white death-bed,

310 In mockery⁰ of monumental stone, imitation

The heavy heart heaving without a moan?

If it be He,⁹ who, gentlest of the wise,
Taught, soothed, loved, honored the departed one;
Let me not vex, with inharmonious sighs,
315 The silence of that heart's accepted sacrifice.

36

Our Adonais has drunk poison—oh!
What deaf and viperous murderer could crown
Life's early cup with such a draught of woe?
The nameless worm¹ would now itself disown:
320 It felt, yet could escape the magic tone
Whose prelude held⁰ all envy, hate and wrong, held, off
But what was howling in one breast alone,
Silent with expectation of the song,
Whose master's hand is cold, whose silver lyre unstrung.

37

325 Live thou, whose infamy is not thy fame!
Live! fear no heavier chastisement from me,
Thou noteless blot on a remembered name!
But be thyself, and know thyself to be!
And ever at thy season be thou free
330 To spill the venom when thy fangs o'erflow:
Remorse and Self-contempt shall cling to thee;
Hot Shame shall burn upon thy secret brow,
And like a beaten hound tremble thou shalt—as now.

38

Nor let us weep that our delight is fled 335 Far from these carrion⁰ kites⁰ that scream below;
scavenger / hawks

He wakes or sleeps with the enduring dead;
Thou canst not soar where he is sitting now.
Dust to the dust! but the pure spirit shall flow
Back to the burning fountain whence it came,

9. Leigh Hunt (1784—1859), poet and critic, 1. Serpent; the anonymous reviewer (see line friend of Keats and Shelley. 152).

888 / P E R C Y B Y S S H E S H E L L E Y

340 A portion of the Eternal, which must glow
Through time and change, unquenchably the same,
Whilst thy² cold embers choke the sordid hearth of shame.

39

Peace, peace! he is not dead, he doth not sleep—

He hath awakened from the dream of life—

345 ‘Tis we, who lost in stormy visions, keep

With phantoms an unprofitable strife,

And in mad trance strike with our spirit’s knife

Invulnerable nothings.— We decay

Like corpses in a charnel; fear and grief

350 Convulse us and consume us day by day,

And cold hopes swarm like worms within our living clay.

4°

He has outsoared the shadow of our night;

Envy and calumny and hate and pain,

And that unrest which men miscall delight,

355 Can touch him not and torture not again;

From the contagion of the world’s slow stain

He is secure, and now can never mourn

A heart grown cold, a head grown gray in vain;

Nor, when the spirit's self has ceased to burn,
360 With sparkless ashes load an unlamented urn.

41

He lives, he wakes—'tis Death is dead, not he;
Mourn not for Adonais.—Thou young Dawn,
Turn all thy dew to splendor, for from thee
The spirit thou lamentest is not gone;
365 Ye caverns and ye forests, cease to moan!
Cease ye faint flowers and fountains, and thou Air,
Which like a morning veil thy scarf hadst thrown O'er the abandoned Earth, now leave it bare Even to the joyous stars which smile on its despair!

42

370 He is made one with Nature: there is heard
His voice in all her music, from the moan
Of thunder, to the song of night's sweet bird;³
He is a presence to be felt and known
In darkness and in light, from herb and stone,
375 Spreading itself where'er that Power may move
Which has withdrawn his being to its own;
Which wields the world with never wearied love,
Sustains it from beneath, and kindles it above.

2. The reviewer's.

3. Nightingale; an allusion to Keats's "Ode to a Nightingale"
(see p. 935).

ADONAI S / 8 8 9

4 3

He is a portion of the loveliness

380 Which once he made more lovely: he doth bear
His part, while the one Spirit's plastic⁰ stress formative Sweeps through the dull dense world, compelling there
All new successions to the forms they wear;
Torturing the unwilling dross⁰ that checks its flight coarse matter
385 To its own likeness, as each mass may bear;
And bursting in its beauty and its might
From trees and beasts and men into the Heaven's light.

44

The splendors of the firmament of time
May be eclipsed, but are extinguished not;
390 Like stars to their appointed height they climb,
And death is a low mist which cannot blot
The brightness it may veil. When lofty thought Lifts a young heart above its mortal lair,
And love and life contend in it, for what 395 Shall be its earthly doom, the dead live there
And move like winds of light on dark and stormy air.

45

The inheritors of unfulfilled renown
Rose from their thrones, built beyond mortal thought,
Far in the Unapparent. Chatterton⁴
400 Rose pale, his solemn agony had not Yet faded from him; Sidney,⁵ as he fought
And as he fell and as he lived and loved
Sublimely mild, a Spirit without spot,
Arose; and Lucan,⁶ by his death approved:⁰ vindicated

405 Oblivion as they rose shrank like a thing reproved

46

And many more, whose names on Earth are dark

But whose transmitted effluence cannot die

So long as fire outlives the parent spark,

Rose, robed in dazzling immortality.

410 “Thou art become as one of us,” they cry,

“It was for thee yon kingless sphere has long

Swung blind in unascended majesty,

Silent alone amid an Heaven of Song.

Assume thy winged throne, thou Vesper of our throng!”

4. Thomas Chatterton (1752-1770), a gifted

6. A young Roman poet (39—65 C.E.), who took young poet who committed suicide.

his own life rather than die under sentence of the

5. Sir Philip Sidney (1554-1586; see pp. 208-notorious emperor Nero, against whom he had 20), a poet, critic, courtier, and soldier, fatally conspired.

wounded in battle.

890 / P E R C Y B Y S S H E S H E L L E Y

47

4i5 Who mourns for Adonais? Oh, come forth,

Fond wretch! and know thyself and him aright.

Clasp with thy panting soul the pendulous⁷ Earth;

As from a center, dart thy spirit's light

Beyond all worlds, until its spacious might

420 Sate the void circumference: then shrink

Even to a point within our day and night;
And keep thy heart light lest it make thee sink
When hope has kindled hope, and lured thee to the brink.

48

Or go to Rome, which is the sepulcher,
425 Oh, not of him, but of our joy: 'tis nought
That ages, empires, and religions there
Lie buried in the ravage they have wrought;
For such as he can lend—they borrow not
Glory from those who made the world their prey;
430 And he is gathered to the kings of thought
Who waged contention with their time's decay,
And of the past are all that cannot pass away.

49

Go thou to Rome,—at once the Paradise,
The grave, the city, and the wilderness;
435 And where its wrecks like shattered mountains rise,
And flowering weeds, and fragrant copses⁰ dress small woods
The bones of Desolation's nakedness
Pass, till the Spirit of the spot shall lead
Thy footsteps to a slope of green access 440 Where, like an infant's smile, over the dead
A light of laughing flowers along the grass is spread,

5°

And gray walls moulder round, on which dull Time
Feeds, like slow fire upon a hoary brand;⁰ burning log
And one keen pyramid⁸ with wedge sublime,
445 Pavilioning the dust of him who planned

This refuge for his memory, doth stand
Like flame transformed to marble; and beneath,
A field is spread, on which a newer band
Have pitched in Heaven's smile their camp of death, 450 Welcoming him we lose with scarce extinguished breath.

51

Here pause: these graves are all too young as yet
To have outgrown the sorrow which consigned
Its charge to each; and if the seal is set,

7. Floating poised in space. Rome, beside the Protestant cemetery where Keats 8. Tomb of Gaius Cestius, an officer of ancient and Shelley are buried.

A D O N A I S / 8 9 1

Here, on one fountain of a mourning mind, 455 Break it not thou! too surely shalt thou find Thine own well full, if thou returnest home,
Of tears and gall. From the world's bitter wind
Seek shelter in the shadow of the tomb.

What Adonais is, why fear we to become?

52

460 The One remains, the many change and pass;
Heaven's light forever shines, Earth's shadows fly;
Life, like a dome of many-colored glass,
Stains the white radiance of Eternity,
Until Death tramples it to fragments.—Die, 465 If thou wouldst be with that which thou dost seek!
Follow where all is fled!—Rome's azure sky,
Flowers, ruins, statues, music, words, are weak
The glory they transfuse with fitting truth to speak.

53

Why linger, why turn back, why shrink, my Heart?

470 Thy hopes are gone before: from all things here

They have departed; thou shouldst now depart!

A light is past from the revolving year,

And man, and woman; and what still is dear

Attracts to crush, repels to make thee wither.

475 The soft sky smiles,—the low wind whispers near:

‘Tis Adonais calls! oh, hasten thither,

No more let life divide what Death can join together.

54

That Light whose smile kindles the Universe,

That Beauty in which all things work and move,

480 That Benediction which the eclipsing Curse

Of birth can quench not, that sustaining Love

Which through the web of being blindly wove

By man and beast and earth and air and sea,

Burns bright or dim, as each are mirrors of 485 The fire for which all thirst; now beams on me,

Consuming the last clouds of cold mortality.

55

The breath whose might I have invoked in song

Descends on me; my spirit's bark⁰ is driven, small ship

Far from the shore, far from the trembling throng

490 Whose sails were never to the tempest given;

The massy earth and sphered skies are riven!

I am borne darkly, fearfully, afar;

Whilst burning through the inmost veil of Heaven,

The soul of Adonais, like a star, 495 Beacons from the abode where the Eternal are.

1821

1821

892 / P E R C Y B Y S S H E S H E L L E Y

FROM HELLAS

The World's Great Age

The world's great age begins anew,

The golden years return,

The earth doth like a snake¹ renew

Her winter weeds² outworn:

5 Heaven smiles, and faiths and empires gleam,

Like wrecks of a dissolving dream.

A brighter Hellas rears its mountains

From waves serener far;

A new Peneus³ rolls his fountains

10 Against the morning star.

Where fairer Tempes⁴ bloom, there sleep

Young Cyclads⁵ on a sunnier deep.

A loftier Argo⁶ cleaves the main,

Fraught with a later prize;

15 Another Orpheus⁷ sings again,

And loves, and weeps, and dies.

A new Ulysses leaves once more

Calypso⁸ for his native shore.

Oh, write no more the tale of Troy,

20 If earth Death's scroll must be!

Nor mix with Laian rage⁹ the joy

Which dawns upon the free:
Although a subtler Sphinx renew Riddles of death Thebes never knew.
25 Another Athens shall arise,
And to remoter time
Bequeath, like sunset to the skies,
The splendor of its prime;
And leave, if nought so bright may live,
30 All earth can take or Heaven can give.
Saturn and Love their long repose
Shall burst, more bright and good

9. Hellas, an ancient name for Greece, is the title
7. Mythological Greek poet and musician of mag-of a drama in which Shelley celebrates the contemporary Greek struggle for independence, which he wife, Eurydice, to be released from the realm of saw as heralding the return of the legendary “Age the dead on condition that he would not look at of Saturn” or “Age of Gold,” the first, best period her until they had reached the upper world. Break-of h u m a n history.

ing his pledge at the last moment, he lost her for-

1. Shedding its skin after hibernation, a symbol of ever.

regeneration.

8. Island nymph with whom Ulysses (Odysseus)

2. Clothes, especially mourning garments.

lived for seven years during his return to Ithaca

3. Greek river of legendary beauty.

from the Trojan War.

4. Valley of the Peneus.

9. Ignorant of his own identity, Oedipus in a rage

5. Or Cyclades, islands in the Aegean Sea.

killed King Laius of Thebes (in fact his father).

6. In Greek mythology, the first seagoing vessel,

Oedipus then delivered Thebes from the power of

on which Jason sailed to gain the “prize” (line 14)

a sphinx by answering her riddles and won Jocasta of the Golden Fleece.

(in fact his mother) as his wife and queen.

B A D G E R / 8 9 3

Than all who fell, than One who rose,

Than many unsubdued:1

35 Not gold, not blood, their altar dowers,

But votive tears and symbol flowers.

Oh, cease! must hate and death return?

Cease! must men kill and die?

Cease! drain not to its dregs the urn

40 Of bitter prophecy.

The world is weary of the past,

Oh, might it die or rest at last!

1821 1822

J O H N C L A R E

1793-1864

Badger

When midnight comes a host of dogs and men
Go out and track the badger to his den,
And put a sack within the hole, and lie
Till the old grunting badger passes by.
5 He comes and hears—they let the strongest loose.
The old fox hears the noise and drops the goose.
The poacher shoots and hurries from the cry,
And the old hare half wounded buzzes by.
They get a forked stick to bear him down
io And clap the dogs and take him to the town,
And bait him all the day with many dogs,
And laugh and shout and fright the scampering hogs.
He runs along and bites at all he meets:
They shout and hollo down the noisy streets.
15 He turns about to face the loud uproar
And drives the rebels to their very door.
The frequent stone is hurled where'er they go;
When badgers fight, then everyone's a foe.
The dogs are clapped and urged to join the fray;
20 The badger turns and drives them all away.
Though scarcely half as big, demure and small,
He fights with dogs for hours and beats them all.
The heavy mastiff, savage in the fray,
Lies down and licks his feet and turns away.
25 The bulldog knows his match and waxes cold,
1. Saturn and Love are the restored deities of the “many unsubdued” are idols still worshiped

“world's great age”; “all who fell” are the deities throughout the world, who “fell” when Christ arose from the dead; the

894 / JOHN CLARE

The badger grins and never leaves his hold.
He drives the crowd and follows at their heels
And bites them through—the drunkard swears and reels.
The frightened women take the boys away,
30 The blackguard laughs and hurries on the fray.
He tries to reach the woods, an awkward race,
But sticks and cudgels quickly stop the chase.
He turns again and drives the noisy crowd
And beats the many dogs in noises loud.
35 He drives away and beats them every one,
And then they loose them all and set them on.
He falls as dead and kicked by boys and men,
Then starts and grins and drives the crowd again;
Till kicked and torn and beaten out he lies 40 And leaves his hold and crackles, groans, and dies.

1835-37 1920

Gypsies

The snow falls deep; the forest lies alone;
The boy goes hasty for his load of brakes,⁰ brushwood
Then thinks upon the fire and hurries back;
The gypsy knocks his hands and tucks them up,
5 And seeks his squalid camp, half hid in snow,
Beneath the oak which breaks away the wind,
And bushes close in snow like hovel warm;
There tainted mutton wastes upon the coals,
And the half-wasted dog squats close and rubs,
10 Then feels the heat too strong, and goes aloof;

He watches well, but none a bit can spare,
And vainly waits the morsel thrown away.
Tis thus they live—a picture to the place,
A quiet, pilfering, unprotected race.

1837-41 1920

Song: Love Lives beyond the Tomb

Love lives beyond
The tomb, the earth, which fades like dew—
I love the fond,
The faithful, and the true.
Love lives in sleep,
Tis happiness of healthy dreams,
Eve's dews may weep,
But love delightful seems.

F I R S T L O V E / 8 9 5

'Tis seen in flowers,
10 And in the even's pearly dew
On earth's green hours,
And in the heaven's eternal blue.
'Tis heard in spring
When light and sunbeams, warm and kind,
15 On angel's wing
Brings love and music to the wind.
And where's the voice
So young, so beautiful, and sweet
As nature's choice,
20 Where spring and lovers meet?
Love lives beyond

The tomb, the earth, the flowers, and dew.

I love the fond,

The faithful, young, and true.

1842-64 1873

First Love

I ne'er was struck before that hour

With love so sudden and so sweet,

Her face it bloomed like a sweet flower

And stole my heart away complete.

5 My face turned pale as deadly pale.

My legs refused to walk away,

And when she looked, what could I ail?

My life and all seemed turned to clay.

And then my blood rushed to my face

io And took my eyesight quite away,

The trees and bushes round the place

Seemed midnight at noonday.

I could not see a single thing,

Words from my eyes did start—

15 They spoke as chords do from the string,

And blood burnt round my heart.

Are flowers the winter's choice?

Is love's bed always snow?

She seemed to hear my silent voice,

20 Not love's appeals to know.

I never saw so sweet a face

As that I stood before.

My heart has left its dwelling-place

And can return no more.

1842-64

1920

8 9 6 / JOHN CLARE

Farewell

Farewell to the bushy clump close to the river

And the flags where the butter-bump¹ hides in forever;

Farewell to the weedy nook, hemmed in by waters;

Farewell to the miller's brook and his three bonny daughters;

5 Farewell to them all while in prison I lie—

In the prison a thrall⁰ sees naught but the sky. servant slave

Shut out are the green fields and birds in the bushes;

In the prison yard nothing builds, blackbirds or thrushes.

Farewell to the old mill and dash of the waters,

10 To the miller and, dearer still, to his three bonny daughters.

In the nook, the larger burdock² grows near the green willow;

In the flood, round the moor-cock dashes under the billow;³

To the old mill farewell, to the lock, pens, and waters,

To the miller himsel', and his three bonny daughters.

1842-64

1920

I Am

I am: yet what I am none cares or knows

My friends forsake me like a memory lost,

I am the self-consumer of my woes—

They rise and vanish in oblivious host,
5 Like shadows in love's frenzied, stifled throes—
And yet I am, and live—like vapors tossed
Into the nothingness of scorn and noise,
Into the living sea of waking dreams,
Where there is neither sense of life or joys,
10 But the vast shipwreck of my life's esteems;
Even the dearest, that I love the best,
Are strange—nay, rather stranger than the rest.
I long for scenes, where man hath never trod,
A place where woman never smiled or wept—
15 There to abide with my Creator, God,
And sleep as I in childhood sweetly slept,
Untroubling, and untroubled where I lie,
The grass below—above the vaulted sky.

1842-64

1865

1. Bittern, a marsh bird with a booming call. Flags:
2. Type of coarse weed.
irises (tall plants).
3. Wave, water. Moor-cock: type of waterfowl.

897

FELICIADOROTHEAHEMANS

1793-1835

England's Dead

Son of the ocean isle!

Where sleep your mighty dead?

Show me what high and stately pile

Is reared o'er Glory's bed.

5 Go, stranger! track the deep,

Free, free the white sail spread!

Wave may not foam, nor wild wind sweep,

Where rest not England's dead.

On Egypt's burning plains,

io By the pyramid o'erswayed,

With fearful power the noonday reigns,

And the palm trees yield no shade.¹

But let the angry sun

From heaven look fiercely red,

15 Unfelt by those whose task is done!—

There slumber England's dead.

The hurricane hath might

Along the Indian shore,

And far by Ganges' banks at night,

20 Is heard the tiger's roar.

But let the sound roll on!

It hath no tone of dread,

For those that from their toils are gone;—

There slumber England's dead.

25 Loud rush the torrent floods

The western wilds among,

And free, in green Columbia's woods,

The hunter's bow is strung.

But let the floods rush on!

30 Let the arrow's flight be sped!

Why should they reckon whose task is done?— care

There slumber England's dead!

The mountain storms rise high

In the snowy Pyrenees,

1. This specific reference—to the defeat of nineteenth-century battles in India (lines 17—24), French forces by the British at Alexandria in the America (lines 25-32), Spain (lines 33-40), and spring of 1801—is followed by more general military references: to eighteenth-century and early

2. This specific reference—to the defeat of nineteenth-century battles in India (lines 17—24), French forces by the British at Alexandria in the America (lines 25-32), Spain (lines 33-40), and spring of 1801—is followed by more general military references: to eighteenth-century and early

898 / FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS

35 And toss the pine boughs through the sky,

Like rose leaves on the breeze.

But let the storm rage on!

Let the fresh wreaths be shed!

For the Roncesvalles' field² is won,—

40 There slumber England's dead.

On the frozen deep's repose

'Tis a dark and dreadful hour,

When round the ship the ice-fields close,

And the northern night clouds lower.⁰ look threatening

45 But let the ice drift on!

Let the cold-blue desert spread!

Their course with mast and flag is done,—

Even there sleep England's dead.

The warlike of the isles,

50 The men of field and wave!

Are not the rocks their funeral piles,

The seas and shores their grave?
Go, stranger! track the deep,
Free, free the white sail spread!
55 Wave may not foam, nor wild wind sweep,
Where rest not England's dead.

1822

The Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers in New England
Look n o w a b r o a d — a n o t h e r race has fill'd
T h o s e p o p u l o u s b o r d e r s — w i d e the wood recedes,
A n d towns shoot up, a n d fertile realms are till'd;
T h e land is full of harvests a n d green meads.

BRYANT3

The breaking waves dashed high
On a stern and rock-bound coast,
And the woods against a stormy sky
Their giant branches tossed;
5 And the heavy night hung dark,
The hills and waters o'er,
When a band of exiles moored their bark^o ship
On the wild New England shore.

2. During the Peninsular War (1808—14) between separating France and Spain).

France and Great Britain, fighting occurred in 3. William Cullen Bryant (1794-1878; see Roncesvalles, a pass in the Pyrenees (mountains pp. 902—05), The Ages, lines 280—83.

CASABIANCA / 899

Not as the conqueror comes,
10 They, the true-hearted, came;

Not with the roll of the stirring drums,
And the trumpet that sings of fame;
Not as the flying come,
In silence and in fear;—
15 They shook the depths of the desert gloom
With their hymns of lofty cheer.
Amidst the storm they sang,
And the stars heard and the sea;
And the sounding aisles of the dim woods rang 20 To the anthem of the free!
The ocean eagle soared
From his nest by the white wave's foam;
And the rocking pines of the forest roared—
This was their welcome home!
25 There were men with hoary hair
Amidst that pilgrim band;—
Why had they come to wither there,
Away from their childhood's land?
There was woman's fearless eye,
30 Lit by her deep love's truth;
There was manhood's brow serenely high,
And the fiery heart of youth.
What sought they thus afar?
Bright jewels of the mine?
35 The wealth of seas, the spoils of war?—
They sought a faith's pure shrine!
Aye, call it holy ground,
The soil where first they trod.

They have left unstained what there they found—40 Freedom to worship God.

1826

Casabianca⁴

The boy stood on the burning deck

Whence all but he had fled;

4. “Young Casabianca, a boy about thirteen years when the flames had reached the powder”

old, son to the Admiral of the Orient, remained at [Hemans’s note]. In the Battle of the Nile (August his post (in the Battle of the Nile) after the ship
1, 1798), British admiral Horatio Nelson captured had taken fire, and all the guns had been abanand destroyed the French fleet in Aboukir Bay. Cf.
doned; and perished in the explosion of the vessel,
Elizabeth Bishop, “Casabianca” (p. 1515).

900 / FELICIA D O R O T H E A H E M A N S

The flame that lit the battle’s wreck

Shone round him o’er the dead.

5 Yet beautiful and bright he stood,

As born to rule the storm;

A creature of heroic blood,

A proud, though childlike form.

The flames roll’d on—he would not go

10 Without his father’s word;

That father, faint in death below,

His voice no longer heard.

He call’d aloud:—“Say, Father, say

If yet my task is done?"
15 He knew not that the chieftain lay Unconscious of his son.
"Speak, Father!" once again he cried,
"If I may yet be gone!"
And but the booming shots replied,
20 And fast the flames roll'd on.
Upon his brow he felt their breath,
And in his waving hair,
And look'd from that lone post of death
In still, yet brave despair.
25 And shouted but once more aloud,
"My Father! must I stay?"
While o'er him fast, through sail and shroud,
The wreathing fires made way.
They wrapt the ship in splendor wild,
30 They caught the flag on high,
And stream'd above the gallant child,
Like banners in the sky.
There came a burst of thunder sound—
The boy—oh! where was he?
35 Ask of the winds that far around
With fragments strew'd the sea!—
With mast, and helm, and pennon⁰ fair, long narrow flag
That well had borne their part,
But the noblest thing which perish'd there 40 Was that young faithful heart!

INDIAN WOMAN'S DEATH-SONG / 901

Indian Woman's Death-Song⁵

An Indian woman, driven to despair by her husband's desertion of her for another wife, entered a canoe with her children, and rowed it down the Mississippi towards a cataract.⁶ Her voice was heard from the shore singing a mournful death-song, until overpowered by the sound of the waters in which she perished. The tale is related in Long's "Expedition to the Source of St. Peter's River."

"Non, je ne puis vivre avec un coeur brise. Il faut que je retrouve la joie, et que je m'unisse aux esprits libres de l'air."

—Bride of Messina—Translated by MADAME DE STAEL⁷

"Let not my child be a girl, for very sad is the life of a woman."

*The Prairie*⁸

Down a broad river of the western wilds,
Piercing thick forest-glooms, a light canoe
Swept with the current: fearful was the speed
Of the frail bark, as by a tempest's wing
Borne leaf-like on to where the mist of spray
Rose with the cataract's thunder. Yet within,
Proudly, and dauntlessly, and all alone,
Save that a babe lay sleeping at her breast,
A woman stood! Upon her Indian brow
Sat a strange gladness, and her dark hair waved
As if triumphantly. She pressed her child,
In its bright slumber, to her beating heart,

And lifted her sweet voice, that rose awhile
Above the sound of waters, high and clear,
15 Wafting a wild proud strain—a song of death.
“Roll swiftly to the spirit’s land, thou mighty stream and free!
Father of ancient waters, roll! and bear our lives with thee!
The weary bird that storms have tossed would seek the sunshine’s calm,
And the deer that hath the arrow’s hurt flies to the woods of balm.
20 “Roll on!—my warrior’s eye hath looked upon another’s face,
And mine hath faded from his soul, as fades a moonbeam’s trace:
My shadow comes not o’er his path, my whisper to his dream,
He flings away the broken reed. Roll swifter yet, thou stream!
“The voice that spoke of other days is hushed within his breast, 25 But mine its lonely music haunts, and will not let me rest;
It sings a low and mournful song of gladness that is gone—
I cannot live without that light. Father of waves! roll on!
5. From Hemans’s Records of Women (1828).
dramatist Friedrich von Schiller (1759-1805), 6. Waterfall.
translated by the French writer Madame Anne-
7. No, I can’t live with a broken heart. I must Louise-Germaine de Stael (1766—1817).
retrieve my happiness, and be reunited with the 8. An 1827 novel by the American writer James spirits of the air (French). From The Bride of Fenimore Cooper (1789-1851).

Messina (1803), a play by the German poet and

9 6 6 / W I L L I A M C U L L E N B R Y A N T

“Will he not miss the bounding step that met him from the chase?

The heart of love that made his home an ever-sunny place?

The hand that spread the hunter’s board, and decked his couch of yore?

He will not! Roll, dark foaming stream, on to the better shore!

“Some blessed fount amidst the woods of that bright land must flow,

Whose waters from my soul may lave the memory of this woe;

Some gentle wind must whisper there, whose breath may waft away

The burden of the heavy night, the sadness of the day.

“And thou, my babe! though born, like me, for woman’s weary lot,

Smile!—to that wasting of the heart, my own! I leave thee not;

Too bright a thing art thou to pine in aching love away—

Thy mother bears thee far, young fawn! from sorrow and decay.

“She bears thee to the glorious bowers where none are heard to weep,

And where the unkind one hath no power again to trouble sleep;

And where the soul shall find its youth, as wakening from a dream:

One moment, and that realm is ours. On, on, dark rolling stream!”

1828

WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT

1794-1878

To a Waterfowl

Whither, 'midst falling dew,

While glow the heavens with the last steps of day,

Far, through their rosy depths, dost thou pursue

Thy solitary way?

5 Vainly t h e fowler's0 eye bird hunter's

Might mark thy distant flight, to do thee wrong,

As, darkly seen against the crimson sky,

Thy figure floats along.

Seek'st thou the plashy0 brink splashy

io Of weedy lake, or marge0 of river wide, margin, bank

Or where the rocking billows rise and sink

On the chafed ocean side?

There is a Power, whose care

Teaches thy way along that pathless coast,—

15 The desert and illimitable air,

Lone wandering, but not lost,

T H A N A T O P S I S / 9 0 3

All day thy wings have fanned,

At that far height, the cold thin atmosphere;

Yet stoop not, weary, to the welcome land,

20 Though the dark night is near.

And soon that toil shall end,

Soon shalt thou find a summer home, and rest,

And scream among thy fellows; reeds shall bend,

Soon, o'er thy sheltered nest.

25 Thou'rt gone, the abyss of heaven
Hath swallowed up thy form, yet, on my heart
Deeply hath sunk the lesson thou hast given,
And shall not soon depart.

He, who, from zone to zone,
30 Guides through the boundless sky thy certain flight,
In the long way that I must trace alone,
Will lead my steps aright.

1815 1818,1821

Thanatopsis 1

To him who in the love of Nature holds
Communion with her visible forms, she speaks
A various language; for his gayer hours
She has a voice of gladness, and a smile
5 And eloquence of beauty, and she glides
Into his darker musings, with a mild
And healing sympathy, that steals away
Their sharpness ere he is aware. When thoughts
Of the last bitter hour come like a blight
io Over thy spirit, and sad images
Of the stern agony, and shroud, and pall,
And breathless darkness, and the narrow house,
Make thee to shudder, and grow sick at heart;—
Go forth, under the open sky, and list
15 To Nature's teachings, while from all around—Earth and her waters, and the depths of air,—
Comes a still voice—Yet a few days, and thee
The all-beholding sun shall see no more

In all his course; nor yet in the cold ground,
20 Where thy pale form was laid, with many tears.
Nor in the embrace of ocean, shall exist
Thy image. Earth, that nourished thee, shall claim Thy growth, to be resolved to earth again,
And, lost each human trace, surrendering up
25 Thine individual being, shalt thou go

1. Meditation on death (Greek).

9 0 4 / WILLIAM C U L L E N BRYANT

To mix for ever with the elements,
To be a brother to the insensible rock
And to the sluggish clod,^o which the rude swain soil /farmer
Turns with his share,^o and treads upon. The oak plowshare 30 Shall send his roots abroad, and pierce thy mold.
Yet not to thine eternal resting-place
Shall thou retire alone,—nor couldst thou wish Couch^o more magnificent. Thou shalt lie down hed
With patriarchs of the infant^o world—with kings, early 35 The powerful of the earth—the wise, the good,
Fair forms, and hoary seers of ages past,
All in one mighty sepulchre. The hills
Rock-ribbed and ancient as the sun; the vales^o valleys
Stretching in pensive quietness between;
40 The venerable woods; rivers that move
In majesty, and the complaining brooks
That make the meadows green; and, poured round all,
Old ocean's gray and melancholy waste,—
Are but the solemn decorations all

45 Of the great tomb of man. The golden sun,
The planets, all the infinite host of heaven,
Are shining on the sad abodes of death,
Through the still lapse of ages. All that tread
The globe are but a handful to the tribes
50 That slumber in its bosom.—Take the wings
Of morning,² traverse Barca^V desert sands,
Or lose thyself in the continuous woods
Where rolls the Oregon,⁴ and hears no sound,
Save his own dashings—yet—the dead are there:
55 And millions in those solitudes, since first
The flight of years began, have laid them down
In their last sleep—the dead reign there alone.
So shalt thou rest, and what if thou withdraw
In silence from the living, and no friend
60 Take note of thy departure? All that breathe
Will share thy destiny. The gay will laugh
When thou art gone, the solemn brood of care
Plod on, and each one as before will chase
His favorite phantom; yet all these shall leave 65 Their mirth and their employments, and shall come,
And make their bed with thee. As the long train
Of ages glide away, the sons of men,
The youth in life's green spring, and he who goes
In the full strength of years, matron, and maid,
70 And the sweet babe, and the gray-headed man,—
Shall one by one be gathered to thy side,
By those, who in their turn shall follow them.

2. Cf. Psalm 139.9-10: "If I take the wings of 3. Desert in northeast Libya.

morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the 4. Initial name of the Columbia River in Oregon.

sea; even there shall thy hand lead me ..."

ON SITTING D O W N TO READ KING LEAR O N C E
A G A I N / 9 0 5

So live, that when they summons comes to join

The innumerable caravan, which moves

75 To that mysterious realm, where each shall take

His chamber in the silent halls of death,

Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night,

Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed

By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave

so Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch⁵

About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

ca. 1814 1821

J O H N KEATS

1795-1821

On First Looking into Chapman's Homer¹

Much have I traveled in the realms of gold,

And many goodly states and kingdoms seen;

Round many western islands have I been

Which bards in fealty⁰ to Apollo² hold. allegiance

5 Oft of one wide expanse had I been told

That deep-browed Homer ruled as his demesne;⁰ domain

Yet did I never breathe its pure serene atmosphere

Till I heard Chapman speak out loud and bold:

Then felt I like some watcher of the skies

io When a new planet swims into his ken;
Or like stout Cortez³ when with eagle eyes
He stared at the Pacific—and all his men
Looked at each other with a wild surmise—
Silent, upon a peak in Darien.

1816 1816

On Sitting Down to Read King Lear Once Again
O golden-tongued Romance with serene lute!
Fair plumed Siren!⁰ Queen of far away! enchantress
Leave melodizing on this wintry day,
Shut up thine olden pages, and be mute:
5 Adieu! for once again the fierce dispute
Betwixt damnation and impassioned clay
Must I burn through; once more humbly assay⁰ test
The bitter-sweet of this Shakespearean fruit.
Chief Poet! and ye clouds of Albion,⁴*

5. I.e., wraps his bedclothes.

3. Spanish conqueror of Mexico; in fact, Balboa,

1. Translations from Homer's Odyssey, in particular book 5, by George Chapman, a contemporary of Shakespeare, from Darien, in Panama.

of Shakespeare.

4. Ancient name for England, especially referring

2. Greek and Roman god of poetic inspiration.

to pre-Roman Britain, the era of King Lear.

9 0 6 / JOHN KEATS

10 Begetters of our deep eternal theme,

When through the old oak forest I am gone,
Let me not wander in a barren dream,
But when I am consumed in the fire,
Give me new Phoenix” wings to fly at my desire.

1818 1838

When I Have Fears

When I have fears that I may cease to be Before my pen has gleaned my teeming brain,
Before high-piled books, in charact’ry,⁰ written symbols
Hold like rich garnerers the full-ripened grain;
5 When I behold, upon the night’s starred face,
Huge cloudy symbols of a high romance,
And think that I may never live to trace
Their shadows, with the magic hand of chance;
And when I feel, fair creature of an hour,
io That I shall never look upon thee more,
Never have relish in the faery⁰ power magical
Of unreflecting love!—then on the shore
Of the wide world I stand alone, and think Till Love and Fame to nothingness do sink.

1818 1848

To Homer⁶

Standing aloof in giant ignorance,⁷
Of thee I hear and of the Cyclades,⁸
As one who sits ashore and longs perchance
To visit dolphin-coral in deep seas.
5 So thou wast blind!—but then the veil was rent;
For Jove⁹ uncurtain’d Heaven to let thee live,

And Neptune made for thee a spumy tent,
And Pan made sing for thee his forest-hive;
Aye, on the shores of darkness there is light,
io And precipices show untrodden green;
There is a budding morrow in midnight;
There is a triple sight in blindness keen;
Such seeing hadst thou, as it once befel
To Dian,¹ Queen of Earth, and Heaven, and Hell.

1818?

1848

5. Fabled Arabian bird that, after living for cen-

8. Islands near the Greek coast.

turies, consumes itself in fire and is reborn.

9. Jove, Neptune (line 7), and Pan (line 8):

6. By tradition, blind; here, a symbol of poetic illu-Homer's gods of heaven, sea, and land.
mination.

1. The "three-formed" goddess presiding in the

7. Keats could not read Homer's Greek.

moon, forests, and the underworld.

T H E E V E O F S T. A G N E S / 9 0 7

The Eve of St. Agnes²

i

St. Agnes' Eve—Ah, bitter chill it was!

The owl, for all his feathers, was a-cold;

The hare limped trembling through the frozen grass,

And silent was the flock in woolly fold:

5 N u m b were the Beadsman's fingers, while he told

His rosary,³ and while his frosted breath,
Like pious incense from a censer old,
Seemed taking flight for heaven, without a death,
Past the sweet Virgin's picture, while his prayer he saith.

2

io His prayer he saith, this patient, holy man;
Then takes his lamp, and riseth from his knees,
And back returneth, meager, barefoot, wan,
Along the chapel aisle by slow degrees:
The sculptured dead, on each side, seem to freeze,
15 Imprisoned in black, purgatorial rails:
Knights, ladies, praying in dumb⁰ orat'ries,^o silent / chapels
He passeth by; and his weak spirit fails
To think⁴ how they may ache in icy hoods and mails.

3

Northward he turneth through a little door,
20 And scarce three steps, ere Music's golden tongue
Flattered⁰ to tears this aged man and poor; beguiled
But no—already had his deathbell rung:
The joys of all his life were said and sung:
His was harsh penance on St. Agnes' Eve:
25 Another way he went, and soon among Rough ashes sat he for his soul's reprieve,
And all night kept awake, for sinner's sake to grieve.

4

That ancient Beadsman heard the prelude soft;
And so it chanced, for many a door was wide,
30 From hurry to and fro. Soon, up aloft,

The silver, snarling trumpets 'gan to chide:
The level chambers, ready with their pride,⁰ ostentation
Were glowing to receive a thousand guests:
The carved angels, ever eager-eyed,
35 Stared, where upon their heads the cornice rests,
With hair blown back, and wings put crosswise on their breasts.

2. January 20, proverbially the coldest winter

3. A string of beads on which a series of short night. St. Agnes, martyred in the fourth century at prayers are counted (“told”). Beadsman: from Mid-age thirteen, is patroness of virgins. Traditionally, dle English bede, prayer; a needy dependent, paid a maiden who observes the ritual of St. Agnes’s Eve a small stipend to pray regularly for his benefactor.
will see a vision of her husband-to-be.

4. I.e., when he thinks.

14

908 / JOHN KEATS

At length burst in the argent⁰ revelry,⁰ brightly dressed / revelers

With plume, tiara, and all rich array,
Numerous as shadows haunting faerily
40 The brain, new stuffed, in youth, with triumphs gay
Of old romance. These let us wish away,
And turn, sole-thoughted, to one Lady there,
Whose heart had brooded, all that wintry day,
On love, and winged St. Agnes’ saintly care,
45 As she had heard old dames full many times declare.

6

They told her how, upon St. Agnes' Eve,
Young virgins might have visions of delight,
And soft adorings from their loves receive
Upon the honeyed middle of the night,
50 If ceremonies due they did aright;
As, supperless to bed they must retire,
And couch supine their beauties, lily white;
Nor look behind, nor sideways, but require
Of Heaven with upward eyes for all that they desire.

7

55 Full of this whim was thoughtful Madeline:
The music, yearning like a God in pain,
She scarcely heard: her maiden eyes divine,
Fixed on the floor, saw many a sweeping train
Pass by—she heeded not at all: in vain
60 Came many a tiptoe, amorous cavalier,
And back retired; not cooled by high disdain;
But she saw not: her heart was elsewhere:
She sighed for Agnes' dreams, the sweetest of the year.

8

She danced along with vague, regardless eyes,
65 Anxious her lips, her breathing quick and short:
The hallowed hour was near at hand: she sighs
Amid the timbrels,⁰ and the thronged resort hand drums
Of whisperers in anger, or in sport;
'Mid looks of love, defiance, hate, and scorn,
70 Hoodwinked with faery fancy; all amort,⁵

Save to St. Agnes and her lambs unshorn,⁶
And all the bliss to be before tomorrow morn.

9

So, purposing each moment to retire,
She lingered still. Meantime, across the moors,
75 Had come young Porphyro, with heart on fire

5. Dead; i.e., oblivious. was later spun and woven by the nuns (lines 115—

6. Symbolically associated with St. Agnes; new 17).
wool offered at the Mass commemorating the saint

T H E E V E O F S T. A G N E S / 9 0 9

For Madeline. Beside the portal doors,
Buttressed from moonlight,⁷ stands he, and implores
All saints to give him sight of Madeline,
But for one moment in the tedious hours,
80 That he might gaze and worship all unseen; Perchance speak, kneel, touch, kiss—in sooth such things have been.

10

He ventures in: let no buzzed whisper tell:
All eyes be muffled, or a hundred swords
Will storm his heart, Love's fev'rous citadel:
85 For him, those chambers held barbarian hordes,
Hyena foemen, and hot-blooded lords,
Whose very dogs would execrations howl
Against his lineage: not one breast affords
Him any mercy, in that mansion foul, 90 Save one old beldame,⁰ weak in body and in soul. old woman

11

Ah, happy chance! the aged creature came,
Shuffling along with ivory-headed wand,
To where he stood, hid from the torch's flame,
Behind a broad hall-pillar, far beyond
95 The sound of merriment and chorus bland:0 soft
He startled her; but soon she knew his face,
And grasped his fingers in her palsied hand,
Saying, "Mercy, Porphyro! hie thee from this place;
They are all here tonight, the whole bloodthirsty race!

12

100 "Get hence! get hence! there's dwarfish Hildebrand;
He had a fever late, and in the fit
He cursed thee and thine, both house and land:
Then there's that old Lord Maurice, not a whit
More tame for his gray hairs—Alas me! flit!
105 Flit like a ghost away."—"Ah, Gossip8 dear,
We're safe enough; here in this armchair sit,
And tell me how"—"Good Saints! not here, not here;
Follow me, child, or else these stones will be thy bier."
He followed through a lowly arched way,
no Brushing the cobwebs with his lofty plume,
And as she muttered "Well-a—well-a-day!"
He found him in a little moonlight room,
Pale, latticed, chill, and silent as a tomb.
"Now tell me where is Madeline," said he,
ii5 "O tell me, Angela, by the holy loom
Which none but secret sisterhood may see,

When they St. Agnes' wool are weaving piously."

7. I.e., concealed in dark shadows. 8. Old kinswoman or household retainer.

910 / JOHN KEATS

14

"St. Agnes! Ah! it is St. Agnes' Eve—

Yet men will murder upon holy days:

120 Thou must hold water in a witch's sieve,

And be liege lord of all the Elves and Fays,⁹

To venture so: it fills me with amaze

To see thee, Porphyro!—St. Agnes' Eve!

God's help! my lady fair the conjuror plays!

125 This very night: good angels her deceive!

But let me laugh awhile, I've mickle⁰ time to grieve. much

15

Feebly she laugheth in the languid moon,

While Porphyro upon her face doth look,

Like puzzled urchin on an aged crone

130 Who keepeth closed a wondrous riddle-book,

As spectacled she sits in chimney nook.

But soon his eyes grew brilliant, when she told

His lady's purpose; and he scarce could brook⁰ check

Tears, at the thought of those enchantments cold,

135 And Madeline asleep in lap of legends old.

16

Sudden a thought came like a full-blown rose,

Flushing his brow, and in his pained heart

Made purple riot: then doth he propose

A stratagem, that makes the beldame start:

140 “A cruel man and impious thou art:

Sweet lady, let her pray, and sleep, and dream

Alone with her good angels, far apart

From wicked men like thee. Go, go!—I deem Thou canst not surely be the same that thou didst seem.”

17

145 “I will not harm her, by all saints I swear,”

Quoth Porphyro: “O may I ne’er find grace

When my weak voice shall whisper its last prayer,

If one of her soft ringlets I displace,

Or look with ruffian passion in her face:

150 Good Angela, believe me by these tears;

Or I will, even in a moment’s space,

Awake, with horrid shout, my foemen’s ears,

And beard⁰ them, though they be more fanged than wolves confront and bears.”

18

“Ah! why wilt thou affright a feeble soul?

155 A poor, weak, palsy-stricken, churchyard thing,²

Whose passing bell³ may ere the midnight toll;

9. I.e., to hold water in a sieve and to command 1. I.e., is trying magic spells, elves and fairies (“Fays”), Porphyro would have to 2. I.e., soon to die.

be a magician. 3. Tolloed when a person died (“passed away”).

T H E E V E O F S T. A G N E S / 9 1 1

Whose prayers for thee, each morn and evening,

Were never missed.”—Thus plaining,⁰ doth she bring complaining

A gentler speech from burning Porphyro;
i60 So woeful and of such deep sorrowing,
That Angela gives promise she will do
Whatever he shall wish, betide her weal or woe.

J 9

Which was, to lead him, in close secrecy,
Even to Madeline’s chamber, and there hide
165 Him in a closet, of such privacy
That he might see her beauty unespied,
And win perhaps that night a peerless bride,
While legioned faeries paced the coverlet,
And pale enchantment held her sleepy-eyed.
170 Never on such a night have lovers met,
Since Merlin paid his Demon all the monstrous debt.⁴

20

“It shall be as thou wishest,” said the Dame:
“All cates^o and dainties shall be stored there delicacies
Quickly on this feast⁵ night: by the tambour frame⁶
175 Her own lute thou wilt see: no time to spare,
For I am slow and feeble, and scarce dare
On such a catering trust my dizzy head.
Wait here, my child, with patience; kneel in prayer
The while: Ah! thou must needs the lady wed, i80 Or may I never leave my grave among the dead.”

21

So saying, she hobbled off with busy fear.

The lover's endless minutes slowly passed:
The dame returned, and whispered in his ear
To follow her; with aged eyes aghast 185 From fright of dim espial. Safe at last,
Through many a dusky gallery, they gain
The maiden's chamber, silken, hushed, and chaste;
Where Porphyro took covert, pleased amain.0 greatly
His poor guide hurried back with agues0 in her brain. fevers
22

190 Her falt'ring hand upon the balustrade,
Old Angela was feeling for the stair,
When Madeline, St. Agnes' charmed maid,
Rose, like a missioned spirit, unaware:
With silver taper's light, and pious care,
195 She turned, and down the aged gossip led To a safe level matting. Now prepare,

4. Possibly alluding to the tale in the Arthurian her love.

legends in which Merlin, a great wizard, lies bound 5. The festival, or Mass, honoring St. Agnes, for ages by a spell he gave to an evil woman to buy 6. A circular embroidery frame.

9 1 2 / JOHN KEATS

Young Porphyro, for gazing on that bed;
She comes, she comes again, like ringdove frayed0 and fled, frightened

2 3

Out went the taper as she hurried in;
200 Its little smoke, in pallid moonshine, died:
She closed the door, she panted, all akin
To spirits of the air, and visions wide:

No uttered syllable, or, woe betide!
But to her heart, her heart was voluble,
205 Paining with eloquence her balmy side;
As though a tongueless nightingale should swell
Her throat in vain, and die, heart-stifled, in her dell.

24

A casement high and triple-arched there was,
All garlanded with carven imag'ries
210 Of fruits, and flowers, and bunches of knot-grass,
And diamonded with panes of quaint device,
Innumerable of stains and splendid dyes,
As are the tiger-moth's deep-damasked wings;
And in the midst, 'mong thousand heraldries,
215 And twilight saints, and dim emblazonings,
A shielded scutcheon blushed with blood of queens and kings.⁷

25

Full on this casement shone the wintry moon,
And threw warm gules⁸ on Madeline's fair breast,
As down she knelt for heaven's grace and boon;⁰ gift
220 Rose-bloom fell on her hands, together pressed,
And on her silver cross soft amethyst,
And on her hair a glory,⁰ like a saint: halo
She seemed a splendid angel, newly dressed,
Save wings, for heaven—Porphyro grew faint:
225 She knelt, so pure a thing, so free from mortal taint.

26

Anon his heart revives: her vespers done,

Of all its wreathed pearls her hair she frees;
Unclasps her warmed jewels one by one;
Loosens her fragrant bodice; by degrees
230 Her rich attire creeps rustling to her knees:
Half-hidden, like a mermaid in sea-weed,
Pensive awhile she dreams awake, and sees,
In fancy, fair St. Agnes in her bed,
But dares not look behind, or all the charm is fled.

7. A shield representing a coat of arms (“scutch-eating royal ancestry.

eon”) showed the red pigments (“blushed”) indi- 8. Heraldic red; here, in stained glass.

36

T H E E V E O F S T. A G N E S / 9 1 3

235 Soon, trembling in her soft and chilly nest,
In sort of wakeful swoon, perplexed she lay,
Until the popped warmth of sleep oppressed
Her soothed limbs, and soul fatigued away;
Flown, like a thought, until the morrow-day;
240 Blissfully havened both from joy and pain;
Clasped like a missal where swart Paynims⁹ pray;
Blinded alike from sunshine and from rain,
As though a rose should shut, and be a bud again.

28

Stol’n to this paradise, and so entranced,
245 Porphyro gazed upon her empty dress,
And listened to her breathing, if it chanced
To wake into a slumberous tenderness;
Which when he heard, that minute did he bless,

And breathed himself: then from the closet crept,
250 Noiseless as fear in a wide wilderness,
And over the hushed carpet, silent, stepped,
And 'tween the curtains peeped, where, lo!—how fast she slept.

29

Then by the bedside, where the faded moon
Made a dim, silver twilight, soft he set 255 A table, and, half anguished, threw thereon
A cloth of woven crimson, gold, and jet—
O for some drowsy Morphean amulet! 1
The boisterous, midnight, festive clarion, 0 high-pitched trumpet

The kettledrum, and far-heard clarinet,
260 Affray his ears, though but in dying tone—
The hall door shuts again, and all the noise is gone.

3°

And still she slept an azure-lidded sleep,
In blanched linen, smooth, and lavendered,
While he from forth the closet brought a heap
265 Of candied apple, quince, and plum, and gourd;
With jellies soother than the creamy curd,
And lucent 0 syrups, tinct° with cinnamon; clear / tinctured
Manna and dates, in argosy transferred From Fez;° and spiced dainties, every one, Morocco
270 From silken Samarcand to cedared Lebanon. 2

31

These delicates he heaped with glowing hand
On golden dishes and in baskets bright

Of wreathed silver: sumptuous they stand

9. Dark pagans. Missal: Christian prayer book.

2. Places associated with ancient luxury and

1. An object, such as an engraved stone, exerting wealth.

the power of Morpheus, Greek god of dreams.

9 1 4

/ JOHN KEATS

In the retired quiet of the night,

275 Filling the chilly room with perfume light.—

“And now, my love, my seraph⁰ fair, awake!

angel

Thou art my heaven, and I thine eremite:⁰

hermit; devotee

Open thine eyes, for meek St. Agnes' sake,

Or I shall drowse beside thee, so my soul doth ache.”

32

280 Thus whispering, his warm, unnerved arm

Sank in her pillow. Shaded was her dream

By the dusk curtains: ‘twas a midnight charm

Impossible to melt as iced stream:

The lustrous salvers⁰ in the moonlight gleam;

serving dishes

285 Broad golden fringe upon the carpet lies:

It seemed he never, never could redeem

From such a steadfast spell his lady's eyes;

So mused awhile, entailed in woofed⁰ fantasies.

enwoven

33

Awakening up, he took her hollow lute—
290 Tumultuous—and, in chords that tenderest be,
He played an ancient ditty, long since mute,
In Provence called "La belle dame sans merci"³
Close to her ear touching the melody;
Wherewith disturbed, she uttered a soft moan:
295 He ceased—she panted quick—and suddenly
Her blue affrayed eyes wide open shone:
Upon his knees he sank, pale as smooth-sculptured stone.

34

Her eyes were open, but she still beheld,
Now wide awake, the vision of her sleep:
300 There was a painful change, that night expelled
The blisses of her dream so pure and deep,
At which fair Madeline began to weep,
And moan forth witless words with many a sigh;
While still her gaze on Porphyro would keep,
305 Who knelt, with joined hands and piteous eye,
Fearing to move or speak, she looked so dreamingly.

35

"Ah, Porphyro!" said she, "but even now
Thy voice was at sweet tremble in mine ear,
Made tunable with every sweetest vow;
310 And those sad eyes were spiritual and clear:
How changed thou art! how pallid, chill, and drear!
Give me that voice again, my Porphyro,
Those looks immortal, those complainings dear!

Oh leave me not in this eternal woe,

315 For if thou diest, my Love, I know not where to go.”

3. The lovely but merciless lady (French). Keats adopted this title, of a poem by Alain Chartier(1380/90-ca.

1430), for one of his own (see p. 917).

T H E E V E O F S T. A G N E S / 9 1 5

3 6

Beyond a mortal man impassioned far

At these voluptuous accents, he arose,

Ethereal, flushed, and like a throbbing star

Seen mid the sapphire heaven’s deep repose;

320 Into her dream he melted, as the rose

Blendeth its odor with the violet—

Solution sweet: meantime the frost-wind blows

Like Love’s alarm⁰ pattering the sharp sleet signal, call to arms

Against the windowpanes; St. Agnes’ moon hath set.

37

325 ‘Tis dark: quick pattereth the flaw-blown⁰ sleet: gust-blown

“This is no dream, my bride, my Madeline!”

‘Tis dark: the iced gusts still rave and beat:

“No dream, alas! alas! and woe is mine!

Porphyro will leave me here to fade and pine.—

330 Cruel! what traitor could thee hither bring?

I curse not, for my heart is lost in thine,

Though thou forsakest a deceived thing—

A dove forlorn and lost with sick unpruned⁴ wing.”

38

“My Madeline! sweet dreamer! lovely bride!

335 Say, may I be for aye thy vassal blest?

Thy beauty’s shield, heart-shaped and vermeil⁰ dyed?

vermilion

Ah, silver shrine, here will I take my rest

After so many hours of toil and quest,

A famished pilgrim—saved by miracle.

340 Though I have found, I will not rob thy nest

Saving of thy sweet self; if thou think’st well

To trust, fair Madeline, to no rude infidel.

39

“Hark! ‘tis an elfin-storm from faery land,

Of haggard⁰ seeming, but a boon indeed: wild, ugly

345 Arise—arise! the morning is at hand—

The bloated wassailers⁰ will never heed— drunken revelers

Let us away, my love, with happy speed;

There are no ears to hear, or eyes to see—

Drowned all in Rhenish and the sleepy mead:⁵

350 Awake! arise! my love, and fearless be,

For o’er the southern moors I have a home for thee.”

40

She hurried at his words, beset with fears,

For there were sleeping dragons all around,

At glaring watch, perhaps, with ready spears—

355 Down the wide stairs a darkling way⁶ they found.—

In all the house was heard no human sound.

4. Unpreened; i.e., disarranged, ruffled. fermented honey and water.

5. Rhine wine and a sleep-inducing drink made of 6. A way in the dark.

9 1 6 / JOHN KEATS

A chain-dropped lamp was flickering by each door;
The arras, rich with horseman, hawk, and hound,
Fluttered in the besieging wind's uproar;
360 And the long carpets rose along the gusty floor.

4 1

They glide, like phantoms, into the wide hall;
Like phantoms, to the iron porch, they glide;
Where lay the Porter, in uneasy sprawl,
With a huge empty flagon by his side:
365 The wakeful bloodhound rose, and shook his hide,
But his sagacious eye an inmate owns:0 recognizes
By one, and one, the bolts full easy slide:
The chains lie silent on the footworn stones;
The key turns, and the door upon its hinges groans.

42

370 And they are gone: aye, ages long ago
These lovers fled away into the storm.
That night the Baron dreamt of many a woe,
And all his warrior-guests, with shade and form
Of witch, and demon, and large coffin-worm,
375 Were long be-nightmared. Angela the old Died palsy-twitched, with meager face deform;
The Beadsman, after thousand aves⁷ told,
For aye⁰ unsought for slept among his ashes cold. ever

1819 1820

On the Sonnet

If by dull rhymes our English must be chained,
And, like Andromeda,⁸ the Sonnet sweet
Fettered, in spite of pained loveliness;
Let us find out, if we must be constrained,
5 Sandals more interwoven and complete
To fit the naked foot of poesy;
Let us inspect the lyre, and weigh the stress
Of every chord, and see what may be gained
By ear industrious, and attention meet;
10 Misers of sound and syllable, no less Than Midas⁹ of his coinage, let us be Jealous⁰ of dead leaves in the bay-wreath crown; intolerant

7. As in Ave Maria (“Hail Mary”), a salutation to

9. According to legend, a fabulously wealthy king the Virgin.

who wished to turn all that he touched into gold;

8. In Greek mythology, a beautiful princess granted his wish by the gods, he quickly repented chained naked to a rock as a sacrifice to a sea mon-
it.

ster, but rescued by the hero Perseus.

1. Awarded as prize to a true poet.

LA B E L L E D A M E S A N S M E R C I / 9 1 7

So, if we may not let the Muse² be free,

She will be bound with garlands of her own.

1819 1848

La Belle Dame sans Merci³

0 what can ail thee, Knight at arms,
Alone and palely loitering?

The sedge has withered from the Lake
And no birds sing!

5 O what can ail thee, Knight at arms,
So haggard, and so woebegone?

The squirrel's granary is full
And the harvest's done.

1 I see a lily on thy brow

10 With anguish moist and fever dew,
And on thy cheeks a fading rose Fast withereth too.

"I met a Lady in the Meads,^{0 meadows}
Full beautiful, a faery's child,

15 Her hair was long, her foot was light
And her eyes were wild.

"I made a Garland for her head,
And bracelets too, and fragrant Zone;^{0 girdle}

She looked at me as she did love
20 And made sweet moan.

"I set her on my pacing steed
And nothing else saw all day long,
For sidelong would she bend and sing
A faery's song.

25 "She found me roots of relish sweet,
And honey wild, and manna^{0 dew, food (from heaven)}

And sure in language strange she said
'I love thee true.'

“She took me to her elfin grotto grotto

30 And there she wept and sighed full sore,

And there I shut her wild wild eyes

With kisses four.

2. Source of poetic inspiration. an earlier (and widely preferred) version of a poem 3. The lovely but merciless lady (French). This is first published in 1820.

9 1 8 / JOHN KEATS

“And there she lulled me asleep,

And there I dreamed, Ah Woe betide!

35 The latest dream I ever dreamt last

On the cold hill side.

“I saw pale Kings, and Princes too,

Pale warriors, death-pale were they all;

They cried, ‘La belle dame sans merci

40 Hath thee in thrall!’

“I saw their starved lips in the gloam

With horrid warning gaped wide,

And I awoke, and found me here

On the cold hill’s side.

45 “And this is why I sojourn here,

Alone and palely loitering;

Though the sedge is withered from the Lake

And no birds sing.”

April 1819 1888

Lamia4

Part 1

Upon a time, before the faery broods
Drove Nymph and Satyr⁵ from the prosperous woods,
Before King Oberon's bright diadem,⁶
Sceptre, and mantle, clasp'd with dewy gem,
5 Frighted away the Dryads and the Fauns
From rushes green, and brakes, and cowslip'd⁷ lawns,
The ever-smitten Hermes⁸ empty left
His golden throne, bent warm on amorous theft:
From high Olympus had he stolen light,
io On this side of Jove's clouds, to escape the sight
Of his great summoner, and made retreat
Into a forest on the shores of Crete.
For somewhere in that sacred island dwelt
A nymph, to whom all hoofed Satyrs knelt;
15 At whose white feet the languid Tritons⁹ poured Pearls, while on land they wither'd and adored.
Fast by the springs where she to bathe was wont,⁰ accustomed
And in those meads⁰ where sometime she might haunt, meadows
Were strewn rich gifts, unknown to any Muse,¹

4. In Greek mythology, a female demon who Brakes: thickets.

preyed on humans.

8. Or Mercury, the gods' messenger, especially at

5. Like dryads and fauns (line 5), nymphs and the service of Jove (or Jupiter, Zeus), the chief god.

satyrs were minor classical deities.

9. Minor sea gods.

6. Crown of Oberon, king of the fairies (post-

1. One of the nine sister goddesses who presided classical supernatural beings).

over song, poetry, and the arts and sciences.

7. Covered with cowslips (a species of wildflower).

LAMIA / 9 1 9

20 Though Fancy's casket were unlock'd to choose.

Ah, what a world of love was at her feet!

So Hermes thought, and a celestial heat

Burnt from his winged heels to either ear,

That from a whiteness, as the lily clear,

25 Blush'd into roses 'mid his golden hair,

Fallen in jealous curls about his shoulders bare.

From vale to vale, from wood to wood, he flew, valley

Breathing upon the flowers his passion new,

And wound with many a river to its head,

30 To find where this sweet nymph prepar'd her secret bed:

In vain; the sweet nymph might nowhere be found,

And so he rested on the lonely ground,

Pensive, and full of painful jealousies

Of the Wood-Gods, and even the very trees.

35 There as he stood, he heard a mournful voice,

Such as once heard, in gentle heart, destroys

All pain but pity: thus the lone voice spake:

“When from this wreathed tomb shall I awake!
When move in a sweet body fit for life,
40 And love, and pleasure, and the ruddy strife
Of hearts and lips! Ah, miserable me!”

The God, dove-footed,² glided silently
Round bush and tree, soft-brushing, in his speed,
The taller grasses and full-flowering weed,
45 Until he found a palpitating snake,
Bright, and cirque-couchant³ in a dusky brake.
She was a gordian⁴ shape of dazzling hue,
Vermilion-spotted, golden, green, and blue;
Striped like a zebra, freckled like a pard,⁰ leopard
50 Eyed like a peacock,⁵ and all crimson barr’d;
And full of silver moons, that, as she breathed,
Dissolv’d, or brighter shone, or interwreathed,
Their lustres with the gloomier tapestries—
So rainbow-sided, touch’d with miseries,
55 She seem’d, at once, some penanced lady elf,
Some demon’s mistress, or the demon’s self.
Upon her crest she wore a wannish⁰ fire dark
Sprinkled with stars, like Ariadne’s tiar:⁶
Her head was serpent, but ah, bitter-sweet!
60 She had a woman’s mouth with all its pearls⁷ complete:
And for her eyes: what could such eyes do there
But weep, and weep, that they were born so fair?
As Proserpine still weeps for her Sicilian air.⁸

2. I.e., gently as a dove.

artist Titian, Ariadne, a Greek mythological figure

3. Lying in a circular coil.

who was transformed into a constellation, wears a

4. Intricately twisted, seemingly impossible to crown of stars.

undo, like the knot tied by Gordius, legendary

7. A common Elizabethan metaphor for teeth.

Phrygian king.

8. The goddess Proserpina (Persephone) was

5. With multicolored spots (like the “eyes” in a taken from the field of Enna, in Sicily, to Hades by peacock’s tail).

the god Pluto.

6. Tiara. In a painting by the Italian Renaissance

9 2 0 / JOHN KEATS

Her throat was serpent, but the words she spake

65 Came, as through bubbling honey, for Love’s sake,

And thus; while Hermes on his pinions⁰ lay, -wings

Like a stoop’d⁰ falcon ere he takes his prey. plunging

“Fair Hermes, crown’d with feathers, fluttering light,

I had a splendid dream of thee last night:

70 I saw thee sitting, on a throne of gold,

Among the Gods, upon Olympus old,

The only sad one; for thou didst not hear

The soft, lute-finger’d Muses chaunting clear,

Nor even Apollo⁹ when he sang alone,

75 Deaf to his throbbing throat’s long, long melodious moan.

I dreamt I saw thee, robed in purple flakes,

Break amorous through the clouds, as morning breaks,

And, swiftly as a bright Phoebian dart,⁰ ray
Strike for the Cretan isle; and here thou art!
so Too gentle Hermes, hast thou found the maid?"
Whereat the star of Lethel not delay'd
His rosy eloquence, and thus inquired:
"Thou smooth-lipp'd serpent, surely high inspired!
Thou beauteous wreath, with melancholy eyes,
85 Possess whatever bliss thou canst devise,
Telling me only where my nymph is fled,—
Where she doth breathe!" "Bright planet, thou hast said," Return'd the snake, "but seal with oaths, fair God!"
"I swear," said Hermes, "by my serpent rod, 90 And by thine eyes, and by thy starry crown!"
Light flew his earnest words, among the blossoms blown.
Then thus again the brilliance feminine:
"Too frail of heart! for this lost nymph of thine,
Free as the air, invisibly, she strays
95 About these thornless wilds; her pleasant days
She tastes unseen; unseen her nimble feet
Leave traces in the grass and flowers sweet;
From weary tendrils, and bow'd branches green,
She plucks the fruit unseen, she bathes unseen:
100 And by my power is her beauty veil'd
To keep it unaffronted, unassail'd
By the love-glances of unlovely eyes,
Of Satyrs, Fauns, and blear'd Silenus'2 sighs.
Pale grew her immortality, for woe
105 Of all these lovers, and she grieved so

I took compassion on her, bade her steep
Her hair in weird⁰ syrops,⁰ that would keep magical / potions
Her loveliness invisible, yet free
To wander as she loves, in liberty.

110 Thou shalt behold her, Hermes, thou alone,
If thou wilt, as thou swearest, grant my boon!”

9. Phoebus Apollo, the sun god. 2. Satyr, tutor of Bacchus (Dionysus, god of wine).

1. Hermes, who appeared like a star on the dark Blear'd:
drunk,
banks of the river Lethe, in Hades.

LAMIA / 9 2 1

Then, once-again, the charmed God began
An oath, and through the serpent's ears it ran Warm, tremulous, devout, psalterian.³

115 Ravish'd, she lifted her Circean head,
Blush'd a live damask,⁴ and swift-lisping said,
“I was a woman, let me have once more
A woman's shape, and charming as before.

I love a youth of Corinth—O the bliss!

120 Give me my woman's form, and place me where he is.
Stoop, Hermes, let me breathe upon thy brow,
And thou shalt see thy sweet nymph even now.”

The God on half-shut feathers sank serene,

She breath'd upon his eyes, and swift was seen

125 Of both the guarded nymph near-smiling on the green.

It was no dream; or say a dream it was,

Real are the dreams of Gods, and smoothly pass

Their pleasures in a long immortal dream.

One warm, flush'd moment, hovering, it might seem no Dash'd by the wood-nymph's beauty, so he burn'd;
Then, lighting on the printless verdure, turn'd
To the swoon'd serpent, and with languid arm,
Delicate, put to proof the lythe Caducean charm.⁵

So done, upon the nymph his eyes he bent
135 Full of adoring tears and blandishment,
And towards her stept: she, like a moon in wane,
Faded before him, cower'd, nor could restrain
Her fearful sobs, self-folding like a flower
That faints into itself at evening hour:

HO But the God fostering her chilled hand,
She felt the warmth, her eyelids open'd bland,⁰ softly
And, like new flowers at morning song of bees,
Bloom'd, and gave up her honey to the lees.⁰ dregs
Into the green-recessed woods they flew;
145 Nor grew they pale, as mortal lovers do.

Left to herself, the serpent now began
To change; her elfin blood in madness ran,
Her mouth foam'd, and the grass, therewith besprent,⁰ sprinkled

Wither'd at dew so sweet and virulent;
150 Her eyes in torture fix'd, and anguish drear,
Hot, glaz'd, and wide, with lid-lashes all sear,
Flash'd phosphor and sharp sparks, without one cooling tear.
The colors all inflam'd throughout her train,
She writh'd about, convuls'd with scarlet pain:
155 A deep volcanian yellow took the place

Of all her milder-mooned body's grace;⁶
And, as the lava ravishes the mead,
Spoilt all her silver mail, and golden brede;⁰ embroidery

3. Like a psalm or like the sound of a psaltery (an

5. I.e., tested the magic of Hermes' flexible staff ancient stringed instrument).

(called Caduceus).

4. Turned the pink color of a damask rose.

6. I.e., sulfurous yellow (as though from a volcanic

Circean: resembling Circe, enchantress in the eruption) replaced her silvery moon color.

Odyssey.

9 2 2

/ JOHN KEATS

Made gloom of all her frecklings, streaks and bars,
i60 Eclips'd her crescents, and lick'd up her stars:

So that, in moments few, she was undrest

Of all her sapphires, greens, and amethyst,

And rubious-argent:⁰ of all these bereft,

silvery red

Nothing but pain and ugliness were left.

165 Still shone her crown; that vanish'd, also she

Melted and disappear'd as suddenly;

And in the air, her new voice luting soft,

Cried, "Lycius! gentle Lycius!"—Borne aloft

With the bright mists about the mountains hoar⁰

gray with age

170 These words dissolv'd: Crete's forests heard no more

Whither fled Lamia, now a lady bright,
A full-born beauty new and exquisite?
She fled into that valley they pass o'er
Who go to Corinth from Cenchreas' shore;⁷
175 And rested at the foot of those wild hills,
The rugged founts of the Peaeran rills,⁸
And of that other ridge whose barren back
Stretches, with all its mist and cloudy rack,
South-westward to Cleone. There she stood 180 About a young bird's flutter from a wood,
Fair, on a sloping green of mossy tread,
By a clear pool, wherein she passioned⁹
To see herself escap'd from so sore ills,
While her robes flaunted with the daffodils.
185 Ah, happy Lycius!—for she was a maid
More beautiful than ever twisted braid,
Or sigh'd, or blush'd, or on spring-flowered lea⁰

meadow

Spread a green kirtle⁰ to the minstrelsy:

gown

A virgin purest lipp'd yet in the lore
190 Of love deep learned to the red heart's core:
Not one hour old, yet of scintial⁰ brain
To unperplex⁰ bliss from its neighbor pain;

disentangle

Define their pettish⁰ limits, and estrange

quarreled-over

Their points of contact, and swift counterchange;¹

195 Intrigue with the specious chaos,² and dispart

Its most ambiguous atoms with sure art;

As though in Cupid's college she had spent

Sweet days a lovely graduate, still unshent,⁰ unspoiled

And kept his rosy terms³ in idle languishment.

200 Why this fair creature chose so fairly

By the wayside to linger, we shall see;

But first 'tis fit to tell how she could muse

And dream, when in the serpent prison-house,

7. I.e., Cenchrea, a Corinthian harbor, in south- 1. Change of condition into its opposite. Estrange: em Greece. separate out.

8. Streams flowing from the Pierian Spring (on 2. I.e., use the illusory ("specious") chaos.

Mt. Olympus, in Greece), sacred to the Muses. 3. Terms spent "in Cupid's college."

9. Felt intense excitement.

LAMIA / 9 2 3

Of all she list,⁰ strange or magnificent: > wished

205 How, ever, where she will'd, her spirit went;

Whether to faint Elysium, or where

Down through tress-lifting waves the Nereids fair

Wind into Thetis' ⁴ bower by many a pearly stair;

Or where God Bacchus drains his cups divine,

2 i o Stretch'd out, at ease, beneath a glutinous⁰ pine; gummy

Or where in Pluto's gardens palatine⁰ palatial

Mulciber's columns gleam in far piazzian line.⁵

And sometimes into cities she would send

Her dream, with feast and rioting to blend;

215 And once, while among mortals dreaming thus,
She saw the young Corinthian Lycius
Charioting foremost in the envious race,
Like a young Jove with calm uneager face,
And fell into a swooning love of him.
220 Now on the moth-time of that evening dim
He would return that way, as well she knew,
To Corinth from the shore; for freshly blew
The eastern soft wind, and his galley now
Grated the quaystones with her brazen prow
225 In port Cenchreas, from Egina isle
Fresh anchor'd; whither he had been awhile
To sacrifice to Jove, whose temple there
Waits with high marble doors for blood and incense rare.
Jove heard his vows, and better'd his desire;
230 For by some freakful chance he made retire
From his companions, and set forth to walk,
Perhaps grown wearied of their Corinth talk:
Over the solitary hills he fared,
Thoughtless at first, but ere eve's star appeared 235 His phantasy was lost, where reason fades,
In the calm'd twilight of Platonic shades.⁶
Lamia beheld him coming, near, more near—
Close to her passing, in indifference drear,
His silent sandals swept the mossy green;
240 So neighbour'd to him, and yet so unseen
She stood: he pass'd, shut up in mysteries,
His mind wrapp'd like his mantle, while her eyes

Follow'd his steps, and her neck regal white Turn'd—syllabbling thus, “Ah, Lycius bright, 245 And will you leave me on the hills alone?
Lycius, look back! and be some pity shown.”
He did; not with cold wonder fearingly,
But Orpheus-like at an Eurydice;⁷
For so delicious were the words she sung,
250 It seem'd he had lov'd them a whole summer long:
And soon his eyes had drunk her beauty up,

4. One of the Nereids, or sea nymphs.

7. Pluto allowed Orpheus to lead Eurydice,

5. In long lines around piazzas, or open courts.

Orpheus's wife, back to Earth from Hades on the Mulciber: or Vulcan, god of fire and metalworking.

condition that Orpheus not look back at her. When

6. I.e., while he pondered difficult questions he could not resist looking, he lost her.

raised by Plato's philosophy.

9 2 4 / J O H N K E A T S

Leaving no drop in the bewildering cup,
And still the cup was full,—while he, afraid
Lest she should vanish ere his lip had paid
255 Due adoration, thus began to adore;
Her soft look growing coy, she saw his chain so sure:
“Leave thee alone! Look back! Ah, Goddess, see Whether my eyes can ever turn from thee!
For pity do not this sad heart belie0— be false to 260 Even as thou vanishest so I shall die.

Stay! though a Naiad of the rivers, stay!
To thy far wishes will thy streams obey:
Stay! though the greenest woods be thy domain,
Alone they can drink up the morning rain:
265 Though a descended Pleiad,⁸ will not one
Of thine harmonious sisters keep in tune
Thy spheres, and as thy silver proxy shine?
So sweetly to these ravish'd ears of mine
Came thy sweet greeting, that if thou shouldst fade
270 Thy memory will waste me to a shade:—
For pity do not melt!”—“If I should stay,”
Said Lamia, “here, upon this floor of clay,
And pain my steps upon these flowers too rough,
What canst thou say or do of charm enough
275 To dull the nice⁹ remembrance of my home?
Thou canst not ask me with thee here too roam
Over these hills and vales, where no joy is,— Empty of immortality and bliss!
Thou art a scholar, Lycius, and must know
280 That finer spirits cannot breathe below
In human climes, and live: Alas! poor youth,
What taste of purer air hast thou to soothe
My essence? What serener palaces,
Where I may all my many senses please,
285 And by mysterious sleights a hundred thirsts appease?
It cannot be—Adieu!” So said, she rose Tiptoe with white arms spread. He, sick to lose
The amorous promise of her lone complain,

Swoon'd, murmuring of love, and pale with pain.

290 The cruel lady, without any show

Of sorrow for her tender favorite's woe,

But rather, if her eyes could brighter be,

With brighter eyes and slow amenity,

Put her new lips to his, and gave afresh

295 The life she had so tangled in her mesh:

And as he from one trance was wakening

Into another, she began to sing,

Happy in beauty, life, and love, and every thing,

A song of love, too sweet for earthly lyres,

300 While, like held breath, the stars drew in their panting fires.

And then she whisper'd in such trembling tone,

8. One of the seven sisters that form the constel-

9. Detailed, minutely accurate.

lation Pleiades.

LAMIA / 9 2 5

As those who, safe together met alone

For the first time through many anguish'd days,

Use other speech than looks; bidding him raise

305 His drooping head, and clear his soul of doubt,

For that she was a woman, and without

Any more subtle fluid in her veins

Than throbbing blood, and that the self-same pains

Inhabited her frail-strung heart as his.

310 And next she wonder'd how his eyes could miss

Her face so long in Corinth, where, she said,

She dwelt but half retir'd, and there had led Days happy as the gold coin could invent
Without the aid of love; yet in content 315 Till she saw him, as once she pass'd him by,
Where 'gainst a column he leant thoughtfully
At Venus' temple porch, 'mid baskets heap'd
Of amorous herbs and flowers, newly reap'd
Late on that eve, as 'twas the night before 320 The Adonian feast;¹ whereof she saw no more,
But wept alone those days, for why should she adore?
Lycius from death awoke into amaze,
To see her still, and singing so sweet lays;⁰ songs
Then from amaze into delight he fell 325 To hear her whisper woman's lore so well;
And every word she spake entic'd him on
To unperplex'd delight² and pleasure known.
Let the mad poets say whate'er they please
Of the sweets of Fairies, Peris,³ Goddesses, 330 There is not such a treat among them all,
Haunters of cavern, lake, and waterfall,
As a real woman, lineal indeed
From Pyrrha's pebbles⁴ or old Adam's seed.
Thus gentle Lamia judg'd, and judg'd aright,
335 That Lycius could not love in half a fright,
So threw the goddess off, and won his heart
More pleasantly by playing woman's part,
With no more awe than what her beauty gave,
That, while it smote, still guaranteed to save.

340 Lycius to all made eloquent reply,
 Marrying to every word a twinborn sigh;
 And last, pointing to Corinth, ask'd her sweet,
 If 'twas too far that night for her soft feet.
 The way was short, for Lamia's eagerness
 345 Made, by a spell, the triple league decrease
 To a few paces; not at all surmised
 By blinded Lycius, so in her comprized.⁰ bound up, absorbed
 They pass'd the city gates, he knew not how,
 So noiseless, and he never thought to know.

1. Feast of Adonis, a youth loved by Venus (Aph-
 3. Fairylike creatures in Persian mythology. rodite), goddess of love.

4. Descended from the pebbles with which, in
 2. I.e., unmixed with its neighbor, pain; cf. line
 Greek mythology, Pyrrha and Deucalion repopu-192.

lated Earth after a great flood.

9 2 6 / J O H N K E A T S

350 As men talk in a dream, so Corinth all, Throughout her palaces imperial,
 And all her populous streets and temples lewd,⁵ Mutter'd, like tempest in the distance brew'd,
 To the wide-spreaded night above her towers.
 355 Men, women, rich and poor, in the cool hours,
 Shuffled their sandals o'er the pavement white,
 Companion'd or alone; while many a light
 Flared, here and there, from wealthy festivals,

And threw their moving shadows on the walls,
360 Or found them cluster'd in the corniced shade
Of some arch'd temple door, or dusky colonnade.
Muffling his face, of greeting friends in fear,
Her fingers he press'd hard, as one came near
With curl'd gray beard, sharp eyes, and smooth bald crown, 365 Slow-stepp'd, and robed in philosophic gown:
Lycius shrank closer, as they met and past,
Into his mantle, adding wings to haste,
While hurried Lamia trembled: "Ah," said he,
"Why do you shudder, love, so ruefully?
370 Why does your tender palm dissolve in dew?"—
"I'm wearied," said fair Lamia: "tell me who
Is that old man? I cannot bring to mind
His features:—Lycius! wherefore did you blind Yourself from his quick eyes?" Lycius replied, 375 " 'Tis Apollonius sage, my trusty guide
And good instructor; but to-night he seems
The ghost of folly haunting my sweet dreams."
While yet he spake they had arrived before
A pillar'd porch, with lofty portal door,
380 Where hung a silver lamp, whose phosphor glow
Reflected in the slabbed steps below,
Mild as a star in water; for so new,
And so unsullied was the marble hue,
So through the crystal polish, liquid fine,
385 Ran the dark veins, that none but feet divine
Could e'er have touch'd there. Sounds T^olian⁶

Breath'd from the hinges, as the ample span
Of the wide doors disclos'd a place unknown
Some time to any, but those two alone,
390 And a few Persian mutes, who that same year
Were seen about the markets: none knew where
They could inhabit; the most curious
Were foil'd, who watch'd to trace them to their house:
And but the flutter-winged verse must tell,
395 For truth's sake, what woe afterwards befel,
5. Temples of Venus, whose worship sometimes after Aeolus, god of winds), a stringed instrument involved sexual activity.

that responds to air currents.

6. Sounds like those of the wind harp (named

LAMIA / 9 2 7

'T would humor many a heart to leave them thus,
Shut from the busy world of more incredulous.

Part 2

Love in a hut, with water and a crust,
Is—Love, forgive us!—cinders, ashes, dust;
Love in a palace is perhaps at last
More grievous torment than a hermit's fast:—
5 That is a doubtful tale from faery land,
Hard for the non-elect to understand.
Had Lycius liv'd to hand his story down,
He might have given the moral a fresh frown,
Or clench'd it quite: but too short was their bliss
io To breed distrust and hate, that make the soft voice hiss.
Besides, there, nightly, with terrific glare,
Love, jealous grown of so complete a pair,
Hover'd and buzz'd his wings, with fearful roar,
Above the lintel of their chamber door,
15 And down the passage cast a glow upon the floor.
For all this came a ruin: side by side
They were enthroned, in the even tide,
Upon a couch, near to a curtaining
Whose airy texture, from a golden string,
20 Floated into the room, and let appear
Unveil'd the summer heaven, blue and clear,
Betwixt two marble shafts:—there they reposed,
Where use had made it sweet, with eyelids closed,
Saving a tythe⁷ which love still open kept,
25 That they might see each other while they almost slept;

When from the slope side of a suburb hill,
Deafening the swallow's twitter, came a thrill
Of trumpets—Lycius started—the sounds fled,
But left a thought, a buzzing in his head.

30 For the first time, since first he harbor'd in
That purple-lined palace of sweet sin,
His spirit pass'd beyond its golden bourn
Into the noisy world almost forsworn.

The lady, ever watchful, penetrant,
35 Saw this with pain, so arguing a want lack

Of something more, more than her empery empire

Of joys; and she began to moan and sigh
Because he mused beyond her, knowing well

That but a moment's thought is passion's passing bell. death
/ knell

40 "Why do you sigh, fair creature?" whisper'd he:

"Why do you think?" return'd she tenderly:

"You have deserted me;—where am I now?

Not in your heart while care weighs on your brow:

No, no, you have dismiss'd me; and I go

7. Except for a slit. Tythe (more commonly tithe): a small—literally, a tenth—part.

9 2 8 / JOHN KEATS

45 From your breast houseless: ay, it must be so."

He answer'd, bending to her open eyes,

Where he was mirror'd small in paradise,

"My silver planet, both of eve and morn!8

Why will you plead yourself so sad forlorn,
50 While I am striving how to fill my heart
With deeper crimson, and a double smart?0 pain
How to entangle, trammel up9 and snare
Your soul in mine, and labyrinth you there
Like the hid scent in an unbudded rose?
55 Ay, a sweet kiss—you see your mighty woes.1
My thoughts! shall I unveil them? Listen then!
What mortal hath a prize, that other men
May be confounded and abash'd withal,
But lets it sometimes pace abroad majestic,
60 And triumph, as in thee I should rejoice
Amid the hoarse alarm of Corinth's voice.
Let my foes choke, and my friends shout afar,
While through the thronged streets your bridal car0 chariot
Wheels round its dazzling spokes."—The lady's cheek
65 Trembled; she nothing said, but, pale and meek,
Arose and knelt before him, wept a rain
Of sorrows at his words; at last with pain
Beseeching him, the while his hand she wrung,
To change his purpose. He thereat was stung,
70 Perverse, with stronger fancy to reclaim
Her wild and timid nature to his aim:
Besides, for all his love, in self despite,
Against his better self, he took delight
Luxurious in her sorrows, soft and new.
75 His passion, cruel grown, took on a hue
Fierce and sanguineous0 as 'twas possible bloodred

In one whose brow had no dark veins to swell.
Fine was the mitigated fury, like Apollo's presence when in act to strike
so The serpent—Ha, the serpent! certes, she certainly Was none. She burnt, she lov'd the tyranny,
And, all subdued, consented to the hour
When to the bridal he should lead his paramour.
Whispering in midnight silence, said the youth,
85 "Sure some sweet name thou hast, though, by my truth,
I have not ask'd it, ever thinking thee
Not mortal, but of heavenly progeny,
As still I do. Hast any mortal name,
Fit appellation for this dazzling frame?
90 Or friends or kinsfolk on the citted earth,
To share our marriage feast and nuptial mirth?
"I have no friends," said Lamia, "no, not one;
My presence in wide Corinth hardly known:
8. The planet Venus is both the morning star and
1. I.e., she teases him about exaggerating his troubles.

9. Catch in a net.

L A M I A / 9 2 9

My parents' bones are in their dusty urns
95 Sepulchred, where no kindled incense burns,
Seeing all their luckless race are dead, save me,
And I neglect the holy rite for thee.
Even as you list invite your many guests;

But if, as now it seems, your vision rests
100 With any pleasure on me, do not bid
Old Apollonius—from him keep me hid.”
Lycius, perplex’d at words so blind and blank,
Made close inquiry; from whose touch she shrank,
Feigning a sleep; and he to the dull shade
105 Of deep sleep in a moment was betray’d.
It was the custom then to bring away,
The bride from home at blushing shut of day,
Veil’d, in a chariot, heralded along
By strewn flowers, torches, and a marriage song,
no With other pageants: but this fair unknown
Had not a friend. So being left alone, (Lycius was gone to summon all his kin)
And knowing surely she could never win
His foolish heart from its mad pompousness,
115 She set herself, high-thoughted, how to dress
The misery in fit magnificence.
She did so, but ‘tis doubtful how and whence Came, and who were her subtle servitors.0 male servants
About the halls, and to and from the doors,
120 There was a noise of wings, till in short space
The glowing banquet-room shone with wide-arched grace.
A haunting music, sole perhaps and lone Supportress of the faery-roof, made moan
Throughout, as fearful the whole charm might fade.
125 Fresh carved cedar, mimicking a glade
Of palm and plantain, met from either side,

High in the midst, in honor of the bride:
Two palms and then two plantains, and so on,
From either side their stems branch'd one to one 130 All down the aisled place; and beneath all
There ran a stream of lamps straight on from wall to wall.
So canopied, lay an untasted feast
Teeming with odors. Lamia, regal drest,
Silently paced about, and as she went,
135 In pale contented sort of discontent,
Mission'd her viewless servants to enrich
The fretted² splendor of each nook and niche.
Between the tree-stems, marbled plain at first,
Came jasper pannels; then, anon, there burst
140 Forth creeping imagery of slighter trees,
And with the larger wove in small intricacies.
Approving all, she faded at self-will,
And shut the chamber up, close, hush'd and still,
2. Decorated with fretwork.

930 / J O H N K E A T S

Complete and ready for the revels rude,^o uncouth
145 When dreadful^o guests would come to spoil her solitude.
terrifying
The day appear'd, and all the gossip rout.
O senseless Lycius! Madman! wherefore flout
The silent-blessing fate, warm cloister'd hours,
And show to common eyes these secret bowers?
150 The herd approach'd; each guest, with busy brain, Arriving at the portal, gaz'd amain,^o intently

And enter'd marveling: for they knew the street,
Remember'd it from childhood all complete Without a gap, yet ne'er before had seen
155 That royal porch, that high-built fair demesne;⁰
So in they hurried all, maz'd, curious and keen:
Save one, who look'd thereon with eye severe,
And with calm-planted steps walk'd in austere;
'Twas Apollonius: something too he laugh'd,
i60 As though some knotty problem, that had daft⁰

baffled

His patient thought, had now begun to thaw,
And solve and melt:—'twas just as he foresaw.
He met within the murmurous vestibule
His young disciple. ” 'Tis no common rule, 165 Lycius,” said he, “for uninvited guest
To force himself upon you, and infest
With an unbidden presence the bright throng
Of younger friends; yet must I do this wrong,
And you forgive me.” Lycius blush'd, and led 170 The old man through the inner doors broad-spread;
With reconciling words and courteous mien⁰ demeanor
Turning into sweet milk the sophist's spleen.³
Of wealthy lustre was the banquet-room,
Fill'd with pervading brilliance and perfume:
175 Before each lucid pannel fuming stood
A censer fed with myrrh and spiced wood,
Each by a sacred tripod held aloft,

Whose slender feet wide-swerv'd upon the soft Wool-woofed° carpets: fifty wreaths of smoke
-woven

180 From fifty censers their light voyage took
To the high roof, still mimick'd as they rose
Along the mirror'd walls by twin-clouds odorous Twelve sphered tables, by silk seats insphered,0 encircled

High as the level of a man's breast rear'd 185 On libbard's0 paws, upheld the heavy gold leopard's

Of cups and goblets, and the store0 thrice told story

Of Ceres' horn,4 and, in huge vessels, wine
Come from the gloomy tun0 with merry shine.
cask

Thus loaded with a feast the tables stood,
190 Each shrining in the midst the image of a God.

3. Here, the melancholy of one whose reasoning 4. Horn of plenty, filled with grain (Ceres is the seems solid b u t is flawed. goddess of grain).

L A M I A / 9 3 1

When in an antichamber every guest
Had felt the cold full sponge to pleasure press'd,
By minist'ring slaves, upon his hands and feet,
And fragrant oils with ceremony meet
195 Pour'd on his hair, they all mov'd to the feast
In white robes, and themselves in order placed Around the silken couches, wondering

Whence all this mighty cost and blaze of wealth could spring.
Soft went the music the soft air along,
200 While fluent Greek a vowel'd undersong
Kept up among the guests, discoursing low
At first, for scarcely was the wine at flow;
But when the happy vintage touch'd their brains,
Louder they talk, and louder come the strains
205 Of powerful instruments:—the gorgeous dyes,
The space, the splendor of the draperies,
The roof of awful richness, nectarous cheer,
Beautiful slaves, and Lamia's self, appear,
Now, when the wine has done its rosy deed,
210 And every soul from human trammels freed,
No more so strange; for merry wine, sweet wine,
Will make Elysian shades⁵ not too fair, too divine.
Soon was God Bacchus at meridian⁰ height; full
Flush'd were their cheeks, and bright eyes double bright:
215 Garlands of every green, and every scent
From vales⁰ deflower'd, or forest-trees branch-rent, valleys
In baskets of bright osier'd⁶ gold were brought High as the handles heap'd, to suit the thought
Of every guest; that each, as he did please, 220 Might fancy-fit his brows, silk-pillow'd at his ease.
What wreath for Lamia? What for Lycius?
What for the sage, old Apollonius?
Upon her aching forehead be there hung
The leaves of willow and of adder's tongue;⁷
225 And for the youth, quick, let us strip for him

The thyrsus,⁸ that his watching eyes may swim
Into forgetfulness; and, for the sage,
Let spear-grass and the spiteful thistle wage War on his temples. Do not all charms fly
230 At the mere touch of cold philosophy?⁹

There was an awful⁰ rainbow once in heaven: awe-inspiring
We know her woof, her texture; she is given
In the dull catalogue of common things.

Philosophy will clip an Angel's wings,
235 Conquer all mysteries by rule and line,
5. Spirits in Elysium, abode of the blessed after tongues.
death.

8. Bacchus's vine-covered staff, used to signal
6. Plaited, as with the strips of willow used to drunkenness.
weave baskets.

9. Natural philosophy, i.e., science.

7. Fern with spikes that resemble serpents'

9 3 2 / J O H N K E A T S

Empty the haunted air, and gnomed⁰ mine—gnome-guarded

Unweave a rainbow, as it erewhile made
The tender-person'd Lamia melt into a shade.
By her glad Lycius sitting, in chief place,
240 Scarce saw in all the room another face,
Till, checking his love trance, a cup he took Full brimm'd, and opposite sent forth a look

‘Cross the broad table, to beseech a glance
From his old teacher’s wrinkled countenance, 245 And pledge⁰ him. The bald-head philosopher drink a toast to
Had fix’d his eye, without a twinkle or stir
Full on the alarmed beauty of the bride,
Brow-beating her fair form, and troubling her sweet pride.
Lycius then press’d her hand, with devout touch,
250 As pale it lay upon the rosy couch:
‘Twas icy, and the cold ran through his veins;
Then sudden it grew hot, and all the pains
Of an unnatural heat shot to his heart.
“Lamia, what means this? Wherefore dost thou start?
255 Know’st thou that man?” Poor Lamia answer’d not.
He gaz’d into her eyes, and not a jot
Own’d⁰ they the lovelorn piteous appeal: acknowledged
More, more he gaz’d: his human senses reel:
Some hungry spell that loveliness absorbs;
260 There was no recognition in those orbs.
“Lamia!” he cried—and no soft-toned reply.
The many heard, and the loud revelry
Grew hush; the stately music no more breathes;
The myrtle¹ sicken’d in a thousand wreaths.
265 By faint degrees, voice, lute, and pleasure ceased;
A deadly silence step by step increased,
Until it seem’d a horrid presence there,
And not a man but felt the terror in his hair.
“Lamia!” he shriek’d; and nothing but the shriek

270 With its sad echo did the silence break.
 “Begone, foul dream!” he cried, gazing again
 In the bride’s face, where now no azure vein
 Wander’d on fair-spaced temples; no soft bloom
 Misted the cheek; no passion to illumine
 275 The deep-recessed vision:—all was blight;
 Lamia, no longer fair, there sat a deadly white.
 “Shut, shut those juggling² eyes, thou ruthless man!
 Turn them aside, wretch! or the righteous ban
 Of all the Gods, whose dreadful images
 280 Here represent their shadowy presences,
 May pierce them on the sudden with the thorn
 Of painful blindness; leaving thee forlorn,
 In trembling dotage to the feeblest fright
 Of conscience, for their long offended might,
 285 For all thine impious proud-heart sophistries,
 1. An emblem of love, because sacred to Venus.

2. Deceiving.

ODE TO PSYCHE / 933

U n l a w f u l m a g i c , a n d e n t i c i n g l i e s .

C o r i n t h i a n s ! l o o k u p o n t h a t g r a y - b e a r d w r e t c h !

M a r k h o w , p o s s e s s ‘ d , h i s l a s h l e s s e y e l i d s s t r e t c h A r o u n d h i s d e m o n e y e s ! C o r i n t h i a n s , s e e !

290 M y s w e e t b r i d e w i t h e r s a t t h e i r p o t e n c y
 .”

“Fool!” said the sophist, in an under-tone Gr uff with contempt; which a death-nighing moan From Lycius answer’d, as heart-str uck and lost, He sank supine beside the aching ghost.

295 "Fool! Fool!" repeated he, while his eyes still Relented not, nor mov'd; "from every ill Of life have I preserv'd thee to this day,

And shall I see thee made a serpent's prey?"

Then Lamia breath'd death breath; the sophist's eye, 300 Like a sharp spear, went through her utterly, Keen, cruel, perçant, 0 stinging: she, as well piercing

As her weak hand could any meaning tell,

Motion'd him to be silent; vainly so,

He look'd and look'd again a level—No!

305 "A Serpent!" echoed he; no sooner said,
Than with a frightful scream she vanished
: And Lycius' arms were empty of delight,

As were his limbs of life, from that same night.

On the high couch he lay!—his friends scam-eround—

310 Supported him—no pulse, or breath they found, And, in its marriage robe, the heavy body wound.

July - August 1819 1820

Ode to Psyche³

0 Goddess! hear these tuneless numbers, 0 wring verses

By sweet enforcement and remembrance dear, And pardon that thy secrets should be sung Even into thine own soft-conched^o ear; shell-like

5 Surely I dreamt today, or did I see

The winged Psyche with awakened eyes?

1 w a n d e r e d i n a f o r e s t t h o u g h t l e s s l y ,
A n d , o n t h e s u d d e n , f a i n t i n g w i t h s u r p r i s e ,
S a w t w o f a i r c r e a t u r e s , c o u c h e d s i d e b y s i d e i o I n d e e p e s t g r a s s , b e n e a t h t h e w h i s p ‘ r i n g r o o f O f l e a v e s a n d t r e m b l e d b l o s s o m s , w h e r e t h e r e r a n A b r o o k l e t , s c a r c e e s p i e d : ‘ M i d h u s h e d , c o o l - r o o t e d f l o w e r s , f r a g r a n t - e y e d , B l u e , s i l v e r - w h i t e , a n d b u d d e d T y r i a n , 4

15 T h e y l a y c a l m - b r e a t h i n g o n t h e b e d d e d
g r a s s ; T h e i r a r m s e m b r a c e d , a n d t h e i r p i n i o n s 0 t o o ; wings

3. In Greek mythology, Psyche (a mortal woman, with Cupid in immortality.

whose n a m e m e a n s “soul”) was loved in secret and

4. Purple or red, as in the “royal” dye made in in darkness by Cupid, the “winged” son of the god-ancient Tyre.

dess Venus. After many trials, Psyche was united

9 3 4 / J O H N K E A T S

Their lips touched not, but had not bade adieu,

As if disjoined by soft-handed slumber,

And ready still past kisses to outnumber

2 0 A t t e n d e r e y e - d a w n o f a u r o r e a n 0 l o v e : dawning

The winged boy I knew;

But who wast thou, O happy, happy dove?

His Psyche true!

O latest born and loveliest vision far

25 Of all Olympus’ faded hierarchy!5

Fairer than Phoebe’s0 sapphire-regioned star, the moon’s

Or Vesper; 0 amorous glowworm⁶ of the sky; the evening star

Fairer than these, though temple thou hast none,

Nor altar heaped with flowers;

30 Nor virgin choir to make delicious moan

Upon the midnight hours;

No voice, no lute, no pipe, no incense sweet

From chain-swung censer teeming;

No shrine, no grove, no oracle, no heat

35 Of pale-mouthed prophet dreaming.

0 brightest! though too late for antique vows,

Too, too late for the fond believing lyre,

When holy were the haunted forest boughs,

Holy the air, the water, and the fire;

40 Yet even in these days so far retired

From happy pieties, thy lucent fans, 0 wings

Fluttering among the faint Olympians,

I see, and sing, by my own eyes inspired.

So let me be thy choir, and make a moan

45 Upon the midnight hours;

Thy voice, thy lute, thy pipe, thy incense sweet

From swung censer teeming;

Thy shrine, thy grove, thy oracle, thy heat

Of pale-mouthed prophet dreaming.

50 Yes, I will be thy priest, and build a fane^o temple

In some untrodden region of my mind,

Where branched thoughts, new grown with pleasant pain,

Instead of pines shall murmur in the wind:

Far, far around shall those dark-clustered trees

55 Fledge the wild-ridged mountains steep by steep;
And there by zephyrs,⁰ streams, and birds, and bees, breezes
The moss-lain Dryads⁰ shall be lulled to sleep; tree nymphs
And in the midst of this wide quietness
A rosy sanctuary will I dress

60 With the wreathed trellis of a working brain,
With buds, and bells, and stars without a name,
With all the gardener Fancy e'er could feign,
Who breeding flowers, will never breed the same:

5. Lines 24 - 25 : last of the deities to be added to

6. Wingless, female firefly that emits light from the company of the Greek Olympian gods.

the a b d o m e n .

ODE TO A NIGHTINGALE / 935

And there shall be for thee all soft delight

65 That shadowy thought can win,

A bright torch, and a casement ope at night,

To let the warm Love⁷ in!

1819 1820

Ode to a Nightingale

i

My heart aches, and a drowsy numbness pains

My sense, as though of hemlock⁸ I had drunk,

Or emptied some dull opiate to the drains

One minute past, and Lethe-wards⁹ had sunk:

5 'Tis not through envy of thy happy lot,

But being too happy in thine happiness—

That thou, light-winged Dryad⁰ of the trees, nymph

In some melodious plot
Of beechen green, and shadows numberless,
io Singest of summer in full-throated ease.
2
O, for a draught of vintage! that hath been Cooled a long age in the deep-delved earth,
Tasting of Flora¹ and the country green,
Dance, and Provençal song,² and sunburnt mirth!
15 O for a beaker full of the warm South,
Full of the true, the blushful Hippocrene,³
With beaded bubbles winking at the brim,
And purple-stained mouth;
That I might drink, and leave the world unseen,
20 And with thee fade away into the forest dim:
3
Fade far away, dissolve, and quite forget
What thou among the leaves hast never known,
The weariness, the fever, and the fret
Here, where men sit and hear each other groan;
25 Where palsy shakes a few, sad, last gray hairs,
Where youth grows pale, and specter-thin, and dies,
Where but to think is to be full of sorrow
And leaden-eyed despairs,
Where Beauty cannot keep her lustrous eyes,
30 Or new Love pine at them beyond tomorrow.

7. I.e., Cupid.

2. Of the late medieval troubadours of Provence,

8. Opiate made from a poisonous herb.

in southern France.

9. Towards the river Lethe, whose waters in Hades

3. The fountain of the Muses (goddesses of poetry bring the dead forgetfulness.

and the arts) on Mt. Helicon, in Greece; its waters

1. Roman goddess of springtime and flowers.

induce poetic inspiration.

936 / JOHN KEATS

4

Away! away! for I will fly to thee,

Not charioted by Bacchus and his pards,⁴

But on the viewless⁰ wings of Poesy, invisible

Though the dull brain perplexes and retards:

35 Already with thee! tender is the night,

And haply the Queen-Moon is on her throne,

Clustered around by all her starry Fays;^o fairies

But here there is no light,

Save what from heaven is with the breezes blown 40 Through verdurous⁰ glooms and winding mossy ways.

green-leaved

5

I cannot see what flowers are at my feet,

Nor what soft incense hangs upon the boughs,

But, in embalmed⁰ darkness, guess each sweet perfumed

Wherewith the seasonable month endows

45 The grass, the thicket, and the fruit tree wild;

White hawthorn, and the pastoral eglantine;⁵

Fast fading violets covered up in leaves;

And mid-May's eldest child,
The coming musk-rose, full of dewy wine,
50 The murmurous haunt of flies on summer eves.

6

Darkling⁰ I listen; and for many a time in darkness
I have been half in love with easeful Death,
Called him soft names in many a mused rhyme,
To take into the air my quiet breath;
55 Now more than ever seems it rich to die,
To cease upon the midnight with no pain,
While thou art pouring forth thy soul abroad
In such an ecstasy!
Still wouldst thou sing, and I have ears in vain—
60 To thy high requiem become a sod.

7

Thou wast not born for death, immortal Bird!
No hungry generations tread thee down;
The voice I hear this passing night was heard
In ancient days by emperor and clown:
65 Perhaps the selfsame song that found a path
Through the sad heart of Ruth,⁶ when, sick for home,
She stood in tears amid the alien corn;
The same that ofttimes hath Charmed magic casements, opening on the foam
70 Of perilous seas, in faery lands forlorn.

4. Leopards, drawing the chariot of Bacchus, god of wine and modesty who, as a stranger in Judah, won of wine.

a h u s b a n d while gleaning in the barley fields (“the

5. Sweetbrier; wood roses.

alien corn,” line 67).

6. In the H e b r e w Scriptures, a w o m a n of great loy-

O D E O N M E L A N C H O L Y / 9 3 7

8

Forlorn! the very word is like a bell

To toll me back from thee to my sole self!

Adieu! the fancy cannot cheat so well

As she is famed to do, deceiving elf.

75 Adieu! adieu! thy plaintive anthem fades

Past the near meadows, over the still stream,

Up the hill side; and now ‘tis buried deep

In the next valley-glades:

Was it a vision, or a waking dream?

so Fled is that music:—Do I wake or sleep?

May 1819 1820

Ode on Melancholy

i

No, no, go not to Lethe,⁷ neither twist

Wolfsbane, tight-rooted, for its poisonous wine;

Nor suffer thy pale forehead to be kissed

By nightshade, ruby grape of Proserpine;⁸

5 Make not your rosary of yew-berries,⁹

Nor let the beetle, nor the death-moth be

Your mournful Psyche, nor the downy owl¹

A partner in your sorrow’s mysteries;

For shade to shade will come too drowsily,

io And drown the wakeful anguish of the soul.

2

But when the melancholy fit shall fall

Sudden from heaven like a weeping cloud,

That fosters the droop-headed flowers all,

And hides the green hill in an April shroud;

15 Then glut thy sorrow on a morning rose,

Or on the rainbow of the salt sand-wave,

Or on the wealth of globed peonies;

Or if thy mistress some rich anger shows,

Imprison her soft hand, and let her rave,

20 And feed deep, deep upon her peerless eyes.

3

She² dwells with Beauty—Beauty that must die;

And Joy, whose hand is ever at his lips

Bidding adieu; and aching Pleasure nigh,

7. River in Hades, the waters of which bring for-

1. Beetles, moths, and owls traditionally have getfulness to the dead.

been associated with darkness, death, and burial;

8. Q u e e n of Hades. “Nightshade” and “wolfsbane”

Psyche (the soul) sometimes has been symbolized

(line 2) are poisonous herbs from which sedatives

by a m o t h that escapes the m o u t h in sleep or at

and opiates were extracted.

death.

9. Symbols of mourning; often growing in ceme-

2. T h e goddess Melancholy.

teries.

938 / JOHN KEATS

Turning to Poison while the bee-mouth
sips: 25 Aye, in the very temple of Delight

Veiled Melancholy has her sov' reign shrine, Though seen of none save him whose str enuous tongue Can burst Joy's grape agains this palate fine; 0 *sensitive

His soul shall taste the sadness of her might,
And beam on her cloudy trophies hung

.

May 1819 1820

Ode on a Grecian Urn

i

Thou still unravished bride of quietness,
Thou foster-child of silence and slow time,
Sylvan 0 historian, who canst thus express *rustic

A flowery tale more sweetly than our rhyme
: 5 What leaf-fringed legend haunts about thy shape Of deities or mortals, or of both,
In Tempe or the dales of Arcady? 4

What men or gods are these? What maidens loath?

What mad pursuit? What struggle to escape?

io What pipes and timbrels? What wild ecstasy?

2

Heard melodies are sweet, but those unheard
Are sweeter; therefore, ye soft pipes, play on;
Not to the sensual ear, but, more endeared,
Pipe to the spirit ditties of no tone:

15 Fair youth, beneath the trees, thou canst not leave Thy song, nor ever canst those tree s be bare; Bold Lover, never, never canst thou u kiss,

Though winning near the goal — yet, do not grieve; She cannot fade, though thou hast no t thy bliss, 20 Forever wilt thou love, and she be fair!

3

Ah, happy, happy boughs! that cannot shed
Your leaves, nor ever bid the Spring die
u; And, happy melodist, unwearied,

Forever piping songs forever new;

25 More happy love! more happy, happy love
!

Forever warm and still to be enjoyed,

Forever panting, and forever young;

All breathing human passion far above,

That leaves a heart high-sorrowful and cloyed, 30
A burning forehead, and a parching
g tongue.

3. Symbols of victory, such as banners, hung in 4. Temple and Arcady (or Arcadia), in Greece, are religious shrines.
traditional symbols of perfect pastoral landscapes.

To AUTUMN / 939

4

Who are these coming to the sacrifice?

To what green altar, O mysterious priest,

Lead'st thou that heifer lowing at the skies,

And all her silken flanks with garlands dressed?

35 What little town by river or sea shore,

Or mountain-built with peaceful citadel,

Is emptied of this folk, this pious morn?
And, little town, thy streets forevermore
Will silent be; and not a soul to tell 40 Why thou art desolate, can e'er return.

5

O Attic⁵ shape! Fair attitude! with brede^o woven pattern
Of marble men and maidens overwrought,
With forest branches and the trodden weed;
Thou, silent form, dost tease us out of thought 45 As doth eternity: Cold Pastoral!

When old age shall this generation waste,
Thou shalt remain, in midst of other woe
Than ours, a friend to man, to whom thou say'st,
"Beauty is truth, truth beauty,"⁶—that is all 50 Ye know on earth, and all ye need to know.

May 1819 1820

To Autumn

i

Season of mists and mellow fruitfulness,
Close bosom-friend of the maturing sun;
Conspiring with him how to load and bless
With fruit the vines that round the thatch-eaves run;
5 To bend with apples the mossed cottage-trees,
And fill all fruit with ripeness to the core;
To swell the gourd, and plump the hazel shells
With a sweet kernel; to set budding more,
And still more, later flowers for the bees,
io Until they think warm days will never cease,

For Summer has o'er-brimmed their clammy cells.

2

Who hath not seen thee oft amid thy store?

Sometimes whoever seeks abroad may find

Thee sitting careless on a granary floor,

15 Thy hair soft-lifted by the winnowing⁷ wind;

5. Greek, especially Athenian.

to ascribe only this phrase to the voice of the urn;

6. The quotation marks around this phrase are others ascribe to the urn the whole of the two con-

absent from some other versions also having good cluding lines.

authority. This discrepancy has led some readers

7. Blowing the grain clear of the lighter chaff.

9 4 0 /

J O H N K E A T S

Or on a half-reaped furrow sound asleep,

Drowsed with the fume of poppies, while thy hook⁸

Spares the next swath and all its twined flowers:

And sometimes like a gleaner⁹ thou dost keep

20 Steady thy laden head across a brook;

Or by a cider-press, with patient look,

Thou watchest the last ooziings hours by hours.

3

Where are the songs of Spring? Aye, where are they?

Think not of them, thou hast thy music too—

25 While barred clouds bloom the soft-dying day,

And touch the stubble-plains with rosy hue;

Then in a wailful choir the small gnats mourn
Among the river shallows,⁰ borne aloft low-growing willows
Or sinking as the light wind lives or dies;
30 And full-grown lambs loud bleat from hilly bourn;⁰ field
Hedge crickets sing; and now with treble soft
The redbreast whistles from a garden-croft;¹
And gathering swallows twitter in the skies.

September 19, 1819 1820

Bright Star

Bright star, would I were steadfast as thou art—
Not in lone splendor hung aloft the night
And watching, with eternal lids apart,
Like nature's patient, sleepless Eremite,⁰ hermit; devotee
5 The moving waters at their priestlike task
Of pure ablution² round earth's human shores,
Or gazing on the new soft fallen mask
Of snow upon the mountains and the moors—
No—yet still steadfast, still unchangeable, io Pillowed upon my fair love's ripening breast,
To feel forever its soft fall and swell,
Awake forever in a sweet unrest,
Still, still to hear her tender-taken breath,
And so live ever—or else swoon to death.

1819 1838

This Living Hand³

This living hand, now warm and capable
Of earnest grasping, would, if it were cold

8. Small, curved blade for cutting grain; sickle.
house.

9. Someone who gathers up ears of corn after

2. W a s h i n g as part of a religious ritual.
reapers have passed.

3. Written on a manuscript page of Keats's unfin-

1. Small field, as for a vegetable garden, near a ished poem, "The C a p and Bells."

T H E R H O D O R A / 9 4 1

And in the icy silence of the tomb,

So haunt thy days and chill thy dreaming nights

5 That thou wouldst wish thine own heart dry of blood

So in my veins red life might stream again,

And thou be conscience-calmed—see here it is—

I hold it towards you.

1819? 1898

R A L P H W A L D O E M E R S O N

1803-1882

Concord Hymn

Sung at the Completion of the Battle Monument July 4, 1837

By the rude^o bridge that arched the flood, roughly made

Their flag to April's breeze unfurled,

Here once the embattled farmers stood

And fired the shot heard round the world.

5 The foe long since in silence slept;

Alike the conqueror silent sleeps;

And Time the ruined bridge has swept

Down the dark stream which seaward creeps.

On this green bank, by this soft stream,
io We set to-day a votive⁰ stone; offered in gratitude
That memory may their deed redeem,
When, like our sires, our sons are gone.
Spirit, that made those heroes dare
To die, and leave their children free,
15 Bid Time and Nature gently spare
The shaft we raise to them and thee.
1837, 1876

The Rhodora²

On Being Asked, Whence Is the Flower?

In May, when sea-winds pierced our solitudes,
I found the fresh Rhodora in the woods,
Spreading its leafless blooms in a damp nook,
To please the desert and the sluggish brook.
5 The purple petals, fallen in the pool,
Made the black water with their beauty gay;

1. C o m m e m o r a t i n g the battles of Lexington and 2. An azalea native to the northeastern United Concord, April 19, 1775. States.

9 4 2 / R A L P H W A L D O E M E R S O N

Here might the red-bird come his plumes to cool,
And court the flower that cheapens his array.

Rhodora! if the sages ask thee why

10 This charm is wasted on the earth and sky,
Tell them, dear, that if eyes were made for seeing,
Then Beauty is its own excuse for being:
Why thou wert there, O rival of the rose!
I never thought to ask, I never knew;

15 But, in my simple ignorance, suppose
The self-same Power that brought me there brought you.

1834 1839, 1847

The Snow-Storm

Announced by all the trumpets of the sky,
Arrives the snow, and, driving o'er the fields,
Seems nowhere to alight: the whited air
Hides hills and woods, the river, and the heaven,
5 And veils the farmhouse at the garden's end.

The sled and traveler stopped, the courier's feet
Delayed, all friends shut out, the housemates sit Around the radiant fireplace, enclosed
In a tumultuous privacy of storm.

io Come see the north wind's masonry.

Out of an unseen quarry evermore

Furnished with tile, the fierce artificer

Curves his white bastions with projected roof

Round every windward stake, or tree, or door.

15 Speeding, the myriad-handed, his wild work

So fanciful, so savage, nought cares he

For number or proportion. Mockingly,

On coop or kennel he hangs Parian³ wreaths;

A swan-like form invests the hidden thorn;

20 Fills up the farmer's lane from wall to wall,

Maugre⁰ the farmer's sighs; and, at the gate, in spite of

A tapering turret overtops the work.

And when his hours are numbered, and the world

Is all his own, retiring, as he were not,

25 Leaves, when the sun appears, astonished Art
To mimic in slow structures, stone by stone,
Built in an age, the mad wind's night-work,
The frolic architecture of the snow.

1841, 1847

3. I.e., like the fine white marble from the Greek island of Paros.

O D E / 9 4 3

Ode

*Inscribed to W. H. Channing*⁴

Though loath to grieve
The evil time's sole patriot,
I cannot leave

My honied thought

5 For the priest's cant,
Or statesman's rant.

If I refuse

My study for their politique,
Which at the best is trick,

10 The a n g r y Muse^o source of inspiration

Puts confusion in my brain.

But who is he that prates
Of the culture of mankind,
Of better arts and life?

15 Go, blindworm, go,

Behold the famous States
Harrying Mexico

With rifle and with knife!⁵

Or who, with accent bolder,
20 Dare praise the freedom-loving mountaineer?
 I found by thee, O rushing Contoocook!⁶
 And in thy valleys, Agiochook!⁷
 The jackals of the negro-holder.
 The God who made New Hampshire
25 Taunted the lofty land
 With little men;—
 Small bat and wren
 House in the oak:—
 If earth-fire cleave
30 The upheaved land, and bury the folk,
 The southern crocodile would grieve.
 Virtue palter;⁰ Right is hence; hesitates, equivocates
 Freedom praised, but hid;
 Funeral eloquence
35 Rattles the coffin-lid.

4. William H e n r y C h a n n i n g (1 8 1 0 - 1 8 8 4) , Amer-among those Americans who believed the United ican clergyman and abolitionist, who urged Emer-States was engaged in an immoral, imperialist son to involve himself more actively in the enterprise that would extend slaveholding territory.
 antislavery movement.

6. Part of the Merrimack River in N e w H a m p -
 5. A reference to the war between the United shire.

States and Mexico (1 8 4 6 - 4 8) , chiefly over the

7. The White Mountains of New Hampshire.

question of the boundaries of Texas. Emerson was

944 / R A L P H W A L D O E M E R S O N

What boots thy zeal, profits

O glowing friend,

That would indignant rend

The northland from the south?

40 Wherefore? to what good end?

Boston Bay and Bunker Hill⁸

Would serve things still;—

Things are of the snake.

The horseman serves the horse,

45 The neatherd⁰ serves the neat,^o cowherd / cow

The merchant serves the purse,

The eater serves his meat;

‘Tis the day of the chattel,

Web to weave, and corn to grind;

50 Things are in the saddle,

And ride mankind.

There are two laws discrete,

Not reconciled,—

Law for man, and law for things;

55 The last builds town and fleet,

But it runs wild,

And doth the man unking.

‘Tis fit the forest fall,

The steep be graded,

60 The mountain tunnelled,

The sand shaded,
The orchard planted,
The glebe tilled, plot of land
The prairie granted,
65 The steamer built.
Let man serve law for man;
Live for friendship, live for love,
For truth's and harmony's behoof; benefit
The state may follow how it can,
70 As Olympus follows Jove.⁹

Yet do not I implore
The wrinkled shopman to my surrounding woods,
Nor bid the unwilling senator
Ask votes of thrushes in the solitudes.

75 Every one to his chosen work;—
Foolish hands may mix and mar;

8. Hill in Charlestown, Massachusetts, site of the that helped provoke the Revolutionary War.

first major battle of the American Revolutionary

9. Or Jupiter, chief of the Roman gods (Greek

War, on June 17, 1775. Boston Bay: site of the Bos-Zeus), who lived on Mt. Olympus.

ton Tea Party, on December 16, 1773, an incident

B R A H M A / 9 4 5

Wise and sure the issues are.

Round they roll till dark is light,

Sex to sex, and even to odd;—

so The over-god

Who marries Right to Might,
Who peoples, unpeoples,—
He who exterminates
Races by stronger races,
85 Black by white faces,—
Knows to bring honey
Out of the lion;1
Grafts gentlest scion
On pirate and Turk.
90 The Cossack eats Poland,2
Like stolen fruit;
Her last noble is ruined,
Her last poet mute:
Straight, into double band
95 The victors divide;
Half for freedom strike and stand;—
The astonished Muse finds thousands at her side.

1847

Intellect³

Rule which by obeying grows
Knowledge not its fountain knows
Wave removing whom it bears
From the shores which he compares 5 Adding wings thro^o things to range through Makes him to his own blood strange

1851 1903

Brahma⁴

If the red slayer think he slays,

Or if the slain think he is slain,
They know not well the subtle ways
I keep, and pass, and turn again.

1. Lines 83—87 allude to Samson, who killed a lion (96) in 1846.

and returned later to find the carcass filled with

3. An untitled notebook entry of Emerson's; the honey G u ^ g e s 1 4 . 5 - 1 0) .

title was added posthumously in 1903.

2. Russian military despotism, established in

4. The supreme god of H i n d u mythology; in later Poland after the popular insurrections of 1830—31, theological developments, the divine reality, once was challenged by a new Polish uprising (lines 94—thought to comprehend the entire universe.

9 4 6 / R A L P H W A L D O E M E R S O N

5 Far or forgot to me is near;
Shadow and sunlight are the same;
The vanished gods to me appear;
And one to me are shame and fame.
They reckon ill who leave me out;
10 When me they fly, I am the wings;
I am the doubter and the doubt,
And I the hymn the Brahmin sings.
The strong gods pine for my abode,
And pine in vain the sacred Seven,⁵
15 But thou, meek lover of the good!
Find me, and turn thy back on heaven.

1856 1 8 5 7 , 1 8 6 7

Days

Daughters of Time, the hypocritic Days,
Muffled and dumb like barefoot dervishes,⁰ whirling dancers
And marching single in an endless file,
Bring diadems and fagots⁶ in their hands.
5 To each they offer gifts after his will,
Bread, kingdom, stars, and sky that holds them all.
I, in my pleached⁷ garden, watched the pomp,
Forgot my morning wishes, hastily Took a few herbs and apples, and the Day
io Turned and departed silent. I, too late,
Under her solemn fillet⁰ saw the scorn. hair hand

1857, 1867

Fate

Her planted eye to-day controls,
Is in the morrow most at home,
And sternly calls to being souls
That curse her when they come.

1867

5. Perhaps the seven saints high in the Brahman 6. Bundles of sticks. Diadems: crowns, hierarchy but lesser than Brahma. 7. Entwined or plaited.

9 4 7

ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING

1 8 0 6 - 1 8 6 1

From Sonnets from the Portuguese¹

I

I thought once how Theocritus had sung²

Of the sweet years, the dear and wished-for years,
Who each one in a gracious hand appears
To bear a gift for mortals, old or young:
5 And, as I mused it in his antique tongue,
I saw, in gradual vision through my tears,
The sweet, sad years, the melancholy years,
Those of my own life, who by turns had flung
A shadow across me. Straightway I was ware,
10 So weeping, how a mystic Shape did move
Behind me, and drew me backward by the hair;³
And a voice said in mastery, while I strove,— “Guess now who holds thee?”—“Death,” I said. But, there,
The silver answer rang,—“Not Death, but Love.”

43

How do I love thee? Let me count the ways.
I love thee to the depth and breadth and height
My soul can reach, when feeling out of sight
For the ends of Being and ideal Grace.
5 I love thee to the level of everyday's
Most quiet need, by sun and candle-light.
I love thee freely, as men strive for Right;
I love thee purely, as they turn from Praise.
I love thee with the passion put to use
10 In my old griefs, and with my childhood's faith.
I love thee with a love I seemed to lose
With my lost saints—I love thee with the breath,
Smiles, tears, of all my life!—and, if God choose,
I shall but love thee better after death.

1845-46 1850

1. The “Sonnets from the Portuguese” were written by Elizabeth Barrett Browning, who has brought Adonis back from the underworld, who have brought Adonis back from the ten between 1845, when Elizabeth Barrett met Robert Browning (1812 - 1889 ; see pp. 1009 - 41), slowest of all the Blessed Ones; but their coming and 1846, when they were married. An earlier poem, “Catrina to Camoens,” in which Barrett had all men.”

assumed the persona of the girl who was loved by

3. In book 1 of the Iliad, just as Achilles is drawing the sixteenth-century Portuguese poet Camoens, his sword to raise it against his leader, Agamemnon, the goddess Athena, standing behind him and suggested the lightly disguising title when the sonnets were published in 1850.

hence invisible to the others, catches him by his

2. In Idyll 15 of Theocritus, the Greek pastoral hair to warn him.

poet of the third century B.C.E., a singer describes

948 / ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING

From Aurora Leigh

From Book 5

[POETS AND THE PRESENT AGE]

* * *

The critics say that epics have died out

140 With Agamemnon and the goat-nursed gods;⁴
I'll not believe it. I could never deem,
As Payne Knight⁵ did (the mythic mountaineer
Who travelled higher than he was born to live,
And showed sometimes the goitre⁶ in his throat
145 Discoursing of an image seen through fog),
That Homer's heroes measured twelve feet high.
They were but men:—his Helen's⁷ hair turned gray
Like any plain Miss Smith's who wears a front;⁸
And Hector's infant whimpered at a plume⁹
150 As yours last Friday at a turkey-cock.
All actual heroes are essential men,
And all men possible heroes: every age,
Heroic in proportions, double-faced,
Looks backward and before, expects a morn
155 And claims an epos.⁰ epic poem-
Ay, but every age
Appears to souls who live i n ' t (ask Carlyle)¹
Most unheroic. Ours, for instance, ours:
The thinkers scout it, and the poets abound
Who scorn to touch it with a finger-tip:
160 A pewter age,²—mixed metal, silver-washed;
An age of scum, spooned off the richer past,
An age of patches for old gabardines,³
An age of mere transition,⁴ meaning nought Except that what succeeds must shame it quite 165 If God please. That's wrong thinking, to my mind,
And wrong thoughts make poor poems.

Every age,
Through being beheld too close, is ill-discerned
By those who have not lived past it. We'll suppose
4. References to Greek mythological figures: Zeus, ened by the crest on his father's helmet that he king of the gods, had been nursed by a goat; Aga-clings to his nurse and cries.

memnon, a chieftain, returned from the Trojan

1. In On Heroes, Hero-Worship, and the Heroic in War and was murdered by his wife, Clytemnestra.

History (1841), the Scottish historian and essayist

5. Richard Payne Knight (1750-1824), a classical Thomas Carlyle (1795-1881) called for a renewed philologist, argued that not all of the Elgin Mar-interest in heroism.

bles—sculptures and architectural details brought

2. I.e., a debased time; refers to the practice, inito England from the Parthenon by Lord Elgin—tiated by the Greek poet Hesiod (first century were Greek.

B.C.E.), of assigning the names of increasingly less

6. An enlargement of the thyroid gland, sympto-valuable metals to increasingly less elevated peri-matic of a disease often caught in mountainous ods in history, such as the Golden Age, the Silver regions and due to a lack of iodine in the water supply.
Age, and the Bronze Age.

3. Coats or other garments made of gabardine;

7. Helen of Troy, the legendary beauty whose also, the smocks of English laborers.

abduction led to the Trojan War.

4. "An age of transition" is a quotation from The

8. A hairpiece worn by women over the forehead.

Spirit of the Age (1831), by the English philosopher

9. In book 6 of the Iliad, when the warrior Hector and economist John Stuart Mill (1806-1873).

attempts to hold his infant son, the boy is so fright-

A U R O R A L E I G H / 9 4 9

Mount Athos carved, as Alexander schemed,

170 To some colossal statue of a man.⁵

The peasants, gathering brushwood in his ear,

Had guessed as little as the browsing goats

Of form or feature of humanity

Up there,—in fact, had traveled five miles off

175 Or ere the giant image broke on them,

Full human profile, nose and chin distinct,

Mouth, muttering rhythms of silence up the sky

And fed at evening with the blood of suns;

Grand torso,—hand, that flung perpetually

iso The largesse⁰ of a silver river down bounty

To all the country pastures. Tis even thus

With times we live in,—evermore too great

To be apprehended near.

But poets should

Exert a double vision; should have eyes

i85 To see near things as comprehensively
As if afar they took their point of sight,
And distant things as intimately deep
As if they touched them. Let us strive for this.
I do distrust the poet who discerns
190 No character or glory in his times,
And trundles back his soul five hundred years,
Past moat and drawbridge, into a castle-court,
To sing—oh, not of lizard or of toad
Alive i' the ditch there,—'twere excusable,
195 But of some black chief, half knight, half sheep-lifter,
Some beauteous dame, half chattel and half queen,
As dead as must be, for the greater part,
The poems made on their chivalric bones;
And that's no wonder: death inherits death.
200 Nay, if there's room for poets in this world
A little overgrown (I think there is),
Their sole work is to represent the age,
Their age, not Charlemagne's,⁶—this live, throbbing age,
That brawls, cheats, maddens, calculates, aspires,
205 And spends more passion, more heroic heat,
Betwixt the mirrors of its drawing-rooms,
Than Roland⁷ with his knights at Roncesvalles.
To flinch from modern varnish, coat or flounce,
Cry out for togas and the picturesque,
210 Is fatal,—foolish too. King Arthur's self
Was commonplace to Lady Guenever;
And Camelot to minstrels seemed as flat

As Fleet Street⁸ to our poets.

5. According to legend, Alexander the Great con-

6. Charles the Great, or Charles I (742-814), a sidered a proposal by the sculptor Dionocrates to Frankish king and the ruler of a European empire.

carve Mt. Athos into the statue of a conqueror. In

7. Hero of the medieval French epic Chanson de his left hand this massive figure would have held a Roland.

city, while in his right hand he would have held a

8. Street in London, center of the London news-basin to catch the waters of the region and to irri-paper- and book-publishing district.

gate the pastures below.

9 5 0 / E L I Z A B E T H B A R R E T T B R O W N I N G

Never flinch,

But still, unscrupulously epic, catch

215 Upon the burning lava of a song

The full-veined, heaving, double-breasted Age:

That, when the next shall come, the men of that

May touch the impress with reverent hand, and say

“Behold,—behold the paps^o we all have sucked! breasts

220 This bosom seems to beat still, or at least

It sets ours beating: this is living art,

Which thus presents and thus records true life.”

* * *

1853-56 1857

A Musical Instrument

What was he doing, the great god Pan,⁹
Down in the reeds by the river?
Spreading ruin and scattering ban,^o baleful influence
Splashing and paddling with hoofs of a goat,
5 And breaking the golden lilies afloat
With the dragonfly on the river.
He tore out a reed, the great god Pan,
From the deep cool bed of the river;
The limpid water turbidly ran,
io And the broken lilies a-dying lay,
And the dragonfly had fled away,
Ere he brought it out of the river.
High on the shore sat the great god Pan
While turbidly flowed the river;
15 And hacked and hewed as a great god can,
With his hard bleak steel at the patient reed,
Till there was not a sign of the leaf indeed
To prove it fresh from the river.
He cut it short, did the great god Pan
20 (How tall it stood in the river!),
Then drew the pith, like the heart of a man,
Steadily from the outside ring,
And notched the poor dry empty thing
In holes, as he sat by the river.

9. In Greek mythology, god of pastures, flocks, was the nymph, or minor nature goddess, Syrinx,
and shepherds, in shape half goat and half h u m a n .
who tried to escape him and sought help from the

He played the reed flute, and later pastoral poets river nymphs. They turned her into a reed bed, and made him the patron of their art. O n e of his loves from a reed Pan made his flute.

E V A N G E L I N E / 9 5 1

25 “This is the way,” laughed the great god Pan (Laughed while he sat by the river),

“The only way, since gods began
To make sweet music, they could succeed.”

Then, dropping his mouth to a hole in the reed,

30 He blew in power by the river.

Sweet, sweet, sweet, O Pan!

Piercing sweet by the river!

Blinding sweet, O great god Pan!

The sun on the hill forgot to die,

35 And the lilies revived, and the dragonfly

Came back to dream on the river.

Yet half a beast is the great god Pan,

To laugh as he sits by the river,

Making a poet out of a man;

40 The true gods sigh for the cost and pain—

For the reed which grows nevermore again

As a reed with the reeds in the river.

1860 1862

H E N R Y W A D S W O R T H L O N G F E L L O W

1807-1882

*From Evangeline*1

This is the forest primeval. The murmuring pines and the hemlocks,

Bearded with moss, and in garments green, indistinct in the twilight,

Stand like Druids of eld,² with voices sad and prophetic,

Stand like harpers hoar,³ with beards that rest on their bosoms.

5 Loud from its rocky caverns, the deep-voiced neighbouring ocean

Speaks, and in accents disconsolate answers the wail of the forest.

This is the forest primeval; but where are the hearts that beneath it

Leaped like the roe, when he hears in the woodland the voice of the hunter?

Where is the thatch-roofed village, the home of Acadian farmers,—

io Men whose lives glided on like rivers that water the woodlands,

1. Some introductory verses to a long poem, a tale of French inhabitants who refused to take an oath of allegiance were shipped off; about three thousand were deported in 1755, like those of the village of Grand Pre. The poem is credited with having pro-visited), a region often called Acadia or Acadie,

2. Old. Druids: members of a prophetic priesthood which France ceded to Great Britain in 1713.

in ancient Gaul, Britain, and Ireland.

When the French and Indian War broke out, the

3. Ancient harpists.

952 / HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW

Darkened by shadows of earth, but reflecting an image of heaven?

Waste are those pleasant farms, and the farmers forever departed!

Scattered like dust and leaves, when the mighty blasts of October

Seize them, and whirl them aloft, and sprinkle them far o'er the ocean.

15 Naught but tradition remains of the beautiful village of Grand-Pre.

1847

The Jewish Cemetery at Newport⁴

How strange it seems! These Hebrews in their graves,

Close by the street of this fair seaport town,

Silent beside the never-silent waves,

At rest in all this moving up and down!

5 The trees are white with dust, that o'er their sleep

Wave their broad curtains in the southwind's breath,

While underneath these leafy tents they keep

The long, mysterious Exodus⁵ of Death.

And these sepulchral stones, so old and brown,

io That pave with level flags their burial-place,

Seem like the tablets of the Law, thrown down
 And broken by Moses at the mountain's base.⁶
 The very names recorded here are strange,
 Of foreign accent, and of different climes;
 15 Alvares and Rivera⁷ interchange
 With Abraham and Jacob of old times.
 "Blessed be God! for he created Death!"
 The mourners said, "and Death is rest and peace;"
 Then added, in the certainty of faith,
 20 "And giveth Life that nevermore shall cease."
 Closed are the portals of their Synagogue,
 No Psalms of David now the silence break,
 No Rabbi reads the ancient Decalogue⁸ Ten Commandments
 In the grand dialect the Prophets spake.
 25 Gone are the living, but the dead remain,
 And not neglected; for a hand unseen,
 Scattering its bounty, like a summer rain,
 Still keeps their graves and their remembrance green.
 4. T h e oldest synagogue in the United States is in elites, broke the tablets of the law that God had Newport, Rhode Island.
 given t h e m (see Exodus 32.19).
 5. T h e flight of Moses and the Israelites from
 7. Many of the early Jewish families in New Egypt.
 England were from Spain and Portugal.
 6. Moses, angered by the disobedience of the Isra-

THE JEWISH CEMETERY AT NEWPORT / 9 53

How came they here? What burst of Christian hate, 30 What persecution, merciless and blind,
Drove o'er the sea—that desert desolate—
These Ishmaels and Hagers of mankind?⁸
They lived in narrow streets and lanes obscure,
Ghetto and Judenstrass,⁹ in mirk and mire;
35 Taught in the school of patience to endure
The life of anguish and the death of fire.
All their lives long, with the unleavened bread
And bitter herbs of exile and its fears,
The wasting famine of the heart they fed,
40 And slaked its thirst with marah¹ of their tears.
Anathema maranatha!² was the cry
That rang from town to town, from street to street;
At every gate the accursed Mordecai³
Was mocked and jeered, and spurned by Christian feet.
45 Pride and humiliation hand in hand
Walked with them through the world where'er they went;
Trampled and beaten were they as the sand,
And yet unshaken as the continent.
For in the background figures vague and vast 50 Of patriarchs and of prophets rose sublime,
And all the great traditions of the Past
They saw reflected in the coming time.
And thus forever with reverted look
The mystic volume of the world they read,

55 Spelling it backward, like a Hebrew book,⁴
Till life became a Legend of the Dead.

But ah! what once has been shall be no more!

The groaning earth in travail and in pain
Brings forth its races, but does not restore,
60 And the dead nations never rise again.

1852 1 8 5 4 , 1 8 5 8

8. Hagar, concubine of Abraham, wandered in the the Exodus.

desert with Ishmael, her son by Abraham, after she

2. A Greek-Aramaic phrase signifying a terrible was sent away by Abraham and Sarah (see Genesis curse, applied to those who “love not the Lord 21.9—21). In many countries, Jews faced legal Jesus Christ” (1 Corinthians 16.22), and later spe-restrictions as well as prejudice.

cifically to the Jews.

9. Street of Jews (German). Ghetto: originally, the

3. W h e n Haman, the favored advisor of Ahasusection of a city in which Jews were forced to live.

erus (Xerxes), king of Persia, sought to destroy

1. The Hebrew word for “bitter” or “bitterness,”

Mordecai and the rest of the Jews, Mordecai stood and the name of a bitter spring the fleeing Israel-

at the king’s gate crying out against the persecution ites found (Exodus 15.23). Salt water (symbolizing

(see Esther 3 - 4) .

tears), unleavened bread, and bitter herbs are all

4. Hebrew is read from right to left.

part of the Passover meal, which commemorates

954 / HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW

*From The Song of Hiawatha*⁵

From III. Hiawatha's Childhood

By the shores of Gitche Gumee, 6

65 By the shining Big-Sea-Water,

Stood the wigwam of Nokomis, 7

Daughter of the Moon, Nokomis.

Dark behind it rose the forest,

Rose the black and gloomy pine-trees,

70 Rose the firs with cones upon them;

Bright before it beat the water,

Beat the clear and sunny water,

Beat the shining Big-Sea-Water.

There the wrinkled old Nokomis

75 Nursed the little Hiawatha,

Rocked him in his linden cradle,

Bedded soft in moss and rushes,

Safely bound with reindeerskins;

Stilled his fretful wail by saying,

so "Hush! the Naked Bear⁸ will hear thee!"

Lulled him into slumber, singing,

"Ewa-yea!⁹ my little owl! lullaby

Who is this, that lights the wigwam?

With his great eyes lights the wigwam?

85 Ewa-yea! my little owl!"

Many things Nokomis taught him
 Of the stars that shine in heaven;
 Showed him Ishkoodah, O the comet, fire
 Ishkoodah, with fiery tresses;
 90 Showed the Death-Dance of the spirits, Warriors with their plumes and war-club s, Flaring far away to northward
 In the frosty nights of Winter;
 Showed the broad white road in heaven,
 95 Pathway of the ghosts, the shadows,
 Running straight across the heavens,
 Crowded with the ghosts, the shadows.
 At the door on summer evenings
 Sat the little Hiawatha;
 100 Heard the whispering of the pine-trees
 , Heard the lapping of the waters,
 Sounds of music, words of wonder;
 "Minne-wawa!" said the pine-trees,
 "Mudway-aushka!" said the water.

5. He Makes Rivers (Ojibwa); a Native American Nanabozho. Phenomenally popular during Long-cultural hero (fl. ca. 1440 or ca. 1550), perhaps a fellow's lifetime, Hiawatha employs the trochaic
 chief of the Mohawk tribe or the Onondaga tribe;
 tetrameter of the Finnish epic Kalevala.

he might also be a composite of several people.

6. Big Sea Water (Ojibwa); Lake Superior.

Longfellow added to the confusion about Hia-

7. Hiawatha's grandmother, who raises him upon watha's identity by giving the name to the title

the death of his mother, Wenonah.

character of this long poem, which actually

8. In Native American legend, equivalent to the recounts the legend of the Algonquian mythic hero
bogyman (or boogeyman).

THE SONG OF HIA WATHA / 955

io5 Saw the fire-fly, Wah-wah-taysee,

Flitting through the dusk of evening,

With the twinkle of its candle

Lighting up the brakes and bushes,

And he sang the song of children,

110 Sang the song Nokomis taught him:

“Wah-wah-taysee, little fire-fly,

Little, flitting, white-fire insect,

Little, dancing, white-fire creature,

Light me with your little candle,

ii5 Ere upon my bed I lay me,

Ere in sleep I close my eyelids!”

Saw the moon rise from the water

Rippling, rounding from the water,

Saw the flecks and shadows on it,

120 Whispered, “What is that, Nokomis?”

And the good Nokomis answered:

“Once a warrior, very angry,

Seized his grandmother, and threw her

Up into the sky at midnight;

125 Right against the moon he threw her;

‘Tis her body that you see there.”
Saw the rainbow in the heaven,
In the eastern sky, the rainbow,
Whispered, “What is that, Nokomis?”
130 And the good Nokomis answered:
” ‘T is the heaven of flowers you see there
All the wild-flowers of the forest,
All the lilies of the prairie,
When on earth they fade and perish,
135 Blossom in that heaven above us.”
When he heard the owls at midnight,
Hooting, laughing in the forest,
“What is that?” he cried in terror,
“What is that,” he said, “Nokomis?”
140 And the good Nokomis answered:
“That is but the owl and owlet,
Talking in their native language,
Talking, scolding at each other.”
Then the little Hiawatha
145 Learned of every bird its language,
Learned their names and all their secrets
How they built their nests in Summer,
Where they hid themselves in Winter,
Talked with them whene’er he met them,
150 Called them “Hiawatha’s Chickens.”
Of all beasts he learned the language,
Learned their names and all their secrets,
How the beavers built their lodges,

Where the squirrels hid their acorns,
155 How the reindeer ran so swiftly,
Why the rabbit was so timid,

9 5 6 / H E N R Y W A D S W O R T H L O N G F E L L O
W

Talked with them whene'er he met them,
Called them "Hiawatha's Brothers."

$

1855

Snow-Flakes

Out of the bosom of the Air,
Out of the cloud-folds of her garments shaken,
Over the woodlands brown and bare,
Over the harvest-fields forsaken,
5 Silent, and soft, and slow
Descends the snow.

Even as our cloudy fancies take Suddenly shape in some divine expression, Even as the troubled heart doth make io In the white countenance confession,
The troubled sky reveals
The grief it feels.

This is the poem of the air,
Slowly in silent syllables recorded;
15 This is the secret of despair,
Long in its cloudy bosom hoarded,
Now whispered and revealed
To wood and field.

1863

The Cross of Snow⁹

In the long, sleepless watches of the night,
A gentle face—the face of one long dead—
Looks at me from the wall, where round its head
The night-lamp casts a halo of pale light.
5 Here in this room she died; and soul more white Never through martyrdom of fire was led
To its repose; nor can in books be read
The legend of a life more benedight.⁰ blessed
There is a mountain in the distant West
io That, sun-defying, in its deep ravines Displays a cross of snow upon its side.
Such is the cross I wear upon my breast

9. Longfellow's second wife, Fanny, died in 1861 when her dress caught fire; he too was burned trying to save her. The poem was found in his portfolio after his death.

TELLING THE BEES / 957

These eighteen years, through all the changing scenes And seasons, changeless since the day she died.

1879 1886

JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER

1807-1892

Telling the Bees¹

Here is the place; right over the hill
Runs the path I took;
You can see the gap in the old wall still,
And the stepping-stones in the shallow brook.

5 There is the house, with the gate red-barred,
And the poplars tall;
And the barn's brown length, and the cattle-yard,
And the white hornstossing above the wall.
There are the beehives ranged in the sun;
io And down by the brink
Of the brook are her poor flowers, weed-o'er run, Pansy and daffodil, rose and pink.

A year has gone, as the tortoise goes,
Heavy and slow;

15 And the same rose blows, and the same sun
glows, And the same brook sings of a year ago.

There's the same sweet clover-smell in the breeze; And the June sun warm

Tangles his wings of fire in the trees,

20 Setting, as then, over Fernside farm.

I mind me how with a lover's care

From my Sunday coat

I brushed off the burrs, and smoothed my hair,

And cooked at the brookside my brow and throat.

25 Since we parted, a month had passed, —

To love, a year;

Down through the beeches I looked at last

On the little red gate and the well-sweep near.

1. Whittier's note explains the former custom in mourning to prevent them from leaving the rural New England of informing the bees of the hives for a new home,

death of a family member and dressing their hives

958 / JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER

I can see it all now,—the slantwise rain
30 Of light through the leaves,
The sundown's blaze on her window-pane,
The bloom of her roses under the eaves.
Just the same as a month before,—
The house and the trees,
35 The barn's brown gable, the vine by the door,—
Nothing changed but the hives of bees.
Before them, under the garden wall,
Forward and back,
Went drearily singing the chore-girl small,
40 Draping each hive with a shred of black.
Trembling, I listened: the summer sun
Had the chill of snow;
For I knew she was telling the bees of one
Gone on the journey we all must go!
45 Then I said to myself, "My Mary weeps
For the dead to-day:
Haply her blind old grandsire sleeps
The fret and the pain of his age away."
But her dog whined low; on the doorway sill,
50 With his cane to his chin,
The old man sat; and the chore-girl still Sang to the bees stealing out and in.
And the song she was singing ever since
In my ear sounds on:— 55 "Stay at home, pretty bees, fly not hence!
Mistress Mary is dead and gone!"

1858

From Snowbound: A Winter Idyl

155 Shut in from all the world without

We sat the clean-winged hearth about,

Content to let the north-wind roar

In baffled rage at pane and door,

While the red logs before us beat

160 The frost-line back with tropic heat;

And ever, when a louder blast

Shook beam and rafter as it passed,

The merrier up its roaring draught

The great throat of the chimney laughed,

165 The house-dog on his paws outspread

S N O W B O U N D : A W I N T E R I D Y L / 9 5 9

L a i d t o t h e f i r e h i s d r o w s y h e a d ,

T h e c a t ' s d a r k s i l h o u e t t e o n t h e w a l l

A c o u c h a n t 2 t i g e r ' s s e e m e d t o f a l l ;

A n d , f o r t h e w i n t e r f i r e s i d e m e e t ,

170 B e t w e e n t h e a n d i r o n s ' s t r a d d l i n g f e e t ,

T h e m u g o f c i d e r s s i m m e r e d s l o w ,

T h e a p p l e s s p u t t e r e d i n a r o w ,

A n d , c l o s e a t h a n d , t h e b a s k e t s t o o d

W i t h n u t s f r o m b r o w n O c t o b e r ' s w o o d .

175 W h a t m a t t e r h o w t h e n i g h t b e h a v e d ?

W h a t m a t t e r h o w t h e n o r t h - w i n d r a v e d ?

B l o w h i g h , b l o w l o w , n o t a l l i t s s n o w

C o u l d q u e n c h o u r h e a r t h - f i r e ' s r u d d y g l o
w .

O T i m e a n d C h a n g e ! — w i t h h a i r a s g r a y

iso As w a s my sire's that w i n t e r day,
H o w s t r a n g e i t s e e m s , w i t h s o m u c h g o n e
O f l i f e a n d l o v e , t o s t i l l l i v e o n !
A h , b r o t h e r ! o n l y I a n d t h o u
A r e l e f t o f a l l t h a t c i r c l e n o w , —
185 T h e d e a r h o m e f a c e s w h e r e u p o n
T h a t f i t f u l f i r e l i g h t p a l e d a n d s h o n e .
H e n c e f o r w a r d , l i s t e n a s w e w i l l ,
T h e v o i c e s o f t h a t t h e a r t h a r e s t i l l ;
L o o k w h e r e w e m a y , t h e w i d e e a r t h o ' e r , 190 T h o s e l i g h t e d f a c e s s m i l e n o m o r e .
W e t r e a d t h e p a t h s t h e i r f e e t h a v e w o r n ,
W e s i t b e n e a t h t h e i r o r c h a r d t r e e s ,
W e h e a r , l i k e t h e m , t h e h u m o f b e e s
A n d r u s t l e o f t h e b l a d e d c o r n ;
195 W e t u r n t h e p a g e s t h a t t h e y r e a d ,
T h e i r w r i t t e n w o r d s w e l i n g e r o ' e r ,
B u t i n t h e s u n t h e y c a s t n o s h a d e ,
N o v o i c e i s h e a r d , n o s i g n i s m a d e ,
N o s t e p i s o n t h e c o n s c i o u s f l o o r !
200 Y e t L o v e w i l l d r e a m , a n d f a i t h w i l l t r u s t , (
S i n c e H e w h o k n o w s o u r n e e d i s j u s t ,)
T h a t s o m e h o w , s o m e w h e r e , m e e t w e m u s t .
A l a s f o r h i m w h o n e v e r s e e s
T h e s t a r s s h i n e t h r o u g h h i s c y p r e s s - t r e e s !
205 W h o , h o p e l e s s , l a y s h i s d e a d a w a y ,
N o r l o o k s t o s e e t h e b r e a k i n g d a y
A c r o s s t h e m o u r n f u l m a r b l e s o p l a y !
gravestones

Who hath not learned, in hours of faith,
The truth to flesh and sense unknown,
210 That Life is ever lord of Death,
And Love can never lose its own!
We sped the time with stories old,
Wrought puzzles out, and riddle told,
Or stammered from our school-book lore

2. Lying down (term from heraldry).

960 / JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER

215 "The Chief of Gambia's golden shore."³

How often since, when all the land
Was clay in Slavery's shaping hand,
As if a trumpet called, I've heard
Dame Mercy Warren's rousing word:
220 "*Does not the voice of reason cry,
Claim the first right which Nature gave,
From the red scourge of bondage fly,
Nor deign to live a burdened slave!*"

Our father rode again his ride
225 On Memphremagog's⁴ wooded side;
Sat down again to moose and samp⁰ mush
In trapper's hut and Indian camp;
Lived o'er the old idyllic ease
Beneath St. Francois'⁵ hemlock-trees;
230 Again for him the moonlight shone
On Norman cap and bodiced zone;⁶
Again he heard the violin play
Which led the village dance away,

And mingled in its merry whirl
235 The grandam and the laughing girl.
Or, nearer home, our steps he led
Where Salisbury's⁷ level marshes spread Mile-wide as flies the laden bee;
Where merry mowers, hale and strong,
240 Swept, scythe on scythe, their swaths along
The low green prairies of the sea.
We shared the fishing off Boar's Head,
And round the rocky Isles of Shoals⁸
The hake-broil on the drift-wood coals;
245 The chowder on the sand-beach made,
Dipped by the hungry, steaming hot,
With spoons of clam-shell from the pot.
We heard the tales of witchcraft old,
And dream and sign and marvel told 250 To sleepy listeners as they lay Stretched idly on the salted hay,
Adrift along the winding shores,
When favoring breezes deigned to blow
The square sail of the gundelow⁰ flat-bottomed boat
255 And idle lay the useless oars.

1866

3. From the poem "The African Chief," by the magog.

American abolitionist Sarah W e n t w o r t h Morton

6. I.e., the clothes of women in French Canadian

(1 7 5 9 - 1 8 4 6) . Whittier mistakenly attributes the settlements: caps like those worn in Normandy and poem to the American historian Mercy Otis Warbodices that draw in the waist, or “zone.” ren (1 7 2 8 - 1 8 1 4) .

7. Town in northeastern Massachusetts.

4. Lake between Vermont and Q u e b e c .

8. Like Roar’s Head, off the New H a m p s h i r e

5. Rural municipality north of Lake M e m p h r e - coast.

9 6 1

E D W A R D F I T Z G E R A L D

1809-1883

The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam of Naishapur1

i

W a k e ! F o r t h e S u n , w h o s c a t t e r e d i n t o f l i g h t
T h e S t a r s b e f o r e h i m f r o m t h e F i e l d o f N i g h t , D r i v e s N i g h t a l o n g w i t h t h e m f r o m H e a v ‘ n , a n d s t r i k e s T h e S u l t a n ’ s T u r r e t w i t h a S h a f t o f L i g h t .

2

5 B e f o r e t h e p h a n t o m o f F a l s e m o r n i n g 2 d i e d , M e t h o u g h t a V o i c e w i t h i n t h e T a v e r n
c r i e d ,

” W h e n a l l t h e T e m p l e i s p r e p a r e d w i t h i n , “ W h y n o d s t h e d r o w s y W o r s h i p p e r o u t s i d e ? ”

3

A n d , a s t h e C o c k c r e w , t h o s e w h o s t o o d b e f o r e i o T h e T a v e r n s h o u t e d — ” O p e n t h e n t h e D o o r !

“ Y o u k n o w h o w l i t t l e w h i l e w e h a v e t o s t a y ,

“ A n d , o n c e d e p a r t e d , m a y r e t u r n n o m o r e . ”

4

N o w t h e N e w Y e a r ³ r e v i v i n g o l d D e s i r e s , T h e t h o u g h t f u l S o u l t o S o l i t u d e r e t i r e s , 15 W h e r e t h e W H I T E H A N D O F M O S E S o n t h e B o u g h
P u t s o u t , a n d J e s u s f r o m t h e G r o u n d s u s p i r e s . 4

5

I r a m ⁵ i n d e e d i s g o n e w i t h a l l h i s R o s e ,
A n d J a m s h y d ' s S e v ' n - r i n g e d C u p ⁶ w h e r e n o o n e k n o w s ; B u t s t i l l a R u b y k i n d l e s i n t h e V i n e , 20 A n d m a n y a G a r d e n b y t h e W a t e r b l o w s .

6

A n d D a v i d ' s l i p s a r e l o c k t ; b u t i n d i v i n e H i g h - p i p i n g P e h l e v i , ⁷ w i t h " W i n e ! W i n e ! W i n e !

1. Omar Khayyam (ca. 1050-1132?), Persian whiteness of Moses' hand as it is described in Exo-poet, mathematician, and astronomer, lived at Nidus 4.6, and the sweetness of flowers to the healing shapur, in the province of Khurasan. FitzGerald sweetness of Jesus' breath.

translated his epigrammatic quatrains (Rubaiyat,

5. "A royal Garden now sunk somewhere in the plural of ruba'i, quatrain), which he first published Sands of Arabia" [FitzGerald's note].

in 1859; in three subsequent editions (the fourth

6. In Persian mythology, Jamshyd was a king of edition is printed here), FitzGerald made many

the peris (celestial beings), who, because he had alterations of detail, arrangement, and number of boasted of his immortality, was compelled to live stanzas.

on Earth in human form for seven hundred years,

2. “A transient Light on the Horizon about an becoming one of the kings of Persia. His cup, the hour before the ... True Dawn” [FitzGerald’s invention of Kai-Kosru (line 38), another Persian note].

king, great-grandson of Kai-Kobad (line 36), was

3. “Beginning with the Vernal Equinox [i.e., decorated with signs enabling its possessor to fore-spring], it must be remembered” [FitzGerald’s tell the future. note].

7. The ancient literary language of Persia.

4. The blossoming of trees is compared to the

9 6 2 / E D W A R D F I T Z G E R A L D

“Red Wine!”—the Nightingale cries to the Rose

That sallow cheek of hers to incarnadine.0 *redde*n

7

25 Come, fill the Cup, and in the fire of Spring

Your Winter-garment of Repentance fling:

The Bird of Time has but a little way

To flutter—and the Bird is on the Wing.

8

Whether at Naishapur or Babylon,

30 Whether the Cup with sweet or bitter run,
The Wine of Life keeps oozing drop by drop,
The Leaves of Life keep falling one by one.

9

Each Morn a thousand Roses brings, you say;
Yes, but where leaves the Rose of Yesterday?

35 And this first Summer month that brings the Rose Shall take Jamshyd and Kaikobad away.

10

Well, let it take them! What have we to do
With Kaikobad the Great, or Kaikhosru?
Let Zal and Rustum⁸ bluster as they will,
40 Or Hatim⁹ call to Supper—heed not you.

11

With me along the strip of Herbage strown
That just divides the desert from the sown,
Where name of Slave and Sultan is forgot—
And Peace to Mahmud¹ on his golden Throne!

12

45 A Book of Verses underneath the Bough,
A Jug of Wine, a Loaf of Bread—and Thou
Beside me singing in the Wilderness—
Oh, Wilderness were Paradise enow!

3

Some for the Glories of This World; and some 50 Sigh for the Prophet's² Paradise to come;
Ah, take the Cash, and let the Credit go,
Nor heed the rumble of a distant Drum!

14

Look to the blowing Rose about us—“Lo, “Laughing,” she says, “into the world I blow,

8. “The ‘Hercules’ of Persia, and Zal his Father”

1. Sultan M a h m u d (9 7 1 - 1 0 3 1) of Ghazni, in [FitzGerald’s note].

Afghanistan, renowned both as ruler and as the

9. H a t i m Tai: a Persian chieftain and an archetype conqueror of India.

of Eastern hospitality.

2. I.e., M o h a m m e d ‘ s .

T H E R U B A I Y A T O F O M A R K H A Y Y A M O F N
A I S H A P I J R / 9 6 3

55 “At once the silken tassel of my Purse

“Tear, and its Treasure on the Garden throw.”

15

And those who husbanded the Golden grain,

And those who flung it to the winds like Rain,

Alike to no such aureate⁰ Earth are turned brilliant

60 As, buried once, Men want dug up again.

16

The Worldly Hope men set their Hearts upon

Turns Ashes—or it prospers; and anon,

Like Snow upon the Desert’s dusty Face,

Lighting a little hour or two—is gone.

17

65 Think, in this battered Caravanserai⁰ inn

Whose Portals are alternate Night and Day,

How Sultan after Sultan with his Pomp Abode his destined Hour, and went his way.

18

They say the Lion and the Lizard keep 70 The Courts where Jamshyd gloried and drank deep:
And Bahram,³ that great Hunter—the Wild Ass
Stamps o'er his Head, but cannot break his Sleep.

!9

I sometimes think that never blows so red
The Rose as where some buried Caesar bled;
75 That every Hyacinth the Garden wears Dropt in her Lap from some once lovely Head.

20

And this reviving Herb whose tender Green Fledges the river-lip on which we lean—
Ah, lean upon it lightly! for who knows so From what once lovely Lip it springs unseen!

21

Ah, my Beloved, fill the Cup that clears TODAY of past Regrets and future Fears:
Tomorrow! —Why, Tomorrow I may be Myself with Yesterday's Sev'n thousand Years.

22

85 For some we loved, the loveliest and the best
That from his Vintage rolling Time hath prest,
Have drunk their Cup a Round or two before,
And one by one crept silently to rest.

3. A Sassanian king who, according to legend, met his death while hunting a wild ass.

9 6 4 / E D W A R D F I T Z G E R A L D

87

And we, that make merry in the Room

90 They left, and Summer dresses in new bloom,

Ourselves must we beneath the Couch of Earth

Descend—ourselves to make a Couch—for whom?

24

Ah, make the most of what we yet may spend,

Before we too into the Dust descend;

95 Dust into Dust, and under Dust to lie,

Sans Wine, sans Song, sans Singer, and sans End!

25

Alike for those who for TODAY prepare,

And those that after some TOMORROW stare,

A Muezzin⁴ from the Tower of Darkness cries,

100 “Fools! your Reward is neither Here nor There.”

26

Why, all the Saints and Sages who discussed

Of the Two Worlds so wisely—they are thrust

Like foolish Prophets forth; their Words to Scorn

Are scattered, and their Mouths are stopt with Dust.

27

105 Myself when young did eagerly frequent

Doctor and Saint, and heard great argument

About it and about: but evermore

Came out by the same door where in I went.

28

With them the seed of Wisdom did I sow,
110 And with mine own hand wrought to make it grow;
And this was all the Harvest that I reaped—
“I came like Water, and like Wind I go.”

29

Into this Universe, and Why not knowing
Nor Whence, like Water willy-nilly flowing;
115 And out of it, as Wind along the Waste,
I know not Whither, willy-nilly blowing.

3°

What, without asking, hither hurried Whence?
And, without asking, Whither hurried hence!
Oh, many a Cup of this forbidden Wine⁵
120 Must drown the memory of that insolence!

4. The crier who calls the hours of prayer from the 5. Alcohol is forbidden to strict Muslims, tower of a mosque.

T H E R U B A I Y A T O F O M A R K H A Y Y A M O F N
A I S H A P I J R / 9 6 5

31

Up from Earth’s Center through the Seventh Gate
I rose, and on the Throne of Saturn⁶ sate,
And many a Knot unraveled by the Road;
But not the Master-knot of Human Fate.

32

125 There was the Door to which I found no Key;
There was the Veil through which I might not see:
Some little talk awhile of M E and T H E E
There was—and then no more of T H E E and M E .

33

Earth could not answer; nor the Seas that mourn
130 In flowing Purple, of their Lord forlorn;
Nor rolling Heaven, with all his Signs revealed
And hidden by the sleeve of Night and Morn.

34

Then of the T H E E I N M E who works behind
The Veil, I lifted up my hands to find 135 A lamp amid the Darkness; and I heard,
As from Without—"THE M E WITHIN T H E E BLIND!"

35

Then to the Lip of this poor earthen Urn
I leaned, the Secret of my Life to learn:
And Lip to Lip it murmured—"While you live,
140 "Drink! for, once dead, you never shall return."

36

I think the Vessel, that with fugitive Articulation answered, once did live,
And drink; and Ah! the passive Lip I kissed,
How many Kisses might it take—and give!

37

145 For I remember stopping by the way
To watch a Potter thumping his wet Clay:
And with its all-obliterated Tongue
It murmured—"Gently, Brother, gently, pray!"

38

And has not such a Story from of Old 150 Down Man's successive generations rolled

Of such a clod of saturated Earth

Cast by the Maker into Human mold?

6. “Lord of the Seventh Heaven” [FitzGerald’s note]. In ancient astronomy, Saturn was the most remote of the seven known planets; hence Omar had reached the bounds of astronomical knowledge.

966 / EDWARD FITZGERALD

39

And not a drop that from our Cups we throw
For Earth to drink of, but may steal below

155 To quench the fire of Anguish in some Eye
There hidden—far beneath, and long ago

.

40

As then the Tulip for her mornings up
Of Heav’nly Vintage from the soil looks up,
Do you devoutly do the like, till Heav’n

160 To Earth invert you—like an empty Cup

.

41

Perplex no more with Human or Divine,
Tomorrow’s tangle to the winds resign,
And lose your fingers in the tresses of
The Cypress-slender Minister of Wine. 7

42

165 And if the Wine you drink, the Lip you press,
End in what All begins and ends in—Yes;
Think then you are TODAY what YESTERDAY
You were—TOMORROW you shall not be less.

43

So when that Angel of the darker Drink

170 At last shall find you by the river-brink,
And, offering his Cup, invite your Soul Forth to your Lipstoquaff—-you shall not shrink.

44

Why, if the Soul can fling the Dust aside, A nd naked on the Air of Heaven ride,

175 Were 't not a Shame—were 't not a Sham e for him In this clay carcass crippled to ab ide?

45

Tis but a Tent where he takes his one day's rest
A Sultanto the realm of Death addrest;

The Sultan rises, and the dark Ferrash

180 Strikes, and prepares it for another Gu est.

46

And fear not lest Existence closing your A ccount, and mine, should know the like no m ore; The Eternal Sakf^o from that Bowl has po ured cupbearer

Millions of Bubbles like us, and will pour.

7. The maidservant who pours the wine.

8. The servant charged with setting up and striking the tent.

THE RUBAIYAT OF OMAR KHAYYAM OF N
AISHAPIJR/967

47

185 When You and I behind the Veil are past,

Oh, but the long, long while the World shall last,

Which of our Coming and Departure heeds

As the Sea's self should heed a pebble-cast.

48

A Moment's Halt—a momentary taste

190 Of B E I N G from the Well amid the Waste—

And Lo!—the phantom Caravan has reached

The NOTHING it set out from—Oh, make haste!

49

Would you that spangle of Existence spend

About THE SECRET—quick about it, Friend!

195 A Hair perhaps divides the False and True—

And upon what, prithee, may life depend?

5°

A Hair perhaps divides the False and True;

Yes; and a single Alif⁹ were the clue—

Could you but find it—to the Treasure-house,

200 And peradventure to T H E M A S T E R too; 51

Whose secret Presence, through Creation's veins

Running Quicksilver-like eludes your pains;

Taking all shapes from Mah to Mahi;¹ and

They change and perish all—but He remains;

52

205 A moment guessed—then back behind the Fold

Immerst of Darkness round the Drama rolled

Which, for the Pastime of Eternity,

He doth Himself contrive, enact, behold.

53

But if in vain, down on the stubborn floor

210 Of Earth, and up to Heav'n's unopening Door,

You gaze TODAY, while You are You—how then T O M O R R O W , Y O U when shall be You no more?

54

Waste not your Hour, nor in the vain pursuit

Of This and That endeavor and dispute;

215 Better be jocund⁰ with the fruitful Grape mirthful

Than sadden after none, or bitter, Fruit.

9. First letter of the Arabic alphabet, consisting of 1. From lowest to highest, a single vertical stroke.

9 6 8 / E D W A R D F I T Z G E R A L D

87

You know, my Friends, with what a brave Carouse

I made a Second Marriage in my house;

Divorced old barren Reason from my Bed,

220 And took the Daughter of the Vine to Spouse.

56

For “Is” and “IS-NOT” though with Rule and Line

And “UP-AND-DOWN” by Logic I define,

Of all that one should care to fathom, I

Was never deep in anything but—Wine.

57

225 Ah, but my Computations, People say,

Reduced the Year to better reckoning?²—Nay,

Tw^{as} only striking from the Calendar

Unborn Tomorrow, and dead Yesterday.

58

And lately, by the Tavern Door agape,

230 Came shining through the Dusk an Angel Shape

Bearing a Vessel on his Shoulder; and He bid me taste of it; and 'twas—the Grape!

59

The Grape that can with Logic absolute
The Two-and-Seventy jarring Sects³ confute:

235 The sovereign Alchemist that in a trice
Life's leaden metal into Gold transmute:

60

The mighty Mahmud, Allah-breathing Lord,⁴
That all the misbelieving and black Horde
Of Fears and Sorrows that infest the Soul
240 Scatters before him with his whirlwind Sword.

61

Why, be this Juice the growth of God, who dare
Blaspheme the twisted tendril as a Snare?
A Blessing, we should use it, should we not?
And if a Curse—why, then, Who set it there?

62

245 I must abjure the Balm of Life, I must,
Scared by some After-reckoning ta'en on trust,
Or lured with Hope of some Diviner Drink,
To fill the Cup—when crumbled into Dust!

2. Omar was one of the learned men who had split" [FitzGerald's note],

been charged with reforming the calendar.

4. "This alludes to Mahmud's Conquest of India

3. "The 72 sects into which Islamism so soon and its swarthy Idolators" [FitzGerald's note].

63

Oh threats of Hell and Hopes of Paradise!
One thing at least is certain— This Life flies;
One thing is certain and the rest is Lies;
The Flower that once has blown for ever dies.

64

Strange, is it not? that of the myriads who Before us passed the door of Darkness through,
Not one returns to tell us of the Road,
Which to discover we must travel too.

65

The Revelations of Devout and Learned
Who rose before us, and as Prophets burned,⁵
Are all but Stories, which, awoke from Sleep
They told their comrades, and to Sleep returned.

66

I sent my Soul through the Invisible,
Some letter of that Afterlife to spell:
And by and by my Soul returned to me,
And answered "I Myself am Heav'n and Hell:"

67

Heav'n but the Vision of fulfilled Desire,
And Hell the Shadow from a Soul on fire,
Cast on the Darkness into which Ourselves,
So late emerged from, shall so soon expire.
We are no other than a moving row

Of Magic Shadow-shapes that come and go Round with the Sun-illuminated Lantern held In Midnight by the Master of the Show;

69

But helpless Pieces of the Game He plays
Upon his Checkerboard of Nights and Days;
Hither and thither moves, and checks, and slays,
And one by one back in the Closet lays.

70

The Ball no question makes of Ayes and Noes,
But Here or There as strikes the Player⁰ goes; polo player
And He that tossed you down into the Field,
*He knows about it all—HE knows—HE knows!

5. I.e., felt inspired to spread their prophecies.

970 / E D W A R D F I T Z G E R A L D

71

The Moving Finger writes; and, having writ, Moves on: nor all your Piety nor Wit
Shall lure it back to cancel half a Line,
Nor all your Tears wash out a Word of it.

72

285 And that inverted Bowl they call the Sky, Whereunder crawling cooped we live and die,
Lift not your hands to It for help—for It
As impotently moves as you or I.

73

With Earth's first Clay They did the Last Man knead, 290 And there of the Last Harvest sowed the Seed:

And the first Morning of Creation wrote
What the Last Dawn of Reckoning shall read.

74

YESTERDAY This Day's Madness did prepare;
T O M O R R O W ' S Silence, Triumph, or Despair:
295 Drink! for you know not whence you came, nor why:
Drink! for you know not why you go, nor where.

75

I tell you this—When, started from the Goal,
Over the flaming shoulders of the Foal⁶
Of Heav'n, Parwfn and Mushtarf they flung, 300 In my predestined Plot of Dust and Soul.⁷

76

The Vine had struck a fiber: which about
If clings my Being—let the Dervish⁸ flout;
Of my Base metal may be filed a Key,
That shall unlock the Door he howls without.

77

305 And this I know: whether the one True Light Kindle to Love, or Wrath consume me quite,
One Flash of It within the Tavern caught
Better than in the Temple lost outright.

78

What! out of senseless Nothing to provoke 310 A conscious Something to resent the yoke
Of unpermitted Pleasure, under pain
Of Everlasting Penalties, if broke!

6. The constellation known as the Colt (Equuleus) and Mushtarf. “The Pleiads and Jupiter” [FitzGer-or Foal.

ald’s note].

7. Omar ascribes his fate to the position of the

8. Member of any of several Muslim orders taking stars and planets at the time of his birth. Parwin vows of austerity and poverty.

THERUBAIYATOFOMARKHAYYAMOFN
AISHAPIJR/971

79

What! from his helpless Creature be repaid
Pure Gold for what he lent him dross—allayed—
Bi5 Sue for a Debt he never did contract,
And cannot answer—Oh the sorry trade!

80

Oh Thou, who didst with pitfall and with gin0 trap Beset the Road I was to wander in,
Thou wilt not with Predestined Evil round
320 Enmesh, and then impute my Fall to Sin!

81

Oh Thou, who Man of baser Earth didst make,
And ev’n with Paradise devise the Snake:
For all the Sin wherewith the Face of Man
Is blackened—Man’s forgiveness give—and take!

82

325 As under cover of departing Day
Slunk hunger-stricken Ramazan9 away,
Once more within the Potter’s house alone

I stood, surrounded by the Shapes of Clay.

83

Shapes of all Sorts and Sizes, great and small, 330 That stood along the floor and by the wall;
And some loquacious Vessels were; and some Listened perhaps, but never talked at all.

84

Said one among them—“Surely not in vain
“My substance of the common Earth was ta’en 335 “And to this Figure molded, to be broke,
“Or trampled back to shapeless Earth again.”
Then said a Second—“Ne’er a peevish Boy
“Would break the Bowl from which he drank in joy;
“And He that with his hand the Vessel made 340 “Will surely not in after Wrath destroy.”

86

After a momentary silence spake
Some Vessel of a more ungainly Make;
“They sneer at me for leaning all awry:
“What! did the Hand then of the Potter shake?”

9. Muslims’ annual thirty-day fast, during which no food is eaten from dawn to sunset.

972 / EDWARD FITZGERALD

87

345 Whereat some one of the loquacious Lot—
I think a Sufi⁰ pipkin⁰—waxing hot— mystic/ small pot
“All this of Pot and Potter—Tell me then,
“Who is the Potter, pray, and who the Pot?”

88

“Why,” said another, “Some there are who tell 350 “Of one who threatens he will toss to Hell
“The luckless Pots he marred in making—Pish!
“He’s a Good Fellow, and ‘twill all be well.”

89

“Well,” murmured one, “Let whoso make or buy,
“My Clay with long Oblivion is gone dry:
355 “But fill me with the old familiar Juice, “Methinks I might recover by and by.”

90

So while the Vessels one by one were speaking,
The little Moon¹ looked in that all were seeking:
And then they jogged each other, “Brother! Brother!
360 “Now for the Porter’s shoulder-knot² a-creaking!”

91

Ah, with the Grape my fading Life provide,
And wash the Body whence the Life has died,
And lay men shrouded in the living Leaf,
By some not unfrequented Garden-side.

92

365 That ev’n my buried Ashes such a snare
Of Vintage shall fling up into the Air
As not a True-believer passing by
But shall be overtaken unaware.

93

Indeed the Idols I have loved so long 370 Have done my credit in this World much wrong:

Have drowned my Glory in a shallow Cup,
And sold my Reputation for a Song.

94

Indeed, indeed, Repentance oft before

I swore—but was I sober when I swore?

375 And then and then came Spring, and Rose-in-hand

My threadbare Penitence apieces tore.

1. The new moon, which signaled the end of 2. The knot on the porter's shoulder strap from Ramazan. which the wine jars were hung.

THERUBAIYATOFOMARKHAYYAMOFN
AISHAPIJR/973

95

And much as Wine has played the Infidel,

And robbed me of my Robe of Honor—Well,

I wonder often what the Vintners buy

380 One half so precious as the stuff they sell.

96

Yet Ah, that Spring should vanish with the Rose!

That Youth's sweet-scented manuscript should close!

The Nightingale that in the branches sang,

Ah whence, and whither flown again, who knows!

97

385 Would but the Desert of the Fountain yield

One glimpse—if dimly, yet indeed, revealed,

To which the fainting Traveler might spring,

As springs the trampled herbage of the field!

98

Would but some winged Angel ere too late

390 Arrest the yet unfolded Roll of Fate,
And make the stern Recorder otherwise
Enregister, or quite obliterate!

99

Ah Love! could you and I with Him conspire
To grasp this sorry Scheme of Things entire, 395 Would not we shatter it to bits—and then Remold it nearer to the Heart's Desire!

Yon rising Moon that looks for us again—
How oft hereafter will she wax and wane;
How oft hereafter rising look for us

400 Through this same Garden—and for one in vain!

101

And when like her, oh Saki, you shall pass
Among the Guests Star-scattered on the Grass,
And in your joyous errand reach the spot
Where I made One—turn down an empty Glass!

TAM A M 3

1857 1 8 5 9 , 1 8 7 9

3. It is ended (Persian).

9 7 4

O L I V E R W E N D E L L H O L M E S

1809-1894

The Chambered Nautilus¹

T h i s i s t h e s h i p o f p e a r l , w h i c h , p o e t s f e i g n
, S a i l s t h e u n s h a d o w e d m a i n , 0 s e a

T h e v e n t u r o u s b a r k t h a t f l i n g s

O n t h e s w e e t s u m m e r w i n d i t s p u r p l e d w i n g s 5 I n g u l f s e n c h a n t e d , w h e r e t h e S i r e n 2 s i n

gs, And coral reefs lie bare,
Where the cold sea-maids rise to sun their streaming hair.

Its webs of living gauze no more unfurl;

Wrecked is the ship of pearl!

io And every chambered cell,

Where its dim dreaming life was wont to dwell,
accustomed

As the frail tenant shaped his growing shell,
Before the elies revealed,

Its irised o' ceiling rent, its sunless crypt unsealed!
iridescent

15 Year after year he beheld the silent toil

That spread his lustrous coil;

Still, as the spiral grew,

He left the past year's dwelling for the new,
Sole with soft step its shining archway through,
20 Built up its idle door,

Stretched in his last-found home, and knew
w the old no more.

Thanks for the heavenly message brought by thee, Child of the wandering sea,

Cast from her lap, forlorn!

25 From the dead lips a clearer note is born

Than ever Triton blew from wreathed horn!

While on mine ear it rings,

Through the deep caves of thought I hear a voicethatsings: Build the more stately mansions, 4 O my soul, 30 As the swift seasons roll!

Leave thy low-vaulted past!

L e t e a c h n e w t e m p l e , n o b l e r t h a n t h e l a s t ,
S h u t t h e e f r o m h e a v e n w i t h a d o m e m o r e v a s t , T i l l t h o u a t l e n g t h a r t f r e e , 35 L e a v i n g t h i n e o u t g r o w n s h e l l b y l i f e ' s u n r e s t i n g s e a !

1858

1. A small mollusk with an external spiral shell, on the reef of her island.

pearly on the inside (lines 1, 9), that grows as

3. Greek demigod of the ocean, who blew on a sea chambers are added; the webbed membranes on conch. Cf. William Wordsworth, "The World Is its back were once thought to function as sails.

Too Much with Us," line 14 (p. 802).

2. In Greek mythology, a female creature whose

4. Cf. John 14.2: "In my Father's house are many magically sweet song drew sailors to their deaths mansions."

9 7 5

E D G A R A L L A N P O E

1809-1849

Sonnet—To Science

Science! true daughter of Old Time thou art!

Who alterest all things with thy peering eyes.

Why preyest thou thus upon the poet's heart,

Vulture, whose wings are dull realities?

5 How should he love thee? or how deem thee wise?

Who wouldst not leave him in his wandering

To seek for treasure in the jeweled skies,

Albeit he soared with an undaunted wing?
Hast thou not dragged Diana¹ from her car?
io And driven the Hamadryad² from the wood
To seek a shelter in some happier star?
Hast thou not torn the Naiad⁰ from her flood, nymph
The Elfin from the green grass, and from me
The summer dream beneath the tamarind tree?³

1829 1 8 2 9 , 1 8 4 5

To Helen⁴

Helen, thy beauty is to me
Like those Nicean barkss of yore,
That gently, o'er a perfumed sea,
The weary, way-worn wanderer bore
5 To his own native shore.
On desperate seas long wont⁰ to roam, accustomed.
Thy hyacinth hair,⁶ thy classic face,
Thy Naiad⁰ airs have brought me home nymphlike
To the glory that was Greece
io And the grandeur that was Rome.
Lo! in yon brilliant window-niche
How statue-like I see thee stand,
The agate lamp within thy hand!

1. Roman goddess of the hunt, revered for her

5. Boats, perhaps from some Mediterranean loca-chastity; her "car" is the moon.

tion; variously interpreted by Poe scholars.

2. W o o d nymph in Greek and Roman mythology,

6. In his story "Ligeia" (1838), Poe calls "the said to live and die with the tree she inhabits.

raven-black, the glossy, the luxuriant and naturally

3. An Asian tree, the fruit of which is used for curling tresses ... 'hyacinthine.' ” In Greek medicine and for food.

mythology, the blood of the slain youth Hyacin-

4. Helen of Troy, whose beauty was renowned and thus, w h o m the god Apollo loved, was changed into whose abduction led to the Trojan War.

a purple flower.

9 7 6 /

EDGAR ALLAN POE

Ah! Psyche,⁷ from the regions which 15 Are Holy Land!

1823 1 8 3 1 , 1 8 4 5

The City in the Sea

Lo! Death has reared himself a throne

In a strange city lying alone

Far down within the dim West,⁸

Where the good and the bad and the worst and the best

5 Have gone to their eternal rest.

There shrines and palaces and towers

(Time-eaten towers that tremble not!)

Resemble nothing that is ours.

Around, by lifting winds forgot,

io Resignedly beneath the sky

The melancholy waters lie.

No rays from the holy heaven come down

On the long night-time of that town;
But light from out the lurid sea
Streams up the turrets silently—
Gleams up the pinnacles far and free—
Up domes—up spires—up kingly halls—
Up f a n e s 0 — u p Babylon-like⁹ walls— temples, churches
Up shadowy long-forgotten bowers
Of sculptured ivy and stone flowers—
Up many and many a marvelous shrine
Whose wreathed friezes intertwine
The viol, the violet, and the vine.
Resignedly beneath the sky
The melancholy waters lie.
So blend the turrets and shadows there
That all seem pendulous in air,
While from a proud tower in the town
Death looks gigantically down.
There open fanes and gaping graves
Yawn level with the luminous waves;
But not the riches there that lie
In each idol's diamond eye—

7. In classical mythology, a beautiful princess, punitive task set by Venus was that Psyche bring whose n a m e means “soul” in Greek. Having lost her a portion of the beauty of Proserpina, queen her lover, Cupid, (Roman) god of erotic love, of the underworld.

because she disobeyed his order not to look at him

8. To “go west” is to die.

(he awakened w h e n a drop of hot oil from her lamp

9. Rabyron traditionally symbolizes the wicked city fell on him), Psyche appealed for help to his doomed (see, e.g., Isaiah 14.4—23 and Revelation mother, Venus, goddess of love and beauty. O n e

1 6 . 1 8 - 1 9) .

T H E R A V E N / 9 7 7

Not the gaily-jeweled dead

35 Tempt the waters from their bed;

For no ripples curl, alas!

Along that wilderness of glass—

No swellings tell that winds may be

Upon some far-off happier sea—

40 No heavings hint that winds have been

On seas less hideously serene.

But lo, a stir is in the air!

The wave—there is a movement there!

As if the towers had thrust aside,

45 In slightly sinking, the dull tide—

As if their tops had feebly given

A void within the filmy Heaven.

The waves have now a redder glow—

The hours are breathing faint and low—

50 And when, amid no earthly moans,

Down, down that town shall settle hence,

Hell, rising from a thousand thrones,

Shall do it reverence.

1831, 1845

The Raven¹

Once upon a midnight dreary, while I pondered, weak and weary,

Over many a quaint and curious volume of forgotten lore—

While I nodded, nearly napping, suddenly there came a tapping,

As of some one gently rapping, rapping at my chamber door.

5 ” ‘Tis some visiter,” I muttered, “tapping at my chamber door—

Only this and nothing more.”

Ah, distinctly I remember it was in the bleak December;

And each separate dying ember wrought its ghost upon the floor.

Eagerly I wished the morrow;—vainly I had sought to borrow

io From my books surcease of sorrow—sorrow for the lost Lenore—

For the rare and radiant maiden whom the angels name Lenore
—

Nameless here for evermore.

And the silken, sad, uncertain rustling of each purple curtain

Thrilled me—filled me with fantastic terrors never felt before;

15 So that now, to still the beating of my heart, I stood repeating

” ‘Tis some visiter entreating entrance at my chamber door—

Some late visiter entreating entrance at my chamber door;—

This it is and nothing more.”

1. Many slightly different texts of this poem exist; reprinted here is the version published in The Raven and Other Poems.

9 7 8 / E D G A R A L L A N P O E

Presently my soul grew stronger; hesitating then no longer,

20 “Sir,” said I, “or Madam, truly your forgiveness I implore; But the fact is I was napping, and so gently you came rapping,

And so faintly you came tapping, tapping at my chamber
door,

That I scarce was sure I heard you”—here I opened wide
the door;—

Darkness there and nothing more.

25 Deep into that darkness peering, long I stood there wondering, fearing, Doubting, dreaming dreams no mortal ever dared to dream before;

But the silence was unbroken, and the stillness gave no token,

And the only word there spoken was the whispered word,
“Lenore?”

This I whispered, and an echo murmured back the word, “Lenore!”

30 Merely this and nothing more.

Back into the chamber turning, all my soul within me
burning,

Soon again I heard a tapping somewhat louder than before.

“Surely,” said I, “surely that is something at my window lattice; Let me see, then, what thereat is, and this mystery explore—

35 Let my heart be still a moment and this mystery
explore;—

‘Tis the wind and nothing more!”

Open here I flung the shutter, when, with many a flirt and flutter,

In there stepped a stately Raven of the saintly days of yore;

Not the least obeisance made he; not a minute stopped or stayed he;

40 But, with mien of lord or lady, perched above my chamber door—

Perched upon a bust of Pallas² just above my chamber
door—

Perched, and sat, and nothing more.

Then this ebony bird beguiling my sad fancy into smiling,
By the grave and stern decorum of the countenance it wore,

45 “Though thy crest be shorn and shaven, thou,” I said,
“art sure no craven,

Ghastly grim and ancient Raven wandering from the Nightly shore—

Tell me what thy lordly name is on the Night’s Plutonian³
shore!”

Quoth the Raven “Nevermore.”

Much I marvelled this ungainly fowl to hear discourse so plainly,

50 Though its answer little meaning—little relevancy bore;
For we cannot help agreeing that no living human being Ever yet was blessed with seeing bird above his chamber
door—

Bird or beast upon the sculptured bust above his chamber
door,

With such name as “Nevermore.”

55 But the Raven, sitting lonely on the placid bust, spoke only

That one word, as if his soul in that one word he did outpour.

Nothing farther then he uttered—not a feather then he fluttered—

Till I scarcely more than muttered “Other friends have flown before—

On the morrow he will leave me, as my Hopes have flown before.”

60 Then the bird said “Nevermore.”

2. Athena, Greek goddess of wisdom and the arts.

3. Black; Pluto was the Greek god of the underworld.

T H E R A V E N / 9 7 9

Startled at the stillness broken by reply so aptly spoken, “Doubtless,” said I, “what it utters is its only stock and store Caught from some unhappy master whom unmerciful Disaster

Followed fast and followed faster till his songs one burden bore—

Till the dirges of his Hope that melancholy burden bore
Of ‘Never—nevermore.’ ”

But the Raven still beguiling my sad fancy into smiling, Straight I wheeled a cushioned seat in front of bird, and bust and
door;

Then, upon the velvet sinking, I betook myself to linking Fancy unto fancy, thinking what this ominous bird of yore
—

What this grim, ungainly, ghastly, gaunt, and ominous bird of yore

Meant in croaking “Nevermore.”

This I sat engaged in guessing, but no syllable expressing
To the fowl whose fiery eyes now burned into my bosom’s core;

This and more I sat divining, with my head at ease reclining

On the cushion's velvet lining that the lamp-light gloated o'er,

But whose velvet-violet lining with the lamp-light gloating
o'er,

She shall press, ah, nevermore!

Then, methought, the air grew denser, perfumed from an unseen

censer

Swung by seraphim⁴ whose foot-falls tinkled on the tufted floor.

"Wretch," I cried, "thy God hath lent thee—by these angels he hath sent thee

Respite—respite and nepenthe⁵ from thy memories of Lenore;

Quaff, oh quaff this kind nepenthe and forget this lost
Lenore!"

Quoth the Raven "Nevermore."

"Prophet!" said I, "thing of evil!—prophet still, if bird or devil!—

Whether Tempter sent, or whether tempest tossed thee
here ashore,

Desolate yet all undaunted, on this desert land enchanted
—

On this home by Horror haunted—tell me truly, I implore
—

Is there— is there balm in Gilead?⁶—tell me—tell me, I implore!"

Quoth the Raven "Nevermore."

"Prophet!" said I, "thing of evil!—prophet still, if bird or devil!

By that Heaven that bends above us—by that God we both adore—

Tell this soul with sorrow laden if, within the distant Aidenn,⁷

It shall clasp a sainted maiden whom the angels name
Lenore—

Clasp a rare and radiant maiden whom the angels name
Lenore.”

Quoth the Raven “Nevermore.”

Angels of the highest order.

ing in Gilead, a m o u n t a i n o u s area east of the Oblivion-inducing drug.

Jordan River, were tapped for medicinal resins.

As in J e r e m i a h 8.22: “Is there no balm in Gil-

7. Invented place-name, suggestive of Eden.

; is there no physician there?” Evergreens grow-

9 8 0 / E D G A R A L L A N P O E

“Be that word our sign of parting, bird or fiend!” I shrieked,

upstarting—

“Get thee back into the tempest and the Night’s Plutonian shore!

Leave no black plume as a token of that lie thy soul hath spoken!

100 Leave my loneliness unbroken!—quit the bust above my door!

Take thy beak from out my heart, and take thy form from off my door!”

Quoth the Raven “Nevermore.”

And the Raven, never flitting, still is sitting, still is sitting On the pallid bust of Pallas just above my chamber door;

105 And his eyes have all the seeming of a demon’s that is dreaming,

And the lamp-light o'er him streaming throws his shadow
on the floor;

And my soul from out that shadow that lies floating on the floor

Shall be lifted—nevermore!

1845

Eldorado⁸

Gaily bedight,⁰ equipped

A gallant knight,

In sunshine and in shadow,

Had journeyed long,

5 Singing a song,

In search of Eldorado.

But he grew old—

This knight so bold—

And o'er his heart a shadow

10 Fell as he found

No spot of ground

That looked like Eldorado.

And, as his strength

Failed him at length,

15 He met a pilgrim shadow—

“Shadow,” said he,

“Where can it be—

This land of Eldorado?”

“Over the Mountains

20 Of the Moon,

Down the Valley of the Shadow,

Ride, boldly ride,”

The shade replied,—

“If you seek for Eldorado!”

1849

8. The gilded one (Spanish). The name of a mythical South American land of gold and vast wealth, sought by European explorers beginning in the sixteenth century; more generally, any such place.

ANNABELLEE / 981

Annabel Lee

It was many and many a year ago,

In a kingdom by the sea,

That a maiden there lived whom you may know

By the name of Annabel Lee;

5 And this maiden she lived with no other thought

Than to love and be loved by me.

She was a child and I was a child,

In this kingdom by the sea,

But we loved with a love that was more than love—

10 I and my Annabel Lee—

With a love that the winged seraphs⁹ of Heaven

Coveted her and me.

And this was the reason that, long ago,

In this kingdom by the sea,

15 A wind blew out of a cloud by night

Chilling my Annabel Lee;

So that her highborn kinsmen came

And bore her away from me,

To shut her up in a sepulchre

20 In this kingdom by the sea.

The angels, not half so happy in Heaven,
Went envying her and me:
Yes! that was the reason (as all men know,
In this kingdom by the sea)
25 That the wind came out of the cloud, chilling
And killing my Annabel Lee.
But our love it was stronger by far than the love
Of those who were older than we—
Of many far wiser than we—
30 And neither the angels in Heaven above
Nor the demons down under the sea,
Can ever dissever my soul from the soul
Of the beautiful Annabel Lee:
For the moon never beams without bringing me dreams
35 Of the beautiful Annabel Lee;
And the stars never rise but I see the bright eyes
Of the beautiful Annabel Lee;
And so, all the night-tide, I lie down by the side
Of my darling, my darling, my life and my bride, 40 In her sepulchre there by the sea—
In her tomb by the side of the sea.

1849, 1850

9. Angels of the highest order.

9 8 2

ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON

1809-1892

Mariana

”Mariana in the moated grange.”

—Measure for Measure

With blackest moss the flower-plots
Were thickly crusted, one and all;
The rusted nails fell from the knots
That held the pear to the gable-wall.
5 The broken sheds looked sad and strange:
Unlifted was the clinking latch;
Weeded and worn the ancient thatch
Upon the lonely moated grange.
She only said, "My life is dreary,
io He cometh not," she said;
She said, "I am aweary, aweary,
I would that I were dead!"
Her tears fell with the dews at even;
Her tears fell ere the dews were dried;
15 She could not look on the sweet heaven,
Either at morn or eventide.
After the flitting of the bats,
When thickest dark did trance the sky,
She drew her casement-curtain by,
20 And glanced athwart the glooming flats.
She only said, "The night is dreary,
He cometh not," she said;
She said, "I am aweary, aweary,
I would that I were dead!"
25 Upon the middle of the night,
Waking she heard the night-fowl crow;
The cock sung out an hour ere light;

From the dark fen the oxen's low
Came to her: without hope of change,
30 In sleep she seemed to walk forlorn,
Till cold winds woke the gray-eyed morn
About the lonely moated grange.

She only said, "The day is dreary,
He cometh not," she said;

35 She said, "I am aweary, aweary,
I would that I were dead!"

About a stone-cast from the wall

A sluice with blackened waters slept,

1. Cf. Shakespeare, Measure for Measure 3.1.254, where the duke notes that Mariana waits in a grange, or country house, for the lover who has rejected her.

M A R I A N A / 9 8 3

And o'er it many, round and small,

40 The clustered marish^o-mosses crept. marsh-

Hard by a poplar shook alway,

All silver-green with gnarled bark:

For leagues no other tree did mark

The level waste, the rounding gray.

45 She only said, "My life is dreary,
He cometh not," she said;

She said, "I am aweary, aweary,
I would that I were dead!"

And ever when the moon was low,

And the shrill winds were up and away,

In the white curtain, to and fro,

She saw the gusty shadow sway.

But when the moon was very low,
And wild winds bound within their cell,²
The shadow of the poplar fell Upon her bed, across her brow.
She only said, "The night is dreary,
He cometh not," she said;
She said, "I am aweary, aweary,
I would that I were dead!"
All day within the dreamy house,
The doors upon their hinges creaked;
The blue fly sung in the pane; the mouse
Behind the moldering wainscot shrieked, 65 Or from the crevice peered about.
Old faces glimmered through the doors,
Old footsteps trod the upper floors,
Old voices called her from without.
She only said, "My life is dreary,
70 He cometh not," she said;
She said, "I am aweary, aweary,
I would that I were dead!"
The sparrow's chirrup on the roof,
The slow clock ticking, and the sound
75 Which to the wooing wind aloof
The poplar made, did all confound
Her sense; but most she loathed the hour
When the thick-moted sunbeam lay Athwart the chambers, and the day
so Was sloping toward his western bower.

Then, said she, "I am very dreary,
He will not come," she said;
She wept, "I am weary, weary,
Oh God, that I were dead!"

1830

2. Virgil relates that Aeolus, god of winds, kept them in a cave (Aeneid 1.50—59).

9 8 4 / A L F R E D , L O R D T E N N Y S O N

The Kraken³

Below the thunders of the upper deep;
Far, far beneath in the abysmal sea,
His ancient, dreamless, uninvaded sleep
The Kraken sleepeth: faintest sunlights flee
5 About his shadowy sides: above him swell
Huge sponges of millennial growth and height;
And far away into the sickly light,
From many a wondrous grot and secret cell
Unnumbered and enormous polypi⁴
10 Winnow with giant fins the slumbering green.
There hath he lain for ages and will lie
Battening upon huge seaworms in his sleep,
Until the latter fire shall heat the deep;^s
Then once by men and angels to be seen,
15 In roaring he shall rise and on the surface die.

1830

The Lady of Shalott

Part I

On either side the river lie
Long fields of barley and of rye,
That clothe the wold⁰ and meet the sky; rolling plain
And through the field the road runs by 5 To many towered Camelot;⁶
And up and down the people go,
Gazing where the lilies blow⁰ bloom
Round an island there below,
The island of Shalott.
10 Willows whiten, aspens quiver,
Little breezes dusk and shiver
Through the wave that runs for ever
By the island in the river
Flowing down to Camelot.
15 Four gray walls, and four gray towers,
Overlook a space of flowers,
And the silent isle imbowers
The Lady of Shalott.

3. A mythical sea monster, called in an eighth-century Natural History of Norway “the largest and most surprising of all the animal creation” sounded, and as it were a great mountain burning (O.E.D.).

with fire was cast into the sea: and the third part

4. Octopuslike creatures.

of the sea became blood; and there died the third

5. At the end of the world, “the elements shall part of the creatures which were in the sea.”

melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works

6. The legendary King Arthur’s castle.

THE LADY OF SHALOTT / 985

By the margin, willow-veiled,

Slide the heavy barges trailed

By slow horses; and unhailed

The shallop⁰ flitteth silken-sailed light open boat

Skimming down to Camelot:

But who hath seen her wave her hand?

Or at the casement seen her stand?

Or is she known in all the land,

The Lady of Shalott?

Only reapers, reaping early

In among the bearded barley,

Hear a song that echoes cheerly

From the river winding clearly,

Down to towered Camelot:

And by the moon the reaper weary,

Piling sheaves in uplands airy,

Listening, whispers ” ‘Tis the fairy

Lady of Shalott.”

Part II

There she weaves by night and day
A magic web with colors gay.
She has heard a whisper say,
A curse is on her if she stay
To look down to Camelot.
She knows not what the curse may be,
And so she weaveth steadily,
And little other care hath she,
The Lady of Shalott.
And moving through a mirror clear⁷
That hangs before her all the year,
Shadows of the world appear.
There she sees the highway near Winding down to Camelot:
There the river eddy whirls,
And there the surly village-churls,
And the red cloaks of market girls,
Pass onward from Shalott.
Sometimes a troop of damsels glad,
An abbot on an ambling pad,^o easy-paced horse
Sometimes a curly shepherd-lad,
Or long-haired page in crimson clad,
Goes by to towered Camelot;
And sometimes through the mirror blue
The knights come riding two and two:

7. Weavers placed mirrors facing their looms to see the progress of their work.

9 8 6 / A L F R E D , L O R D T E N N Y S O N

She hath no loyal knight and true,

The Lady of Shalott.

But in her web she still delights

65 To weave the mirror's magic sights,

For often through the silent nights

A funeral, with plumes and lights

And music, went to Camelot:

Or when the moon was overhead.

70 Came two young lovers lately wed;

"I am half sick of shadows," said

The Lady of Shalott.

Part III

A bow-shot from her bower-eaves,
He rode between the barley-sheaves,
75 The sun came dazzling through the leaves,
And flamed upon the brazen greaves⁸
Of bold Sir Lancelot.

A red-cross knight for ever kneeled⁹
To a lady in his shield,
so That sparkled on the yellow field,
Beside remote Shalott.

The gemmy bridle glittered free,
Like to some branch of stars we see Hung in the golden Galaxy.

85 The bridle bells rang merrily
As he rode down to Camelot:
And from his blazoned baldric⁰ slung shoulder belt
A mighty silver bugle hung,
And as he rode his armor rung,
90 Beside remote Shalott.

All in the blue unclouded weather
Thick-jewelled shone the saddle-leather,
The helmet and the helmet-feather
Burned like one burning flame together,
95 As he rode down to Camelot.
As often through the purple night,
Below the starry clusters bright,

Some bearded meteor, trailing light,
Moves over still Shalott.
100 His broad clear brow in sunlight glowed;
On burnished hooves his war-horse trode;
From underneath his helmet flowed
His coal-black curls as on he rode,
As he rode down to Camelot.

8. Armor for the shins.

9. Cf. Edmund Spenser, The Faerie Queene 1 and 3.2.17—25.

THE LADY OF SHALOTT / 987

105 From the bank and from the river

He flashed into the crystal mirror,

“Tirra lirra,” by the river

Sang Sir Lancelot.

She left the web, she left the loom,

no She made three paces through the room,

She saw the water-lily bloom,

She saw the helmet and the plume,

She looked down to Camelot.

Out flew the web and floated wide;

115 The mirror cracked from side to side;

“The curse is come upon me,” cried

The Lady of Shalott.

Part IV

In the stormy east-wind straining,
The pale yellow woods were waning,
120 The broad stream in his banks complaining.

Heavily the low sky raining

Over towered Camelot;

Down she came and found a boat

Beneath a willow left afloat,

125 And round about the prow she wrote

The Lady of Shalott.

And down the river's dim expanse

Like some bold seer in a trance,

Seeing all his own mischance—

130 With a glassy countenance

Did she look to Camelot.

And at the closing of the day

She loosed the chain, and down she lay;

The broad stream bore her far away,

135 The Lady of Shalott.

Lying, robed in snowy white

That loosely flew to left and right—

The leaves upon her falling light—

Through the noises of the night

140 She floated down to Camelot:

And as the boat-head wound along

The willowy hills and fields among,

They heard her singing her last song,
The Lady of Shalott.

145 Heard a carol, mournful, holy,
Chanted loudly, chanted lowly,
Till her blood was frozen slowly,
And her eyes were darkened wholly,
Turned to towered Camelot.

988 / ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON

150 For ere she reached upon the tide
The first house by the water-side,
Singing in her song she died,
The Lady of Shalott.

Under tower and balcony,
155 By garden-wall and gallery,
A gleaming shape she floated by,
Dead-pale between the houses high,
Silent into Camelot.

Out upon the wharfs they came,
160 Knight and burgher, lord and dame,
And round the prow they read her name,
*The Lady of Shalott.

Who is this? and what is here?
And in the lighted palace near 165 Died the sound of royal cheer;
And they crossed themselves for fear,
All the knights at Camelot:
But Lancelot mused a little space;
He said, "She has a lovely face;

170 God in his mercy lend her grace,
The Lady of Shalott."

1831-32 1832, 1842

The Lotos-Eaters¹

"Courage!" he said, and pointed toward the
land,

"This mounting wave will roll us shoreward so on."

In the afternoon they came unto a land

In which it seemed a day as if it were a year.

5 All round the coast the languid air did swoon,
Breathing like one that hath a weary dream.

Full-faced above the valley stood the moon;
And, like a downward smoke, the slender stream along the cliff to fall and pause and fall did seem.

10 A land of streams! some, like a downward smoke, slow-dropping veils of thinnest lawn,² did go; and some through waver-ing lights and shadows broke, rolling a slumberous sheet of foam below.

They saw the gleaming river seaward flow

15 From the innerland: far off three mountain-tops, three silent pinnacles of aged snow,

Stood sunset-flushed; and, dewed with shower-drops, up-clomb the shadowy pine above the wovencopse. 0 forest

1. In Greek mythology, a people who ate the fruit scribes the visit of Odysseus ("he," line 1) and his of the lotos, the effect of which was to induce men to their island in the Odyssey 9. 82-97.

drowsy languor and forgetfulness. Homer de- 2. Sheer cotton fabric.

T H E L O T O S - E A T E R S / 9 8 9

The charmed sunset lingered low adown
20 In the red West; through mountain clefts the dale
Was seen far inland, and the yellow down
Bordered with palm, and many a winding vale
And meadow, set with slender galingale;³
A land where all things always seemed the same!
25 And round about the keel with faces pale,
Dark faces pale against that rosy flame,
The mild-eyed melancholy Lotos-eaters came.
Branches they bore of that enchanted stem,
Laden with flower and fruit, whereof they gave 30 To each, but whoso did receive of them
And taste, to him the gushing of the wave
Far far away did seem to mourn and rave
On alien shores; and if his fellow spake,
His voice was thin, as voices from the grave;
35 And deep-asleep he seemed, yet all awake,
And music in his ears his beating heart did make.
They sat them down upon the yellow sand,
Between the sun and moon upon the shore;
And sweet it was to dream of Fatherland,
40 Of child, and wife, and slave; but evermore
Most weary seemed the sea, weary the oar,
Weary the wandering fields of barren foam.
Then some one said, “We will return no more;”

And all at once they sang, "Our island home 45 Is far beyond the wave; we will no longer roam."

Choric Song

1

There is sweet music here that softer falls
Than petals from blown roses on the grass,
Or night-dews on still waters between walls
Of shadowy granite, in a gleaming pass;
50 Music that gentler on the spirit lies,
Than tired eyelids upon tired eyes;
Music that brings sweet sleep down from the blissful skies.
Here are cool mosses deep,
And through the moss the ivies creep,
55 And in the stream the long-leaved flowers weep,
And from the craggy ledge the poppy hangs in sleep.

2

Why are we weighed upon with heaviness,
And utterly consumed with sharp distress,
While all things else have rest from weariness?
60 All things have rest: why should we toil alone,
We only toil, who are the first of things,

3. A reedlike plant, a species of marsh grass.

990 / ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON

And make perpetual moan,
Still from one sorrow to another thrown;
Nor ever fold our wings,
65 And cease from wanderings,
Nor steep our brows in slumber's holy balm;

Nor harken what the inner spirit sings,

“There is no joy but calm!”

Why should we only toil, the roof and crown of things?

3

70 Lo! in the middle of the wood,

The folded leaf is wooed from out the bud

With winds upon the branch, and there

Grows green and broad, and takes no care,

Sun-steeped at noon, and in the moon

75 Nightly dew-fed; and turning yellow

Falls, and floats adown the air.

Lo! sweetened with the summer light,

The full-juiced apple, waxing over-mellow,

Drops in a silent autumn night.

80 All its allotted length of days,

The flower ripens in its place,

Ripens and fades, and falls, and hath no toil,

Fast-rooted in the fruitful soil.

4

Hateful is the dark-blue sky,

85 Vaulted o'er the dark-blue sea.

Death is the end of life; ah, why

Should life all labor be?

Let us alone. Time driveth onward fast

And in a little while our lips are dumb.

90 Let us alone. What is it that will last?

All things are taken from us, and become

Portions and parcels of the dreadful Past.

Let us alone. What pleasure can we have To war with evil? Is there any peace
95 In ever climbing up the climbing wave?
All things have rest, and ripen toward the grave
In silence; ripen, fall, and cease:
Give us long rest or death, dark death, or dreamful ease.

5

How sweet it were, hearing the downward stream, 100 With half-shut eyes ever to seem Falling asleep in a half-dream!
To dream and dream, like yonder amber light,
Which will not leave the myrrh-bush on the height;
To hear each other's whispered speech;
105 Eating the Lotos day by day,
To watch the crisping ripples on the beach, curling
THE LOTOS - EATERS / 991
And tender curving lines of creamy spray;
To lend our hearts and spirits wholly
To the influence of mild-minded melancholy;
110 To muse and brood and live again in memory,
With those old faces of our infancy
Heaped over with a mound of grass,
Two handfuls of white dust, shut in an urn of brass!

6

Dear is the memory of our wedded lives,
115 And dear the last embraces of our wives
And their warm tears: but all hath suffered change:
For surely now our household hearths are cold:

Our sons inherit us: our looks are strange:
And we should come like ghosts to trouble joy.

120 Or else the island princes⁴ over-bold
Have eat our substance, and the minstrel sings
Before them of the ten years' war in Troy,
And our great deeds, as half-forgotten things.

Is there confusion in the little isle?

125 Let what is broken so remain.

The Gods are hard to reconcile:

'Tis hard to settle order once again.

There is confusion worse than death,

Trouble on trouble, pain on pain,

130 Long labor unto aged breath,

Sore tasks to hearts worn out by many wars

And eyes grown dim with gazing on the pilot-stars.

7

But, propt on beds of amaranth and moly,⁵

How sweet (while warm airs lull us, blowing lowly)

135 With half-dropt eyelid still,

Beneath a heaven dark and holy,

To watch the long bright river drawing slowly

His waters from the purple hill—

To hear the dewy echoes calling

140 From cave to cave through the thick-twined vine—

To watch the emerald-colored water falling

Through many a woven acanthus-wreath divine!

Only to hear and see the far-off sparkling brine,

Only to hear were sweet, stretched out beneath the pine.

145 The Lotos blooms below the barren peak,
 The Lotos blows by every winding creek;
 All day the wind breathes low with mellower tone;
 Through every hollow cave and alley lone Round and round the spicy downs the yellow Lotos-dust is blown.

4. The princes who had remained behind in Ith- 5. An herb with magical properties. Amaranth: a aca ("the little isle," line 124) while Odysseus was legendary flower, reputed not to fade, at Troy.

992 / ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON

150 We have had enough of action, and of motion we, Rolled to starboard, rolled to larboard, when the surge was seething

free,

Where the wallowing monster spouted his foam-fountains in the sea.

Let us swear an oath, and keep it with an equal mind,

In the hollow Lotos-land to live and lie reclined

155 On the hills like Gods together, careless of mankind.

For they lie beside their nectar, and the bolts are hurled

Far below them in the valleys, and the clouds are lightly curled

Round their golden houses, girdled with the gleaming world:

Where they smile in secret, looking over wasted lands,

160 Blight and famine, plague and earthquake, roaring deeps and fiery

sands,

Clanging fights, and flaming towns, and sinking ships, and praying

hands.

But they smile, they find a music centered in a doleful song
Steaming up, a lamentation and an ancient tale of wrong,
Like a tale of little meaning though the words are strong;
165 Chanted from an ill-used race of men that cleave the soil,
Sow the seed, and reap the harvest with enduring toil,
Storing yearly little dues of wheat, and wine and oil;
Till they perish and they suffer—some, 'tis whispered—down
in hell

Suffer endless anguish, others in Elysian valleys dwell, 170 Resting weary limbs at last on beds of asphodel.⁶
Surely, surely, slumber is more sweet than toil, the shore
Than labor in the deep mid-ocean, wind and wave and oar;
O, rest ye, brother mariners, we will not wander more.

1832, 1842

Ulysses⁷

It little profits that an idle king,
By this still hearth, among these barren crags,
Matched with an aged wife, I mete and dole
Unequal laws unto a savage race,
5 That hoard, and sleep, and feed, and know not me.
I cannot rest from travel: I will drink
Life to the lees: all times I have enjoyed Greatly, have suffered greatly, both with those That loved me, and alone; on shore, and when io Through scudding drifts the rainy Hyades⁸
Vext the dim sea: I am become a name;
For always roaming with a hungry heart

6. A plant of the lily family supposed to grow in resembles the figure of Ulysses presented by Dante the Elysian valleys.

(Inferno 26).

7. Tennyson's Ulysses (Odysseus), restless after

8. A group of stars in the constellation Taurus, his return to Ithaca, eager to renew the life of great believed to foretell the coming of rain when they deeds he had known during the Trojan War and rose with the sun.

the adventures of his ten-year journey home,

U L Y S S E S / 9 9 3

Much have I seen and known; cities of men

And manners, climates, councils, governments,

15 Myself not least, but honored of them all;

And drunk delight of battle with my peers,

Far on the ringing plains of windy Troy.

I am a part of all that I have met;

Yet all experience is an arch wherethrough

20 Gleams that untraveled world whose margin fades

For ever and for ever when I move.

How dull it is to pause, to make an end,

To rust unburnished, not to shine in use!

As though to breathe were life! Life piled on life

25 Were all too little, and of one to me

Little remains: but every hour is saved

From that eternal silence, something more,

A bringer of new things; and vile it were

For some three suns to store and hoard myself,
30 And this gray spirit yearning in desire
To follow knowledge like a sinking star,
Beyond the utmost bound of human thought.
This is my son, mine own Telemachus,
To whom I leave the scepter and the isle—
35 Well-loved of me, discerning to fulfill
This labor, by slow prudence to make mild
A rugged people, and through soft degrees
Subdue them to the useful and the good.
Most blameless is he, centered in the sphere
40 Of common duties, decent not to fail
In offices of tenderness, and pay Meet adoration to my household gods,
When I am gone. He works his work, I mine.
There lies the port; the vessel puffs her sail:
45 There gloom the dark, broad seas. My mariners, Souls that have toiled, and wrought, and thought with me—
That ever with a frolic welcome took
The thunder and the sunshine, and opposed
Free hearts, free foreheads—you and I are old;
50 Old age hath yet his honor and his toil;
Death closes all: but something ere the end,
Some work of noble note, may yet be done,
Not unbecoming men that strove with Gods.
The lights begin to twinkle from the rocks:
55 The long day wanes: the slow moon climbs: the deep Moans round with many voices. Come, my friends,

'Tis not too late to seek a newer world.
Push off, and sitting well in order smite
The sounding furrows; for my purpose holds 60 To sail beyond the sunset, and the baths
Of all the western stars, until I die.
It may be that the gulfs will wash us down:

994 / ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON

It may be we shall touch the Happy Isles, 9
And see the great Achilles, whom we knew.
65 Though much mistaken, much abides; and though We are not now that strength which in old days Moved earth and heaven; that which we are, we are, One equal temper of heroic hearts,
Made weak by time and fate, but strong in will 70 To strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield.

1833 1842

Break, Break, Break
Break, break, break,
On thy cold gray stones, O Sea!
And I would that my tongue could utter
The thoughts that arise in me.
5 O well for the fisherman's boy,
That he shouts with his sister at play!
O well for the sailor lad,
That he sings in his boat on the bay!
And the stately ships go on 10 To their haven under the hill;
But O for the touch of a vanished hand,
And the sound of a voice that is still!

B r e a k , b r e a k , b r e a k ,
A t t h e f o o t o f t h y c r a g s , O S e a !
15 B u t t h e t e n d e r g r a c e o f a d a y t h a t i s d e a d
W i l l n e v e r c o m e b a c k t o m e .

1834 1842

Songs from The Princess

The Splendor Falls

T h e s p l e n d o r f a l l s o n c a s t l e w a l l s
A n d s n o w y s u m m i t s o l d i n s t o r y :
T h e l o n g l i g h t s h a k e s a c r o s s t h e l a k e s ,
A n d t h e w i l d c a t a r a c t 0 l e a p s i n g l o r y . waterfall
5 B l o w , b u g l e , b l o w , s e t t h e w i l d e c h o e s f l y i n g , B l o w , b u g l e ; a n s w e r , e c h o e s , d y i n g , d y i n g , d y i n g .

9. The Islands of the Blessed, or Elysium, the the known world.

abode after death of those favored by the gods,

1. A long narrative poem in blank verse, except for especially heroes and patriots; supposed, in earlier songs such as those printed here.

myth, to be located beyond the western limits of

S O N G S F R O M THE PRINCESS / 9 9 5

O h a r k , O h e a r ! h o w t h i n a n d c l e a r ,
A n d t h i n n e r , c l e a r e r , f a r t h e r g o i n g !
O s w e e t a n d f a r f r o m c l i f f a n d s c a r 2
10 T h e h o r n s o f E l f l a n d f a i n t l y b l o w i n g !
B l o w , l e t u s h e a r t h e p u r p l e g l e n s r e p l y i n g :
B l o w , b u g l e ; a n s w e r , e c h o e s , d y i n g , d y i n g ,
d y i n g .

O love, t h e y die in y o n rich sky,

T h e y faint on hill or field or river:

15 O u r e c h o e s roll f r o m s o u l t o s o u l ,

A n d g r o w for ever a n d for ever.

B l o w , b u g l e , b l o w , set t h e w i l d e c h o e s flying,
A n d a n s w e r , e c h o e s , a n s w e r , dying, dying,
dying.

1850

Tears, Idle Tears

Tears, idle tears, I k n o w n o t w h a t t h e y m e a n ,

T e a r s f r o m t h e d e p t h o f s o m e d i v i n e d e s p a i r

Rise i n t h e h e a r t , a n d g a t h e r t o t h e e y e s ,

I n l o o k i n g o n t h e h a p p y A u t u m n - f i e l d s ,

5 A n d t h i n k i n g o f t h e d a y s t h a t a r e n o m o r e .

F r e s h a s t h e f i r s t b e a m g l i t t e r i n g o n a s a i l ,

T h a t b r i n g s o u r f r i e n d s u p f r o m t h e u n d e r w o r l d ,
S a d a s t h e l a s t w h i c h r e d d e n s o v e r o n e

T h a t s i n k s w i t h a l l w e l o v e b e l o w t h e v e r g e ;

io S o s a d , s o f r e s h , t h e d a y s t h a t a r e n o m o r e .

A h , s a d a n d s t r a n g e a s i n d a r k s u m m e r d a w n s

T h e e a r l i e s t p i p e o f h a l f - a w a k e n e d b i r d s

T o d y i n g e a r s , w h e n u n t o d y i n g e y e s

T h e c a s e m e n t s l o w l y g r o w s a g l i m m e r i n g square;

15 S o s a d , s o s t r a n g e , t h e d a y s t h a t a r e n o m o r e .

D e a r a s r e m e m b e r e d k i s s e s a f t e r d e a t h ,

A n d s w e e t a s t h o s e b y h o p e l e s s f a n c y f e i g n e d O n l i p s t h a t a r e f o r o t h e r s ; d e e p a s l o v e ,

D e e p a s f i r s t l o v e , a n d w i l d w i t h a l l r e g r e t ;

20 O D e a t h i n L i f e , t h e d a y s t h a t a r e n o m o r e !

1847

Now Sleeps the Crimson Petal

Now sleeps the crimson petal, now the white;
Nor waves the cypress in the palace walk;
Nor winks the goldfinch in the porphyry font:³
The firefly wakens: waken thou with me.

2. Isolated rock, or rocky height.

3. Basin. Porphyry is a type of hard rock.

996 / ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON

5 Now droops the milk white peacock like a ghost,
And like a ghost she glimmers on to me.

Now lies the Earth all Danae⁴ to the stars,

And all thy heart lies open unto me.

Now slides the silent meteoron, and leaves

10 A shining furrow, as thy thoughts in me.

Now folds the lily all her sweetness up,

And slips into the bosom of the lake:

So fold thyself, my dearest, thou, and slip

In to my bosom and be lost in me.

1847

*From In Memoriam A.H.H.*⁵

OBIIT. MDCCCXXXIII⁶

I

I held it truth, with him whoseings

To one clear harp in divers tones,⁷

That men may rise on stepping-stones

Of their dead selves to higher things.

5 But who shall so forecast the years

And find in loss a gain to match?

Or reach a hand through time to catch
The far-off interest of tears?
Let Love clasp Grief lest both be drowned,
io Let darkness keep her raven gloss:
Ah, sweeter to be drunk with loss,
To dance with death, to beat the ground,
Than that the victor Hours should scorn
The long result of love, and boast,
15 " Behold them a man that loved and lost,
But all he was is overworn."

4. A princess in ancient Greece whose father, associates at Cambridge, Hallam had seemed to warned by an oracle that she would bear a son who give the most brilliant promise of greatness. In the would kill him, shut her up in a bronze chamber, summer of 1833, when he had been traveling on where she was visited by Zeus, the supreme god, the Continent with his father, Hallam died, of a in a shower of gold.
stroke, in Vienna.

5. Arthur Henry Hallam (1811-1833) had been

6. Died 1833.

Tennyson's close friend at Cambridge, they had

7. According to Tennyson, the German poet traveled together in France and Germany, and Hal-Johann Wolfgang von Goethe (1749-1832).

lam had been engaged to the poet's sister. To his

IN MEMORIA M.A.H.H. / 997

67

Old Yew, which graspest at the stones
That nameth the under-lying dead,
Thy fibers net the dreamless head,
Thy roots are wrapt about the bones.
5 These seasons bring the flowers again,
And bring the firstling to the flock;
And in the dusk of thee, the clock
Beats out the little lives of men.
O not for thee the glow, the bloom,
10 Who changest not in any gale,
Nor brandings summers suns avail
To touch thy thousand years of gloom:
And gazing on thee, sullen tree,
Sick for thy stubborn hardihood,
15 I seem to fail from out my blood
And grow incorporate into thee.

7

Dark house, by which once more I stand
Here in the long unlovely street, 8
Doors, where my heart was used to beat
So quickly, waiting for a hand,
5 A hand that can be clasped no more —
Behold me, for I cannot sleep,
And like a guilty thing I creep
At earliest morning to the door.
He is not there; but far away
10 The noise of life begins again,

And ghastly through the drizzling rain
On the bald street breaks the blank day.

11

Calmisthemornwithoutasound, Calmasitosuitacalmergrief,
Andonlythroughthefadedleaf
Thechestnutpatteringtotheground:
5 Calmanddeeppeaceonthishighwold,
0 upland plain Andonthesedewsthatdrenchthefurze,
*0 a shrub

Andallthesilverygossamers Thattwinkleintogreenandgold:

8. I.e., Wimpole St., where Hallam had been living after he left Cambridge.

998 / ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON

Calmandstilllightonyongreatplain
10 Thatsweepswithallitsautumnbowers, Andcrowdedfarmsandleseningtowers,
Tominglewiththeboundingmain:
Calmanddeeppeaceinthiswideair,
Theseleaves that reddentothefall;

15 And in my heart, if calm at all,

If any calm, a calm despair:

Calmontheseas,andsilversleep,
Andwaves that sway themselves in rest,
And dead calm in the noble breast
20 Which heaves but with the heaving deep.

19

The Danube to the Severn gave
The darkened heart that beat no more; 9
They laid him by the pleasant shore,
And in the hearing of the wave.

5 There twice a day the Severn fills;
The salt sea-water passes by,
And hushes half the babbling Wye, 1
And makes a silence in the hills.

The Wye is hushed nor moved along,
io And hushed my deepest grief of all,
When filled with tears that cannot fall,
I brim with sorrow drowningsong.

The tide flows down, the wave again
Is vocal in its wooded walls;

15 My deeper anguish also falls,
And I can speak a little then.

50

Beneath me when my light is low,
When the blood creeps, and the nerves prick
And tingle; and the heart is sick,
And all the wheels of Being slow.

5 Beneath me when the sensuous frame
Is racked with pangs that conquer trust;
And Time, a maniac scattering dust,
And Life, a Fury slinging flame.

9. Vienna, where Hallam died, is on the Danube;
into the Bristol Channel; the incoming tide deep-the Severn empties into the Bristol Channel near

ens the river and makes it quiet, but as the tide Clevedon, Somersetshire, Hallam's burial place.
ebbs the Wye once more becomes "vocal" (line 14).

1. The Wye, a tributary of the Severn, also runs

IN MEMORIA M. A. H. H. / 1999

Benearme when my faith is dry,
10 And men the flies of flatters bring,
That lay their eggs, and sting and sing
And weave their petty cells and die.
Benearme when I fade away,
Topoint the term of human strife,
15 And on the low dark verge of life
The twilight of eternal day.

54

Ohyetwetrust that somehow good
Will be the final goal of all,
Topangsof nature, sins of will,
Defectsofdoubt, and taintsofblood;
5 That nothing walkswith aimless feet;
That not onelife shall be destroyed,
Or cast as rubbish to the void,
When God hath made the pile complete;
That not a worm is cloven in vain;
10 That not a moth with vain desire
Is shriveled in a fruitless fire,
Or but subserves another's gain.
Behold, we know not anything;
I can but trust that good shall fall

15 At last — far off — at last, to all,
And every winter change to spring.
So runs my dream: but what am I?
An infant crying in the night:
An infant crying for the light:
20 And with no language but a cry.

55

The wish, that of the living whole
No life may fail beyond the grave,
Derives it not from what we have
The likest God within the soul?
5 Are God and Nature then at strife,
That Nature lends such evil dreams?
So careful of the type she seems, species
So careless of the single life;
That I, considering everywhere
10 Her secret meaning in her deeds,
1000 / ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON
And finding that of fifty seeds
She often brings but one to bear,
If alter where I firmly trod,
And falling with my weight of cares
15 Upon the great world's altar-stairs
That slopeth through darkness up to God,
I stretch lame hands of faith, and grope, A nd gather dust and chaff, and call
To what I feel is Lord of all,
20 And faintly trust the larger hope.

“So careful of the type?” but no.

From scarped cliff and quarried stone

She cries, “A thousand types are gone; I can reform nothing, all shall go.

5” Thou makest thine appeal to me:

I bring to life, I bring to death:

The spirit does but mean the breath:

I know no more.” And he, shall he,

Man, her last work, whose seem'd so fair,

10 Such splendid purpose in his eyes,

Who rol'd the psalm to wintry skies,

Who built him fanes of fruitless prayer,
temples, churches

Who trusted God was love indeed

And love Creation's final law —

15 Though Nature, red in tooth and claw

With ravine, shrieked against his creed
 — seizing prey

Who loved, who suffered countless ills,

Who battled for the True, the Just,

Be blown about the desert dust,

20 Or sealed within their iron hills?

No more? A monster then, a dream,

A discord. Dragons of the prime,

That tare each other in their slime, tore (archaic)

Were mellow music matched with him.

25 O life as futile, then, as frail!

O f o r t h y v o i c e t o s o o t h e a n d b l e s s !

W h a t h o p e o f a n s w e r , o r r e d r e s s ?

B e h i n d t h e v e i l , b e h i n d t h e v e i l .

2. Cut down vertically, thus displaying the strata 3. I.e., Nature,

of geologic growth and the fossils they contain.

I N M E M O R I A M A . H . H . / 1 0 0 1

6 7

When on my bed the moonlight falls,

I know that in thy place of rest

By that broad water of the west

There comes a glory on the walls;4

5 Thy marble bright in dark appears,

As slowly steals a silver flame

Along the letters of thy name,

And o'er the number of thy years.

The mystic glory swims away;

io From off my bed the moonlight dies;

And closing eaves of wearied eyes

I sleep till dusk is dipt in gray:

And then I know the mist is drawn

A lucid veil from coast to coast,

15 And in the dark church like a ghost

Thy tablet glimmers to the dawn.

8 8

Wild bird, whose warble, liquid sweet,

Rings Eden through the budded quicks,5

O tell me where the senses mix,

O tell me where the passions meet,
5 Whence radiate: fierce extremes employ
Thy spirits in the darkening leaf,
And in the midmost heart of grief
Thy passion clasps a secret joy:
And I—my harp would prelude woe—
io I cannot all command the strings;
The glory of the sum of things
Will flash along the chords and go.

95

By night we lingered on the lawn,
For underfoot the herb was dry;
And genial warmth; and o'er the sky
The silvery haze of summer drawn;
5 And calm that let the tapers burn
Unwavering: not a cricket chirred;
4. Hallam's tomb is inside Clevedon Church, just looking the Bristol Channel, south of Clevedon, Somersetshire, on a hill over- 5. Hawthorn hedges.

1 0 0 2 / A L F R E D , L O R D T E N N Y S O N

T h e brook alone far-off was heard,
And on the board the fluttering urn:6
And bats went round in fragrant skies,
10 And wheeled or lit the filmy shapes7
That haunt the dusk, with ermine capes
And woolly breasts and beaded eyes;
While now we sang old songs that pealed
From knoll to knoll, where, couched at ease,
15 The white kine⁰ glimmered, and the trees cattle

Laid their dark arms about the field.
But when those others, one by one,
Withdrew themselves from me and night,
And in the house light after light
20 W e n t out, and I was all alone,
A hunger seized my heart; I read
Of that glad year which once had been,
In those fallen leaves which kept their green,
The noble letters of the dead:
25 And strangely on the silence broke
The silent-speaking words, and strange
Was love's d u m b cry defying change
To test his worth; and strangely spoke
T h e faith, the vigor, bold to dwell
30 On doubts that drive the coward back,
And keen through wordy snares to track
Suggestion to her inmost cell.
So word by word, and line by line,
T h e dead m a n touched me from the past,
35 And all at once it seemed at last
The living soul was flashed on mine,
And mine in this was wound, and whirled
About empyreal heights of thought,
And came on that which is, and caught
40 T h e deep pulsations of the world,
/ E o n i a n music⁸ measuring out
The steps of Time—the shocks of C h a n c e — T h e blows of Death. At length my trance

Was cancelled, stricken through with doubt.

6. I.e., on the table an urn for making tea or coffee, heated by a fluttering flame beneath.

7. White-winged night moths called ermine for eons.

8. I.e., the rhythm of the universe; it has persisted

7. White-winged night moths called ermine for eons.

I N M E M O R I A M A . H . H . / 1 0 0 3

45 Vague words! but ah, how hard to frame

In matter-molded forms of speech,

Or even for intellect to reach

Through memory that which I became:

Till now the doubtful dusk revealed

50 The knolls once more where, couched at ease,

The white kine glimmered, and the trees

Laid their dark arms about the field:

And sucked from out the distant gloom

A breeze began to tremble o'er

55 The large leaves of the sycamore,

And fluctuate all the still perfume,

And gathering fresher overhead,

Rocked the full-foliaged elms, and swung

The heavy-folded rose, and flung

60 The lilies to and fro, and said

“The dawn, the dawn,” and died away;

And East and West, without a breath,

Mixt their dim lights, like life and death,

To broaden into boundless day.

119

Doors, where my heart was used to beat
So quickly, not as one that weeps
I come once more; the city sleeps;
I smell the meadow in the street;
5 I hear a chirp of birds; I see Betwixt the black fronts long-withdrawn
A light-blue lane of early dawn,
And think of early days and thee,
And bless thee, for thy lips are bland,
io And bright the friendship of thine eye;
And in my thoughts with scarce a sigh
I take the pressure of thine hand.

121

S a d H e s p e r 0 o' e r t h e b u r i e d s u n evening star
And ready, thou, to die with him,
Thou watchest all things ever dim
And dimmer, and a glory done:
5 The team is loosened from the wain,0

•wagon

The boat is drawn upon the shore;
1 0 0 4 / A L F R E D , L O R D T E N N Y S O N
Thou listenest to the closing door,
And life is darkened in the brain.
Bright Phosphor,0 fresher for the night, morning star
10 By thee the world's great work is heard
Beginning, and the wakeful bird;
Behind thee comes the greater light:

The market boat is on the stream,
And voices hail it from the brink;
15 Thou hear'st the village hammer clink,
And see'st the moving of the team.
Sweet Hesper-Phosphor, double name⁹
For what is one, the first, the last,
Thou, like my present and my past,
20 Thy place is changed; thou art the same.

130

Thy voice is on the rolling air;
I hear thee where the waters run;
Thou standest in the rising sun,
And in the setting thou art fair.
5 What are thou then? I cannot guess;
But though I seem in star and flower
To feel thee some diffusive power,
I do not therefore love thee less:
My love involves the love before;
io My love is vaster passion now;
Though mixed with God and Nature thou,
I seem to love thee more and more.
Far off thou art, but ever nigh;
I have thee still, and I rejoice;
15 I prosper, circled with thy voice;
I shall not lose thee though I die.

1833-50 1850

The Eagle

Fragment

He clasps the crag with crooked hands;
Close to the sun in lonely lands,
Ringed with the azure world, he stands.

9. Hesper and Phosphor are both the planet Venus.

fe;.

THE CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE /
1 0 0 5

The wrinkled sea beneath him crawls;
5 He watches from his mountain walls,
And like a thunderbolt he falls.

1851

The Charge of the Light Brigade 1

i

Half a league, half a league,
Half a league onward,
All in the valley of Death
Rode the six hundred.

5 “Forward, the Light Brigade!
Charge for the guns!” he said:
Into the valley of Death
Rode the six hundred.

2

“Forward, the Light Brigade!”
io Was there a man dismayed?
Not though the soldier knew
Some one had blundered:
Theirs not to make reply,
Theirs not to reason why,

15 Theirs but to do and die:

Into the valley of Death

Rode the six hundred.

3

Cannon to right of them,

Cannon to left of them,

20 Cannon in front of them

Volleyed and thundered;

Stormed at with shot and shell,

Boldly they rode and well,

Into the jaws of Death,

25 Into the mouth of Hell

Rode the six hundred.

4

Flashed all their sabers⁰ bare, curved swords

Flashed as they turned in air

Sabring the gunners there,

30 Charging an army, while

All the world wondered:

Plunged in the battery-smoke

1. Written after Tennyson had read an account in of a British cavalry unit were cut down by a battery the London Times of an incident in the Crimean of Russian artillery they had charged with reckless War when, due to confused orders, three-quarters courage.

1 0 0 6 / A L F R E D , L O R D T E N N Y S O N

R i g h t t h r o u g h t h e l i n e t h e y b r o k e ;

C o s s a c k a n d R u s s i a n

35 R e e l e d f r o m t h e s a b e r - s t r o k e

Shattered and sundered.
Then they rode back, but not
Not the six hundred.

5

Cannon to right of them,
40 Cannon to left of them,
Cannon behind them
Volleyed and thundered;
Stormed at with shot and shell,
While horse and hero fell,
45 They that had fought so well
Came through the jaws of Death,
Back from the mouth of Hell,
All that was left of them,
Left of six hundred.

6

50 When can their glory fade?
O the wild charge they made!
All the world wondered.
Honor the charge they made!
Honor the Light Brigade,
55 Noble six hundred!

1854 1855

Tithonus2

The woods decay, the woods decay and fall,
The vapors sweep their burthen to the ground
, Man comes and tills the field and lies beneath,
And after many a summer dies the swan.

5 Me only cruel immortality

Consumes: I withers slowly in thine arms,
Here at the quiet limit of the world,
A white-haired shadow roaming like a dream
The ever-silent spaces of the East,
i o Far-folded mists, and gleaming halls of m orn.

Alas! for this gray shadow, once a man —
So glorious in his beauty and thy choice,
Whom made st him thy chosen, that he seemed
To his great heart none other than a God!

15 I asked thee, "Give me immortality."

Then didst thou grant mine asking with a smile,
2. A Trojan prince beloved by Aurora, Roman goddess of the dawn, who took him as her spouse. She begged Jupiter, the supreme god, to grant him eternal life, but forgot to ask also for the gift of eternal youth.

TITHONUS / 1007

Like wealthy men who care not how they give.

But thy strong Hours indignant worked their wills,

And beat me down and marred and wasted me,

20 And though they could not end me, left me maimed

To dwell in presence of immortal youth.

Immortal age beside immortal youth,

And all I was, in ashes. Can thy love,

Thy beauty, make amends, though even now,

25 Close over us, the silver star,³ thy guide,

Shines in those tremulous eyes that fill with tears

To hear me? Let me go: take back thy gift:

Why should a man desire in any way

To vary from the kindly race of men,

BO Or pass beyond the goal of ordinance⁴
Where all should pause, as is most meet for all?
A soft air fans the cloud apart; there comes
A glimpse of that dark world where I was born.
Once more the old mysterious glimmer steals 35 From thy pure brows, and from thy shoulders pure,
And bosom beating with a heart renewed.
Thy cheek begins to redden through the gloom,
Thy sweet eyes brighten slowly close to mine,
Ere yet they blind the stars, and the wild team⁵
40 Which love thee, yearning for thy yoke, arise,
And shake the darkness from their loosened manes,
And beat the twilight into flakes of fire.
Lo! ever thus thou growest beautiful
In silence, then before thine answer given 45 Departest, and thy tears are on my cheek.
Why wilt thou ever scare me with thy tears,
And make me tremble lest a saying learnt,
In days far-off, on that dark earth, be true?
“The Gods themselves cannot recall their gifts.”
50 Ay me! ay me! with what another heart
In days far-off, and with what other eyes
I used to watch—if I be he that watched—
The lucid outline forming round thee; saw
The dim curls kindle into sunny rings;
55 Changed with thy mystic change, and felt my blood
Glow with the glow that slowly crimsoned all Thy presence and thy portals, while I lay,

Mouth, forehead, eyelids, growing dewy-warm
With kisses balmier than half-opening buds
60 Of April, and could hear the lips that kissed Whispering I knew not what of wild and sweet,
Like that strange song I heard Apollo⁰ sing, god of music
While Ilion like a mist rose into towers.⁶

3. I.e., the morning star.

6. According to legend, the walls and towers of

4. What is ordained as human destiny.

Ilion (Troy) were raised by the sound of Apollo's

5. The horses that draw Aurora's chariot into the song, as related by Ovid, Heroides 16.179.

sky at dawn.

1 0 0 8 /

A L F R E D , L O R D T E N N Y S O N

Yet hold me not for ever in thine East:

65 How can my nature longer mix with thine?

Coldly thy rosy shadows bathe me, cold

Are all thy lights, and cold my wrinkled feet

Upon thy glimmering thresholds, when the steam

Floats up from those dim fields about the homes

70 Of happy men that have the power to die,

And grassy barrows⁰ of the happier dead. grave mounds

Release me, and restore me to the ground;

Thou seest all things, thou wilt see my grave:

Thou wilt renew thy beauty morn by morn;

75 I earth in earth forget these empty courts,

And thee returning on thy silver wheels.

1 8 3 3 , 1 8 5 9 1860

“Frater Ave atque Vale”⁷

Row us out from Desenzano, to your Sirmione row!

So they rowed, and there we landed—“O venusta Sirmio!”⁸

There to me through all the groves of olive in the summer glow,

There beneath the Roman ruin where the purple flowers grow,

5 Came that “Ave atque Vale” of the Poet’s hopeless woe,

Tenderest of Roman poets nineteen-hundred years ago,

“Frater Ave atque Vale”—as we wandered to and fro

Gazing at the Lydian laughter of the Garda Lake below⁹

Sweet Catullus’s all-but-island, olive-silvery Sirmio!

1880 1885

Crossing the Bar

Sunset and evening star,

And one clear call for me!

And may there be no moaning of the bar,¹

When I put out to sea,

5 But such a tide as moving seems asleep,

Too full for sound and foam,

When that which drew from out the boundless deep

Turns again home.

7. The title (Latin: “Brother, hail and farewell”) is pleasure in returning to Sirmio after a long the concluding phrase of Catullus’s poem number absence.

101, in which the poet records the journey to visit

8. O lovely Sirmio (Latin).

his brother's tomb, in Asia Minor. Tennyson's

9. Catullus's line "And rejoice, O Lydian waves of poem, written on a visit to the little peninsula of the lake" (31.13) alludes to the old belief that the Sirmio (on Lake Garda, in northern Italy), shortly Etruscans of the Garda region had originated in after his own brother had died, echoes phrases Lydia, in Asia Minor.

from poem 31, in which Catullus describes his

1. Mournful sound of waves beating on a sandbar.

P O R P H Y R I A ' S L O V E R / 1 0 0 9

Twilight and evening bell,

10 And after that the dark!

And may there be no sadness of farewell,

When I embark;

For though from out our bourne⁰ of Time and Place boundary

The flood may bear me far,

15 I hope to see my Pilot face to face

When I have crost the bar.

1889 1889

R O B E R T B R O W N I N G

1812-1889

Porphyria s Lover¹

The rain set early in tonight,

The sullen wind was soon awake,

It tore the elm-tops down for spite,

And did its worst to vex the lake:

5 I listened with heart fit to break.
When glided in Porphyria; straight
She shut the cold out and the storm,
And kneeled and made the cheerless grate
Blaze up, and all the cottage warm;
10 Which done, she rose, and from her form
Withdrew the dripping cloak and shawl,
And laid her soiled gloves by, untied
Her hat and let the damp hair fall,
And, last, she sat down by my side
15 And called me. When no voice replied,
She put my arm about her waist,
And made her smooth white shoulder bare,
And all her yellow hair displaced,
And, stooping, made my cheek lie there,
20 And spread, o'er all, her yellow hair,
Murmuring how she loved me—she Too weak, for all her heart's endeavor,
To set its struggling passion free
From pride, and vainer ties dissever,
25 And give herself to me forever.
But passion sometimes would prevail,
Nor could tonight's gay feast restrain
A sudden thought of one so pale
For love of her, and all in vain:
30 So, she was come through wind and rain.

1. Originally published with another monologue under the title Madhouse Cells, which indicated the speaker's abnormal state of mind.

1010 / ROBERT BROWNING

Be sure I looked up at her eyes
Happy and proud; at last I knew Porphyria worshiped me: surprise
Made my heart swell, and still it grew 35 While I debated what to do.
That moment she was mine, mine, fair,
Perfectly pure and good: I found
A thing to do, and all her hair
In one long yellow string I wound
40 Three times her little throat around,
And strangled her. No pain felt she;
I am quite sure she felt no pain.
As a shut bud that holds a bee,
I warily oped her lids: again
45 Laughed the blue eyes without a stain.
And I untightened next the tress
About her neck; her cheek once more
Blushed bright beneath my burning kiss:
I propped her head up as before,
50 Only, this time my shoulder bore
Her head, which droops upon it still:
The smiling rosy little head,
So glad it has its utmost will,
That all it scorned at once is fled,
55 And I, its love, am gained instead!
Porphyria's love: she guessed not how
Her darling one wish would be heard.

And thus we sit together now,
And all night long we have not stirred,
60 And yet God has not said a word!

1834 1836, 1842

Soliloquy of the Spanish Cloister

i

Gr-r-r—there go, my heart’s abhorrence!
Water your damned flower-pots, do!
If hate killed men, Brother Lawrence,
God’s blood, would not mine kill you!
5 What? your myrtle-bush wants trimming?
Oh, that rose has prior claims—
Needs its leaden vase filled brimming?
Hell dry you up with its flames!

2

At the meal we sit together:
*io Salve tibi!*² I must hear Wise talk of the kind of weather,
Sort of season, time of year:
2. Hail to thee! (Latin).

S O L I L O Q U Y O F T H E S P A N I S H C L O I S T E
R / 1 0 1 1

Not a plenteous cork-crop: scarcely

Dare we hope oak-galls,³ I doubt:

15 What’s the Latin name for “parsley”?

What’s the Greek name for Swine’s Snout?⁴

3

Whew! We’ll have our platter burnished,

Laid with care on our own shelf!
With a fire-new spoon we're furnished,
20 And a goblet for ourself,
Rinsed like something sacrificial
Ere 'tis fit to touch our chaps—
Marked with L for our initial!
(He-he! There his lily snaps!)

4

25 Saint, forsooth! While brown Dolores Squats outside the Convent bank
With Sanchicha, telling stories,
Steeping tresses in the tank,
Blue-black, lustrous, thick like horsehairs,
BO —Can't I see his dead eye glow,
Bright as 'twere a Barbary corsair's?5
(That is, if he'd let it show!)

5

When he finishes refection,0 dinner
Knife and fork he never lays 35 Cross-wise, to my recollection,
As do I, in Jesu's praise.
I the Trinity illustrate,
Drinking watered orange-pulp—
In three sips the Arian6 frustrate;
40 While he drains his at one gulp.

6

Oh, those melons? If he's able We're to have a feast! so nice!

One goes to the Abbot's table,
All of us get each a slice.
45 How go on your flowers? None double?
Not one fruit-sort can you spy?
Strange! And I, too, at such trouble,
Keep them close-nipped on the sly!

7

There's a great text in Galatians,⁷
50 Once you trip on it, entails
3. Growths produced on oak leaves by gallflies.
heretic who denied the doctrine of the Trinity.
4. Nineteenth-century name for dandelion.
7. The line has sometimes been taken as referring
5. Barbary corsair: pirate from the Berber coun-to Galatians 3.10; but see Galatians 5.14—15, with tries on the north coast of Africa.
its ironic applicability to the spirit of the mono-
6. Follower of Arius, a fourth-century Alexandrian logue, and also 5.16—24.

1 0 1 2 / R O B E R T B R O W N I N G

Twenty-nine distinct damnations,
One sure, if another fails:
If I trip him just a-dying,
Sure of heaven as sure can be,
55 Spin him around and send him flying Off to hell, a Manichee?⁸

8

Or, my scrofulous⁰ French novel morally corrupt

On gray paper with blunt type!
Simply glance at it, you grovel
60 Hand and foot in Belial's⁹ gripe:
If I double down its pages
At the woeful sixteenth print,
When he gathers his greengages,⁰ greenish plums
Ope a sieve and slip it in't?

9

65 Or, there's Satan! one might venture
Pledge one's soul to him, yet leave
Such a flaw in the indenture
As he'd miss till, past retrieve,
Blasted lay that rose-acacia
70 We're so proud of!¹ *Hy, TLy, Hine*² ...
'St, there's vespers! Plena gratia
*Ave, Virgo!*³ Gr-r-r—you swine!

ca. 1839 1842

My Last Duchess⁴

Ferrara

That's my last duchess painted on the wall,
Looking as if she were alive. I call
That piece a wonder, now: Fra Pandolf's hands
Worked busily a day, and there she stands.

5 Will't please you sit and look at her? I said
"Fra Pandolf" by design, for never read

8. The Manichean heresy, which the speaker mixes up the opening words of the Ave Maria: "Ave, hopes to lure Brother Lawrence into accepting,

Maria, gratia plena.”

claimed that the world was divided between forces

4. The events of Browning’s poem parallel historical events, but its emphasis is rather on truth to

9. Hebrew personification of lawlessness, hence

Renaissance attitudes than on historic specificity.

one of the names for the Devil.

Alfonso II d’Este, duke of Ferrara (born 1533), in

1. The speaker seems to say that, if all else fails,

Northern Italy, had married his first wife, daughter

he might secure Brother Lawrence’s damnation by

of Cosimo I de’ Medici, duke of Florence, in 1558, pledging his own soul to the Devil in return—but when she was fourteen; she died on April 21, 1561, being careful to leave a flaw in the contract that under suspicious circumstances, and soon after he would invalidate it.

opened negotiations for the hand of the niece of

2. Possibly an incantation used in calling up the the count of Tyrol, the seat of whose court was at Devil.

Innsbruck, in Austria. “Fra Pandolf” and “Claus of

3. Full of grace, Hail, Virgin! (Latin). The speaker

Innsbruck” are types rather than specific artists.

MY LAST DUCHESS / 1013

Strangers like you that pictured countenance,

The depth and passion of its earnest glance,

But to myself they turned (since none puts by 10 The curtain I have drawn for you, but I)
And seemed as they would ask me, if they durst,
How such a glance came there; so, not the first
Are you to turn and ask thus. Sir, 'twas not
Her husband's presence only, called that spot
15 Of joy into the Duchess' cheek: perhaps Fra Pandolf chanced to say "Her mantle laps
Over my lady's wrist too much," or "Paint
Must never hope to reproduce the faint
Half-flush that dies along her throat": such stuff
20 Was courtesy, she thought, and cause enough
For calling up that spot of joy. She had A heart—how shall I say?—too soon made glad,
Too easily impressed; she liked whate'er
She looked on, and her looks went everywhere.
25 Sir, 'twas all one! My favor at her breast,
The dropping of the daylight in the West,
The bough of cherries some officious fool
Broke in the orchard for her, the white mule
She rode with round the terrace—all and each
BO Would draw from her alike the approving speech, Or blush, at least. She thanked men—good! but thanked Somehow—I know not how—as if she ranked
My gift of a nine-hundred-years-old name
With anybody's gift. Who'd stoop to blame
35 This sort of trifling? Even had you skill
In speech—which I have not—to make your will

Quite clear to such an one, and say, “Just this
Or that in you disgusts me; here you miss,
Or there exceed the mark”—and if she let 40 Herself be lessoned so, nor plainly set
Her wits to yours, forsooth, and made excuse,
—E’en then would be some stooping; and I choose Never to stoop. Oh sir, she smiled, no doubt, Whene’er I passed her; but who passed without 45 Much the same smile? This grew; I gave commands;
Then all smiles stopped together. There she stands
As if alive. Will’t please you rise? We’ll meet
The company below, then. I repeat,
The Count your master’s known munificence
50 Is ample warrant that no just pretense
Of mine for dowry will be disallowed;
Though his fair daughter’s self, as I avowed
At starting, is my object. Nay, we’ll go Together down, sir. Notice Neptune, though, 55 Taming a sea-horse, thought a rarity,
Which Claus of Innsbruck cast in bronze for me!

1842 1842

1 0 1 4 / R O B E R T B R O W N I N G

The Bishop Orders His Tomb at Saint Praxed’s Church⁵

Rome, 15—

Vanity, saith the preacher, vanity!⁶

Draw round my bed: is Anselm keeping back?

Nephews—sons mine ... ah God, I know not! Well—

She, men would have to be your mother once,

5 Old Gandolf envied me, so fair she was!
What's done is done, and she is dead beside,
Dead long ago, and I am Bishop since,
And as she died so must we die ourselves,
And thence ye may perceive the world's a dream,
io Life, how and what is it? As here I lie
In this state-chamber, dying by degrees,
Hours and long hours in the dead night, I ask “Do I live, am I dead?” Peace, peace seems all.
Saint Praxed's ever was the church for peace;
15 And so, about this tomb of mine. I fought
With tooth and nail to save my niche, ye know:
—Old Gandolf cozened⁰ me, despite my care; cheated
Shrewd was that snatch from out the corner south
He graced his carrion with, God curse the same!
20 Yet still my niche is not so cramped but thence
One sees the pulpit o' the epistle-side,⁷
And somewhat of the choir, those silent seats,
And up into the aery dome where live
The angels, and a sunbeam's sure to lurk:
25 And I shall fill my slab of basalt there,
And 'neath my tabernacle⁸ take my rest,
With those nine columns round me, two and two,
The odd one at my feet where Anselm stands:
Peach-blossom marble all, the rare, the ripe
30 As fresh-poured red wine of a mighty pulse.
—Old Gandolf with his paltry onion-stone,
Put me where I may look at him! True peach,

Rosy and flawless: how I earned the prize!
 Draw close: that conflagration of my church
 35 —What then? So much was saved if aught were missed!
 My sons, ye would not be my death? Go dig
 The white-grape vineyard where the oil-press stood,
 Drop water gently till the surface sink,
 And if ye find ... Ah God, I know not, I! ...
 40 Bedded in store of rotten fig-leaves soft,
 And corded up in a tight olive-frail,⁰ olive basket
 5. The church of Santa Prassede, in Rome, dedi-
 6. An echo of Ecclesiastes 1.2: “Vanity of vanities, cated to a Roman virgin, dates from the fifth censaith the Preacher, vanity of vanities; all is vanity.”
 tury but was rebuilt early in the ninth and restored
 7. The right-hand side as one faces the altar, the at later times. The sixteenth-century bishop who side from which the Epistles of the New Testament speaks here is a fictional figure, as is his predeces-were read.
 sor, Gandolf,
 8. Canopy over his tomb.

THE BISHOP ORDERS HIS TOMB AT SAIN NTPRAXED ‘SCHURCH / 1015

Some lump, ah God, of lapis lazuli,⁹
 Big as a Jew’s head cut off at the nape,
 Blue as a vein o’er the Madonna’s breast ...
 45 Sons, all have I bequeathed you, villas, all,
 That brave Frascati¹ villa with its bath,

So, let the blue lump poise between my knees,
Like God the Father's globe on both his hands
Ye worship in the Jesu Church² so gay,
50 For Gandolf shall not choose but see and burst!
Swift as a weaver's shuttle fleet our years:³
Man goeth to the grave, and where is he?
Did I say basalt for my slab, sons? Black—
'Twas ever antique-black I meant! How else 55 Shall ye contrast my frieze to come beneath?
The bas-relief in bronze ye promised me,
Those Pans and Nymphs ye wot of, and perchance
Some tripod, thyrsus,⁴ with a vase or so,
The Saviour at his sermon on the mount,
60 Saint Praxed in a glory,⁵ and one Pan
Ready to twitch the Nymph's last garment off,
And Moses with the tables⁰ ... but I know tablets
Ye mark me not! What do they whisper thee, Child of my bowels, Anselm? Ah, ye hope 65 To revel down my villas while I gasp
Bricked o'er with beggar's moldy travertine⁶
Which Gandolf from his tomb-top chuckles at!
Nay, boys, ye love me—all of jasper,⁷ then!
'T is jasper ye stand pledged to, lest I grieve
70 My bath must needs be left behind, alas!
One block, pure green as a pistachio-nut,
There's plenty jasper somewhere in the world—
And have I not Saint Praxed's ear to pray
Horses for ye, and brown Greek manuscripts,

75 And mistresses with great smooth marbly limbs?
—That's if ye carve my epitaph aright,
Choice Latin, picked phrase, Tully's⁸ every word,
No gaudy ware like Gandolf's second line—
Tully, my masters? Ulpian⁹ serves his need!
so And then how I shall lie through centuries,
And hear the blessed mutter of the mass,
And see God made and eaten all day long,¹
And feel the steady candle-flame, and taste
Good strong thick stupefying incense-smoke!

9. A vivid blue stone, one of the so-called hard and revelry.

stones, used for ornament.

5. Rays of gold, signifying sanctity, around the

1. A resort town in the mountains.

head or body of the saint portrayed.

2. The baroque Jesuit church 11 Gesu, in Rome.

6. Ordinary limestone used in building.

The sculptured group of the Trinity includes a ter-

7. A variety of quartz.

restrial globe carved from the largest known block

8. Familiar name for Cicero (Marcus Tullius Cic-of lapis lazuli.

ero).

3. See Job 7.6: "My days are swifter than a

9. His Latin would be stylistically inferior to that weaver's shuttle, and are spent without hope."

of Cicero.

4. A staff ornamented with ivy or vine leaves, carried by followers of Bacchus, Roman god of wine

1016 / ROBERT BROWNING

85 For as I lie here, hours of the dead night,
Dying in state and by such slow degrees,
I fold my arms as if they clasped a crook,²
And stretch my feet forth straight as stone can point,
And let the bedclothes, for a mortcloth,³ drop 90 Into great laps and folds of sculptor's-work:
And as yon tapers dwindle, and strange thoughts
Grow, with a certain humming in my ears,
About the life before I lived this life,
And this life too, popes, cardinals and priests,
95 Saint Praxed at his sermon on the mount,⁴
Your tall pale mother with her talking eyes,
And new-found agate urns as fresh as day,
And marble's language, Latin pure, discreet,
—Aha, ELUCESCEBAT⁵ quoth our friend?
100 No Tully, said I, Ulpian at the best!
Evil and brief hath been my pilgrimage.
All lapis, all, son! Else I give the Pope
My villas! Will ye ever eat my heart?
Ever your eyes were as a lizard's quick,
105 They glitter like your mother's for my soul,
Or ye would heighten my impoverished frieze,
Piece out its starved design, and fill my vase
With grapes, and add a vizor and a Term,⁶

And to the tripod ye would tie a lynx 110 That in his struggle throws the thyrsus down,
 To comfort me on my entablature
 Whereon I am to lie till I must ask “Do I live, am I dead?” There, leave me, there!
 For ye have stabbed me with ingratitude
 115 To death—ye wish it—God, ye wish it! Stone—
 Gritstone, a-crumble! Clammy squares which sweat
 As if the corpse they keep were oozing through—
 And no more lapis to delight the world!
 Well, go! I bless ye. Fewer tapers there, 120 But in a row: and, going, turn your backs
 —Ay, like departing altar-ministrants,
 And leave me in my church, the church for peace,
 That I may watch at leisure if he leers—
 Old Gandolf, at me, from his onion-stone, 125 As still he envied me, so fair she was!

1844 1845, 1849

2. I.e., the bishop’s crozier, with its emblematic claims that this form is inferior to elucebat, which resembles to a shepherd’s crook.

Cicero would have used.

3. The pall with which a coffin is draped.

6. A pillar adorned with a bust of Terminus,

4. As the bishop’s mind wanders, he attributes Roman god of boundaries. Vizor: face mask on a Christ’s Sermon on the Mount to Santa Prassede. helmet. Both are motifs of classical sculpture imi-

5. A word from Gandolf's epitaph (a form of the tated by the Renaissance.

Latin verb meaning "to shine forth"); the bishop

A T O C C A T A O F G A L U P P I ' S / 1 0 1 7

Home-Thoughts, from Abroad

i

Oh, to be in England

Now that April's there,

And whoever wakes in England

Sees, some morning, unaware,

5 That the lowest boughs and the brushwood sheaf

Round the elm-tree bole are in tiny leaf,

While the chaffinch sings on the orchard bough

In England—now!

And after April, when May follows,

10 And the whitethroat builds, and all the swallows!

Hark, where my blossomed pear-tree in the hedge

Leans to the field and scatters on the clover

Blossoms and dewdrops—at the bent spray's edge—

That's the wise thrush; he sings each song twice over,

15 Lest you should think he never could recapture

The first fine careless rapture!

And though the fields look rough with hoary dew

All will be gay when noontide wakes anew

The buttercups, the little children's dower

20 —Far brighter than this gaudy melon-flower!

ca. 1845 1845

A Toccata of Galuppi's⁷

Oh Galuppi, Baldassare, this is very sad to find!

I can hardly misconceive you; it would prove me deaf and blind;

But although I take your meaning, 'tis with such a heavy mind!

2

Here you come with your old music, and here's all the good it brings.

5 What, they lived once thus at Venice where the merchants were the kings,

Where Saint Mark's is, where the Doges used to wed the sea with rings?8

7. This poem presents the reflections of a nine-often having the character of “showy improvisa-teenth-century Englishman as he plays a toccata tion” [Grove’s Dictionary of Music and Musicians].

by the eighteenth-century Venetian composer Bal-

8. Each year the doge, chief magistrate of the dassare Galuppi. (A toccata is a “touch-piece,” the Venetian republic, threw a ring into the sea with word derived from the Italian verb toccare, “to the ceremonial words “We wed thee, O sea, in sign touch”: “a composition intended to exhibit the of true and everlasting dominion.”

touch and execution of the performer,” and hence

1 0 1 8 / R O B E R T B R O W N I N G

3

Ay, because the sea's the street there; and 'tis arched by ...
what you

call

... Shylock's bridge⁹ with houses on it, where they kept the carnival:

I was never out of England—it's as if I saw it all.

4

io Did young people take their pleasure when the sea was warm in May?

Balls and masks¹ begun at midnight, burning ever to mid-day,
When they made up fresh adventures for the morrow, do you say?

5

Was a lady such a lady, cheeks so round and lips so red—
On her neck the small face buoyant, like a bellflower on its
bed,

15 O'er the breast's superb abundance where a man might base his head?

6

Well, and it was graceful of them—they'd break talk off and afford

—She, to bite her mask's black velvet—he, to finger on his sword,

While you sat and played Toccatas, stately at the clavichord?²

7

What? Those lesser thirds so plaintive, sixths diminished, sigh on sigh,

20 Told them something? Those suspensions, those solutions —“Must we die?”

Those commiserating sevenths³—“Life might last! we can but try!”

8

“Were you happy?” “Yes.” “And are you still as happy?” “Yes. And you?”

“Then, more kisses!” “Did I stop them, when a million seemed so few?”

Hark, the dominant’s persistence till it must be answered to!

9

25 So, an octave struck the answer. Oh, they praised you, I dare say!

“Brave Galuppi! that was music! good alike at grave and gay!

“I can always leave off talking when I hear a master play!”

10

Then they left you for their pleasure: till in due time, one by one,

Some with lives that came to nothing, some with deeds as well undone,

30 Death stepped tacitly and took them where they never see the sun.

9. The Rialto, a bridge over the Grand Canal.

3. This term and others in these lines refer to the

1. Masquerades.

technical devices Galuppi used to produce alter-

2. A keyboard instrument, similar to a piano but nating moods in his music, conflict in each case

sounding more like a harpsichord. In stanzas 7—9, being resolved into harmony. Thus the “dominant”

the quoted words represent the thoughts, feelings,

(the fifth note of the scale), after being persistently or casual remarks of Galuppi's Venetian audience, sounded, is answered by a resolving chord (lines

now dispersed by death.

24 - 25) .

MEMORABILIA / 1019

But when I sit down to reason, think to take my stand nor swerve,

While I triumph o'er a secret wrung from nature's close reserve,

In you come with your cold music⁴ till I creep through every nerve.

12

Yes, you, like a ghostly cricket, creaking where a house was burned:

35 "Dust and ashes, dead and done with, Venice spent what Venice

earned.

"The soul, doubtless, is immortal—where a soul can be discerned.

!3

"Yours for instance: you know physics, something of geology,

"Mathematics are your pastime; souls shall rise in their degree;

"Butterflies may dread extinction—you'll not die, it cannot be!

14

40 "As for Venice and her people, merely born to bloom and drop,

"Here on earth they bore their fruitage, mirth and folly were the crop:

“What of soul was left, I wonder, when the kissing had to stop?

15

“Dust and ashes!” So you creak it, and I want the heart to scold, lack

Dear dead women, with such hair, too—what’s become of all the gold

45 Used to hang and brush their bosoms? I feel chilly and grown old.

ca. 1847 1855

Memorabilia⁵

1

Ah, did you once see Shelley plain,

And did he stop and speak to you

And did you speak to him again?

How strange it seems and new!

2

5 But you were living before that,

And also you are living after;

And the memory I started at—

My starting moves your laughter.

3

I crossed a moor, with a name of its own

10 And a certain use in the world no doubt,

4. In stanzas 12-15, the quoted words are what poet Percy Bysshe Shelley (1792—1822; see pp. the speaker imagines Galuppi is saying to him.

8 6 3 - 9 3).

5. Memorable things. Line 1 refers to the English

1 0 2 0 / R O B E R T B R O W N I N G

Yet a hand's-breadth of it shines alone

'Mid the blank miles round about:

4

For there I picked up on the heather

And there I put inside my breast

15 A moulted feather, an eagle-feather!

Well, I forget the rest.

ca. 1851 1855

"Childe Roland to the Dark Tower Came"

*(See Edgar's Song in "Lear")*⁶

i

My first thought was, he lied in every word,

That hoary cripple, with malicious eye

Askance⁰ to watch the working of his lie squinting sideways

On mine, and mouth scarce able to afford

5 Suppression of the glee, that pursed and scored

Its edge, at one more victim gained thereby.

2

What else should he be set for, with his staff?

What, save to waylay with his lies, ensnare

All travelers who might find him posted there,

io And ask the road? I guessed what skull-like laugh

Would break, what crutch 'gin write my epitaph

For pastime in the dusty thoroughfare,

3

If at his counsel I should turn aside

Into that ominous tract which, all agree,
15 Hides the Dark Tower. Yet acquiescingly
I did turn as he pointed: neither pride
Nor hope rekindling at the end descried,
So much as gladness that some end might be.

4

For, what with my whole world-wide wandering, 20 What with my search drawn out through years, my hope
Dwindled into a ghost not fit to cope
With that obstreperous joy success would bring,— unruly
I hardly tried now to rebuke the spring
My heart made, finding failure in its scope.

6. In Shakespeare's King Lear 6.4, Edgar, tower came, / His word was still—Fie, foh, and Gloucester's son, disguised as a madman, meets fum, / I smell the blood of a British man.' ” Childe:
Lear in the midst of a storm; at the end of the medieval title applied to a youth awaiting knight-scene, Edgar sings: “Child Rowland to the dark hood.

” CHILDROLANDTOTHE DARKTOWER RCAME ” / 1021

5

25 As when a sick man very near to death
Seems dead indeed, and feels begin and end
The tears, and takes the farewell of each friend,
And hears one bid the other go, draw breath
Freelier outside, (“since all is o'er,” he saith,

30 “And the blow fallen no grieving can amend;”)

6

While some discuss if near the other graves
Be room enough for this, and when a day
Suits best for carrying the corpse away,
With care about the banners, scarves and staves:
35 And still the man hears all, and only craves
He may not shame such tender love and stay.

7

Thus, I had so long suffered in this quest,
Heard failure prophesied so oft, been writ
So many times among “The Band”—to wit,
40 The knights who to the Dark Tower’s search addressed
Their steps—that just to fail as they, seemed best,
And all the doubt was now—should I be fit?

8

So, quiet as despair, I turned from him,
That hateful cripple, out of his highway
45 Into the path he pointed. All the day
Had been a dreary one at best, and dim
Was settling to its close, yet shot one grim
Red leer to see the plain catch its estray.⁷

9

For mark! no sooner was I fairly found 50 Pledged to the plain, after a pace or two,
Than, pausing to throw backward a last view
O’er the safe road, ‘twas gone; gray plain all round:
Nothing but plain to the horizon’s bound.

I might go on; naught else remained to do.

i o

55 So, on I went. I think I never saw
Such starved ignoble nature; nothing throve:
For flowers—as well expect a cedar grove!
But cockle, spurge,⁸ according to their law
Might propagate their kind, with none to awe,
60 You'd think: a burr had been a treasure trove.

7. A stray or unclaimed domestic animal.

8. Cockle is a weed that bears burrs (line 60), prickly seed-heads; spurge, a bitter-tasting weed.

1022 / ROBERT BROWNING

No! penury, inertness and grimace,
In some strange sort, were the land's portion. "See Or shut your eyes," said Nature peevishly,
"It nothing skills:⁹ I cannot help my case:
65 'Tis the Last Judgment's fire must cure this place,
Calcine⁰ its clods and set my prisoners free." burn to powder 12

If there pushed any ragged thistle-stalk
Above its mates, the head was chopped; the bents⁰ reeds, rushes
Were jealous else. What made those holes and rents 70 In the dock's¹ harsh swarth⁰ leaves, bruised as to balk dark

All hope of greenness? 'tis a brute must walk
Pashing⁰ their life out, with a brute's intents.
crushing

As for the grass, it grew as scant as hair
In leprosy; thin dry blades pricked the mud
75 Which underneath looked kneaded up with blood.

One stiff blind horse, his every bone a-stare,
Stood stupefied, however he came there:
Thrust out past service from the devil's stud!

14

Alive? he might be dead for aught I know, so With that red gaunt coloped neck a-strain, chafed, ridged
And shut eyes underneath the rusty mane;
Seldom went such grotesqueness with such woe;
I never saw a brute I hated so;
He must be wicked to deserve such pain.

! 5

85

I shut my eyes and turned them on my heart.
As a man calls for wine before he fights,
I asked one draught of earlier, happier sights,
Ere fitly I could hope to play my part.
Think first, fight afterwards—the soldier's art:

90

One taste of the old time sets all to rights.

16

Not it! I fancied Cuthbert's reddening face
Beneath its garniture of curly gold, trimming
Dear fellow, till I almost felt him fold
An arm in mine to fix me to the place,
95 That way he used. Alas, one night's disgrace!

Out went my heart's new fire and left it cold.

9. I.e., it is useless. 1. Coarse, weedy plant's.

"CHILDEROLAND TO THE DARK TOWER RCAME" / 1023

17

Giles then, the soul of h o n o r — t h e r e he stands

Frank as ten years ago when knighted first.

W h a t honest m a n should dare (he said) he durst.

100 G o o d — b u t the scene shifts—faugh! what h a n g m a n hands

Pin to his breast a parchment? His own bands

Read it. Poor traitor, spit upon and curst!

18

Better this present than a past like that;

Back therefore to my darkening path again!

105 No sound, no sight as far as eye could strain.

Will the night send a howlet⁰ or a bat? owl

I asked: w h e n something on the dismal flat

C a m e to arrest my thoughts and change their train.

19

A sudden little river crossed my path

110 As unexpected as a serpent comes.

No sluggish tide congenial to the glooms;

This, as it frothed by, might have been a bath

For the fiend's glowing h o o f — t o see the wrath

Of its black eddy bespate⁰ with flakes and spumes. spattered

20

115 So petty yet so spiteful! All along,

Low scrubby alders kneeled down over it;

D r e n c h e d willows flung them headlong in a fit
Of m u t e despair, a suicidal throng:
T h e river which had done them all the wrong,
120 W h a t e ' e r that was, rolled by, deterred no whit.

21

Which, while I forded,—good saints, how I feared
To set my foot upon a dead man's cheek,
Each step, or feel the spear I thrust to seek
For hollows, tangled in his hair or beard!

125 —It may have been a water-rat I speared,
But, ugh! it sounded like a baby's shriek.

22

Glad was I w h e n I reached the other bank.
Now for a better country. Vain presage!
W h o were the strugglers, what war did they wage,
130 Whose savage trample thus could pad the dank
Soil to a splash? Toads in a poisoned tank, puddle
Or wild cats in a red-hot iron cage—

23

T h e fight must so have seemed in that fell cirque.²
W h a t p e n n e d them there, with all the plain to choose?

2. Dreadful hollow encircled by heights.

1 0 2 4 / R O B E R T B R O W N I N G

135 No footprint leading to that horrid mews,^o stabling area

None out of it. Mad brewage set to work

Their brains, no doubt, like galley-slaves the Turk

Pits for his pastime, Christians against Jews.

24

And more than that—a furlong on—why, there!

140 What bad use was that engine⁰ for, that wheel, mechanism

Or brake,³ not wheel—that harrow fit to reel

Men's bodies out like silk? with all the air

Of Tophet's⁰ tool, on earth left unaware, Hell's

Or brought to sharpen its rusty teeth of steel.

25

145 Then came a bit of stubbed ground, once a wood,

Next a marsh, it would seem, and now mere earth

Desperate and done with; (so a fool finds mirth,

Makes a thing and then mars it, till his mood

Changes and off he goes!) within a rood⁴—

150 Bog, clay and rubble, sand and stark black dearth.

26

Now blotches rankling,⁰ colored gay and grim, festering

Now patches where some leanness of the soil's

Broke into moss or substances like boils;

Then came some palsied oak, a cleft in him

155 Like a distorted mouth that splits its rim

Gaping at death, and dies while it recoils.

27

And just as far as ever from the end!

Nought in the distance but the evening, nought

To point my footstep further! At the thought,

160 A great black bird, Apollyon's⁵ bosom-friend,

Sailed past, nor beat his wide wing dragon-penned⁶

That brushed my cap—perchance the guide I sought.

28

For, looking up, aware I somehow grew,

‘Spite of the dusk, the plain had given place

165 All round to mountains—with such name to grace

Mere ugly heights and heaps now stolen in view.

How thus they had surprised me,—solve it, you!

How to get from them was no clearer case.

3. A toothed machine for breaking up flax or

5. “The angel of the bottomless pit, whose name hemp, to separate the fiber; here, an instrument of

in the Hebrew tongue is Abaddon, but in the Greek torture.

tongue ... Apollyon” (Revelation 9.11).

4. Quarter acre of land.

6. With pinions, wings, like a dragon’s.

” CHILDEROLAND TO THE DARK TOWER RCAME ” / 1 0 2 5

29

Yet half I seemed to recognize some trick

170 Of mischief happened to me, God knows when—

In a bad dream perhaps. Here ended, then,

Progress this way. When, in the very nick

Of giving up, one time more, came a click

As when a trap shuts—you’re inside the den!

3°

175 Burningly it came on me all at once,

This was the place! those two hills on the right,

Crouched like two bulls locked horn in horn in fight;
While to the left, a tall scalped mountain ... Duncce, Dotard, a-dozing at the very nonce,0 moment
180 After a life spent training for the sight!

31

What in the midst lay but the Tower itself?
The round squat turret, blind as the fool's heart,
Built of brown stone, without a counterpart
In the whole world. The tempest's mocking elf 185 Points to the shipman thus the unseen shelf
He strikes on, only when the timbers start.

32

Not see? because of night perhaps?—why, day
Came back again for that! before it left,
The dying sunset kindled through a cleft:
190 The hills, like giants at a hunting, lay,
Chin upon hand, to see the game at bay,—
“Now stab and end the creature—to the heft!”7

33

Not hear? when noise was everywhere! it tolled
Increasing like a bell. Names in my ears
195 Of all the lost adventurers my peers,—
How such a one was strong, and such was bold,
And such was fortunate, yet each of old
Lost, lost! one moment knelled the woe of years.

34

There they stood, ranged along the hillsides, met 200 To view the last of me, a living frame

For one more picture! in a sheet of flame
I saw them and I knew them all. And yet
Dauntless the slug-horn⁸ to my lips I set,
And blew. "Childe Roland to the Dark Tower came."

1852 1855

7. Handle of a dagger or sword.

8. Here, a kind of trumpet. Literally, a Scottish term for a clan's war cry.

1 0 2 6 / R O B E R T B R O W N I N G

Fra Lippo Lippi⁹

I am poor brother Lippo, by your leave!
You need not clap your torches to my face.
Zooks,¹ what's to blame? you think you see a monk!
What, 'tis pas midnight, and you go the rounds,
5 And here you catch me at an alley's end
Where sportive ladies leave their doors ajar?
T h e Carmine's my cloister:² hunt it up,
Do—harry out, if you must show your zeal,
Whatever rat, there, haps on his wrong hole,
10 And nip each softling of a wee white mouse,
Weke, weke, that's crept to keep him company!
Aha, you know your betters! Then, you'll take
Your hand away that's fiddling on my throat,
And please to know me likewise. W h o am I?
15 Why, one, sir, who is lodging with a friend
Three streets off—he's a certain ... how d'ye call?
Master—a ... Cosimo of the Medici,³
I' the house that caps the corner. Boh! you were best!

Remember and tell me, the day you're hanged,
20 How you affected such a gullet's-gripe!⁴
But you, sir, it concerns you that your knaves
Pick up a m a n n e r nor discredit you:
Zooks, are we pilchards,⁰ that they sweep the streets fish
And count fair prize what comes into their net?
25 He's Judas to a tittle, that man is!⁵
Just such a face! Why, sir, you make amends.
Lord, I'm not angry! Bid your hangdogs go Drink out this quarter-florin to the health
Of the munificent House that harbors me
30 (And many more beside, lads! more beside!)
And all's come square again. I'd like his face—
His, elbowing on his comrade in the door
With the pike and lantern—for the slave that holds
John Baptist's head a-dangle by the hair
35 With one hand ("Look you, now," as who should say)
And his weapon in the other, yet unwiped!
It's not your chance to have a bit of chalk,
A wood-coal or the like? or you should see!
Yes, I'm the painter, since you style me so.
40 What, brother Lippo's doings, up and down,
You know them and they take you? like enough!
I saw the proper twinkle in your eye—
9. Florentine painter (ca. 1406—1469), whose life up monastic vows in 1421, but was clothed by the Browning knew from Giorgio Vasari's Lives of the monastery until 1431 and was called "Fra Filippo"

Most Eminent Painters, Sculptors, and Architects

in documents until his death.

and from other sources, and whose paintings he

3. Cosimo de' Medici (1389-1464), Fra Lippo's had studied during his years in Florence.

wealthy patron and an important political power in

1. Short for Gadzooks, a mild oath (perhaps orig-Florence.

inally God's truth).

4. I.e., grip on my throat.

2. Fra Lippo had entered the Carmelite cloister

5. He says one of the watchmen who have arrested Santa Maria del Carmine while still a boy. He gave him looks exactly like Judas.

S-.

F R A L I P P O L I P P I / 1 0 2 7

'Tell you, I liked your looks at very first.

Let's sit a n d set things straight n o w , hip to h a u n c h .

45 Here's spring c o m e , a n d t h e nights o n e m a k e s up b a n d s T o r o a m t h e t o w n a n d sing out carnival,

A n d I've b e e n three w e e k s s h u t w i t h i n m y m e w
, 6

A-painting for the great m a n , saints a n d saints

A n d saints again. I c o u l d not paint all n i g h t —

50 Ouf! I l e a n e d out of w i n d o w for fresh air.

T h e r e c a m e a hurry of f e e t a n d little feet,

A s w e e p of lute-strings, laughs, and w h i f t s of s o n g
—

Flower o' the broom,

Take away love, and our earth is a tomb!

55 Flower o' the quince,

I let Lisa go, and what good in life since?

Flower o' the thyme—and so on. R o u n d t h e y w e n t .

S c a r c e h a d t h e y t u r n e d t h e c o r n e r w h e n a t i t t e r

L i k e t h e s k i p p i n g o f r a b b i t s b y m o o n l i g h t — t h r e e s l i m s h a p e s , 60 A n d a f a c e t h a t l o o k e d u p ... z o o k s , s i r , f l e s h a n d b l o o d , T h a t ' s a l l I ' m m a d e o f ! I n t o s h r e d s i t w e n t ,

C u r t a i n a n d c o u n t e r p a n e a n d c o v e r l e t ,

A l l t h e b e d - f u r n i t u r e — a d o z e n k n o t s ,

T h e r e w a s a l a d d e r ! D o w n I l e t m y s e l f ,

65 H a n d s a n d f e e t , s c r a m b l i n g s o m e h o w , a n d s o d r o p p e d ,

A n d a f t e r t h e m . I c a m e u p w i t h t h e f u n

H a r d b y S a i n t L a u r e n c e , 7 h a i l f e l l o w , w e l l m e t —

Flower o' the rose,

If I've been merry, what matter who knows?

70 A n d s o a s I w a s s t e a l i n g b a c k a g a i n

T o g e t t o b e d a n d h a v e a b i t o f s l e e p

E r e I r i s e u p t o - m o r r o w a n d g o w o r k

O n J e r o m e k n o c k i n g a t h i s p o o r o l d b r e a s t 8

W i t h h i s g r e a t r o u n d s t o n e t o s u b d u e t h e f l e s h , 75 Y o u s n a p m e o f t h e s u d d e n . A h , I s e e !

T h o u g h y o u r e y e t w i n k l e s s t i l l , y o u s h a k e y o u r h e a d
—

M i n e ' s s h a v e d — a m o n k , y o u s a y — t h e s t i n g ' s i n t h a t !

I f M a s t e r C o s i m o a n n o u n c e d h i m s e l f ,

M u m ' s t h e w o r d n a t u r a l l y ; b u t a m o n k !

so C o m e , w h a t a m I a b e a s t f o r ? t e l l u s , n o w !

I w a s a b a b y w h e n m y m o t h e r d i e d

A n d f a t h e r d i e d a n d l e f t m e i n t h e s t r e e t .

I s t a r v e d t h e r e , G o d k n o w s h o w , a y e a r o r t w o

O n f i g - s k i n s , m e l o n - p a r i n g s , r i n d s a n d s h u c k s ,

85 R e f u s e a n d r u b b i s h . O n e f i n e f r o s t y d a y ,

M y s t o m a c h b e i n g e m p t y a s y o u r h a t ,

T h e w i n d d o u b l e d m e u p a n d d o w n I w e n t .

O l d A u n t L a p a c c i a t r u s s e d m e w i t h o n e h a n d ,

(I t s f e l l o w w a s a s t i n g e r a s I k n e w)

90 A n d s o a l o n g t h e w a l l , o v e r t h e b r i d g e ,

B y t h e s t r a i g h t c u t t o t h e c o n v e n t . S i x w o r d s t h e r e ,

6. I.e., within the confines of my quarters (in the Medici palace.

Medici palace).

8. I.e., on a painting of St. Jerome in the Desert.

7. The church of San Lorenzo, not far from the

1 0 2 8 / R O B E R T B R O W N I N G

While I stood munching my first bread that month:

“So, boy, you’re minded,” quoth the good fat father

Wiping his own mouth, ‘t was refection-time⁰— mealttime

95 “To quit this very miserable world?

“Will you renounce” ... “the mouthful of bread?” thought I;

By no means! Brief, they made a monk of me;

I did renounce the world, its pride and greed,

Palace, farm, villa, shop and banking-house,

100 Trash, such as these poor devils of Medici

Have given their hearts to—all at eight years old.

Well, sir, I found in time, you may be sure,
‘T was not for nothing—the good bellyful,
The warm serge and the rope that goes all round,
105 And day-long blessed idleness beside!
“Let’s see what the urchin’s fit for”—that came next.
Not overmuch their way, I must confess.
Such a to-do! They tried me with their books:
Lord, they’d have taught me Latin in pure waste!
110 Flower o’ the clove,
All the Latin I construe is, “amo” I love!
But, mind you, when a boy starves in the streets
Eight years together, as my fortune was,
Watching folk’s faces to know who will fling
115 The bit of half-stripped grape-bunch he desires,
And who will curse or kick him for his pains—
Which gentleman processional and fine,
Holding a candle to the Sacrament,
Will wink and let him lift a plate and catch 120 The droppings of the wax to sell again,
Or holla for the Eight⁹ and have him whipped—
How say I? nay, which dog bites, which lets drop
His bone from the heap of offal in the street—
Why, soul and sense of him grow sharp alike,
125 He learns the look of things, and none the less
For admonition from the hunger-pinch.
I had a store of such remarks, be sure,
Which, after I found leisure, turned to use.
I drew men’s faces on my copy-books,

130 Scrawled them within the antiphony's¹ marge,
 Joined legs and arms to the long music-notes,
 Found eyes and nose and chin for A's and B's,
 And made a string of pictures of the world
 Betwixt the ins and outs of verb and noun, 135 On the wall, the bench, the door. The monks looked black.
 "Nay," quoth the Prior, "turn him out, d'ye say?"
 "In no wise. Lose a crow and catch a lark.
 "What if at last we get our man of parts,
 "We Carmelites, like those Camaldolese

140 "And Preaching Friars,² to do our church up fine

9. The Florentine magistrates. 2. I.e., members of a Dominican religious order.

1. The book containing the antiphons, or re- Camaldolese: members of a Benedictine religious spones chanted in the liturgy. order at Camaldoli, in the Apennines.

FRA L I P P O L I P P I / 1 0 2 9

"And put the front on it that ought to be!"

And here upon he bad medauba way.

Thank you! my head being crammed, the walls a blank, Never was such prompt disem burdening.

145 First, every sort of monk, the black and white, I drew them, fat and lean: then, folk at church, From good old gossip waiting to confess Their cribs⁰ of barrel-droppings, candle-ends — minor thefts

To the breathless fellow at the altar-foot, 150 Fresh from his murder, safe and sitting there
 With the little children round him in a row

O f admiration, half for his beard and half
F or that white anger of his victim 's son

S haking a fist at him with one fierce arm, 155 S igning 3 himself with the other because e of Christ (Whose sad face on the cross see s only this A fter the passion 0 of a thousand
y ears) *suffering

Till some poor girl, her apron o'er her head, (Which the intense eyes looked through) c a me a eve i 60 O n tiptoe, said a word, droppe d in a loaf, H er pair of earrings and a bunch
o f flowers (The brut e took growling), pra y ed, and so was gone.

I painted all, then cried " 'Tis ask and have;
" Choose, for more 's ready!" — laid the lad
d er flat, 165 A nd showed my covered bit of cloi
s ter - wall.

T he monks closed in a circle and praised lo u d Till checked, taught what to see and not t o see, B eings simple bodies — " That 's the v ery man!

" Look at the boy who stoop stop at the dog!
170 " That woman 's like the Prior's niece who c o mes

" To care about this asthma : it's the life!"

B ut the my triumph 's straw - fire flared a nd funk ed ; 4

T heir better took their turn to see and say:
T he P rior and the learned pulled a face

175 A nd stopped all that in no time . " How ? w h at 's here ?

" Quite from the mark of painting, bless us
a ll!

" Faces, arms, legs and bodies like the true

“As much as pe a a n d p e a ! it’s devil’s - g a m e !
“Your business is not to catch men with show
, iso ” With hom a g e t o t h e p e r i s h a b l e c l a y , “But lift t h e m o v e r i t , i g n o r e i t a l l ,
” M a k e t h e m f o r g e t t h e r e ‘ s s u c h a t h i n g a s f l e s h .
“Your business is to paint the souls of men —
” M a n ‘ s s o u l , a n d i t ‘ s a f i r e , s m o k e ... n o , i t ‘ s n o t ...

185 “It’s v a p o r d o n e u p l i k e a n e w - b o r n b a b e —
“(In that shape when you die it leaves your m o u t h)
“It’s ... w e l l , w h a t m a t t e r s t a l k i n g , i t ‘ s t h e s o u l !

“Give us no more of body than shows soul!
” H e r e ‘ s G i o t t o , 5 w i t h h i s S a i n t a - p r a i s i n g G o d , 3. Making the sign of the cross with one hand, 5. The great Florentine painter Giotto di Bondone because of the image of Christ on the altar. (1267—1337).

4. Expired in smoke.

1030 / ROBERT BROWNING

190 “That sets us praising—why not stop with him?
“Why put all thoughts of praise out of our head
“With wonder at lines, colors, and what not?
“Paint the soul, never mind the legs and arms!
“Rub all out, try at it a second time.
195 “Oh, that white smallish female with the breasts, “She’s just my niece ... Herodias,⁶ I would say—
“Who went and danced and got men’s heads cut off!
“Have it all out!” Now, is this sense, I ask?

A fine way to paint soul, by painting body
200 So ill, the eye can't stop there, must go further
And can't fare worse! Thus, yellow does for white
When what you put for yellow's simply black,
And any sort of meaning looks intense
When all beside itself means and looks nought.
205 Why can't a painter lift each foot in turn,
Left foot and right foot, go a double step,
Make his flesh liker and his soul more like,
Both in their order? Take the prettiest face,
The Prior's niece ... patron-saint—is it so pretty 210 You can't discover if it means hope, fear,
Sorrow or joy? won't beauty go with these?
Suppose I've made her eyes all right and blue,
Can't I take breath and try to add life's flash,
And then add soul and heighten them threefold?
215 Or say there's beauty with no soul at all—
(I never saw it—put the case the same—)
If you get simple beauty and nought else,
You get about the best thing God invents:
That's somewhat: and you'll find the soul you have missed,
220 Within yourself, when you return him thanks.
“Rub all out!” Well, well, there's my life, in short,
And so the thing has gone on ever since.
I'm grown a man no doubt, I've broken bounds:
You should not take a fellow eight years old 225 And make him swear to never kiss the girls.
I'm my own master, paint now as I please—

Having a friend, you see, in the Corner-house!⁷
Lord, it's fast holding by the rings in front—
Those great rings serve more purposes than just 230 To plant a flag in, or tie up a horse!
And yet the old schooling sticks, the old grave eyes
Are peeping o'er my shoulder as I work,
The heads shake still—"It's art's decline, my son!
"You're not of the true painters, great and old; 235 "Brother Angelico's the man, you'll find;
"Brother Lorenzo⁸ stands his single peer:

6. Also called Salome; her mother (whose name of John the Baptist on a platter (Matthew 14.1-12) was Herodias as well), sister-in-law of the tetrarch

Herod, had demanded that John the Baptist be
7. I.e., the Medici palace.

imprisoned. When Salome so pleased the king with

8. Fra Angelico (1387-1455) and Fra Lorenzo her dancing that he promised her anything she Monaco (1370-1425).

asked, Herodias instructed her to ask for the head

I

FRALIPPOLIPPI / 1031

"Fag^o on at flesh, you'll never make the third!" toil

Flower o' the fine,

You keep your mistr ... manners, and I'll stick to mine!

240 I'm not the third, then: bless us, they must know!

Don't you think they're the likeliest to know,

They with their Latin? So, I swallow my rage,
Clench my teeth, suck my lips in tight, and paint
To please them—sometimes do and sometimes don't;
245 For, doing most, there's pretty sure to come
A turn, some warm eve finds me at my saints—
A laugh, a cry, the business of the world—

(Flower o' the peach,

Death for us all, and his own life for each!)

250 And my whole soul revolves, the cup runs over,
The world and life's too big to pass for a dream,
And I do these wild things in sheer despite,
And play the fooleries you catch me at,

In pure rage! The old mill-horse, out at grass

255 After hard years, throws up his stiff heels so,
Although the miller does not preach to him
The only good of grass is to make chaff.

What would men have? Do they like grass or no—

May they or mayn't they? all I want's the thing

260 Settled for ever one way. As it is,

You tell too many lies and hurt yourself:

You don't like what you only like too much,

You do like what, if given you at your word,

You find abundantly detestable.

265 For me, I think I speak as I was taught;

I always see the garden and God there

A-making man's wife: and, my lesson learned,

The value and significance of flesh,

I can't unlearn ten minutes afterwards.

270 You understand me: I'm a beast, I know.
But see, now—why, I see as certainly
As that the morning-star's about to shine,
What will hap some day. We've a youngster here
Comes to our convent, studies what do,
275 Slouches and stares and lets no atom drop:
His name is Guidi—he'll not mind the monks—
They call him Hulking Tom,⁹ he lets them talk—
He picks my practice up—he'll paint apace,
I hope so—though I never live so long,
280 I know what's sure to follow. You be judge!
You speak no Latin more than I, belike;
However, you're my man, you've seen the world
—The beauty and the wonder and the power,
9. The painter Tommaso Guidi (1401-1428), painting, was completed by Fra Lippo's son, Filip-known as Masaccio (from Tomasaccio, meaning pino Lippi, and it is in fact more likely that Fra “Big Tom” or “Hulking Tom”). The series of fres-Lippo learned from Masaccio than that he saw him
coes that he painted in Santa Maria del Carmine, as a promising newcomer.

of key importance in the history of Florentine

1 0 3 2 / R O B E R T B R O W N I N G

The shapes of things, their colors, lights and shades, 285 Changes, surprises—and God made it all!
—For what? Do you feel thankful, ay or no,
For this fair town's face, yonder river's line,

The mountain round it and the sky above,
Much more the figures of man, woman, child,
290 These are the frame to? What's it all about?
To be passed over, despised? or dwelt upon,
Wondered at? oh, this last of course!—you say.
But why not do as well as say, paint these
Just as they are, careless what comes of it?
295 God's works—paint anyone, and count it crime
To let a truth slip. Don't object, "His works
"Are here already; nature is complete:
"Suppose you reproduce her (which you can't)
"There's no advantage! you must beat her, then."
300 For, don't you mark? we're made so that we love
First when we see them painted, things we have passed
Perhaps a hundred times nor cared to see;
And so they are better, painted—better to us,
Which is the same thing. Art was given for that;
305 God uses us to help each other so,
Lending our minds out. Have you noticed, now,
Your cullion's^o hanging face? A bit of chalk, rascal's
And trust me but you should, though! How much more,
If I drew higher things with the same truth!
310 That were to take the Prior's pulpit-place,
Interpret God to all of you! Oh, oh,
It makes me mad to see what men shall do
And we in our graves! This world's no blot for us,
Nor blank; it means intensely, and means good:
315 To find its meaning is my meat and drink.

“Ay, but you don’t so instigate to prayer!”
 Strikes in the Prior: “when your meaning’s plain
 “It does not say to folk—remember matins,⁰ morning prayers
 “Or, mind you fast next Friday!” Why, for this 320 What need of art at all? A skull and bones,
 Two bits of stick nailed crosswise, or, what’s best,
 A bell to chime the hour with, does as well.
 I painted a Saint Laurence six months since
 At Prato,¹ splashed the fresco in fine style:
 325 “How looks my painting, now the scaffold’s down?”
 I ask a brother: “Hugely,” he returns—
 “Already not one phiz^o of your three slaves face
 “Who turn the Deacon off his toasted side,² “But’s scratched and prodded to our heart’s content, 330 “The pious people have so eased their own
 “With coming to say prayers there in a rage:
 “We get on fast to see the bricks beneath.
 1. Smaller town near Florence, where Fra Lippo on a gridiron; according to legend, he urged his painted some of his most important pictures.
 executioners to turn him over, saying that he was
 2. Saint Lawrence was martyred by being roasted done on one side.

FRA LIPPO LIPPI / 1 0 3 3

“Expect another job this time next year,
 “For pity and religion grow i’ the crowd—
 335 “Your painting serves its purpose!” Hang the fools!
 —That is—you’ll not mistake an idle word

Spoke in a huff by a poor monk, God wot,^o knows Tasting the air this spicy night which turns
The unaccustomed head like Chianti wine!
340 Oh, the church knows! don't misreport me, now!
It's natural a poor monk out of bounds
Should have his apt word to excuse himself:
And hearken how I plot to make amends.
I have bethought me: I shall paint a piece 345 ... There's for you! Give me six months, then go, see Something in Sant' Ambrogio's!³ Bless the nuns!
They want a cast^o o' my office.^o I shall paint sample / work
God in the midst, Madonna and her babe,
Ringed by a bowery flowery angel-brood,
350 Lilies and vestments and white faces, sweet
As puff on puff of grated orris-root⁴
When ladies crowd to Church at midsummer.
And then i' the front, of course a saint or t w o -
Saint John, because he saves the Florentines,⁵ 355 Saint Ambrose, who puts down in black and white
The convent's friends and gives them a long day,
And Job, I must have him there past mistake,
The man of Uz (and Us without the z, Painters who need his patience). Well, all these 360 Secured at their devotion, up shall come Out of a corner when you least expect,
As one by a dark stair into a great light,
Music and talking, who but Lippo! I!
Mazed, motionless and moonstruck—I'm the man!

365 Back I shrink—what is this I see and hear?
 I, caught up with my monk's-things by mistake,
 My old serge gown and rope that goes all round,
 I, in this presence, this pure company!
 Where's a hole, where's a corner for escape?
 370 Then steps a sweet angelic slip of a thing Forward, puts out a soft palm—"Not so fast!"
 —Addresses the celestial presence, "nay—
 "He made you and devised you, after all,
 "Though he's none of you! Could Saint John there draw—375 "His camel-hair⁶ make up a painting-brush?
 "We come to brother Lippo for all that,
 "Iste perfecit opus!"⁷ So, all smile—

3. Fra Lippo painted the Coronation of the Virgin, Mark 1.6.

here described, for the high altar of Sant' Ambrogio

7. This man made the work! (Latin); possibly a ref-
 in 1447.

erence to the commissioning of the painting. The

4. Talcumlike powder made from flower roots.

figure that Browning took to be that of the painter

5. San Giovanni is the patron saint of Florence.

may be that of the patron, the Very Reverend Fran-

6. John the Baptist is often portrayed wearing cesco Marengi, who ordered the painting in a rough robe of camel's hair, in accord with 1441.

1 0 3 4

/ R O B E R T B R O W N I N G

I shuffle sideways with my blushing face
Under the cover of a hundred wings
380 Thrown like a spread of kirtles⁸ when you re gay cheerful
And play hot cockles,⁹ all the doors being shut,
Till, wholly unexpected, in there pops
The hothead husband! Thus I scuttle off
To some safe bench behind, not letting go 385 The palm of her, the little lily thing
That spoke the good word for me in the nick,
Like the Prior's niece ... Saint Lucy, I would say.
And so all's saved for me, and for the church
A pretty picture gained. Go, six months hence!
390 Your hand, sir, and good-bye: no lights, no lights!
The street's hushed, and I know my own way back,
Don't fear me! there's the gray beginning. Zooks!
ca. 1853 1855

Andrea del Sarto¹

Called "The Faultless Painter"

But do not let us quarrel any more,
No, my Lucrezia; bear with me for once:
Sit down and all shall happen as you wish.
You turn your face, but does it bring your heart?
5 I'll work then for your friend's friend, never fear,
Treat his own subject after his own way,
Fix his own time, accept too his own price,
And shut the money into this small hand
When next it takes mine. Will it? tenderly?

io Oh, I'll content him—but tomorrow, Love!

I often am much wearier than you think,
This evening more than usual, and it seems
As if—forgive now—should you let me sit Here by the window with your hand in mine
15 And look a half-hour forth on Fiesole,²
Both of one mind, as married people use,
Quietly, quietly the evening through
I might get up tomorrow to my work
Cheerful and fresh as ever. Let us try.

20 Tomorrow, how you shall be glad for this!

Your soft hand is a woman of itself,

8. Women's gowns or skirts.

he had been paid. But he did not return, and he

9. A game in which a blindfolded player must spent money that the king had given him to purguess who has struck him or her.

chase works of art in Italy on a house in Florence

1. The Florentine painter Andrea del Sarto

for him and Lucrezia. These and other facts

(1486-1530) spent his entire life in Florence

Browning derived from Giorgio Vasari's Lives of the except for a year's sojourn at the court of the Most Eminent Painters, Sculptors, and Architects.

French king, Francis I, at Fontainebleau, 1518—

But the poem also depends on Browning's own

19. He had been married since 1517 to Lucrezia response to Andrea's art.

del Fede, a widow, and in response to her pleading
2. A small town on the crown of a hill above Flor-he left Fontainebleau, with the understanding that ence.

he would soon return to complete work for which

A N D R E A D E L S A R T O / 1 0 3 5

And mine the man's bared breast she curls inside.

Don't count the time lost, neither; you must serve

For each of the five pictures we require:

25 It saves a model. So! keep looking so—

My serpentine beauty, rounds on rounds!3

—How could you ever prick those perfect ears,

Even to put the pearl there! oh, so sweet—

My face, my moon, my everybody's moon,

30 Which everybody looks on and calls his,

And, I suppose, is looked on by in turn,

While she looks—no one's: very dear, no less.4

You smile? why, there's my picture ready made,

There's what we painters call our harmony!

35 A common grayness silvers everything,

All in a twilight, you and I alike

—You, at the point of your first pride in me

(That's gone you know)—but I, at every point;

My youth, my hope, my art, being all toned down

40 To yonder sober pleasant Fiesole.

There's the bell clinking from the chapel-top;

That length of convent-wall across the way

Holds the trees safer, huddled more inside;

The last monk leaves the garden; days decrease,
45 And autumn grows, autumn in everything.
Eh? the whole seems to fall into a shape
As if I saw alike my work and self
And all that I was born to be and do,
A twilight-piece. Love, we are in God's hand.
50 How strange now, looks the life he makes us lead;
So free we seem, so fettered fast we are!
I feel he laid the fetter: let it lie!
This chamber for example—turn your head—
All that's behind us! You don't understand 55 Nor care to understand about my art,
But you can hear at least when people speak:
And that cartoon,⁵ the second from the door
—It is the thing, Love! so such things should be—Behold Madonna! I am bold to say.
60 I can do with my pencil what I know,
What I see, what at bottom of my heart
I wish for, if I ever wish so deep—
Do easily, too—when I say, perfectly,
I do not boast, perhaps: yourself are judge,
65 Who listened to the Legate's⁶ talk last week,
And just as much they used to say in France.
At any rate 'tis easy, all of it!
No sketches first, no studies, that's long past:
I do what many dream of, all their lives,
3. Coils of hair like a serpent's coils.
5. A preparatory drawing, on heavy paper, of the

4. Her affections are focused on no one person, same size as the painting to be executed from it in not even on her husband, yet she is very dear to oil or fresco.
him.

6. The pope's representative's.

1036 / ROBERT BROWNING

70 — D r e a m ? s t r i v e t o d o , a n d a g o n i z e t o d o ,
A n d f a i l i n d o i n g . I c o u l d c o u n t t w e n t y s u c h
O n t w i c e y o u r f i n g e r s , a n d n o t l e a v e t h i s t o w n , W h o s t r i v e — y o u d o n ' t k n o w h o w t h e o t h e r s s t r i v e T o p a i n t a l i t t l e t h i n g l i k e t h a t y o u s m e a r e d 75 C a r e l e s s l y p a s s i n g w i t h y o u r r o b e s a f l o
a t —

Y e t d o m u c h l e s s , s o m u c h l e s s , S o m e o n e s a y s , (I k n o w h i s n a m e , n o m a t t e r) — s o m u c h l e s s !

W e l l , l e s s i s m o r e , L u c r e z i a : I a m j u d g e d .

T h e r e b u r n s a t r u e r l i g h t o f G o d i n t h e m , s o I n t h e i r v e x e d b e a t i n g s t u f f e d a n d s t o p p e d - u p b r a i n , H e a r t , o r w h a t e ' e r e l s e , t h a n g o e s o n t o p r o m p t T h i s l o w - p u l s e d f o r t h r i g h t c r a f t s m a n ' s h a n d o f m i n e .

T h e i r w o r k s d r o p g r o u n d w a r d , b u t t h e m s e l v e s , I k n o w , R e a c h m a n y a t i m e a h e a v e n t h a t ' s s h u t t o m e ,

85 E n t e r a n d t a k e t h e i r p l a c e t h e r e s u r e e n o u g h
, T h o u g h t h e y c o m e b a c k a n d c a n n o t t e l l t h e w o r l d .

M y w o r k s a r e n e a r e r h e a v e n , b u t I s i t h e r e .

T h e s u d d e n b l o o d o f t h e s e m e n ! a t a w o r d —
P r a i s e t h e m , i t b o i l s , o r b l a m e t h e m , i t b o i l s t o o .

90 I, painting from myself and to myself,
Know what I do, am unmoved by men's blame
e

Or their praise either. Somebody remarks

Morello's⁷ outline there is wrongly traced,
His hue mistaken; what of that? or else,

95 Rightly traced and well ordered; what of that?

Speak as they please, what does themount
ain care?

Ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp, Or what's a heaven for? All is silver-gray

Placid and perfect with my art: the worse!

100 I know both what I want and what might gain, And yet how profitless to know, to sigh

"Had I been two, another and myself,

Our head would have o'erlooked the world!" No doubt.

Yonder's a work now, of that famous youth

105 The Urbinate⁸ who died five years ago.

('Tis copied, George Vasari⁹ sent it me.)

Well, I can fancy how he did it all,

Pouring his soul, with kings and pope to see,

Reaching, that heaven might sore replenish him, 110 Above and through his art — for it gives way;

That arm is wrongly put — and there again
—

A fault to pardon in the drawing's lines,

Its body, so to speak: its soul is right,

He means right — that, a child may understand.

115 Still, w h a t an arm! a n d I c o u l d alter it:
B u t all t h e play, t h e i n s i g h t a n d t h e s t r e t c h —
O u t o f m e , o u t o f m e ! A n d w h e r e f o r e o u t ?
H a d y o u e n j o i n e d t h e m o n m e , g i v e n m e s o u l ,
W e m i g h t h a v e r i s e n t o R a f a e l , I a n d y o u !

7. Monte Morello is a mountain lying a little to because he was born at Urbino.

the northwest of Florence in the Apennines. 9. Giorgio Vasari, the biographer, was a painter 8. The painter Raphael (1483-1520), so called and an architect and had been Andrea's pupil.

A N D R E A D E L S A R T O / 1 0 3 7

120 Nay, Love, you did give all I asked, I think—
More than I merit, yes, by many times.

But had you—oh, with the same perfect brow,
And perfect eyes, and more than perfect mouth,
And the low voice my soul hears, as a bird

125 The fowler's⁰ pipe, and follows to the snare— bird-catcher's

Had you, with these the same, but brought a mind!
Some women do so. Had the mouth there urged “God and the glory! never care for gain.

The present by the future, what is that?

BO Live for fame, side by side with Agnolo!1

“Rafael is waiting: up fcb God, all three!”

I might have done it for you. So it seems:

Perhaps not. All is as God over-rules.

Beside, incentives come from the soul's self;

135 The rest avail not. Why do I need you?

What wife had Rafael, or has Agnolo?

In this world, who can do a thing, will not;
And who would do it, cannot, I perceive:
Yet the will's somewhat—somewhat, too, the power—
HO And thus we half-men struggle. At the end,
God, I conclude, compensates, punishes.
'Tis safer for me, if the award be strict,
That I am something underrated here,
Poor this long while, despised, to speak the truth.
145 I dared not, do you know, leave home all day,
For fear of chancing on the Paris lords.
The best is when they pass and look aside;
But they speak sometimes; I must bear it all.
Well may they speak! That Francis, that first time,
150 And that long festal year at Fontainebleau!²
I surely then could sometimes leave the ground,
Put on the glory, Rafael's daily wear,
In that humane great monarch's golden look—
One finger in his beard or twisted curl
155 Over his mouth's good mark that made the smile,
One arm about my shoulder, round my neck,
The jingle of his gold chain in my ear,
I painting proudly with his breath on me,
All his court round him, seeing with his eyes,
160 Such frank French eyes, and such a fire of souls
Profuse, my hand kept plying by those hearts—
And, best of all, this, this, this face beyond,
This in the background, waiting on my work,
To crown the issue with a last reward!

165 A good time, was it not, my kingly days?
And had you not grown restless ... but I know—
'Tis done and past; 'twas right, my instinct said;
Too live the life grew, golden and not gray,
And I'm the weak-eyed bat no sun should tempt

1. I.e., Michelangelo (1475-1564).

2. The village southwest of Paris where Francis I built the royal palace.

1038 / ROBERT BROWNING

170 Out of the grange whose four walls make his world, country house

How could it end in any other way?

You called me, and I came home to your heart.

The triumph was — to reach and stay there; since
I reached it ere the triumph, what is lost?

175 Let my hands frame your face in your hair's gold, You beautiful Lucrezia that are mine!

"Rafael did this, Andrea painted that;

"The Roman's is the better when you pray,

"But still the other's Virgin was his wife —"

iso Men will excuse me. I am glad to judge

Both pictures in your presence; clearer grows
My better fortune, I resolve to think.

For, do you know, Lucrezia, as God lives,

Said one day Agnolo, his very self,

185 To Rafael ... I have known it all these years

...

(When the young man was flaming out his thoughts Upon a palace-wall for Rome to see,
e,

To lifted up in heart because of it)

“Friend, there’s a certain sorry little scrub

190 Goes up and down our Florence, none care
reshow, Who, were he set to plan and execute

As you are, pricked on by your popes and kings,
Would bring the sweat into that brow of yours!”

To Rafael’s! And indeed the arm is wrong.

195 I hardly dare ... yet, only you to see,

Give the chalk here—quick, thus the lines hold go!

Ay, but the soul! he’s Rafael! rub it out!

Still, all I care for, if he spoke the truth,

(What he? why, who but Michel Agnolo?

200 Do you forget already words like those?)
If really there was such a chance, so lost,

Is, whether you’re—not grateful—but more repleased.

Well, let me think so. And you smile indeed!

This hour has been an hour! Another smile
?

205 If you would sit thus by me every night

I should work better, do you comprehend?

I mean that I should earn more, give you more.

See, it is settled dusk now; there’s a star;

Morello’s gone, the watch-light show the wall, 210 The cue-owls speak the name we c a l l t h e m b y.

C o m e f r o m t h e w i n d o w , l o v e — c o m e i n , a t
l a s t ,

I n s i d e t h e m e l a n c h o l y l i t t l e h o u s e

W e b u i l t t o b e s o g a y w i t h . G o d i s j u s t .

K i n g F r a n c i s m a y f o r g i v e m e : o f t a t n i g h t s 215 W h e n I l o o k u p f r o m p a i n t i n g , e y e s t i r e d o u t , T h e w a l l s b e c o m e i l l u m i n e d , b r i c k f r o m b r i c k D i s t i n c t , i n s t e a d o f m o r t a r , f i e r c e b r i g h t g o l d , T h a t g o l d o f h i s I d i d c e m e n t t h e m w i t h !

L e t u s b u t l o v e e a c h o t h e r . M u s t y o u g o ?

220 T h a t C o u s i n h e r e a g a i n ? h e w a i t s o u t s i d e ?

3. Refers to Raphael, who worked in Rome for the 4. A Mediterranean owl whose name derives from last twelve years of his life. its cry, ki-ou.

A N D R E A D E L S A R T O / 1 1 0 3

Must see you—you, and not with me? Those loans?

More gaming debts to pay? you smiled for that?

Well, let smiles buy me! have you more to spend?

While hand and eye and something of a heart

225 Are left me, work's my ware, and what's it worth?

I'll pay my fancy. Only let me sit

The gray remainder of the evening out,

Idle, you call it, and muse perfectly

How I could paint, were I but back in France,

230 One picture, just one more—the Virgin's face,

Not yours this time! I want you at my side

To hear them—that is, Michel Agnolo—

Judge all I do and tell you of its worth.

Will you? Tomorrow, satisfy your friend.
235 I take the subjects for his corridor,
Finish the portrait out of hand—there, there,
And throw him in another thing or two
If he demurs; the whole should prove enough
To pay for this same Cousin's freak. Beside, 240 What's better and what's all I care about,
Get you the thirteen scudi⁵ for the ruff!
Love, does that please you? Ah, but what does he,
The Cousin! what does he to please you more?
I am grown peaceful as old age tonight.
245 I regret little, I would change still less.
Since there my past life lies, why alter it?
The very wrong to Francis! it is true
I took his coin, was tempted and complied,
And built this house and sinned, and all is said.
250 My father and my mother died of want.
Well, had I riches of my own? you see
How one gets rich! Let each one bear his lot.
They were born poor, lived poor, and poor they died:
And I have labored somewhat in my time
255 And not been paid profusely. Some good son Paint my two hundred pictures—let him try!
No doubt, there's something strikes a balance. Yes,
You loved me quite enough, it seems tonight.
This must suffice me here. What would one have?
260 In heaven, perhaps, new chances, one more chance—
Four great walls in the New Jerusalem,⁶

Meted on each side by the angel's reed,
For Leonard,⁷ Rafael, Agnolo and me
To cover—the three first without a wife,
265 While I have mine! So—still they overcome
Because there's still Lucrezia—as I choose.
Again the Cousin's whistle! Go, my Love.

. 1853

Shields (Italian); silver coins bearing a shield. 7. I.e., Leonardo da Vinci (1452—1519).

Cf. Revelation 21 . 10 - 21 .

1040 / ROBERT BROWNING

Two in the Campagna⁸

i

I wonder do you feel today
As I have felt since, hand in hand,
We sat down on the grass, to stray
In spirit better through the land,
5 This morn of Rome and May?

2

For me, I touched a thought, I know,
Has tantalized me many times,
(Like turns of thread the spiders throw Mocking across our path) for rhymes
io To catch at and let go.

3

Help me to hold it! First it left
The yellowing fennel,⁹ run to seed
There, branching from the brickworks cleft,

Some old tomb's ruin: yonder weed

15 Took up the floating weft,⁰ spider web

4

Where one small orange cup amassed

Five beetles—blind and green they grope

Among the honey-meal: and last,

Everywhere on the grassy slope

20 I traced it. Hold it fast!

5

The champaign¹ with its endless fleece

Of feathery grasses everywhere!

Silence and passion, joy and peace,

An everlasting wash of air—

25 Rome's ghost since her decease.

6

Such life here, through such lengths of hours,

Such miracles performed in play,

Such primal naked forms of flowers,

Such letting nature have her way

30 While heaven looks from its towers!

7

How say you? Let us, O my dove,

Let us be unashamed of soul,

8. The grassy, rolling countryside around Rome. are used as a condiment.

9. A yellow-flowered plant, whose aromatic seeds 1. I.e., grassland—here, the Campagna.

T H E R E W A S A N O L D M A N W I T H A B E A R D
/ 1 0 4 1

As earth lies bare to heaven above!

How is it under our control

35 To love or not to love?

8

I would that you were all to me,

You that are just so much, no more.

Nor yours nor mine, nor slave nor free!

Where does the fault lie? What the core 40 O' the wound, since wound must be?

9

I would I could adopt your will,

See with your eyes, and set my heart

Beating by yours, and drink my fill

At your soul's springs—your part my part

45 In life, for good and ill.

10

No. I yearn upward, touch you close,

Then stand away. I kiss your cheek,

Catch your soul's warmth—I pluck the rose

And love it more than tongue can speak—

50 Then the good minute goes.

II

Already how am I so far

Out of that minute? Must I go

Still like the thistle-ball, no bar,

Onward, whenever light winds blow,

55 Fixed by no friendly star?

12

Just when I seemed about to learn!
Where is the thread now? Off again!
The old trick! Only I discern—Infinite passion, and the pain
60 Of finite hearts that yearn.

1854 1855

EDWARD LEAR

1812 - 1888

There Was an Old Man with a Beard
There was an Old Man with a beard,
Who said, "It is just as I feared!—

1042 / EDWARD LEAR

Two Owls and a Hen, four Larks and a Wren,
Have all built their nests in my beard!"

1846

There Was an Old Man in a Tree
There was an Old Man in a tree,
Who was horribly bored by a Bee;
When they said, "Does it buzz?" he replied, "Yes, it does!"
"It's a regular brute of a Bee!"

1846

There Was an Old Man Who Supposed
There was an Old Man who supposed,
That the street door was partially closed;
But some very large rats, ate his coats and his hats,
While that futile old gentleman dozed.

1846

The Owl and the Pussy-Cat

i

The Owl and the Pussy-cat went to sea
In a beautiful pea-green boat,
They took some honey, and plenty of money,
Wrapped up in a five-pound note.

5 The Owl looked up to the stars above,
And sang to a small guitar,

“O lovely Pussy! O Pussy, my love,
What a beautiful Pussy you are,
You are,

io You are!

What a beautiful Pussy you are!”

2

Pussy said to the Owl, “You elegant fowl!
How charmingly sweet you sing!

O let us be married! too long we have tarried:

15 But what shall we do for a ring?”

They sailed away, for a year and a day,

To the land where the Bong-tree grows

And there in a wood a Piggy-wig stood

With a ring at the end of his nose,

H o w P L E A S A N T T O K N O W M R . L E A R / 1 0 4 3

20 His nose,

His nose,

With a ring at the end of his nose.

3

“Dear Pig, are you willing to sell for one shilling

Your ring?" Said the Piggy, "I will."

25 So they took it away, and were married next day

By the Turkey who lives on the hill.

They dined on mince, and slices of quince,

Which they ate with a runcible spoon;

And hand in hand, on the edge of the sand,

30 They danced by the light of the moon,

The moon,

The moon,

They danced by the light of the moon.

1871

How Pleasant to Know Mr. Lear

How pleasant to know Mr. Lear!

Who has written such volumes of stuff!

Some think him ill-tempered and queer,

But a few think him pleasant enough.

5 His mind is concrete and fastidious,

His nose is remarkably big;

His visage is more or less hideous,

His beard it resembles a wig.

He has ears, and two eyes, and ten fingers,

io Leastways if you reckon two thumbs;

Long ago he was one of the singers,

But now he is one of the dumbs.

He sits in a beautiful parlor,

With hundreds of books on the wall;

15 He drinks a great deal of Marsala,²

But never gets tipsy at all.

He has many friends, laymen and clerical;

Old Foss is the name of his cat;

His body is perfectly spherical,

20 He weareth a runcible hat.³

1. Fork with three broad, curved prongs and 2. A dark, sweet Spanish wine, sharpened edge. Lear coined the word “runcible” 3. On “runcible,” see note 1 above, and used it often in his nonsense verse.

1 0 4 4 / J O N E S V E R Y

When he walks in a waterproof³ white, raincoat

The children run after him so!

Calling out, “He’s come out in his night-

Gown, that crazy old Englishman, oh!”

25 He weeps by the side of the ocean,

He weeps on the top of the hill;

He purchases pancakes and lotion,

And chocolate shrimps from the mill.

He reads but he cannot speak Spanish,

30 He cannot abide ginger-beer:

Ere the days of his pilgrimage vanish,

How pleasant to know Mr. Lear!

1871

J O N E S V E R Y

1813-1880

The Dead¹

I see them crowd on crowd they walk the earth

Dry, leafless trees no Autumn wind laid bare;

And in their nakedness find cause for mirth,

And all unclad would winter's rudeness dare; harshness
5 No sap doth through their clattering branches flow,
Whence springing leaves and blossoms bright appear;
Their hearts the living God have ceased to know,
Who gives the spring time to th' expectant year;
They mimic life, as if from him to steal
io His glow of health to paint the livid cheek; pale
They borrow words for thoughts they cannot feel,
That with a seeming heart their tongue may speak;
And in their show of life more dead they live
Than those that to the earth with many tears they give.

1838 1839

The Lost

The fairest day that ever yet has shone,
Will be when thou the day within shalt see;
The fairest rose that ever yet has blown,

1. In September 1838, Very, a tutor of Greek at employment at Harvard was terminated, and he Harvard, had a mystical experience; he told his stu-
was sent briefly to an asylum, though many condents that the Holy Spirit was speaking through sidered him sane. Both of these poems date from him and that the end of the world was at hand. His his visionary period.

I A M A P A R C E L O F V A I N S T R I V I N G S T I E
D / 1 0 4 5

When thou the flower thou lookest on shalt be.

5 But thou art far away among Time's toys;

Thyself the day thou lookest for in them,
Thyself the flower that now thine eye enjoys,
But wilted now thou hang'st upon thy stem.
The bird thou hearest on the budding tree,
10 Thou hast made sing with thy forgotten voice;
But when it swells again to melody,
The song is thine in which thou wilt rejoice;
And thou new risen 'midst these wonders live,
That now to them dost all thy substance give.

1838-40 1883

HENRY DAVID THOREAU

1817-1862

I Am a Parcel of Vain Strivings Tied
I am a parcel of vain strivings tied
By a chance bond together,
Dangling this way and that, their links
Were made so loose and wide,
5 Methinks,
For milder weather.
A bunch of violets without their roots,
And sorrel intermixed,
Encircled by a wisp of straw
io Once coiled about their shoots,
The law
By which I'm fixed.
A nosegay which Time clutched from out
Those fair Elysian fields,¹ 15 With weeds and broken stems, in haste,

Doth make the rabble rout
That waste
The day he yields.
And here I bloom for a short hour unseen,
20 Drinking my juices up,
With no root in the land
To keep my branches green,
But stand
In a bare cup.

1841

1. In Greek and Roman mythology, the home of the blessed in the afterlife.

1 0 4 6 / E M I L Y B R O N T E

Smoke

Light-winged Smoke, Icarian bird,² Melting thy pinions in thy upward flight;
Lark without song, and messenger of dawn,
Circling above the hamlets as thy nest;
5 Or else, departing dream, and shadowy form
Of midnight vision, gathering up thy skirts;
By night star-veiling, and by day
Darkening the light and blotting out the sun;
Go thou my incense upward from this hearth,
10 And ask the gods to pardon this clear flame.

1 8 4 3 , 1 8 5 4

E M I L Y B R O N T E

1818-1848

[Long Neglect Has Worn Away]

Long neglect has worn away
Half the sweet enchanting smile;
Time has turned the bloom to gray;
Mold and damp the face defile.
5 But that lock of silky hair,
Still beneath the picture twined,
Tells what once those features were,
Paints their image on the mind.
Fair the hand that traced that line,
io “Dearest, ever deem me true”;
Swiftly flew the fingers fine
When the pen that motto drew.

1837 1923

Hope

Hope was but a timid friend—
She sat without^o my grated den outside Watching how my fate would tend
Even as selfish-hearted men.

2. According to Greek mythology, Icarus and his father, Daedalus, escaped from Crete by flying with wings of wax and feathers. W h e n Icarus flew too near the sun, his wings melted.

R E M E M B R A N C E / 1 0 4 7

5 She was cruel in her fear.
Through the bars, one dreary day,
I looked out to see her there
And she turned her face away!
Like a false guard false watch keeping 10 Still in strife she whispered peace;

She would sing while I was weeping,
If I listened, she would cease.
False she was, and unrelenting.
When my last joys strewed the ground
15 Even Sorrow saw repenting
Those sad relics scattered round;
Hope—whose whisper would have given
Balm to all that frenzied pain—
Stretched her wings and soared to heaven;
20 Went—and ne'er returned again!

1843 1843

Remembrance I

Cold in the earth—and the deep snow piled above thee,
Far, far removed, cold in the dreary grave!
Have I forgot, my only Love, to love thee,
Severed at last by Time's all-severing wave?
5 Now, when alone, do my thoughts no longer hover
Over the mountains, on that northern shore,
Resting their wings where heath and fern leaves cover
Thy noble heart forever, ever more?
Cold in the earth—and fifteen wild Decembers,
10 From those brown hills, have melted into spring;
Faithful, indeed, is the spirit that remembers
After such years of change and suffering!
Sweet Love of youth, forgive, if I forget thee,
While the world's tide is bearing me along;
15 Other desires and other hopes beset me,
Hopes which obscure, but cannot do thee wrong!

No later light has lightened up my heaven,

No second morn has ever shone for me;

1. One of the Gondal poems. As children, Emily and Anne Brontë in the North Pacific, and Emily, at least, and Anne Brontë had written poems and stories continued to write Gondal poems throughout her about the inhabitants of Gondal, an imaginary life.

1 0 4 8 / E M I L Y B R O N T E

All my life's bliss from thy dear life was given,

20 All my life's bliss is in the grave with thee.

But, when the days of golden dream had perished,
And even Despair was powerless to destroy,

Then did I learn how existence could be cherished, Strengthened, and fed without the aid of joy.

25 Then did I check the tears of useless passion —

Weaned my young soul from yearning after thine;
Sternly denied its burning wish to hasten

Down to that tomb already more than mine.

And, even yet, I dare not let it languish,

30 Dare not indulge in memory 's rapturous pain;
Once drinking deep of that divinest anguish,

How could I seek the empty world again?

1845 1846

The Prisoner. A Fragment²

In the dungeon-crypts, idly did I stray,

Reckless of the lives wasting there away;

“Draw the ponderous bars! open, Warden stern!”

He da red no t say me n a y — t h e h i n g e s h a r s h l y turn.

5 “Our g u e s t s a r e d a r k l y l o d g e d ,” I w h i s p e r ’ d , g a z i n g
t h r o u g h T h e v a u l t , w h o s e g r a t e d e y e s h o w e d
h e a v e n m o r e g r a y t h a n b l u e ; (T h i s w a s w h e n g l a d s p r i n g l a u g h e d i n a w a k i n g p r i d e ;)

“Aye, darkly l o d g e d e n o u g h ! ” r e t u r n e d m y s u l l e n g u i d e .

T h e n , G o d f o r g i v e m y y o u t h ; f o r g i v e m y c a r e l e s s t o n g u e ; i o I s c o f f e d , a s t h e c h i l l c h a i n s o n t h e d a m p f l a g - s t o n e s r u n g :

” C o n f i n e d i n t r i p l e w a l l s , a r t t h o u s o m u c h t o f e a r , T h a t w e m u s t b i n d t h e e d o w n a n d c l e n c h t h y
f e t t e r s h e r e ? ”

T h e c a p t i v e r a i s e d h e r f a c e , i t w a s a s s o f t a n d
m i l d A s s c u l p t u r e d m a r b l e s a i n t , o r s l u m b e r i n g u n w e a n ‘ d c h i l d ; 15 I t w a s s o s o f t a n d m i l d , i t w a s s o s w e e t a n d f a i r , P a i n c o u l d n o t t r a c e a l i n e , n o r g r i e f a s h a d o w t h e r e !

T h e c a p t i v e r a i s e d h e r h a n d a n d p r e s s e d i t t o h e r b r o w ;

“I h a v e b e e n s t r u c k ,” s h e s a i d , “a n d I a m s u f f e r i n g n o w ; Y e t t h e s e a r e l i t t l e w o r t h , y o u r b o l t s a n d i r o n s s t r o n g , 2 0 A n d , w e r e t h e y f o r g e d i n s t e e l , t h e y c o u l d n o t h o l d m e l o n g .”

2. Taken from a poem in the Bronte sisters’ Gon- not found in the story. The speaker is visiting a dal manuscript (see note 1 above), Julian M. and dungeon in his father’s castle.

A.G. Rochelle, this excerpt describes an episode

T H E P R I S O N E R . A F R A G M E N T / 1 0 4 9

Hoarse laughed the jailor grim: “Shall I be won to hear;
Dost think, fond, dreaming wretch, that I shall grant thy prayer?

Or, better still, wilt melt my master’s heart with groans?

Ah! sooner might the sun thaw down these granite stones.

25 “My master’s voice is low, his aspect bland and kind,

But hard as hardest flint, the soul that lurks behind;

And I am rough and rude, yet not more rough to see

Than is the hidden ghost that has its home in me.”

About her lips there played a smile of almost scorn,

30 “My friend,” she gently said, “you have not heard me mourn; When you my kindred’s lives, my lost life, can restore,

Then may I weep and sue,—but never, friend, before!

Still, let my tyrants know, I am not doomed to wear

Year after year in gloom, and desolate despair;

35 A messenger of Hope, comes every night to me,

And offers for short life, eternal liberty.

He comes with western winds, with evening’s wandering airs,

With that clear dusk of heaven that brings the thickest stars.

Winds take a pensive tone, and stars a tender fire,

40 And visions rise, and change, that kill me with desire.

Desire for nothing known in my maturer years,

When Joy grew mad with awe, at counting future tears.

When, if my spirit’s sky was full of flashes warm,

I knew not whence they came, from sun, or thunder storm.

45 But, first, a hush of peace—a soundless calm descends;

The struggle of distress, and fierce impatience ends.

Mute music soothes my breast, unuttered harmony,

That I could never dream, till Earth was lost to me.

Then dawns the Invisible; the Unseen its truth reveals;

50 My outward sense is gone, my inward essence feels:
Its wings are almost free—its home, its harbor found,
Measuring the gulph, it stoops, and dares the final bound.
Oh, dreadful is the check—intense the agony—
When the ear begins to hear, and the eye begins to see;
55 When the pulse begins to throb, the brain to think
again,
The soul to feel the flesh, and the flesh to feel the chain.
Yet I would lose no sting, would wish no torture less,
The more that anguish racks, the earlier it will bless;
And robed in fires of hell, or bright with heavenly shine,
60 If it but herald death, the vision is divine!“3

3. Cf. the dying words of Catherine in Emily’s escape into that glorious world, and to be always Wuthering Heights (1847): “The thing that irks me there. ... I shall be incomparably beyond and most is this shattered prison [my body], ... I’m above you all.”

tired, tired of being enclosed here. I’m wearying to

1 0 5 0 / E M I L Y B R O N T E

She ceased to speak, and we, unanswering, turned to go—
We had no further power to work the captive woe:
Her cheek, her gleaming eye, declared that man had given
A sentence, unapproved, and overruled by Heaven.

1845 1846

No Coward Soul Is Mine

No coward soul is mine,

No trembler in the world’s storm-troubled sphere!

I see Heaven's glories shine,
And Faith shines equal, arming me from Fear.
5 O God within my breast,
Almighty ever-present Deity!
Life, that in me hast rest
As I, undying Life, have power in thee!
Vain are the thousand creeds
io That move men's hearts, unutterably vain;
Worthless as withered weeds,
Or idlest froth, amid the boundless main
To waken doubt in one
Holding so fast by thy infinity,
15 So surely anchored on
The steadfast rock of Immortality.
With wide-embracing love
Thy spirit animates eternal years,
Pervades and broods above,
20 Changes, sustains, dissolves, creates and rears.
Though earth and moon were gone,
And suns and universes ceased to be,
And thou were left alone,
Every Existence would exist in thee.
25 There is not room for Death,
Nor atom that his might could render void
Since thou art Being and Breath,
And what thou art may never be destroyed.

1846

1850

1 0 5 1

ARTHUR H U G H C L O U G H

1819-1861

From Amours de Voyage

From Canto I

Over the great windy waters, and over the clear crested summits,

Unto the sun and the sky, and unto the perfecter earth,

Come, let us go,—to a land wherein gods of the old time wandered,

Where every hreath even now changes to ether] divine.

5 Come, let us go; though withal a voice whisper, “The world that we live in,

Whithersoever we turn, still is the same narrow crih;

‘Tis hut to prove limitation, and measure a cord, that we travel;

Let who would ‘scape and he free go to his chamber and think;

‘Tis but to change idle fancies for memories wilfully falser;

*io Tis but to go and have been. “—Come, little bark!° small boat

let us go.

I. CLAUDE TO EUSTACE

Dear Eustatio, I write that you may write me an answer,

Or at the least to put us again en rapport² with each other.

Rome disappoints me much,—St. Peter’s, perhaps, in especial;

Only the Arch of Titus and view from the Lateran please
me:

15 This, however, perhaps, is the weather, which truly is horrid.

Greece must be better, surely; and yet I am feeling so spiteful,

That I could travel to Athens, to Delphi, and Troy, and Mount Sinai,

Though but to see with my eyes that these are vanity also.

Rome disappoints me much; I hardly as yet understand, but 20 Rubbishy seems the word that most exactly would suit it.

All the foolish destructions, and all the sillier savings,

All the incongruous things of past incompatible ages,

Seem to be treasured up here to make fools of present and future.

Would to Heaven the old Goths³ had made a cleaner sweep of it!

25 Would to Heaven some new ones would come and destroy these churches!

However, one can live in Rome as also in London.

Rome is better than London, because it is other than London.

It is a blessing, no doubt, to be rid, at least for a time, of All one's friends and relations,—yourself (forgive me!)
included,—

30 All the *assujettissement*⁴ of having been what one has been, What one thinks one is, or thinks that others suppose one;

Yet, in despite of all, we turn like fools to the English.

Vernon has been my fate; who is here the same that you knew him,—

Making the tour, it seems, with friends of the name of Trevellyn.

1. The clear upper air, or a heavenly material not
3. One of the barbarian tribes that sacked ancient matter.

Rome.

2. In sympathy (French).

4. Constraint (French).

1 0 5 2 / A R T H U R H U G H C L O U G H

II. C L A U D E T O E U S T A C E

35 Rome disappoints me still; but I shrink and adapt myself to
it.

Somehow a tyrannous sense of a superincumbent⁰ oppression overlying

Still, wherever I go, accompanies ever, and makes me

Feel like a tree (shall I say?) buried under a ruin of brickwork.

Rome, believe me, my friend, is like its own Monte Testaceo,

40 Merely a marvellous mass of broken and castaway wine-pots.

Ye gods! what do I want with this rubbish of ages departed, Things that Nature abhors, the experiments that she has failed
in?

What do I find in the Forum? An archway and two or three pillars.

Well, but St. Peter's? Alas, Bernini⁵ has filled it with sculpture!

45 No one can cavil, I grant, at the size of the great Coliseum.

Doubtless the notion of grand and capacious and massive amusement,

This the old Romans had; but tell me, is this an idea?

Yet of solidity much, but of splendor little is extant:

“Brickwork I found thee, and marble I left thee!” their Emperor

vaunted;

50 “Marble I thought thee, and brickwork I find thee!” the Tourist may answer.

III. GEORGINA TREVELYNTOLUISA

At last, dearest Louisa, I take up my pen to address you.

Here we are, you see, with the seven-and-seventy boxes,
Courier, Papa and Mamma, the children, and Mary and Susan:

Here we all are at Rome, and delighted of course with St.
Peter's,

55 And very pleasantly lodged in the famous Piazza di Spagna.

Rome is a wonderful place, but Mary shall tell you about it;

Not very gay, however; the English are mostly at Naples;

There are the A.s, we hear, and most of the W. party.

George, however, is come; did I tell you about his mustachios?

60 Dear, I must really stop, for the carriage, they tell me, is waiting.

Mary will finish; and Susan is writing, they say, to Sophia.

Adieu, dearest Louise,—evermore your faithful Georgina.

Who can a Mr. Claude be whom George has taken to be with?

Very stupid, I think, but George says so very clever.

1858

The Latest Decalogue⁶

Thou shalt have one God only; who

Would be at the expense of two?

No graven images may be

Worshipped, except the currency:

5. Giovanni Lorenzo Bernini (1598—1680), Italian 6. The Latest Ten Commandments, sculptor.

SAY NOT THE STRUGGLE NOUGHT A VAIN
ILETH / 1053

5 Swear not at all; for for thy curse

Thine enemy is none the worse:

At church on Sunday to attend

Will serve to keep the world thy friend:

Honor thy parents; that is, all

10 From whom advancement may befall:

Thou shalt not kill; but needst not strive

Officiously to keep alive:

Do not adultery commit;

Advantage rarely comes of it:

15 Thou shalt not steal; an empty feat,

When it's so lucrative to cheat:

Bear not false witness; let the lie
Have time on its own wings to fly:
Thou shalt not covet; but tradition
20 Approves all forms of competition.
The sum of all is, thou shalt love,
If any body, God above:
At any rate shall never labor
More than thyself to love thy neighbor.

1862

Say Not the Struggle Nought Availeth
Say not the struggle nought availeth,
The labor and the wounds are vain,
The enemy faints not, nor faileth,
And as things have been, things remain.
5 If hopes were dupes, fears may be liars;
It may be, in yon smoke concealed,
Your comrades chase e'en now the fliers,
And, but for you, possess the field.
For while the tired waves, vainly breaking,
io Seem here no painful inch to gain,
Far back through creeks and inlets making
Came, silent, flooding in, the main,0 sea
And not by eastern windows only,
When daylight comes, comes in the light,
15 In front the sun climbs slow, how slowly,
But westward, look, the land is bright.

1849

1862

1 0 5 4

JULIA WARD HOWE

1819-1910

Battle-Hymn of the Republic 1

Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord:

He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored;

He hath loosed the fateful lightning of his terrible swift sword:

His truth is marching on.

5 I have seen Him in the watch-fires of a hundred circling camps;

They have builded Him an altar in the evening dews and damps;

I can read His righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps.

His day is marching on.

I have read a fiery gospel, writ in burnished rows of steel:

io “As ye deal with my contemners, so with you my grace shall deal;

Let the Hero, born of woman, crush the serpent with his heel, Since God is marching on.”

He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat;

He is sifting out the hearts of men before his judgment-seat:

15 Oh! be swift, my soul, to answer Him! be jubilant, my feet!

Our God is marching on.

In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,

With a glory in his bosom that transfigures you and me:

As he died to make men holy, let us die to make men free,

20 While God is marching on.

1861 1866

HERMAN MELVILLE

1819-1891

The Portent

Hanging from the beam,
Slowly swaying (such the law),
Gaunt the shadow on your green,
Shenandoah!¹

5 The cut is on the crown

1. When Howe saw Union troops camped along tune. Howe here compares the reckoning that will the roadside in Washington, D.C., she joined come at the end of the war with the Day of Jehofriends in singing the popular Civil War song that vah; see especially Isaiah 63.

begins “John Brown’s body lies a-mouldering in the

1. Valley in northern Virginia; the scene of famous grave.” That night, she responded to someone’s Civil War battles between 1862 and 1864.

suggestion that she write new verses to the same

THE MALDIVESHARK / 1055

(Lo, John Brown),²

And the stabs shall heal no more.

Hidden in the cap

Is the anguish none can draw;

10 So your future veils its face,

Shenandoah!

But the streaming beard is shown

(Weird John Brown),

The meteor of the war.

1859 1866

Shiloh³

A Requiem (April 1862)

Skimming lightly, wheeling still,
The swallows fly low
Over the field in clouded days,
The forest-field of Shiloh—
Over the field where April rain
Solaced the parched one stretched in pain
Through the pause of night
That followed the Sunday fight
Around the church of Shiloh—
The church so lone, the log-built one,
That echoed to many a parting groan
And natural prayer
Of dying foemen mingled there—
Foemen at morn, but friends at eve—
Fame or country least their care:
(What like a bullet can undeceive!)
But now they lie low,
While over them the swallows skim,
And all is hushed at Shiloh.

1866

The Maldivian⁴ Shark

About the Shark, phlegmatical one,
Pale sot^o of the Maldivian sea, drinker
The sleek little pilot-fish, azure and slim,

How alert in attendance be.

5 From his saw-pit of mouth, from his charnel of maw,

2. American abolitionist (1800-1859), who was

April 6 and 7, 1862, was one of the bloodiest of hanged for leading a raid on the United States

the Civil War; close to twenty-four thousand men armory at Harpers Ferry, West Virginia, near the

died.

Shenandoah Valley.

4. I.e., of the area around the Maldives, a group

3. The battle at Shiloh Church, in Tennessee, on of islands in the Indian Ocean.

1 0 5 6

H

/ E R M A N M E L V I L L E

They have nothing of harm to dread,

But liquidly glide on his ghastly flank

Or before his Gorgonian⁵ head;

Or lurk in the port of serrated teeth

In white triple tiers of glittering gates,

And there find a haven when peril's abroad,

An asylum in jaws of the Fates!

They are friends; and friendly they guide him to prey,

Yet never partake of the treat—

Eyes and brains to the dotard lethargic and dull,

Pale ravener of horrible meat.

1888

The Berg

A Dream

I saw a Ship of martial build (Her standards set, her brave apparel on) Directed as by madness mere Against a stolid iceberg steer,
5 Nor budge it, though the infatuate⁰ Ship went down. foolish
The impact made huge ice-cubes fall
Sullen, in tons that crashed the deck;
But that one avalanche was all—
No other movement save the foundering wreck.
10 Along the spurs of ridges pale,
Not any slenderest shaft and frail,
A prism over glass-green gorges lone,
Toppled; nor lace of trceries fine,
Nor pendant drops in grot or mine
15 Were jarred, when the stunned Ship went down.
Nor sole the gulls in cloud that wheeled Circling one snow-flanked peak afar,
But nearer fowl the floes that skimmed
And crystal beaches, felt no jar.
20 No thrill transmitted stirred the lock
Of jack-straw needle-ice at base;
Towers undermined by waves—the block
A tilt impending—kept their place.
Seals, dozing sleek on sliddery ledges
25 Slipt never, when by loftier edges,
Through very inertia overthrown,
The impetuous ship in bafflement went down.

5. In Greek mythology, the Gorgons were three sisters with terrifying faces and serpent hair; whoever looked at them turned to stone.

G o D O W N , M O S E S / 1 0 5 7

Hard Berg (methought), so cold, so vast,
With mortal damps self-overcast;
30 Exhaling still thy dankish breath—
Adrift dissolving, bound for death;
Though lumpish thou, a lumbering one—
A lumbering lubbard loitering slow,
Impingers rue thee and go down,
35 Sounding thy precipice below,
Nor stir the slimy slug that sprawls
Along thy dead indifference of walls.⁶

1888

Monody⁷

To have known him, to have loved him
After loneness long;
And then to be estranged in life,
And neither in the wrong;
5 And now for death to set his seal—
Ease me, a little ease, my song!
By wintry hills his hermit-mound
The sheeted snow-drifts drape,
And houseless there the snow-bird flits
io Beneath the fir-trees' crape:
Glazed now with ice the cloistral vine
That hid the shyest grape.

1891

SPIRITUALS

Go Down, Moses¹

Go down, Moses,

Way down in Egyptland

Tell old Pharaoh

To let my people go.

6. Manuscript version of Melville's final line. In

1. Hebrew lawgiver; according to the Hebrew his first published edition of the poem, the final Scriptures, he led his people out of bondage in line reads "Along thy dense stolidity of walls."

Egypt to the edge of Canaan. Cf. Exodus 5: "After-

7. Lament; originally, a Greek ode sung by a single ward Moses ... went to Pharaoh and said, 'Thus voice, as in a tragedy. Some critics have surmised says the Lord, the God of Israel, "Let my people that Melville may have been writing about a cooled go, that they may hold a feast to me in the wilder- friendship with the American writer Nathaniel ness." ' "

Hawthorne (1804-1864).

1058 / SPIRITUALS

5 When Israel was in Egyptland

Let my people go

Oppressed so hard they could not stand

Let my people go.

Go down, Moses,

10 Way down in Egyptland

Tell old Pharaoh

“Let my people go.”

“Thus saith the Lord,” bold Moses said,

“Let my people go;

15 If not I’ll smite your first-born dead²

Let my people go.

“No more shall they in bondage toil,

Let my people go;

Let them come out with Egypt’s spoil,

20 Let my people go.”

The Lord told Moses what to do

Let my people go;

To lead the children of Israel through,

Let my people go.

25 Go down, Moses,

Way down in Egyptland,

Tell old Pharaoh,

“Let my people go!”

Steal Away to Jesus

Steal away, steal away, steal away to Jesus,

Steal away, steal away home,

I ain’t got long to stay here.

My Lord, He calls me,

5 He calls me by the thunder,

The trumpet sounds within-a my soul,

I ain’t got long to stay here.

Steal away, steal away, steal away to Jesus,

Steal away, steal away home,

io I ain't got long to stay here.

Green trees a-bending,

Po' sinner stands a-trembling,

2. After Pharaoh refused to free the Israelites, the Lord: About midnight I will go forth in the God sent a series of miracles, plagues, and punish- midst of Egypt; and all the first-born in the land of ments. Cf. Exodus 11: "And Moses said, 'Thus says Egypt shall die.' "

E Z E K I E L S A W T H E W H E E L / 1 0 5 9

The trumpet sounds within-a my soul,

I ain't got long to stay here.

15 Steal away, steal away, steal away to Jesus,

Steal away, steal away home,

I ain't got long to stay here.

Ezekiel Saw the Wheel³

Ezek'el saw the wheel

'Way up in the middle o' the air,

Ezek'el saw the wheel

'Way up in the middle o' the air.

5 The big wheel moved by Faith,

The little wheel moved by the Grace of God,

A wheel in a wheel,

'Way up in the middle o' the air.

Jes' let me tell you what a hypocrite'll do,

io 'Way up in the middle o' the air,

He'll talk about me an' he'll talk about you!

'Way up in the middle o' the air.

Ezek'el saw the wheel

'Way up in the middle o' the air,

15 Ezek'el saw the wheel
'Way up in the middle o' the air.
The big wheel moved by Faith,
The little wheel moved by the Grace of God,
A wheel in a wheel,

20 'Way up in the middle o' the air.
Watch out my sister how you walk on the cross,
'Way up in the middle o' the air,
Your foot might slip and your soul get lost!
'Way up in the middle o' the air.

25 Ezek'el saw the wheel
'Way up in the middle o' the air,
Ezek'el saw the wheel
'Way up in the middle o' the air.

3. Hebrew Scripture prophecy. Cf. Ezekiel 15:
went beside them; and when the living creatures “Now as I looked at the living creatures, I saw a rose from the earth, the wheels rose. Wherever the wheel upon the earth beside the living creatures, spirit would go, they went, and the wheels rose one for each of the four of them ... their construcalong with them; for the spirit of the living creation being as it were a wheel within a wheel... .
tures was in the wheels.”

And when the living creatures went, the wheels

1 0 6 0 / W A L T W H I T M A N

The big wheel moved by Faith,
30 The little wheel moved by the Grace of God,

A wheel in a wheel,
'Way up in the middle o' the air.
You say the Lord has set you free,
'Way up in the middle o' the air,
35 Why don't you let your neighbors be!
'Way up in the middle o' the air.
Ezek'el saw the wheel
'Way up in the middle o' the air,
Ezek'el saw the wheel
40 'Way up in the middle o' the air.
The big wheel moved by Faith,
The little wheel moved by the Grace of God,
A wheel in a wheel,
'Way up in the middle o' the air.

W A L T W H I T M A N

1819-1892

*From Song of Myself*¹

I

I celebrate myself, and sing myself,
And what I assume you shall assume,
For every atom belonging to me as good belongs to you.
I loafe and invite my soul,
5 I lean and loafe at my ease observing a spear of summer grass.
My tongue, every atom of my blood, form'd from this soil,
this air,
Born here of parents born here from parents the same, and their parents the same,

I, now thirty-seven years old in perfect health begin,
Hoping to cease not till death.
io Creeds and schools in abeyance, Retiring back a while sufficed at what they are, but never forgotten,
I harbor for good or bad, I permit to speak at every hazard,
Nature without check with original energy.

1. The title Whitman gave in 1881 to the poem “Song of Myself” was both untitled and unsectioned in its first appearance. This version is based originally published in 1855. The book, radical in on the 2002 Norton Critical Edition by Michael both form and content (particularly in its explicit Moon, itself based on the Blodgett and Bradley treatment of sexual themes), was years in the mak-1973 Norton Critical Edition of Leaves of Grass, ing and underwent many, though often slight, revi-which was based on Whitman’s 1891—92 text.
sions.

S O N G O F M Y S E L F / 1 0 6 1

5

I believe in you my soul, the other I am must not abase itself to
you,

And you must not be abased to the other.

Loafe with me on the grass, loose the stop from your throat,

85 Not words, not music or rhyme I want, not custom or lecture, not even the best,

Only the lull I like, the hum of your valved voice.
I mind how once we lay such a transparent summer morning,
How you settled your head athwart my hips and gently turn'd over
upon me,
And parted the shirt from my bosom-bone, and plunged your tongue
to my bare-stript heart, 90 And reach'd till you felt my beard, and reach'd till you held my feet.
Swiftly arose and spread around me the peace and knowledge
that pass all the argument of the earth,
And I know that the hand of God is the promise of my own,
And I know that the spirit of God is the brother of my own,
And that all the men ever born are also my brothers, and the women
my sisters and lovers,
95 And that a kelson² of the creation is love,
And limitless are leaves stiff or drooping in the fields,
And brown ants in the little wells beneath them,
And mossy scabs of the worm fence, heap'd stones, elder, mullein
and poke-weed.³

6

A child said What is the grass? fetching it to me with full
hands;
100 How could I answer the child? I do not know what it is any more than he.

I guess it must be the flag of my disposition, out of hopeful green stuff woven.

Or I guess it is the handkerchief of the Lord,
A scented gift and remembrancer designedly dropt, Bearing the owner's name someway in the corners, that we may see and remark, and say Whose?

105 Or I guess the grass is itself a child, the produced babe of
the vegetation.

Or I guess it is a uniform hieroglyphic,
And it means, Sprouting alike in broad zones and narrow zones,
Growing among black folks as among white, Kanuck, Tuckahoe, Congressman, Cuff,⁴ I give them the same, I receive them the same.

2. Line of timber inside a ship that joins the bot- 4. Slang for an African American. Kanuck: a torn structure (keel) and the floorboards; i.e., a French Canadian. Tuckahoe: an inhabitant of the source of stability. lowlands of Virginia.

3. A shrub, an herb, and a weed, respectively.

1062 / W A L T W H I T M A N

110 And now it seems to me the beautiful uncut hair of graves.
Tenderly will I use you curling grass,
It may be you transpire from the breasts of young men,
It may be if I had known them I would have loved them,
It may be you are from old people, or from offspring taken soon out of their mothers' laps,

115 And here you are the mothers' laps.

This grass is very dark to be from the white heads of old mothers,

Darker than the colorless beards of old men,

Dark to come from under the faint red roofs of mouths.

O I perceive after all so many uttering tongues,

120 And I perceive they do not come from the roofs of mouths for nothing.

I wish I could translate the hints about the dead young men and women,

And the hints about old men and mothers, and the offspring taken soon out of their laps.

What do you think has become of the young and old men?

And what do you think has become of the women and children?

125 They are alive and well somewhere,

The smallest sprout shows there is really no death,

And if ever there was it led forward life, and does not wait at the end to arrest it,

And ceas'd the moment life appear'd.

All goes onward and outward, nothing collapses,

130 And to die is different from what any one supposed, and luckier.

II

Twenty-eight young men bathe by the shore,

200 Twenty-eight young men and all so friendly;

Twenty-eight years of womanly life and all so lonesome.
She owns the fine house by the rise of the bank,
She hides handsome and richly drest aft the blinds of the window.

Which of the young men does she like the best?

205 Ah the homeliest of them is beautiful to her.

Where are you off to, lady? for I see you,
You splash in the water there, yet stay stock still in your room.
Dancing and laughing along the beach came the twenty-ninth bather,
The rest did not see her, but she saw them and loved them.

S O N G O F M Y S E L F / 1 0 6 3

210 The beards of the young men glisten'd with wet, it ran from their long hair,

Little streams, pass'd all over their bodies.

An unseen hand also pass'd over their bodies,

It descended tremblingly from their temples and ribs.

The young men float on their backs, their white bellies bulge to the sun, they do not ask who seizes fast to them,

215 They do not know who puffs and declines with pendant and bending

arch,

They do not think whom they souse with spray.

13

The negro holds firmly the reins of his four horses, the block swags

underneath on its tied-over chain,

The negro that drives the long dray of the stone-yard, steady and tall
he stands pois'd on one leg on the string-piece,⁵
His blue shirt exposes his ample neck and breast and loosens
over his hip-band,
His glance is calm and commanding, he tosses the slouch of his hat
away from his forehead,
The sun falls on his crispy hair and mustache, falls on the black of his polish'd and perfect limbs.
I behold the picturesque giant and love him, and I do not stop there,
I go with the team also.
In me the caresser of life wherever moving, backward as well as forward sluing,⁰ turning
To niches aside and junior⁰ bending, not a person or object smaller missing,
Absorbing all to myself and for this song.
Oxen that rattle the yoke and chain or halt in the leafy shade,
what
is that you express in your eyes?
It seems to me more than all the print I have read in my life.
My tread scares the wood-drake and wood-duck on my distant
and
day-long ramble,
They rise together, they slowly circle around.
I believe in those wing'd purposes,

And acknowledge red, yellow, white, playing within me,
And consider green and violet and the tufted crown intentional,

And do not call the tortoise unworthy because she is not something

else,

And the jay in the woods never studied the gamut,⁰ yet musical scale

trills pretty well to me,

And the look of the bay mare shames silliness out of me.

5. Long, heavy, squared timber used to secure a load, a pier, or some construction.

1 0 6 4 / W A L T W H I T M A N

24

Walt Whitman, a kosmos, of Manhattan the son,

Turbulent, fleshy, sensual, eating, drinking and breeding,

No sentimentalist, no stander above men and women or apart from

them,

500 No more modest than immodest.

Unscrew the locks from the doors!

Unscrew the doors themselves from their jambs!

Whoever degrades another degrades me,

And whatever is done or said returns at last to me.

505 Through me the afflatus⁰ surging and surging, through inspiration

me the current and index.

I speak the pass-word primeval, I give the sign of democracy,

By God! I will accept nothing which all cannot have their counterpart of on the same terms.

Through me many long dumb voices,
Voices of the interminable generations of prisoners and slaves, Voices of the diseas'd and despairing and of thieves and dwarfs,
Voices of cycles of preparation and accretion,
And of the threads that connect the stars, and of wombs and of
the father-stuff,
And of the rights of them the others are down upon,
Of the deform'd, trivial, flat, foolish, despised,
Fog in the air, beetles rolling balls of dung.
Through me forbidden voices,
Voices of sexes and lusts, voices veil'd and I remove the veil,
Voices indecent by me clarified and transfigur'd.
I do not press my fingers across my mouth, 520 I keep as delicate around the bowels as around the head and heart,
Copulation is no more rank to me than death is.
I believe in the flesh and the appetites, Seeing, hearing, feeling, are miracles, and each part and tag of me is a miracle.
Divine am I inside and out, and I make holy whatever I touch or am touch'd from,
525 The scent of these arm-pits aroma finer than prayer,
This head more than churches, bibles, and all the creeds.
If I worship one thing more than another it shall be the spread
of my own body, or any part of it,

Translucent mould of me it shall be you!

Shaded ledges and rests it shall be you!

S O N G O F M Y S E L F / 1 0 6 5

530 Firm masculine colter⁶ it shall be you!

Whatever goes to the tilth⁷ of me it shall be you!

You my rich blood! your milky stream pale strippings of my life!

Breast that presses against other breasts it shall be you!

My brain it shall be your occult convolutions!

535 Root of wash'd sweet-flag! timorous pond-snipe! nest of guarded

duplicate eggs! it shall be you!

Mix'd tussled hay of head, beard, brawn, it shall be you!

Trickling sap of maple, fibre of manly wheat, it shall be you!

Sun so generous it shall be you!

Vapors lighting and shading my face it shall be you!

540 You sweaty brooks and dews it shall be you!

Winds whose soft-tickling genitals rub against me it shall be
you!

Broad muscular fields, branches of live oak, loving loungee in my

winding paths, it shall be you!

Hands I have taken, face I have kiss'd, mortal I have ever touch'd, it shall be you.

I dote on myself, there is that lot of me and all so luscious,

545 Each moment and whatever happens thrills me with joy,

I cannot tell how my ankles bend, nor whence the cause of my faintest wish,

Nor the cause of the friendship I emit, nor the cause of the friendship I take again.

That I walk up my stoop, I pause to consider if it really be,
A morning-glory at my window satisfies me more than the metaphysics of books.

550 To behold the day-break!

The little light fades the immense and diaphanous shadows,
The air tastes good to my palate.

Hefts of the moving world at innocent gambols silently rising,
freshly exuding,

Scooting obliquely high and low.

555 Something I cannot see puts upward libidinous prongs,
Seas of bright juice suffuse heaven.

The earth by the sky staid with, the daily close of their junction,

The heav'd challenge from the east that moment over my head,

The mocking taunt, See then whether you shall be master!

52

The spotted hawk swoops by and accuses me, he complains of
my

gab and my loitering.

6. A cutting edge fastened to a plow ahead of the

7. Land under cultivation; also, the act of cultiplowshare.

vating soil.

1 0 6 6 / W A L T W H I T M A N

I too am not a bit tamed, I too am untranslatable,

I sound my barbaric yawp over the roofs of the world.

The last scud of day holds back for me,

1335 It flings my likeness after the rest and true as any on the shadow'd

wilds,

It coaxes me to the vapor and the dusk.

I depart as air, I shake my white locks at the runaway sun,

I effuse my flesh in eddies, and drift it in lacy jags.

I bequeath myself to the dirt to grow from the grass I love,

1340 If you want me again look for me under your boot-soles.

You will hardly know who I am or what I mean,

But I shall be good health to you nevertheless,

And filter and fibre your blood.

Failing to fetch me at first keep encouraged,

1345 Missing me one place search another,

I stop somewhere waiting for you.

1855,1881

Crossing Brooklyn Ferry

I

Flood-tide below me! I see you face to face!

Clouds of the west—sun there half an hour high—I see you also face to face.

Crowds of men and women attired in the usual costumes, how curious you are to me!

On the ferry-boats the hundreds and hundreds that cross, returning home, are more curious to me than you suppose,

5 And you that shall cross from shore to shore years hence are more

to me, and more in my meditations, than you might suppose.

2

The impalpable sustenance of me from all things at all hours
of the day,

The simple, compact, well-join'd scheme, myself disintegrated, every one disintegrated yet part of the scheme,

The similitudes of the past and those of the future,

The glories strung like beads on my smallest sights and hearings, on the walk in the street and the passage over the river,

io The current rushing so swiftly and swimming with me far away,

The others that are to follow me, the ties between me and
them,

The certainty of others, the life, love, sight, hearing of others.

8. Wind-driven clouds.

CROSSING BROOKLYN FERRY / 1067

Others will enter the gates of the ferry and cross from shore to shore,

Others will watch the run of the flood-tide,

Others will see the shipping of Manhattan north and west, and
the

heights of Brooklyn to the south and east,

Others will see the islands large and small;

Fifty years hence, others will see them as they cross, the sun half an hour high,

A hundred years hence, or ever so many hundred years hence, others will see them,

Will enjoy the sunset, the pouring-in of the flood-tide, the falling-

back to the sea of the ebb-tide.

3

It avails not, time nor place—distance avails not,

I am with you, you men and women of a generation, or ever so many generations hence,

Just as you feel when you look on the river and sky, so I felt,

Just as any of you is one of a living crowd, I was one of a crowd,

Just as you are refresh'd by the gladness of the river and the bright

flow, I was refresh'd,

Just as you stand and lean on the rail, yet hurry with the swift current, I stood yet was hurried,

Just as you look on the numberless masts of ships and the thick-stemm'd pipes of steamboats, I look'd.

I too many and many a time cross'd the river of old,

Watched the Twelfth-month⁰ sea-gulls, saw them high in December

the air floating with motionless wings, oscillating their bodies,

Saw how the glistening yellow lit up parts of their bodies and left

the rest in strong shadow,

Saw the slow-wheeling circles and the gradual edging toward
the south,

Saw the reflection of the summer sky in the water,
Had my eyes dazzled by the shimmering track of beams, Look'd at the fine centrifugal spokes of light round the shape of my head in the sunlit water, Look'd on the haze on the hills southward and south-westward,
Look'd on the vapor as it flew in fleeces tinged with violet,
Look'd toward the lower bay to notice the vessels arriving,
Saw their approach, saw aboard those that were near me, Saw the white sails of schooners and sloops, saw the ships at anchor,
The sailors at work in the rigging or out astride the spars,
The round masts, the swinging motion of the hulls, the slender serpentine pennants,
The large and small steamers in motion, the pilots in their pilot-
houses,
The white wake left by the passage, the quick tremulous whirl
of the wheels,
The flags of all nations, the falling of them at sunset,

1 0 6 8 / W A L T W H I T M A N

The scallop-edged waves in the twilight, the ladled cups, the frolic-
some crests and glistening,
45 The stretch afar growing dimmer and dimmer, the gray walls of the
granite storehouses by the docks,

On the river the shadowy group, the big steam-tug closely flank'd on each side by the barges, the hay-boat, the belated lighter,⁹
On the neighboring shore the fires from the foundry chimneys burning high and glaringly into the night, Casting their flicker of black contrasted with wild red and yellow light over the tops of houses, and down into the clefts of streets.

4

These and all else were to me the same as they are to you, 50 I loved well those cities, loved well the stately and rapid river,
The men and women I saw were all near to me,
Others the same—others who look back on me because I look'd
forward to them,
(The time will come, though I stop⁰ here to-day and to-night.)
stay

5

What is it then between us?
55 What is the count of the scores or hundreds of years between us?
Whatever it is, it avails not—distance avails not, and place avails not,
I too lived, Brooklyn of ample hills was mine,
I too walk'd the streets of Manhattan island, and bathed in the waters around it,
I too felt the curious abrupt questionings stir within me,

60 In the day among crowds of people sometimes they came upon me,
In my walks home late at night or as I lay in my bed they came upon
me,
I too had been struck from the float forever held in solution,
I too had receiv'd identity by my body,
That I was I knew was of my body, and what I should be I knew I should be of my body.

6

65 It is not upon you alone the dark patches fall,
The dark threw its patches down upon me also,
The best I had done seem'd to me blank and suspicious,
My great thoughts as I supposed them, were they not in reality meagre?
Nor is it you alone who know what it is to be evil,
70 I am he who knew what it was to be evil,
I too knitted the old knot of contrariety,
9. Barge used for loading and unloading ships.

CROSSING BROOKLYN FERRY / 1069

Blabb'd, blush'd, resented, lied, stole, grudg'd,
Had guile, anger, lust, hot wishes I dared not speak,
Was wayward, vain, greedy, shallow, sly, cowardly, malignant,
75 The wolf, the snake, the hog, not wanting in me,
The cheating look, the frivolous word, the adulterous wish, not wanting,
Refusals, hates, postponements, meanness, laziness, none of these

wanting,
Was one with the rest, the days and haps¹ of the rest,
Was call'd by my nighest name by clear loud voices of young men as they saw me approaching or passing, so Felt their arms on my neck as I stood, or the negligent leaning of their flesh against me as I sat, Saw many I loved in the street or ferry-boat or public assembly, yet
never told them a word,
Lived the same life with the rest, the same old laughing, gnawing,
sleeping,
Play'd the part that still looks back on the actor or actress,
The same old role, the role that is what we make it, as great as we like,
85 Or as small as we like, or both great and small.

7

Closer yet I approach you,
What thought you have of me now, I had as much of you—I laid in my stores in advance,
I consider'd long and seriously of you before you were born.
Who was to know what should come home to me?
90 Who knows but I am enjoying this?
Who knows, for all the distance, but I am as good as looking at
you
now, for all you cannot see me?

8

Ah, what can ever be more stately and admirable to me than masthemm'd Manhattan?

River and sunset and scallop-edg'd waves of flood-tide?

The sea-gulls oscillating their bodies, the hay-boat in the twilight,

and the belated lighter?

95 What gods can exceed these that clasp me by the hand, and with voices I love call me promptly and loudly by my nighest name as I approach?

What is more subtle than this which ties me to the woman or man

that looks in my face?

Which fuses me into you now, and pours my meaning into
you?

We understand then do we not?

What I promis'd without mentioning it, have you not accepted?

1. Chance occurrences.

1 0 7 0 / W A L T W H I T M A N

100 What the study could not teach—what the preaching could not accomplish is accomplish'd, is it not?

9

Flow on, river! flow with the flood-tide, and ebb with the ebb-tide!

Frolic on, crested and scallop-edg'd waves!

Gorgeous clouds of the sunset! drench with your splendor me, or

the men and women generations after me!

Cross from shore to shore, countless crowds of passengers!

105 Stand up, tall masts of Mannahatta! 2 stand up, beautiful hills of Brooklyn!

Throb, baffled and curious brain! throw out questions and answers!

Suspend here and everywhere, eternal float of solution!

Gaze, loving and thirsting eyes, in the house or street or public assembly!

Sound out, voices of young men! loudly and musically call me by my

nighest name!

110 Live, old life! play the part that looks back on the actor or actress!

Play the old role, the role that is great or small according as one

makes it!

Consider, you who peruse me, whether I may not in unknown ways

be looking upon you;

Be firm, rail over the river, to support those who lean idly, yet haste

with the hasting current;

Fly on, sea birds! fly sideways, or wheel in large circles high in the air;

115 Receive the summer sky, you water, and faithfully hold it till all

downcast eyes have time to take it from you!

Diverge, fine spokes of light, from the shape of my head, or any

one's head, in the sunlit water!

Come on, ships from the lower bay! pass up or down,
white-sail'd

schooners, sloops, lighters!

Flaunt away, flags of all nations! be duly lower'd at sunset!

Burn high your fires, foundry chimneys! cast black shadows at nightfall! cast red and yellow light over the tops of the houses!

120 Appearances, now or henceforth, indicate what you
are,

You necessary film, continue to envelop the soul,

About my body for me, and your body for you, be hung our divinest

aromas,

Thrive, cities—bring your freight, bring your shows, ample and

sufficient rivers,

Expand, being than which none else is perhaps more spiritual,

125 Keep your places, objects than which none else is more lasting.

You have waited, you always wait, you dumb, beautiful ministers,

We receive you with free sense at last, and are insatiate³ henceforward,

Not you any more shall be able to foil us, or withhold yourselves

from us,

2. Variant for the Native American word normally 3.
Insatiable, spelled Manhattan.

VIGIL STRANGE I KEPT ON THE FIELD ONE NIGHT / 1071

We use you, and do not cast you aside—we plant you permanently

within us,

130 We fathom you not—we love you—there is perfection in you also,

You furnish your parts toward eternity,

Great or small, you furnish your parts toward the soul.

1856 1881

When I Heard the Learn'd Astronomer

When I heard the learn'd astronomer,

When the proofs, the figures, were ranged in columns before
me,

When I was shown the charts and diagrams, to add, divide,
and

measure them,

When I sitting heard the astronomer where he lectured with much

applause in the lecture-room,

5 How soon unaccountable I became tired and sick,

Till rising and gliding out I wander'd off by myself,

In the mystical moist night-air, and from time to time,

Look'd up in perfect silence at the stars.

1865 1865

Vigil Strange I Kept on the Field One Night

Vigil strange I kept on the field one night;

When you my son and my comrade dropt at my side that day,
One look I but gave which your dear eyes return'd with a look
I shall never forget,

One touch of your hand to mine O boy, reach'd up as you lay on the ground,

5 Then onward I sped in the battle, the even-contested battle,

Till late in the night reliev'd to the place at last again I made my

way,

Found you in death so cold dear comrade, found your body son of responding kisses, (never again on earth responding,)

Bared your face in the starlight, curious the scene, cool blew
the

moderate night-wind,

Long there and then in vigil I stood, dimly around me the battle-field spreading,

io Vigil wondrous and vigil sweet there in the fragrant silent night,

But not a tear fell, not even a long-drawn sigh, long I gazed,

Then on the earth partially reclining sat by your side leaning
my

chin in my hands,

Passing sweet hours, immortal and mystic hours with you dearest

comrade—not a tear, not a word,

Vigil of silence, love and death, vigil for you my son and my soldier,

15 As onward silently stars aloft, eastward new ones upward stole,

1 0 7 2 / W A L T W H I T M A N

Vigil final for you brave boy, (I could not save you, swift was your

death,

I faithfully loved you and cared for you living, I think we shall surely meet again,)

Till at latest lingering of the night, indeed just as the dawn appear'd,

My comrade I wrapt in his blanket, envelop'd well his form,

20 Folded the blanket well, tucking it carefully over head and carefully

under feet,

And there and then and bathed by the rising sun, my son in his grave, in his rude-dug grave I deposited,

Ending my vigil strange with that, vigil of night and battlefield dim,

Vigil for boy of responding kisses, (never again on earth responding,)

Vigil for comrade swiftly slain, vigil I never forget, how as day

brighten'd,

25 I rose from the chill ground and folded my soldier well in
his blanket,

And buried him where he fell.

1865 1867

Beat! Beat! Drums!

Beat! beat! drums!—blow! bugles! blow!

Through the windows—through doors—burst like a ruthless force,
Into the solemn church, and scatter the congregation,
Into the school where the scholar is studying;
5 Leave not the bridegroom quiet—no happiness must he have now
with his bride,
Nor the peaceful farmer any peace, ploughing his field or gathering
his grain,
So fierce you whirr and pound you drums—so shrill you bugles
blow.
Beat! beat! drums!—blow! bugles! blow!
Over the traffic of cities—over the rumble of wheels in the streets;
io Are beds prepared for sleepers at night in the houses? no sleepers
must sleep in those beds,
No bargainers' bargains by day—no brokers or speculators—would they continue?
Would the talkers be talking? would the singer attempt to sing?
Would the lawyer rise in the court to state his case before the judge?
Then rattle quicker, heavier drums—you bugles wilder blow.
15 Beat! beat! drums!—blow! bugles! blow!
Make no parley⁴—stop for no expostulation,
Mind not the timid—mind not the weeper or prayer,
Mind not the old man beseeching the young man,

Let not the child's voice be heard, nor the mother's entreaties,

4. Conference with an enemy.

OUT OF THE CRADLE ENDLESSLY ROCKING / 1073

20 Make even the trestles to shake the dead where they lie awaiting the hearses,

So strong you thump O terrible drums—so loud you bugles blow.

1861 1867

Cavalry Crossing a Ford

A line in long array where they wind betwixt green islands,

They take a serpentine course, their arms flash in the sun—
hark to the musical clank,

Behold the silvery river, in it the splashing horses loitering stop to drink,

Behold the brown-faced men, each group, each person a picture, the negligent rest on the saddles,

5 Some emerge on the opposite bank, others are just entering the ford—

while,

Scarlet and blue and snowy white,

The guidon⁵ flags flutter gayly in the wind.

1865 1871

Out of the Cradle Endlessly Rocking

Out of the cradle endlessly rocking,

Out of the mocking-bird's throat, the musical shuttle,

Out of the Ninth-month⁶ midnight,
Over the sterile sands and the fields beyond, where the child leaving his bed wander'd alone, bareheaded, barefoot,
5 Down from the shower'd halo,
Up from the mystic play of shadows twining and twisting as if they were alive,
Out from the patches of briars and blackberries,
From the memories of the bird that chanted to me,
From your memories sad brother, from the fitful risings and fallings
I heard,
io From under that yellow half-moon late-risen and swollen as if with tears,
From those beginning notes of yearning and love there in the mist,
From the thousand responses of my heart never to cease,
From the myriad thence-arous'd words,
From the word stronger and more delicious than any,
15 From such as now they start the scene revisiting,
As a flock, twittering, rising, or overhead passing,
Borne hither, ere all eludes me, hurriedly,
A man, yet by these tears a little boy again,

5. Small flag or banner used by a military unit as here also suggest the h u m a n cycle of fertility and a signal or guide.
birth, in contrast with “sterile sands” in the next 6. The Quaker designation for September may line.

1 0 7 4 / W A L T W H I T M A N

Throwing myself on the sand, confronting the waves,
20 I, chanter of pains and joys, uniter of here and hereafter,
Taking all hints to use them, but swiftly leaping beyond them,
A reminiscence sing.

Once Paumanok,⁷

When the lilac-scent was in the air and Fifth-month grass was growing,

25 Up this seashore in some briers,

Two feather'd guests from Alabama, two together,

And their nest, and four light-green eggs spotted with brown,

And every day the he-bird to and fro near at hand,

And every day the she-bird crouch'd on her nest, silent, with bright

eyes,

BO And every day I, a curious boy, never too close, never disturbing

them,

Cautiously peering, absorbing, translating.

Shine! shine! shine!

Pour down your warmth, great sun!

While we hash, we two together.

35 Two together!

Winds blow south, or winds blow north,

Day come white, or night come black,

Home, or rivers and mountains from home,

Singing all time, minding no time,

40 While we two keep together.

Till of a sudden,

May-be kill'd, unknown to her mate,

One forenoon the she-bird crouch'd not on the nest,
Nor return'd that afternoon, nor the next,
45 Nor ever appear'd again.
And thenceforward all summer in the sound of the sea,
And at night under the full of the moon in calmer weather,
Over the hoarse surging of the sea,
Or flitting from brier to brier by day,
50 I saw, I heard at intervals the remaining one, the he-bird,
The solitary guest from Alabama.

Blow! blow! blow!

Blow up sea-winds along Paumanok's shore;

I wait and I wait till you blow my mate to me.

55 Yes, when the stars glisten'd,
All night long on the prong of a moss-scallop'd stake,
Down almost amid the slapping waves,
Sat the lone singer wonderful causing tears.

7. The Native American name for Long Island.

OUT OF THE CRADLE ENDLESSLY ROCKING / 1075

He call'd on his mate,
He pour'd forth the meanings which I of all men know.
Yes my brother I know,
The rest might not, but I have treasur'd every note,
For more than once dimly down to the beach gliding,
Silent, avoiding the moonbeams, blending myself with the shadows, Recalling now the obscure shapes, the echoes, the sounds and sights after their sorts,

The white arms out in the breakers tirelessly tossing,
I, with bare feet, a child, the wind wafting my hair,
Listen'd long and long.

Listen'd to keep, to sing, now translating the notes,
Following you my brother.

Soothe! soothe! soothe!

Close on its wave soothes the wave behind,

And again another behind embracing and lapping, every one close,

But my love soothes not me, not me.

Low hangs the moon, it rose late,

It is lagging—O I think it is heavy with love, with love.

O madly the sea pushes upon the land,

With love, with love.

O night! do I not see my love fluttering out among the breakers?

What is that little black thing I see there in the white?

Loud! loud! loud!

Loud I call to you, my love!

High and clear I shoot my voice over the waves,

Surely you must know who is here, is here,

You must know who I am, my love.

Low-hanging moon!

What is that dusky spot in your brown yellow?

O it is the shape, the shape of my mate!

O moon do not keep her from me any longer.

Land! land! O land!

Whichever way I turn, O I think you could give me my mate back

again if you only would,

For I am almost sure I see her dimly whichever way I look.

O rising stars!

Perhaps the one I want so much will rise, will rise with some of you.

O throat! O trembling throat!

Sound clearer through the atmosphere!

1076 / W A L T W H I T M A N

Pierce the woods, the earth,

Somewhere listening to catch you must he the one I want.

Shake out carols!

100 Solitary here, the night's carols!

Carols of lonesome love! death's carols!

Carols under that lagging, yellow, waning moon!

O under that moon where she droops almost down into the sea!

O reckless despairing carols.

105 But soft! sink low!

Soft! let me just murmur,

And do you wait a moment you husky-nois'd sea,

For somewhere I believe I heard my mate responding to me,

So faint, I must be still, be still to listen,

110 But not altogether still, for then she might not come immediately to me.

Hither my love!

Here I am! here!

With this just-sustain'd note I announce myself to you,

This gentle call is for you my love, for you.

115 Do not be decoy'd elsewhere,

That is the whistle of the wind, it is not my voice,

That is the fluttering, the fluttering of the spray,

Those are the shadows of leaves.

O darkness! O in vain!

120 O I am very sick and sorrowful.

O brown halo in the sky near the moon, drooping upon the sea!

O troubled reflection in the sea!

O throat! O throbbing heart!

And I singing uselessly, uselessly all the night.

125 O past! O happy life! O songs of joy!

In the air, in the woods, over fields,

Loved! loved! loved! loved! loved!

But my mate no more, no more with me!

We two together no more.

BO The aria sinking,

All else continuing, the stars shining,

The winds blowing, the notes of the bird continuous echoing,

With angry moans the fierce old mother incessantly moaning,

On the sands of Paumanok's shore gray and rustling,

135 The yellow half-moon enlarged, sagging down, drooping, the face of the sea almost touching,

The boy ecstatic, with his bare feet the waves, with his hair the atmosphere dallying,

OUT OF THE CRADLE ENDLESSLY ROCKING / 1077

The love in the heart long pent, now loose, now at last tumultuously

bursting,

The aria's meaning, the ears, the soul, swiftly depositing,

The strange tears down the cheeks coursing,

140 The colloquy⁰ there, the trio, each uttering, conference

The undertone, the savage old mother incessantly crying,

To the boy's soul's questions sullenly timing, some drown'd secret

hissing,

To the outsetting bard.

Demon or bird! (said the boy's soul,)

145 Is it indeed toward your mate you sing? or is it really to
me?

For I, that was a child, my tongue's use sleeping, now I have heard

you,

Now in a moment I know what I am for, I awake,

And already a thousand singers, a thousand songs, clearer, louder

and more sorrowful than yours,

A thousand warbling echoes have started to life within me, never to die.

150 O you singer solitary, singing by yourself, projecting me,

O solitary me listening, never more shall I cease perpetuating
you,

Never more shall I escape, never more the reverberations,

Never more the cries of unsatisfied love be absent from me,

Never again leave me to be the peaceful child I was before
what

there in the night,

155 By the sea under the yellow and sagging moon,
The messenger there arous'd, the fire, the sweet hell within,
The unknown want, the destiny of me.

O give me the clew! (it lurks in the night here somewhere,)
O if I am to have so much, let me have more!

160 A word then, (for I will conquer it,)
The word final, superior to all,
Subtle, sent up—what is it?—I listen;
Are you whispering it, and have been all the time, you sea-waves?

Is that it from your liquid rims and wet sands?

165 Whereto answering, the sea,
Delaying not, hurrying not,
Whisper'd me through the night, and very plainly before daybreak,

Lisp'd to me the low and delicious word death,
And again death, death, death, death,

170 Hissing melodious, neither like the bird nor like my arous'd child's

heart,

But edging near as privately for me rustling at my feet,
Creeping thence steadily up to my ears and laving me softly all
over,

Death, death, death, death, death.

Which I do not forget,

175 But fuse the song of my dusky demon and brother,

1 0 7 8 / W A L T W H I T M A N

That he sang to me in the moonlight on Paumanok's gray beach,

With the thousand responsive songs at random,

My own songs awaked from that hour,
And with them the key, the word up from the waves,
iso The word of the sweetest song and all songs,
That strong and delicious word which, creeping to my feet, (Or like some old crone rocking the cradle, swathed in sweet garments, bending aside,)
The sea whisper'd me.

1859 1881

The Dalliance of the Eagles

Skirting the river road, (my forenoon walk, my rest,) Skyward in air a sudden muffled sound, the dalliance of the eagles,
The rushing amorous contact high in space together,
The clinching interlocking claws, a living, fierce, gyrating wheel,
5 Four beating wings, two beaks, a swirling mass tight grappling,
In tumbling turning clustering loops, straight downward
falling,
Till o'er the river pois'd, the twain yet one, a moment's lull,
A motionless still balance in the air, then parting, talons loosing,
Upward again on slow-firm pinions slanting, their separate diverse flight,
io She hers, he his, pursuing.

1880 1881

Reconciliation

Word over all, beautiful as the sky,
Beautiful that war and all its deeds of carnage must in time
be utterly lost,
That the hands of the sisters Death and Night incessantly softly
wash again, and ever again, this soil'd world;
For my enemy is dead, a man divine as myself is dead,
5 I look where he lies white-faced and still in the coffin—I draw near,
Bend down and touch lightly with my lips the white face in the coffin.

1865-66 1881

When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloom'd⁸

I

When lilacs last in the dooryard bloom'd,
And the great star early droop'd in the western sky in the
night,
I mourn'd, and yet shall mourn with ever-returning spring.

8. Composed immediately after the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln, April 14, 1865. Venus ("the great star," line 2), low in the western sky at this time, becomes associated with Lincoln.

WHEN LILACS LAST IN THE DOORYARD
BLOOM'D / 1079

Ever-returning spring, trinity sure to me you bring,
Lilac blooming perennial and drooping star in the west,
And thought of him I love.

2

O powerful western fallen star!

O shades of night—O moody, tearful night!
O great star disappear'd—O the black murk that hides the star!
O cruel hands that hold me powerless—O helpless soul of me!
O harsh surrounding cloud that will not free my soul.

3

In the dooryard fronting an old farm-house near the whitewash'd
palings,
Stands the lilac-bush tall-growing with heart-shaped leaves of rich
green,
With many a pointed blossom rising delicate, with the perfume strong
I love,
With every leaf a miracle—and from this bush in the dooryard,
With delicate-color'd blossoms and heart-shaped leaves of rich
green,
A sprig with its flower I break.

4

In the swamp in secluded recesses,
A shy and hidden bird is warbling a song.
Solitary the thrush,
The hermit withdrawn to himself, avoiding the settlements,
Sings by himself a song.
Song of the bleeding throat,
Death's outlet song of life, (for well dear brother I know,
If thou wast not granted to sing thou would'st surely die.)

5

Over the breast of the spring, the land, amid cities,

Amid lanes and through old woods, where lately the violets peep'd
from the ground, spotting the gray debris, Amid the grass in the fields each side of the lanes, passing the endless grass,
Passing the yellow-spear'd wheat, every grain from its shroud
in the dark-brown fields uprisen,
Passing the apple-tree blows of white and pink in the orchards,
Carrying a corpse to where it shall rest in the grave,
Night and day journeys a coffin.

1080 / W A L T W H I T M A N

24

Coffin that passes through lanes and streets,⁹ Through day and night with the great cloud darkening the
land,
35 With the pomp of the inloop'd flags with the cities draped in black,
With the show of the States themselves as of crape-veil'd women
standing,
With processions long and winding and the flambeaus⁰ of the torches
night,
With the countless torches lit, with the silent sea of faces and
the unbared heads,
With the waiting depot, the arriving coffin, and the sombre faces,
40 With dirges through the night, with the thousand voices rising strong and solemn,

With all the mournful voices of the dirges pour'd around the coffin,

The dim-lit churches and the shuddering organs—where amid these you journey,

With the tolling tolling bells' perpetual clang,

Here, coffin that slowly passes,

45 I give you my sprig of lilac.

7

(Nor for you, for one alone,

Blossoms and branches green to coffins all I bring,

For fresh as the morning, thus would I chant a song for you O sane and sacred death.

All over bouquets of roses,

50 O death, I cover you over with roses and early lilies,

But mostly and now the lilac that blooms the first,

Copious I break, I break the sprigs from the bushes,

With loaded arms I come, pouring for you,

For you and the coffins all of you O death.)

8

55 O western orb sailing the heaven,

Now I know what you must have meant as a month since I walk'd,

As I walk'd in silence the transparent shadowy night,

As I saw you had something to tell as you bent to me night after

night,

As you droop'd from the sky low down as if to my side, (while
the

other stars all look'd on,) 60 As we wander'd together the solemn night, (for something I know not

what kept me from sleep,)

As the night advanced, and I saw on the rim of the west how full you were of woe,

As I stood on the rising ground in the breeze in the cool transparent

night,

9. Lincoln's funeral procession traveled from Washington, D.C., to Springfield, Illinois, stopping at cities and towns all along the way for the people to honor the murdered president.

WHEN LILAC SLAST IN THE DOORYARD
BLOOM'D / 1081

As I watch'd where you pass'd and was lost in the netherward black of the night,

As my soul in its trouble dissatisfied sank, as where you sad orb,

Concluded, dropt in the night, and was gone.

9

Sing on there in the swamp,

0 singer bashful and tender, I hear your notes, I hear your call,

1 hear, I come presently, I understand you,

But a moment I linger, for the lustrous star has detain'd
me,

The star my departing comrade holds and detains me.

10

O how shall I warble myself for the dead one there I loved?

And how shall I deck my song for the large sweet soul that has gone?

And what shall my perfume be for the grave of him I love?

Sea-winds blown from east and west,

Blown from the Eastern sea and blown from the Western sea, till

there on the prairies meeting,

These and with these and the breath of my chant,

I'll perfume the grave of him I love.

11

O what shall I hang on the chamber walls?

And what shall the pictures be that I hang on the walls,

To adorn the burial-house of him I love?

Pictures of growing spring and farms and homes,

With the Fourth-month⁰ eve at sundown, and the gray smoke *April

lucid and bright,

With floods of the yellow gold of the gorgeous, indolent, sinking sun,

burning, expanding the air,

With the fresh sweet herbage under foot, and the pale green leaves of the trees prolific,

In the distance the flowing glaze, the breast of the river,
with a wind-

dapple here and there,

With ranging hills on the banks, with many a line against the sky, and

shadows,

And the city at hand with dwellings so dense, and stacks of chimneys,

And all the scenes of life and the workshops, and the workmen home-

ward returning.

12

Lo, body and soul—this land,

My own Manhattan with spires, and the sparkling and hurrying tides,

and the ships,

1 0 8 2 / W A L T W H I T M A N

The varied and ample land, the South and the North in the light,

Ohio's shores and flashing Missouri,

And ever the far-spreading prairies cover'd with grass and corn.

Lo, the most excellent sun so calm and haughty,

The violet and purple morn with just-felt breezes,

95 The gentle soft-born measureless light,

The miracle spreading bathing all, the fulfill'd noon,

The coming eve delicious, the welcome night and the stars,

Over my cities shining all, enveloping man and land.

13

Sing on, sing on you gray-brown bird,

100 Sing from the swamps, the recesses, pour your chant from the bushes,

Limitless out of the dusk, out of the cedars and pines.

Sing on dearest brother, warble your reedy song,

Loud human song, with voice of uttermost woe.

O liquid and free and tender!

105 O wild and loose to my soul—O wondrous singer!

You only I hear—yet the star holds me, (but will soon depart,)

Yet the lilac with mastering odor holds me.

14

Now while I sat in the day and look'd forth,

In the close of the day with its light and the fields of spring,
and the farmers preparing their crops,

110

In the large unconscious scenery of my land with its lakes and forests,

In the heavenly aerial beauty, (after the perturb'd winds and
the storms,)

Under the arching heavens of the afternoon swift passing, and
the

voices of children and women,

The many-moving sea-tides, and I saw the ships how they sail'd,

And the summer approaching with richness, and the fields all busy with labor,

115

And the infinite separate houses, how they all went on, each with its

meals and minutia of daily usages,

And the streets how their throbbings throb'd, and the cities pent—

lo, then and there,

Falling upon them all and among them all, enveloping me with
the

rest,

Appear'd the cloud, appear'd the long black trail,

And I knew death, its thought, and the sacred knowledge of death.

120 Then with the knowledge of death as walking one side of
me,

And the thought of death close-walking the other side of me,

WHEN LILACS LAST IN THE DOORYARD
BLOOM'D / 1083

And I in the middle as with companions, and as holding the hands of companions,

I fled forth to the hiding receiving night that talks not,

Down to the shores of the water, the path by the swamp in the dimness,

125 To the solemn shadowy cedars and ghostly pines so still.

And the singer so shy to the rest receiv'd me,

The gray-brown bird I know receiv'd us comrades three,

And he sang the carol of death, and a verse for him I love.

From deep secluded recesses,

130 From the fragrant cedars and the ghostly pines so still,

Came the carol of the bird.

And the charm of the carol rapt me,

As I held as if by their hands my comrades in the night,

And the voice of my spirit tallied the song of the bird.

135 Come lovely and soothing death,

Undulate round the world, serenely arriving, arriving,

In the day, in the night, to all, to each,

Sooner or later delicate death.

Prais'd be the fathomless universe,

140 For life and joy, and for objects and knowledge curious,

And for love, sweet love—but praise! praise! praise!

For the sure-enwinding arms of cool-enfolding death.

Dark mother always gliding near with soft feet,

Have none chanted for thee a chant of fullest welcome?

145 Then I chant it for thee, I glorify thee above all,

I bring thee a song that when thou must indeed come, come unflinchingly.

Approach strong deliveress,

When it is so, when thou hast taken them I joyously sing the dead,

Lost in the loving floating ocean of thee,

150 Laved in the flood of thy bliss O death.

From me to thee glad serenades,

Dances for thee I propose saluting thee, adornments and feastings for

thee,

*And the sights of the open landscape and the high-spread sky
are* fitting,

And life and the fields, and the huge and thoughtful night.

155 The night in silence under many a star,

The ocean shore and the husky whispering wave whose voice I know,

And the soul turning to thee O vast and well-veil'd death,

And the body gratefully nestling close to thee.

1 0 8 4 / W A L T W H I T M A N

Over the tree-tops I float thee a song,

*i60 Over the rising and sinking waves, over the myriad fields
and the*

prairies wide,

Over the dense-pack'd cities all and the teeming wharves and ways,

I float this carol with joy, with joy to thee O death.

15

To the tally of my soul,

Loud and strong kept up the gray-brown bird,

165 With pure deliberate notes spreading filling the night.

Loud in the pines and cedars dim,

Clear in the freshness moist and the swamp-perfume,

And I with my comrades there in the night.

While my sight that was bound in my eyes unclosed,

170 As to long panoramas of visions.

And I saw askant the armies,

I saw as in noiseless dreams hundreds of battle-flags,

Borne through the smoke of the battles and pierc'd with missiles I saw them,

And carried hither and yon through the smoke, and torn and bloody,

175 And at last but a few shreds left on the staffs, (and all in silence,)

And the staffs all splinter'd and broken.

I saw battle-corpses, myriads of them,

And the white skeletons of young men, I saw them,

I saw the debris and debris of all the slain soldiers of the war,

iso But I saw they were not as was thought,
They themselves were fully at rest, they suffer'd not,
The living remain'd and suffer'd, the mother suffer'd,
And the wife and the child and the musing comrade suffer'd,
And the armies that remain'd suffer'd.

16

185 Passing the visions, passing the night,
Passing, unloosing the hold of my comrades' hands,
Passing the song of the hermit bird and the tallying song of my soul,
Victorious song, death's outlet song, yet varying ever-altering song,
As low and wailing, yet clear the notes, rising and falling, flooding the
night,

190 Sadly sinking and fainting, as warning and warning, and yet again

bursting with joy,

Covering the earth and filling the spread of the heaven,
As that powerful psalm in the night I heard from recesses,
Passing, I leave thee lilac with heart-shaped leaves,
I leave thee there in the door-yard, blooming, returning with spring.

T o A L O C O M O T I V E I N W I N T E R / 1 0 8 5

195 I cease from my song for thee,
From my gaze on thee in the west, fronting the west, communing
with thee,
O comrade lustrous with silver face in the night.
Yet each to keep and all, retrievements out of the night,

The song, the wondrous chant of the gray-brown bird,
200 And the tallying chant, the echo arous'd in my soul,
With the lustrous and drooping star with the countenance full
of woe,
With the holders holding my hand nearing the call of the bird, Comrades mine and I in the midst, and their memory ever to keep,
for the dead I loved so well,
For the sweetest, wisest soul of all my days and lands—and this for his dear sake,
205 Lilac and star and bird twined with the chant of my soul,
There in the fragrant pines and the cedars dusk and dim.

1865-66 1881

A Noiseless Patient Spider

A noiseless patient spider,

I mark'd where on a little promontory it stood isolated,

Mark'd how to explore the vacant vast surrounding,

It launch'd forth filament, filament, filament, out of itself,

5 Ever unreeling them, ever tirelessly speeding them.

And you O my soul where you stand,

Surrounded, detached, in measureless oceans of space,

Ceaselessly musing, venturing, throwing, seeking the spheres
to connect them,

Till the bridge you will need be form'd, till the ductile anchor hold,

io Till the gossamer thread you fling catch somewhere, O my soul.

1868 1881

To a Locomotive in Winter

Thee for my recitative,

Thee in the driving storm even as now, the snow, the winter-day declining,

Thee in thy panoply,¹ thy measur'd dual throbbing and thy beat convulsive,

Thy black cylindric body, golden brass and silvery steel,

5 Thy ponderous side-bars, parallel and connecting rods, gyrating,

shuttling at thy sides,

1. Protective covering or magnificent display.

1 0 8 6 / F R E D E R I C K G O D D A R D T U C K E R
M A N

Thy metrical, now swelling pant and roar, now tapering in the distance,

Thy great protruding head-light fix'd in front,

Thy long, pale, floating vapor-pennants, tinged with delicate purple,

The dense and murky clouds out-belching from thy smoke-stack,

10 Thy knitted frame, thy springs and valves, the tremulous twinkle of thy wheels,

Thy train of cars behind, obedient, merrily following,

Through gale or calm, now swift, now slack, yet steadily careering;

Type of the modern—emblem of motion and power—pulse of the continent,

For once come serve the Muse² and merge in verse, even as here I see thee,

15 With storm and buffeting gusts of wind and falling snow,

By day thy warning ringing bell to sound its notes,

By night thy silent signal lamps to swing.

Fierce-throated beauty!

Roll through my chant with all thy lawless music, thy swinging

lamps at night,

20 Thy madly-whistled laughter, echoing, rumbling like an earthquake,

rousing all,

Law of thyself complete, thine own track firmly holding,

(No sweetness debonair of tearful harp or glib piano thine,)

Thy trills of shrieks by rocks and hills return'd,

Launch'd o'er the prairies wide, across the lakes,

25 To the free skies unpent and glad and strong.

1876 1881

F R E D E R I C K G O D D A R D T U C K E R M A N

1821-1873

*From Sonnets, Third Series*¹

/V

Thin little leaves of wood fern, ribbed and toothed,

Long curved sail needles of the green pitch pine,

With common sandgrass, skirt the horizon line,

And over these the incorruptible blue!

5 Here let me gently lie and softly view

All world asperities,0 lightly touched and smoothed roughnesses

As by his gracious hand, the great Bestower.

What though the year be late? some colors run

Yet through the dry, some links of melody,

io Still let me be, by such, assuaged and soothed

And happier made, as when, our schoolday done,

2. Source of poetic inspiration.

1. Tuckerman wrote five series of sonnets; some, including the third, were published posthumously.

SHAKESPEARE / 1087

We hunted on from flower to frosty flower,

Tattered and dim, the last red butterfly,

Or the old grasshopper molasses-mouthed.

V

How well do I recall that walk in state

Across the Common, by the paths we knew:

Myself in silver badge and riband0 blue, ribbon

My little sister with her book and slate;

5 The elm tree by the Pond, the fence of wood,

The burial place that at the corner stood

Where once we crossed, through the forbidden grate,

The stones that grudg'd us way, the graveside weed,

The ominous wind that turned us half about.

10 Smit° by the flying drops, at what a speed hit

Across the paths, unblessed and unforgiven

We hurried homeward when the day was late

And heard, with awe that left no place for doubt,

God's anger mutter in the darkened heaven.

VI

I looked across the rollers of the deep,
Long land-swells, ropes of weed, and riding foam,
With bitter angry heart: did I not roam
Ever like these? And what availeth sleep?
5 Or wakefulness? or pain? And still the sea
Rustled and sang, "Alike! and one to me!"
Ay! once I trod these shores too happily,
Murmuring my gladness to the rocks and ground
And, while the wave broke loud on ledge and reef, io Whispered it in the pause, like one who tells His heart's dream and delight! And still the sea
Went back and forth upon its bar of shells,
Washed and withdrew, with a soft shaling sound,
As though the wet were dry and joy were grief.

1860-72 1931

M A T T H E W A R N O L D

1 8 2 2 - 1 8 8 8

Shakespeare

Others abide our question. Thou art free.
We ask and ask—Thou smilest and art still,
Out-topping knowledge. For the loftiest hill,
Who to the stars uncrowns his majesty,

1 0 8 8 / M A T T H E W A R N O L D

5 Planting his steadfast footsteps in the sea,
Making the heaven of heavens his dwelling-place,
Spare but the cloudy border of his base
To the foiled searching of mortality;

And thou, who didst the stars and sunbeams know,
10 Self-schooled, self-scanned, self-honored, self-secure,
Didst tread on earth unguessed at—better so!
All pains the immortal spirit must endure,
All weakness which impairs, all griefs which bow,
Find their sole speech in that victorious brow.

1849

To Marguerite

Yes! in the sea of life enisled,
With echoing straits between us thrown,
Dotting the shoreless watery wild,
We mortal millions live alone.
5 The islands feel the enclaspings flow,
And then their endless bounds they know.
But when the moon their hollows lights,
And they are swept by balms of spring,
And in their glens, on starry nights,
10 The nightingales divinely sing;
And lovely notes, from shore to shore,
Across the sounds and channels pour—
Oh! then a longing like despair
Is to their farthest caverns sent;
15 For surely once, they feel, we were Parts of a single continent!
Now round us spreads the watery plain—
Oh might our margins meet again! margins
Who ordered, that their longing's fire
20 Should be, as soon as kindled, cooled?

Who renders vain their deep desire?—

A God, a God their severance ruled!

And bade betwixt their shores to be

The unplumbed, salt, estranging sea.

1852

THE SCHOLAR - GYPSY / 1089

The Scholar-Gypsy¹

Go, for they call you, shepherd, from the hill;

Go, shepherd, and untie the wattled cotes!²

No longer leave thy wistful flock unfed,

Nor let thy bawling fellows rack their throats,

5 Nor the cropped herbage shoot another head.

But when the fields are still,

And the tired men and dogs all gone to rest,

And only the white sheep are sometimes seen

Cross and recross the strips of moon-blanch'd green,

10 Come, shepherd, and again begin the quest!

Here, where the reaper was at work of late—

In this high field's dark corner, where he leaves

His coat, his basket, and his earthen cruse,⁰ vessel

And in the sun all morning binds the sheaves,

15 Then here, at noon, comes back his stores to use—

Here will I sit and wait,

While to my ear from uplands far away

The bleating of the folded⁰ flocks is borne, penned up

With distant cries of reapers in the corn⁰— grain

20 All the live murmur of a summer's day.

Screened is this nook o'er the high, half-reaped field,

And here till sundown, shepherd! will I be.
Through the thick corn the scarlet poppies peep,
And round green roots and yellowing stalks I see 25 Pale pink convolvulus in tendrils creep;
And air-swept lindens yield
Their scent, and rustle down their perfumed showers
Of bloom on the bent grass where I am laid,
And bower me from the August sun with shade;
BO And the eye travels down to Oxford's towers.
And near me on the grass lies Glanvil's book—
Come, let me read the oft-read tale again!
The story of the Oxford scholar poor,
Of pregnant parts³ and quick inventive brain,
35 Who, tired of knocking at preferment's door,
One summer-morn forsook

1. ” “There was very lately a lad in the University life, and told them that the people he went with of Oxford, who was by his poverty forced to leave were not such impostors as they were taken for, his studies there; and at last to join himself to a but that they had a traditional kind of learning company of vagabond gypsies. Among these extrav- among them, and could do wonders by the power agant people, by the insinuating subtlety of his car- of imagination, their fancy binding that of others: riage, he quickly got so much of their love and that himself had learned much of their art, and esteem as that they discovered to him their mys-

when he had compassed the whole secret, he tery. After he had been a pretty while well exercised intended, he said, to leave their company, and give in the trade, there chanced to ride by a couple of the world an account of what he had learned.’— scholars, who had formerly been of his acquaint-Glanvil’s Vanity of Dogmatizing, 1661” [Arnold’s tance. They quickly spied out their old friend note].

among the gypsies; and he gave them an account
2. Sheepfolds made of woven boughs (wattles).
of the necessity which drove him to that kind of
3. I.e., of intellectual abilities.

1 0 9 0 / M A T T H E W A R N O L D

His friends, and went to learn the gypsy-lore,
And roamed the world with that wild brotherhood,
And came, as most men deemed, to little good,
40 But came to Oxford and his friends no more.
But once, years after, in the country-lanes,
Two scholars, whom at college erst he knew,
Met him, and of his way of life enquired;
Whereat he answered, that the gypsy-crew,
45 His mates, had arts to rule as they desired
The workings of men’s brains,
And they can bind them to what thoughts they will.
“And I,” he said, “the secret of their art,
When fully learned, will to the world impart;
50 But it needs heaven-sent moments for this skill.”

This said, he left them, and returned no more.—
But rumors hung about the country-side,
That the lost Scholar long was seen to stray,
Seen by rare glimpses, pensive and tongue-tied,
55 In hat of antique shape, and cloak of gray.
The same the gypsies wore.
Shepherds had met him on the Hurst⁴ in spring;
At some lone alehouse in the Berkshire moors,
On the warm ingle^o-bench, the smock-frocked fireside
boors^o rustics
60 Had found him seated at their entering,
But, 'mid their drink and clatter, he would fly.
And I myself seem half to know thy looks,
And put the shepherds, wanderer! on thy trace;
And boys who in lone wheatfields scare the rooks⁵
65 I ask if thou hast passed their quiet place;
Or in my boat I lie
Moored to the cool bank in the summer-heats,
'Mid wide grass meadows which the sunshine fills,
And watch the warm, green-muffled Cumner hills,
70 And wonder if thou haunt'st their shy retreats.
For most, I know, thou lov'st retired ground!
Thee at the ferry Oxford riders blithe,
Returning home on summer-nights, have met
Crossing the stripling Thames⁶ at Bab-lock-hithe, 75 Trailing in the cool stream thy fingers wet,
As the punt's rope chops round;⁷
And leaning backward in a pensive dream,

And fostering in thy lap a heap of flowers

4. A hill near Oxford. (All place-names in the away from eating wheat grains.

poem, with the obvious exception of the Mediter-

6. The narrow upper reaches of the river before it ranean localities of the last two stanzas, refer to broadens out to its full width.

the countryside around Oxford.)

7. I.e., as the rope tying the small boat to the bank

5. The boys have been hired to frighten crows shifts around.

THE SCHOLAR - GYPSY / 1091

Plucked in shy fields and distant Wychwood bowers,

And thine eyes resting on the moonlit stream.

And then they land, and thou art seen no more!

Maidens, who from the distant hamlets come

To dance around the Fyfield elm in May,

Oft through the darkening fields have seen thee roam,

Or cross a stile into the public way.

Oft thou hast given them store

Of flowers—the frail-leafed, white anemone,

Dark bluebells drenched with dew of summer eves,

And purple orchises with spotted leaves—

But none hath words she can report of thee.

And, above Godstow Bridge, when hay-time's here

In June, and many a scythe in sunshine flames,

Men who through those wide fields of breezy grass

Where black-winged swallows haunt the glittering Thames,

To bathe in the abandoned lasher⁸ pass,
Have often passed thee near Sitting upon the river bank o'ergrown;
Marked thine outlandish garb, thy figure spare,
Thy dark vague eyes, and soft abstracted air—
But, when they came from bathing, thou wast gone!
At some lone homestead in the Cumner hills,
Where at her open door the housewife darns,
Thou hast been seen, or hanging on a gate
To watch the threshers in the mossy barns.
Children, who early range these slopes and late
For cresses from the rills,⁰ streams
Have known thee eying, all an April-day,
The springing pastures and the feeding kine;^o cattle
And marked thee, when the stars come out and shine,
Through the long dewy grass move slow away.
In autumn, on the skirts of Bagley Wood—
Where most the gypsies by the turf-edged way
Pitch their smoked tents, and every bush you see
With scarlet patches tagged and shreds of gray,
Above the forest-ground called Thessaly—
The blackbird, picking food,
Sees thee, nor stops his meal, nor fears at all;
So often has he known thee past him stray,
Rapt, twirling in thy hand a withered spray,
And waiting for the spark from heaven to fall.
And once, in winter, on the causeway chill
Where home through flooded fields foot-travelers go,

Have I not passed thee on the wooden bridge,
8. Slack water above a weir, or dam.

1 0 9 2 / M A T T H E W A R N O L D

Wrapt in thy cloak and battling with the snow,
125 Thy face tow'rd Hinksey and its wintry ridge?
And thou hast climbed the hill,
And gained the white brow of the Cumner range;
Turned once to watch, while thick the snowflakes fall,
The line of festal light in Christ Church hall—
iBo Then sought thy straw in some sequestered grange.⁹
But what—I dream! Two hundred years are flown
Since first thy story ran through Oxford halls,
And the grave Glanvil did the tale inscribe
That thou wert wandered from the studious walls
135 To learn strange arts, and join a gypsy-tribe;
And thou from earth art gone
Long since, and in some quiet churchyard laid—
Some country-nook, where o'er thy unknown grave
Tall grasses and white flowering nettles wave, 140 Under a dark, red-fruited yew-tree's shade.
—No, no, thou hast not felt the lapse of hours!
For what wears out the life of mortal men?
'Tis that from change to change their being rolls;
'Tis that repeated shocks, again, again,
145 Exhaust the energy of strongest souls
And numb the elastic powers.
Till having used our nerves with bliss and teen,^o vexation
And tired upon a thousand schemes our wit,

To the just-pausing Genius¹ we remit 150 Our worn-out life, and are—what we have been.
 Thou hast not lived, why should'st thou perish, so?
 Thou hadst one aim, one business, one desire;
 Else wert thou long since numbered with the dead!
 Else hadst thou spent, like other men, thy fire!
 155 The generations of thy peers are fled.
 And we ourselves shall go;
 But thou possessest an immortal lot,
 And we imagine thee exempt from age
 And living as thou liv'st on Glanvil's page, 160 Because thou hadst—what we, alas! have not.
 For early didst thou leave the world, with powers
 Fresh, undiverted to the world without,
 Firm to their mark, not spent on other things;
 Free from the sick fatigue, the languid doubt, 165 Which much to have tried, in much been baffled, brings.
 O life unlike to ours!
 Who fluctuate idly without term or scope,
 9. Country house. Christ Church hall: dining hall assigned to each being to see it through the world of an Oxford college.
 and finally to usher it out.

1. In classical mythology, the protecting spirit

T H E S C H O L A R - G Y P S Y / 1 0 9 3

Of whom each strives, nor knows for what he strives,
 And each half² lives a hundred different lives;
 170 Who wait like thee, but not, like thee, in hope.

Thou waitest for the spark from heaven! and we,
Light half-believers of our casual creeds,
Who never deeply felt, nor clearly willed,
Whose insight never has borne fruit in deeds,
175 Whose vague resolves never have been fulfilled;
For whom each year we see Breeds new beginnings, disappointments new;
Who hesitate and falter life away,
And lose tomorrow the ground won today—
180 Ah! do not we, wanderer! await it too?
Yes, we await it! but it still delays,
And then we suffer! and amongst us one,³
Who most has suffered, takes dejectedly
His seat upon the intellectual throne;
185 And all his store of sad experience he Lays bare of wretched days;
Tells us his misery's birth and growth and signs,
And how the dying spark of hope was fed,
And how the breast was soothed, and how the head,
190 And all his hourly varied anodynes.
This for our wisest! and we others pine,
And wish the long unhappy dream would end,
And waive all claim to bliss, and try to bear;
With close-lipped patience for our only friend,
195 Sad patience, too near neighbor to despair—
But none has hope like thine!
Thou through the fields and through the woods dost stray,
Roaming the countryside, a truant boy,

Nursing thy project in unclouded joy,
200 And every doubt long blown by time away.
O born in days when wits were fresh and clear,
And life ran gaily as the sparkling Thames;
Before this strange disease of modern life,
With its sick hurry, its divided aims,
205 Its head o'ertaxed, its palsied hearts, was rife—
Fly hence, our contact fear!
Still fly, plunge deeper in the bowering wood!
Averse, as Dido did with gesture stern
From her false friend's approach in Hades turn,⁴ 210 Wave us away, and keep thy solitude!

2. I.e., half-heartedly.

Carthage, had been deserted by Aeneas after giving
3. Possibly the German poet Johann Wolfgang her love to him. Aeneas later encountered her in von Goethe (1749-1832) or the English poet
the underworld, among the shades of those who Alfred, Lord Tennyson (1809-1892; see pp. 982 - had died of unhappy love, but when he greeted her 1009).

she turned her back on him.

4. According to Virgil's Aeneid, Dido, queen of

1094 / MATTHEW ARNOLD

Still nursing the unconquerable hope,
Still clutching the inviolable shade,
With a free, onward impulse brushing through,
By night, the silvered branches of the glade—

215 Far on the forest-skirts, where none pursue,
On some mild pastoral slope
Emerge, and resting on the moonlit pales⁰ fences
Freshen thy flowers as in former years
With dew, or listen with enchanted ears,
220 From the dark dingles,⁰ to the nightingales! valleys
But fly our paths, our feverish contact fly!
For strong the infection of our mental strife,
Which, though it gives no bliss, yet spoils for rest;
And we should win thee from thy own fair life,
225 Like us distracted, and like us unblest.
Soon, soon thy cheer would die,
Thy hopes grow timorous, and unfixed thy powers,
And thy clear aims be cross and shifting made;
And then thy glad perennial youth would fade,
230 Bo Fade, and grow old at last, and die like ours.
Then fly our greetings, fly our speech and smiles!
—As some grave Tynan⁵ trader, from the sea,
Descried at sunrise an emerging prow
Lifting the cool-haired creepers stealthily,
235 The fringes of a southward-facing brow
Among the Aegean isles;
And saw the merry Grecian coaster come,
Freighted with amber grapes, and Chian⁶ wine,
Green, bursting figs, and tunnies⁰ steeped in brine— tuna
240 And knew the intruders on his ancient home,
The young light-hearted masters of the waves—
And snatched his rudder, he shook out more sail;

And day and night held on indignantly
O'er the blue Midland waters with the gale,
245 Betwixt the Syrtes⁷ and soft Sicily,
To where the Atlantic raves
Outside the western straits;⁸ and unbent sails
There, where down cloudy cliffs, through sheets of foam,
Shy traffickers, the dark Iberians⁹ come;
250 And on the beach undid his corded bales.

1853

5. A native of the ancient Phoenician city of Tyre, Cyrenaica, the other off Tunisia.
in the eastern Mediterranean.

8. I.e., the Straits of Gibraltar.

6. From the island of Chios, famous for its wine.

9. Ancient name for the inhabitants of Spain.

7. Two gulfs on the North African coast, one off

THYRSIS / 1 0 9 5

Thyrsis

A Monody, to Commemorate the Author's Friend, Arthur Hugh Clough,

Who Died at Florence, 1861

How changed is here each spot man makes or fills!
In the two Hinkseys² nothing keeps the same;
The village street its haunted mansion lacks,
And from the sign is gone Sibylla's name,³
5 And from the roofs the twisted chimney-stacks—
Are ye too changed, ye hills?
See, 'tis no foot of unfamiliar men

Tonight from Oxford up your pathway strays!
Here came I often, often, in old days—
io Thyrsis and I; we still had Thyrsis then.
Runs it not here, the track by Childsworth Farm,
Past the high wood, to where the elm-tree crowns
The hill behind whose ridge the sunset flames?
The signal-elm, that looks on Ilsley Downs, 15 The Vale, the three lone weirs,⁰ the youthful Thames?
dams
This winter-eve is warm,
Humid the air! leafless, yet soft as spring,
The tender purple spray on copse⁰ and briers! small wood
And that sweet city with her dreaming spires,
20 She needs not June for beauty's heightening,
Lovely all times she lies, lovely tonight!
Only, methinks, some loss of habit's power
Befalls me wandering through this upland dim.
Once passed I blindfold here, at any hour;
25 Now seldom come I, since I came with him.
That single elm-tree bright
Against the west—I miss it! is it gone?
We prized it dearly; while it stood, we said,
Our friend, the Gypsy-Scholar, was not dead;
30 While the tree lived, he in these fields lived on.
Too rare, too rare, grow now my visits here.
But once I knew each field, each flower, each stick;
And with the country-folk acquaintance made
1. The friendship between Arnold and the English above.) As in his use of the names Thyrsis (for poet Clough (1819-1861; see pp. 1051-53) had Clough) and Corydon (line 80, for himself), both been at its closest while they were at Oxford, and traditional designations for shepherd-poets, Arnold chooses as the framework for this poem a visit to Oxford—at least in reminiscence—and pastoral elegy for his monody, or poem in which a more specifically to a hill above the town crowned single mourner laments.

by the “signal-elm.” They connected the tree with 2. North and South Hinksey, two villages near the continuing symbolic presence in the country-Oxford.

side of the Scholar-Gypsy and his lonely faithful- 3. Sibylla Kerr, a tavern keeper when Arnold and ness to an ideal of truth-seeking. (See Arnold’s Clough were students.

poem “The Scholar-Gypsy” and his note to it,

1 0 9 6 / M A T T H E W A R N O L D

By barn in threshing-time, by new-built rick.

Here, too, our shepherd-pipes we first assayed.

Ah me! this many a year

My pipe is lost, my shepherd’s holiday!

Needs must I lose them, needs with heavy heart

Into the world and wave of men depart;

But Thyrsis of his own will went away.⁴

It irked him to be here, he could not rest.
He loved each simple joy the country yields,
He loved his mates; but yet he could not keep, stay
For that a shadow loomed on the fields,
Here with the shepherds and the silly sheep. innocent
Some life of men unblest
He knew, which made him droop; and filled his head.
He went; his piping took a troubled sound
Of storms that rage outside our happy ground;
He could not wait their passing, he is dead.
So, some tempestuous morn in early June,
When the year's primal burst of bloom is o'er,
Before the roses and the longest day—
When garden-walks and all the grassy floor
With blossoms red and white of fallen May
And chestnut-flowers are strewn—
So have I heard the cuckoo's parting cry,
From the wet field, through the next garden-trees,
Come with the volleying rain and tossing breeze:
The bloom is gone, and with the bloom go I!
Too quick despairer, wherefore wilt thou go?
Soon will the high Midsummer pomps come on,
Soon will the musk carnations break and swell,
Soon shall we have gold-dusted snapdragon,
Sweet-William with his homely cottage-smell,
And stocks in fragrant blow;
Roses that down the alleys shine afar,
And open, jasmine-muffled lattices,

And groups under the dreaming garden-trees,
And the full moon, and the white evening-star.
He hearkens not! light comer, he is flown!
What matters it? next year he will return,
And we shall have him in the sweet spring-days,
With whitening hedges, and uncrumpling fern,
And bluebells trembling by the forest-ways,
And scent of hay new-mown.

But Thyrsis never more we swains shall see;
See him come back, and cut a smoother reed,

4. Arnold left Oxford in 1847 to earn a living, first rather than subscribe to the Thirty-nine Articles of as a minor diplomat, then as inspector of schools. the Anglican Church.

Clough resigned his Oxford fellowship in 1848, 5. Religious and political controversies.

THYRSIS / 1 0 9 7

And blow a strain the world at last shall heed—
so For Time, not Corydon, hath conquered thee!
Alack, for Corydon no rival now!

But when Sicilian shepherds lost a mate,
Some good survivor with his flute would go,
Piping a ditty sad for Bion's fate;⁶

85 And cross the unpermitted ferry's flow,⁷
And relax Pluto's brow,

And make leap up with joy the beauteous head
Of Proserpine, among whose crowned hair
Are flowers first opened on Sicilian air,

90 And flute his friend, like Orpheus,⁸ from the dead.

0 easy access to the hearer's grace

When Dorian⁹ shepherds sang to Proserpine!
 For she herself had trod Sicilian fields,
 She knew the Dorian water's gush divine,
 95 She knew each lily white which Enna yields,
 Each rose with blushing face;
 She loved the Dorian pipe, the Dorian strain.
 But ah, of our poor Thames she never heard!
 Her foot the Cumner cowslips⁰ never stirred; wildflowers
 100 And we should tease her with our plaint in vain!
 Well! wind-dispersed and vain the words will be,
 Yet, Thyrsis, let me give my grief its hour
 In the old haunt, and find our tree-topped hill!
 Who, if not I, for questing here hath power?
 105 I know the wood which hides the daffodil,
 I know the Fyfield tree,
 I know what white, what purple fritillaries¹
 The grassy harvest of the river-fields,
 Above by Ensham, down by Sandford, yields,
 110 And what sedged brooks are Thames's tributaries;
 I know these slopes; who knows them if not I?
 But many a dingle⁰ on the loved hillside, valley
 With thorns once studded, old, white-blossomed trees,
 Where thick the cowslips grew, and far descried
 ii5 High towered the spikes of purple orchises, Hath since our day put by
 The coronals of that forgotten time;²
 Down each green bank hath gone the ploughboy's team,
 6. Refers to a Greek pastoral poet of the first cen-

each year in the underworld and half on Earth.

ture B.C.E. who lived in Sicily and was mourned in

8. Who, because of the power and charm of his

“Lament for Bion,” sometimes ascribed to his pupil music, had been permitted to attempt to lead his Moschus.

wife, Eurydice, back from the dead.

7. The ferry across the river Styx to Hades, ruled

9. One of the ancient Greek lyrical modes, characterized by simplicity and nobility.

acterized by simplicity and nobility.

had abducted while she was gathering flowers in

1. Flowers commonly found in moist meadows.

the fields near Enna, in Sicily. She spent half of

2. I.e., the flowers that once crowned them.

1 0 9 8 / M A T T H E W A R N O L D

And only in the hidden brookside gleam

120 Primroses, orphans of the flowery prime.

W h e r e is the girl, who by the boatman’s door,

Above the locks, above the boating throng,

Unmoored our skiff when through the Wytham flats,

Red loosestrife and blond meadow-sweet³ among 125 And darting swallows and light water-gnats,

We tracked the shy T h a m e s shore?

W h e r e are the mowers, who, as the tiny swell

Of our boat passing heaved the river-grass,

Stood with suspended scythe to see us pass?

130 They all are gone, and thou art gone as well!

Yes, thou art gone! and round me too the night
In ever-nearing circle weaves her shade.
I see her veil draw soft across the day,
I feel her slowly chilling breath invade 135 T h e cheek grown thin, the brown hair sprent⁰ with gray;
sprinkled
I feel her finger light
Laid pausefully upon life's headlong train;
T h e foot less prompt to meet the morning dew,
T h e heart less b o u n d i n g at emotion new,
140 And hope, once crushed, less quick to spring again.
And long the way appears, which seemed so short
To the less practiced eye of sanguine⁰ youth; confident
And high the mountain-tops, in cloudy air,
T h e mountain-tops where is the throne of Truth,
145 Tops in life's morning-sun so bright and bare!
Unbreachable the fort
Of the long-battered world uplifts its wall;
And strange and vain the earthly turmoil grows,
And near and real the charm of thy repose,
150 And night as welcome as a friend would fall.
But hush! the upland hath a sudden loss
Of quiet!—Look, adown the dusk hillside,
A troop of Oxford hunters going home,
As in old days, jovial and talking, ride!
155 From hunting with the Berkshire hounds they come.
Quick! let me fly, and cross
Into yon farther field!—'Tis done; and see,

Backed by the sunset, which doth glorify
The orange and pale violet evening-sky,
160 Bare on its lonely ridge, the Tree! the Tree!
I take the omen! Eve lets down her veil,
The white fog creeps from bush to bush about,
The west unflushes, the high stars grow bright,
And in the scattered farms the lights come out.

3. Like loosestrife, flowers that grow in moist meadows and near streams.

THYRSIS / 1099

165 I cannot reach the signal-tree to-night,
Yet, happy omen, hail!
Hear it from thy broad lucent Arno-vale⁴
(For there thine earth-forgetting eyelids keep
The morningless and unawakening sleep 170 Under the flowery oleanders pale),
Hear it, O Thyrsis, still our tree is there!
Ah, vain! These English fields, this upland dim,
These brambles pale with mist engarlanded,
That lone, sky-pointing tree, are not for him;
175 To a boon southern country he is fled,
And now in happier air,
Wandering with the great Mother's train divine⁵
(And purer or more subtle soul than thee,
I trow, the mighty Mother doth not see) iso Within a folding of the Apennine,⁶
Thou hearest the immortal chants⁷ of old!
Putting his sickle to the perilous grain

In the hot cornfield of the Phrygian king,
For thee the Lityerses-song again
185 Young Daphnis with his silver voice doth sing;⁸
Sings his Sicilian fold,
His sheep, his hapless love, his blinded eyes—
And how a call celestial round him rang,
And heavenward from the fountain-brink he sprang,
190 And all the marvel of the golden skies.
T h e r e thou art gone, and me thou leavest here
Sole in these fields! yet will I not despair.
Despair I will not, while I yet descry
N e a t h the mild canopy of English air
195 That lonely tree against the western sky.
Still, still these slopes, 'tis clear,
O u r Gypsy-Scholar haunts, outliving thee!
Fields where soft sheep from cages pull the hay,
Woods with anemonies in flower till May,
200 Know him a wanderer still; then why not me?
4. Clough is buried in the Protestant cemetery in took upon himself the reaping-contest with Florence, which is situated in the valley of the Arno Lityerses, overcame him, and slew him. The River.
Lityerses-song connected with this tradition was,
5. Devotees of Demeter (whose name may mean like the Linus-song, one of the early plaintive Earth Mother), goddess of agriculture.
strains of Greek popular poetry, and used to be

6. The Apennines are a mountain range in Italy.

sung by corn-reapers. Other traditions represented

7. Sung in Demeter's honor.

Daphnis as beloved by a nymph who exacted from

8. "Daphnis, the ideal Sicilian shepherd of Greek him an oath to love no one else. He fell in love with pastoral poetry, was said to have followed into a princess, and was struck blind by the jealous

Phrygia his mistress Piplea, who had been carried nymph. Mercury, who was his father, raised him off by robbers, and to have found her in the power to heaven, and made a fountain spring up in the

of the king of Phrygia, Lityerses. Lityerses used to place from which he ascended. At this fountain the make strangers try a contest with him in reaping

Sicilians offered yearly sacrifices.—See Servius,

corn, and to put them to death if he overcame

Comment, in Virgil. Bucol., v.20 and viii.68"

them. Hercules arrived in time to save Daphnis, [Arnold's note].

1 1 0 0 / M A T T H E W A R N O L D

A fugitive and gracious light he seeks,

Shy to illumine; and I seek it too.

This does not come with houses or with gold,

With place, with honor, and a flattering crew;

205 Tis not in the world's market bought and sold—

But the smooth-slipping weeks

Drop by, and leave its seeker still untired;

Out of the heed of mortals he is gone,
He wends unfollowed, he must house alone;
210 Yet on he fares, by his own heart inspired.
Thou too, O Thyrsis, on like quest wast bound;
Thou wanderest with me for a little hour!
Men gave thee nothing; but this happy quest,
If men esteemed thee feeble, gave thee power,
215 If men procured thee trouble, gave thee rest.
And this rude Cumner ground,
Its fir-topped Hurst,⁰ its farms, its quiet fields, a hill
Here cam'st thou in thy jocund youthful time,
Here was thine height of strength, thy golden prime!
220 And still the haunt beloved a virtue yields.
What though the music of thy rustic flute
Kept not for long its happy, country tone;
Lost it too soon, and learnt a stormy note
Of men contention-tost, of men who groan, 225 Which tasked thy pipe too sore, and tired thy throat—
It failed, and thou wast mute!
Yet hadst thou always visions of our light,
And long with men of care thou couldst not stay,
And soon thy foot resumed its wandering way,
230 Left human haunt, and on alone till night.
Too rare, too rare, grow now my visits here!
'Mid city-noise, not, as with thee of yore,
Thyrsis! in reach of sheep-bells is my home.
—Then through the great town's harsh, heart-wearying roar, 235 Let in thy voice a whisper often come,

To chase fatigue and fear:

Why faintest thou? I wandered till I died.

Roam on! The light we sought is shining still.

Dost thou ask proof? Our tree yet crowns the hill,

240 Our Scholar travels yet the loved hillside.

1852

D O V E R B E A C H / 1 1 0 1

Dover Beach

The sea is calm tonight.

The tide is full, the moon lies fair

Upon the straits; on the French coast the light

Gleams and is gone; the cliffs of England stand,

5 Glimmering and vast, out in the tranquil bay.

Come to the window, sweet is the night-air!

Only, from the long line of spray

Where the sea meets the moon-blanchèd land,

Listen! you hear the grating roar

10 Of pebbles which the waves draw back, and fling,

At their return, up the high strand,

Begin, and cease, and then again begin,

With tremulous cadence slow, and bring

The eternal note of sadness in.

15 Sophocles long ago

Heard it on the Aegean, and it brought

Into his mind the turbid ebb and flow

Of human misery;9 we Find also in the sound a thought,

20 Hearing it by this distant northern sea.

The Sea of Faith

Was once, too, at the full, and round earth's shore
Lay like the folds of a bright girdle furled.

But now I only hear

25 Its melancholy, long withdrawing roar,

Retreating, to the breath

Of the night-wind, down the vast edges drear

And naked shingles¹ of the world.

Ah, love, let us be true

BO To one another! for the world, which seems

To lie before us like a land of dreams,

So various, so beautiful, so new,

Hath really neither joy, nor love, nor light,

Nor certitude, nor peace, nor help for pain;

35 And we are here as on a darkling plain

Swept with confused alarms of struggle and flight,

Where ignorant armies clash by night.

1867

9. A reference to a chorus in Sophocles' play gusts of Thracian wind; it rolls the dark sand from

Antigone, lines 583—92: "Happy are they whose life

the depths, and the beaches, beaten by the waves has not tasted evils. But for those whose house has and wind, groan and roar."

been shaken by God, no mass of ruin fails to creep

1. Beaches covered with water-worn small stones upon their families. It is like the sea-swell ...

and pebbles.

when an undersea darkness drives upon it with

1 1 0 2

DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI

1828-1882

The Blessed Damozel

The blessed damozel leaned out

From the gold bar of Heaven;

Her eyes were deeper than the depth

Of waters stilled at even;

5 She had three lilies in her hand,

And the stars in her hair were seven.

Her robe, ungirt from clasp to hem,

No wrought flowers did adorn,

But a white rose of Mary's gift,

io For service meetly worn; properly

Her hair that lay along her back

Was yellow like ripe corn. wheat, grain

Herseemed she scarce had been a day it seemed to her

One of God's choristers;

15 The wonder was not yet quite gone

From that still look of hers;

Albeit, to them she left, her day

Had counted as ten years.

(To one, it is ten years of years.

20 ... Yet now, and in this place,

Surely she leaned o'er me—her hair

Fell all about my face... .

Nothing: the autumn fall of leaves.

The whole year sets apace.)
25 It was the rampart of God's house
That she was standing on;
By God built over the sheer depth
The which is Space begun;
So high, that looking downward thence 30 She scarce could see the sun.
It lies in Heaven, across the flood
Of ether, as a bridge.
Beneath, the tides of day and night
With flame and darkness ridge
35 The void, as low as where this earth
Spins like a fretful midge.⁰ gnatlike insect
Around her, lovers, newly met
In joy no sorrow claims,

1. Older form of damsel, meaning "young unmarried lady," preferred by Romantic and later writers because it avoids the simpler, homelier associations of damsel.

T H E B L E S S E D D A M O Z E L / 1 1 0 3

Spoke evermore among themselves
40 Their rapturous new names;
And the souls mounting up to God
Went by her like thin flames.
And still she bowed herself and stooped
Out of the circling charm;
45 Until her bosom must have made
The bar she leaned on warm,
And the lilies lay as if asleep
Along her bended arm.

From the fixed place of Heaven she saw 50 Time like a pulse shake fierce Through all the worlds. Her gaze still strove
Within the gulf to pierce
Its path; and now she spoke as when
The stars sang in their spheres.
55 The sun was gone now; the curled moon
Was like a little feather
Fluttering far down the gulf; and now
She spoke through the still weather.
Her voice was like the voice the stars
60 Had when they sang together.
(Ah sweet! Even now, in that bird's song,
Strove not her accents there,
Fain to be hearkened? When those bells
Possessed the midday air,
65 Strove not her steps to reach my side Down all the echoing stair?)
"I wish that he were come to me,
For he will come," she said.
"Have I not prayed in Heaven?—on earth,
70 Lord, Lord, has he not prayed?
Are not two prayers a perfect strength?
And shall I feel afraid?
"When round his head the aureole⁰ clings, radiant light
And he is clothed in white,
75 I'll take his hand and go with him
To the deep wells of light;

We will step down as to a stream,
And bathe there in God's sight.
"We two will stand beside that shrine,
so Occult, withheld, untrod,
Whose lamps are stirred continually
With prayer sent up to God;
And see our old prayers, granted, melt
Each like a little cloud.

1104 / DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI

85 "We two will lie i' the shadow of
That living mystic tree
Within whose secret growth the Dove
Is sometimes felt to be,
While every leaf that His plumes touch
90 Saith His Name audibly.
"And I myself will teach to him,
I myself, lying so,
The songs I sing here; which his voice
Shall pause in, hushed and slow,
95 And find some knowledge at each pause,
Of some new thing to know."
(Alas! We two, we two, thou say'st!
Yea, one wast thou with me
That once of old. But shall God lift
100 To endless unity
The soul whose likeness with thy soul
Was but its love for thee?)
"We two," she said, "will seek the groves

Where the lady Mary is,
105 With her five handmaidens, whose names
Are five sweet symphonies, Cecily, Gertrude, Magdalen,
Margaret and Rosalys.

“Circlewise sit they, with bound locks
110 And foreheads garlanded;
Into the fine cloth white like flame
Weaving the golden thread,
To fashion the birth-ropes for them
Who are just born, being dead.

115 “He shall fear, haply, and be dumb:
Then will I lay my cheek
To his, and tell about our love,
Not once abashed or weak:
And the dear Mother will approve

120 My pride, and let me speak.
“Herself shall bring us, hand in hand,
To Him round whom all souls
Kneel, the clear-ranged unnumbered heads
Bowed with their aureoles:

125 And angels meeting us shall sing
To their citherns and citoles.²

2. The cithern is a seventeenth-century guitarlike instrument with wire strings; the citole, a stringed instrument dating from the thirteenth to the fifteenth century.

T H E W O O D S P U R G E / 1 1 0 5

“There will I ask of Christ the Lord
Thus much for him and me:—

Only to live as once on earth
130 With Love—only to be,
As then awhile, forever now Together, I and he.”
She gazed and listened and then said,
Less sad of speech than mild,
135 “All this is when he comes.” She ceased.
The light thrilled towards her, filled
With angels in strong level flight.
Her eyes prayed, and she smiled.
(I saw her smile.) But soon their path
140 Was vague in distant spheres:
And then she cast her arms along
The golden barriers,
And laid her face between her hands,
And wept. (I heard her tears.)

1846 1850

Sudden Light
I have been here before,
But when or how I cannot tell:
I know the grass beyond the door,
The sweet keen smell,
5 The sighing sound, the lights around the shore.
You have been mine before,
How long ago I may not know:
But just when at that swallow’s soar
Your neck turned so,
io Some veil did fall—I knew it all of yore.

Has this been thus before?
And shall not thus time's eddying flight
Still with our lives our love restore
In death's despite,
15 And day and night yield one delight once more?

1854 1863

The Woodspurge

The wind flapped loose, the wind was still,
Shaken out dead from tree and hill:

1 1 0 6 / D A N T E G A B R I E L R O S S E T T I

I had walked on at the wind's will—

I sat now, for the wind was still.

5 Between my knees my forehead was—

My lips, drawn in, said not Alas!

My hair was over in the grass,

My naked ears heard the day pass.

My eyes, wide open, had the run

10 Of some ten weeds to fix upon;

Among those few, out of the sun,

The woodspurge flowered, three cups in one.

From perfect grief there need not be

Wisdom or even memory:

15 One thing then learnt remains to me—

The woodspurge has a cup of three.

1856 1870

From The House of Life

A Sonnet

A Sonnet is a moment's monument,—

Memorial from the Soul's eternity
To one dead deathless hour. Look that it be,
Whether for lustral¹⁰ rite or dire portent, purificatory
5 Of its own arduous fullness reverent:
Carve it in ivory or in ebony,
As Day or Night may rule; and let Time see
Its flowering crest impearled and orient.
A Sonnet is a coin: its face reveals 10 The soul—its converse, to what Power 'tis due:
Whether for tribute to the august appeals
Of Life, or dower in Love's high retinue,
It serve; or, 'mid the dark wharf's cavernous breath,
In Charon's³ palm it pay the toll to Death.

19. Silent Noon

Your hands lie open in the long fresh grass—
The finger-points look through like rosy blooms:
Your eyes smile peace. The pasture gleams and glooms
'Neath billowing skies that scatter and amass.
5 All round our nest, far as the eye can pass,
Are golden kingcup-fields with silver edge
Where the cow-parsley skirts the hawthorn-hedge.
'Tis visible silence, still as the hour-glass.

3. In Greek mythology, Charon received a coin, an obolus, for ferrying the shades of the newly dead across the river Styx to Hades.

M O D E R N L O V E / 1 1 0 7

Deep in the sun-searched growths the dragonfly
10 Hangs like a blue thread loosened from the sky:
So this winged hour is dropt to us from above.

Oh! clasp we to our hearts, for deathless dower,⁰ gift
This close-companioned inarticulate hour
When twofold silence was the song of love.

70. The Hill Summit

This feast-day of the sun, his altar there
In the broad west has blazed for vesper^o-song;
evening

And I have loitered in the vale⁰ too long valley

And gaze now a belated worshipper.
5 Yet may I not forget that I was 'ware,⁰
So journeying, of his face at intervals

aware

Transfigured where the fringed horizon falls,
A fiery bush with coruscating⁰ hair.

glittering

And now that I have climbed and won this height,
io I must tread downward through the sloping shade
And travel the bewildered tracks till night.
Yet for this hour I still may here be stayed
And see the gold air and the silver fade
And the last bird fly into the last light.

1 8 4 7 - 8 0 1870, 1881

G E O R G E M E R E D I T H

1828-1909

From Modern Love 1

I

By this he knew she wept with waking eyes:

That, at his hand's light quiver by her head,
The strange low sobs that shook their common bed
Were called into her with a sharp surprise,
5 And strangled mute, like little gaping snakes,
Dreadfully venomous to him. She lay Stone-still, and the long darkness flowed away
With muffled pulses. Then, as midnight makes Her giant heart of Memory and Tears
io Drink the pale drug of silence, and so beat Sleep's heavy measure, they from head to feet
Were moveless, looking through their dead black years,
By vain regret scrawled over the blank wall.

Like sculptured effigies they might be seen

1. A sequence of fifty sixteen-line sonnets, a kind speaker, but the opening and closing sections are of novel in verse about the breakup of a marriage.
told in the third person.

For most of the sequence the husband is the

1108 / G E O R G E M E R E D I T H

15 Upon their marriage-tomb,² the sword between;
Each wishing for the sword that severs all.

17

At dinner, she is hostess, I am host.

Went the feast ever cheerfuller? She keeps

The Topic over intellectual deeps

In buoyancy afloat. They see no ghost.

5 With sparkling surface-eyes we ply the ball:

It is in truth a most contagious game:

H I D I N G T H E S K E L E T O N , shall be its name.

Such play as this the devils might appall!

But here's the greater wonder; in that we,

io Enamored of an acting naught can tire,

Each other, like true hypocrites, admire;

Warm-lighted looks, Love's ephemerioe,⁰ short-lived,
creatures

Shoot gaily o'er the dishes and the wine.

We waken envy of our happy lot.

15 Fast, sweet, and golden, shows the marriage-knot.

Dear guests, you now have seen Love's corpse-light³ shine.

30

What are we first? First, animals; and next

Intelligences at a leap; on whom

Pale lies the distant shadow of the tomb,

And all that draweth on the tomb for text.

5 Into which state comes Love, the crowning sun:

Beneath whose light the shadow loses form.

We are the lords of life, and life is warm.

Intelligence and instinct now are one.

But nature says: "My children most they seem

io When they least know me: therefore I decree

That they shall suffer." Swift doth young Love flee,

And we stand wakened, shivering from our dream.

Then if we study Nature we are wise.

Thus do the few who live but with the day:

15 The scientific animals are they—

Lady, this is my sonnet to your eyes.⁴

Their sense is with their senses all mixed in,
 Destroyed by subtleties these women are!⁵
 More brain, O Lord, more brain! or we shall mar
 Utterly this fair garden we might win.

2. I.e., as motionless as sculptured stone statues ment of his theory of evolution.

on a tomb. In medieval legend, a naked sword

5. Earlier, the couple had at last talked together between lovers symbolized chastity.

about the wife's affair with another man and had

3. Flame seen in a churchyard and believed to be become reconciled. But when the husband tells an omen of death.

her of his own recent passing affair with his "lost

4. A poetic convention of love sonnets was the Lady" (line 9), she resolves to give him up to his praise of one of the lady's features, such as her mistress. Her resolve is a noble one but, in his view, eyes. Meredith uses it as an ironic close to a state-without "sense" or "brain."

M O D E R N L O V E / 1 1 0 9

5 Behold! I looked for peace, and thought it near.

Our inmost hearts had opened, each to each.

We drank the pure daylight of honest speech.

Alas! that was the fatal draught, I fear.

For when of my lost Lady came the word,

io This woman, O this agony of flesh!

Jealous devotion bade her break the mesh,
That I might seek that other like a bird.
I do adore the nobleness! despise
The act! She has gone forth, I know not where.
15 Will the hard world my sentence of her share?
I feel the truth; so let the world surmise.

49

He found her by the ocean's moaning verge,
Nor any wicked change in her discerned;
And she believed his old love had returned,
Which was her exultation, and her scourge.
5 She took his hand, and walked with him, and seemed
The wife he sought, though shadow-like and dry.
She had one terror, lest her heart should sigh,
And tell her loudly she no longer dreamed.
She dared not say, "This is my breast: look in."
10 But there's a strength to help the desperate weak.
That night he learned how silence best can speak
The awful things when Pity pleads for Sin.
About the middle of the night her call
Was heard, and he came wondering to the bed.
15 "Now kiss me, dear! it may be, now!" she said.
Lethe⁶ had passed those lips, and he knew all.

50

Thus piteously Love closed what he begat:
The union of this ever-diverse pair!
These two were rapid falcons in a snare,
Condemned to do the flitting of the bat.

5 Lovers beneath the singing sky of May,
They wandered once; clear as the dew on flowers
But they fed not on the advancing hours:
Their hearts held cravings for the buried day.
Then each applied to each that fatal knife,
io Deep questioning, which probes to endless dole.0

sorrow

Ah, what a dusty answer gets the soul
When hot for certainties in this our life!—
In tragic hints here see what evermore
Moves dark as yonder midnight ocean's force, 15 Thundering like ramping0 hosts of warrior horse,

rearing

To throw that faint thin line upon the shore!

1862

6. River of forgetfulness in Hades, the mythological Greek underworld.

1 1 1 0 / E M I L Y D I C K I N S O N

Lucifer in Starlight

On a starred night Prince Lucifer uprose.
Tired of his dark dominion, swung the fiend
Above the rolling ball, in cloud part screened,
Where sinners hugged their specter of repose.
5 Poor prey to his hot fit of pride were those.
And now upon his western wing he leaned,
Now his huge bulk o'er Afric's sands careened,
Now the black planet shadowed Arctic snows.
Soaring through wider zones that pricked his scars

10 With memory of the old revolt from Awe,⁷
He reached a middle height, and at the stars,
Which are the brain of heaven, he looked, and sank.
Around the ancient track marched, rank on rank,
The army of unalterable law.

1883

EMILY D I C K I N S O N *

1830-1886

39 (49)

I never lost as much but twice -

And that was in the sod.

Twice have I stood a beggar

Before the door of God!

5 Angels - twice descending

Reimbursed my store -

Burglar! Banker - Father!

I am poor once more!

1858 1890

68 (89)

Some things that fly there be -

Birds - Hours - the Bumblebee -

Of these no Elegy.

7. I.e., God. Satan is reminded of the wounds he

(She often misused the apostrophe, especially in suffered when his revolt against God was crushed

the possessive of it, which she wrote as it's, and she

and he was hurled from heaven into hell.

also commonly misspelled words, such as opon for

*R. W. Franklin's 1998 edition of Emily Dickinson.) Franklin has also renumbered the poems son's poems built on and has now supplanted the after considering their likely chronology. Date on editions by Thomas Johnson (1955 and following) left, often approximate, refers to first known manuscript; date on right, to first book publication. Each poem here is identified by Franklin number, then by Johnson number in parentheses.

reflect as closely as possible Dickinson's choices.

1 2 4 (2 1 6) , F I R S T V E R S I O N / 1 1 1 1

Some things that stay there be -

5 Grief - Hills - Eternity -

Nor this behooveth me.1

There are that resting, rise.

Can I expound the skies?

How still the Riddle lies!

1859 1890

112 (67)

Success is counted sweetest

By those who ne'er succeed.

To comprehend a nectar

Requires sorest need.

5 Not one of all the purple Host0 army

Who took the Flag today

Can tell the definition
So clear of Victory
As he defeated - dying - io On whose forbidden ear
The distant strains of triumph
Burst agonized and clear!

1859 1890

124 (216), first version²
Safe in their Alabaster³ Chambers -
Untouched by morning
And untouched by noon -
Sleep the meek members of the Resurrection -
5 Rafter of satin,
And Roof of stone.
Light laughs the breeze
In her Castle above them - Babbles the Bee in a stolid Ear, io Pipe the sweet Birds in ignorant cadence - Ah, what sagacity perished here!

1859

1862

1. I.e., nor do I need to write about these.
lished (in a magazine). In correspondence in 1862
2. This poem is one of many that exist in varying with Thomas W. Higginson, the literary critic who versions and illustrate wholesale revision. Dickin-would help publish her poems posthumously, son sent the 1859 version to her sister-in-law, Sue Dickinson sent a modified version, the basis of the Dickinson, whose suggestions prompted substantial changes. The first version here, the earliest second version here.

3. Translucent white material.

extant, was one of the few poems Dickinson pub-

1112 / EMILY DICKINSON

124 (216), second version

Safe in their Alabaster Chambers -

Untouched by Morning -

And untouched by noon -

Sleep the meek members of the Resurrection,

5 Rafter of Satin and Roof of Stone -

Grand go the Years,

In the Crescent above them -

Worlds scoop their Arcs -

And Firmaments - row -

io Diadems⁰ - drop - crowns

And Doges⁴ - surrender -

Soundless as Dots,

On a Disc of Snow.

1862 1890

145 (59)

A little East of Jordan,

Evangelists record,s

A Gymnast and an Angel

Did wrestle long and hard -

5 Till morning touching mountain

And Jacob, waxing strong,
The Angel begged permission
To Breakfast - to return!
Not so, said cunning Jacob!
io "I will not let thee go Except thou bless me" - Stranger!
The which acceded to - Light swung the silver fleeces⁶
"Peniel" Hills beyond,
15 And the bewildered Gymnast
Found he had worsted God!

1860 1914

4. Chief magistrates in the republics of Venice have seen God face to face, and my life is pre-and Genoa from the eleventh through the six-served."

teenth centuries.

6. Clouds; also, a possible allusion to the Golden

5. The story actually occurs in Genesis 32.24—30.

Fleece that, in Greek mythology, Jason long trav-

Jacob wrestled with the angel for a blessing; having eled to find.

succeeded, "Jacob called the place Peniel: for I

2 6 0 (2 8 8) / 1 1 1 3

202 (185)

Faith" is a fine invention

For Gentlemen who see!

But Microscopes are prudent

In an Emergency!

1861

1891

259 (287)

A Clock stopped -

Not the Mantel's -

Geneva's farthest skill⁷

Cant put the puppet bowing -

5 That just now dangled still -

An awe came on the Trinket!

The Figures hunched - with pain -

Then quivered out of Decimals -

Into Degreeless noon -

io It will not stir for Doctor's -

This Pendulum of snow -

The Shopman importunes it -

While cool- concernless No -

Nods from the Gilded pointers -

15 Nods from the Seconds slim -

Decades of Arrogance between

The Dial life -

And Him -

1861

1896

260 (288)

I'm Nobody! Who are you?

Are you - Nobody - too?

Then there's a pair of us!

Dont tell! they'd advertise - you know!

5 How dreary - to be - Somebody!

How public - like a Frog -

To tell one's name - the livelong June -

To an admiring Bog!

1861

1 8 9 1

7. Geneva, Switzerland, is famous for clock- and watchmaking.

1 1 1 4 / E M I L Y D I C K I N S O N

269 (249)

Wild nights - Wild nights!

Were I with thee

Wild nights should be

Our luxury!

5 Futile - the winds -

To a Heart in port -

Done with the Compass -

Done with the Chart!

Rowing in Eden - io Ah - the Sea!

Might I but moor - tonight -

In thee!

1861 1891

314 (254)

“Hope” is the thing with feathers -

That perches in the soul -

And sings the tune without the words -

And never stops - at all -
5 And sweetest - in the Gale - is heard -
And sore must be the storm -
That could abash the little Bird
That kept so many warm -
I've heard it in the chillest land - io And on the strangest Sea - Yet - never - in Extremity,
It asked a crumb - of me.

1862 1891

320 (258)

There's a certain Slant of light,
Winter Afternoons -
That oppresses, like the Heft
Of Cathedral Tunes -
5 Heavenly Hurt, it gives us -
We can find no scar,
3 4 0 (2 8 0) / 1 1 1 5
B u t i n t e r n a l d i f f e r e n c e -
W h e r e t h e M e a n i n g s , a r e - N o n e m a y t e a c h i t - A n y - io 'Tis t h e S e a l D e s p a i r - An imperial affliction
S e n t u s o f t h e A i r -
W h e n i t c o m e s , t h e L a n d s c a p e l i s t e n s -
S h a d o w s - h o l d t h e i r b r e a t h -
15 W h e n i t g o e s , ' t i s l i k e t h e D i s t a n c e
O n t h e l o o k o f D e a t h -

1862 1890

339 (241)

I like a look of Agony,
Because I know it's true - Mendonotsham Convulsion,
Nor simulate, a Throe -
5 The eyes glaze once - and that is Death - Impossible to feign
The Beads upon the Forehead
By homely Anguish strung.

1862 1890

340 (280)

I felt a Funeral, in my Brain,
And Mournersto and fro Kept treading - treading - till it seemed That Sense was breaking through - 5 And when they all were seated,
A Service, like a Drum -
Kept beating - beating - till I thought
My mind was going numb -
And then I heard them lift a Box
io And creak across my Soul
With those same Boots of Lead, again,
Then Space - began to toll,
As all the Heavens were a Bell,
And Being, but an Ear,
1116 / EMILY DICKINSON
15 And I, and Silence, some strange Race

Wrecked, solitary, here -
And then a Plank in Reason, broke,
And I dropped down, and down -
And hit a World, at every plunge,
20 And Finished knowing - then - 1862 1896

348 (505)

I would not paint - a picture -
I'd rather be the One
It's bright impossibility
To dwell - delicious - on - 5 And wonder how the fingers feel Whose rare - celestial - stir -
Evokes so sweet a torment -
Such sumptuous - Despair -
I would not talk, like Cornets - io I'd rather be the One Raised softly to the Ceilings -
And out, and easy on -
Through Villages of Ether - Myself ended 0 Balloon endowed 15 By but a lip of Metal -
The pier to my Pontoon 0 - boat
Nor would I be a Poet -
It's finer - Own the Ear -
Enamored - impotent - content -
20 The License to revere,
A privilege so awful 0 awesome

What would the Dowry be, dowry, gift
Had I the Art to stun myself
With Bolts - of Melody!

1862 1945

359 (328)

A Bird, came down the Walk -

He did not know I saw -

He bit an Angle Worm in halves

And ate the fellow, raw,

383 (585) / 1117

5 And then, he drank a Dew

From a convenient Grass -

And then hopped sidewise to the Wall

To let a Beetle pass -

He glanced with rapid eyes,

io That hurried all abroad -

They looked like frightened Beads, I thought
, He stirred his Velvet Head. -

Like one in danger, Cautious,

I offered him a Crumb,

15 And he unrolled his feathers,

And rowed him softer Home -

Than Oars divide the Ocean,

To o silver for a seam,

Or Butterflies, off Banks of Noon,

20 Leap, splashless 0 as they swim. s-plashless

1862 1891

372 (341)

After great pain, a formal feeling comes -
The Nerves sit ceremonious, like Tombs -
The stiff Heart questions "was it He, that bore
, And "Yesterday, or Centuries before":¹
5 The Feet, mechanical, go round -
A Wooden way
Of Ground, or Air, or Ought 0 - nothing, anything
Regardless grown,
A Quartz contentment, like a stone - io This is the Hour of Lead - Remembered, if outlived,

As Freezing persons, recollect the Snow -
First - Chill - then Stupor - then the letting go - 1862 1929

383 (585)

I like to see it lap the Miles -

And lick the Valleys up -

And stop to feed itself at Tanks -

And then - prodigious step

1118 / EMILY DICKINSON

5 Around a Pile of Mountains -

And supercilious peer

In Shanties - by the sides of Roads -

And then a Quarry pare

To fit its sides

10 And crawl between

Complaining all the while

In horrid - hooting stanza -

Then chase itself down Hill -

And neigh like Boanerges 8 -

15 Then - prompter than a Star

Stop - docile and omnipotent

At its own stable door -

1862 1891

409 (303)

The Soul selects her own Society -

Then - shuts the Door -

To her divine Majority -

Present no more -

5 Unmoved - she notes the Chariots - pausing

-

At the low Gate -

Unmoved - an Emperor be kneeling

Upon her Mat -

I've known her - from an amputation - to Choose One -

Then - close the Valves of her attention -

Like Stone -

1862 1890

411 (528)

Mine - by the Right of the White Election!

Mine - by the Royal Seal!

Mine - by the sign in the Scarlet prison -

Bars - cannot conceal!

5 Mine - here - in Vision - and in Veto!

Mine - by the Grave's Repeal -

8. Like thunder. Cf. Mark 3.17: "And James the son of Zebedee, and John the brother of James; and he surnamed them Boanerges, which is, The sons of thunder."

479 (712) / 1 1 19

Titled - Confirmed -

Delirious Charter!

Mine - long as Ages steal!

1862 1890

445 (613)

They shut me up in Prose -

As when a little Girl

They put me in the Closet -

Because they liked me "still" -
5 Still! Could themselves have peeped -
And seen my Brain - go round -
They might as wise have lodged a Bird
For Treason - in the Pound - Himself has but to will io And easy as a Star
Look down upon Captivity -
And laugh - No more have I - 1862 1935

479 (712)

Because I could not stop for Death -
He kindly stopped for me -
The Carriage held but just Ourselves -
And Immortality.
5 We slowly drove - He knew no haste
And I had put away
My labor and my leisure too,
For His Civility -
We passed the School, where Children strove
io At Recess - in the Ring -
We passed the Fields of Gazing Grain -
We passed the Setting Sun -
Or rather - He passed Us -
The Dews drew quivering and Chill -
15 For only Gossamer, my Gown -
My Tippet - only Tulle⁹ -
9. Sheer silk net. Tippet: shoulder cape.

1120/EMILYDICKINSON

WepausedbeforeaHousehatseemed

ASwellingoftheGround-

TheRoofwasscarcelyvisible-

20TheCornice0-intheGround-crowning point

Sincethen-'tisCenturies-andyet

FeelsshorterthantheDay

IfirstsurmisedtheHorses'Heads

WeretowardEternity-

1862 1890

533 (569)

Ireckon-WhenIcountatall-

First-Poets-ThentheSun-

ThenSummer-ThentheHeavenofGod-

Andthen-theListisdone-

5But,lookingback-theFirstsoseems

ToComprehendtheWhole-

TheOtherslookaneedlessShow-

SoIwrite-Poets-All-

TheirSummer-lastsasolidYear-

ioTheycanaffordtheSun

TheEast-woulddeemextravagant-

AndiftheFurtherHeaven-

BeBeautifulastheyprepare

ForThosewhoworshipThem-

15ItistoodifficultaGrace-

ToJustifytheDream-

1863 1929

588 (536)

The Heart asks Pleasure - first -
And then - excuse from Pain -
And then - those little Anodynes
That deadens suffering -
5 And then - to go to sleep -
And then - if it should be
The will of it's Inquisitor
The privilege to die -

1863

1890

740 (789) / 1121

591 (465)

I heard a Fly buzz - when I died -
The Stillness in the Room
Was like the Stillness in the Air - Between the Heaves of Storm -
5 The Eyes around - had wrung them dry -
And Breaths were gathering firm
For that last Onset - when the King
Be witnessed - in the Room -
I willed my Keepsakes - Signed away
io What portion of me be Assignable - and then it was There interposed a Fly -
With Blue - uncertain - stumbling Buzz -
Between the light - and me - 15 And then the Windows failed - and then

I c o u l d n o t see to see - 1863 1896

620 (435)

M u c h M a d n e s s is divinest S e n s e -

T o a d i s c e r n i n g E y e -

M u c h S e n s e - t h e s t a r k e s t M a d n e s s -

‘T i s t h e M a j o r i t y

5 I n t h i s , a s a l l , p r e v a i l -

A s s e n t - a n d y o u a r e s a n e -

D e m u r - y o u ’ r e s t r a i g h t w a y d a n g e r o u s -

A n d h a n d l e d w i t h a C h a i n -

1863 1890

740 (789)

O n a C o l u m n a r S e l f -

H o w a m p l e t o r e l y

I n T u m u l t - o r E x t r e m i t y -

H o w g o o d t h e C e r t a i n t y

5 T h a t L e v e r c a n n o t p r y -

A n d W e d g e c a n n o t d i v i d e

C o n v i c t i o n - T h a t G r a n i t i c B a s e -

T h o u g h n o n e b e o n o u r s i d e -

1 1 2 2 / E M I L Y D I C K I N S O N

S u f f i c e U s - f o r a C r o w d -

1 0 O u r s e l f - a n d R e c t i t u d e -

A n d t h a t A s s e m b l y - n o t f a r o f f

F r o m f u r t h e s t S p i r i t - G o d -

1863 1929

764 (754)

My Life had stood - a Loaded Gun -
In Corners - till a Day
The Owner passed - identified -
And carried Me away -
5 And now We roam in Sovereign Woods -
And now We hunt the Doe -
And every time I speak for Him
The Mountains straight reply -
And do I smile, such cordial light is Opon the Valley glow -
It is as a Vesuvian face
Had let its pleasure through -
And when at Night - Our good Day done -
I guard My Master's Head - 15 'Tis better than the Eider Duck's Deep Pillow² - to have shared -
To foe of His - I'm deadly foe -
None stir the second time -
On whom I lay a Yellow Eye -
20 Or an emphatic Thumb - Thought I than He - may longer live
He longer must - than I -
For I have but the power to kill,
Without - the power to die - 1863 1929
781 (744)
Remorse - is Memory - awake -
Her Parties all astir -

A P r e s e n c e o f D e p a r t e d A c t s -

A t w i n d o w - a n d a t D o o r -

1. Capable of erupting, like Mt. Vesuvius, the vol- 2. I.e., pillow stuffed with feathers or down, cano near Naples.

788 (709) / 1 123

5 I t ' s P a s t - s e t d o w n b e f o r e t h e S o u l

A n d l i g h t e d w i t h a m a t c h -

P e r u s a l - t o f a c i l i t a t e -

A n d h e l p B e l i e f t o s t r e t c h -

R e m o r s e i s c u r e l e s s - t h e D i s e a s e

i o N o t e v e n G o d - c a n h e a l -

F o r ' t i s H i s i n s t i t u t i o n - a n d

T h e A d e q u a t e o f H e l l -

1863 1891

782 (745)

R e n u n c i a t i o n - i s a p i e r c i n g V i r t u e -

T h e l e t t i n g g o

A P r e s e n c e - f o r a n E x p e c t a t i o n -

N o t n o w -

5 T h e p u t t i n g o u t o f E y e s -

J u s t S u n r i s e -

L e s t D a y -

D a y ' s G r e a t P r o g e n i t o r -

O u t v i e

i o R e n u n c i a t i o n - i s t h e C h o o s i n g

A g a i n s t i t s e l f -

I t s e l f t o j u s t i f y

U n t o i t s e l f -

When larger function -
15 Make that appear - Smaller - that Covered Vision - Here - 1863 1929
788 (709)
Publication - is the Auction
Of the Mind of Man -
Poverty - be justifying
For so foul a thing
5 Possibly - but We - would rather
From Our Garret go
White - unto the White Creator -
Than invest - Ours now - Thought belong to Him who gave it - io Then - to Him Who bear
It's Corporeal illustration - sell
The Royal Air -

1124 / EMILY DICKINSON

In the Parcel - Be the Merchant
Of the Heavenly Grace -
15 But reduce no Human Spirit
To Disgrace of Price - 1863 1929
895 (1068)
Further in Summer than the Birds -
Pathetic from the Grass -
A minor Nation³ celebrates It's unobtrusive Mass.

5 No Ordinance⁰ be seen - prescribed usage
So gradual the Grace
A gentle Custom it becomes - Enlarging Loneliness - Antiquest felt at Noon -
io When August burning low Arise this spectral Canticle⁰ liturgical song
Repose to typify -
Remit as yet no Grace -
No furrow on the Glow,
15 But a Druidic⁴ Difference Enhances Nature now - 1865, 1883 1891
905 (861)
Split the Lark - and you'll find the Music - Bulb after Bulb, in Silver rolled - Scantily dealt to the Summer Morning
Saved for your Ear, when Lutes be old -
5 Loose the Flood - you shall find it patent⁰ - open
Gush after Gush, reserved for you - Scarlet Experiment! Sceptic Thomas!⁵
Now, do you doubt that your Bird was true?
1865 1896

3. I.e., insects.

Christ's divinity until he had seen the print of the

4. Pertaining to the ancient sacred lore of the nails in Jesus' hands and thrust a hand into Jesus' Celtic priest-magicians.

side (John 20.25).

5. Doubting Thomas, who would not believe

1096 (986) / 1 125

935 (1540)

As imperceptibly as Grief

The Summer lapsed away -

Too imperceptible at last

To seem like Perfidy⁰ - treachery

5 A Quietness distilled

As Twilight long begun,

Or Nature spending with herself

Sequestered Afternoon -

The Dusk drew earlier in -

io The Morning foreign shone -

A courteous, yet harrowing Grace,

As Guest, that would be gone -

And thus, without a Wing

Or service of a Keel

15 Our Summer made her light escape

Into the Beautiful -

1865 1891

1096 (986)

A narrow Fellow in the Grass

Occasionally rides -

You may have met him? Did you not

His notice instant is -

5 The Grass divides as with a Comb -

A spotted Shaft is seen,

And then it closes at your Feet
And opens further on -
He likes a Boggy Acre - io A Floor too cool for Corn - But when a Boy and Barefoot
I more than once at Noon
Have passed I thought a Whip Lash
Unbraiding in the Sun
15 When stooping to secure it
It wrinkled And was gone -
Several of Nature's People
I know and they know me
I feel for them a transport
20 Of Cordiality

1 1 2 6 / E M I L Y D I C K I N S O N

But never met this Fellow Attended or alone
Without a tighter Breathing
And Zero at the Bone.

1865 1891

1108 (1078)

The Bustle in a House
The Morning after Death
Is solemnest of industries
Enacted upon Earth -
5 The Sweeping up the Heart
And putting Love away
We shall not want to use again

Until Eternity -

1865 1890

1263 (1129)

Tell all the truth but tell it slant -

Success in Circuit lies

Too bright for our infirm Delight

The Truth's superb surprise

5 As Lightning to the Children eased

With explanation kind

The Truth must dazzle gradually

Or every man be blind -

1872 1945

1489 (1463)

A Route of Evanescence,

With a revolving Wheel -

A Resonance of Emerald

A Rush of Cochineal⁰ - red dye

5 And every Blossom on the Bush

Adjusts it's tumbled Head -

The Mail from Tunis⁶ - probably,

An easy Morning's Ride -

1879 1891

6. City on the northern coast of Africa.

1788 (1763) / 1 127

1577 (1545)

The Bible is an antique Volume -

Written by faded Men

At the suggestion of Holy Spectres -

Subjects - Bethlehem -
5 Eden - the ancient Homestead - Satan - the Brigadier - Judas - the Great Defaulter -
David - the Troubadour - Sin - a distinguished Precipice
io Others must resist -
Boys that "believe" are very lonesome -
Other Boys are "lost" -
Had but the Tale a warbling Teller -
All the Boys would come - 15 Orpheu's7 Sermon captivated -
It did not condemn - 1882 1924
1793 (1732)
My life closed twice before it's close;
It yet remains to see
If Immortality unveil
A third event to me,
5 So huge, so hopeless to conceive
As these that twice befell.
Parting is all we know of heaven,
And all we need of hell.
1896
1788 (1763)
Fame is a bee.
It has a song -
It has a sting -

Ah, too, it has a wing.

1955

7. Orpheu's: i.e., that of Orpheus, the Greek mythological figure whose music attracted and controlled beasts, rocks, and trees.

1 1128

CHRISTINAROSSETTI

1830-1894

Song

When I am dead, my dearest,

Sing no sad songs for me;

Plant thou no roses at my head,

Nor shady cypress tree:

5 Be the green grass above me

With showers and dewdrops wet;

And if thou wilt, remember,

And if thou wilt, forget.

I shall not see the shadows,

io I shall not feel the rain;

I shall not hear the nightingale

Sing on, as if in pain:

And dreaming through the twilight

That doth not rise nor set,

is Haply I may remember,

And haply may forget.

1848 1862

Remember

Remember me when I am gone away,

Gone far away into the silent land;

When you can no more hold me by the hand,
Nor I half turn to go yet turning stay.
5 Remember me when no more day by day
You tell me of our future that you planned:
Only remember me; you understand
It will be late to counsel then or pray.
Yet if you should forget me for a while
io And afterwards remember, do not grieve:
For if the darkness and corruption leave
A vestige of the thoughts that once I had,
Better by far you should forget and smile
Than that you should remember and be sad.

1849 1862

Echo

Come to me in the silence of the night;
Come in the speaking silence of a dream;
UP - H I L L / 1 1 2 9
Come with soft rounded cheeks and eyes as bright
As sunlight on a stream;
5 Come back in tears,
O memory, hope, love of finished years.
Oh dream how sweet, too sweet, too bitter sweet,
Whose wakening should have been in Paradise,
Where souls brimful of love abide and meet;
10 Where thirsting longing eyes
Watch the slow door
That opening, letting in, lets out no more.
Yet come to me in dreams, that I may live

My very life again tho' cold in death:

15 Come back to me in dreams, that I may give

Pulse for pulse, breath for breath:

Speak low, lean low,

As long ago, my love, how long ago.

1854 1862

In an Artist's Studio

One face looks out from all his canvases,

One selfsame figure sits or walks or leans:

We found her hidden just behind those screens,

That mirror gave back all her loveliness.

5 A queen in opal or in ruby dress,

A nameless girl in freshest summer-greens,

A saint, an angel—every canvas means

The same one meaning, neither more nor less.

He feeds upon her face by day and night,

io And she with true kind eyes looks back on him,

Fair as the moon and joyful as the light:

Not wan with waiting, not with sorrow dim;

Not as she is, but was when hope shone bright;

Not as she is, but as she fills his dream.

1856 1896

Up-Hill

Does the road wind up-hill all the way?

Yes, to the very end.

Will the day's journey take the whole long day?

From morn to night, my friend.

1 1 3 0 / C H R I S T I N A R O S S E T T I

5 But is there for the night a resting-place?
A roof for when the slow dark hours begin.
May not the darkness hide it from my face?
You cannot miss that inn.
Shall I meet other wayfarers at night?
10 Those who have gone before.
Then must I knock, or call when just in sight?
They will not keep you standing at that door.
Shall I find comfort, travel-sore and weak?
Of labor you shall find the sum.
is Will there be beds for me and all who seek?
Yea, beds for all who come.

1858 1862

The Convent Threshold

There's blood between us, love, my love,
There's father's blood, there's brother's blood;
And blood's a bar I cannot pass:
I choose the stairs that mount above,
5 Stair after golden skyward stair,
To city and to sea of glass.
My lily feet are soiled with mud,
With scarlet mud which tells a tale
Of hope that was, of guilt that was,
io Of love that shall not yet avail;
Alas, my heart, if I could bare
My heart, this selfsame stain is there:
I seek the sea of glass and fire
To wash the spot, to burn the snare;

15 Lo, stairs are meant to lift us higher:
Mount with me, mount the kindled stair.
Your eyes look earthward, mine look up.
I see the far-off city grand,
Beyond the hills a watered land,
20 Beyond the gulf a gleaming strand
Of mansions where the righteous sup;
Who sleep at ease among their trees,
Or wake to sing a cadenced hymn
With Cherubim and Seraphim;¹
25 They bore the Cross, they drained the cup,
Racked, roasted, crushed, wrenched limb from limb,
They the offscouring² of the world:

1. Plurals (Hebrew, biblical) of, respectively, 2. What is “scoured off,” hence refuse, that which cherub and seraph;
seraphim are the highest order is rejected, of angels, just above the cherubim.

THE CONVENT THRESHOLD / 1 1 3 1

The heaven of starry heavens unfurled,
The sun before their face is dim.
30 You looking earthward, what see you?
Milk-white, wine-flushed among the vines,
Up and down leaping, to and fro,
Most glad, most full, made strong with wines,
Blooming as peaches pearled with dew,
35 Their golden windy hair afloat,
Love-music warbling in their throat,
Young men and women come and go.
You linger, yet the time is short:

Flee for your life, gird up your strength
40 To flee; the shadows stretched at length
Show that day wanes, that night draws nigh;
Flee to the mountain, tarry not.
Is this a time for smile and sigh,
For songs among the secret trees
45 Where sudden blue birds nest and sport?
The time is short and yet you stay:
Today while it is called today
Kneel, wrestle, knock, do violence, pray;
Today is short, tomorrow nigh:
50 Why will you die? why will you die?
You sinned with me a pleasant sin:
Repent with me, for I repent.
Woe's me the lore I must unlearn!
Woe's me that easy way we went,
55 So rugged when I would return!
How long until my sleep begin,
How long shall stretch these nights and days?
Surely, clean Angels cry, she prays;
She laves her soul with tedious tears:
60 How long must stretch these years and years?
I turn from you my cheeks and eyes,
My hair which you shall see no more—
Alas for joy that went before,
For joy that dies, for love that dies.
65 Only my lips still turn to you,
My livid lips that cry, Repent.

Oh weary life, Oh weary Lent,³
Oh weary time whose stars are few.

How should I rest in Paradise,
70 Or sit on steps of heaven alone?

If Saints and Angels spoke of love
Should I not answer from my throne:

3. Period in the Christian calendar from Ash Wednesday to Easter Eve, devoted to fasting and penitence in commemoration of Christ's fasting in the wilderness.

1 1 3 2 / C H R I S T I N A R O S S E T T I

Have pity upon me, ye my friends,
For I have heard the sound thereof:

75

Should I not turn with yearning eyes,
Turn earthwards with a pitiful pang?

Oh save me from a pang in heaven.

By all the gifts we took and gave,
Repent, repent, and be forgiven:

80

This life is long, but yet it ends;
Repent and purge your soul and save:

No gladder song the morning stars
Upon their birthday morning sang
Than Angels sing when one repents.

85

I tell you what I dreamed last night:

A spirit with transfigured face

Fire-footed clomb⁰ an infinite space. climbed.

I heard his hundred pinions⁰ clang, feathered wings

Heaven-bells rejoicing rang and rang,

90

Heaven-air was thrilled with subtle scents,

Worlds spun upon their rushing cars:

He mounted shrieking: "Give me light."

Still light was poured on him, more light;

Angels, Archangels he outstripped

95

Exultant in exceeding might,

And trod the skirts of Cherubim.

Still "Give me light," he shrieked; and dipped

His thirsty face, and drank a sea,

Athirst with thirst it could not slake.

100

I saw him, drunk with knowledge, take

From aching brows the aureole crown—

His locks writhed like a cloven snake—

He left his throne to grovel down

And lick the dust of Seraphs' feet:

105

For what is knowledge duly weighed?

Knowledge is strong, but love is sweet;

Yea all the progress he had made

Was but to learn that all is small

Save love, for love is all in all.

110

I tell you what I dreamed last night:

It was not dark, it was not light,

Cold dews had drenched my plenteous hair
Thro' clay; you came to seek me there.
And "Do you dream of me?" you said.

115

My heart was dust that used to leap
To you; I answered half asleep:
"My pillow is damp, my sheets are red,
There's a leaden tester⁰ to my bed: canopy
Find you a warmer playfellow,
A warmer pillow for your head,
A kinder love to love than mine."

4. Golden crown or halo.

PASSING AWAY, SAITH THE WORLD, PAS
SING AWAY / 1133

Y o u w r u n g y o u r h a n d s ; w h i l e I l i k e l e a d
C r u s h e d d o w n w a r d s t h r o ' t h e s o d d e n e a r t h :
Y o u s m o t e y o u r h a n d s b u t n o t i n m i r t h , 125 A n d r e e l e d b u t w e r e n o t d r u n k w i t h w i n
e .

F o r a l l n i g h t l o n g I d r e a m e d o f y o u :
I w o k e a n d p r a y e d a g a i n s t m y w i l l ,
T h e n s l e p t t o d r e a m o f y o u a g a i n .
A t l e n g t h I r o s e a n d k n e l t a n d p r a y e d :
iBo I c a n n o t w r i t e t h e w o r d s I s a i d ,
M y w o r d s w e r e s l o w , m y t e a r s w e r e f e w ;
B u t t h r o ' t h e d a r k m y s i l e n c e s p o k e
L i k e t h u n d e r . W h e n t h i s m o r n i n g b r o k e ,
M y f a c e w a s p i n c h e d , m y h a i r w a s g r a y , 135 A n d f r o z e n b l o o d w a s o n t h e s i l l

Where stifling in my struggle I lay.
If now you saw me you would say:
Where is the face I used to love?
And I would answer: Gone before;
140 It tarries veiled in paradise.
When once the morning star shall rise,
When earth with shadow flees away
And west stands a few within the door,
Then you shall lift the veil thereof.
145 Look up, rise up: for far above
Our palms are grown, our place is set;
There we shall meet as once we met
And love with old familiar love.

1858 1862

Passing Away, Saith the World, Passing Away

Passing away, saith the World, passing away:

Chances, beauty and youth sapped day by day: Thy life never continue thine stay.

Is the eye waxen dim, is the dark hair changing to gray? 5 That hath won neither laurel nor bay?

I shall clothe myself in Spring and bud in May:

Thou, root-stricken, shalt not rebuild thy decay
On my bosom for aye.

Then I answered: Yea.

io Passing away, saith my Soul, passing away:

With its burden of fear and hope, of labor and play; Harken what the past doth witness and
say:

5. In ancient Greece, victors in the Pythian games on the winners of academic or poetic honors. "Bay"

were crowned with a wreath made from the leaves is synonymous with laurel.

of the laurel, and later such wreaths were bestowed

1 1 3 4 / C H R I S T I N A R O S S E T T I

Rust in thy gold, a moth is in thine array,

A canker is in thy bud, thy leaf must decay.

15 At midnight, at cockcrow, at morning, one certain day

Lo the bridegroom shall come and shall not delay:

Watch thou and pray.

Then I answered: Yea.

Passing away, saith my God, passing away:

20 Winter passeth after the long delay:

New grapes on the vine, new figs on the tender spray,

Turtle calleth turtle in Heaven's May.

Tho' I tarry, wait for Me, trust Me, watch and pray.

Arise, come away, night is past and lo it is day,

25 My love, My sister, My spouse, thou shalt hear Me say.

Then I answered: Yea.

1860 1862

Amor Mundi⁶

“Oh where are you going with your love-locks flowing

On the west wind blowing along this valley track?”

“The downhill path is easy, come with me an^o it please ye, if

We shall escape the uphill by never turning back.”

5 So they two went together in glowing August weather,

The honey-breathing heather lay to their left and right;

And dear she was to dote on, her swift feet seemed to float on

The air like soft twin pigeons too sportive to alight.

“Oh what is that in heaven where gray cloud-flakes are seven, io Where blackest clouds hang riven just at the rainy skirt?”

Oh that’s a meteor sent us, a message dumb, portentous,
An undeciphered solemn signal of help or hurt.”

“Oh what is that glides quickly where velvet flowers grow thickly,

Their scent comes rich and sickly?”—“A scaled and hooded worm.”

15 “Oh what’s that in the hollow, so pale I quake to follow?”

“Oh that’s a thin dead body which waits the eternal term.”

“Turn again, O my sweetest,—turn again, false and fleetest:

This beaten way thou beatest I fear is hell’s own track.”

“Nay, too steep for hill-mounting; nay, too late for cost-counting:

20 This downhill path is easy, but there’s no turning back.”

1865 1875

6. Love of the world (Latin).

1 1 1 3 5

LEWIS CARROLL

(CHARLES LUTWIDGEDODGSON)

1832-1898

Jabberwocky¹

There was a book lying near Alice on the table, and while she sat watching

the White King (for she was still a little anxious about him, and had the ink all ready to throw over him, in case he fainted again), she turned over the leaves, to find some part that she could read, “—for it’s all in some language I don’t know,” she said to herself. It was like this:

89VOL ydlite adl bn s <gillhd ZBWT'

:adfw adl ni aldrnig bns 9T(g biG

?89vo§oiod adl aiaw yzmim 11A

.adfiigluo zdlBi amom adl bnA

She puzzled over this for some time, but at last a bright thought struck her. "Why, it's a Looking-glass book, of course! And, if I hold it up to a glass, the words will all go the right way again."

This was the poem that Alice read:

Jabberwocky

'Twas brillig, and the slithy toves

Did gyre and gimble in the wabe:

All mimsy were the borogoves,

And the mome raths outgrabe.

5 "Beware the Jabberwock, my son!

The jaws that bite, the claws that catch!

Beware the Jubjub bird, and shun

The frumious Bandersnatch!"

He took his vorpal sword in hand:

io Long time the manxome foe he sought—

So rested he by the Tumtum tree,

And stood awhile in thought.

And, as in uffish thought he stood,

The Jabberwock, with eyes of flame,

15 Came whiffing through the tulgey wood,

And burbled as it came!

1. From Through the Looking-Glass, chapter 1.

1 1 3 6 / L E W I S C A R R O L L (C H A R L E S L U T W
I D G E D O D G S O N) One, two! One, two! And through and through

The vorpal blade went snicker-snack!

He left it dead, and with its head

20 He went galumphing back.

“And hast thou slain the Jabberwock?

Come to my arms, my beamish boy!

O frabjous day! Callooh! Callay!”

He chortled in his joy.

25 Twas brillig, and the slithy toves

Did gyre and gimble in the wabe:

All mimsy were the borogoves,

And the mome raths outgrabe.

[Humpty Dumpty’s Explication of Jabberwocky]²

“You seem very clever at explaining words, Sir,” said Alice.

“Would you kindly tell me the meaning of the poem Jabberwocky?”

“Let’s hear it,” said Humpty Dumpty. “I can explain all the poems that ever were invented—and a good many that haven’t been invented just yet.”

This sounded very hopeful, so Alice repeated the first verse:

” Twas brillig, and the slithy toves

Did gyre and gimble in the wabe;

All mimsy were the borogoves,

And the mome raths outgrabe.”

“That’s enough to begin with,” Humpty Dumpty interrupted:

“there are plenty of hard words there. ‘Brillig’ means four o’clock in the afternoon—the time when you begin broiling things for dinner.”

“That’ll do very well,” said Alice: “and ‘slithy’?”³

“Well, ‘slithy’ means ‘lithe and slimy.’ ‘Lithe’ is the same as ‘active.’ You see it’s like a portmanteau—there are two meanings packed up into one word.”

“I see it now,” Alice remarked thoughtfully: “and what are ‘toves’?”

“Well, ‘toves’ are something like badgers—they’re something like lizards—and they’re something like corkscrews.”

“They must be very curious creatures.”

“They are that,” said Humpty Dumpty: “also they make their nests under sundials—also they live on cheese.”

“And what’s to ‘gyre’ and to ‘gimble’?”

“To ‘gyre’ is to go round and round like a gyroscope. To ‘gimble’ is to make holes like a gimlet.”

“And the ‘wabe’ is the grass plot round a sundial, I suppose?” said Alice, surprised at her own ingenuity.

2. From Through the Looking-Glass, chapter 6.

with ‘groves.’ Again, the first ‘o’ in ‘borogoves’ is

3. Concerning the pronunciation of these words, pronounced like the ‘o’ in ‘borrow.’ I have heard Carroll later said: “The ‘i’ in ‘slithy’ is long, as in people try to give it the sound of the ‘o’ in ‘worry.’ ‘writhe’; and ‘toves’ is pronounced so as to rhyme Such is Human Perversity.”

THE WHITE KNIGHT ‘SSONG / 1137

“Of course it is. It’s called ‘wabe,’ you know, because it goes a long way before it, and a long way behind it—”

“And a long way beyond it on each side,” Alice added.

“Exactly so. Well then, ‘mimsy’ is ‘flimsy and miserable’ (there’s another portmanteau for you). And a ‘borogove’ is a thin shabby-looking bird with its feathers sticking out all round—something like a live mop.”

“And then ‘mome raths’?” said Alice. “If I’m not giving you too much trouble.”

“Well, a ‘rath’ is a sort of green pig: but ‘mome’ I’m not certain about. I think it’s short for ‘from home’—meaning that they’d lost their way, you know.”

“And what does ‘outgrabe’ mean?”

“Well, ‘outgribing’ is something between bellowing and whistling, with a kind of sneeze in the middle: however, you’ll hear it done, maybe—down in the wood yonder—and when you’ve once heard it you’ll be quite content.

Who’s been repeating all that hard stuff to you?”

“I read it in a book,” said Alice.

1 8 7 1

The White Knight’s Song⁴

Haddock’s Eyes or The Aged Aged Man or

Ways and Means or A-Sitting on a Gate

I’ll tell thee everything I can;

There’s little to relate.

I saw an aged, aged man,

A-sitting on a gate.

5 “Who are you, aged man?” I said.

“And how is it you live?”

And his answer trickled through my head

Like water through a sieve.

He said “I look for butterflies

10

That sleep among the wheat;
I make them into mutton-pies,
And sell them in the street.
I sell them unto men," he said,
"Who sail on stormy seas;
15
And that's the way I get my bread—
A trifle, if you please."
But I was thinking of a plan
To dye one's whiskers green,
And always use so large a fan
20 That it could not be seen.

So, having no reply to give

4. From Through the Looking-Glass, chapter 8; the song is in part a parody of Wordsworth's "Resolution and Independence" (see p. 790).

1 1 3 8 / L E W I S C A R R O L L (C H A R L E S L U T W
I D G E D O D G S O N) To what the old man said,

I cried, "Come, tell me how you live!"

And thumped him on the head.

25 His accents mild took up the tale;

He said, "I go my ways,

And when I find a mountain-rill,^o -stream

I set it in a blaze;

And thence they make a stuff they call bo Rowland's Macassar Oil⁵—

Yet twopence-halfpenny is all

They give me for my toil."

But I was thinking of a way

To feed oneself on batter,
35 And so go on from day to day
Getting a little fatter.
I shook him well from side to side,
Until his face was blue;
“Come, tell me how you live,” I cried
40 “And what it is you do!”
He said, “I hunt for haddocks’ eyes
Among the heather bright,
And work them into waistcoat-buttons
In the silent night.
45 And these I do not sell for gold
Or coin of silvery shine,
But for a copper halfpenny,
And that will purchase nine.
“I sometimes dig for buttered rolls,
50 Or set limed twigs for crabs;
I sometimes search the grassy knolls
For wheels of hansom-cabs.
And that’s the way” (he gave a wink)
“By which I get my wealth—
55 And very gladly will I drink
Your Honor’s noble health.”
I heard him then, for I had just Completed my design
To keep the Menai bridge⁶ from rust
60 By boiling it in wine.
I thanked him much for telling me

The way he got his wealth,
But chiefly for his wish that he Might drink my noble health.

65 And now, if e'er by chance I put My fingers into glue,

5. A patented hairdressing. 6. Railway bridge in Wales.

THE HAYSTACK IN THE FLOODS / 1 1 3 9

Or madly squeeze a right-hand foot
Into a left-hand shoe,

Or if I drop upon my toe

70 A very heavy weight,

I weep, for it reminds me so

Of that old man I used to know—

Whose look was mild, whose speech was slow,

Whose hair was whiter than the snow,

75 Whose face was very like a crow,

With eyes, like cinders, all aglow,

Who seemed distracted with his woe,

Who rocked his body to and fro,

And muttered mumblingly and low,

so As if his mouth were full of dough,

Who snorted like a buffalo—

That summer evening long ago

A-sitting on a gate.

1 8 7 1

WILLIAM MORRIS

1834-1896

The Haystack in the Floods1

Had she come all the way for this,
To part at last without a kiss?
Yea, had she borne the dirt and rain
That her own eyes might see him slain
5 Beside the haystack in the floods?
Along the dripping leafless woods,
The stirrup touching either shoe,
She rode astride as troopers do;
With kirtle⁰ kilted to her knee, long skirt
io To which the mud splashed wretchedly;
And the wet dripped from every tree
Upon her head and heavy hair,
And on her eyelids broad and fair;
The tears and rain ran down her face.
15 By fits and starts they rode apace,
And very often was his place
Far off from her; he had to ride
Ahead, to see what might betide
When the roads crossed; and sometimes, when 20 There rose a murmuring from his men,

1. The events of the poem take place immediately Sir Robert de Marny, and his mistress, Jehane, are after the Battle of Poitiers (1356), in which the attempting to escape the French by reaching Gas-English defeated the French. An English knight, cony, held by the English.

1 1 4 0 / W I L L I A M M O R R I S

Had to turn back with promises;
Ah me! she had but little ease;
And often for pure doubt and dread

She sobbed, made giddy in the head
25 By the swift riding; while, for cold,
Her slender fingers scarce could hold
The wet reins; yea, and scarcely, too,
She felt the foot within her shoe
Against the stirrup: all for this,
bo To part at last without a kiss
Beside the haystack in the floods.
For when they neared that old soaked hay,
They saw across the only way
That Judas, Godmar, and the three 35 Red running lions dismally
Grinned from his pennon,^o under which, banner
In one straight line along the ditch,
They counted thirty heads.
So then,
While Robert turned round to his men,
40 She saw at once the wretched end,
And, stooping down, tried hard to rend
Her coif the wrong way from her head,
And hid her eyes; while Robert said:
“Nay, love, ‘tis scarcely two to one,
45 At Poitiers where we made them run
So fast—why, sweet my love, good cheer.
The Gascon frontier is so near,
Nought after this.”
But, “O,” she said,
“My God! my God! I have to tread

50 The long way back without you; then
The court at Paris; those six men;²
The gratings of the Chatelet;
The swift Seine³ on some rainy day
Like this, and people standing by,
55 And laughing, while my weak hands try
To recollect how strong men swim,⁴
All this, or else a life with him,
For which I should be damned at last,
Would God that this next hour were past!”
60 He answered not, but cried his cry,
“St. George for Marny!” cheerily;
And laid his hand upon her rein.

2. I.e., the judges.

she sinks, she will be presumed innocent and will

3. The river that runs through Paris. Le Chatelet be rescued, but if she swims, this will be assumed is a prison in the city.

to be by virtue of her powers as a witch, and she

4. When captured, she will have to undergo trial will be burned at the stake.

by water to determine whether she is a witch: if

THE HAYSTACK IN THE FLOODS / 1141

Alas! no man of all his train⁰ following

Gave back that cheery cry again;

65 And, while for rage his thumb beat fast

Upon his sword-hilts, someone cast

About his neck a kerchief long,

A n d b o u n d h i m .

T h e n t h e y w e n t a l o n g

T o G o d m a r ; w h o s a i d : “ N o w , J e h a n e ,

70 Y o u r l o v e r ’ s l i f e i s o n t h e w a n e

S o f a s t , t h a t , i f t h i s v e r y h o u r

Y o u y i e l d n o t a s m y p a r a m o u r ,

H e w i l l n o t s e e t h e r a i n l e a v e o f f —

N a y , k e e p y o u r t o n g u e f r o m g i b e a n d s c o f f ,

75 S i r R o b e r t , o r I s l a y y o u n o w . ”

S h e l a i d h e r h a n d u p o n h e r b r o w ,

T h e n g a z e d u p o n t h e p a l m , a s t h o u g h

S h e t h o u g h t h e r f o r e h e a d b l e d , a n d — ” N o , ”

S h e s a i d , a n d t u r n e d h e r h e a d a w a y ,

s o A s t h e r e w e r e n o t h i n g e l s e t o s a y ,

A n d e v e r y t h i n g w a s s e t t l e d : r e d

G r e w G o d m a r ’ s f a c e f r o m c h i n t o h e a d :

“ J e h a n e , o n y o n d e r h i l l t h e r e s t a n d s

M y c a s t l e , g u a r d i n g w e l l m y l a n d s :

85 W h a t h i n d e r s m e f r o m t a k i n g y o u ,

A n d d o i n g t h a t I l i s t t o d o

T o y o u r f a i r w i l l f u l b o d y , w h i l e

Y o u r k n i g h t l i e s d e a d ? ”

A w i c k e d s m i l e

W r i n k l e d h e r f a c e , h e r l i p s g r e w t h i n ,

90 A l o n g w a y o u t s h e t h r u s t h e r c h i n :

“ Y o u k n o w t h a t I s h o u l d s t r a n g l e y o u

W h i l e y o u w e r e s l e e p i n g ; o r b i t e t h r o u g h

Y o u r t h r o a t , b y G o d ’ s h e l p — a h ! ” s h e s a i d , “Lord J e s u s , pity your poor maid!

95 For in s u c h w i s e they h e m me in,
I c a n n o t c h o o s e b u t sin and sin,
W h a t e v e r h a p p e n s : yet I think
T h e y c o u l d n o t m a k e me eat or drink,
A n d s o s h o u l d I just reach my rest.”
100 “Nay, if you do not my behest,
O J e h a n e ! t h o u g h I love you well,”
S a i d G o d m a r , “would I fail to tell
A l l t h a t I know.” “Foul lies,” s h e said.
“Eh? lies my J e h a n e ? by God’s head,
105 A t P a r i s f o l k s w o u l d d e e m t h e m true!
D o y o u k n o w , J e h a n e , they cry for you, ‘Jehane the brown! J e h a n e the brown!
G i v e u s J e h a n e t o b u r n o r d r o w n !’—

E h — g a g m e R o b e r t ! — s w e e t m y friend,

110 T h i s w e r e i n d e e d a p i t e o u s e n d

1142 / W I L L I A M M O R R I S

F o r t h o s e l o n g f i n g e r s , a n d l o n g f e e t ,
A n d l o n g n e c k , a n d s m o o t h s h o u l d e r s s w e e t ; A n e n d t h a t f e w m e n w o u l d f o r g e t

T h a t s a w i t — s o , a n h o u r y e t :

115 C o n s i d e r , J e h a n e , w h i c h t o t a k e
O f l i f e o r d e a t h ! ”

S o , s c a r c e a w a k e ,

D i s m o u n t i n g , d i d s h e l e a v e t h a t p l a c e ,

A n d t o t t e r s o m e y a r d s : w i t h h e r f a c e

T u r n e d u p w a r d t o t h e s k y s h e l a y ,

120 H e r h e a d o n a w e t h e a p o f h a y,
A n d f e l l a s l e e p : a n d w h i l e s h e s l e p t ,
A n d d i d n o t d r e a m , t h e m i n u t e s c r e p t
R o u n d t o t h e t w e l v e a g a i n ; b u t s h e ,
B e i n g w a k e d a t l a s t , s i g h e d q u i e t l y ,
125 A n d s t r a n g e l y c h i l d l i k e c a m e , a n d s a i d :
“ I w i l l n o t . ” S t r a i g h t w a y G o d m a r ‘ s h e a d , A s t h o u g h i t h u n g o n s t r o n g w i r e s , t u r n e d
M o s t s h a r p l y r o u n d , a n d h i s f a c e b u r n e d .
F o r R o b e r t — b o t h h i s e y e s w e r e d r y ,
n o H e c o u l d n o t w e e p , b u t g l o o m i l y
H e s e e m e d t o w a t c h t h e r a i n ; y e a , t o o , H i s l i p s w e r e f i r m ; h e t r i e d o n c e m o r e
T o t o u c h h e r l i p s ; s h e r e a c h e d o u t , s o r e
A n d v a i n d e s i r e s o t o r t u r e d t h e m , 135 T h e p o o r g r a y l i p s , a n d n o w t h e h e m
O f h i s s l e e v e b r u s h e d t h e m .
W i t h a s t a r t
U p G o d m a r r o s e , t h r u s t t h e m a p a r t ;
F r o m R o b e r t ‘ s t h r o a t h e l o o s e d t h e b a n d s O f s i l k a n d m a i l ; w i t h e m p t y h a n d s
h o H e l d o u t , s h e s t o o d a n d g a z e d , a n d s a w ,
T h e l o n g b r i g h t b l a d e w i t h o u t a f l a w
G l i d e o u t f r o m G o d m a r ‘ s s h e a t h , h i s h a n d
I n R o b e r t ‘ s h a i r ; s h e s a w h i m b e n d
B a c k R o b e r t ‘ s h e a d ; s h e s a w h i m s e n d
145 T h e t h i n s t e e l d o w n ; t h e b l o w t o l d w e l l ,
R i g h t b a c k w a r d t h e k n i g h t R o b e r t f e l l ,

A n d m o a n e d a s d o g s d o, b e i n g h a l f d e a d,
U n w i t t i n g, a s I d e e m: s o t h e n
G o d m a r t u r n e d g r i n n i n g t o h i s m e n, 150 W h o r a n, s o m e f i v e o r s i x, a n d b e a t
H i s h e a d t o p i e c e s a t t h e i r f e e t.

T h e n G o d m a r t u r n e d a g a i n, a n d s a i d:
“S o, J e h a n e, t h e f i r s t f i t t e⁵ i s r e a d!

T a k e n o t e, m y l a d y, t h a t y o u r w a y
155 L i e s b a c k w a r d t o t h e C h a t e l e t!”
S h e s h o o k h e r h e a d a n d g a z e d a w h i l e

5. Division of a song, poem, or tale.

T H E E A R T H L Y P A R A D I S E / 1 1 4 3

A t h e r c o l d h a n d s w i t h a r u e f u l s m i l e,
A s t h o u g h t h i s t h i n g h a d m a d e h e r m a d.
T h i s w a s t h e p a r t i n g t h a t t h e y h a d
160 B e s i d e t h e h a y s t a c k i n t h e f l o o d s.
1858

The Earthly Paradise⁶

O f h e a v e n o r h e l l I h a v e n o p o w e r t o s i n g,
I c a n n o t e a s e t h e b u r d e n o f y o u r f e a r s,
O r m a k e q u i c k - c o m i n g d e a t h a l i t t l e t h i n g, O r b r i n g a g a i n t h e p l e a s u r e o f p a s t y e a r s,
5 N o r f o r m y w o r d s s h a l l y e f o r g e t y o u r t e a r s, O r h o p e a g a i n f o r a u g h t t h a t I c a n s a y,
T h e i d l e s i n g e r o f a n e m p t y d a y.
B u t r a t h e r, w h e n, a w e a r y o f y o u r m i r t h,
F r o m f u l l h e a r t s s t i l l u n s a t i s f i e d y e s i g h, i o A n d, f e e l i n g k i n d l y u n t o a l l t h e e a r t h,

G r u d g e every m i n u t e as it p a s s e s by,
M a d e t h e m o r e m i n d f u l t h a t t h e s w e e t d a y s d i e —

R e m e m b e r m e a l i t t l e t h e n I p r a y,
T h e i d l e s i n g e r o f a n e m p t y d a y.

15 T h e h e a v y t r o u b l e, t h e b e w i l d e r i n g c a r e T h a t w e i g h s u s d o w n w h o l i v e a n d e a r n o u r b r e a d,

T h e s e i d l e v e r s e s h a v e n o p o w e r t o b e a r;
S o l e t m e s i n g o f n a m e s r e m e m b e r e d,
B e c a u s e t h e y, l i v i n g n o t, c a n n e ' e r b e d e a d,

20 O r l o n g t i m e t a k e t h e i r m e m o r y q u i t e a w a y
F r o m u s p o o r s i n g e r s o f a n e m p t y d a y.

D r e a m e r o f d r e a m s, b o r n o u t o f m y d u e t i m e, W h y s h o u l d I s t r i v e t o s e t t h e c r o o k e d s t r a i g h t?

L e t i t s u f f i c e m e t h a t m y m u r m u r i n g r h y m e
25 B e a t s w i t h l i g h t w i n g a g a i n s t t h e i v o r y g a t e, 7

T e l l i n g a t a l e n o t t o o i m p o r t u n a t e T o t h o s e w h o i n t h e s l e e p y r e g i o n s t a y,
L u l l e d b y t h e s i n g e r o f a n e m p t y d a y.

F o l k s a y, a w i z a r d t o a n o r t h e r n k i n g

30 A t C h r i s t m a s - t i d e s u c h w o n d r o u s t h i n g
s d i d s h o w, T h a t t h r o u g h o n e w i n d o w m e n b e h e l d t h e s p r i n g, A n d t h r o u g h a n o t h e r s a w t h e s u m m e r g l o w, A n d t h r o u g h a t h i r d t h e f r u i t e d v i n e s a - r o w,

6. The dedicatory stanzas to Morris's poem The

7. In Homer, dreams came through one or the Earthly Paradise (1868—70), consisting of a pro-

other of two gates: through the gates of ivory, those logue and twenty-four tales on classical and medi-that were untrue; through the gates of horn, those eval—especially Norse—subjects.

that were true.

1 1 4 4 / W . S . G I L B E R T

While still, unheard, but in its wonted way, usual

35 Piped the drear wind of that December day.

So with this Earthly Paradise it is,

If ye will read aright, and pardon me,

Who strive to build a shadowy isle of bliss

Midmost the beating of the steely sea,

40 Where tossed about all hearts of men must be;

Whose ravening monsters mighty men shall slay,

Not the poor singer of an empty day.

1 8 6 8 - 7 0

W. S. G I L B E R T

1836-1911

I Am the Very Model of a Modern Major-General¹

I am the very model of a modern Major-General,

I've information vegetable, animal, and mineral,

I know the kings of England, and I quote the fights historical,

From Marathon to Waterloo, in order categorical;²

5 I'm very well acquainted too with matters mathematical,

I understand equations, both the simple and quadratical,

About binomial theorem I'm teeming with a lot o' news—

With many cheerful facts about the square of the hypotenuse.³

ALL With many cheerful facts, etc.

io GEN. I'm very good at integral and differential calculus,

I know the scientific names of beings animalculous;4
In short, in matters vegetable, animal, and mineral,
I am the very model of a modern Major-General.

ALL In short, in matters vegetable, animal, and mineral,
15 He is the very model of a modern Major-General.

GEN. I know our mythic history, King Arthur's and Sir Caradoc's,

I answer hard acrostics, I've a pretty taste for paradox,
I quote in elegiacs all the crimes of Heliogabalus,
In conics I can floor peculiarities parabolous.5

1. Sung by the Major-General on his entrance in bits of knowledge: Sir Caradoc was a legendary fig-act 1 of The Pirates of Penzance.

ure in British history, supposedly one of King

2. The Greeks defeated the Persians in a famous Arthur's knights; acrostics are word puzzles (fore-battle at Marathon in 490 B.C.E.; the duke of Wel-runners of crossword puzzles); elegiacs were a clas-lington won his decisive victory over Napoleon at sical verse form of praise, quite unsuitable to Waterloo in 1815.

describe the life of the most depraved Roman

3. All these are mathematical terms.

emperor; conics is the study of three-dimensional

4. Microscopic organisms.

figures, of which the parabola is one.

5. More examples of the Major-General's abstruse

I A M T H E V E R Y M O D E L O F A M O D E R N M A J
O R - G E N E R A L / 1 1 4 5

20 I can tell undoubted Raphaels from Gerard Dows and Zoffanies,
I know the croaking chorus from the Frogs of Aristophanes,
Then I can hum a fugue of which I've heard the music's dinafore,
And whistle all the airs from that infernal nonsense Pinafore.⁶
ALL And whistle all the airs, etc.

25 GEN. Then I can write a washing bill in Babylonian cuneiform,
And tell you every detail of Caractacus's uniform;⁷
In short, in matters vegetable, animal, and mineral,
I am the very model of a modern Major-General.

ALL In short, in matters vegetable, animal, and mineral,
BO He is the very model of a modern Major-General.

GEN. In fact, when I know what is meant by "mamelon" and "ravelin,"

When I can tell at sight a chassepot rifle from a javelin,
When such affairs as sorties and surprises I'm more wary at,
And when I know precisely what is meant by "commissariat," 35 When I have learnt what progress has been made in modern gunnery,

When I know more of tactics than a novice in a nunnery:
In short, when I've a smattering of elemental strategy, You'll say a better Major-General has never sat a gee—⁸

ALL You'll say a better, etc.

40 GEN. For my military knowledge, though I'm plucky and adventury,
Has only been brought down to the beginning of the century;
But still in matters vegetable, animal, and mineral,

I am the very model of a modern Major-General.

ALL But still in matters vegetable, animal, and mineral,

45 He is the very model of a modern Major-General.

1879

6. Raphael was one of the great painters of the pressing a stick into clay) practiced in ancient Bab-early Italian Renaissance, as opposed to Gerhard ylonia; Caractacus is an alternate form of Caradoc. Dou and Johann Zoffany, undistinguished seven-8. Horse (usually a work horse). The Major-teenth- and eighteenth-century painters; in The General has just listed his “smattering” of military Frogs, by Aristophanes, the great classical comic terms: a mamelon is a fortified mound, while a rav-playwright, a chorus of frogs chants “Brekke-ko-ax, elin is a detached outwork also used in fortifica-ko-ax, ko-ax”; a fugue is a learned (and, inciden-tion; the chassepot rifle was a bolt-action, tally, multivoiced) musical composition; the last breech-loading rifle, very recently invented in Gil-line of the verse is Gilbert’s sly dig at the immense bert’s time, while a javelin is a light spear that has popularity of the previous Gilbert and Sullivan been used in warfare for centuries; sorties and sur-operetta, H.M.S. Pinafore (1878).

prises are sudden military attacks; a commissariat

7. Cuneiform was a form of writing (made by is the system for supplying an army with food.

1 2 1 0 / A L G E R N O N C H A R L E S S W I N B U R N
E

Titwillow9

On a tree by a river a little tom-tit

Sang “Willow, titwillow, titwillow!”

And I said to him, “Dicky-bird, why do you sit

Singing ‘Willow, titwillow, titwillow’?”

5 “Is it weakness of intellect, birdie?” I cried,

“Or a rather tough worm in your little inside?”

With a shake of his poor little head, he replied,

“Oh, willow, titwillow, titwillow!”

He slapped at his chest, as he sat on that bough,

10 Singing “Willow, titwillow, titwillow!”

And a cold perspiration bespangled his brow,

Oh, willow, titwillow, titwillow!

He sobbed and he sighed, and a gurgle he gave,

Then he plunged himself into the billowy wave,

15 And an echo arose from the suicide’s grave—

“Oh, willow, titwillow, titwillow!”

Now I feel just as sure as I’m sure that my name

Isn’t Willow, titwillow, titwillow,

That ‘twas blighted affection that made him exclaim

20 “Oh, willow, titwillow, titwillow!”

And if you remain callous and obdurate, I

Shall perish as he did, and you will know why,

Though I probably shall not exclaim as I die,

“Oh, willow, titwillow, titwillow!”

A L G E R N O N C H A R L E S S W I N B U R N E

1837-1909

Chorus from Atalanta in Calydon

When the Hounds of Spring Are on Winter's Traces

When the hounds of spring are on winter's traces,

The mother of months¹ in meadow or plain

Fills the shadows and windy places

With lisp of leaves and ripple of rain;

5 And the brown bright nightingale amorous

Sung by Ko-Ko in act 2 of The Mikado.

months" because in Greek mythology she is

This chorus, with which Swinburne's tragedy moon goddess.

jins, is addressed to Artemis, called "mother of

CHORUS FROM ATALANTA IN CALYDON / 1 1 4 7

Is half assuaged for Itylus,²

For the Thracian ships and the foreign faces,

The tongueless vigil, and all the pain.

Come with bows bent and with emptying of quivers,

10 Maiden most perfect, lady of light,

With a noise of winds and many rivers,

With a clamor of waters, and with might;

Bind on thy sandals, O thou most fleet,

Over the splendor and speed of thy feet;

15 For the faint east quickens, the wan west shivers,

Round the feet of the day and the feet of the night.

Where shall we find her, how shall we sing to her,

Fold our hands round her knees, and cling?

O that man's heart were as fire and could spring to her,

20 Fire, or the strength of the streams that spring!
For the stars and the winds are unto her
As raiment, as songs of the harp-player;
For the risen stars and the fallen cling to her,
And the southwest wind and the west wind sing.
25 For winter's rains and ruins are over,
And all the season of snows and sins;
The days dividing lover and lover,
The light that loses, the night that wins;
And time remembered is grief forgotten,
30 And frosts are slain and flowers begotten,
And in green underwood and cover
Blossom by blossom the spring begins.
The full streams feed on flower of rushes,
Ripe grasses trammel a traveling foot,
35 The faint fresh flame of the young year flushes
From leaf to flower and flower to fruit;
And fruit and leaf are as gold and fire,
And the oar² is heard above the lyre, musical pipe
And the hooped heel of a satyr³ crushes
40 The chestnut-husk at the chestnut-root.
And Pan by noon and Bacchus by night,⁴ Fleeter of foot than the fleet-foot kid,
Follows with dancing and fills with delight
The Maenad and the Bassarid;
45 And soft as lips that laugh and hide
The laughing leaves of the trees divide,
2. Tereus, king of Thrace, raped his sister-in-law,

Philomela into a nightingale.

Philomela, and cut out her tongue to ensure her

3. A woodland god, half man, half beast.

silence. But Philomela wove the story of his deed

4. Pan was the Greek god of flocks and shepherds;

into a tapestry, and in revenge her sister, Procne,

Racchus, or Dionysus, god of wine, was accompanied in his revels (Racchanalia) by a train of son Itys (or Itylus), at a banquet. The sisters, flee-devotees that included Maenads and Bassarids

ing from Tereus, were changed into birds before

(line 44).

he could overtake them, Procne into a swallow,

1 1 4 8 / A L G E R N O N C H A R L E S S W I N B U R N

E

And screen from seeing and leave in sight

The god pursuing, the maiden hid.

The ivy falls with the Bacchanal's hair

50 Over her eyebrows hiding her eyes;

The wild vine slipping down leaves bare

Her bright breast shortening into sighs;

The wild vine slips with the weight of its leaves,

But the berried ivy catches and cleaves

55 To the limbs that glitter, the feet that scare

The wolf that follows, the fawn that flies.

1865

The Garden of Proserpine5

Here, where the world is quiet;
Here, where all trouble seems Dead winds' and spent waves' riot
In doubtful dreams of dreams;
5 I watch the green field growing
For reaping folk and sowing,
For harvest-time and mowing,
A sleepy world of streams.
I am tired of tears and laughter,
10 And men that laugh and weep;
Of what may come hereafter
For men that sow to reap:
I am weary of days and hours,
Blown buds of barren flowers,
15 Desires and dreams and powers
And everything but sleep.
Here life has death for neighbor,
And far from eye or ear
Wan waves and wet winds labor,
20 Weak ships and spirits steer;
They drive adrift, and whither
They wot⁰ not who make thither; know
But no such winds blow hither,
And no such things grow here.
25 No growth of moor or coppice,⁰ forest
No heather-flower or vine,
But bloomless buds of poppies,
Green grapes of Proserpine,

5. Persephone, in Roman mythology Proserpine, underworld (over which she ruled with him the daughter of Zeus and Demeter, had been thereafter as his queen and as goddess of death and abducted by Hades (the Roman Pluto), god of the eternal sleep).

THE GARDEN OF PROSERPINE / 1149

Pale beds of blowing rushes

30 Where no leaf blooms or blushes

Save this whereout she crushes

For dead men deadly wine.

Pale, without name or number,

In fruitless fields of corn, 0 wheat

35 They bow themselves and slumber

All night till light is born;

And like a soul belated,

In hell and heaven unmated,

By cloud and mist abated

40 Comes out of darkness morn.

Though one were strong as seven,

He too with death shall dwell,

Nor wake with wings in heaven,

Nor weep for pains in hell;

45 Though one were fair as roses,

His beauty clouds and closes;

And well though love reposes,

In the end it is not well.

Pale, beyond porch and portal,

50 Crowned with calm leaves, she stands

Who gathers all things mortal

With cold immortal hands;
Her languid lips are sweeter
Than love's who fears to greet her 55 To men that mix and meet her
From many times and lands.
She waits for each and other,
She waits for all men born;
Forgets the earth her mother,
60 The life of fruits and corn;
And spring and seed and swallow
Take wing for her and follow
Where summer song rings hollow
And flowers are put to scorn.
65 There go the loves that wither,
The old loves with wearier wings;
And all dead years draw thither,
And all disastrous things;
Dead dreams of days forsaken,
70 Blind buds that snows have shaken,
Wild leaves that winds have taken,
Red strays of ruined springs.
We are not sure of sorrow,
And joy was never sure;
1 1 5 0 / A L G E R N O N C H A R L E S S W I N B U R N
E
75 Today will die tomorrow;
Time stoops to no man's lure;
And love, grown faint and fretful,

With lips but half regretful
Sighs, and with eyes forgetful
so Weeps that no love endure.
From too much love of living,
From hope and fear set free,
We thank with brief thanksgiving
Whatever gods may be 85 That no life lives for ever;
That dead men rise up never;
That even the weariest river
Winds somewhere safe to sea.
Then star nor sun shall waken,
90 Nor any change of light:
Nor sound of waters shaken,
Nor any sound or sight:
Nor wintry leaves nor vernal,⁰ of spring
Nor days nor things diurnal;⁰ daily
95 Only the sleep eternal
In an eternal night.

1866

A Forsaken Garden

In a coign⁰ of the cliff between lowland and highland, corner
At the sea-down's edge between windward and lee,
Walled round with rocks as an inland island,
The ghost of a garden fronts the sea.
5 A girdle of brushwood and thorn encloses
The steep square slope of the blossomless bed
Where the weeds that grew green from the graves of its roses

Now lie dead.

The fields fall southward, abrupt and broken,

io To the low last edge of the long lone land.

If a step should sound or a word be spoken,

Would a ghost not rise at the strange guest's hand?

So long have the grey bare walks lain guestless,

Through branches and briars if a man make way,

15 He shall find no life but the sea-wind's, restless

Night and day.

6. In falconry, a device used to recall the hawk to the falconer's wrist.

A F O R S A K E N G A R D E N / 1 1 5 1

The dense hard passage is blind and stifled

That crawls by a track none turn to climb

To the strait waste place that the years have rifled

20 Of all but the thorns that are touched not of time.

The thorns he spares when the rose is taken;

The rocks are left when he wastes the plain.

The wind that wanders, the weeds wind-shaken,

These remain.

25 Not a flower to be pressed of the foot that falls not;

As the heart of a dead man the seed-plots are dry;

From the thicket of thorns whence the nightingale calls not,

Could she call, there were never a rose to reply.

Over the meadows that blossom and wither

30 Rings but the note of a sea-bird's song;

Only the sun and the rain come hither

All year long.

The sun burns sere⁰ and the rain dishevels dry

One gaunt bleak blossom of scentless breath.

35 Only the wind here hovers and revels

In a round where life seems barren as death.

Here there was laughing of old, there was weeping,

Haply, of lovers none ever will know,

Whose eyes went seaward a hundred sleeping

40 Years ago.

Heart handfast in heart as they stood, “Look thither,”

Did he whisper? “look forth from the flowers to the sea,

For the foam-flowers endure when the rose-blossoms wither,

And men that love lightly may die—but we?”

45 And the same wind sang and the same waves whitened,

And or ever the garden’s last petals were shed,

In the lips that had whispered, the eyes that had lightened,

Love was dead.

Or they loved their life through, and then went whither?

50 And were one to the end—but what end who knows?

Love deep as the sea as a rose must wither,

As the rose-red seaweed that mocks the rose.

Shall the dead take thought for the dead to love them?

What love was ever as deep as a grave?

55 They are loveless now as the grass above them

Or the wave.

All are at one now, roses and lovers,

Not known of the cliffs and the fields and the sea.

Not a breath of the time that has been hovers

60 In the air now soft with a summer to be.

Not a breath shall there sweeten the seasons hereafter
Of the flowers or the lovers that laugh now or weep,
When as they that are free now of weeping and laughter
We shall sleep.

1 1 5 2 / T H O M A S H A R D Y

65 Here death may deal not again for ever;
Here change may come not till all change end.
From the graves they have made they shall rise up never,
Who have left nought living to ravage and rend.
Earth, stones, and thorns of the wild ground growing, 70 While the sun and the rain live, these shall be;
Till a last wind's breath upon all these blowing Roll the sea.

Till the slow sea rise and the sheer cliff crumble,
Till terrace and meadow the deep gulfs drink,
75 Till the strength of the waves of the high tides humble
The fields that lessen, the rocks that shrink,
Here now in his triumph where all things falter,
Stretched out on the spoils that his own hand spread,
As a god self-slain on his own strange altar,
so Death lies dead.

1 8 7 6 1 8 7 8

T H O M A S H A R D Y

1840-1928

Hap1

If but some vengeful god would call to me
From up the sky, and laugh: "Thou suffering thing,
Know that thy sorrow is my ecstasy,

That thy love's loss is my hate's profiting!"
5 Then would I bear it, clench myself, and die,
Steeled by the sense of ire unmerited;
Half-eased in that a Powerfuller than I
Had willed and meted me the tears I shed.
But not so. How arrives it joy lies slain, io And why unblooms the best hope ever sown?
—Crass Casualty obstructs the sun and rain,
And dicing Time for gladness casts a moan... .
These purblind Doomsters had as readily strown
Blisses about my pilgrimage as pain.

1 8 6 6 1 8 9 8

1. I.e., chance (as also "Casualty," line 11).

I L O O K I N T O M Y G L A S S / 1 1 5 3

Neutral Tones

We stood by a pond that winter day,
And the sun was white, as though chidden⁰ oP God, rebuked./by
And a few leaves lay on the starving sod;^o turf
—They had fallen from an ash, and were grey.
5 Your eyes on me were as eyes that rove
Over tedious riddles of years ago;
And some words played between us to and fro
On which lost the more by our love.
The smile on your mouth was the deadest thing
10 Alive enough to have strength to die;
And a grin of bitterness swept thereby
Like an ominous bird a-wing ...

Since then, keen lessons that love deceives,
And wrings with wrong, have shaped to me
15 Your face, and the God-curst sun, and a tree,
And a pond edged with greyish leaves.

1867 1898

I Look into My Glass²

I look into my glass,
And view my wasting skin,
And say, "Would God it came to pass
My heart had shrunk as thin!"

5 For then, I, undistrest

By hearts grown cold to me,
Could lonely wait my endless rest
With equanimity.

But Time, to make me grieve,
io Part steals, lets part abide;
And shakes this fragile frame at eve
With throbbings of noontide.

1898

2. Mirror.

1 1 5 4 / T H O M A S H A R D Y

Drummer Hodge³

i

They throw in Drummer Hodge, to rest
Uncoffined—just as found:

His landmark is a kopje-crest⁴

That breaks the veldt around;

5 And foreign constellations wests

Each night above his mound.

2

Young Hodge the Drummer never knew—

Fresh from his Wessex home—

The meaning of the broad Karoo, io The Bush,⁶ the dusty loam,

And why uprose to nightly view

Strange stars amid the gloam.

3

Yet portion of that unknown plain

Will Hodge forever be;

15 His homely Northern breast and brain

Grow to some Southern tree,

And strange-eyed constellations reign

His stars eternally.

1 8 9 9 1 9 0 2

A Broken Appointment

You did not come,

And marching Time drew on, and wore me numb.

Yet less for loss of your dear presence there

Than that I thus found lacking in your make

5 That high compassion which can overbear

Reluctance for pure lovingkindness' sake

Grieved I, when, as the hope-hour stroked its sum,

You did not come.

You love not me,

io And love alone can lend you loyalty;

—I know and knew it. But, unto the store

Of human deeds divine in all but name,

3. The poem presents an incident from the Roer

4. Crest of a small hill (South African Dutch). The War (1899-1902) and when first published bore

veldt (line 4) is open country, unenclosed pasture

this note: "One of the Drummers killed was a land; the Karoo (line 9), barren tracts of plateau-native of a village near Casterbridge," i.e., Dorch-

land.

ester, the principal city of the region of southern

5. Set. Foreign: i.e., to an English soldier.

England to which, in his novels and poems, Hardy

6. Uncleared area of land (British colonial word).

gave its medieval name, Wessex.

T H E D A R K L I N G T H R U S H / 1 1 5 5

Was it not worth a little hour or more

To add yet this: Once you, a woman, came

To soothe a time-torn man; even though it be

You love not me?

1902

The Darkling Thrush

I leant upon a coppice gate⁷

When Frost was spectre-grey,

And Winter's dregs made desolate

The weakening eye of day.

5 The tangled bine-stems⁸ scored the sky

Like strings of broken lyres,

And all mankind that haunted nigh

Had sought their household fires.

The land's sharp features seemed to be 10

The Century's corpse outleant,⁹

His crypt the cloudy canopy,

The wind his death-lament.

The ancient pulse of germ and birth

Was shrunken hard and dry,

15

And every spirit upon earth

Seemed fervourless as I.

At once a voice arose among

The bleak twigs overhead

In a full-hearted evensong

20 Of joy illimited;

An aged thrush, frail, gaunt, and small,

In blast-beruffled plume,

Had chosen thus to fling his soul

Upon the growing gloom.

25

So little cause for carolings

Of such ecstatic sound

Was written on terrestrial things

Afar or nigh around,

That I could think there trembled through 30

His happy good-night air

Some blessed Hope, whereof he knew

And I was unaware.

December 31, 1900 1902

7. Gate leading to a small wood.

9. Leaning out (i.e., of its coffin); note the poem's

8. Shoots or stems of a climbing plant.

composition date.

1 1 5 6 / T H O M A S H A R D Y

The Ruined Maid

“O’Melia, my dear, this does everything crown!

Who could have supposed I should meet you in Town?

And whence such fair garments, such prosperi-ty?”

“O didn’t you know I’d been ruined?” said she.

5 “You left us in tatters, without shoes or socks,

Tired of digging potatoes, and spudding up docks;1

And now you’ve gay bracelets and bright feathers three!”

“Yes: that’s how we dress when we’re ruined,” said she.

“At home in the barton0 you said ‘thee’ and ‘thou,’ farm

10 And ‘thik oon,’ and ‘theas oon,’ and ‘t’other’; but now

Your talking quite fits ‘ee for high compa-ny!”

“Some polish is gained with one’s ruin,” said she.

“Your hands were like paws then, your face blue and bleak

But now I’m bewitched by your delicate cheek,

15 And your little gloves fit as on any la-dy!”

“We never do work when we’re ruined,” said she.

“You used to call home-life a hag-ridden dream,

And you’d sigh, and you’d sock;0 but at present you seem sigh

To know not of megrims0 or melancho-ly!” low spirits

20 “True. One’s pretty lively when ruined,” said she.

“I wish I had feathers, a fine sweeping gown,
And a delicate face, and could strut about Town!”
“My dear—a raw country girl, such as you be, Cannot quite expect that. You ain’t ruined,” said she.

1866

1902

The Convergence of the Twain

*Lines on the Loss of the Titanic*²

i

In a solitude of the sea
Deep from human vanity,
And the Pride of Life that planned her, stilly couches she.

2

Steel chambers, late the pyres
Of her salamandrine fires,³
Cold currents thrid,⁰ and turn to rhythmic tidal lyres.

thread

1. Digging up weedy herbs.

3. The ship’s fires, which burn though immersed

2. The White Star liner R.M.S. Titanic was sunk, in water, are compared to the salamander, a lizard-with great loss of life, as the result of collision with like creature that according to fable could live in an iceberg on its maiden voyage from Southampthe midst of fire.

ton to New York on April 15, 1912. Twain: two.

CHANNEL FIRING / 1157

11221

Over the mirrors meant

To glass the opulent

The sea-worm crawls—grotesque, slimed, dumb, indifferent.

4

io Jewels in joy designed

To ravish the sensuous mind

Lie lightless, all their sparkles bleared and black and blind.

5

Dim moon-eyed fishes near

Gaze at the gilded gear

15 And query: “What does this vaingloriousness down here?”

6

Well: while was fashioning

This creature of cleaving wing,

The Immanent Will⁴ that stirs and urges everything

7

Prepared a sinister mate

20 For her—so gaily great—

A Shape of Ice, for the time far and dissociate.

8

And as the smart ship grew

In stature, grace, and hue,

In shadowy silent distance grew the Iceberg too.

9

25 Alien they seemed to be:

No mortal eye could see

The intimate welding of their later history,

10

Or sign that they were bent

By paths coincident

30 On being anon⁰ twin halves of one august⁰ event, soon / important

n

Till the Spinner of the Years

Said “Now!” And each one hears,

And consummation comes, and jars two hemispheres.

1 9 1 2

Channel Firing⁵

That night your great guns, unawares,

Shook all our coffins as we lay,

4. The blind force (in Hardy’s belief system, not

Four months after Hardy wrote this poem, World identified with any deity) that drives the world.

War I began.

5. I.e., gunnery practice in the English Channel.

1 1 5 8 / T H O M A S H A R D Y

And broke the chancel⁶ window-squares,

We thought it was the Judgment-day

5 And sat upright. While drearisome

Arose the howl of wakened hounds:

The mouse let fall the altar-crumb,

The worms drew back into the mounds,

The glebe cow⁷ drooled. Till God called, “No;

10 It’s gunnery practice out at sea

Just as before you went below;

The world is as it used to be:

“All nations striving strong to make Red war yet redder. Mad as hatters
15 They do no more for Christes sake
Than you who are helpless in such matters.

“That this is not the judgment-hour
For some of them’s a blessed thing,
For if it were they’d have to scour
20 Hell’s floor for so much threatening... .

“Ha, ha. It will be warmer when I blow the trumpet (if indeed
I ever do; for you are men,
And rest eternal sorely need).”

25 So down we lay again. “I wonder,
Will the world ever saner be,”
Said one, “than when He sent us under
In our indifferent century!”

And many a skeleton shook his head.

30 “Instead of preaching forty year,”
My neighbour Parson Thirdly said,
“I wish I had stuck to pipes and beer.”

Again the guns disturbed the hour,
Roaring their readiness to avenge,

35 As far inland as Stourton Tower,
And Camelot, and starlit Stonehenge.⁸

April 1914 1914

6. Part of a church nearest the altar.

the legendary King Arthur’s court, has been vari-

7. Cow pastured on the glebe, a piece of land

ously associated with Winchester and with certain attached to a vicarage or rectory.

places in Somersetshire. Stonehenge is a circular

8. Stourton Tower, built in 1772, and locally grouping of megalithic monuments on Salisbury known as “Alfred’s Tower,” stands on the highest Plain, Wiltshire, dating back to the late Neolithic point of the estate of Stourhead, in Wiltshire, close or early Bronze Age.

to the Somersetshire border. Camelot, the seat of

UNDER THE WATERFALL / 1159

Under the Waterfall

“Whenever I plunge my arm, like this,

In a basin of water, I never miss

The sweet sharp sense of a fugitive day

Fetched back from its thickening shroud of grey.

5 Hence the only prime

And real love-rhyme

That I know by heart,

And that leaves no smart,

Is the purl⁹ of a little valley fall

10 About three spans wide and two spans tall

Over a table of solid rock

And into a scoop of the self-same block;

The purl of a runlet that never ceases

In stir of kingdoms, in wars, in peaces;

15 With a hollow boiling voice it speaks

And has spoken since hills were turfless peaks.”

“And why gives this the only prime Idea to you of a real love-rhyme?
And why does plunging your arm in a bowl
20 Full of spring water, bring throbs to your soul?”

“Well, under the fall, in a crease of the stone,
Though where precisely none ever has known,
Jammed darkly, nothing to show how prized,
And by now with its smoothness opalized,
25 Is a drinking-glass:

For, down that pass

My lover and I

Walked under a sky

Of blue with a leaf-wove awning of green,

30 In the burn of August, to paint the scene,

And we placed our basket of fruit and wine

By the runlet’s rim, where we sat to dine;

And when we had drunk from the glass together,

Arched by the oak-copse⁰ from the weather,

-thicket

35 I held the vessel to rinse in the fall,

Where it slipped, and sank, and was past recall,

Though we stooped and plumbed the little abyss

With long bared arms. There the glass still is.

And, as said, if I thrust my arm below

40 Cold water in basin or bowl, a thro^e

violent -pang

From the past awakens a sense of that time,

And the glass we used, and the cascade’s rhyme.

The basin seems the pool, and its edge
The hard smooth face of the brook-side ledge,
9. Flow with a murmuring sound.
1 1 6 0 / T H O M A S H A R D Y
45 And the leafy pattern of china-ware
The hanging plants that were bathing there.
“By night, by day, when it shines or lours,⁰ darkens
There lies intact that chalice of ours,
And its presence adds to the rhyme of love
50 Persistently sung by the fall above.
No lip has touched it since his and mine
In turns therefrom sipped lovers’ wine.” 1914

The Voice

Woman much missed, how you call to me, call to me,
Saying that now you are not as you were
When you had changed from the one who was all to me,
But as at first, when our day was fair.
5 Can it be you that I hear? Let me view you, then,
Standing as when I drew near to the town
Where you would wait for me: yes, as I knew you then,
Even to the original air-blue gown!
Or is it only the breeze, in its listlessness
io Travelling across the wet mead⁰ to me here,
meadow
You being ever dissolved to wan wistlessness,⁰ heedlessness
Heard no more again far or near?

Thus I; faltering forward,
Leaves around me falling,
15 Wind oozing thin through the thorn from norward, northward

And the woman calling.

December 1912 1914

During Wind and Rain

They sing their dearest songs—

He, she, all of them—yea,

Treble and tenor and bass,

And one to play;

5 With the candles mooning⁰ each face... . lighting

Ah, no; the years O!

How the sick leaves reel down in throngs!

They clear the creeping moss—

Elders and juniors—aye,

IN TIME OF "THE BREAKING OF NATIONS"
" / 1 1 6 1

Making the pathways neat

And the garden gay;

And they build a shady seat... .

Ah, no; the years, the years;

See, the white storm-birds wing across.

They are blithely⁰ breakfasting all— cheerfully

Men and maidens—yea,

Under the summer tree,

With a glimpse of the bay,

While pet fowl come to the knee... .

Ah, no; the years O!

And the rotten rose is ript from the wall.
They change to a high new house,
He, she, all of them—aye,
Clocks and carpets and chairs
On the lawn all day,
And brightest things that are theirs... .
Ah, no; the years, the years
Down their carved names the rain-drop ploughs.

1 9 1 7

In Time of “The Breaking of Nations”¹

i

Only a man harrowing⁰ clods⁰ cultivating / earth

In a slow silent walk

With an old horse that stumbles and nods

Half asleep as they stalk.

5 Only thin smoke without flame

From the heaps of couch-grass;

Yet this will go onward the same

Though Dynasties pass.

3

Yonder a maid and her wight⁰ man

io Come whispering by:

War’s annals will cloud into night

Ere their story die.

1 9 1 5 1 9 1 6

1. Cf. Jeremiah 51.20: “Thou art my battle ax and weapons of war: for with thee will I break in pieces the nations, and with thee will I destroy kingdoms.”

1 1 6 2 / S I D N E Y L A N I E R

Afterwards

When the Present has latched its postern⁰ behind my back gate

tremulous stay

And the May month flaps its glad green leaves like wings,

Delicate-filmed as new-spun silk, will the neighbours say,

“He was a man who used to notice such things”?

5 If it be in the dusk when, like an eyelid’s soundless blink,

The dewfall-hawk comes crossing the shades to alight

Upon the wind-warped upland thorn, a gazer may think,

“To him this must have been a familiar sight.”

If I pass during some nocturnal blackness, mothy and warm,

10 When the hedgehog travels furtively over the lawn,

One may say, “He strove that such innocent creatures should come to no harm,

But he could do little for them; and now he is gone.”

If, when hearing that I have been stilled at last, they stand at the door,

Watching the full-starred heavens that winter sees,

15 Will this thought rise on those who will meet my face no more,

“He was one who had an eye for such mysteries”?

And will any say when my bell of quittance is heard in the gloom,

And a crossing breeze cuts a pause in its outrollings,

Till they rise again, as they were a new bell’s boom,

20 “He hears it not now, but used to notice such things”?

1 9 1 7

SIDNEY LANIER

1842-1881

From the Flats¹

What heartache—ne'er a hill!

Inexorable, vapid, vague, and chill

The drear sand-levels drain my spirit low.

With one poor word they tell me all they know;

5 Whereat their stupid tongues, to tease my pain,

Do drawl it o'er again and o'er again.

They hurt my heart with griefs I cannot name:

Always the same, the same.

1. Written in Tampa, Florida; Lanier was from Georgia.

THE MARSHES OF GLYNN / 1163

Nature hath no surprise,

10 No ambushade⁰ of beauty 'gainst mine eyes

ambush

From brake or lurking dell or deep defile;⁰

narrow pass

No humors, frolic forms—this mile, that mile;

No rich reserves or happy-valley hopes

Beyond the bends of roads, the distant slopes.

15 Her fancy fails, her wild is all run tame:

Ever the same, the same.

Oh, might I through these tears

But glimpse some hill my Georgia high uprears,

Where white the quartz and pink the pebble shine,

20 The hickory heavenward strives, the muscadine⁰ grapevine

Swings o'er the slope, the oak's far-falling shade

Darkens the dogwood in the bottom glade,

And down the hollow from a ferny nook

Bright leaps a living brook!

1 8 7 7

The Marshes of Glynn²

Glooms of the live-oaks,³ beautiful-braided and woven

With intricate shades of the vines that myriad-cloven

Clamber the forks of the multiform boughs,—

Emerald twilights,—

5 Virginal shy lights,

Wrought of the leaves to allure to the whisper of vows,

When lovers pace timidly down through the green colonnades

Of the dim sweet woods, of the dear dark woods,

Of the heavenly woods and glades,

io That run to the radiant marginal sand-beach within

The wide sea-marshes of Glynn;—

Beautiful glooms, soft dusks in the noon-day fire,—

Wildwood privacies, closets of lone desire,

Chamber from chamber parted with wavering arras⁰ of tapestry

leaves,—

15 Cells for the passionate pleasure of prayer to the soul that grieves,

Pure with a sense of the passing of saints through the wood,

Cool for the dutiful weighing of ill with good;—

O braided dusks of the oak and woven shades of the vine,

While the riotous noon-day sun of the June-day long did shine,

20 Ye held me fast in your heart and I held you fast in mine;

But now when the noon is no more, and riot is rest,

And the sun is a-wait at the ponderous gate of the West,

And the slant yellow beam down the wood-aisle doth seem

2. Glynn County, Georgia.

3. Evergreen oaks, indigenous to the American South.

1164 / SIDNEY LANIER

Like a lane into heaven that leads from a dream,—

25 Ay, now, when my soul all day hath drunken the soul of the oak,

And my heart is at ease from men, and the wearisome sound of the stroke

Of the scythe of time and the trowel of trade is low,

And belief overmasters doubt, and I know that I know,

And my spirit is grown to a lordly great compass within,

30 That the length arid the breadth and the sweep of the marshes of

Glynn

Will work me no fear like the fear they have wrought me of yore

When length was fatigue, and when breadth was but bitterness

sore,

And when terror and shrinking and dreary unnamable pain

Drew over me out of the merciless miles of the plain,—

35 Oh, now, unafraid, I am fain⁴ to face

The vast sweet visage of space.

To the edge of the wood I am drawn, I am drawn,

Where the gray beach glimmering runs, as a belt of the dawn,

For a mete⁰ and a mark measure

40 To the forest-dark:—

So:

Affable live-oak, leaning low,—

Thus—with your favor—soft, with a reverent hand,
(Not lightly touching your person, Lord of the land!)

45 Bending your beauty aside, with a step I stand

On the firm-packed sand,

Free

By a world of marsh that borders a world of sea.

Sinuuous southward and sinuuous northward the shimmering band

50 Of the sand-beach fastens the fringe of the marsh to the folds of the land.

Inward and outward to northward and southward the beachlines linger

and curl

As a silver-wrought garment that clings to and follows the firm sweet

limbs of a girl.

Vanishing, swerving, evermore curving again into sight,

Softly the sand-beach wavers away to a dim gray looping of light.

55 And what if behind me to westward the wall of the woods stands

high?

The world lies east: how ample, the marsh and the sea and
the

sky!

A league⁵ and a league of marsh-grass, waist-high, broad in the blade,

Green, and all of a height, and unflecked with a light or a shade,

Stretch leisurely off, in a pleasant plain,

60 To the terminal blue of the main.0 sea

Oh, what is abroad in the marsh and the terminal sea?

Somehow my soul seems suddenly free

From the weighing of fate and the sad discussion of sin,

By the length and the breadth and the sweep of the marshes of

Glynn.

4. I would like.

5. An English unit of about three miles.

THE MARSHES OF GLYNN / 1 1 6 5

Ye marshes, how candid and simple and nothing-withholding and free

Ye publish yourselves to the sky and offer yourselves to the sea!

Tolerant plains, that suffer the sea and the rains and the sun,

Ye spread and span like the catholic⁶ man who hath mightily won

God out of knowledge and good out of infinite pain

And sight out of blindness and purity out of a stain.

As the marsh-hen secretly builds on the watery sod,

Behold I will build me a nest on the greatness of God:

I will fly in the greatness of God as the marsh-hen flies

In the freedom that fills all the space 'twixt the marsh and the skies:

By so many roots as the marsh-grass sends in the sod
I will heartily lay me a-hold on the greatness of God:
Oh, like to the greatness of God is the greatness within
The range of the marshes, the liberal marshes of Glynn.
And the sea lends large, as the marsh: lo, out of his plenty the
sea
Pours fast: full soon the time of the flood-tide must be:
Look how the grace of the sea doth go
About and about through the intricate channels that flow
Here and there,
Everywhere,
Till his waters have flooded the uttermost creeks and the low-lying lanes,
And the marsh is meshed with a million veins,
That like as with rosy and silvery essences flow
In the rose-and-silver evening glow.
Farewell, my lord Sun!
The creeks overflow: a thousand rivulets run
'Twixt the roots of the sod; the blades of the marsh-grass stir;
Passeth a hurrying sound of wings that westward whirr;
Passeth, and all is still; and the currents cease to run;
And the sea and the marsh are one.
How still the plains of the waters be!
The tide is in his ecstasy.
The tide is at his highest height:
And it is night.
And now from the Vast of the Lord will the waters of sleep
Roll in on the souls of men,

But who will reveal to our waking ken range of vision

The forms that swim and the shapes that creep

Under the waters of sleep?

And I would I could know what swimmeth below when the tide

comes in

105 On the length and the breadth of the marvellous marshes
of Glynn.

1 8 7 8

Broad-minded.

1 1 6 6

GERARD MANLEY H O P K I N S

1844-1889

God's Grandeur

The world is charged with the grandeur of God.

It will flame out, like shining from shook foil;¹

It gathers to a greatness, like the ooze of oil

Crushed.² Why do men then now not reckon his rod?

5 Generations have trod, have trod, have trod;

And all is seared with trade; bleared, smeared with toil;

And wears man's smudge and shares man's smell: the soil

Is bare now, nor can foot feel, being shod.

And for⁰ all this, nature is never spent; despite

io There lives the dearest freshness deep down things;

And though the last lights off the black West went

Oh, morning, at the brown brink eastward, springs—

Because the Holy Ghost over the bent

World broods with warm breast and with ah! bright wings.

1 8 7 7 1 8 9 5

The Windhover³

To Christ Our Lord

I caught this morning morning's minion,⁰ king- darling, favorite dom of daylight's dauphin,⁴ dapple-dawn-drawn Falcon, in his riding

Of the rolling level underneath him steady air, and striding

High there, how he rung upon⁵ the rein of a wimpling⁰ wing rippling

⁵ In his ecstasy! then off, off forth on swing,

As a skate's heel sweeps smooth on a bow-bend: the hurl and gliding

Rebuffed the big wind. My heart in hiding

Stirred for a bird,—the achieve of, the mastery of the thing!

Brute beauty and valour and act, oh, air, pride, plume, here

io Buckle!⁶ AND the fire that breaks from thee then, a billion

Times told lovelier, more dangerous, O my chevalier!⁷

1. In a letter of 1883, Hopkins writes: "I mean foil

5. Circled at the end of.

in its sense of leaf or tinsel, and no other word

6. "Buckle" brings to a focus the elements of line whatever will give the effect I want. Shaken gold-

9, both in their literal sense, as descriptive of a foil gives off broad glares like sheet lightning and single, sudden movement of the airborne bird, and also, and this is true of nothing else, owing to its

in their symbolic sense as descriptive of Christ and zigzag dints and crossings and network of small with further reference to the poet and the lesson many cornered facets, a sort of fork lightning too.”

he draws from his observation. It may be read as

2. I.e., as when olives are crushed for their oil.

either indicative or imperative, and in one or

3. The kestrel, a small hawk, that hovers with its another of its possible meanings: “to fasten,” “to head to the wind.

join closely,” “to equip for battle,” “to grapple with,

4. The eldest son of the king of France was called engage,” but also “to cause to bend, give way,

the dauphin: hence the word here means “heir to crumple.”

a splendid, kingly condition.”

7. Knight, nobleman, champion.

[A s K I N G F I S H E R S C A T C H F I R E , D R A G O
N F L I E S D R A W F L A M E] / 1 1 6 7

No wonder of it: sheer plod makes plough down sillion⁸

Shine, and blue-bleak embers, ah my dear,

Fall, gall^o themselves, and gash gold-vermilion. break the surface of 1877 1918

Pied⁹ Beauty

Glory be to God for dappled things—

For skies of couple-colour as a brinded^o cow; brindled

For rose-moles all in stipple upon trout that swim;

Fresh-firecoal chestnut-falls;¹ finches’ wings;

5 Landscape plotted and pieced—fold, fallow, and plough;²

And all trades, their gear and tackle and trim.^o equipment

All things counter,0 original, spare,0 strange; contrary / rare
Whatever is fickle, freckled (who knows how?)
With swift, slow; sweet, sour; adazzle, dim;
io He fathers-forth whose beauty is past change:
Praise him.

1877 1918

[As Kingfishers Catch Fire, Dragonflies Draw Flame]3

As kingfishers catch fire, dragonflies draw flame;
As tumbled over rim in roundy wells
Stones ring; like each tucked0 string tells, each hung touched, plucked bell's

Bow swung finds tongue to fling out broad its name;
5 Each mortal thing does one thing and the same:
Deals out that being indoors each one dwells;4
Selves5—goes itself; myself it speaks and spells, Crying What I do is me: for that I came.

I say more: the just man justices;
io Keeps grace: that keeps all his goings graces;
Acts in God's eye what in God's eye he is—Christ. For Christ plays in ten thousand places, Lovely in limbs, and lovely in eyes not his
To the Father through the features of men's faces.

1877 1918

8. Ridge between two furrows of a plowed field.
by reason of its several uses, as for pasture, or being 9. Having two or more colors, in patches or left fallow for a season, or being plowed and sown.

blotches.

3. I.e., as their bright colors flash in the light.

1. In his Journals, Hopkins writes of “chestnuts as

4. I.e., gives utterance to the essential nature that bright as coals or spots of vermilion.”

dwells within (“indoors”) each individual being.

2. The land makes a pattern of varicolored patches

5. I.e., gives being to its own individuality.

1 1 6 8 / G E R A R D M A N L E Y H O P K I N S

Felix Randal

Felix Randal the farrier,⁰ O is he dead then? my duty all blacksmith

ended,

Who have watched his mould of man, big-boned and hardy-handsome

Pining, pining, till time when reason rambled in it and some Fatal four disorders, fleshed there, all contended?

5 Sickness broke him. Impatient, he cursed at first, but mended Being anointed⁶ and all; though a heavenlier heart began some Months earlier, since I had our sweet reprieve and ransom Tendered to him.⁷ Ah well, God rest him all road ever he offended!⁸

This seeing the sick endears them to us, us too it endears.

10 My tongue had taught thee comfort, touch had quenched
thy tears,

Thy tears that touched my heart, child, Felix, poor Felix Randal;

How far from then forethought of, all thy more boisterous
years,

When thou at the random⁹ grim forge, powerful amidst peers,

Didst fettle¹ for the great grey drayhorse his bright and battering sandal!

1 8 8 0 1 9 1 8

Spring and Fall

To a Young Child

Margaret, are you grieving

Over Goldengrove unleaving?

Leaves, like the things of man, you

With your fresh thoughts care for, can you?

5 Ah! as the heart grows older

It will come to such sights colder

By and by, nor spare a sigh

Though worlds of wanwood leafmeal² lie;

And yet you will weep and know why.

io Now no matter, child, the name:

Sorrow's springs are the same.

Nor mouth had, no nor mind, expressed

What heart heard of, ghost⁰ guessed: spirit, soul

It is the blight man was born for,

15 It is Margaret you mourn for.

1880

1 8 9 3

6. Having received the sacrament for the dying.

1. To prepare (the horse's shoe).

7. I.e., since I had a priest visit him to hear his

2. Coined by Hopkins by analogy with -piecemeal confession and give absolution.

and meaning "leaf by leaf" or "leaf mold"—in the

8. I.e., for any way in which he may have offended.

first sense, the foliage lies about the grove, having

9. Ramshackle, as applied to the forge itself; but fallen leaf by leaf; in the second, foliage gradually also meaning that the man's life as a blacksmith

decays to leaf mold. Wanwood: "pale" or "dim"— was merely one casual earthly life as opposed to the groves are pale because of their light-colored

the sure way of Christian salvation.

autumn foliage, or dim because of the filtered light.

[N O W O R S T , T H E R E I S N O N E . P I T C H E D P A S T P I T C H O F G R I E F] / 1 1 6 9

[Carrion Comfort]

Not, I'll not, carrion³ comfort, Despair, not feast on thee;

Not untwist—slack they may be—these last strands of man

In me or, most weary, cry I can no more. I can;

Can something, hope, wish day come, not choose not to be.

5 But ah, but O thou terrible, why wouldst thou rude^o on me roughly

Thy wring-world right foot⁴ rock? lay a lionlimb against me?
scan

With darksome devouring eyes my bruised bones? and fan,

O in turns of tempest, me heaped there; me frantic to avoid thee

and flee?

Why? That my chaff might fly; my grain lie, sheer and clear, io Nay in all that toil, that coil,^o since (seems) I kissed the rod, tumult Hand⁵ rather, my heart lo! lapped strength, stole joy,

would laugh, cheer.

Cheer whom though? The hero whose heaven-handling flung
me,

foot trod

Me? or me that fought him? O which one? is it each one? That night, that year

Of now done darkness I wretch lay wrestling with (my God!)
my God.

1885

1918

[No Worst, There Is None. Pitched Past Pitch of Grief]

No worst, there is none. Pitched past pitch of grief,

More pangs will, schooled at forepangs, wilder wring.

Comforter, where, where is your comforting?

Mary, mother of us, where is your relief?

5 My cries heave, herds-long; huddle in a main, a chief-woe, world-sorrow; on an age-old anvil wince and sing—

Then lull, then leave off. Fury had shrieked “No lingering! Let me be fell:0 force0 I must be brief”. fierce / perforce
O the mind, mind has mountains; cliffs of fall

io Frightful, sheer, no-man-fathomed. Hold them cheap

May who ne'er hung there. Nor does long our small Durance0 deal with that steep or deep. Here! creep, endurance

Wretch, under a comfort serves in a whirlwind: all

Life death does end and each day dies with sleep.

1885

1 9 1 8

3. Dead and putrefying flesh.

writhe or twist.

4. I.e., the foot capable of causing the world to

5. I.e., the hand that wields the rod.

1 1 7 0 / G E R A R D M A N L E Y H O P K I N S

[I Wake and Feel the Fell of Dark, Not Day]

I wake and feel the fell⁶ of dark, not day.

What hours, O what black hours we have spent

This night! what sights you, heart, saw; ways you went!

And more must, in yet longer light's delay.

5

With witness I speak this. But where I say

Hours I mean years, mean life. And my lament

Is cries countless, cries like dead^o letters sent undelivered

To dearest him that lives alas! away.

I am gall, I am heartburn. God's most deep decree

10

Bitter would have me taste: my taste was me;

Bones built in me, flesh filled, blood brimmed the curse.

Selfyeast of spirit a dull dough sours. I see

The lost are like this, and their scourge to be

As I am mine, their sweating selves, but worse.

1 8 8 5

1 9 1 8

[My Own Heart Let Me More Have Pity On]

My own heart let me more have pity on; let

Me live to my sad self hereafter kind,

Charitable; not live this tormented mind

With this tormented mind tormenting yet.

5

I cast for comfort I can no more get

By groping round my comfortless, than blind

Eyes in their dark can day or thirst can find

Thirst's all-in-all in all a world of wet.⁷

Soul, self; come, poor Jackself,⁸ I do advise 10

You, jaded, let be; call off thoughts awhile

Elsewhere; leave comfort root-room;⁹ let joy size^o grow

6. Can be read in a number of senses: as “the hide though they are surrounded by “wet.” “World” is or hairy skin of a beast,” or, in an obsolete or rare common to all three instances: the speaker’s “comfortless” world, the blind eyes’ “dark” world, the cor” [O.E.D.], or possibly as the adjective fell—“world of wet” in which the shipwrecked are adrift. fierce, savage, cruel—used as a noun.

8. The humble self—“Jack” used in a pitying, deprecating sense (as in “jack-of-all-trades”).

7. I.e., as shipwrecked persons adrift without drinking water cannot quench their thirst, even

9. Room for its roots to grow.

9. Room for its roots to grow.

THAT NATURE IS A HERACLITEAN FIRE / 1171

At God knows when to God knows what;¹ whose smile

's not wrung,² see you; unforeseen times rather—as skies

Between pie mountains³—lights a lovely mile.

1885 1918

That Nature is a Heraclitean Fire⁴ and of the comfort of the Resurrection

Cloud-puffball, torn tufts, tossed pillows | flaunt forth, then

chevy^o on an air- race, scamper

built thoroughfare: heaven-roysterers, in gay-gangs⁵ | they throng;

they glitter in marches.

Down roughcast,⁶ down dazzling whitewash, | wherever an elm arches,

Shivelights and shadowtackle⁷ in long | lashes lace, lance, and pair.

⁵ Delightfully the bright wind boisterous | ropes, wrestles,
beats earth bare Of yestertempest's creases; | in pool and rutpeel parches⁸

Squandering ooze to squeezed | dough, crust, dust; stanches, starches

Squadroned masks and manmarks | treadmire toil there

Footfretted in it. Million-fueled, | nature's bonfire burns on.

io But quench her bonniest, dearest | to her, her clearest-selved spark

Man, how fast his firedint,⁹ | his mark on mind, is gone!

Both are in an unfathomable, all is in an enormous dark

Drowned. O pity and indig | nation! Manshape, that shone

Sheer off, disseveral,^o a star, | death blots black out; separate
nor mark

¹⁵ Is any of him at all so stark

But vastness blurs and time | beats level. Enough! the Resurrection,

A heart's-clarion!^o Away grief's gasping, | joyless days, - trumpet

dejection.

Across my foundering deck shone

A beacon, an eternal beam. | Flesh fade, and mortal trash
20 Fall to the residuary worm; | world's wildfire, leave but ash:
In a flash, at a trumpet crash,
I am at once what Christ is, | since he was what I am, and
This Jack,¹ joke, poor potsherd, | patch, matchwood, immortal diamond,
Is immortal diamond.

1888 1918

1. I.e., at unpredictable times until it reaches an

6. A mixture of lime and gravel used to coat walls.

unpredictable condition.

7. Shadows in complicated shapes, as of ship's

2. Cannot be forced, but must come as it will.

ropes, tackle, gear. Shivelights: light in splinters,

3. The brightness of skies, seen between mounfragments.

tains, makes a variegated patterning of light and

8. I.e., in pool and rutpeel [ruts described as dark. Betweenpie: verb coined by Hopkins based peeled places] the bright wind parches.

on the adjective pied (see "Pied Beauty," above).

9. Hopkins's compound, meaning the mark made

4. Heraclitus (ca. 540-ca. 480 B.C.E.), founder of by the flame of humanity's spirit, the spirit's power an important school of pre-Socratic philosophy, to make its mark.

taught that all is in flux and that the world had its

1. Common mortal (like "poor Jackself" in "My origin in fire and will end in fire.

Own Heart Let Me More Have Pity On,” above).

5. Sky-swaggerers, in carefree groups.

1 1 7 2 / E M M A L A Z A R U S

[Thou Art Indeed Just, Lord ...]

*Justus quidem tu es, Domine, si disputem tecum: verumtamen
justa loquar ad te: Quare via impiorum prosperatur? & c.2*

Thou art indeed just, Lord, if I contend

With thee; but, sir, so what I plead is just.

Why do sinners' ways prosper? and why must Disappointment all I endeavour end?

5 Wert thou my enemy, O thou my friend,

How wouldst thou worse, I wonder, than thou dost

Defeat, thwart me? Oh, the sots and thralls of lust

Do in spare hours more thrive than I that spend,

Sir, life upon thy cause. See, banks and brakes⁰ thickets

10 Now, leaved how thick! laced they are again

With fretty chervil,³ look, and fresh wind shakes

Them; birds build—but not I build; no, but strain,

Time's eunuch, and not breed one work that wakes.

Mine, O thou lord of life, send my roots rain.

1 8 8 9 1 8 9 3

EMMA LAZARUS

1849-1887

The New Colossus¹

Not like the brazen giant of Greek fame,

With conquering limbs astride from land to land;

Here at our sea-washed, sunset gates shall stand

A mighty woman with a torch, whose flame
5 Is the imprisoned lightning, and her name
Mother of Exiles. From her beacon-hand
Glow world-wide welcome; her mild eyes command
The air-bridged harbor that twin cities frame.

“Keep, ancient lands, your storied pomp!” cries she io With silent lips. “Give me your tired, your poor,
Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free,
The wretched refuse of your teeming shore.

2. The Latin epigraph, Hopkins’s original title, is tion; later its final lines were engraved on the ped-from the Vulgate version of Jeremiah 12.1; the first estal. Lazarus contrasts the Statue of Liberty with three lines of the poem translate it. The “& c” indithe Colossus of Rhodes, one of the Seven Wonders cates that the whole of Jeremiah 12 is relevant to of the World, a statue to the sun god, Helios, that the poem, which, while it does not continue to stood in the harbor at Rhodes, Greece. Contrary translate it directly, parallels it frequently.

to legend that dates from the Middle Ages, the
3. An herb of the carrot or parsley family, with statue could not have straddled the harbor curled leaves.

entrance (line 2).

1. Written as part of a fundraising campaign for

2. The splendors of your history. Twin cities: New the Statue of Liberty, in New York harbor. The York City and Jersey City, New Jersey.

poem was recited in 1866 at the statue's dedica-

R E V E I L L E / 1 1 7 3

Send these, the homeless, tempest-tost^o to me, -tossed

I lift my lamp beside the golden door!"

1883 1888

A. E. H O U S M A N

1859-1936

Loveliest of Trees, the Cherry Now

Loveliest of trees, the cherry now

Is hung with bloom along the bough,

And stands about the woodland ride

Wearing white for Eastertide.

5 Now, of my threescore years and ten,

Twenty will not come again,

And take from seventy springs a score,

It only leaves me fifty more.

And since to look at things in bloom

io Fifty springs are little room,

About the woodlands I will go

To see the cherry hung with snow.

1 8 9 6

Reveille

Wake: the silver dusk returning

Up the beach of darkness brims,

And the ship of sunrise burning

Strands upon the eastern rims.

5 Wake: the vaulted shadow shatters,

Trampled to the floor it spanned,
And the tent of night in tatters
Straws⁰ the sky-pavilioned land. strews
Up, lad, up, 'tis late for lying:
io Hear the drums of morning play;
Hark, the empty highways crying
“Who'll beyond the hills away?”
Towns and countries woo together,
Forelands beacon, belfries call;
1 1 7 4 / A . E . H O U S M A N
15 Never lad that trod on leather Lived to feast his heart with all.
Up, lad; thews⁰ that lie and cumber limbs
Sunlit pallets never thrive;
Morns abed and daylight slumber
20 Were not meant for man alive.
Clay lies still, but blood's a rover;
Breath's a ware that will not keep.
Up, lad: when the journey's over
There'll be time enough to sleep.
1 8 9 6

When I Watch the Living Meet
When I watch the living meet,
And the moving pageant file
Warm and breathing through the street
Where I lodge a little while,
5 If the heats of hate and lust
In the house of flesh are strong,

Let me mind the house of dust
Where my sojourn shall be long.
In the nation that is not io Nothing stands that stood before;
There revenges are forgot,
And the hater hates no more;
Lovers lying two and two
Ask not whom they sleep beside,
15 And the bridegroom all night through Never turns him to the bride.

1 8 9 6

To an Athlete Dying Young
The time you won your town the race
We chaired you through the market-place;
Man and boy stood cheering by,
And home we brought you shoulder-high.

5 Today, the road all runners come,
Shoulder-high we bring you home,

I s M Y T E A M P L O U G H I N G / 1 1 7 5

A n d s e t y o u a t y o u r t h r e s h o l d d o w n ,

T o w n s m a n o f a s t i l l e r t o w n .

S m a r t l a d , t o s l i p b e t i m e s a w a y

10 F r o m f i e l d s w h e r e g l o r y d o e s n o t s t a y

A n d e a r l y t h o u g h t t h e l a u r e l g r o w s

I t w i t h e r s q u i c k e r t h a n t h e r o s e .

E y e s t h e s h a d y n i g h t h a s s h u t

C a n n o t s e e t h e r e c o r d c u t , ° b r o k e n

15 A n d s i l e n c e s o u n d s n o w o r s e t h a n c h e e r s

After earth has s t o p p e d the ears:
N o w you will not swell the rout^o crowd
Of lads that w o r e their h o n o u r s out,
Runners w h o m r e n o w n outran
20 A n d the n a m e died before t h e m a n .
So set, before its e c h o e s fade,
T h e fleet foot on the sill of shade,
A n d hold to the low lintel up
T h e still-defended c h a l l e n g e - c u p .
25 A n d round that early-laurelled¹ h e a d
Will flock to gaze the strengthless dead,
And find u n w i t h e r e d on its curls
T h e garland briefer than a girl's.

1 8 9 6

Is My Team Ploughing

“Is my t e a m p l o u g h i n g ,
T h a t I was u s e d to drive
A n d hear t h e h a r n e s s jingle
W h e n I w a s m a n alive?”
5 Ay, t h e horses trample,
T h e harness jingles now;
N o c h a n g e t h o u g h you lie u n d e r
T h e land y o u u s e d to plough.

“Is football playing io A l o n g t h e river shore,
W i t h lads to c h a s e t h e leather,
N o w I stand up no more?”
Ay, the ball is flying,

T h e l a d s p l a y h e a r t a n d s o u l ;

1. In ancient Greece and Rome, victorious athletes wore laurel wreaths as crowns.

1 1 7 6 / A . E . H O U S M A N

15 T h e g o a l s t a n d s u p , t h e k e e p e r

S t a n d s u p t o k e e p t h e g o a l .

“I s m y g i r l h a p p y ,

T h a t I t h o u g h t h a r d t o l e a v e ,

A n d h a s s h e t i r e d o f w e e p i n g

20 A s s h e l i e s d o w n a t e v e ? ”

A y , s h e l i e s d o w n l i g h t l y ,

S h e l i e s n o t d o w n t o w e e p :

Y o u r g i r l i s w e l l c o n t e n t e d .

B e s t i l l , m y l a d , a n d s l e e p .

25 “I s m y f r i e n d h e a r t y ,

N o w I a m t h i n a n d p i n e ,

A n d h a s h e f o u n d t o s l e e p i n

A b e t t e r b e d t h a n m i n e ? ”

Y e s , l a d , I l i e e a s y ,

30 I l i e a s l a d s w o u l d c h o o s e ;

I c h e e r a d e a d m a n ‘ s s w e e t h e a r t ,

N e v e r a s k m e w h o s e .

1 8 9 6

On Wenlock Edge² the Wood's in Trouble

O n W e n l o c k E d g e t h e w o o d ‘ s i n t r o u b l e ;

H i s f o r e s t f l e e c e t h e W r e k i n ³ h e a v e s ;

T h e g a l e , i t p l i e s t h e s a p l i n g s d o u b l e ,

A n d t h i c k o n S e v e r n ⁴ s n o w t h e l e a v e s .

5 'T w o u l d b l o w l i k e t h i s t h r o u g h h o l t a n d h a n g e r 5

W h e n U r i c o n 6 t h e c i t y s t o o d :

'T i s t h e o l d w i n d i n t h e o l d a n g e r ,

B u t t h e n i t t h r e s h e d a n o t h e r w o o d .

T h e n , ' t w a s b e f o r e m y t i m e , t h e R o m a n

i o A t y o n d e r h e a v i n g h i l l w o u l d s t a r e :

T h e b l o o d t h a t w a r m s a n E n g l i s h y e o m a n ,

T h e t h o u g h t s t h a t h u r t h i m , t h e y w e r e t h e r e .

T h e r e , l i k e t h e w i n d t h r o u g h w o o d s i n r i o t ,

T h r o u g h h i m t h e g a l e o f l i f e b l e w h i g h ;

15 T h e t r e e o f m a n w a s n e v e r q u i e t :

T h e n ' t w a s t h e R o m a n , n o w ' t i s I .

2. A range of hills in Shropshire.

5. A holt is a wood or wooded hill; a hanger is a

3. A prominent, isolated hill in Shropshire.

steep wooded slope.

4. The Severn River, which flows past the Wrekin

6. The Roman town Uriconium, on the site of the and into Wales.

modern town of Wroxeter, Shropshire.

” T E R E N C E , T H I S I S S T U P I D S T U F F ... ” /

1 1 7 7

The gale, it plies the saplings double,

It blows so hard, 'twill soon be gone:

To-day the Roman and his trouble

Are ashes under Uricon.

1 8 9 6

From Far, from Eve and Morning

From far, from eve and morning
And yon twelve-winded sky,⁷
The stuff of life to knit me
Blew hither: here am I.
5 Now—for a breath I tarry
Nor yet disperse apart—
Take my hand quick and tell me,
What have you in your heart.
Speak now, and I will answer;
io How shall I help you, say;
Ere to the wind's twelve quarters
I take my endless way.

1 8 9 6

With Rue My Heart Is Laden
With rue my heart is laden
For golden friends I had,
For many a rose-lipt maiden
And many a lightfoot lad.
5 By brooks too broad for leaping
The lightfoot boys are laid;
The rose-lipt girls are sleeping
In fields where roses fade.

1 8 9 6

“Terence,⁸ This Is Stupid Stuff. .

“Terence, this is stupid stuff:

You eat your victuals fast enough;

7. I.e., winds blowing from the twelve compass ume in which this poem appeared The Poems of points. Terence Hearsay.

8. Housman had at first planned to call the vol-

1 1 7 8 / A . E . H O U S M A N

There can't be much amiss, 'tis clear,

To see the rate you drink your beer.

5 But oh, good Lord, the verse you make,

It gives a chap the belly-ache.

The cow, the old cow, she is dead;

It sleeps well, the horned head:

We poor lads, 'tis our turn now

io To hear such tunes as killed the cow.

Pretty friendship 'tis to rhyme

Your friends to death before their time

Moping melancholy mad:

Come, pipe a tune to dance to, lad.”

15 Why, if 'tis dancing you would be,

There's brisker pipes than poetry.

Say, for what were hop-yards meant,

Or why was Burton built on Trent?⁹

Oh many a peer of England brews

20 Livelier liquor than the Muse,¹

And malt does more than Milton can

To justify God's ways to man.²

Ale, man, ale's the stuff to drink

For fellows whom it hurts to think:

25 Look into the pewter pot

To see the world as the world's not.

And faith, 'tis pleasant till 'tis past:

The mischief is that 'twill not last.

Oh I have been to Ludlow³ fair 30 And left my necktie God knows where,
And carried halfway home, or near,
Pints and quarts of Ludlow beer:
Then the world seemed none so bad,
And I myself a sterling lad;
35 And down in lovely muck I've lain,
Happy till I woke again.

Then I saw the morning sky:
Heigho, the tale was all a lie;
The world, it was the old world yet,
40 I was I, my things were wet,
And nothing now remained to do
But begin the game anew.

Therefore, since the world has still Much good, but much less good than ill,
45 And while the sun and moon endure
Luck's a chance, but trouble's sure,
I'd face it as a wise man would,

9. The principal industry of Burton-on-Trent, a over (inspired) epic poetry.

town in Staffordshire, is the brewing of ale. Some

2. An echo of Milton's epic, Paradise Lost (1.25-of the town's nineteenth-century brewery mag-

26): "I may assert Eternal Providence, / And justify

nates were raised to the peerage.

the ways of God to men."

1. In Greek mythology, Calliope, one of the nine

3. A market town in Shropshire.

sister goddesses known as the Muses, presided

A S T R O N O M Y / 1 1 7 9

And train for ill and not for good.

Tis true, the stuff I bring for sale

50 Is not so brisk a brew as ale:

Out of a stem that scored⁰ the hand cut

I wrung it in a weary land.

But take it: if the smack is sour,

The better for the embittered hour;

55 It should do good to heart and head

When your soul is in my soul's stead;

And I will friend you, if I may,

In the dark and cloudy day.

There was a king reigned in the East:

60 There, when kings will sit to feast,

They get their fill before they think

With poisoned meat and poisoned drink.

He gathered all that springs to birth

From the many-venomed earth;

65 First a little, thence to more,

He sampled all her killing store;

And easy, smiling, seasoned sound,

Sate the king when healths went round.

They put arsenic in his meat

70 And stared aghast to watch him eat;

They poured strychnine in his cup

And shook to see him drink it up:

They shook, they stared as white's their shirt:

Them it was their poison hurt.

75 —I tell the tale that I heard told.

Mithridates, he died old.⁴

1 8 9 6

Astronomy

The Wains upon the northern steep

Descends and lifts away.

Oh I will sit me down and weep

For bones in Africa.⁶

5 For pay and medals, name and rank,

Things that he has not found,

He hove the Cross⁷ to heaven and sank

The pole-star underground.

And now he does not even see

io Signs of the nadir⁰ roll lowest point

4. Mithridates VI, king of Pontus (in Asia Minor)

6. Housman's brother Herbert died fighting in the in the first century B.C.E., made himself immune Boer War in 1901.

to certain poisons by taking small, gradual doses.

7. The Southern Cross, a constellation visible

5. The constellation Ursa Minor.

from the southern hemisphere.

1 1 8 0 / A . E . H O U S M A N

At night over the ground where he

Is buried with the pole.

1 9 2 2

Epitaph on an Army of Mercenaries⁸

These, in the day when heaven was falling,
The hour when earth's foundations fled,
Followed their mercenary calling
And took their wages and are dead.

5 Their shoulders held the sky suspended;
They stood, and earth's foundations stay;
What God abandoned, these defended,
And saved the sum of things for pay.

1 9 1 5

1 9 2 2

Crossing Alone the Nighted Ferry

Crossing alone the nighted ferry
With the one coin for fee,⁹ Whom, on the wharf of Lethe waiting,
Count you to find? Not me.

5 The brisk fond lackey to fetch and carry,
The true, sick-hearted slave,
Expect him not in the just city
And free land of the grave.

1 9 3 6

Here Dead Lie We Because We Did Not Choose
Here dead lie we because we did not choose
To live and shame the land from which we sprung.
Life, to be sure, is nothing much to lose;
But young men think it is, and we were young.

1 9 3 6

8. This poem honors the professional soldiers of

9. In Greek mythology, the souls of the dead paid the British regular army who fought in the First World War I. For the Scottish poet Hugh MacDiarmid's reply, "Another Epitaph on an Army of Mercenaries," see p. 1379.

world.

1 1 8 1

RUDYARD K I P L I N G

1865-1936

Tommy1

I went into a public-house to get a pint o' beer, bar

The publican 'e up an' sez, "We serve no red-coats here."
barkeep The girls be'ind the bar they laughed an' giggled fit to die,

I outs into the street again an' to myself sez I:

O it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' "Tommy, go away";

But it's "Thank you, Mister Atkins," when the band begins to play—

The band begins to play, my boys, the band begins to play,

O it's "Thank you, Mister Atkins," when the band begins to play.

I went into a theatre as sober as could be,

io They gave a drunk civilian room, but 'adn't none for me;

They sent me to the gallery or round the music-halls,2

But when it comes to fightin', Lord! they'll shove me in the stalls!

For it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' "Tommy, wait outside";

But it's "Special train for Atkins" when the trooper's on the tide—

15 The troopship's on the tide, my boys, the troopship's on the tide,

O it's "Special train for Atkins" when the trooper's on the tide.

Yes, makin' mock o' uniforms that guard you while you sleep

Is cheaper than them uniforms, an' they're starvation cheap;

An' hustlin' drunken soldiers when they're goin' large a bit

20 Is five times better business than paradin' in full kit.^o equipment

Then it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' "Tommy, 'ow's yer soul?"

But it's "Thin red line of 'eroes"³ when the drums begin to roll—

The drums begin to roll, my boys, the drums begin to roll,

O it's "Thin red line of 'eroes" when the drums begin to roll.

25 We aren't no thin red 'eroes, nor we aren't no blackguards⁰ too, criminals But single men in barricks, most remarkable like you;

An' if sometimes our conduck isn't all your fancy paints,

Why, single men in barricks don't grow into plaster saints;

While it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' "Tommy, fall be'ind,"

30 But it's "Please to walk in front, sir," when there's trouble in the wind—

There's trouble in the wind, my boys, there's trouble in the wind,

O it's "Please to walk in front, sir," when there's trouble in the wind.

You talk o' better food for us, an' schools, an' fires, an' all:

We'll wait for extry rations if you treat us rational.

35 Don't mess about the cook-room slops, but prove it to our face

The Widow's Uniform⁴ is not the soldier-man's disgrace.

1. The typical soldier (British usage, derived from had used the phrase "thin red line tipped with "Thomas Atkins," name used as a model in official steel" to describe the 93rd Highlanders infantry army forms).

regiment as they stood to meet the advancing Rus-

2. Cheaper seats in a theater, in the balcony; the sian cavalry at Balaclava (1854), in the Crimean best seats, in the orchestra, are the stalls (line 12).

War.

3. W. H. Russell, a London Times correspondent,

4. I.e., the queen's uniform. In his poems and sto-

1 1 8 2 / R U D Y A R D K I P L I N G

For it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' "Chuck him out, the brute!"

But it's "Saviour of 'is country" when the guns begin to shoot;

An' it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' anything you please;

40 An' Tommy ain't a bloomin' fool—you bet that Tommy sees!

1 8 9 0

Recessional⁵

18976

God of our fathers, known of old,
Lord of our far-flung battle-line,
Beneath whose awful Hand we hold Dominion over palm and pine—
5 Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!
The tumult and the shouting dies;
The Captains and the Kings depart:
Still stands Thine ancient sacrifice,
io An humble and a contrite heart.⁷
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!
Far-called, our navies melt away;
On dune and headland sinks the fire:⁸
15 Lo, all our pomp of yesterday
Is one with Nineveh and Tyre!⁹
Judge of the Nations, spare us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!
If, drunk with sight of power, we loose
20 Wild tongues that have not Thee in awe,
Such boastings as the Gentiles use,
Or lesser breeds without the Law—¹
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!
25 For heathen heart that puts her trust
In reeking tube and iron shard, ries, Kipling occasionally referred to Q u e e n Vic-7. Cf. Psalms 51.17.

toria as “The Widow at Windsor.”

8. On the night of the anniversary of Victoria’s

5. A piece of music or a hymn to be played or sung accession to the throne, bonfires were lit on high

at the close of a religious service.

points throughout Great Britain.

6. The year of Queen Victoria’s Diamond Jubilee,

9. Nineveh, ancient capital of Assyria, and Tyre, celebrating the sixtieth year of her reign, the occa-

capital of Phoenicia, were once great cities, but

sion serving also to celebrate the great extent, dwindled to ruins and a small town, respectively.

power, and prosperity of the British Empire.

1. Cf. Romans 2.14.

E P I T A P H S O F T H E W A R / 1 1 8 3

All valiant dust that builds on dust,

And guarding, calls not Thee to guard,

For frantic boast and foolish word—

30 Thy mercy on Thy People, Lord!

1 8 9 7 1 8 9 9

Epitaphs of the War

1 9 1 4 - 1 8

“Equality of Sacrifice”

A. “I was a Have.” B. “I was a ‘have-not.’ ”

(Together.) “What hast thou given which I gave not?”

A Servant

We were together since the war began.

He was my servant—and the better man.

A Son

My son was killed while laughing at some jest. I would I knew What it was, and it might serve me in a time when jests are few.

An Only Son

I have slain none except my mother. She (Blessing her slayer) died of grief for me.

Ex-clerk

Pity not! The army gave Freedom to a timid slave:
In which freedom did he find
Strength of body, will, and mind:
5 By which strength he came to prove Mirth, companionship, and love:
For which love to death he went:
In which death he lies content.

The Wonder

Body and spirit I surrendered whole
To harsh instructors—and received a soul ...
If mortal man could change me through and through
From all I was—what may the God not do?

1 1 8 4 / R U D Y A R D K I P L I N G

Hindu Sepoy² in France

This man in his own country prayed we know not to what powers.

We pray them to reward him for his bravery in ours.

The Coward

I could not look on death, which being known,
Men led me to him, blindfold and alone.

Shock

My name, my speech, my self I had forgot.
My wife and children came—I knew them not.
I died. My mother followed. At her call
And on her bosom I remembered all.

A Grave Near Cairo

Gods of the Nile, should this stout fellow here
Get out—get out! He knows not shame nor fear.

Pelicans in the Wilderness

(A GRAVE NEAR HALFA) 3

The blown sand heaps on me, that none may learn
Where I am laid for whom my children grieve... .
O wings that beat at dawning, ye return
Out of the desert to your young at eve!

Two Canadian Memorials

i

We giving all gained all.
Neither lament us nor praise.
Only in all things recall,
It is fear, not death that slays.

2

From little towns in a far land we came,
To save our honour and a world aflame.
By little towns in a far land we sleep;
And trust that world we won for you to keep.

The Favour

Death favoured me from the first, well knowing I could not endure

To wait on him day by day. He quitted my betters and came
2. Native of India employed as soldier under Euro- 3. In the Sudan,
pean (especially British) discipline.

EPITAPHS OF THE WAR / 1185

Whistling over the fields, and, when he had made all sure, “Thy line is at end,” he said, “but at least I have saved its name.”

The Beginner

On the first hour of my first day
In the front trench I fell.
(Children in boxes at a play Stand up to watch it well.)

R.A.F.4 (Aged Eighteen)

Laughing through clouds, his milk-teeth still unshed,
Cities and men he smote from overhead.
His deaths delivered, he returned to play
Childlike, with childish things now put away.

The Refined Man

I was of delicate mind. I stepped aside for my needs, Disdaining the common office. I was seen from afar and killed... .
How is this matter for mirth? Let each man be judged by his deeds.

I have paid my price to live with myself on the terms that I willed.

Native Water-Carrier (M.E.F.)

Prometheus‘5 brought down fire to men.
This brought up water.
The Gods are jealous—now, as then,

Giving no quarter.

Bombed in London

On land and sea I strove with anxious care

To escape conscription. It was in the air!

The Sleepy Sentinel

Faithless the watch that I kept: now I have none to keep.

I was slain because I slept: now I am slain I sleep.

Let no man reproach me again, whatever watch is unkept—

I sleep because I am slain. They slew me because I slept.

Batteries Out of Ammunition

If any mourn us in the workshop, say

We died because the shift kept holiday.

4. Royal Air Force. humanity and was punished by the gods.

M.E.F.

5. In Greek mythology, a Titan who gave fire to Mediterranean Expeditionary Force.

1 1 8 6 / R U D Y A R D K I P L I N G

Common Form

If any question why we died,
Tell them, because our fathers lied.

A Dead Statesman

I could not dig: I dared not rob:
Therefore I lied to please the mob.
Now all my lies are proved untrue
And I must face the men I slew.
5 What tale shall serve me here among Mine angry and defrauded young?

The Rebel

If I had clamoured at Thy gate
For gift of life on earth,
And, thrusting through the souls that wait,
Flung headlong into birth—
5 Even then, even then, for gin and snare
About my pathway spread,
Lord, I had mocked Thy thoughtful care
Before I joined the dead!
But now? ... I was beneath Thy hand
io Ere yet the planets came.
And now—though planets pass, I stand
The witness to Thy shame!

The Obedient

Daily, though no ears attended,
Did my prayers arise.
Daily, though no fire descended,
Did I sacrifice.

5 Though my darkness did not lift,
Though I faced no lighter odds,
Though the Gods bestowed no gift,
Nonetheless,
Nonetheless, I served the Gods!

*A Drifter Off Tarentum*⁶

He from the wind-bitten North with ship and companions descended,
Searching for eggs of death spawned by invisible hulls.
Many he found and drew forth. Of a sudden the fishery ended
In flame and a clamorous breath known to the eye-pecking gulls.

6. Roman name for Taranto, just under the heel of the Italian peninsula.

EPITAPHS OF THE WAR / 1187

Destroyers in Collision

For fog and fate no charm is found
To lighten or amend.
I, hurrying to my bride, was drowned—
Cut down by my best friend.

Convoy Escort

I was a shepherd to fools
Causelessly bold or afraid.
They would not abide by my rules.
Yet they escaped. For I stayed.

Unknown Female Corpse

Headless, lacking foot and hand,
Horrible I come to land.
I beseech all women's sons

Know I was a mother once.

Raped and Revenged

One used and butchered me: another spied
Me broken—for which thing an hundred died.
So it was learned among the heathen hosts
How much a freeborn woman's favour costs.

Salonika⁷ Grave

I have watched a thousand days
Push out and crawl into night
Slowly as tortoises.

Now I, too, follow these.

5 It is fever, and not the fight—
Time, not battle,—that slays.

The Bridegroom

Call me not false, beloved,
If, from thy scarce-known breast
So little time removed,
In other arms I rest.

5 For this more ancient bride,
Whom coldly I embrace,
Was constant at my side
Before I saw thy face.

7. Of Thessalonica (or Salonika), the second largest city in Greece, destroyed by fire in 1917.

1198 / WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS

Our marriage, often set—10 By miracle delayed—
At last is consummate,

And cannot be unmade.
Live, then, whom life shall cure,
15 Almost, of memory,
And leave us to endure
Its immortality.

V.A.D.8 (Mediterranean)

Ah, would swift ships had never been, for then we ne'er had found,

These harsh Aegean⁹ rocks between, this little virgin drowned,

Whom neither spouse nor child shall mourn, but men she nursed through

pain

And—certain keels for whose return the heathen look in vain.

Actors

ON A MEMORIAL TABLET IN HOLY TRINI
TY CHURCH, STRATFORD-ON-AVON 1

We counterfeited once for your disport

Men's joy and sorrow: but our day has passed.

We pray you pardon all where we fell short—

Seeing we were your servants to this last.

Journalists

ON A PANEL IN THE HALL OF THE INSTITU TE OF JOURNALISTS

We have served our day.

1919, 1940

WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS*

1865-1939

The Stolen Child

Where dips the rocky highland

Of Sleuth Wood¹ in the lake,

There lies a leafy island

Where flapping herons wake

8. Voluntary Aid Detachment.

liam Butler Yeats (1940).

9. Aegean Sea, part of the Mediterranean Sea.

1. Place-names throughout the poem refer to the

1. Town in central England where Shakespeare area near Sligo, in the west of Ireland: Rosses Point was born, lived part of his life, and died.

on Sligo Bay, and Glen-Car, a small lake near

*Yeats's poems are arranged here in the order in Sligo.

which they appear in The Collected Poems of Wil-

T H E S T O L E N C H I L D / 1 1 8 9

5 The drowsy water-rats;

There we've hid our faery vats,

Full of berries

And of reddest stolen cherries.

Come away, O human child!

10 To the waters and the wild

With a faery, hand in hand,

For the world's more full of weeping than you can understand.

Where the wave of moonlight glosses

The dim grey sands with light,

15 Far off by furthest Rosses

We foot it all the night,

Weaving olden dances,

Mingling hands and mingling glances

Till the moon has taken flight;

20 To and fro we leap

And chase the frothy bubbles,

While the world is full of troubles

And is anxious in its sleep.

Come away, O human child!

25 To the waters and the wild

With a faery, hand in hand,

For the world's more full of weeping than you can understand.

Where the wandering water gushes

From the hills above Glen-Car,

BO In pools among the rushes

That scarce could bathe a star,

We seek for slumbering trout

And whispering in their ears

Give them unquiet dreams;

35 Leaning softly out

From ferns that drop their tears

Over the young streams.

Come away, O human child!

To the waters and the wild

40 With a faery, hand in hand,

For the world's more full of weeping than you can understand.

Away with us he's going,

The solemn-eyed:

He'll hear no more the lowing

45 Of the calves on the warm hillside

Or the kettle on the hob
Sing peace into his breast,
Or see the brown mice bob
Round and round the oatmeal-chest.
50 For he comes, the human child!
To the waters and the wild
With a faery, hand in hand,
From a world more full of weeping than he can understand.

1 8 8 9

1 1 9 8 / W I L L I A M B U T L E R Y E A T S

The Lake Isle of Innisfree²

I will arise and go now, and go to Innisfree,
And a small cabin build there, of clay and wattles³ made:
Nine bean-rows will I have there, a hive for the honey-bee,
And live alone in the bee-loud glade.

5 And I shall have some peace there, for peace comes dropping slow,

Dropping from the veils of the morning to where the cricket sings;

There midnight's all a glimmer, and noon a purple glow,
And evening full of the linnet's⁰ wings. a songbird's

I will arise and go now, for always night and day

10 I hear lake water lapping with low sounds by the shore;

While I stand on the roadway, or on the pavements grey,

I hear it in the deep heart's core.

1 8 9 0 1 8 9 2

When You Are Old⁴

When you are old and grey and full of sleep,
And nodding by the fire, take down this book,

And slowly read, and dream of the soft look
Your eyes had once, and of their shadows deep;
5 How many loved your moments of glad grace,
And loved your beauty with love false or true,
But one man loved the pilgrim soul in you,
And loved the sorrows of your changing face;
And bending down beside the glowing bars,
io Murmur, a little sadly, how Love fled
And paced upon the mountains overhead
And hid his face amid a crowd of stars.

1 8 9 1 1 8 9 3

Adam's Curse⁵

We sat together at one summer's end,
That beautiful mild woman, your close friend,⁶
And you and I, and talked of poetry.

2. Island in Lough Gill, County Sligo.

candlelight”), but is a free adaptation rather than

3. Rods interwoven with twigs or branches to form a translation.

a framework for walls or roof.

5. After the Fall, God cursed Adam to work the

4. This poem derives from a sonnet by the French ground for his food (Genesis 3.17—19).

poet Pierre de Ronsard (1524—1585) that begins

6. The two women who figure in the poem are “Quand vous serez bien vieille, au soir a la chan-

the Irish nationalist Maud Gonne (whom Yeats delle” (“When you are very old, in the evening, by loved unrequitedly) and, rather than a friend, her

N o S E C O N D T R O Y / 1 1 9 1

I said, “A line will take us hours maybe;
Yet if it does not seem a moment’s thought,
Our stitching and unstitching has been naught.
Better go down upon your marrow-bones
And scrub a kitchen pavement, or break stones
Like an old pauper, in all kinds of weather;

10

For to articulate sweet sounds together
Is to work harder than all these, and yet
Be thought an idler by the noisy set
Of bankers, schoolmasters, and clergymen
The martyrs call the world.”

And thereupon

1 5

That beautiful mild woman for whose sake
There’s many a one shall find out all heartache
On finding that her voice is sweet and low Replied, “To be born woman is to know—
Although they do not talk of it at school—

20

That we must labour to be beautiful.”

I said, “It’s certain there is no fine thing
Since Adam’s fall but needs much labouring.
There have been lovers who thought love should be
So much compounded of high courtesy

2 5

That they would sigh and quote with learned looks Precedents out of beautiful old books;
Yet now it seems an idle trade enough.”

We sat grown quiet at the name of love;
We saw the last embers of daylight die,
3 0

And in the trembling blue-green of the sky
A moon, worn as if it had been a shell
Washed by time’s waters as they rose and fell
About the stars and broke in days and years.

I had a thought for no one’s but your ears:
That you were beautiful, and that I strove
To love you in the old high way of love;
That it had all seemed happy, and yet we’d grown
As weary-hearted as that hollow moon.

November 1902

1904

No Second Troy’

r 7

Why should I blame her⁸ that she filled my days
With misery, or that she would of late
Have taught to ignorant men most violent ways, sister, Kathleen Pilcher.

destruction of the first city of Troy, on the east side

7. According to legend, Helen of Troy (see note 8, of the Aegean entrance to the Dardanelles.

p. 1197) caused the Trojan War and hence the

8. Maud Gonne (see note 6 above).

1198 / WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS

Or hurled the little streets upon the great,
5 Had they but courage equal to desire?
What could have made her peaceful with a mind
That nobleness made simple as a fire,
With beauty like a tightened bow, a kind
That is not natural in an age like this,
10 Being high and solitary and most stern?
Why, what could she have done, being what she is?
Was there another Troy for her to burn?

December 1908 1910

The Wild Swans at Coole⁹

The trees are in their autumn beauty,
The woodland paths are dry,
Under the October twilight the water
Mirrors a still sky;
5 Upon the brimming water among the stones
Are nine-and-fifty swans.

The nineteenth autumn has come upon me
Since I first made my count;¹

I saw, before I had well finished,
10 All suddenly mount
And scatter wheeling in great broken rings
Upon their clamorous wings.

I have looked upon those brilliant creatures,
And now my heart is sore.

15 All's changed since I, hearing at twilight,
The first time on this shore,

The bell-beat of their wings above my head,
Trode with a lighter tread.
Unwearied still, lover by lover,
20 They paddle in the cold
Companionable streams or climb the air;
Their hearts have not grown old;
Passion or conquest, wander where they will,
Attend upon them still.
25 But now they drift on the still water,
Mysterious, beautiful;
Among what rushes will they build,
By what lake's edge or pool

9. Coole Park, the estate in western Ireland of 1. Yeats had first visited Coole Park nineteen years Lady Augusta Gregory, Yeats's patroness and earlier friend.

THE SCHOLARS / 1193

Delight men's eyes when I awake some day
30 To find they have flown away?
October 1916
1917

An Irish Airman Foresees His Death²

I know that I shall meet my fate
Somewhere among the clouds above;
Those that I fight I do not hate,
Those that I guard I do not love;
5 My country is Kiltartan Cross,³
My countrymen Kiltartan's poor,
No likely end could bring them loss

Or leave them happier than before.
Nor law, nor duty bade me fight,
io Nor public men, nor cheering crowds,
A lonely impulse of delight
Drove to this tumult in the clouds;
I balanced all, brought all to mind,
The years to come seemed waste of breath,
15 A waste of breath the years behind
In balance with this life, this death.

1919

The Scholars

Bald heads forgetful of their sins,
Old, learned, respectable bald heads
Edit and annotate the lines
That young men, tossing on their beds,
5 Rhymed out in love's despair
To flatter beauty's ignorant ear.
All shuffle there; all cough in ink;
All wear the carpet with their shoes;
All think what other people think;
io All know the man their neighbour knows.
Lord, what would they say
Did their Catullus⁴ walk that way?

1917

2. The airman, killed in action in Italy in January in County Galway, western Ireland.

1918, is Major Robert Gregory, son of Yeats's

4. Gaius Valerius Catullus (ca. 84 - ca. 54 B.C.E.), friend and patron Lady Augusta Gregory.

Roman poet famous for his erotic verse.

3. A village near the Gregory estate, Coole Park,

1 1 9 8 / W I L L I A M B U T L E R Y E A T S

Easter 19165

I have met them at close of day

Coming with vivid faces

From counter or desk among grey

Eighteenth-century houses.

5 I have passed with a nod of the head

Or polite meaningless words,

Or have lingered awhile and said

Polite meaningless words,

And thought before I had done

io Of a mocking tale or a gibe

To please a companion

Around the fire at the club,

Being certain that they and I

But lived where motley⁶ is worn:

15 All changed, changed utterly:

A terrible beauty is born.

That woman's days were spent

In ignorant good will,

Her nights in argument

20 Until her voice grew shrill.

W h a t voice more sweet than hers

W h e n , young and beautiful,

She rode to harriers?⁷

This man had kept a school
25 And rode our winged horse;⁸
This other his helper and friend
Was coming into his force;
He might have won fame in the end,
So sensitive his nature seemed,
30 So daring and sweet his thought.

This other man I had dreamed
A drunken, vainglorious lout.⁹
He had done most bitter wrong
To some who are near my heart,
35 Yet I number him in the song;
He, too, has resigned his part

5. This title, echoing Yeats's "September 1913,"

7. Countess Constance Georgina Markiewicz, nee suggests the poem is a palinode (one in which the Gore-Booth, an Irish aristocrat and nationalist.

author retracts something said in a previous

8. Padraic Pearse, a schoolmaster and prolific poem). On Easter Monday of 1916, Irish nation-writer of poems, plays, stories, and essays on Irish alists launched a heroic but unsuccessful revolt politics and Gaelic literature. The mythological against the British government; the week of street winged horse, Pegasus, is here used as a symbol of fighting that followed is known as the Easter Rising. poetic inspiration. "This other" (line 26) was Thoinn. As a result, a number of the nationalists were mas MacDonough, a schoolteacher.

executed: Britain, at war with Germany, was in no

9. Major John MacBride, who had married Maud mood to tolerate Irish agitation for independence—Gonne (the Irish nationalist with whom Yeats had which was supported, for obvious reasons, by Ger-for years been hopelessly in love) in 1903 and sep-many. Yeats knew the chief rebels personally.
arated from her in 1905.

6. Jester's multicolored costume.

E A S T E R 1 9 1 6 / 1 1 9 5

In the casual comedy;

He, too, has been changed in his turn,

Transformed utterly:

40 A terrible beauty is born.

Hearts with one purpose alone

Through s u m m e r and winter seem

E n c h a n t e d to a stone

To trouble the living stream.

45 The horse that comes from the road,

T h e rider, the birds that range

From cloud to tumbling cloud,

M i n u t e by minute they change;

A shadow of cloud on the stream

50 Changes minute by minute;

A horse-hoof slides on the brim,

And a horse plashes within it;

The long-legged moor-hens dive,

And hens to moor-cocks call;
55 Minute by minute they live:
The stone's in the midst of all.
Too long a sacrifice
Can make a stone of the heart.
O when may it suffice?
60 That is Heaven's part, our part
To m u r m u r name upon name,
As a mother names her child
W h e n sleep at last has come
On limbs that had run wild.
65 W h a t is it but nightfall?
No, no, not night but death;
W a s it needless death after all?
For England may keep faith
For all that is done and said.
70 We know their dream; enough
To know they dreamed and are dead;
And what if excess of love
Bewildered t h e m till they died?
I write it out in a verse—
75 MacDonagh and MacBride
And Connolly and Pearse
Now and in time to be,
Wherever green is worn,
Are changed, changed utterly,
so A terrible beauty is born.
S e p t e m b e r 25, 1916

1916

1 1 9 8 / W I L L I A M B U T L E R Y E A T S

The Second Coming

Turning and turning in the widening gyre
The falcon cannot hear the falconer;¹
Things fall apart; the centre cannot hold;
Mere anarchy is loosed upon the world,
5 The blood-dimmed tide is loosed, and everywhere
The ceremony of innocence is drowned;
The best lack all conviction, while the worst
Are full of passionate intensity.
Surely some revelation is at hand;
10 Surely the Second Coming is at hand:
The Second Coming! Hardly are those words out
When a vast image out of *Spiritus Mundi*²
Troubles my sight: somewhere in sands of the desert
A shape with lion body and the head of a man,³ 15 A gaze blank and pitiless as the sun,
Is moving its slow thighs, while all about it
Reel shadows of the indignant desert birds.
The darkness drops again; but now I know
That twenty centuries of stony sleep
20 Were vexed to nightmare by a rocking cradle,⁴
And what rough beast, its hour come round at last,
Slouches towards Bethlehem⁵ to be born?

January 1919 1921

A Prayer for My Daughter⁶

Once more the storm is howling, and half hid

Under this cradle-hood and coverlid
My child sleeps on. There is no obstacle
But Gregory's wood⁷ and one bare hill
5 Whereby the haystack- and roof-levelling wind,
Bred on the Atlantic, can be stayed;

1. The gyre (Yeats's term, pronounced with a hard shallow edge of a vast luminous sea.”

g) is a conical shape based on the geometrical figure of interpenetrating cones; here, it is traced in (in Wheels and Butterflies, 1935), Yeats describes the falcon's sweep upward and out in widening circles the way in which the sphinx image had first manifested itself to him: “Our civilisation was about to reverse itself, or some new civilisation about to be born from all that our age had rejected ... ;

the cycle of Greco-Roman civilization as having been brought to a close by the advent of Christianity many... . I associated [the 'brazen winged anity, and in the violence of his own times—“the beast'] with laughing, ecstatic destruction.”

growing murderousness of the world”—he saw

4. That of the infant Christ.

signs that the two-thousand-year cycle of Christi-

5. Christ's birthplace.

anity was about to end and be replaced by a system

6. Yeats's daughter, Anne Butler Yeats, was born antithetical to it.

on February 26, 1919.

2. Or Anima Mundi, the Great Memory (Latin);

7. Part of the Gregory estate—about which, and according to Yeats, “a great memory passing on about Yeats's tower (line 10), which he called from generation to generation... . Our daily

Thoor Ballylee, see note to the next poem.

thought was certainly but the line of foam at the

A PRAYER FOR MY D A U G H T E R / 1 1 9 7

And for an hour I have walked and prayed

Because of the great gloom that is in my mind.

I have walked and prayed for this young child an hour

io And heard the sea-wind scream upon the tower,

And un4er the arches of the bridge, and scream

In the elms above the flooded stream;

Imagining in excited reverie

That the future years had come,

15 Dancing to a frenzied drum,

Out of the murderous innocence of the sea.

May she be granted beauty and yet not

Beauty to make a stranger's eye distraught,

Or hers before a looking glass, for such,

20 Being made beautiful overmuch,

Consider beauty a sufficient end,

Lose natural kindness and maybe
The heart-revealing intimacy
That chooses right, and never find a friend.
25 Helen⁸ being chosen found life flat and dull
And later had much trouble from a fool,
While that great Queen,⁹ that rose out of the spray,
Being fatherless could have her way
Yet chose a bandy-legged smith for man.
30 It's certain that fine women eat
A crazy salad with their meat,
Whereby the Horn of Plenty is undone.
In courtesy I'd have her chiefly learned;
Hearts are not had as a gift but hearts are earned 35 By those that are not entirely beautiful;
Yet many, that have played the fool
For beauty's very self, has charm made wise,
And many a poor man that has roved,
Loved and thought himself beloved,
40 From a glad kindness cannot take his eyes.
May she become a flourishing hidden tree
That all her thoughts may like the linnet⁰ be, a songbird
And have no business but dispensing round
Their magnanimities of sound,
45 Nor but in merriment begin a chase,
Nor but in merriment a quarrel.
Oh, may she live like some green laurel
Rooted in one dear perpetual place.

8. Helen of Troy, whose beauty was legendary.

Helen was reunited with Menelaus.

The daughter of Zeus (the supreme god) and Leda
9. Aphrodite, Greek goddess of love. “Fatherless”
(a mortal), she married Menelaus, brother of the (line 28) in the sense that, in Hesiod’s version of Greek leader, Agamemnon. She was abducted by the myth, she sprang from sea foam. She was mar-Paris, son of the king of Troy; the Greeks under-ried to Hephaestus, the blacksmith, lame from took an expedition to Troy to bring her back, birth, who forged thunderbolts for the gods.
besieged the city for ten years, and finally took it.

1198 / WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS

My mind, because the minds that I have loved,
50 The sort of beauty that I have approved,
Prosper but little, has dried up of late,
Yet knows that to be choked with hate
May well be of all evil chances chief.
If there’s no hatred in a mind
55 Assault and battery of the wind
Can never tear the linnet from the leaf.
An intellectual hatred is the worst,
So let her think opinions are accursed.
Have I not seen the loveliest woman born
60 Out of the mouth of Plenty’s horn,
Because of her opinionated mind
Barter that horn and every good
By quiet natures understood

For an old bellows full of angry wind?
65 Considering that, all hatred driven hence,
The soul recovers radical innocence
And learns at last that it is self-delighting,
Self-appeasing, self-affrighting,
And that its own sweet will is Heaven's will;
70 She can, though every face should scowl
And every windy quarter howl
Or every bellows burst, be happy still.
And may her bridegroom bring her to a house
Where all's accustomed, ceremonious;
75 For arrogance and hatred are the wares
Peddled in the thoroughfares.
How but in custom and in ceremony
Are innocence and beauty born?
Ceremony's a name for the rich horn,
so And custom for the spreading laurel tree.

February-June 1919 1921

To Be Carved on a Stone at Thoor Ballylee²

I, the poet William Yeats,
With old mill boards and sea-green slates,
And smithy work from the Gort forge,
Restored this tower for my wife George;
1. Doubtless Maud Gonne, whom Yeats had loved Norman tower, Thoor (Gaelic for "tower") Bally-hopelessly since meeting her in 1889, and who had lee, part of the Gregory estate, Coole Park, in Kil-married Major John MacBride in 1903; often to tartan, near the village of Gort, County Galway.

Yeats's dismay, she was a very daring activist in the After marrying Georgie (changed by Yeats to cause of Irish liberation.

George) Hyde-Lees in October 1917, he made the

2. In June 1917, Yeats had purchased a small plot tower and two cottages suitable for habitation.

of land and the buildings on it, including a ruined

SAILING TO BYZANTIUM / 1199

5 And may these characters remain

When all is ruin once again.

19181921

Sailing to Byzantium³

i

That is no country for old men. The young

In one another's arms, birds in the trees

—Those dying generations—at their song,

The salmon-falls, the mackerel-crowded seas,

5 Fish, flesh, or fowl, commend all summer long

Whatever is begotten, born, and dies.

Caught in that sensual music all neglect

Monuments of unaging intellect.

2

An aged man is but a paltry thing,

io A tattered coat upon a stick, unless

Soul clap its hands and sing, and louder sing

For every tatter in its mortal dress,

Nor is there singing school but studying

Monuments of its own magnificence;

15 And therefore I have sailed the seas and come
To the holy city of Byzantium.

3

O sages standing in God's holy fire

As in the gold mosaic of a wall,

Come from the holy fire, perne in a gyre,⁴

20 And be the singing-masters of my soul.

Consume my heart away; sick with desire

3. Of the ancient city of Byzantium—on the site had achieved “Unity of Being”: “I think if I could of modern Istanbul, capital of the Eastern Roman be given a month of Antiquity and leave to spend

Empire, and the center, especially in the fifth and it where I chose, I would spend it in Byzantium a sixth centuries, of highly developed and character-

little before Justinian [who ruled at Byzantium istic forms of art and architecture—Yeats made a from 527 to 565] opened St. Sophia and closed the many-faceted symbol, which, since it is a symbol,

Academy of Plato [i.e., circa 535], ... I think that should not be brought within the limits of too nar-

in early Byzantium, maybe never before or since in rowly specific interpretation. Byzantine painting recorded history, religious, aesthetic and practical and the mosaics that decorated its churches (Yeats life were one, that architect and artificers ...

had seen later derivatives of these mosaics in Italy, spoke to the multitude and the few alike. The at Ravenna and elsewhere) were stylized and for-painter, the mosaic worker, the worker in gold and mal, making no attempt at the full naturalistic rensilver, the illuminator of sacred books, were almost dering of h u m a n forms, so that the city and its art impersonal, almost perhaps without the conscious-can appropriately symbolize a way of life in which ness of individual design, absorbed in their subject-art is frankly accepted and proclaimed as artifice.

matter and that the vision of a whole people.”

As artifice, as a work of the intellect, this art is not

4. Out of the noun pern (usually pirn), a weaver’s subject to the decay and death that overtake the bobbin, spool, or reel, Yeats makes a verb meaning life of “natural things.” But while such an opposito move in the spiral pattern taken by thread being tion of artifice and nature is central to the poem, unwound from a bobbin or being wound upon it.

there are references to Byzantium in Yeats’s prose

Here the speaker entreats the sages to descend to that suggest the wider range of meaning that the

him in this manner, to come down into the gyres city held for him. In A Vision (1937), particularly, of history, the cycles of created life, out of their

he makes of it an exemplar of a civilization that eternity. On “gyre,” see note 1, p. 1196.

1198 / W I L L I A M B U T L E R Y E A T S

And fastened to a dying animal
It knows not what it is; and gather me
Into the artifice of eternity.

4

25 Once out of nature I shall never take
My bodily form from any natural thing,
But such a form as Grecian goldsmiths make
Of hammered gold and gold enamelling
To keep a drowsy Emperor awake;
30 Or set upon a golden bough to sing
To lords and ladies of Byzantium
Of what is past, or passing, or to come.

September 1926 1927

Leda and the Swan⁵

A sudden blow: the great wings beating still Above the staggering girl, her thighs caressed
By the dark webs, her nape caught in his bill,
He holds her helpless breast upon his breast.
5 How can those terrified vague fingers push
The feathered glory from her loosening thighs?
And how can body, laid in that white rush,
But feel the strange heart beating where it lies?
A shudder in the loins engenders there
io The broken wall, the burning roof and tower
And Agamemnon dead.
Being so caught up,
So mastered by the brute blood of the air,
Did she put on his knowledge with his power

Before the indifferent beak could let her drop?

September 1923 1924

Among School Children

i

I walk through the long schoolroom questioning;

A kind old nun in a white hood replies;

The children learn to cipher and to sing,

5. In Greek mythology, Leda, raped by Zeus, the the mother of Clytemnestra, who murdered her supreme god, in the guise of a swan, gave birth to own husband, Agamemnon, on his return from the Helen of Troy and the twins Castor and Pollux.

war. Yeats saw Leda as the recipient of an annun-Helen's abduction by Paris from her husband, ciation that would found Greek civilization, as the Menelaus, caused the Trojan War. Leda was also Annunciation to Mary would found Christianity.

A M O N G S C H O O L C H I L D R E N / 1 2 0 1

To study reading-books and histories,

5 To cut and sew, be neat in everything

In the best modern way—the children's eyes

In momentary wonder stare upon

A sixty-year-old smiling public man.

2

I dream of a Ledaean body,⁶ bent

io Above a sinking fire, a tale that she Told of a harsh reproof, or trivial event

That changed some childish day to tragedy—

Told, and it seemed that our two natures blent
Into a sphere from youthful sympathy,
15 Or else, to alter Plato's parable,
Into the yolk and white of the one shell.⁷

3

And thinking of that fit of grief or rage
I look upon one child or t'other there
And wonder if she stood so at that age—
20 For even daughters of the swan can share
Something of every paddler's heritage—
And had that colour upon cheek or hair,
And thereupon my heart is driven wild:
She stands before me as a living child.

4

25 Her present image floats into the mind—
Did Quattrocento finger⁸ fashion it
Hollow of cheek as though it drank the wind
And took a mess of shadows for its meat?
And I though never of Ledaean kind 30 Had pretty plumage once—enough of that,
Better to smile on all that smile, and show
There is a comfortable kind of old scarecrow.

5

What youthful mother, a shape upon her lap
Honey of generation had betrayed,
35 And that must sleep, shriek, struggle to escape
As recollection or the drug decide,⁹

6. I.e., the body of a woman he has known and

8. I.e., the hand of an Italian artist of the fifteenth century loved and who has seemed to him as beautiful as

Leda or her daughter, Helen of Troy—about both

9. “I have taken the ‘honey of generation’ from of whom, see note to the previous poem.

Porphyry’s essay on ‘The Cave of the Nymphs’ but

7. In Plato’s Symposium, one of the speakers, to find no warrant in Porphyry for considering it the explain the origin of human love, recounts the leg- ‘drug’ that destroys the ‘recollection’ of pre-natal end according to which h u m a n beings were origi- freedom” [Yeats’s note]. In the essay, which nally double their present form until Zeus, the explains the symbolism of a passage from book 13 supreme god, fearing their power, cut them in two, of the Odyssey, the Neoplatonic philosopher Por- which he did “as men cut sorbapples in two when phyry (ca. 232—305) makes such statements as they are preparing them for pickling, or as they cut that “the sweetness of honey signifies ... the same eggs in two with a hair.” Since then, “each of us is thing as the pleasure arising from copulation,” the ... but the half of a human being, ... each is for- pleasure “which draws souls downward to genera- ever seeking his missing half.” tion.”

Would think her son, did she but see that shape
With sixty or more winters on its head,
A compensation for the pang of his birth,
40 Or the uncertainty of his setting forth?

6

Plato thought nature but a spume that plays
Upon a ghostly paradigm of things;¹
Solider Aristotle played the taws
Upon the bottom of a king of kings;²
45 World-famous golden-thighed Pythagoras³
Fingered upon a fiddle-stick or strings
What a star sang and careless Muses⁴ heard:
Old clothes upon old sticks to scare a bird.
Both nuns and mothers worship images,
50 But those the candles light are not as those
That animate a mother's reveries,
But keep a marble or a bronze repose.
And yet they too break hearts—O Presences
That passion, piety or affection knows,
55 And that all heavenly glory symbolize—
O self-born mockers of man's enterprise;

8

Labour is blossoming or dancing where
The body is not bruised to pleasure soul,
Nor beauty born out of its own despair,
60 Nor blear-eyed wisdom out of midnight oil.
O chestnut-tree, great-rooted blossomer,
Are you the leaf, the blossom or the bole?^o trunk

O body swayed to music, O brightening glance,
How can we know the dancer from the dance?

June 1926 1927

Byzantium⁵

The unpurged images of day recede;

The Emperor's drunken soldiery are abed;

1. In Plato's philosophy, the world of nature, of of philosophy (along with the doctrine of the trans-appearances, that we know is but the copy of a migration of souls) was the premise that the uni-world of ideal, permanently enduring prototypes.
verse is mathematically regular, an idea based on
2. Aristotle's philosophy differed most markedly the Pythagoreans' observations of the exact math-from Plato's in that it emphasized the systematic emational relationships underlying musical har-investigation of verifiable phenomena. Aristotle mony.

was tutor to the son of King Philip of Macedo-

4. In Greek mythology, nine sister goddesses who nia, later Alexander the Great. Played the taws:
presided over song, poetry, and the arts and sci-whipped.
ences.

3. Greek philosopher (ca. 580-ca. 500 B.C.E.),

5. Under the heading "Subject for a Poem, April about whom many legends clustered even in his 30th," Yeats wrote in his 1930 Diary: "Describe own lifetime, as that he was the incarnation of the Byzantium as it is in the system [that is, his system

god Apollo, that he had a golden hipbone or thigh-in A Vision] towards the end of the first Christian bone, and so on. Central to the Pythagorean school millennium. A walking mummy. Flames at the

BYZANTIUM / 1203

Night resonance recedes, night-walkers' song
After great cathedral gong;

5 A starlit or a moonlit dome disdains⁶

All that man is,

All mere complexities,

The fury and the mire of human veins.

Before me floats an image, man or shade,

10 Shade more than man, more image than a shade;

For Hades' bobbin bound in mummy-cloth

May unwind the winding path;⁷

A mouth that has no moisture and no breath

Breathless mouths may summon;⁸

15 I hail the superhuman;

I call it death-in-life and life-in-death.

Miracle, bird or golden handiwork,

More miracle than bird or handiwork,

Planted on the starlit golden bough,

20 Can like the cocks of Hades crow,⁹

Or, by the moon embittered, scorn aloud

In glory of changeless metal

Common bird or petal

And all complexities of mire or blood.

25 At midnight on the Emperor's pavement flit

Flames that no faggot¹ feeds, nor steel has lit,

Nor storm disturbs, flames begotten of flame,

Where blood-begotten spirits come

And all complexities of fury leave,

30 Dying into a dance,

An agony of trance,

An agony of flame that cannot singe a sleeve.

street corners where the soul is purified, birds of describe the figure, wrapped in a winding-sheet or hammered gold singing in the golden trees, in the mummy-cloth, but it also conveys the idea that the harbor [dolphins], offering their backs to the wailsoul may unwind the thread of its fate by retracing
ing dead that they may carry them to Paradise.”

its path, returning to the world to serve as guide,

6. If the dome is “starlit” at the dark of the moon instructor, inspiration.

and “moonlit” at the full, then these terms may

8. The two lines have been read in two different refer to Phase 1 and Phase 15, respectively, of the ways, depending on which of the two phrases (“a twenty-eight phases of the moon in the system of mouth” or “breathless mouths”) is seen as subject
A Vision. As Yeats's character Michael Robartes and which as object of “may summon.” Taking says in “The Phases of the Moon,” “There's no

“breathless mouths” as subject: mouths of the living, breathless with the intensity of the act of invocation, may call up the mouths of the dead to the Wheel of Being. Phase 1 is the phase of complete objectivity, the soul being “completely

9. A symbol of rebirth and resurrection. In a book absorbed by its supernatural environment,” waiting on Roman sculpture that Yeats is believed to have to be formed, in a state of “complete plasticity.”

known, Apotheosis and After Life (1915), Eugenia Phase 15 is the state of complete subjectivity, Strong writes: “The great vogue of the cock on later when the soul is completely absorbed in an

Roman tombstones is due ... to the fact that as achieved state, “a phase of complete beauty.” Thus herald of the sun he becomes by an easy transition the world of “mere complexities,” the world in the herald of rebirth and resurrection.” In the next which humanity is in a state of becoming, is ban-sentence, she mentions a visual symbol that figures shed from the poem at the beginning, as the

in the poem’s last stanza: “The dolphins and “unpurged images of day” have been banished.

marine monsters, another frequent decoration,
7. Hades was the Greek god of the underworld, form a mystic escort of the dead to the Islands of the realm of the dead. The comparison of a dead the Blest.”

body or soul to a bobbin (spool) is at first visual, to
1. Bundle of sticks.

1 1 9 8 / W I L L I A M B U T L E R Y E A T S

Astraddle on the dolphin's mire and blood,
Spirit after spirit! The smithies break the flood.

35 The golden smithies of the Emperor!

Marbles of the dancing floor

Break bitter furies of complexity,

Those images that yet

Fresh images beget,

40 That dolphin-torn, that gong-tormented sea.

September 1930 1932

Crazy Jane² Talks with the Bishop

I met the Bishop on the road

And much said he and I.

“Those breasts are flat and fallen now,

Those veins must soon be dry;

5 Live in a heavenly mansion,

Not in some foul sty.”

“Fair and foul are near of kin,

And fair needs foul,” I cried.³

“My friends are gone, but that's a truth

io Nor grave nor bed denied,

Learned in bodily lowliness

And in the heart's pride.

“A woman can be proud and stiff
When on love intent;
15 But Love has pitched his mansion in
The place of excrement;
For nothing can be sole or whole
That has not been rent.”

November 1931 1932

Lapis Lazuli⁴

(For Harry Clifton)

I have heard that hysterical women say
They are sick of the palette and fiddle-bow,
Of poets that are always gay,

2. In a series of poems, Yeats presents her as a carved by some Chinese sculptor into the sem-source of wisdom.

blance of a mountain with temple, trees, paths and

3. Cf. Macbeth 1.1.10: “Fair is foul, and foul is an ascetic and pupil about to climb the mountain.
fair.”

Ascetic, pupil, hard stone, eternal theme of the

4. A deep-blue semiprecious stone. In a letter sensual east. The heroic cry in the midst of despair.
dated July 6, 1935, Yeats wrote, “Someone [i.e., But no, I am wrong, the east has its solutions
the English writer Harry Clifton (1908-1978)] has always and therefore knows nothing of tragedy. It sent me a present of a great piece [of lapis lazuli] is we, not the east, that must raise the heroic cry.”

L A P I S L A Z U L I / 1 2 0 5

For everybody knows or else should know

5 That if nothing drastic is done

Aeroplane and Zeppelin⁵ will come out,

Pitch like King Billy⁶ bomb-balls in

Until the town lie beaten flat.

All perform their tragic play,

10 There struts Hamlet, there is Lear,

That's Ophelia, that Cordelia;

Yet they, should the last scene be there,

The great stage curtain about to drop,

If worthy their prominent part in the play,

15 Do not break up their lines to weep.

They know that Hamlet and Lear are gay;

Gaiety transfiguring all that dread.

All men have aimed at, found and lost;

Black out; Heaven blazing into the head:

20 Tragedy wrought to its uttermost.

Though Hamlet rambles and Lear rages,

And all the drop-scenes drop at once

Upon a hundred thousand stages,

It cannot grow by an inch or an ounce.

25 On their own feet they came, or on shipboard,

Camelback, horseback, ass-back, mule-back,

Old civilizations put to the sword.

Then they arid their wisdom went to rack:

No handiwork of Callimachus,⁷

30 Who handled marble as if it were bronze,

Made draperies that seemed to rise
When sea-wind swept the corner, stands;
His long lamp-chimney shaped like the stem
Of a slender palm, stood but a day;
35 All things fall and are built again,
And those that build them again are gay.
Two Chinamen, behind them a third,
Are carved in lapis lazuli,
Over them flies a long-legged bird,
40 A symbol of longevity;
The third, doubtless a serving-man,
Carries a musical instrument.
Every discolouration of the stone,
Every accidental crack or dent,
45 Seems a water-course or an avalanche,
Or lofty slope where it still snows
Though doubtless plum or cherry-branch
5. Cylindrical airship.

Vision, Yeats says that only one example of his work

6. At the Battle of the Boyne on July 1, 1690, Wil-remains, a marble chair, and goes on to mention
liam III, king of England since 1689, had defeated “that bronze lamp [in the Erechtheum, a temple of the forces of the deposed king, James II.

the guardian deities of Athens] shaped like a palm,

7. Greek sculptor of the fifth century B.C.E. In A known to us by a description in Pausanias.”

1198 / WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS

Sweetens the little half-way house
Those Chinamen climb towards, and I
50 Delight to imagine them seated there;
There, on the mountain and the sky,
On all the tragic scene they stare.
One asks for mournful melodies;
Accomplished fingers begin to play.
55 Their eyes mid many wrinkles, their eyes,
Their ancient, glittering eyes, are gay.

July 1936 1938

Long-Legged Fly

That civilisation may not sink,
Its great battle lost,
Quiet the dog, tether the pony
To a distant post;
5 Our master Caesar is in the tent
Where the maps are spread,
His eyes fixed upon nothing,
A hand under his head.

Like a long-legged fly upon the stream

io His mind moves upon silence.

That the topless towers be burnt
And men recall that face,⁸ Move most gently if move you must
In this lonely place.

15 She thinks, part woman, three parts a child,
That nobody looks; her feet
Practice a tinker shuffle

Picked up on a street.

Like a long-legged fly upon the stream

20 Her mind moves upon silence.

That girls at puberty may find

The first Adam in their thought,

Shut the door of the Pope's chapel,⁹

Keep those children out.

25 There on that scaffolding reclines

Michael Angelo.

With no more sound than the mice make

His hand moves to and fro.

Like a long-legged fly upon the stream

BO His mind moves upon silence.

November 1937

1939

8. Helen, legendary beauty whose abduction

9. On the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel, so called caused the Trojan War and hence the fall of Troy.

because it was built under Pope Sixtus IV, Michel-

An echo of Christopher Marlowe's play Dr. Faustus- angelo (1475-1564) painted a series of biblical tus: "Was this the face that launched a thousand scenes, including the creation of Adam.

ships, / And burnt the topless towers of Ilium?"

THE CIRCUS ANIMALS 'DESERTION' / 12 07

The Circus Animals' Desertion

1

I sought a theme and sought for it in vain,
I sought it daily for six weeks or so.
Maybe at last, being but a broken man,
I must be satisfied with my heart, although 5 Winter and summer till old age began
My circus animals were all on show,
Those stilted boys, that burnished chariot, 1
Lion and woman and the Lord knows what.

2

What can I but enumerate old themes?
io First that sea-rider Oisin² led by the nose
Through three enchanted islands, allegorical dreams,
Vain gaiety, vain battle, vain repose,
Themes of the embittered heart, or so it seems,
That might adorn old songs or courtly shows;
15 But what cared I that set him on to ride,
I, starved for the bosom of his faery bride?
And then a counter-truth filled out its play,
The Countess Cathleen 3 was the name I gave it;
She, pity-crazed, had given her soul away,
20 But masterful Heaven had intervened to save it.
I thought my dear⁴ must her own soul destroy,
So did fanaticism and hate enslave it,
And this brought forth a dream and soon enough
This dream itself had all my thought and love.
25 And when the Fool and Blind Man stole the bread
Cuchulain fought the ungovernable sea;⁵
Heart-mysteries there, and yet when all is said

It was the dream itself enchanted me:

Character isolated by a deed

30 To engross the present and dominate memory.

Players and painted stage took all my love,

And not those things that they were emblems of.

1. The images of lines 7—8 may refer to motifs of time of famine, are selling their souls to emissaries from earlier works by Yeats (in his play The Unicorn from the Stars, for instance, a gilded state Cathleen sells hers “for a great price.” She dies, coach, adorned with lion and unicorn, is being but an angel announces that she is “passing to the built on stage), or they may be generalized images, floor of peace.”

in line with the title and argument of the poem, of 4. Maud Gonne, whom Yeats had loved since first the people and things to be encountered in the meeting her in 1889, and who had married John heightened, unreal world of a circus.

MacBride in 1903; she was a daring, even violent,

2. The hero of Yeats’s allegorical (and symbolic) activist in the cause of Irish liberation.

long poem, The Wanderings of Oisín (pronounced

5. In another early play, On Baile’s Strand, 1904,

Usheen), 1889, is led by the fairy Niamh (pro-

Cuchulain (pronounced Cuhoolin) unwittingly

nounced Nee-ave) in succession to the three kills his own son; maddened, he rushes out to fight Islands of, respectively, Dancing (changeless joy), the waves. As the people run to the shore to watch, Victories (also called “Of Many Fears”), and For-the fool and the blind man hurry off to steal the getfulness.

bread from their ovens.

3. Yeats’s first play, 1892. In it, the people, in a

1 1 9 8 / W I L L I A M B U T L E R Y E A T S

3

Those masterful images because complete

Grew in pure mind, but out of what began?

35 A mound of refuse or the sweeping of a street,

Old kettles, old bottles, and a broken can,

Old iron, old bones, old rags, that raving slut

Who keeps the till. Now that my ladder’s gone,

I must lie down where all the ladders start,

40 In the foul rag-and-bone shop of the heart.

1 9 3 9

Under Ben Bulben⁶

I

Swear by what the sages spoke

Round the Mareotic Lake⁷

That the Witch of Atlas knew,

Spoke and set the cocks a-crow.⁸

5 Swear by those horsemen, by those women

Complexion and form prove superhuman,⁹

That pale, long-visaged company

That air in immortality
Completeness of their passions won;
io Now they ride the wintry dawn
Where Ben Bulbin sets the scene.¹
Here's the gist of what they mean.

2

Many times man lives and dies
Between his two eternities,
15 That of race and that of soul,
And ancient Ireland knew it all.

6. A mountain in County Sligo, in the west of Ire-beauty, and freedom, visits Egypt and the Mareotic land, that overlooks Drumcliff Churchyard, where Lake in the course of her magic journeyings. The Yeats is buried. The last three lines of the poem knowledge and belief that Yeats describes as com-are carved on his tombstone.

mon to her and to the sages “set the cocks a-crow”

7. Lake Mareotis, a salt lake in northern Egypt, in the sense that, like “the cocks of Hades” and the near which the Christian monks and nuns of the golden bird in Yeats's “Byzantium” (see p. 1202), Thebaid, among them St. Anthony (ca. 251—356), they summon to a spiritual rebirth.

had withdrawn to contemplation. In his 1930

9. Fairies called the Sidhe (pronounced shee) were Diary, Yeats wrote that “men went on pilgrimage believed to ride through the countryside near Ben to Saint Anthony that they might learn about their Bulben.

spiritual states, what was about to happen and why

1. In another late poem, “Alternative Song for the it happened, and Saint Anthony would reply nei-Severed Head in ‘The King of the Great Clock
ther out of traditional casuistry nor common sense Tower,’ ” Yeats reintroduces some of the Irish but from spiritual powers.”

mythological or legendary heroes and heroines

8. In the poem “The Witch of Atlas,” by Percy who figure in his early poems—Cuchulain, Niamh Bysshe Shelley (1 7 9 2 - 1 8 2 2 ; for his poetry, see and others—with whom the supernatural riders of
pp. 863—93) the protagonist, a spirit of love,
these lines may be identified.

U N D E R B E N B U L B E N / 1 2 0 9

Whether man die in his bed
Or the rifle knocks him dead,
A brief parting from those dear
20 Is the worst man has to fear.
Though gravediggers’ toil is long,
Sharp their spades, their muscles strong,
They but thrust their buried men
Back in the human mind again.

3

25 You that Mitchel’s prayer have heard,
“Send war in our time, O Lord!”“2

Know that when all words are said
And a man is fighting mad,
Something drops from eyes long blind,
30 He completes his partial mind,
For an instant stands at ease,
Laughs aloud, his heart at peace.
Even the wisest man grows tense
With some sort of violence
35 Before he can accomplish fate,
Know his work or choose his mate.

4

Poet and sculptor, do the work,
Nor let the modish painter shirk
What his great forefathers did,
40 Bring the soul of man to God,
Make him fill the cradles right.
Measurement began our might:3
Forms a stark Egyptian thought,
Forms that gentler Phidias wrought.
45 Michael Angelo left a proof
On the Sistine Chapel roof,4
Where but half-awakened Adam
Can disturb globe-trotting Madam
Till her bowels are in heat,
50 Proof that there's a purpose set
Before the secret working mind:
Profane perfection of mankind.
Quattrocento5 put in paint

On backgrounds for a God or Saint

2. John Mitchel (1815-1875), Irish nationalist, the proportions of their sculptured figures—rules wrote in his jail Journal, or Five Years in British Prisons (1854): “Czar, I bless thee, I kiss the hem the fifth century B.C.E., used, and that have been of thy garment. I drink to thy health and longevity. implicit in the greatest Western art up to the present. Give us war in our time, O Lord.”

ent, when “confusion [falls] upon our thought”

3. The achievements of Western civilization (now, (line 67).

according to the poem, being challenged or

4. See note 9, p. 1206.

destroyed) began with the exact mathematical

5. The Italian fifteenth century.

rules that the Egyptians followed in working out

1 1 9 8 / W I L L I A M B U T L E R Y E A T S

5 5

Gardens where a soul’s at ease;

Where everything that meets the eye,

Flowers and grass and cloudless sky,

Resemble forms that are or seem

When sleepers wake and yet still dream,

60

And when it’s vanished still declare,

With only bed and bedstead there,

That heavens had opened.

Gyres⁶ run on;

When that greater dream had gone

Calvert and Wilson, Blake and Claude,

6 5

Prepared a rest for the people of God,

Palmer's phrase,⁷ but after that

Confusion fell upon our thought.

5

Irish poets, learn your trade,

Sing whatever is well made,

7 0

Scorn the sort now growing up

All out of shape from toe to top,

Their unremembering hearts and heads

Base-born products of base beds.

Sing the peasantry, and then

7 5

Hard-riding country gentlemen,

The holiness of monks, and after

Porter^o-drinkers' randy laughter; dark brown beer

Sing the lords and ladies gay

That were beaten into the clay

8 0

Through seven heroic centuries;

Cast your mind on other days

That we in coming days may be

Still the indomitable Irishry.

6

Under bare Ben Bulben's head

8 5

In Drumcliff churchyard Yeats is laid.

An ancestor was rector there⁸

Long years ago, a church stands near,

By the road an ancient cross.

No marble, no conventional phrase;

9 0

On limestone quarried near the spot

By his command these words are cut:

6. I.e., the cycles of history. See note 1, p. 1196.

vert (1799-1883) and Samuel Palmer (1805 -

7. Lines 64—66 name five artists who had provided 1881), visionaries, landscape painters, and engrav-

Yeats with images and with ideals of what art

ers, had found inspiration in the life and work of

should be. Claude Lorrain (1600-1682), French

William Blake (1757 - 1827 ; see pp. 732-47).

landscape painter, was a central standard for land-

8. Yeats's great-grandfather, the Reverend John scape painters up to the early nineteenth century,

Yeats (1774—1847), was rector of Drumcliff from including the English artists mentioned here, especially Richard Wilson (1714-1782). Edward Cal-

1805.

N O N S U M Q U A L I S E R A M B O N A E S U B R E G N O

C Y N A R A E / 1 2 1 1

Cast a cold eye

On life, on death.

Horseman, pass by!

September 4, 1938 1939

ERNEST DOWSON

1867-1900

Vitae summa brevis spes rivos vetat incohare longam!

They are not long, the weeping and the laughter,

Love and desire and hate:

I think they have no portion in us after

We pass the gate.

5 They are not long, the days of wine and roses:

Out of a misty dream

Our path emerges for a while, then closes

Within a dream.

1891 1896

Non sum qualis eram bonae sub regno Cynarae²

Last night, ah, yesternight, betwixt her lips and mine

There fell thy shadow, Cynara! thy breath was shed

Upon my soul between the kisses and the wine;

And I was desolate and sick of an old passion,

5 Yea, I was desolate and bowed my head:

I have been faithful to thee, Cynara! in my fashion.

All night upon mine heart I felt her warm heart beat,

Night-long within mine arms in love and sleep she lay;

Surely the kisses of her bought red mouth were sweet;

io But I was desolate and sick of an old passion,

When I awoke and found the dawn was grey:

I have been faithful to thee, Cynara! in my fashion.

I have forgot much, Cynara! gone with the wind,

Flung roses, roses riotously with the throng,

15 Dancing, to put thy pale, lost lilies out of mind;

But I was desolate and sick of an old passion,

1. The brevity of life forbids us to entertain hopes urges Venus, Roman goddess of love and beauty, of long duration (Latin); Horace, Odes 1.4.15.

to spare him new efforts in her service, because he

2. I am not as I was under the reign of the good is no longer up to the task.

Cynara (Latin); Horace, Odes 4.1.3—4: the poet

1 2 1 2 / EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON

Yea, all the time, because the dance was long:

I have been faithful to thee, Cynara! in my fashion.

I cried for madder music and for stronger wine,

20 But when the feast is finished and the lamps expire,

Then falls thy shadow, Cynara! the night is thine;

And I am desolate and sick of an old passion,

Yea hungry for the lips of my desire:

I have been faithful to thee, Cynara! in my fashion.

1 8 9 1 1 8 9 6

EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON

1869-1935

Richard Cory

Whenever Richard Cory went down town,

We people on the pavement looked at him:

He was a gentleman from sole to crown,

Clean favored, and imperially slim.
5 And he was always quietly arrayed,
And he was always human when he talked;
But still he fluttered pulses when he said,
“Good-morning,” and he glittered when he walked.
And he was rich—yes, richer than a king—
10 And admirably schooled in every grace:
In fine, we thought that he was everything
To make us wish that we were in his place.
So on we worked, and waited for the light,
And went without the meat, and cursed the bread;
15 And Richard Cory, one calm summer night,
Went home and put a bullet through his head.

1 8 6 9

George Crabbe 1

Give him the darkest inch your shelf allows,
Hide him in lonely garrets, if you will,
But his hard, human pulse is throbbing still
With the sure strength that fearless truth endows.

1. English poet, physician, and curate (1754—1832; see pp. 723—31), known for his realistic narrative poems.

MINIVER CHEEVY / 1 2 1 3

5 In spite of all fine science disavows,
Of his plain excellence and stubborn skill
There yet remains what fashion cannot kill,
Though years have thinned the laurel² from his brows.
Whether or not we read him, we can feel
10 From time to time the vigor of his name

Against us like a finger for the shame
And emptiness of what our souls reveal
In books that are as altars where we kneel
To consecrate the flicker, not the flame.

1 8 9 7

Reuben Bright

Because he was a butcher and thereby
Did earn an honest living (and did right),
I would not have you think that Reuben Bright
Was any more a brute than you or I;
5 For when they told him that his wife must die,
He stared at them, and shook with grief and fright,
And cried like a great baby half that night,
And made the women cry to see him cry.
And after she was dead, and he had paid
io The singers and the sexton and the rest,
He packed a lot of things that she had made
Most mournfully away in an old chest
Of hers, and put some chopped-up cedar boughs
In with them, and tore down the slaughter-house.

1 8 9 7

Miniver Cheevy

Miniver Cheevy, child of scorn,
Grew lean while he assailed the seasons;
He wept that he was ever born,
And he had reasons.
5 Miniver loved the days of old
When swords were bright and steeds were prancing;

The vision of a warrior bold

Would set him dancing.

2. In classical Greece, laurel was associated with prophecy and poetry; laurel wreaths crowned poets as well as the victors in athletic contests.

1 2 1 4 / E D W I N A R L I N G T O N R O B I N S O N

Miniver sighed for what was not,

10 And dreamed, and rested from his labors;

He dreamed of Thebes and Camelot,

And Priam's³ neighbors.

Miniver mourned the ripe renown

That made so many a name so fragrant;

15 He mourned Romance, now on the town,

And Art, a vagrant.

Miniver loved the Medici,⁴

Albeit he had never seen one;

He would have sinned incessantly

20 Could he have been one.

Miniver cursed the commonplace

And eyed a khaki suit with loathing;

He missed the medieval grace

Of iron clothing.

25 Miniver scorned the gold he sought,

But sore annoyed was he without it;

Miniver thought, and thought, and thought,

And thought about it.

Miniver Cheevy, born too late,

30 Scratched his head and kept on thinking;

Miniver coughed, and called it fate,

And kept on drinking.

1 9 1 0

The Mill

The miller's wife had waited long,
The tea was cold, the fire was dead;
And there might yet be nothing wrong
In how he went and what he said:
5 "There are no millers any more,"
Was all that she had heard him say;
And he had lingered at the door
So long that it seemed yesterday.
Sick with a fear that had no form
io She knew that she was there at last;
And in the mill there was a warm
And mealy fragrance of the past.

3. King of Troy during the Trojan War, immortal- 4. Merchant-princes of Renaissance Florence, ized in Homer's Iliad.
Thebes: Ancient Greek city, known both for cruelty and for their support of famous in history and legend. Camelot:
according learning and art.

to English legend, the site of King Arthur's court.

MR. FLOOD 'S PARTY / 1 2 1 5

What else there was would only seem
To say again what he had meant;
15 And what was hanging from a beam
Would not have heeded where she went.
And if she thought it followed her,
She may have reasoned in the dark
That one way of the few there were 20 Would hide her and would leave no mark:

Black water, smooth above the weir^o milldam
Like starry velvet in the night,
Though ruffled once, would soon appear
The same as ever to the sight.

1 9 2 0

Mr. Flood's Party

Old Eben Flood, climbing alone one night
Over the hill between the town below
And the forsaken upland hermitage
That held as much as he should ever know
5 On earth again of home, paused warily.
The road was his with not a native near;
And Eben, having leisure, said aloud,
For no man else in Tilbury Town to hear:
“Well, Mr. Flood, we have the harvest moon io Again, and we may not have many more;
The bird is on the wing, the poet says,⁵
And you and I have said it here before.
Drink to the bird.” He raised up to the light
The jug that he had gone so far to fill,
15 And answered huskily: “Well, Mr. Flood, Since you propose it, I believe I will.”
Alone, as if enduring to the end
A valiant armor of scarred hopes outworn,
He stood there in the middle of the road
20 Like Roland's ghost winding a silent horn.⁶
Below him, in the town among the trees,

Where friends of other days had honored him,
A phantom salutation of the dead
Rang thinly till old Eben's eyes were dim.

5. A paraphrase of the seventh stanza of The

6. The hero of the French poem The Song of Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam as translated in 1859
Roland (ca. 1000) had an enchanted horn; in battle
by the English poet Edward FitzGerald (1809—at Roncevalles (778), he sounded his horn for help 1883; see pp. 961 - 73).

just before dying.

1216 / CHARLOTTE MEW

25 Then, as a mother lays her sleeping child
Down tenderly, fearing it may awake,
He set the jug down slowly at his feet
With trembling care, knowing that most things break;
And only when assured that on firm earth
30 It stood, as the uncertain lives of men
Assuredly did not, he paced away,
And with his hand extended paused again:
“Well, Mr. Flood, we have not met like this
In a long time; and many a change has come 35 To both of us, I fear, since last it was
We had a drop together. Welcome home!”
Convivially returning with himself,
Again he raised the jug up to the light;
And with an acquiescent quaver said:
40 “Well, Mr. Flood, if you insist, I might.

“Only a very little, Mr. Flood—
For auld lang syne.⁷ No more, sir; that will do.”
So, for the time, apparently it did,
And Eben evidently thought so too;
45 For soon amid the silver loneliness
Of night he lifted up his voice and sang,
Secure, with only two moons listening,
Until the whole harmonious landscape rang—
“For auld lang syne.” The weary throat gave out,
50 The last word wavered; and the song being done,
He raised again the jug regretfully
And shook his head, and was again alone.
There was not much that was ahead of him,
And there was nothing in the town below—
55 Where strangers would have shut the many doors
That many friends had opened long ago.

1 9 2 0

C H A R L O T T E M E W

1869-1928

The Farmer's Bride

Three Summers since I chose a maid,
Too young maybe—but more's to do
At harvest-time than bide and woo.

When us was wed she turned afraid

7. Old long since (Scottish), the days of long ago; title and refrain of a famous song by the eighteenth-century Scottish poet Robert Burns (see p. 753).

THE FARMER'S BRIDE / 1 2 1 7

5 Of love and me and all things human;

Like the shut of a winter's day.
Her smile went out, and 'twasn't a woman—
More like a little frightened fay.^o fairy
One night, in the Fall, she runned away.
10 "Out 'mong the sheep, her be," they said,
'Should properly have been abed;
But sure enough she wasn't there
Lying awake with her wide brown stare.
So over seven-acre field and up-along across the down^o
upland pasture 15 We chased her, flying like a hare Before our lanterns. To Church-Town
All in a shiver and a scare
We caught her, fetched her home at last
And turned the key upon her, fast.
20 She does the work about the house
As well as most, but like a mouse:
Happy enough to chat and play
With birds and rabbits and such as they,
So long as men-folk keep away.
25 "Not near, not near!" her eyes beseech
When one of us comes within reach.
The women say that beasts in stall
Look round like children at her call.
I've hardly heard her speak at all.
30 Shy as a leveret,^o swift as he, young hare
Straight and slight as a young larch tree,
Sweet as the first wild violets, she,
To her wild self. But what to me?

The short days shorten and the oaks are brown,
35 The blue smoke rises to the low grey sky,
One leaf in the still air falls slowly down,
A magpie's spotted feathers lie
On the black earth spread white with rime,^o frozen dew
The berries redden up to Christmas-time.
40 What's Christmas-time without there be
Some other in the house than we!
She sleeps up in the attic there Alone, poor maid. 'Tis but a stair
B e t w i x t u s . O h ! m y G o d ! t h e d o w n , o light, soft body hair 45 The soft young down of her, the brown,
The brown of her—her eyes, her hair, her hair!

1912

1916

1 2 1 8 / C H A R L O T T E M E W

In Nunhead Cemetery

It is the clay that makes the earth stick to his spade;
He fills in holes like this year after year;
The others have gone; they were tired, and half afraid
But I would rather be standing here;
5 There is nowhere else to go. I have seen this place
From the windows of the train that's going past
Against the sky. This is rain on my face—
It was raining here when I saw it last.
There is something horrible about a flower;
10 This, broken in my hand, is one of those
He threw in just now: it will not live another hour;

There are thousands more: you do not miss a rose.
One of the children hanging about Pointed at the whole dreadful heap and smiled
15 This morning, after THAT was carried out;
There is something terrible about a child.
We were like children, last week, in the Strand;¹
That was the day you laughed at me
Because I tried to make you understand 20 The cheap, stale chap I used to be Before I saw the things you made me see.
This is not a real place; perhaps by-and-by
I shall wake—I am getting drenched with all this rain:
To-morrow I will tell you about the eyes of the Crystal Palace² train
25 Looking down on us, and you will laugh and I shall see what you
see again.
Not here, not now. We said “Not yet
Across our low stone parapet
Will the quick shadows of the sparrows fall.”
But still it was a lovely thing
30 Through the grey months to wait for Spring
With the birds that go a-gypsying
In the parks till the blue seas call.
And next to these, you used to care
For the lions in Trafalgar Square,³ 35 Who’ll stand and speak for London when her bell of Judgment tolls—
And the gulls at Westminster that were

The old sea-captains' souls.

1. Street in central London.

London, wherein four bronze lions stand at the

2. Large building made of glass and iron, erected base of a commemorative column. Gulls gather in in London's Great Exhibition of 1851.

the fountains of Trafalgar, as in areas surrounding

3. Grand plaza in the Westminster borough of the nearby river Thames.

I N N U N H E A D C E M E T E R Y / 1 2 1 9

To-day again the brown tide splashes, step by step, the river stair,

And the gulls are there!

40 By a month we have missed our Day:

The children would have hung about

Round the carriage and over the way

As you and I came out.

We should have stood on the gulls' black cliffs and heard the
sea

45 And seen the moon's white track,

I would have called, you would have come to me

And kissed me back.

You have never done that: I do not know

Why I stood staring at your bed

50 And heard you, though you spoke so low,

But could not reach your hands, your little head.

There was nothing we could not do, you said,

And you went, and I let you go!

Now I will burn you back, I will burn you through,

55 Though I am damned for it we two will lie
And burn, here where the starlings fly
To these white stones from the wet sky—;
Dear, you will say this is not I—
It would not be you, it would not be you!
60 If for only a little while
You will think of it you will understand,
If you will touch my sleeve and smile
As you did that morning in the Strand
I can wait quietly with you 65 Or go away if you want me to—
God! What is God? but your face has gone and your hand!
Let me stay here too.
When I was quite a little lad
At Christmas-time we went half mad 70 For joy of all the toys we had,
And then we used to sing about the sheep
The shepherds watched by night;
We used to pray to Christ to keep
Our small souls safe till morning light—;
75 I am scared, I am staying with you to-night—
Put me to sleep.
I shall stay here: here you can see the sky;
The houses in the streets are much too high;
There is no one left to speak to there;
so Here they are everywhere,
And just above them fields and fields of roses lie—
If he would dig it all up again they would not die.

1916

1220

STEPHEN CRANE

1871-1900

*From The Black Riders and Other Lines*1

I

BLACK RIDERS CAME FROM THE SEA.
THERE WAS CLANG AND CLANG OF SPEAR AND SHIELD,
AND CLASH AND CLASH OF HOOF AND HEEL, WILD SHOUTS AND THE WAVE OF HAIR
5 IN THE RUSH UPON THE WIND :
THUS THE RIDE OF SIN.

III

IN THE DESERT
I SAW A CREATURE, NAKED, BESTIAL, WHO, SQUATTING UPON THE GROUND, HELD HIS HEART IN HIS HANDS,
5 AND ATE OF IT.
I SAID, "IS IT GOOD, FRIEND?"
"IT IS BITTER—BITTER," HE ANSWERED;
"BUT I LIKE IT
"BECAUSE IT IS BITTER,
io "AND BECAUSE IT IS MY HEART."

XXV

BEHOLD, THE GRAVE OF A WICKED MAN, AND NEAR IT, A STERN SPIRIT.
THERE CAME A DROOPING MAID WITH VIOLETS,

BUT THE SPIRIT GRASPED HER ARM.

5 “NO FLOWERS FOR HIM,” HE SAID.

THE MAID WEPT:

“AH, I LOVED HIM.”

BUT THE SPIRIT, GRIM AND FROWNING:

“NO FLOWERS FOR HIM.”

10 NOW, THIS IS IT

IF THE SPIRIT WAS JUST,

WHY DID THE MAID WEEP?

1. The stylish Boston publishers of Crane’s first reproduced the poems in standard typography; poetry collection, The Black Riders and Other here the original look of the “lines” (“I never call Lines, proposed what they called a “severely class- them poems,” Crane said) is more closely approx- sic” design, printing the poems in capitals only— imated.

which greatly pleased Crane. Modern editors have

[A M A N A D R I F T O N A S L I M S P A R] / 1 2 2 1

LVI

A MAN FEARED THAT HE MIGHT FIND AN ASSASSIN;

ANOTHER THAT HE MIGHT FIND A VICTIM.

ONE WAS MORE WISE THAN THE OTHER.

1895

*From War is Kind*²

Do not weep, maiden, for war is kind.

Because your lover threw wild hands toward the sky

And the affrighted steed ran on alone,

Do not weep.

5 War is kind.

Hoarse, booming drums of the regiment

Little souls who thirst for fight,

These men were born to drill and die

The unexplained glory flies above them

io Great is the battle-god, great, and his kingdom

A field where a thousand corpses lie.

Do not weep, babe, for war is kind.

Because your father tumbled in the yellow trenches,

Raged at his breast, gulped and died,

15 Do not weep.

War is kind.

Swift, blazing flag of the regiment

Eagle with crest of red and gold,

These men were born to drill and die

20 Point for them the virtue of slaughter

Make plain to them the excellence of killing

And a field where a thousand corpses lie.

Mother whose heart hung humble as a button

On the bright splendid shroud of your son,

25 Do not weep.

War is kind.

1899

[A Man Adrift on a Slim Spar]

A man adrift on a slim spar

A horizon smaller than the rim of a bottle

2. The poems in Crane's second and final collection of verse were printed conventionally, with upper- and lowercase letters.

1 2 2 2 / P A U L L A U R E N C E D U N B A R

Tented waves rearing lashed dark points

The near whine of froth in circles.

God is cold.

The incessant raise and swing of the sea

And growl after growl of crest

The sinkings, green, seething, endless

The upheaval half-completed.

God is cold.

The seas are in the hollow of The Hand;

Oceans may be turned to a spray

Raining down through the stars

Because of a gesture of pity toward a babe.

15 Oceans may become grey ashes,

Die with a long moan and a roar

Amid the tumult of the fishes

And the cries of the ships,

Because The Hand beckons the mice.

20 A horizon smaller than a doomed assassin's cap,

Inky, surging tumults

A reeling, drunken sky and no sky

A pale hand sliding from a polished spar.

God is cold.

25 The puff of a coat imprisoning air.

A face kissing the water-death

A weary slow sway of a lost hand

And the sea, the moving sea, the sea.

God is cold.

ca. 1 8 9 7 1 9 2 9

PAUL LAURENCE DUNBAR

1872-1906

A Summer's Night

The night is dewy as a maiden's mouth,
The skies are bright as are a maiden's eyes,
Soft as a maiden's breath, the wind that flies
Up from the perfumed bosom of the South.
5 Like sentinels, the pines stand in the park;
And hither hastening like rakes that roam,
With lamps to light their wayward footsteps home,
The fire-flies come stagg'ring down the dark.

1 8 9 5

LITTLE BROWN BABY / 1 2 2 3

We Wear the Mask

We wear the mask that grins and lies,
It hides our cheeks and shades our eyes—
This debt we pay to human guile;
With torn and bleeding hearts we smile,
5 And mouth with myriad subtleties.
Why should the world be over-wise,
In counting all our tears and sighs?
Nay, let them only see us, while
We wear the mask.
10 We smile, but, O great Christ, our cries
To thee from tortured souls arise.

We sing, but oh the clay is vile
Beneath our feet, and long the mile;
But let the world dream otherwise,
15 We wear the mask!

1896

Little Brown Baby

Little brown baby wif spa'klin' eyes,
Come to yo' pappy an' set on his knee.
What you been doin', suh-makin' san' pies?
Look at dat bib—you's ez du'ty ez me.
5 Look at dat mouf—dat's merlasses, I bet;
Come hyeah, Maria, an' wipe off his han's.
Bees gwine to ketch you an' eat you up yit,
Bein' so sticky an sweet—goodness lan's!^o lands!
Little brown baby wif spa'klin' eyes,
io Who's pappy's darlin' an' who's pappy's chile?
Who is it all de day nevah once tries
Fu' to be cross, er once loses dat smile?
Whah did you git dem teef? My, you's a scamp!
Whah did dat dimple come f'om in yo' chin?
15 Pappy do' know you—I b'lieves you's a tramp;
Mammy, dis hyeah's some ol' straggler got in!
Let's th'ow him outen de do' in de san',
We do' want stragglers a-layin' 'roun' hyeah;
Let's gin him 'way to de big buggah-man;
20 I know he's hidin' erroun' hyeah right neah.
Buggah-man, buggah-man, come in de do',
Hyeah's a bad boy you kin have fu' to eat.

1 2 2 4 / P A U L L A U R E N C E D U N B A R

Mammy an' pappy do' want him no mo',
Swaller him down f'om his haid to his feet!
25 Dah, now, I t'ought dat you'd hug me up close.
Go back, ol' buggah, you sha'n't have dis boy.
He ain't no tramp, ner no straggler, of co'se;
He's pappy's pa'dner an' playmate an' joy.
Come to you' pallet now—go to yo' res';
30 Wisht you could alius know ease an' cleah skies;
Wisht you could stay jes' a chile on my breas'—
Little brown baby wif spa'klin' eyes!

1 8 9 9 ?

Sympathy

I know what the caged bird feels, alas!
When the sun is bright on the upland slopes;
When the wind stirs soft through the springing grass,
And the river flows like a stream of glass;
5 When the first bird sings and the first bud opes,^o opens
And the faint perfume from its chalice steals—
I know what the caged bird feels!
I know why the caged bird beats his wing
Till its blood is red on the cruel bars;
io For he must fly back to his perch and cling
When he fain would be1 on the bough a-swing;
And a pain still throbs in the old, old scars
And they pulse again with a keener sting—
I know why he beats his wing!
15 I know why the caged bird sings, ah me,

When his wing is bruised and his bosom sore,—
When he beats his bars and he would be free;
It is not a carol of joy or glee,
But a prayer that he sends from his heart's deep core,
20 But a plea, that upward to Heaven he flings—
I know why the caged bird sings!

1 8 9 9

1. He would like to be.

1 2 2 5

J O H N McCRAE

1872-1918

In Flanders Fields¹

In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly
5 Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the Dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now we lie,
In Flanders fields.

io Take up our quarrel with the foe:
To you from failing hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high.
If ye break faith with us who die
We shall not sleep, though poppies grow
15 In Flanders fields.

1 9 1 5 1 9 1 9

WALTER DE LA MARE

1873-1956

The Listeners

“Is there anybody there?” said the Traveller,
Knocking on the moonlit door;
And his horse in the silence champed the grasses
Of the forest’s ferny floor:
5 And a bird flew up out of the turret,
Above the Traveller’s head:
And he smote upon the door again a second time;
“Is there anybody there?” he said.
But no one descended to the Traveller;
io No head from the leaf-fringed sill
Leaned over and looked into his grey eyes,

1. Written in April 1915 during the Second Battle who were shot actually rolled down the bank [of
of Ypres, France, in the region (once the country)
the Ypres Canal] into his dressing station... . [H]e called Flanders, which encompasses parts of mod-and I watched [men] burying their dead whenever ern France, Belgium, and the Netherlands.

there was a lull. Thus the crosses, row on row, grew McCrae, a Canadian soldier and physician, sur-into a good-sized cemetery.” The poem, first pub-vived massive German shelling in one of the bloodlished in the December 1915 issue of Punch magiest chapters in World War I. Major-General azine, achieved instant international fame and was

E. W. B. Morrison, who commanded McCrae's memorized by soldiers.

brigade, wrote: "During periods in the battle men

1 2 2 6 / W A L T E R D E L A M A R E

Where he stood perplexed and still.

But only a host of phantom listeners

That dwelt in the lone house then

15 Stood listening in the quiet of the moonlight

To that voice from the world of men:

Stood thronging the faint moonbeams on the dark stair,

That goes down to the empty hall,

Harkening in an air stirred and shaken

20 By the lonely Traveller's call.

And he felt in his heart their strangeness,

Their stillness answering his cry,

While his horse moved, cropping the dark turf,

'Neath the starred and leafy sky;

25 For he suddenly smote on the door, even

Louder, and lifted his head:—

"Tell them I came, and no one answered,

That I kept my word," he said.

Never the least stir made the listeners,

BO Though every word he spake

Fell echoing through the shadowiness of the still house

From the one man left awake:

Ay, they heard his foot upon the stirrup,

And the sound of iron on stone,

35 And how the silence surged softly backward,

When the plunging hoofs were gone.

1 9 1 2

Fare Well

When I lie where shades of darkness

Shall no more assail mine eyes,

Nor the rain make lamentation

When the wind sighs;

5 How will fare the world whose wonder

Was the very proof of me?

Memory fades, must the remembered

Perishing be?

Oh, when this my dust surrenders

io Hand, foot, lip, to dust again,

May these loved and loving faces

Please other men!

May the rusting harvest hedgerow

Still the Traveller's Joy¹ entwine,

15 And as happy children gather

Posies once mine.

1. Wild climbing plant also known as Virgin's Bower or Old Man's Beard.

M E N D I N G W A L L / 1 2 2 7

Look thy last on all things lovely,

Every hour. Let no night

Seal thy sense in deathly slumber

20 Till to delight

Thou have paid thy utmost blessing;

Since that all things thou wouldst praise

Beauty took from those who loved them
In other days.

1918

R O B E R T F R O S T

1874-1963

Mending Wall

Something there is that doesn't love a wall,
That sends the frozen-ground-swell under it,
And spills the upper boulders in the sun;
And makes gaps even two can pass abreast.

5 The work of hunters is another thing:

I have come after them and made repair

Where they have left not one stone on a stone,

But they would have the rabbit out of hiding,

To please the yelping dogs. The gaps I mean,

io No one has seen them made or heard them made,

But at spring mending-time we find them there.

I let my neighbor know beyond the hill;

And on a day we meet to walk the line

And set the wall between us once again.

15 We keep the wall between us as we go.

To each the boulders that have fallen to each.

And some are loaves and some so nearly balls

We have to use a spell to make them balance:

“Stay where you are until our backs are turned!”

20 We wear our fingers rough with handling them.

Oh, just another kind of outdoor game,

One on a side. It comes to little more:

There where it is we do not need the wall:
He is all pine and I am apple orchard.
25 My apple trees will never get across
And eat the cones under his pines, I tell him.
He only says, "Good fences make good neighbors."
Spring is the mischief in me, and I wonder
If I could put a notion in his head:
30 "Why do they make good neighbors? Isn't it
Where there are cows? But here there are no cows.
Before I built a wall I'd ask to know

1 2 2 8 / R O B E R T F R O S T

What I was walling in or walling out,
And to whom I was like to give offense.
35 Something there is that doesn't love a wall,
That wants it down." I could say "Lives" to him,
But it's not elves exactly, and I'd rather
He said it for himself. I see him there Bringing a stone grasped firmly by the top 40 In each hand, like an old-stone savage armed.
He moves in darkness as it seems to me,
Not of woods only and the shade of trees.
He will not go behind his father's saying,
And he likes having thought of it so well
45 He says again, "Good fences make good neighbors."

1 9 1 4

Home Burial

He saw her from the bottom of the stairs
Before she saw him. She was starting down,

Looking back over her shoulder at some fear.
She took a doubtful step and then undid it
5 To raise herself and look again. He spoke Advancing toward her. “What is it you see
From up there always—for I want to know.”
She turned and sank upon her skirts at that,
And her face changed from terrified to dull,
10 He said to gain time: “What is it you see,”
Mounting until she cowered under him.
“I will find out now—you must tell me, dear.”
She, in her place, refused him any help
With the least stiffening of her neck and silence.
15 She let him look, sure that he wouldn’t see,
Blind creature; and awhile he didn’t see.
But at last he murmured, “Oh,” and again, “Oh.”
“What is it—what?” she said.
“Just that I see.”
20 “You don’t,” she challenged. “Tell me what it is.”
“The wonder is I didn’t see at once.
I never noticed it from here before.
I must be wonted to it—that’s the reason. accustomed.
The little graveyard where my people are!
25 So small the window frames the whole of it.
Not so much larger than a bedroom, is it?
There are three stones of slate and one of marble,
H O M E B U R I A L / 1 2 2 9
Broad-shouldered little slabs there in the sunlight
On the sidehill. We haven’t to mind those.

30 But I understand: it is not the stones,
But the child's mound—”
“Don't, don't, don't, don't,” she cried.
She withdrew shrinking from beneath his arm
That rested on the bannister, and slid downstairs;
35 And turned on him with such a daunting look,
He said twice over before he knew himself:
“Can't a man speak of his own child he's lost?”
“Not you! Oh, where's my hat? Oh, I don't need it!
I must get out of here. I must get air.
40 I don't know rightly whether any man can.”
“Amy! Don't go to someone else this time.
Listen to me. I won't come down the stairs.”
He sat and fixed his chin between his fists.
“There's something I should like to ask you, dear.”
45 “You don't know how to ask it.”
“Help me, then.”
Her fingers moved the latch for all reply.
“My words are nearly always an offense.
I don't know how to speak of anything
50 So as to please you. But I might be taught
I should suppose. I can't say I see how.
A man must partly give up being a man
With women-folk. We could have some arrangement
By which I'd bind myself to keep hands off
55 Anything special you're a-mind to name.
Though I don't like such things 'twixt those that love.
Two that don't love can't live together without them.

But two that do can't live together with them."
She moved the latch a little. "Don't—don't go.
60 Don't carry it to someone else this time.
Tell me about it if it's something human.
Let me into your grief. I'm not so much
Unlike other folks as your standing there
Apart would make me out. Give me my chance.
65 I do think, though, you overdo it a little.
What was it brought you up to think it the thing
To take your mother-loss of a first child
So inconsolably—in the face of love.
You'd think his memory might be satisfied—"
70 "There you go sneering now!"

1 2 3 0 / R O B E R T F R O S T

"I'm not, I'm not!
You make me angry. I'll come down to you.
God, what a woman! And it's come to this,
A man can't speak of his own child that's dead."
75 "You can't because you don't know how to speak.
If you had any feelings, you that dug
With your own hand—how could you?—his little grave;
I saw you from that very window there,
Making the gravel leap and leap in air,
so Leap up, like that, like that, and land so lightly
And roll back down the mound beside the hole.
I thought, Who is that man? I didn't know you.
And I crept down the stairs and up the stairs
To look again, and still your spade kept lifting.

85 Then you came in. I heard your rumbling voice
Out in the kitchen, and I don't know why,
But I went near to see with my own eyes.
You could sit there with the stains on your shoes
Of the fresh earth from your own baby's grave
90 And talk about your everyday concerns.
You had stood the spade up against the wall Outside there in the entry, for I saw it."
"I shall laugh the worst laugh I ever laughed.
I'm cursed. God, if I don't believe I'm cursed."
95 "I can repeat the very words you were saying.
Three foggy mornings and one rainy day
Will rot the best birch fence a man can build.
Think of it, talk like that at such a time!
What had how long it takes a birch to rot
100 To do with what was in the darkened parlor.
You couldn't care! The nearest friends can go
With anyone to death, comes so far short
They might as well not try to go at all.
No, from the time when one is sick to death,
105 One is alone, and he dies more alone.
Friends make pretense of following to the grave,
But before one is in it, their minds are turned
And making the best of their way back to life
And living people, and things they understand.
110 But the world's evil. I won't have grief so
If I can change it. Oh, I won't, I won't!"
"There, you have said it all and you feel better.

You won't go now. You're crying. Close the door.
The heart's gone out of it: why keep it up.
115 Amy! There's someone coming down the road!"
"You—oh, you think the talk is all. I must go—Somewhere out of this house. How can I make you—"

AFTER APPLE - PICKING / 1 2 3 1

"If—you—do!" She was opening the door wider.
"Where do you mean to go? First tell me that.
120 I'll follow and bring you back by force. I will!—"

1 9 1 4

After Apple-Picking

My long two-pointed ladder's sticking through a tree Toward heaven still,

And there's a barrel that I didn't fill

Beside it, and there may be two or three

5 Apples I didn't pick upon some bough.

But I am done with apple-picking now.

Essence of winter sleep is on the night,

The scent of apples: I am drowsing off.

I cannot rub the strangeness from my sight

io I got from looking through a pane of glass

I skimmed this morning from the drinking trough

And held against the world of hoary grass.

It melted, and I let it fall and break.

But I was well

15 Upon my way to sleep before it fell,

And I could tell

What form my dreaming was about to take.

Magnified apples appear and disappear,
Stem end and blossom end,
20 And every fleck of russet showing clear.
My instep arch not only keeps the ache,
It keeps the pressure of a ladder-round.
I feel the ladder sway as the boughs bend.
And I keep hearing from the cellar bin
25 The rumbling sound
Of load on load of apples coming in.
For I have had too much
Of apple-picking: I am overtired
Of the great harvest I myself desired.
30 There were ten thousand thousand fruit to touch,
Cherish in hand, lift down, and not let fall.
For all
That struck the earth,
No matter if not bruised or spiked with stubble,
35 Went surely to the cider-apple heap
As of no worth.
One can see what will trouble
This sleep of mine, whatever sleep it is.
Were he not gone,
40 The woodchuck could say whether it's like his Long sleep, as I describe its coming on,
Or just some human sleep.

1 9 1 4

1 2 3 2 /

R O B E R T F R O S T

The Wood-Pile

Out walking in the frozen swamp one gray day,
I paused and said, "I will turn back from here.
No, I will go on farther—and we shall see."
The hard snow held me, save where now and then
One foot went through. The view was all in lines
Straight up and down of tall slim trees Too much alike to mark or name a place by
So as to say for certain I was here
Or somewhere else: I was just far from home.
A small bird flew before me. He was careful
To put a tree between us when he lighted,
And say no word to tell me who he was
Who was so foolish as to think what he thought.
He thought that I was after him for a feather—
The white one in his tail; like one who takes Everything said as personal to himself.
One flight out sideways would have undeceived him.
And then there was a pile of wood for which I forgot him and let his little fear
Carry him off the way I might have gone,
Without so much as wishing him good-night.
He went behind it to make his last stand.
It was a cord of maple, cut and split
And piled—and measured, four by four by eight.
And not another like it could I see.
No runner tracks in this year's snow looped near it.
And it was older sure than this year's cutting,

Or even last year's or the year's before.
The wood was gray and the bark warping off it
And the pile somewhat sunken. Clematis
Had wound strings round and round it like a bundle.
What held it though on one side was a tree
Still growing, and on one a stake and prop,
These latter about to fall. I thought that only Someone who lived in turning to fresh tasks Could so forget his handiwork on which
He spent himself, the labor of his ax,
And leave it there far from a useful fireplace
To warm the frozen swamp as best it could
With the slow smokeless burning of decay.

1 9 1 4

The Road Not Taken

Two roads diverged in a yellow wood,
And sorry I could not travel both

B I R C H E S / 1 2 3 3

And be one traveler, long I stood
And looked down one as far as I could 5 To where it bent in the undergrowth;
Then took the other, as just as fair,
And having perhaps the better claim,
Because it was grassy and wanted wear;
Though as for that the passing there 10 Had worn them really about the same,
And both that morning equally lay
In leaves no step had trodden black.

Oh, I kept the first for another day!
Yet knowing how way leads on to way,
15 I doubted if I should ever come back.
I shall be telling this with a sigh
Somewhere ages and ages hence:
Two roads diverged in a wood, and I—
I took the one less traveled by,
20 And that has made all the difference.

1 9 1 6

The Oven Bird

There is a singer everyone has heard,
Loud, a mid-summer and a mid-wood bird,
Who makes the solid tree trunks sound again.
He says that leaves are old and that for flowers
5 Mid-summer is to spring as one to ten.
He says the early petal-fall is past
When pear and cherry bloom went down in showers
On sunny days a moment overcast;
And comes that other fall we name the fall,
10 He says the highway dust is over all.
The bird would cease and be as other birds
But that he knows in singing not to sing.
The question that he frames in all but words
Is what to make of a diminished thing.

1 9 1 6

Birches

When I see birches bend to left and right
Across the lines of straighter darker trees,

I like to think some boy's been swinging them.

1 2 3 4 / R O B E R T F R O S T

But swinging doesn't bend them down to stay

5 As ice-storms do. Often you must have seen them

Loaded with ice a sunny winter morning

After a rain. They click upon themselves

As the breeze rises, and turn many-colored

As the stir cracks and crazes their enamel.

10 Soon the sun's warmth makes them shed crystal shells

Shattering and avalanching on the snow-crust—

Such heaps of broken glass to sweep away

You'd think the inner dome of heaven had fallen.

They are dragged to the withered bracken⁰ by the load, ferns

15 And they seem not to break; though once they are bowed

So low for long, they never right themselves:

You may see their trunks arching in the woods

Years afterwards, trailing their leaves on the ground

Like girls on hands and knees that throw their hair

20 Before them over their heads to dry in the sun.

But I was going to say when Truth broke in

With all her matter-of-fact about the ice-storm

I should prefer to have some boy bend them

As he went out and in to fetch the cows—

25 Some boy too far from town to learn baseball,

Whose only play was what he found himself,

Summer or winter, and could play alone.

One by one he subdued his father's trees

By riding them down over and over again

30 Until he took the stiffness out of them,
And not one but hung limp, not one was left
For him to conquer. He learned all there was
To learn about not launching out too soon
And so not carrying the tree away
35 Clear to the ground. He always kept his poise
To the top branches, climbing carefully
With the same pains you use to fill a cup
Up to the brim, and even above the brim.
Then he flung outward, feet first, with a swish,
40 Kicking his way down through the air to the ground.
So was I once myself a swinger of birches.
And so I dream of going back to be.
It's when I'm weary of considerations,
And life is too much like a pathless wood
45 Where your face burns and tickles with the cobwebs
Broken across it, and one eye is weeping
From a twig's having lashed across it open.
I'd like to get away from earth awhile
And then come back to it and begin over.
50 May no fate willfully misunderstand me
And half grant what I wish and snatch me away
Not to return. Earth's the right place for love:
I don't know where it's likely to go better.
I'd like to go by climbing a birch tree,
55 And climb black branches up a snow-white trunk

THE HILL WIFE / 1 2 3 5

Toward heaven, till the tree could bear no more,

But dipped its top and set me down again.
That would be good both going and coming back.
One could do worse than be a swinger of birches.

1 9 1 6

The Hill Wife

Loneliness

H E R W O R D

One ought not to have to care
So much as you and I Care when the birds come round the house
To seem to say good-by;
5 Or care so much when they come back
With whatever it is they sing;
The truth being we are as much Too glad for the one thing
As we are too sad for the other here—
io With birds that fill their breasts
But with each other and themselves
And their built or driven nests.

House Fear

Always—I tell you this they learned—Always at night when they returned
To the lonely house from far away
To lamps unlighted and fire gone gray,
5 They learned to rattle the lock and key
To give whatever might chance to be Warning and time to be off in flight:
And preferring the out- to the in-door night,

They learned to leave the house-door wide
io Until they had lit the lamp inside.

The Smile

H E R W O R D

I didn't like the way he went away.
That smile! It never came of being gay.
Still he smiled—did you see him?—I was sure!
Perhaps because we gave him only bread
5 And the wretch knew from that that we were poor.
Perhaps because he let us give instead

1 2 3 6 / R O B E R T F R O S T

Of seizing from us as he might have seized.
Perhaps he mocked at us for being wed,
Or being very young (and he was pleased 10 To have a vision of us old and dead).
I wonder how far down the road he's got.
He's watching from the woods as like as not.

The Oft-Repeated Dream

She had no saying dark enough
For the dark pine that kept Forever trying the window-latch
Of the room where they slept.
5 The tireless but ineffectual hands
That with every futile pass
Made the great tree seem as a little bird
Before the mystery of glass!
It never had been inside the room,
io And only one of the two

Was afraid in an oft-repeated dream
Of what the tree might do.

The Impulse

It was too lonely for her there,
And too wild,
And since there were but two of them,
And no child,
5 And work was little in the house,
She was free,
And followed where he furrowed field,
Or felled tree.

She rested on a log and tossed

io The fresh chips,

With a song only to herself

On her lips.

And once she went to break a bough

Of black alder.

15 She strayed so far she scarcely heard

When he called her—

And didn't answer—didn't speak—

Or return.

She stood, and then she ran and hid

20 In the fern.

He never found her, though he looked

Everywhere,

ACQUAINTED WITH THE N I G H T / 1 2 3 7

And he asked at her mother's house

Was she there.

25 Sudden and swift and light as that
The ties gave,
And he learned of finalities
Besides the grave.

1916

Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening
Whose woods these are I think I know.
His house is in the village though;
He will not see me stopping here
To watch his woods fill up with snow.

5 My little horse must think it queer
To stop without a farmhouse near Between the woods and frozen lake
The darkest evening of the year.

He gives his harness bells a shake
io To ask if there is some mistake.
The only other sound's the sweep
Of easy wind and downy flake.

The woods are lovely, dark and deep,
But I have promises to keep,

15 And miles to go before I sleep,
And miles to go before I sleep.

1923

Acquainted with the Night
I have been one acquainted with the night.
I have walked out in rain—and back in rain.
I have outwalked the furthest city light.
I have looked down the saddest city lane.

5 I have passed by the watchman on his beat
And dropped my eyes, unwilling to explain.
I have stood still and stopped the sound of feet
When far away an interrupted cry
Came over houses from another street,

1 2 3 8 / R O B E R T F R O S T

10 But not to call me back or say good-by;
And further still at an unearthly height,
One luminary clock against the sky
Proclaimed the time was neither wrong nor right.
I have been one acquainted with the night.

1 9 2 8

West-Running Brook

“Fred, where is north?”

“North? North is there, my love.

The brook runs west.”

“West-running Brook then call it.”

5 (West-running Brook men call it to this day.)

“What does it think it’s doing running west

When all the other country brooks flow east

To reach the ocean? It must be the brook

Can trust itself to go by contraries

io The way I can with you—and you with me—

Because we’re—we’re—I don’t know what we are.

What are we?”

“Young or new?”

“We must be something.

15 We’ve said we two. Let’s change that to we three.

As you and I are married to each other,
We'll both be married to the brook. We'll build
Our bridge across it, and the bridge shall be
Our arm thrown over it asleep beside it.
20 Look, look, it's waving to us with a wave
To let us know it hears me.”
“Why, my dear,
That wave's been standing off this jut of shore—”
(The black stream, catching on a sunken rock,
25 Flung backward on itself in one white wave,
And the white water rode the black forever,
Not gaining but not losing, like a bird
White feathers from the struggle of whose breast
Flecked the dark stream and flecked the darker pool
30 Below the point, and were at last driven wrinkled
In a white scarf against the far shore alders.)
“That wave's been standing off this jut of shore
Ever since rivers, I was going to say,
Were made in heaven. It wasn't waved to us.”

WEST - RUNNING BROOK / 1 2 3 9

35 “It wasn't, yet it was. If not to you
It was to me—in an annunciation.”
“Oh, if you take it off to lady-land,
As't were the country of the Amazons1
We men must see you to the confines of 40 And leave you there, ourselves forbid to enter,—
It is your brook! I have no more to say.”
“Yes, you have, too. Go on. You thought of something.”

“Speaking of contraries, see how the brook
In that white wave runs counter to itself.
45 It is from that in water we were from Long, long before we were from any creature.
Here we, in our impatience of the steps,
Get back to the beginning of beginnings,
The stream of everything that runs away.
50 Some say existence like a Pirouot
And Pirouette,² forever in one place,
Stands still and dances, but it runs away,
It seriously, sadly, runs away
To fill the abyss’ void with emptiness.
55 It flows beside us in this water brook,
But it flows over us. It flows between us
To separate us for a panic moment.
It flows between us, over us, and with us.
And it is time, strength, tone, light, life, and love—
60 And even substance lapsing unsubstantial;
The universal cataract of death
That spends to nothingness—and unresisted,
Save by some strange resistance in itself,
Not just a swerving, but a throwing back,
65 As if regret were in it and were sacred.
It has this throwing backward on itself
So that the fall of most of it is always Raising a little, sending up a little.
Our life runs down in sending up the clock.
70 The brook runs down in sending up our life.

The sun runs down in sending up the brook.
And there is something sending up the sun.
It is this backward motion toward the source,
Against the stream, that most we see ourselves in,
75 The tribute of the current to the source.
It is from this in nature we are from.
It is most us.”

“Today will be the day
You said so.”

1. Legendary female warriors who inhabited a 2. Traditional characters in French pantomime, country without men.

1240 / R O B E R T F R O S T

so “No, today will be the day
You said the brook was called West-running Brook.”
“Today will be the day of what we both said.”

1928

Neither Out Far Nor In Deep
The people along the sand
All turn and look one way.
They turn their back on the land.
They look at the sea all day.
5 As long as it takes to pass
A ship keeps raising its hull;
The wetter ground like glass
Reflects a standing gull.
The land may vary more;
io But wherever the truth may be—
The water comes ashore,

And the people look at the sea.

They cannot look out far.

They cannot look in deep.

15 But when was that ever a bar

To any watch they keep?

1936

Design

I found a dimpled spider, fat and white,

On a white heal-all,³ holding up a moth

Like a white piece of rigid satin cloth—

Assorted characters of death and blight

5 Mixed ready to begin the morning right,

Like the ingredients of a witches' broth—

A snow-drop spider, a flower like a froth,

And dead wings carried like a paper kite.

What had that flower to do with being white,

io The wayside blue and innocent heal-all?

What brought the kindred spider to that height,

Then steered the white moth thither in the night?

3. One of a variety of plants in the mint family; the flowers are usually violet-blue.

T H E S I L K E N T E N T / 1 2 4 1

What but design of darkness to appall?—

If design govern in a thing so small.

1936

Provide, Provide

The witch that came (the withered hag)

To wash the steps with pail and rag,

Was once the beauty Abishag,⁴
The picture pride of Hollywood.
Too many fall from great and good
For you to doubt the likelihood.
Die early and avoid the fate.
Or if predestined to die late,
Make up your mind to die in state.
10 Make the whole stock exchange your own!
If need be occupy a throne,
Where nobody can call you crone.
Some have relied on what they knew;
Others on being simply true.

15

What worked for them might work for you.
No memory of having starred Atones for later disregard,
Or keeps the end from being hard.
Better to go down dignified

20

With boughten friendship at your side Than none at all. Provide, provide!

1934 1936

The Silken Tent

She is as in a field a silken tent
At midday when a sunny summer breeze
Has dried the dew and all its ropes relent,
So that in guys⁵ it gently sways at ease,
5 And its supporting central cedar pole,

That is its pinnacle to heavenward

And signifies the sureness of the soul,

4. A beautiful maiden brought to warm King 5. Ropes or cables used to steady an object.

David in his old age (1 Kings 1.2-4).

1 2 4 2 / R O B E R T F R O S T

Seems to owe naught to any single cord,

But strictly held by none, is loosely bound

10 By countless silken ties of love and thought

To everything on earth the compass round,

And only by one's going slightly taut

In the capriciousness of summer air

Is of the slightest bondage made aware.

1942

Come In

As I came to the edge of the woods,

Thrush music—hark!

Now if it was dusk outside,

Inside it was dark.

5 Too dark in the woods for a bird

By sleight of wing

To better its perch for the night,

Though it still could sing.

The last of the light of the sun

io That had died in the west

Still lived for one song more

In a thrush's breast.

Far in the pillared dark

Thrush music went—15 Almost like a call to come in
To the dark and lament.
But no, I was out for stars:
I would not come in.
I meant not even if asked,
20 And I hadn't been.

1942

Never Again Would Birds' Song Be the Same⁶
He would declare and could himself believe
That the birds there in all the garden round
From having heard the daylong voice of Eve
Had added to their own an oversound,
5 Her tone of meaning but without the words.
Admittedly an eloquence so soft

6. Cf. Genesis 2.18 ff., God's creation of Eve for Adam.

THE GIFT O U T R I G H T / 1 2 4 3

Could only have had an influence on birds
When call or laughter carried it aloft.
Be that as may be, she was in their song.
10 Moreover her voice upon their voices crossed
Had now persisted in the woods so long
That probably it never would be lost.
Never again would birds' song be the same.
And to do that to birds was why she came.

1942

The Most of It

He thought he kept the universe alone;

For all the voice in answer he could wake
Was but the mocking echo of his own
From some tree-hidden cliff across the lake.
5 Some morning from the boulder-broken beach
He would cry out on life, that what it wants
Is not its own love back in copy speech,
But counter-love, original response.
And nothing ever came of what he cried
10 Unless it was the embodiment that crashed
In the cliff's talus⁷ on the other side,
And then in the far distant water splashed,
But after a time allowed for it to swim,
Instead of proving human when it neared
15 And someone else additional to him,
As a great buck it powerfully appeared,
Pushing the crumpled water up ahead,
And landed pouring like a waterfall,
And stumbled through the rocks with horny tread,
20 And forced the underbrush—and that was all.

1942

The Gift Outright

The land was ours before we were the land's.
She was our land more than a hundred years
Before we were her people. She was ours
In Massachusetts, in Virginia,
5 But we were England's, still colonials,
Possessing what we still were unpossessed by,
Possessed by what we now no more possessed.

Something we were withholding made us weak
Until we found it was ourselves

7. Sloping rock debris.

1 2 4 4 / R O B E R T F R O S T

10 We were withholding from our land of living,
And forthwith found salvation in surrender.

Such as we were we gave ourselves outright
(The deed of gift was many deeds of war)

To the land vaguely realizing westward,

15 But still unstoried, artless, unenhanced,
Such as she was, such as she would become.

1942

Directive

Back out of all this now too much for us,

Back in a time made simple by the loss

Of detail, burned, dissolved, and broken off

Like graveyard marble sculpture in the weather,

5 There is a house that is no more a house

Upon a farm that is no more a farm

And in a town that is no more a town.

The road there, if you'll let a guide direct you

Who only has at heart your getting lost,

10 May seem as if it should have been a quarry—

Great monolithic knees the former town

Long since gave up pretense of keeping covered.

And there's a story in a book about it:

Besides the wear of iron wagon wheels

15 The ledges show lines ruled southeast northwest,

The chisel work of an enormous Glacier
That braced his feet against the Arctic Pole.
You must not mind a certain coolness from him
Still said to haunt this side of Panther Mountain.
20 Nor need you mind the serial ordeal
Of being watched from forty cellar holes
As if by eye pairs out of forty firkins.⁰ small wooden tubs
As for the woods' excitement over you
That sends light rustle rushes to their leaves, 25 Charge that to upstart inexperience.
Where were they all not twenty years ago?
They think too much of having shaded out
A few old pecker-fretted⁸ apple trees.
Make yourself up a cheering song of how 30 Someone's road home from work this once was,
Who may be just ahead of you on foot
Or creaking with a buggy load of grain.
The height of the adventure is the height
Of country where two village cultures faded
35 Into each other. Both of them are lost.
And if you're lost enough to find yourself
By now, pull in your ladder road behind you
And put a sign up CLOSED to all but me.

8. I.e., marked by woodpeckers.

P A T T E R N S / 1 2 4 5

Then make yourself at home. The only field
40 Now left's no bigger than a harness gall.⁹
First there's the children's house of make believe,

Some shattered dishes underneath a pine,
The playthings in the playhouse of the children.
Weep for what little things could make them glad.
45 Then for the house that is no more a house,
But only a belilaced cellar hole,
Now slowly closing like a dent in dough.
This was no playhouse but a house in earnest.
Your destination and your destiny's
50 A brook that was the water of the house,
Cold as a spring as yet so near its source,
Too lofty and original to rage.
(We know the valley streams that when aroused
Will leave their tatters hung on barb and thorn.)
55 I have kept hidden in the instep arch
Of an old cedar at the waterside
A broken drinking goblet like the Grail
Under a spell so the wrong ones can't find it,
So can't get saved, as Saint Mark says they mustn't.¹
60 (I stole the goblet from the children's playhouse.)
Here are your waters and your watering place.
Drink and be whole again beyond confusion.

1947

AMY LOWELL

1874-1925

Patterns

I walk down the garden paths,
And all the daffodils
Are blowing, and the bright blue squills.¹

I walk down the patterned garden-paths
5 In my stiff, brocaded gown.
With my powdered hair and jewelled fan,
I too am a rare
Pattern. As I wander down
The garden paths.

io My dress is richly figured,
And the train
Makes a pink and silver stain

9. A sore caused by chafing against a harness.

the Last Supper, the object of many quests in

1. Cf. Mark 16.16: "He that believeth and is bapmedieval and Arthurian romance.

tized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall

1. Plants of the lily family.

be damned." The Grail: the cup used by Jesus at

1 2 4 6 / A M Y L O W E L L

On the gravel, and the thrift

Of the borders.

15 Just a plate of current fashion,

Tripping by in high-heeled, ribboned shoes.

Not a softness anywhere about me,

Only whalebone and brocade.

And I sink on a seat in the shade

20 Of a lime tree. For my passion

Wars against the stiff brocade.

The daffodils and squills

Flutter in the breeze

As they please.

25 And I weep;

For the lime-tree is in blossom

And one small flower has dropped upon my bosom.

And the plashing⁰ of waterdrops splashing

In the marble fountain

30 Comes down the garden-paths.

The dripping never stops.

Underneath my stiffened gown

Is the softness of a woman bathing in a marble basin,

A basin in the midst of hedges grown

35 So thick, she cannot see her lover hiding,

But she guesses he is near,

And the sliding of the water

Seems the stroking of a dear

Hand upon her.

40 What is Summer in a fine brocaded gown!

I should like to see it lying in a heap upon the ground.

All the pink and silver crumpled up on the ground.

I would be the pink and silver as I ran along the paths,

And he would stumble after,

45 Bewildered by my laughter.

I should see the sun flashing from his sword-hilt and the buckles on his shoes.

I would choose

To lead him in a maze along the patterned paths,

A bright and laughing maze for my heavy-booted lover.

50 Till he caught me in the shade,
And the buttons of his waistcoat bruised my body as he clasped me,

Aching, melting, unafraid.

With the shadows of the leaves and the sundrops,
And the plopping of the waterdrops,

55 All about us in the open afternoon—

I am very like to swoon

With the weight of this brocade,

For the sun sifts through the shade.

Underneath the fallen blossom

60 In my bosom,

Is a letter I have hid.

P A T T E R N S / 1 2 4 7

It was brought to me this morning by a rider from the Duke.

“Madam, we regret to inform you that Lord Hartwell
Died in action Thursday se nnight.’ 0 a week ago

65 As I read it in the white, morning sunlight,
The letters squirmed like snakes.

“Any answer, Madam,” said my footman.

“No,” I told him.

“See that the messenger takes some refreshment.

70 No, no answer.”

And I walked into the garden,

Up and down the patterned paths,

In my stiff, correct brocade.

The blue and yellow flowers stood up proudly in the sun,

75 Each one.

I stood upright too,
Held rigid to the pattern
By the stiffness of my gown.
Up and down I walked,
so Up and down.
In a month he would have been my husband.
In a month, here, underneath this lime,
We would have broke the pattern;
He for me, and I for him,
85 He as Colonel, I as Lady,
On this shady seat.
He had a whim
That sunlight carried blessing.
And I answered, "It shall be as you have said."
90 Now he is dead.
In Summer and in Winter I shall walk
Up and down
The patterned garden-paths
In my stiff, brocaded gown.
95 The squills and daffodils
Will give place to pillared roses, and to asters, and to snow.
I shall go
Up and down,
In my gown.
100 Gorgeously arrayed, Boned and stayed.
And the softness of my body will be guarded from embrace
By each button, hook, and lace.

For the man who should loose me is dead,
105 Fighting with the Duke in Flanders,²
In a pattern called a war.

Christ! What are patterns for?

1916

2. A medieval country; later the term for a region comprised of parts of France, Belgium, and the Netherlands. The poem was written during World War I, when Flanders was also a famous site of battle.

1 2 4 8 / G E R T R U D E S T E I N

The Weather-Cock Points South

I put your leaves aside,

One by one:

The stiff, broad outer leaves;

The smaller ones,

5 Pleasant to touch, veined with purple;

The glazed inner leaves.

One by one

I parted you from your leaves,

Until you stood up like a white flower

10 Swaying slightly in the evening wind.

White flower,

Flower of wax, of jade, of unstreaked agate;

Flower with surfaces of ice,

With shadows faintly crimson.

15 Where in all the garden is there such a flower?

The stars crowd through the lilac leaves

To look at you.

The low moon brightens you with silver.

The bud is more than the calyx.3

20 There is nothing to equal a white bud,

Of no colour, and of all,

Burnished by moonlight,

Thrust upon by a softly-swinging wind.

1919

G E R T R U D E S T E I N

1874-1946

*From Stanzas in Meditation*1

Part I

STANZA XIII

She may count three little daisies very well
By multiplying to either six nine or fourteen
Or she can be well mentioned as twelve
Which they may like which they can like soon

3. Outermost group of the parts of a flower.

‘of,’ ‘not,’ ‘have,’ ‘about,’ and so on, though now and

1. Written in the same year as Stein’s hugely pop-then Miss Stein throws in an orange, a lilac, or an ular Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas, Stanzas in

Albert to remind us that it really is the world, our

Meditation is a long-neglected five-part poem with world, that she has been talking about” [American autobiographical elements, but which resists poet John Ashbery (b. 1927; see pp. 1736-40)]. In straightforward interpretation. “These austere

the Autobiography, Stein calls the Stanzas “her real

‘stanzas’ are made up almost entirely of colorless achievement of the commonplace.”

connecting words such as ‘where,’ ‘which,’ ‘there,’

STANZAS IN M E D I T A T I O N / 1

5 Or more than ever which they wish as a button

Just as much as they arrange which they wish

Or they can attire where they need as which say

Can they call a hat or a hat a day
Made merry because it is so.

Part III

STANZA II

I think very well of Susan but I do not know her name

I think very well of Ellen but which is not the same

I think very well of Paul I tell him not to do so

I think very well of Francis Charles but do I do so

I think very well of Thomas but I do not not do so

I think very well of not very well of William

I think very well of any very well of him

I think very well of him.

It is remarkable how quickly they learn

But if they learn and it is very remarkable how quickly they learn

It makes not only but by and by

And they can not only be not here

But not there

Which after all makes no difference

After all this does not make any does not make any difference

I add added it to it.

I could rather be rather be here.

STANZA V

It is not a range of a mountain

Of average of a range of a average mountain

Nor can they of which of which of arrange

To have been not which they which

5 Can add a mountain to this.

Upper an add it then maintain

That if they were busy so to speak

Add it to and

It not only why they could not add ask

io Or when just when more each other

There is no each other as they like

They add why then emerge an add in

It is of absolutely no importance how often they add it.

Part V

STANZA XXXVIII

Which I wish to say is this
There is no beginning to an end
But there is a beginning and an end
To beginning.

5 Why yes of course.

1 2 5 0 / T R U M B U L L S T I C K N E Y

Any one can learn that north of course
Is not only north but north as north
Why were they worried.

What I wish to say is this.

10 Yes of course

STANZA LXIII

I wish that I had spoken only of it all.

1932 1956

T R U M B U L L S T I C K N E Y

1874-1904

[And, the Last Day Being Come, Man Stood Alone]

And, the last day being come,¹ Man stood alone
Ere sunrise on the world's dismantled verge,⁰ edge
Awaiting how from everywhere should urge
The Coming of the Lord. And, behold, none
5 Did come,—but indistinct from every realm
Of earth and air and water, growing more

And louder, shriller, heavier, a roar
Up the dun^o atmosphere did overwhelm dark
His ears; and as he looked affrighted round
io Every manner of beast innumerable All thro' the shadows crying grew, until
The wailing was like grass upon the ground.
Asudden then within his human side
Their anguish, since the goad² he wielded first,
15 And, since he gave them not to drink, their thirst,
Darted compressed and vital.—As he died,
Low in the East now lighting gorgeously
He saw the last sea-serpent iris-mailed³
Which, with a spear transfixed, yet availed 20 To pluck the sun down into the dead sea.

1905

1. Stickney's apocalyptic vision of the Lord's com- 2. A pointed stick for driving cattle and other ani-ing partakes of imagery in Revelation and other mals.

books of the Bible, but is essentially original. 3. In rainbow-colored armor.

ANATHENIANGARDEN / 1251

An Athenian Garden

The burned and dusty garden said:

“My leaves are echoes, and thy earth

Is packed with footsteps of the dead.

“The strength of spring-time brought to birth

5 Some needles on the crooked fir,—

A rose, a laurel⁴—little worth.

“Come here, ye dreaming souls that err

Among the immortals of the grave:5
My summer is your sepulchre.
10 “On earth what darker voices rave
Than now this sea-breeze, driving dust
And whirling radiance wave on wave,
“With lulls so fearful thro’ the gust
That on the shapeless flower-bed
15 Like timber splits the yellow crust.
“O thirsty, thirsty are the dead,6
Still thirsty, ever unallayed.
Where is no water, bring no bread.”
I then had almost answer made,
20 When round the path in pleasure drew
Three golden children to the shade.
They stirred the dust with pail and hoe.
Then did the littlest from his fears
Come up and with his eyes of blue 25 Give me some berries seriously.
And as he turned to his brother, I Looked after him thro’ happy tears.

1903 1905

4. The laurel is a symbol of glory; the fir, of time; lots that allow them to choose, wisely or unwisely, the rose, of love.

from an assortment of next lives (Republic 10).

5. Stickney, a devotee of the ancient Greek phi-

6. In Greek mythology, the dead are often represented. In Plato's Republic, the philosopher Plato, may be referring to Plato's Myth of sented as thirsty.

Er, according to which immortal souls are given

1 2 5 2 / C A R L S A N D B U R G

From Fragments

IX7

I hear a river thro' the valley wander

Whose water runs, the song alone remaining.

A rainbow stands and summer passes under.

1905

C A R L S A N D B U R G

1878-1967

Chicago

Hog Butcher for the World,

Tool Maker, Stacker of Wheat,

Player with Railroads and the Nation's Freight Handler;

Stormy, husky, brawling,

5 City of the Big Shoulders:

They tell me you are wicked and I believe them, for I have seen your

painted women under the gas lamps luring the farm boys.

And they tell me you are crooked and I answer: Yes, it is true I have seen the gunman kill and go free to kill again.

And they tell me you are brutal and my reply is: On the faces of women and children I have seen the marks of wanton hunger.

And having answered so I turn once more to those who sneer at this

my city, and I give them back the sneer and say to them:

io Come and show me another city with lifted head singing so proud to be alive and coarse and strong and cunning.

Flinging magnetic curses amid the toil of piling job on job, here is a tall bold slugger set vivid against the little soft cities;

Fierce as a dog with tongue lapping for action, cunning as a savage

pitted against the wilderness,

Bareheaded,

Shoveling,

15 Wrecking,

Planning,

Building, breaking, rebuilding,

Under the smoke, dust all over his mouth, laughing with white

teeth,

Under the terrible burden of destiny laughing as a young man

laughs,

20 Laughing even as an ignorant fighter laughs who has never lost a battle,

7. Cf. John Hollander's homage to this poem, "Variations on a Fragment by Trumbull Stickney" (p. 1777).

A D L E S T R O P / 1 2 5 3

Bragging and laughing that under his wrist is the pulse,
and under

his ribs the heart of the people,

Laughing!

Laughing the stormy, husky, brawling laughter of Youth, half-naked,
sweating, proud to be Hog Butcher, Tool Maker, Stacker of Wheat, Player with Railroads and Freight Handler to the Nation.

1916

Grass

Pile the bodies high at Austerlitz¹ and Waterloo.

Shovel them under and let me work—

I am the grass; I cover all.

And pile them high at Gettysburg

5 And pile them high at Ypres and Verdun.

Shovel them under and let me work.

Two years, ten years, and passengers ask the conductor:

What place is this?

Where are we now?

I am the grass.

Let me work.

1918

EDWARD THOMAS

1878-1917

Adlestrop¹

Yes, I remember Adlestrop—

The name, because one afternoon

Of heat the express-train drew up there

Unwontedly. It was late June.

5 The steam hissed. Someone cleared his throat.

No one left and no one came

On the bare platform. What I saw

Was Adlestrop—only the name

1. The places listed here are sites of major, bloody 1. Village in Gloucestershire, southwest-central battles in the Napoleonic Wars, the Civil War, and England.

World War I.

1 2 5 4 / E D W A R D T H O M A S

And willows, willow-herb, and grass,

10 And meadowsweet, and haycocks dry,

No whit less still and lonely fair

Than the high cloudlets in the sky.

And for that minute a blackbird sang

Close by, and round him, mistier,

15 Farther and farther, all the birds

Of Oxfordshire and Gloucestershire.

1 9 1 5 1 9 1 7

The Owl

Downhill I came, hungry, and yet not starved;

Cold, yet had heat within me that was proof

Against the North wind; tired, yet so that rest

Had seemed the sweetest thing under a roof.

5 Then at the inn I had food, fire, and rest,

Knowing how hungry, cold, and tired was I.

All of the night was quite barred out except

An owl's cry, a most melancholy cry

Shaken out long and clear upon the hill,

io No merry note, nor cause of merriment,

But one telling me plain what I escaped

And others could not, that night, as in I went.

And salted was my food, and my repose,
Salted and sobered, too, by the bird's voice
15 Speaking for all who lay under the stars,
Soldiers and poor, unable to rejoice.

1 9 1 7

In Memoriam [Easter 1915]

The flowers left thick at nightfall in the wood
This Eastertide call into mind the men,
Now far from home, who, with their sweethearts, should
Have gathered them and will do never again.

1 9 1 5

1 9 1 7

As THE TEAM'S HEAD BRASS / 1 2 5 5

Rain

Rain, midnight rain, nothing but the wild rain
On this bleak hut, and solitude, and me
Remembering again that I shall die
And neither hear the rain nor give it thanks
5 For washing me cleaner than I have been Since I was born into this solitude.

Blessed are the dead that the rain rains upon:

But here I pray that none whom once I loved
Is dying tonight or lying still awake

10 Solitary, listening to the rain,

Either in pain or thus in sympathy

Helpless among the living and the dead,

Like a cold water among broken reeds,

Myriads of broken reeds all still and stiff,

15 Like me who have no love which this wild rain
Has not dissolved except the love of death,
If love it be towards what is perfect and Cannot, the tempest tells me, disappoint.

1916 1917

As the team's head brass²

As the team's head brass flashed out on the turn
The lovers disappeared into the wood.

I sat among the boughs of the fallen elm

That strewed an angle of the fallow,³ and

5 Watched the plough narrowing a yellow square
Of charlock.⁴ Every time the horses turned

Instead of treading me down, the ploughman leaned
Upon the handles to say or ask a word,
About the weather, next about the war.

io Scraping the share he faced towards the wood,
And screwed along the furrow till the brass flashed Once more.

The blizzard felled the elm whose crest

I sat in, by a woodpecker's round hole,

The ploughman said. "When will they take it away?"

15 "When the war's over." So the talk began—

One minute and an interval of ten,

A minute more and the same interval.

"Have you been out?" "No." "And don't want to, perhaps?"

"If I could only come back again, I should.

20 I could spare an arm. I shouldn't want to lose

2. A team of horses pulling a plow, the head brass 3.
Cultivated land left implanted during the grow-being the ornamental brass plaque attached to ing season.

their bridle. 4. Wild mustard, a common, yellow field weed.

1 2 5 6 / W A L L A C E S T E V E N S

A leg. If I should lose my head, why, so, I should want nothing more... Have many g one From here? "Yes." "Many lost?" "Yes, a g ood few.

Only two teams work on the farm this year.

25 One of my mates is dead. The second day I n France they killed him. It was back in Ma rch, The very night of the blizzard, too. No wif He had stayed here we should have mov ed the tree."

" And I should not have a there. Everythin g 30 Would have been different. For it woul d have been Another world." "Ay, and a bett er, though If we could see all all might seem good." Then The lovers came out of the woo d again:

The horses started and for the last time

35 I watched the clod scumble and topple over After the plough share and the stumbl ing team.

1916 1917

WALLACE STEVENS

1879-1955

The Snow Man

One must have a mind of winter

To regard the frost and the boughs

Of the pine-trees crusted with snow;

And have been cold a long time

5 To behold the junipers shagged with ice
, shaggy

The spruces rough in the distant glitter Of the January sun; and not to think

Of any misery in the sound of the wind,

In the sound of a few leaves,

10 Which is the sound of the land

Full of the same wind

That is blowing in the same bare place

For the listener, who listens in the snow, A nd, nothing himself, beholds

15 Nothing that is not there and then nothing that is.

1923

The Emperor of Ice-Cream

Call the roller of big cigars,

The muscular one, and bid him whip

SUNDAY MORNING / 1257

In kitchen cups concupiscent curds.

Let the wenches dawdle in such dress

5 As they are used to wear, and let the boys

Bring flowers in last month's newspapers.

Let be be finale of seem.

The only emperor is the emperor of ice-cream.

Take from the dresser of deal.0 pine or firwood

10 Lacking the three glass knobs, that sheet

On which she embroidered fantails0 once fantail pigeons

And spread it so as to cover her face.

If her horny feet protrude, they come

To show how cold she is, and dumb.

15 Let the lamp affix its beam.

The only emperor is the emperor of ice-cream.

1 9 2 3

Sunday Morning

i

Complacencies of the peignoir,⁰ and late negligee

Coffee and oranges in a sunny chair,

And the green freedom of a cockatoo

Upon a rug mingle to dissipate

5 The holy hush of ancient sacrifice.

She dreams a little, and she feels the dark

Encroachment of that old catastrophe,

As a calm darkens among water-lights.

The pungent oranges and bright, green wings

io Seem things in some procession of the dead,

Winding across wide water, without sound.

The day is like wide water, without sound,

Stilled for the passing of her dreaming feet

Over the seas, to silent Palestine,

15 Dominion of the blood and sepulchre.¹

2

Why should she give her bounty to the dead?

What is divinity if it can come

Only in silent shadows and in dreams?

Shall she not find in comforts of the sun,

20 In pungent fruit and bright, green wings, or else

In any balm or beauty of the earth,

Things to be cherished like the thought of heaven?

Divinity must live within herself:

Passions of rain, or moods in falling snow;

25 Grievings in loneliness, or unsubdued

Elations when the forest blooms; gusty

1. I.e., the holy sepulcher, the cave in Jerusalem where Jesus was entombed; at the Last Supper, Jesus referred to his blood as sealing “the covenant between God and his people” (Matthew 26.28).

1 2 5 8 / W A L L A C E S T E V E N S

Emotions on wet roads on autumn nights;

All pleasures and all pains, remembering

The bough of summer and the winter branch.

30 These are the measures destined for her soul.

3

Jove² in the clouds had his inhuman birth.

No mother suckled him, no sweet land gave

Large-mannered motions to his mythy mind

He moved among us, as a muttering king,

35 Magnificent, would move among his hinds,³

Until our blood, commingling, virginal,

With heaven, brought such requital to desire

The very hinds discerned it, in a star.

Shall our blood fail? Or shall it come to be 40 The blood of paradise? And shall the earth

Seem all of paradise that we shall know?

The sky will be much friendlier then than now,

A part of labor and a part of pain,

And next in glory to enduring love,

45 Not this dividing and indifferent blue.

4

She says, "I am content when wakened birds,
Before they fly, test the reality
Of misty fields, by their sweet questionings;
But when the birds are gone, and their warm fields
50 Return no more, where, then, is paradise?"

There is not any haunt of prophecy,
Nor any old chimera⁴ of the grave,
Neither the golden underground, nor isle
Melodious, where spirits gat them home,
55 Nor visionary south, nor cloudy palm Remote on heaven's hill, that has endured
As April's green endures; or will endure
Like her remembrance of awakened birds,
Or her desire for June and evening, tipped
60 By the consummation of the swallow's wings.

5

She says, "But in contentment I still feel
The need of some imperishable bliss."
Death is the mother of beauty; hence from her,
Alone, shall come fulfilment to our dreams
65 And our desires. Although she strews the leaves
Of sure obliteration on our paths,

The path sick sorrow took, the many paths

2. Or Jupiter (meaning "sky father"), supreme Jesus' birth.

Roman god. His Greek counterpart, Zeus, was

4. In Greek mythology, a monster with a lion's Suckled by a goat in his childhood.

head, goat's body, and serpent's tail. Also, an illu-

3. Farmhands, rustics; alludes to the shepherds sion or fabrication of the mind.

who saw the Star of Bethlehem, which signaled

SUNDAY MORNING / 1259

W h e r e triumph rang its brassy phrase, or love

Whispered a little out of tenderness,

70 She makes the willow shiver in the sun

For maidens who were wont^o to sit and gaze accustomed

Upon the grass, relinquished to their feet.

She causes boys to pile new plums and pears

On disregarded plate.⁵ The maidens taste

75 And stray impassioned in the littering leaves.

6

Is there no change of death in paradise?

Does ripe fruit never fall? Or do the boughs

Hang always heavy in that perfect sky,

Unchanging, yet so like our perishing earth,

so With rivers like our own that seek for seas

They never find, the same receding shores

That never touch with inarticulate pang?

W h y set the pear upon those river-banks

Or spice the shores with odors of the plum?

85 Alas, that they should wear our colors there,

The silken weavings of our afternoons,

And pick the strings of our insipid lutes!

Death is the mother of beauty, mystical,
Within whose burning bosom we devise 90 Our earthly mothers waiting, sleeplessly.

7

Supple and turbulent, a ring of men
Shall chant in orgy on a summer morn
Their boisterous devotion to the sun,
Not as a god, but as a god might be,
95 Naked among them, like a savage source.
Their chant shall be a chant of paradise,
Out of their blood, returning to the sky;
And in their chant shall enter, voice by voice,
The windy lake wherein their lord delights,
100 The trees, like serafin,⁶ and echoing hills,
That choir among themselves long afterward.
They shall know well the heavenly fellowship
Of men that perish and of summer morn.
And whence they came and whither they shall go 105 The dew upon their feet shall manifest.

8

She hears, upon that water without sound,
A voice that cries, "The tomb in Palestine
Is not the porch of spirits lingering.

It is the grave of Jesus, where he lay."

no We live in an old chaos of the sun,

5. "Plate is used in the sense of so-called family I mean, therefore, that death releases and renews" plate. Disregarded refers to the disuse into which [Letters of Wallace Stevens, 1966, 183-84], things fall that have been possessed for a long time. 6. I.e., seraphim, the highest order of angels.

1 2 6 0 / W A L L A C E S T E V E N S

Or old dependency of day and night,
Or island solitude, unsponsored, free,
Of that wide water, inescapable.

Deer walk upon our mountains, and the quail

115 Whistle about us their spontaneous cries;

Sweet berries ripen in the wilderness;

And, in the isolation of the sky,

At evening, casual flocks of pigeons make

Ambiguous undulations as they sink,

120 Downward to darkness, on extended wings.

1 9 1 5 1 9 2 3

Anecdote of the Jar

I placed a jar in Tennessee,

And round it was, upon a hill.

It made the slovenly wilderness

Surround that hill.

5 The wilderness rose up to it,

And sprawled around, no longer wild.

The jar was round upon the ground

And tall and of a port in air.

It took dominion everywhere,

io The jar was gray and bare.

It did not give of bird or bush,

Like nothing else in Tennessee.

1 9 2 3

Thirteen Ways of Looking at a Blackbird

I

Among twenty snowy mountains,
The only moving thing
Was the eye of the blackbird.

II

I was of three minds,
5 Like a tree
In which there are three blackbirds.

III

The blackbird whirled in the autumn winds.
It was a small part of the pantomime.

THIRTEEN WAYS OF LOOKING AT A BLACK
BIRD / 1261

IV

A man and a woman
10 Are one.
A man and a woman and a blackbird
Are one.

V

I do not know which to prefer,
The beauty of inflections
15 Or the beauty of innuendoes,
The blackbird whistling Or just after.

VI

Icicles filled the long window
With barbaric glass.

20 The shadow of the blackbird

Crossed it to and fro.

The mood

Traced in the shadow

An indecipherable cause.

VII

25 O thin men of Haddam,⁷

Why do you imagine golden birds?

Do you not see how the blackbird

Walks around the feet

Of the women about you?

VIII

30 I know noble accents

And lucid, inescapable rhythms;

But I know, too,

That the blackbird is involved

In what I know.

IX

35 When the blackbird flew out of sight,

It marked the edge

Of one of many circles.

7. A town in Connecticut. Stevens explains: "The thin men of Haddam are entirely fictitious... I just like the name. ... It has a completely Yankee sound" [Letters, 340].

1 2 6 2 / W A L L A C E S T E V E N S

X

At the sight of blackbirds

Flying in a green light,

40 Even the bawds of euphony⁸

Would cry out sharply.

XI

He rode over Connecticut

In a glass coach.

Once, a fear pierced him

45 In that he mistook

The shadow of his equipage⁰ coach

For blackbirds.

XII

The river is moving.

The blackbird must be flying.

XIII

50 It was evening all afternoon.

It was snowing

And it was going to snow.

The blackbird sat

In the cedar-limbs.

1 9 2 3

Peter Quince at the Clavier⁹

I

Just as my fingers on these keys

Make music, so the selfsame sounds

On my spirit make a music, too.

Music is feeling, then, not sound;

5 And thus it is that what I feel,

Here in this room, desiring you,

Thinking of your blue-shadowed silk,

Is music. It is like the strain

Waked in the elders by Susanna.1

8. I.e., madams or prostitutes of sweet sound.

More Songs from Vagabondia (1895).

9. Early keyboard instrument. Peter Quince: the

1. In Daniel 13, a chapter in the Apocrypha, stage manager of the rustic actors who clumsily Susanna refuses seduction by two Hebrew elders, perform a “tragedy” within Shakespeare’s comedy or tribal councilors, who then falsely accuse her of A Midsummer Night’s Dream. Also, an allusion to a liaison with a young man. Daniel protects her the poem “Quince to Lilac: to G. H.,” from Bliss from being punished.

Carmen and Richard Hovey’s once-popular book

PETER QUINCE AT THE CLAVIER / 1263

10 Of a green evening, clear and warm,
She bathed in her still garden, while
The red-eyed elders watching, felt
The basses of their beings throb
In witching chords, and their thin blood
15 Pulse pizzicati of Hosanna.2

II

In the green water, clear and warm,
Susanna lay.
She searched
The touch of springs,
20 And found
Concealed imaginings.

She sighed,
For so much melody.
Upon the bank, she stood 25 In the cool
Of spent emotions.
She felt, among the leaves,
The dew
Of old devotions.
30 She walked upon the grass,
Still quavering.
The winds were like her maids,
On timid feet,
Fetching her woven scarves,
35 Yet wavering.
A breath upon her hand
Muted the night.
She turned—
A cymbal crashed,
40 And roaring horns.

III

Soon, with a noise like tambourines,
Came her attendant Byzantines.³
They wondered why Susanna cried
Against the elders by her side;
45 And as they whispered, the refrain
Was like a willow swept by rain.

2. Great praise. Pizzicati: musical passages in through the fifteenth centuries); an anachronism, which strings are plucked.

as they postdated Susanna.

3. People of the Byzantine Empire (fourth

1 2 6 4 / W A L L A C E S T E V E N S

Anon, their lamps' uplifted flame

Revealed Susanna and her shame.

And then, the simpering Byzantines

50 Fled, with a noise like tambourines.

IV

Beauty is momentary in the mind—

The fitful tracing of a portal;

But in the flesh it is immortal.

The body dies; the body's beauty lives.

55 So evenings die, in their green going,

A wave, interminably flowing.

So gardens die, their meek breath scenting

The cowl of winter, done repenting.

So maidens die, to the auroral

60 Celebration of a maiden's choral.

Susanna's music touched the bawdy strings

Of those white elders; but, escaping,

Left only Death's ironic scraping.

Now, in its immortality, it plays

65 On the clear viol of her memory,

And makes a constant sacrament of praise.

1 9 2 3 1 9 3 1

The Idea of Order at Key West⁴

She sang beyond the genius⁵ of the sea.

The water never formed to mind or voice,
Like a body wholly body, fluttering
Its empty sleeves; and yet its mimic motion
5 Made constant cry, caused constantly a cry,
That was not ours although we understood,
Inhuman, of the veritable ocean.

The sea was not a mask. No more was she.
The song and water were not medleyed sound
io Even if what she sang was what she heard,
Since what she sang was uttered word by word.
It may be that in all her phrases stirred
The grinding water and the gasping wind;
But it was she and not the sea we heard.

15 For she was the maker of the song she sang.
The ever-hooded, tragic-gestured sea
Was merely a place by which she walked to sing.
Whose spirit is this? we said, because we knew

4. One of the coral islands off the south coast of 5. The pervading and guardian spirit of a place.

Florida.

W A V I N G A D I E U , A D I E U , A D I E U / 1 2 6 5

It was the spirit that we sought and knew 20 That we should ask this often as she sang.
If it was only the dark voice of the sea
That rose, or even colored by many waves;
If it was only the outer voice of sky
And cloud, of the sunken coral water-walled,
25 However clear, it would have been deep air,

The heaving speech of air, a summer sound
Repeated in a summer without end
And sound alone. But it was more than that,
More even than her voice, and ours, among 30 The meaningless plungings of water and the wind,
Theatrical distances, bronze shadows heaped
On high horizons, mountainous atmospheres
Of sky and sea.

It was her voice that made 35 The sky acutest at its vanishing.
She measured to the hour its solitude.
She was the single artificer of the world
In which she sang. And when she sang, the sea,
Whatever self it had, became the self 40 That was her song, for she was the maker. Then we,
As we beheld her striding there alone,
Knew that there never was a world for her
Except the one she sang and, singing, made.
Ramon Fernandez,⁶ tell me, if you know,
45 Why, when the singing ended and we turned Toward the town, tell why the glassy lights,
The lights in the fishing boats at anchor there,
As the night descended, tilting in the air,
Mastered the night and portioned out the sea,
50 Fixing emblazoned zones and fiery poles,
Arranging, deepening, enchanting night.
Oh! Blessed rage for order, pale Ramon,
The maker's rage to order words of the sea,

Words of the fragrant portals, dimly-starred,
55 And of ourselves and of our origins,
In ghostlier demarcations, keener sounds.

1936

Waving Adieu, Adieu, Adieu⁷

That would be waving and that would be crying,
Crying and shouting and meaning farewell,

6. Stevens claimed (Letters, 798) that he had simply (1894-1944).

combined two common Spanish names at ran-

7. Cf. Mark Strand's homage to this poem in Dark dom, without conscious reference to the French Harbor, XVI (p. 1864).

literary critic and essayist Ramon Fernandez

1 2 6 6 / W A L L A C E S T E V E N S

Farewell in the eyes and farewell at the centre,
Just to stand still without moving a hand.

5 In a world without heaven to follow, the stops
Would be endings, more poignant than partings, profounder,

And that would be saying farewell, repeating farewell,
Just to be there and just to behold.

To be one's singular self, to despise

10 The being that yielded so little, acquired

So little, too little to care, to turn

To the ever-jubilant weather, to sip

One's cup and never to say a word,

Or to sleep or just to lie there still,

15 Just to be there, just to be beheld,
That would be bidding farewell, be bidding farewell.
One likes to practice the thing. They practice,
Enough, for heaven. Ever-jubilant,
What is there here but weather, what spirit
20 Have I except it comes from the sun?

1 9 3 6

The Poems of Our Climate

I

Clear water in a brilliant bowl,
Pink and white carnations. The light
In the room more like a snowy air,
Reflecting snow. A newly-fallen snow
5 At the end of winter when afternoons return.
Pink and white carnations—one desires
So much more than that. The day itself
Is simplified: a bowl of white,
Cold, a cold porcelain, low and round,
io With nothing more than the carnations there.

II

Say even that this complete simplicity
Stripped one of all one's torments, concealed
The evilly compounded, vital I
And made it fresh in a world of white,
15 A world of clear water, brilliant-edged,
Still one would want more, one would need more,
More than a world of white and snowy scents.

TABLE TALK / 1 2 6 7

III

There would still remain the never-resting mind,
So that one would want to escape, come back 20 To what had been so long composed.

The imperfect is our paradise.

Note that, in this bitterness, delight,

Since the imperfect is so hot in us,

Lies in flawed words and stubborn sounds.

1 9 4 2

The House Was Quiet and the World Was Calm

The house was quiet and the world was calm.

The reader became the book; and summer night

Was like the conscious being of the book.

The house was quiet and the world was calm.

5 The words were spoken as if there was no book,

Except that the reader leaned above the page,

Wanted to lean, wanted much most to be

The scholar to whom his book is true, to whom

The summer night is like a perfection of thought,

io The house was quiet because it had to be.

The quiet was part of the meaning, part of the mind:

The access of perfection to the page.

And the world was calm. The truth in a calm world,

In which there is no other meaning, itself

15 Is calm, itself is summer and night, itself

Is the reader leaning late and reading there.

1 9 4 7

Table Talk

Granted, we die for good.

Life, then, is largely a thing

Of happens to like, not should.

And that, too, granted, why

5 Do I happen to like red bush,

Gray grass and green-gray sky?

1 2 6 8 / W A L L A C E S T E V E N S

What else remains? But red,

Gray, green, why those of all?

That is not what I said:

10 Not those of all. But those.

One likes what one happens to like.

One likes the way red grows.

It cannot matter at all.

Happens to like is one

15 Of the ways things happen to fall.

ca. 1 9 3 5 1 9 5 7

A Room on a Garden

O stagnant east-wind, palsied mare,

Giddap! The ruby roses' hair

Must blow.

Behold how order is the end

5 Of everything. The roses bend

As one.

Order, the law of hoes and rakes,

May be perceived in windy quakes

And squalls.

io The gardener searches earth and sky

The truth in nature to espy
In vain.
He well might find that eager balm
In lilies' stately-stated calm;
15 But then
He well might find it in this fret
Of lilies rusted, rotting, wet
With rain.

1 9 3 5 1 9 5 7

Of Mere Being

The palm at the end of the mind,
Beyond the last thought, rises
In the bronze decor,⁸

8. In the first published version of this poem, the 1957 Opus Posthumous incorrectly gave "decor" as "distance." The 1989 edition provided a correction.

H A S K E L L / 1 2 6 9

A gold-feathered bird
5 Sings in the palm, without human meaning,
Without human feeling, a foreign song.
You know then that it is not the reason
That makes us happy or unhappy.
The bird sings. Its feathers shine.
10 The palm stands on the edge of space.
The wind moves slowly in the branches.
The bird's fire-fangled feathers dangle down.

1 9 5 5 ?

1 9 5 7 , 1 9 8 9

W I T T E R B Y N N E R

1881-1968

Haskell1

Here in Kansas is a school

Made of square stones and windows,

Where Indian boys are taught to use a tool,

A printing-press, a book,

5 And Indian girls

To read, to dress, to cook.

And as I watch today

The orderly industrious classes,

Only their color and silence and the way

io The hair lies flat and black on their heads proclaims them Sioux,

Comanche, Choctaw, Cherokee,

Creek, Chippewa, Paiute²—and the red and blue

Of the girls' long sweaters and the purple and yellow,

And the tawny slant of the machine-made shirts ...

15 Noon—and out they come. And one tall fellow,

Breaking from the others with a glittering yell and crouching slim,

Gives a leap like the leap of Mordkin,³

And the sun carves under him

A canyon of glory ...

20 And then it shadows, and he darts,

With head hung, to the dormitory.

1 9 2 0

1. Town in Kansas.

3. Mikhail Mordkin (1881-1944), Russian ballet

2. Names of Native American tribes.

dancer.

1 2 7 0 / E . J . P R A T T

From Chinese Drawings

A Philosopher

What though they conquer us?

The tea has come.

In at most nine hundred years,

Someone will conquer them.

1 9 2 0

The Wintry Mind

Winter uncovers distances, I find;

And so the cold and so the wintry mind

Takes leaves away, till there is left behind

A wide cold world. And so the heart grows blind

5 To the earth's green motions lying warm below

Field upon field, field upon field, of snow.

1 9 4 0

More Lovely than Antiquity

There comes a moment in her veins

Not of the earth, not of the rains,

Something not of stalks and stems

But of dim crowns and diadems,0 royal headbands

5 Something commanding her to be

More ancient than antiquity

And to soothe her head on a pike above

The vacant circumstance of love.

1 9 4 7

E . J . P R A T T

1883-1964

Come Not the Seasons Here

Comes not the springtime here,

Though the snowdrop came,

And the time of the cowslip⁰ is near, a wildflower

For a yellow flame

5 Was found in a tuft of green;

FROM STONE TO STEEL / 1 2 7 1

And the joyous shout

Of a child rang out

That a cuckoo's eggs were seen.

Comes not the summer here,

10 Though the cowslip be gone,

Though the wild rose blow as the year

Draws faithfully on;

Though the face of the poppy be red

In the morning light,

15 And the ground be white

With the bloom of the locust shed.

Comes not the autumn here,

Though someone said

He found a leaf in the sere withered state

20 By an aster dead;

And knew that the summer was done,

For a herdsman cried

That his pastures were brown in the sun,

And his wells were dried.

25 Nor shall the winter come,
Though the elm be bare,
And every voice be dumb
On the frozen air;
But the flap of a waterfowl
30 In the marsh alone,
Or the hoot of a horned owl
On a glacial stone.

1 9 2 3

From Stone to Steel

From stone to bronze, from bronze to steel
Along the road-dust of the sun
Two revolutions of the wheel
From Java to Geneva run.¹
5 The snarl Neanderthal is worn
Close to the smiling Aryan² lips,
The civil polish of the horn
Gleams from our praying finger tips.

The evolution of desire

io Has but matured a toxic wine,

1. Java, now part of Indonesia, was the site of fosters of the League of Nations from 1919 until the sil excavations where the bones of an early type of outbreak of World War II.

prehistoric human (“Neanderthal,” line 5) were

2. According to Nazi racial theory, the Aryan found. Geneva, in Switzerland, was the headquar-“race” was superior to all others.

1 2 7 2 / W I L L I A M C A R L O S W I L L I A M S

Drunk long before its heady fire

Reddened Euphrates or the Rhine.³

Between the temple and the cave

The boundary lies tissue-thin:

15 The yearlings still the altars crave

As satisfaction for a sin.

The road goes up, the road goes down—

Let Java or Geneva be—

But whether to the cross or crown,

20 The path lies through Gethsemane.⁴

1 9 3 2

W I L L I A M C A R L O S W I L L I A M S

1883-1963

Danse Russe¹

If when my wife is sleeping

and the baby and Kathleen are sleeping

and the sun is a flame-white disc

5 in silken mists

above shining trees,—

if I in my north room

dance naked, grotesquely

before my mirror

io waving my shirt round my head and singing softly to myself:

“I am lonely, lonely.

I was born to be lonely,

I am best so!”

15 If I admire my arms, my face, my shoulders, flanks, buttocks against the yellow drawn shades,— Who shall say I am not the happy genius² of my household?

1 9 1 7

3. The Euphrates was one of the two great river

1. Russian dance (French). Just before writing valleys of ancient Mesopotamian civilization. The this poem, Williams had seen a performance in river Rhine flows through western Germany and New York City by the Ballet Russes, a company led the Netherlands.

by the producer and critic Sergey Pavlovich Dia-

4. The garden where Christ prayed while his disciples slept, and where Judas betrayed him (Matthew 26.36-56).

2. The pervading and guardian spirit of a place.

thew 26.36-56).

QUEEN - ANNE ' S - L A C E / 1 2 7 3

Portrait of a Lady³

Your thighs are appletrees whose blossoms touch the sky.

Which sky? The sky where Watteau hung a lady's

5 slipper.⁴ Your knees are a southern breeze—or a gust of snow. Agh! what sort of man was Fragonard?

—as if that answered
10 anything. Ah, yes—below the knees, since the tune drops that way, it is one of those white summer days,
the tall grass of your ankles
15 flickers upon the shore—
Which shore?—
the sand clings to my lips—
Which shore?

Agh, petals maybe. How 20 should I know?
Which shore? Which shore?
I said petals from an appletree.

1920, 1934

Queen-Anne's-Lace⁵

Her body is not so white as anemone petals nor so smooth—nor so remote a thing. It is a field of the wild carrot taking 5 the field by force; the grass does not raise above it.

Here is no question of whiteness,
white as can be, with a purple mole
at the center of each flower, io Each flower is a hand's span of her whiteness. Wherever his hand has lain there is a tiny purple blemish. Each part is a blossom under his touch

3. The title recalls those of works by the English

4. Williams seems to be conflating the French (American-born) novelist Henry James (1843-painter Jean-Antoine Watteau (1684-1721) with 1916), the English (American-born) poet T. S.

the French artist Jean-Honore Fragonard (1732—

Eliot (1888-1965; see pp. 1340-66), and the 1806). In Fragonard's famous painting The Swing, American poet Ezra Pound (1885-1972; see a girl on a swing has kicked off her slipper, which

pp. 1295—1310). Cf. Pound's poem "Portrait d'une remains suspended in air.

Femme" (p. 1295).

5. A common field flower.

1 2 7 4 / W I L L I A M C A R L O S W I L L I A M S

15 to which the fibres of her being stem one by one, each to its end,

until the whole field is a white desire, empty, a single stem,

a cluster, flower by flower,

20 a pious wish to whiteness gone over—or nothing.

1 9 2 1

The Red Wheelbarrow

so much depends upon a red wheel barrow
5 glazed with rain
water
beside the white chickens.

1 9 2 3

This Is Just to Say⁶

I have eaten
the plums that were in the icebox
5 and which you were probably saving for breakfast Forgive me
io they were delicious
so sweet and so cold

1 9 3 4

6. Cf. Kenneth Koch's parody of this poem, "Variations on a Theme by William Carlos Williams" (p. 1693).

T H E Y A C H T S / 1 2 7 5

Poem

As the cat

climbed over the top of the jamcloset
5 first the right forefoot carefully then the hind stepped down 10 into the pit of the empty
flowerpot
1 9 3 4

The Yachts

contend in a sea which the land partly encloses
shielding them from the too-heavy blows of an ungoverned ocean which when it chooses tortures the biggest hulls, the best man knows 5 to pit against its beatings, and sinks them pitilessly.
Mothlike in mists, scintillant in the minute brilliance of cloudless days, with broad bellying sails they glide to the wind tossing green water from their sharp prows while over them the crew crawls io ant-like, solicitously grooming them, releasing, making fast as they turn, lean far over and having caught the wind again, side by side, head for the mark.
In a well guarded arena of open water surrounded by lesser and greater craft which, sycophant, lumbering 15 and fluttering follow them, they appear youthful, rare

as the light of a happy eye, live with the grace of all that in the mind is fleckless, free and naturally to be desired. Now the sea which holds them is moody, lapping their glossy sides, as if feeling 20 for some slightest flaw but fails completely.
Today no race. Then the wind comes again. The yachts
1 2 7 6 / W I L L I A M C A R L O S W I L L I A M S move, jockeying for a start, the signal is set and they are off. Now the waves strike at them but they are too well made, they slip through, though they take in canvas.
25 Arms with hands grasping seek to clutch at the prows.
Bodies thrown recklessly in the way are cut aside.
It is a sea of faces about them in agony, in despair
until the horror of the race dawns staggering the mind,
the whole sea become an entanglement of watery bodies 30 lost to the world bearing what they cannot hold.
Broken,
beaten, desolate, reaching from the dead to be taken up they cry out, failing, failing! their cries rising in waves still as the skillful yachts pass over.

1 9 3 5

A Sort of a Song

Let the snake wait under his weed

and the writing

be of words, slow and quick, sharp

5 to strike, quiet to wait, sleepless.

—through metaphor to reconcile the people and the stones.

Compose. (No ideas io but in things) Invent!

Saxifrage⁷ is my flower that splits
the rocks.

1 9 4 4

From Asphodel, That Greeny Flower⁸

Book I

Of asphodel, that greeny flower,
like a buttercup

7. Breaking rocks (Latin); a perennial herb.

world of Homer's Odyssey, a grove of poplars sacred

8. A tripartite love poem, with coda, for the poet's to Persephone stood at the entrance of asphodel

wife. The green asphodel first impressed Williams limona, fields of asphodel inhabited by the souls of

as a child in Switzerland, and it appears in his early the dead.) The opening lines were originally pub-work Kora in Hell: Improvisations (1920). (Kora—lished in the October 1952 issue of Poetry magaor Kore, Greek for girl or young woman—is

zine, as "Paterson, Book V: The River of Heaven,"

another name for the mythological figure Perseph-

but were later removed from Williams's epic, Pat- erson. The daughter of Demeter, she was carried to erson.

the underworld by its ruler, Hades. In the under-

ASPHODEL, THAT GREENY FLOWER / 1 277

upon its branching stem—

save that it's green and wooden—

5 I come, my sweet,

to sing to you.

We lived long together
a life filled,
if you will,
10 with flowers. So that I was cheered
when I came first to know that there were flowers also in hell.

15 Today

I'm filled with the fading memory of those flowers that we both loved,
even to this poor
colorless thing—

20 I saw it

when I was a child—
little prized among the living but the dead see,
asking among themselves:

25 What do I remember that was shaped

as this thing is shaped?
while our eyes fill with tears.

so Of love, abiding love
it will be telling
though too weak a wash of crimson colors it
to make it wholly credible.

35 There is something something urgent
I have to say to you and you alone
but it must wait 40 while I drink in the joy of your approach,
perhaps for the last time.

And so with fear in my heart 45 I drag it out and keep on talking for I dare not stop.
Listen while I talk on against time.

50 It will not be
for long.
I have forgot
and yet I see clearly enough
something

1 2 7 8 / W I L L I A M C A R L O S W I L L I A M S

55 c e n t r a l t o t h e s k y
w h i c h r a n g e s r o u n d i t.

A n o d o r
s p r i n g s f r o m i t!
A s w e e t e s t o d o r !

60 H o n e y s u c k l e ! A n d n o w t h e r e c o m e s t h e b u z z i n g o f a b e e !

and a whole flood of sister memories!
Only give me time,
65 time to recall them
before I shall speak out.
Give me time,
time.

When I was a boy
70 I kept a book to which, from time to time,
I added pressed flowers
until, after a time,
75 I had a good collection.
The asphodel,
forebodingly,
among them.
I bring you,
so reawakened,
a memory of those flowers.
They were sweet
when I pressed them
and retained
85 something of their sweetness
a long time.
It is a curious odor,
a moral odor,
that brings me

90 near to you .
The color
was the first to go .
There had come to me
a challenge , 95 your dear self ,
mortal as I was ,
the lily's throat
to the hummingbird !
Endless wealth ,
100 I thought ,
held out its arm to me .
A thousand tropics
in an apple blossom .
The generous earth itself
105 gave us lief . 9
The whole world

9. Leave, or permission. An obsolete form of leaf and life, “lief” also connotes gladness.

ASPHODEL, THAT GREEN YFLOWER / 1 279

became my garden!
But the sea which no one tends no is also a garden
when the sun strikes it and the waves
are wakened.
I have seen it

115 and so have you when it puts all flowers to shame.

Too, there are the starfish
stiffened by the sun

120 and other sea wrack and weeds. We knew that along with the rest of it for we were born by the sea, knew its rose hedges

125 to the very water's brink.
There the pink mallow grows and in their season
strawberries

and there, later,

130 we went to gather the wild plum.

I cannot say that I have gone to hell for your love

135 but often found myself there in your pursuit.

I do not like it and wanted to be

140 in heaven. Hear me out.

Do not turn away.

I have learned much in my life

from books and out of them 145 about love.

Death
is not the end of it.
There is a hierarchy
which can be attained, 150 I think,
in its service.

Its guerdon reward
is a fairy flower;
a cat of twenty lives.
155 If no one came to try it
the world
would be the loser.

It has been for you and me

1 2 8 0 / W I L L I A M C A R L O S W I L L I A M S

i60 a s o n e w h o w a t c h e s a s t o r m c o m e i n o v e r t h e w a t e r .

W e h a v e s t o o d
f r o m y e a r t o y e a r
b e f o r e t h e s p e c t a c l e o f f o u r l i v e s 165 w i t h j o i n e d h a n d s .

T h e s t o r m u n f o l d s .

L i g h t n i n g
p l a y s a b o u t t h e e d g e s o f t h e c l o u d s .

T h e s k y t o t h e n o r t h

170 is placid,
blue in the afterglow
as the storm piles up.
It is a flower
that will soon reach 175 the apex of its bloom.
We danced,
in our minds,
and read a book together.
You remember?
i80 It was a serious book.
And so books
entered our lives.
Thesea! Thesea!
Always
185 when I think of thesea
there comes to mind
the Iliad
and Helen's public fault that bred it.¹
190 Were it not for that there would have been no poem but the world
if we had remembered,
those crimson petals 195 spilled among the stones, would have called it simply murder.

T h e s e x u a l o r c h i d t h a t b l o o m e d t h e n s e n d i n g s o m a n y 200 d i s i n t e r e s t e d m e n t o t h e i r g r a v e s h a s l e f t i t s m e m o r y
t o a r a c e o f f o o l s o r h e r o e s

205 i f s i l e n c e i s a v i r t u e .

T h e s e a a l o n e w i t h i t s m u l t i p l i c i t y
h o l d s a n y h o p e .

T h e s t o r m

1. In Greek mythology, the beautiful Helen by Paris (son of the Trojan king, Priam). The dis-(daughter of the god Zeus and the mortal Leda;
pute that followed was a cause of the Trojan War.
wife of the Spartan King Menelaus) was abducted

A S P H O D E L , T H A T G R E E N Y F L O W E R / 1 2 8 1

210 has proven abortive
but we remain
after the thoughts it roused
to re-cement our lives.

215 It is the mind
the mind
that must be cured
short of death's

intervention, 220 and the will becomes again a garden. The poem is complex and the place made in our lives
for the poem.

225 Silence can be complex too, but you do not get far with silence.

Begin again.

It is like Homer's
230 catalogue of ships:²
it fills up the time.

I speak in figures,
well enough, the dresses
you wear are figures also, 235 we could not meet otherwise. When I speak of flowers

it is to recall that at one time 240 we were young.

All women are not Helen,
I know that,
but have Helen in their hearts.

My sweet,
245 you have it also, therefore I love you and could not love you otherwise.

Imagine you saw a field made up of women 250 all silver-white.

What should you do
but love them?

The storm bursts or fades! it is not 255 the end of the world.

Love is something else,
or so I thought it,
a garden which expands,
though I knew you as a woman 260 and never thought otherwise, until the whole sea

2. Cf. Iliad 2.484-785, where the Greek ships that sailed to Troy are listed.

1 2 8 2 / W I L L I A M C A R L O S W I L L I A M S

has been taken up
and all its gardens.

It was the love of love,
265 the love that swallows up all else,
a grateful love,
a love of nature, of people,
animals,
a love engendering
270 gentleness and goodness that moved me

and that I saw in you.

I should have known,

though I did not,

275 that the lily-of-the-valley

is a flower makes many ill who whiff it.

We had our children,

rivals in the general onslaught.

280 I put them aside

though I cared for them

as well as any man

could care for his children

according to my lights.

285 You understand

I had to meet you

after the event

and have still to meet you.

Love

290 to which you too shall bow

along with me—

a flower

a weakest flower

shall be our trust

295 and not because we are too feeble

to do otherwise

but because

at the height of my power

300 I risked what I had to do, therefore to prove that we love each other while my very bones sweated that I could not cry to you 305 in the act.

Of asphodel, that greeny flower,
I come, my sweet,
to sing to you!
My heart rouses
310 thinking to bring you news of something that concerns you and concerns many men. Look at what passes for the new.

P I C T U R E S F R O M B R U E G H E L / 1 2 8 3

315 Y o u w i l l n o t f i n d i t t h e r e b u t i n d e s p i s e d p o e m s .

I t i s d i f f i c u l t

t o g e t t h e n e w s f r o m p o e m s

y e t m e n d i e m i s e r a b l y e v e r y d a y

320 f o r l a c k

o f w h a t i s f o u n d t h e r e .

H e a r m e o u t

f o r I t o o a m c o n c e r n e d

a n d e v e r y m a n

325 w h o w a n t s t o d i e a t p e a c e i n h i s b e d b e s i d e s .

1955

*From Pictures from Brueghel*³

*II Landscape with the Fall of Icarus*⁴

A c c o r d i n g t o B r u e g h e l
w h e n I c a r u s f e l l i t w a s s p r i n g a f a r m e r w a s p l o u g h i n g 5 h i s f i e l d
t h e w h o l e p a g e a n t r y o f t h e y e a r w a s a w a k e t i n g l i n g
n e a r
i o t h e e d g e o f t h e s e a c o n c e r n e d w i t h i t s e l f
s w e a t i n g i n t h e s u n
t h a t m e l t e d 15 t h e w i n g s ' w a x u n s i g n i f i c a n t l y o f f t h e c o a s t
t h e r e w a s
a s p l a s h q u i t e u n n o t i c e d 20 t h i s w a s
I c a r u s d r o w n i n g

1962

3. Peter Brueghel (or Breughel) the Elder (1521?- made of feathers and wax. Icarus flew too close to 1569), Flemish painter; this poem, taking its title

the sun and fell into the sea when his wings from one of Brueghel's paintings, is one of ten in melted. Cf. W. H. Auden, "Musée des Beaux Arts" a series.

(p. 1471), which like Williams's poem notes Brue-
4. In Greek mythology, Icarus and his father, Dae-ghel's marginal treatment of Icarus's legs in the dalus, sought to escape Crete on wings Daedalus
sea.

1 2 8 4

D . H . L A W R E N C E

1885-1930

Love on the Farm¹

What large, dark hands are those at the window
Grasping in the golden light
Which weaves its way through the evening wind
At my heart's delight?

5 Ah, only the leaves! But in the west

I see a redness suddenly come

Into the evening's anxious breast—

'Tis the wound of love goes home!

The woodbine⁰ creeps abroad honeysuckle

io Calling low to her lover:

The sun-lit flirt who all the day

Has poised above her lips in play

And stolen kisses, shallow and gay

Of pollen, now has gone away—

15 She woos the moth with her sweet, low word:

And when above her his moth-wings hover
Then her bright breast she will uncover
And yield her honey-drop to her lover.
Into the yellow, evening glow
20 Saunters a man from the farm below;
Leans, and looks in at the low-built shed
Where the swallow has hung her marriage bed.
The bird lies warm against the wall.
She glances quick her startled eyes
25 Towards him, then she turns away
Her small head, making warm display
Of red upon the throat. Her terrors sway
Her out of the nest's warm, busy ball,
Whose plaintive cry is heard as she flies so In one blue stoop from out the sties⁰ p e n s f o r a n i m a h
Into the twilight's empty hall.
Oh, water-hen, beside the rushes
Hide your quaintly scarlet blushes,
Still your quick tail, lie still as dead,
35 Till the distance folds over his ominous tread!
The rabbit presses back her ears,
Turns back her liquid, anguished eyes
And crouches low; then with wild spring
Spurts from the terror of his oncoming;
40 To be choked back, the wire ring
Her frantic effort throttling:

1. Originally published as "Cruelty and Love," but retitled for the Collected Poems (1928).

PIANO / 1285

Piteous brown ball of quivering fears!

Ah, soon in his large, hard hands she dies,

And swings all loose from the swing of his walk!

45 Yet calm and kindly are his eyes

And ready to open in brown surprise

Should I not answer to his talk

Or should he my tears surmise.

I hear his hand on the latch, and rise from my chair

50 Watching the door open; he flashes bare

His strong teeth in a smile, and flashes his eyes

In a smile like triumph upon me; then careless-wise

He flings the rabbit soft on the table board

And comes towards me: ah! the uplifted sword

55 Of his hand against my bosom! and oh, the broad

Blade of his glance that asks me to applaud

His coming! With his hand he turns my face to him

And caresses me with his fingers that still smell grim

Of the rabbit's fur! God, I am caught in a snare!⁰ wire trap

60 I know not what fine wire is round my throat;

I only know I let him finger there

My pulse of life, and let him nose like a stoat²

Who sniffs with joy before he drinks the blood.

And down his mouth comes to my mouth! and down

65 His bright dark eyes come over me, like a hood

Upon my mind! his lips meet mine, and a flood

Of sweet fire sweeps across me, so I drown

Against him, die, and find death good.

1 9 1 3

Piano

Softly, in the dusk, a woman is singing to me;

Taking me back down the vista of years, till I see

A child sitting under the piano, in the boom of the tingling strings

And pressing the small, poised feet of a mother who smiles as she sings.

5 In spite of myself, the insidious mastery of song

Betrays me back, till the heart of me weeps to belong

To the old Sunday evenings at home, with winter outside

And hymns in the cosy parlour, the tinkling piano our guide.

So now it is vain for the singer to burst into clamour

io With the great black piano appassionato. The glamour

Of childish days is upon me, my manhood is cast

Down in the flood of remembrance, I weep like a child for the past.

1 9 1 8

2. Small, carnivorous animal of the weasel family.

1 2 8 6 / D . H . L A W R E N C E

Snake

A snake came to my water-trough

On a hot, hot day, and I in pyjamas for the heat,

To drink there.

In the deep, strange-scented shade of the great dark carob-
tree

5 I came down the steps with my pitcher

And must wait, must stand and wait, for there he was at the trough

before me.

He reached down from a fissure in the earth-wall in the gloom

And trailed his yellow-brown slackness soft-bellied down, over the edge of the stone trough

And rested his throat upon the stone bottom,

10 And where the water had dripped from the tap, in a small clearness,

He sipped with his straight mouth,

Softly drank through his straight gums, into his slack long body,

Silently.

Someone was before me at my water-trough,

15 And I, like a second comer, waiting.

He lifted his head from his drinking, as cattle do,

And looked at me vaguely, as drinking cattle do,

And flickered his two-forked tongue from his lips, and mused a moment,

And stooped and drank a little more,

20 Being earth-brown, earth-golden from the burning bowels of the earth

On the day of Sicilian July, with Etna³ smoking.

The voice of my education said to me

He must be killed,

For in Sicily the black, black snakes are innocent, the gold are venomous.

25 And voices in me said, If you were a man

You would take a stick and break him now, and finish him off.

But must I confess how I liked him,

How glad I was he had come like a guest in quiet, to drink at my water-trough

And depart peaceful, pacified, and thankless,

30 Into the burning bowels of this earth?

Was it cowardice, that I dared not kill him?

Was it perversity, that I longed to talk to him?

3. Mt. Etna, a volcano.

S N A K E / 1 2 8 7

Was it humility, to feel so honoured?

I felt so honoured.

35 And yet those voices:

If you were not afraid, you would kill him!

And truly I was afraid, I was most afraid,

But even so, honoured still more

That he should seek my hospitality

40 From out the dark door of the secret earth.

He drank enough

And lifted his head, dreamily, as one who has drunken,

And flickered his tongue like a forked night on the air, so black,

Seeming to lick his lips,

45 And looked around like a god, unseeing, into the air,

And slowly turned his head,

And slowly, very slowly, as if thrice adream,

Proceeded to draw his slow length curving round
And climb again the broken bank of my wall-face.
50 And as he put his head into that dreadful hole,
And as he slowly drew up, snake-easing his shoulders, and entered farther,
A sort of horror, a sort of protest against his withdrawing into that horrid black hole,
Deliberately going into the blackness, and slowly drawing himself
after,
Overcame me now his back was turned.
55 I looked round, I put down my pitcher,
I picked up a clumsy log
And threw it at the water-trough with a clatter.
I think it did not hit him,
But suddenly that part of him that was left behind convulsed in undignified haste.
60 Writhed like lightning, and was gone
Into the black hole, the earth-lipped fissure in the wall-front,
At which, in the intense still noon, I stared with fascination.
And immediately I regretted it.
I thought how paltry, how vulgar, what a mean act!
65 I despised myself and the voices of my accursed human education.
And I thought of the albatross⁴
And I wished he would come back, my snake.
For he seemed to me again like a king,

Like a king in exile, uncrowned in the underworld,
70 Now due to be crowned again.

4. In Samuel Taylor Coleridge's "Rime of the Ancient Mariner" (see p. 812).

1 2 8 8 / D . H . L A W R E N C E

And so, I missed my chance with one of the lords
Of life.⁵

And I have something to expiate;
A pettiness.

Taormina.

1 9 2 3

Elemental

Why don't people leave off being lovable
Or thinking they are lovable, or wanting to be lovable,
And be a bit elemental instead?

Since man is made up of the elements

5 Fire, and rain, and air, and live loam

And none of these is lovable

But elemental,

Man is lop-sided on the side of the angels.

I wish men would get back their balance among the elements

io And be a bit more fiery, as incapable of telling lies As fire is.

I wish they'd be true to their own variation, as water is,
Which goes through all the stages of steam and stream and ice

Without losing its head.

15 I am sick of lovable people,

Somehow they are a lie.

1 9 2 9

Self-Protection

When science starts to be interpretive

It is more unscientific even than mysticism.

To make self-preservation and self-protection the first law of existence

Is about as scientific as making suicide the first law of existence,

5 And amounts to very much the same thing.

A nightingale singing at the top of his voice

Is neither hiding himself nor preserving himself nor propagating his species;

He is giving himself away in every sense of the word;

And obviously, it is the culminating point of his existence.

5. Cf. George Meredith, "Modern Love," 30, line 7 (p. 1108).

T R E E S I N T H E G A R D E N / 1 2 8 9

10 A tiger is striped and golden for his own glory.

He would certainly be much more invisible if he were grey-green.

And I don't suppose the ichthyosaurus sparkled like the humming-bird,

No doubt he was khaki-colored with muddy protective colouration,

So why didn't he survive?

15 As a matter of fact, the only creatures that seem to survive

Are those that give themselves away in flash and sparkle

And gay flicker of joyful life;

Those that go glittering abroad

With a bit of splendour.

20 Even mice play quite beautifully at shadows,

And some of them are brilliantly piebald.⁰ of different colors

I expect the dodo looked like a clod,

A drab and dingy bird.

1 9 2 9

Trees in the Garden

Ah in the thunder air

How still the trees are!

And the lime-tree, lovely and tall, every leaf silent

Hardly loses even a last breath of perfume.

5 And the ghostly, creamy coloured little tree of leaves

White, ivory white among the rambling greens

How evanescent, variegated elder, she hesitates on the green grass

As if, in another moment, she would disappear

With all her grace of foam!

10 And the larch that is only a column, it goes up too tall to see:

And the balsam-pines that are blue with the grey-blue blueness of things from the sea,

And the young copper beech, its leaves red-rosy at the ends

How still they are together, they stand so still

In the thunder air, all strangers to one another

15 As the green grass glows upwards, strangers in the garden.

Lichtental.6

1932

6. A village near Raden-Baden, in south Germany, where Lawrence wrote the poem.

1290 / D . H . L A W R E N C E

The English Are So Nice!

The English are so nice

So awfully nice

They are the nicest people in the world.

And what's more, they're very nice about being nice

5 About your being nice as well!

If you're not nice they soon make you feel it.

Americans and French and Germans and so on

They're all very well

But they're not really nice, you know.

10 They're not nice in our sense of the word, are they now?

That's why one doesn't have to take them seriously.

We must be nice to them, of course,

Of course, naturally.

But it doesn't really matter what you say to them,

15 They don't really understand

You can just say anything to them:

Be nice, you know, just nice

But you must never take them seriously, they wouldn't understand,

Just be nice, you know! oh, fairly nice,

20 Not too nice of course, they take advantage

But nice enough, just nice enough

To let them feel they're not quite as nice as they might be.

1932

Andraitx⁷—Pomegranate Flowers

It is June, it is June

The pomegranates are in flower,

The peasants are bending cutting the bearded wheat.

The pomegranates are in flower

5 Beside the high road, past the deathly dust,

And even the sea is silent in the sun.

Short gasps of flame in the green of night, way off

The pomegranates are in flower,

Small sharp red fires in the night of leaves.

io And noon is suddenly dark, is lustrous, is silent and dark

Men are unseen, beneath the shading hats;

Only, from out the foliage of the secret loins

7. A town on the island of Majorca, Spain.

T H E S H I P O F D E A T H / 1 2 9 1

Red flamelets here and there reveal

A man, a woman there.

1 9 3 2

Bavarian Gentians⁸

Not every man has gentians in his house

in Soft September, at slow, sad Michaelmas.⁹

Bavarian gentians, big and dark, only dark

darkening the daytime, torch-like with the smoking blueness of Pluto's gloom,¹

5 ribbed and torch-like, with their blaze of darkness spread blue

down flattening into points, flattened under the sweep of white day

torch-flower of the blue-smoking darkness, Pluto's dark-blue daze,
black lamps from the halls of Dis, burning dark blue, giving off darkness, blue darkness, as Demeter's pale lamps give off
light,
io lead me then, lead the way.
Reach me a gentian, give me a torch!
let me guide myself with the blue, forked torch of this flower
down the darker and darker stairs, where blue is darkened on blueness
even where Persephone goes, just now, from the frosted
September
15 to the sightless realm where darkness is awake upon the dark
and Persephone herself is but a voice or a darkness invisible enfolded in the deeper dark of the arms Plutonic, and pierced with the passion of dense gloom,
among the splendour of torches of darkness, shedding darkness on the lost bride and her groom.

1 9 3 2

The Ship of Death²

1

Now it is autumn and the falling fruit
and the long journey towards oblivion.

8. Herbs with striking blue flowers.

mother in the world above.

9. September 29, the feast day celebrating St.

2. In Etruscan Places (1932), the book that Michael the Archangel.

describes his visit to the Etruscan painted tombs

1. Pluto (Greek Hades), also known as Dis (line in central Italy in the spring of 1927, Lawrence

8), was the Roman god of the underworld. He mentions that originally, before the tombs were pil-abducted Persephone (Roman Proserpine), the laged, there would be found in the last chamber daughter of Demeter (Roman Ceres), goddess of

among "the sacred treasures of the dead, the little growing vegetation and living nature. Persephone bronze ship that should bear [the soul of the dead]

ruled with him as queen of the underworld, but over to the other world." He had in mind his own returned to spend six months of each year with her imminent death.

1 2 9 2 / D . H . L A W R E N C E

The apples falling like great drops of dew

to bruise themselves an exit from themselves.

5 And it is time to go, to bid farewell to one's own self, and find an exit

from the fallen self.

2

Have you built your ship of death, O have you?

O build your ship of death, for you will need it.

io The grim frost is at hand, when the apples will fall thick, almost thundrous, on the hardened earth.

And death is on the air like a smell of ashes!

Ah! can't you smell it?

And in the bruised body, the frightened soul 15 finds itself shrinking, wincing from the cold that blows upon it through the orifices.

3

And can a man his own quietus⁰ make release from, life with a bare bodkin?³

With daggers, bodkins, bullets, man can make 20 a bruise or break of exit for his life;

but is that a quietus, O tell me, is it quietus?

Surely not so! for how could murder, even self-murder ever a quietus make?

4

O let us talk of quiet that we know, 25 that we can know, the deep and lovely quiet of a strong heart at peace!

How can we this, our own quietus, make?

5

Build then the ship of death, for you must take the longest journey, to oblivion.

3. I.e., his death bring about with an unsheathed dagger? Cf.
Hamlet 3.1.77—78.

T H E S H I P O F D E A T H / 1 2 9 3

30 And die the death, the long and painful death that lies between the old self and the new.

Already our bodies are fallen, bruised, badly bruised, already our souls are oozing through the exit of the cruel bruise.

35 Already the dark and endless ocean of the end is washing in through the breaches of our wounds, already the flood is upon us.

Oh build your ship of death, your little ark
and furnish it with food, with little cakes, and wine 40 for the dark flight down oblivion.

6

Piecemeal the body dies, and the timid soul
has her footing washed away, as the dark flood rises.

We are dying, we are dying, we are all of us dying and nothing will stay the death-flood rising within us

45 and soon it will rise on the world, on the outside world.

We are dying, we are dying, piecemeal our bodies are dying and our strength leaves us, and our soul cowers naked in the dark rain over the flood, cowering in the last branches of the tree of our life.

7

50 We are dying, we are dying, so all we can do is now to be willing to die, and to build the ship of death to carry the soul on the longest journey.

A little ship, with oars and food and little dishes, and all accoutrements

55 fitting and ready for the departing soul.

Now launch the small ship, now as the body dies and life departs, launch out, the fragile soul

in the fragile ship of courage, the ark of faith with its store of food and little cooking pans 60 and change of clothes, upon the flood's black waste
upon the waters of the end
upon the sea of death, where still we sail darkly, for we cannot steer, and have no port.
65 There is no port, there is nowhere to go only the deepening blackness darkening still blacker upon the soundless, ungurgling flood

1 2 9 4

/ D . H . L A W R E N C E

darkness at one with darkness, up and down and sideways utterly dark, so there is no direction any more.

70 and the little ship is there; yet she is gone.

She is not seen, for there is nothing to see her by.

She is gone! gone! and yet somewhere she is there.

Nowhere!

8

75 And everything is gone, the body is gone completely under, gone, entirely gone.

The upper darkness is heavy as the lower,
between them the little ship

is gone

so she is gone.

It is the end, it is oblivion.

9

And yet out of eternity, a thread separates itself on the blackness, a horizontal thread

85 that fumes a little with pallor upon the dark.

Is it illusion? or does the pallor fume
A little higher?

Ah wait, wait, for there's the dawn,
the cruel dawn of coming back to life 90 out of oblivion.

Wait, wait, the little ship drifting, beneath the deathly ashy grey of a flood-dawn.

Wait, wait! even so, a flush of yellow
95 and strangely, O chilled wan soul, a flush of rose.
A flush of rose, and the whole thing starts again.

10

The flood subsides, and the body, like a worn sea-shell emerges strange and lovely.

And the little ship wings home, faltering and lapsing 100 on the pink flood,
and the frail soul steps out, into her house again
filling the heart with peace.

Swings the heart renewed with peace
even of oblivion.

P O R T R A I T D ' U N E F E M M E / 1 2 9 5

105 Oh build your ship of death, oh build it!
for you will need it.

For the voyage of oblivion awaits you.

1 9 2 9 - 3 0 1 9 3 2

EZRA P O U N D

1885-1972

Portrait d'une Femme¹

Your mind and you are our Sargasso Sea,²

London has swept about you this score years

And bright ships left you this or that in fee:

Ideas, old gossip, oddments of all things,

5 Strange spars of knowledge and dimmed wares of price.

Great minds have sought you—lacking someone else.

You have been second always. Tragical?

No. You preferred it to the usual thing:

One dull man, dulling and uxorious,

io One average mind—with one thought less, each year.

Oh, you are patient, I have seen you sit

Hours, where something might have floated up.

And now you pay one. Yes, you richly pay.

You are a person of some interest, one comes to you

15 And takes strange gain away:

Trophies fished up; some curious suggestion;

Fact that leads nowhere; and a tale or two,

Pregnant with mandrakes,³ or with something else

That might prove useful and yet never proves,

20 That never fits a corner or shows use,

Or finds its hour upon the loom of days:

The tarnished, gaudy, wonderful old work;

Idols and ambergris⁴ and rare inlays,

These are your riches, your great store; and yet
25 For all this sea-hoard of deciduous things,
Strange woods half sodden, and new brighter stuff:
In the slow float of differing light and deep,
No! there is nothing! In the whole and all,
Nothing that's quite your own.
30 Yet this is you.

1 9 1 2

1. Portrait of a lady (French). Cf. William Carlos Williams, "Portrait of a Lady" (p. 1273) female fertility.
2. A relatively calm part of the North Atlantic,
4. Waxlike substance produced by sperm whales, named for an abundance of floating gulfweed. used in making perfume.

3. Plants, the root of which, shaped roughly like a

1 2 9 6 / E Z R A P O U N D

The Garden

En robe de parade.⁵

— S A M A I N

Like a skein of loose silk blown against a wall
She walks by the railing of a path in Kensington Gardens,⁶
And she is dying piecemeal of a sort of emotional anemia.
5 And round about there is a rabble
Of the filthy, sturdy, unkillable infants of the very poor.
They shall inherit the earth.⁷

In her is the end of breeding.
Her boredom is exquisite and excessive.
10 She would like some one to speak to her,
And is almost afraid that I will commit that indiscretion.

1913, 1916

A Pact

I make a pact with you, Walt Whitman⁸—
I have detested you long enough.
I come to you as a grown child
Who has had a pig-headed father;
5 I am old enough now to make friends.
It was you that broke the new wood,
Now is a time for carving.

We have one sap and one root—
Let there be commerce between us.

1913, 1916

Ts'ai Chi'h⁹

The petals fall in the fountain,
the orange-colored rose-leaves,
Their ochre clings to the stone.

1913, 1916

5. Dressed as for a state occasion; from "The
the earth; and shall delight themselves in the abun-Infanta," a poem by the French poet Albert Samain dance of peace."

(1858-1900).

8. American poet (1819-1892; see pp. 1060-86).

6. Extensive public gardens in a residential district

9. More usually Ts'ao Chih, a Chinese poet (192-of London.

232) who wrote five-character poems.

7. Cf. Psalm 37.11: "But the meek shall inherit

T H E R I V E R - M E R C H A N T ' S W I F E : A L E T
T E R / 1 2 9 7

In a Station of the Metro¹

The apparition of these faces in the crowd;

Petals on a wet, black bough.

1 9 1 3 , 1 9 1 6

The River-Merchant's Wife: a Letter²

While my hair was still cut straight across my forehead

I played about the front gate, pulling flowers.

You came by on bamboo stilts, playing horse,

You walked about my seat, playing with blue plums.

5 And we went on living in the village of Chokan:³

Two small people, without dislike or suspicion.

At fourteen I married My Lord you.

I never laughed, being bashful.

Lowering my head, I looked at the wall,

io Called to, a thousand times, I never looked back.

At fifteen I stopped scowling,

I desired my dust to be mingled with yours

Forever and forever and forever.

Why should I climb the look out?

15 At sixteen you departed,

You went into far Ku-to-yen,⁴ by the river of swirling eddies,

And you have been gone five months.

The monkeys make sorrowful noise overhead.

You dragged your feet when you went out.

20 By the gate now, the moss is grown, the different mosses,

Too deep to clear them away!

The leaves fall early this autumn, in wind.

The paired butterflies are already yellow with August

Over the grass in the West garden;

25 They hurt me. I grow older.

If you are coming down through the narrows of the river Kiang,

Please let me know beforehand,

1. Pound writes in Gaudier-Brzeska: A Memoir had been left by my metro emotion. I wrote a (1916) of having suddenly seen a succession of thirty-line poem, and destroyed it... . Six months beautiful faces one day on the Paris Metro (sub-later I made the following hokku-like sentence.” way), after which he tried all day to find words “as

2. Adaptation from the Chinese of Li Po (701-762), named Rihaku in Japanese. Pound’s work is that evening ... I was still trying and I found, sub-based on notes by the American scholar Ernest Fenellosa, themselves based on interpretations by words, but there came an equation ... not in Japanese scholars.

speech, but in little splotches of color... . The

3. Ch'ang-Kan, a suburb of Nanking.

'one-image poem' is a form of super-position, that

4. Ch'tit'ang, a Chinese river called Kiang in Japanese (line 26), here treated as a place.

it useful in getting out of the impasse in which I

1 2 9 8 / E Z R A P O U N D

And I will come out to meet you

As far as Cho-fu-Sa.⁵

By Rihaku

1 9 1 5

Hugh Selwyn Mauberley

LIFE A N D C O N T A C T S⁶

E. P. Ode pour l'élection de Son Sepulchre¹

For three years, out of key with his time,

He strove to resuscitate the dead art

Of poetry; to maintain "the sublime"

In the old sense. Wrong from the start—

5 No, hardly, but seeing he had been born

In a half savage country,⁸ out of date;

Bent resolutely on wringing lilies from the acorn;

Capaneus;⁹ trout for factitious⁰ bait; false, artificial

"I⁵[xev yap TOL Jtav⁰' ocr¹ evi, Tpoiri¹

io Caught in the unstopped ear;

Giving the rocks small lee-way

The chopped seas held him, therefore, that year.

His true Penelope was Flaubert,²

He fished by obstinate isles;
15 Observed the elegance of Circe's¹ hair
Rather than the mottoes on sundials.
Unaffected by "the march of events,"
He passed from men's memory in Van trentiesme
De son eage;⁴ the case presents
20 No adjunct to the Muses' diadem.⁵

5. Chang-feng Sha, a beach several hundred miles in Troy (Greek); Homer, Odyssey 12.189. From the up the river from Nanking.

song of the Sirens, which was meant to lure Odys-
6. Hugh Selwyn Mauberley comprises two sets of seus's ship onto the rocks. Odysseus plugged his poems: the thirteen poems reprinted here ("Life companions' ears with wax, and he alone, bound and Contacts," or "Contacts and Life," as Pound to the mast, heard the song with "unstopped ear" subtitled a 1957 edition) and five poems that fol-(line 10).

low, headed "Mauberley (1920)." The entire vol-
2. Gustave Flaubert (1821-1880), French realist ume bore an epigraph from the fourth Eclogue of novelist and meticulous craftsman. Penelope, the
the third-century Carthaginian poet Nemesianus:
paradigmatic faithful wife, fended off suitors while Vocat aestus in umbram (Latin, "The heat calls us Odysseus spent ten years at the siege of Troy and into the shade").

another ten years returning home.

7. Cf. Pierre de Ronsard (1524-1585), Odes 4.5,

3. Beautiful enchantress who seduced Odysseus;

“De {‘election de son sepulchre” [French, “Concern-he stayed on her island for over a year.

ing the choice of his tomb”], in which the poet

4. In the thirty-first year of his age (French);

describes the kind of burial place and the kind of Pound’s age when his book Lustra was published.

fame he would like to have.

Adapted from the beginning of Le Grand Testa-

8. I.e., the United States.

ment, by the fifteenth-century French poet Fran-

9. In Aeschylus’s tragedy The Seven against Thebes

gois Villon: “In the thirtieth year of my age.”

(467 B.C.E.), Capaneus swore he would sack that

5. Crown. In Greek mythology, the Muses were city despite the god Zeus and was struck dead with nine sister goddesses who presided over song,

a thunderbolt.

poetry, and the arts and sciences.

1. For we know all the things that [were suffered]

H U G H S E L W Y N M A U B E R L E Y / 1 2 9 9

II

The age demanded an image

Of its accelerated grimace,

Something for the modern stage,

Not, at any rate, an Attic6 grace;

5 Not, not certainly, the obscure reveries
Of the inward gaze;
Better mendacities
Than the classics in paraphrase!
The “age demanded” chiefly a mold in plaster,
10 Made with no loss of time,
A prose kinema,⁷ not, not assuredly, alabaster
Or the “sculpture” of rhyme.

III

The tea-rose tea-gown, etc.
Supplants the mousseline of Cos,⁸
The pianola⁰ “replaces” player piano
Sappho’s barbitos.⁹
5 Christ follows Dionysus,¹ Phallic and ambrosial
Made way for macerations;⁰ fastings, wastings
Caliban casts out Ariel.²
All things are a flowing,
io Sage Heracleitus³ says;
But a tawdry cheapness
Shall outlast our days.
Even the Christian beauty
Defects—after Samothrace;⁴
15 We s e e TO KCXXOV⁵
Decreed in the market place.
Faun’s flesh is not to us,
Nor the saint’s vision.
We have the press for wafer;

20 Franchise for circumcision.

6. Athenian; i.e., simple, pure, classical.

2. In Shakespeare's Tempest, Caliban is earth-

7. Motion (Greek); and an early spelling of cinema bound and coarse, Ariel a beautiful and imagina(motion pictures).

tive spirit.

8. Greek island. Mousseline: fine cloth (muslin).

3. Greek philosopher (ca. 540-ca. 480 B.C.E.),

9. Lyrelike instrument played by the Greek lyric whose teaching emphasized flux ("all things flow").
poet Sappho (fl. ca. 610-ca. 580 B.C.E.).

4. Greek island where a mystery cult was centered

1. Greek god of fertility, wine, and poetic inspi-and where the famous statue Winged Victory was ration, whose worship included ecstatic frenzies,
found.

sexual rites, and dramatic festivals.

5. The beautiful (Greek).

1 3 0 0 / E Z R A P O U N D

All men, in law, are equals.

Free of Pistratus,⁶

We choose a knave or an eunuch

To rule over us.

25 O bright Apollo,

TLV av5pa, TLV f]pacoa, riva Qeov,⁷

What god, man, or hero

Shall I place a tin wreath upon!

IV

These fought in any case,
and some believing,
pro domo,⁸ in any case ...

Some quick to arm,
5 some for adventure,
some from fear of weakness,
some from fear of censure,
some for love of slaughter, in imagination,
learning later ...

io some in fear, learning love of slaughter;

Died some, pro patria, non “dulce” non “et decor” ... 9

walked eye-deep in hell
believing in old men’s lies, then unbelieving 15 came home, home to a lie, home to many deceits,
home to old lies and new infamy;
usury age-old and age-thick
and liars in public places.

20 Daring as never before, wastage as never before.

Young blood and high blood,
fair cheeks, and fine bodies;
fortitude as never before frankness as never before, 25 disillusion as never told in the old days,
hysterias, trench confessions,
laughter out of dead bellies.

V

There died a myriad,

And of the best, among them,

6. Three times the absolute ruler of Athens (d. god, what hero, what man shall we loudly praise?"

527 B.C.E.), he made the city the foremost power

8. For home (Latin).

in Ionia and supported the arts.

9. For one's native land, not sweetly, not gloriously

7. What man, what hero, what god (Greek); cf. the (Latin); cf. the Roman poet Horace's Odes 3.2.13:

Greek poet Pindar's Olympian Ode 2.2: "What

"Sweet and fitting it is to die for one's country."

H U G H S E L W Y N M A U B E R L E Y / 1 3 0 1

F o r a n o l d b i t c h g o n e i n t h e t e e t h ,

F o r a b o t c h e d c i v i l i z a t i o n ,

5 C h a r m , s m i l i n g a t t h e g o o d m o u t h ,

Q u i c k e y e s g o n e u n d e r e a r t h ' s l i d ,

F o r t w o g r o s s o f b r o k e n s t a t u e s ,

F o r a f e w t h o u s a n d b a t t e r e d b o o k s .

Yeux Glauques!

G l a d s t o n e 2 w a s s t i l l r e s p e c t e d ,

W h e n J o h n R u s k i n p r o d u c e d

" K i n g ' s T r e a s u r i e s " ; 3 S w i n b u r n e

A n d R o s s e t t i s t i l l a b u s e d . 4

5 F e t i d B u c h a n a n l i f t e d u p h i s v o i c e

W h e n t h a t f a u n ' s h e a d o f h e r s

B e c a m e a p a s t i m e f o r

Painters and adulterers.

The Burne-Jones cartoons⁵

io Have preserved her eyes;

Still, at the Tate, they teach

Cophetuatorhapsodize;

Thin like brook water,

With a vacant gaze.

15 The English Rubaiyat was still born⁶

In those days.

The thin, clear gaze, the same

Still darts out faunlike from the half-ruined face, Questing and passive....

20 "Ah, poor Jenny 's case" ⁷...

Bewildered that a world

Shows no surprise

At the last maquero's⁸

Adulteries.

1. Sea-green eyes (French). Pound's poem focuses the English of having "despised literature ... sci- on the eyes of Elizabeth Siddal (d. 1862), wife of ence ... Art! ... Nature ... compassion."

the English poet and painter Dante Gabriel Ros-

4. Rossetti and the English poet Algernon Swin-setti (1828—1882) and the model used for many of burne (1837-1909) were abused by the Scottish his paintings as well as for those of other Pre-writer Robert W. Buchanan (1841-1901) in "The Raphaelite painters, including Edward Burne-

Fleshly School of Poetry” (1871).

Jones (1833-1898), in whose painting King

5. Cartoons (French); preliminary sketches.

Cophetua and the Beggar Maid (1884; now in the

6. Edward FitzGerald’s translation of The Rubai-

Tate Gallery, London; see the third stanza below)

yat of Omar Khayyam (see p. 961), first published

she appears as the beggar maid.

in 1859, became popular only when the Pre-

2. William Ewart Gladstone (1809-1898), active

Raphaelites “discovered” it.

in British politics for over sixty years, was four

7. Buchanan had particularly attacked Rossetti’s times prime minister.

“Jenny,” a sympathetic portrayal of a prostitute.

3. “Sesame. Of King’s Treasuries” is the first lec-

8. Perhaps a pun, suggesting both one who lac-ture in Sesame and Lilies (1865), in which the quers pictures (from the Spanish verb maquear)

English critic John Ruskin (1819—1900) accuses and a pimp (from the French noun maquereau).

1302 / EZRA POUND

“Siena Mi Fe”; Disfecemi Maremma”⁹

A m o n g t h e p i c k l e d f e t u s e s a n d b o t t l e d b o n e s , E n g a g e d i n p e r f e c t i n g t h e c a t a l o g u e ,

I f o u n d t h e l a s t s c i o n o f t h e

S e n a t o r i a l f a m i l i e s o f S t r a s b o u r g , M o n s i e u r V e r o g . 1

5 F o r t w o h o u r s h e t a l k e d o f G a l l i f e t ; 2

Of Dowson; of the Rhymers' Club; 3
Told me how Johnson (Lionel) died 4
By falling from a high stool in a pub ...
But showed no trace of alcohol
10 At the autopsy, privately performed —
Tissue preserved — the pure mind Arose toward Newman 5 as the whiskey warmed.

Dowson found harlots cheaper than hotels
; Headlam for uplift; Image 6 impartially imbued 15 With raptures for Bacchus, Terpsichore 7 and the Church.

Sospoke the author of "The Dorian Mood,"
M. Verog, out of step with the decade,
Detached from his contemporaries,
Neglected by the young,
20 Because of these reveries.

Brennbaum 8

The sky like limpideyes,
The circular infant's face,
The stiffness from spatstocollar
Never relaxing into grace;
5 The heavy memories of Horeb, Sinai and t he forty years 9

Showed only when the daylight fell

9. Siena made me; the Maremma undid me (Ital-Irish poet William Butler Yeats (1865-1939; see ian; Purgatorio 5.134). Words spoken to Dante by pp. 1188-1211) and his friends.

the spirit of Pia de' Tolomei, encountered in Pur-

4. I.e., from a fall in the street.

gatory among those who died by violence and with-

5. John Henry Newman (1801-1890), the most out absolution. She was murdered by her husband.

famous Victorian convert to Roman Catholicism

The line carries with it the idea of exile from one's (and eventually a cardinal). Johnson was also an native place; the subject of Pound's poem had been ardent convert.

born in Alsace.

6 Selwyn Image (1849-1930), artist, poet, and

1. Pound's model for Verog was the poet and clergyman; the Reverend Stewart Headlam (1847—

librarian of the Royal College of Surgeons Victor

1924), liberal clergyman who was for many years

Gustav Plarr (1863-1929), author of the poem "In a vicar in the East End of London, writer on social the Dorian-Mood" (line 16). His friends included and religious questions. Roth members of the the poets Ernest Dowson (1867—1900; see

Rhymers' Club, they founded the Church and

pp. 1211-12) and Lionel Johnson (1867-1902).

Stage Guild.

He, like them, was a member of the Rhymers' Club

7. Greek Muse of the dance. Bacchus: Roman god

(see line 6, note 2); he published a memoir of Dow-

of wine.

son. Pound edited Johnson's Poetical Works

8. Often identified as Max Reerbohm (1872-1915).

1956), English critic and caricaturist, who was

2. Marquis de Galliffet (1830-1909), a French known as “the Incomparable Max.” Pound mistakgeneral who led a cavalry charge at the Rattle of only thought he was Jewish.

Sedan (1870), in the Franco-Prussian War.

9. After the Exodus from Egypt, the Israelites, led

3. London literary club founded in 1891 by the by Moses, spent forty years in the wilderness. At

H U G H S E L W Y N M A U B E R L E Y / 1 3 0 3

L e v e l a c r o s s t h e f a c e

O f B r e n n b a u m ” T h e I m p e c c a b l e . ”

Mr. Nixon

I n t h e c r e a m g i l d e d c a b i n o f h i s s t e a m y a c h t M r . N i x o n a d v i s e d m e k i n d l y , t o a d v a n c e w i t h f e w e r D a n g e r s o f d e l a y . ” C o n s i d e r
C a r e f u l l y t h e r e v i e w e r .

5 “ I w a s a s p o o r a s y o u a r e ;

” W h e n I b e g a n I g o t , o f c o u r s e ,

” A d v a n c e o n r o y a l t i e s , f i f t y a t f i r s t , ” s a i d M r . N i x o n ,

” F o l l o w m e , a n d t a k e a c o l u m n ,

” E v e n i f y o u h a v e t o w o r k f r e e .

1 0 ” B u t t e r r e v i e w e r s . F r o m f i f t y t o t h r e e h u n d r e d

” I r o s e i n e i g h t e e n m o n t h s ;

” T h e h a r d e s t n u t I h a d t o c r a c k

” Was Dr. Dundas.

” I never mentioned a man but with the view 15” Of selling my own works.

” The tip ‘s a good one, as for literature

“It gives no man a sinecure.

” And no one knows, at sight, a masterpiece
.

” And give up verse, my boy,

20” There ‘s nothing in it.”

Likewise a friend of Bloughram ‘s 2 once a dvised me: Don ‘t kick against the pricks, 3

Accept opinion. The ” Nineties ” 0 tried yo ur game 1890s And died, there ‘s nothing in it.

X

Beneath the sagging roof

The stylist 4 has taken shelter,

Unpaid, uncelebrated,

At last from the world ‘s welter

5 Nature receives him;

With a placid and uneducated mistress

Horeb, God spoke to Moses from a burning bush

(1812-1889; see pp. 1009-41), is more practical

(Exodus 3.1—4); on Mt. Sinai, Moses received the than devotional in his beliefs.

Ten Commandments (Exodus 19—20).

3. Cf. Jesus’ words to Saul: “It is hard for thee to

1. Pound wrote that Nixon “is a fictitious name for kick against the pricks” (Acts 9.5).

a real person”—perhaps the English novelist

4. Probably based on the English writer Ford
Arnold Bennett (1867-1931), who owned a yacht.
Madox Ford (1873-1939), a friend of Pound and
2. The speaker in "Bishop Blougram's Apology" an influence on his writing style.
(1855), by the English poet Robert Browning

1304 / EZRA POUND

H e e x e r c i s e s h i s t a l e n t s

A n d t h e s o i l m e e t s h i s d i s t r e s s .

T h e h a v e n f r o m s o p h i s t i c a t i o n s a n d c o n t e n t i o n s
l e a k s t h r o u g h i t s t h a t c h ;

H e o f f e r s s u c c u l e n t c o o k i n g ;

T h e d o o r h a s a c r e a k i n g l a t c h .

XI

" C o n s e r v a t r i x o f M i l e s i e n " 5

H a b i t s o f m i n d a n d f e e l i n g ,

P o s s i b l y . B u t i n E a l i n g 6

W i t h t h e m o s t b a n k - c l e r k l y o f E n g l i s h m e n ?

5 N o , " M i l e s i a n " i s a n e x a g g e r a t i o n .

N o i n s t i n c t h a s s u r v i v e d i n h e r

O l d e r t h a n t h o s e h e r g r a n d m o t h e r

T o l d h e r w o u l d f i t h e r s t a t i o n .

XII

" D a p h n e w i t h h e r t h i g h s i n b a r k

S t r e t c h e s t o w a r d m e h e r l e a f y h a n d s , " 7 —

S u b j e c t i v e l y . I n t h e s t u f f e d - s a t i n d r a w i n g r o o m I a w a i t T h e L a d y V a l e n t i n e ' s c o m m a n d s ,

5 Knowing my coat has never been
 Of precisely the fashion
 To stimulate, in her,
 A durable passion;
 Doubtful, somewhat, of the value
 io Of well-gowned approbation
 Of literary effort,
 But never of The Lady Valentine's vocatio
 n: Poetry, her border of ideas,
 The edge, uncertain, but a means of blendi ng 15 With other strata
 Where the lower and higher have ending;
 A hook to catch the Lady Jane's attention,
 A modulation toward the theatre,
 Also, in the case of revolution,

5. I.e., preserver of Milesian tradition; cf. the conserved.

phrase "Women, conservers of Milesian 6. Staid, middle-class London suburb.

traditions," from the short story "Stratages," by the

7. A translation of two lines from "Le Chateau de French writer Remy de Gourmont (1858—1915).

Souvenir," by the French poet Theophile Gautier

The Greek city Miletus, a center of literature and (1811-1872). In Greek mythology, Daphne, pur- philosophy, was also associated with the erotic sto-sued by the god Apollo, was turned into a laurel to ries of Aristides' Milesian Tales (second century enable her to escape.

B.C.E.), which have not survived and so cannot be
H U G H S E L W Y N M A U B E R L E Y / 1 3 0 5
2 0 A p o s s i b l e f r i e n d a n d c o m f o r t e r .
C o n d u c t , o n t h e o t h e r h a n d , t h e s o u l
” W h i c h t h e h i g h e s t c u l t u r e s h a v e n o u r i s h e d ” 8
T o F l e e t S t . w h e r e
D r . J o h n s o n 9 f l o u r i s h e d ;
2 5 B e s i d e t h i s t h o r o u g h f a r e
T h e s a l e o f h a l f - h o s e h a s
L o n g s i n c e s u p e r s e d e d t h e c u l t i v a t i o n O f P i e r i a n 1 r o s e s .

Envoi (1919)

Go, dumb-born book, 2

Tell her that sang me once that song of Lawes:

Hadst thou but song

As thou hast subjects known,

5 Then were there cause in thee that should condone

Even my faults that heavy upon me lie,

And build her glories their longevity.

Tell her that sheds

Such treasure in the air,

io Recking naught else but that her graces give

Life to the moment,

I would bid them live

As roses might, in magic amber laid,

Red overwrought with orange and all made

i 5 One substance and one color

*Braving time.
Tell her that goes
With song upon her lips
But sings not out the song, nor knows 20 The maker of it, some other mouth,
May be as fair as hers,
Might, in new ages, gain her worshipers,
When our two dusts with Waller's shall be laid,
Siftings on siftings in oblivion,
25 Till change hath broken down
All things save Beauty alone.*

1920

8. A translation of two lines from “Complainte de with the Muses, nine sister goddesses in Greek Pianos,” by the French poet Jules Laforgue (1860—mythology who presided over song, poetry, and the 1887).

arts and sciences.

9. Samuel Johnson (1709-1784), poet, journalist,

2. Here and throughout this poem, Pound echoes critic, essayist, lexicographer, and the dominant Edmund Waller's “Song” (see p. 393), which English man of letters of the mid-eighteenth cen-begins “Go, lovely rose!” and which was set to tury. Fleet Street: the center of London newspaper music by the English composer Henry Lawes publishing.
(1596-1662).

1. Pieria is a region of northern Greece associated

1306 / EZRA POUND

Medallion³

Luini⁴ in porcelain!

The grand piano

Utters a profane

Protest with her clear soprano.

5 The sleek head emerges

From the gold-yellow frock

As Anadyomenes in the opening

Pages of Reinach.

Honey-red, closing the face-oval,

10 A basket-work of braids which seem as if they were spun in King Minos' hall

From metal, or intractable amber;

The face-oval beneath the glaze,

Bright in its suave bounding-line, as,

15 Beneath half-wattays,

The eyes turn to opaz.

1920

FROM THE CANTOS

I7

And then went down to the ship,

Set keel to breakers, forth on the godly sea
, and we set up mast and sail on that swart ship, bore sheep aboard her, and our bodies also heavy with weeping, and winds from sternward bore us onward with belly
ing canvas, Circe's this craft, the trim-coi fed goddess. 8

T h e n s a t w e a m i d s h i p s , w i n d j a m m i n g t h e t i l l e r , 3. This poem was originally an “Envoi (1919)”— poem of epic proportions on which he worked for like (see above) final section of Pound’s “1920 over fifty years, is taken up, through line 67, with (Mauberley),” itself an extension of and comment Pound’s translation of the beginning of book 11 of on “Hugh Selwyn Mauberley: Life and Contacts.” Homer’s Odyssey, not directly from the Greek but 4. Bernardino Luini (ca. 1480-1532), Italian from the sixteenth-century Latin translation of painter.

Andreas Divus (see line 68 and note 3). Rook 11

5. Rising [from the sea] (Greek); Aphrodite anad- describes Odysseus’s trip to the underworld to conuomene was a famous painting by Apelles (fourth sult the spirit of Tiresias, the blind Theban century B.C.E.), and similar depictions of the god-prophet, who will give him instructions for the final dess in sculpture are illustrated in Salomon Reistages of his return to his home island, Ithaca.

nach’s Apollo: An Illustrated History of Art

8. Circe was the enchantress with whom Odys-throughout the Ages (1904).

seus lived for over a year and who told him to seek

6. In Greek mythology, king of Crete.

Tiresias’s advice.

7. The opening of Pound’s Cantos, the complex

THE CANTOS : I / 1307

Thus with stretched sail, we went over sea till day's end.

10 Sun to his slumber, shadows o'er all the ocean,

Came we then to the bounds of deepest water,

To the Kimmerian lands,⁹ and peopled cities

Covered with close-webbed mist, unpierced ever

With glitter of sun-rays

15 Nor with stars stretched, nor looking back from heaven

Swartest night stretched over wretched men there.

The ocean flowing backward, came we then to the place

Aforesaid by Circe.

Here did they rites, Perimedes and Eurylochus,¹

20 And drawing sword from my hip

I dug the ell-square pitkin;²

Poured we libations unto each the dead,

First mead³ and then sweet wine, water mixed with white flour.

Then prayed I many a prayer to the sickly death's-heads;

25 As set in Ithaca, sterile bulls of the best

For sacrifice, heaping the pyre with goods,

A sheep to Tiresias only, black and a bell-sheep.⁴

Dark blood flowed in the fosse,⁰ trench, ditch

Souls out of Erebus,⁵ cadaverous dead, of brides

30 Of youths and of the old who had borne much;

Souls stained with recent tears, girls tender,

Men many, mauled with bronze lance heads,

Battle spoil, bearing yet dreory⁶ arms,

These many crowded about me; with shouting,

35 Pallor upon me, cried to my men for more beasts;
Slaughtered the herds, sheep slain of bronze;
Poured ointment, cried to the gods,
To Pluto the strong, and praised Proserpine;⁷
Unsheathed the narrow sword,
40 I sat to keep off the impetuous impotent dead,
Till I should hear Tiresias.
But first Elpenor⁸ came, our friend Elpenor,
Unburied, cast on the wide earth,
Limbs that we left in the house of Circe,
45 Unwept, unwrapped in sepulchre, since toils urged other.
Pitiful spirit. And I cried in hurried speech:

“Elpenor, how art thou come to this dark coast?

“Cam’st thou afoot, outstripping seamen?”

And he in heavy speech:

9. The Cimmerians were a mythical people living Hades.

in darkness and mist on the farthest borders of the

6. Bloody (from the Old English dreorig).

known world.

7. Roman name for Persephone, goddess of regen-

1. Two of Odysseus’s men.

eration and wife of Pluto (Roman Dis), god of the

2. Small, square pit, one ell (forty-five inches) on underworld.

each side.

8. The youngest of Odysseus’s men, he had drunk-

3. Alcoholic drink made from fermented honey.

only fallen asleep on a loft on the eve of their
4. The sheep that leads the herd, here likened to departure from her island and fell to his death Tiresias.

when he tried to climb down a ladder.

5. A dark place in the underworld, on the way to

1 3 0 8 / EZRA P O U N D

50 “111 fate and abundant wine. I slept in Circe’s ingle.° nook, corner

“Going down the long ladder unguarded,

“I fell against the buttress,

“Shattered the nape-nerve, the soul sought Avernus.9

“But thou, O King, I bid remember me, unwept, unburied,

55 “Heap up mine arms, be° tomb by sea-bord, and inscribed:
make my

“A man of no fortune, and with a name to come.

“And set my oar up, that I swung mid fellows.”

And Anticlea¹ came, whom I beat off, and then Tiresias Theban,

Holding his golden wand, knew me, and spoke first:

60 “A second time?2 why? man of ill star,

“Facing the sunless dead and this joyless region?

“Stand from the fosse, leave me my bloody bever° drink

“For soothsay.”

And I stepped back,

65 And he strong with the blood, said then: “Odysseus

“Shalt return through spiteful Neptune, over dark seas,

“Lose all companions.” And then Anticlea came.

Lie quiet Divus. I mean, that is Andreas Divus,³

In officina Wecheli, 1538, out of Homer.

70 And he sailed, by Sirens and thence outward and away
And unto Circe.⁴

Venerandam,⁵

In the Cretan's phrase, with the golden crown, Aphrodite, Cypri munimenta sortita est, mirthful, oricalchi,⁶ with golden

75 Girdles and breast bands, thou with dark eyelids

Bearing the golden bough of Argicida. So that:⁷

1921 1930

9. A lake near Naples believed by the ancients to that figure, in Latin or in English, in the closing be the entrance to the underworld.

lines of the Canto: "Reverend golden-crowned

1. Odysseus's mother; according to the Odyssey, beautiful Aphrodite I shall sing, who has received Odysseus wept at seeing her, but obeyed Circe's as her lot the citadels of all sea-girt Cyprus... ."

instruction to speak to no one until he had heard

6. Of copper. I.e., Aphrodite has received earrings, Tiresias.

flower-shaped, of copper and gold.

2. They first saw each other on Earth.

7. The Canto ends on the colon, going immedi-

3. The sixteenth-century Italian whose translation
ately into Canto II, which begins with the words of the Odyssey had been published "in officina

"Hang it all, Robert Rrowning, / There can be but Wecheli," at the printing shop of Chretien Wechel, one 'Sordello.' ” Argicida: an epithet for Hermes, Paris, in 1538.

the gods' messenger and “slayer of Argos” (the many-

4. After this visit to the underworld, Odysseus eyed herdsman set to watch Io); from the other returned to Circe and then, forewarned by her, Homeric Hymn, which recounts the union of Aph-successfully sailed past the Sirens. rodite and Anchises, a union that led to the birth 5. Worthy of worship (Latin); applied to Aphro- of the Trojan leader Aeneas. Aphrodite, deceiving dote, Greek goddess of love and beauty. This, like Anchises at first, says that she is a mortal maiden, the Latin words and phrases in the next lines, that the “slayer of Argos, with wand of gold” has derives from a Latin translation of two Hymns to brought her to be his wife. Before descending to Aphrodite (among the so-called Homeric Hymns, the underworld, Aeneas offered the golden bough dating from the eighth to the sixth century B.C.E.).

to Proserpine; it is sacred to the goddess Diana, This translation by Georgius Dartona Cretensis though Pound seems to associate it with Aphro- (“the Cretan,” line 73) was contained in the vol- dote, “slayer of Argi” (Greeks) during the Trojan ume in which Pound had found Divus' translation War.

of the Odyssey. One hymn begins with the words

THE CANTOS : XLV / 1309

XLV

With *Usura*⁸

With usura hath no man a house of good stone each block cut smooth and well fitting that design might cover their face,
with usura

5 hath no man a painted paradise on his church wall
*harpes et luthes*⁹

or where virgin receiveth message and halo projects from incision,
with usura

10 seeth no man Gonzaga his heirs and his concubines' no picture is made to endure nor to live with but it is made to sell and sell quickly with usura, sin against nature,

is thy bread ever more of stale rags

15 is thy bread dry as paper, with no mountain wheat, no strong flour
with usura the line grows thick with usura is no clear demarcation and no man can find site for his dwelling.

20 Stone cutter is kept from his stone
weaver is kept from his loom

WITH USURA

wool comes not to market
sheep bringeth no gain with usura

25 Usura is a murrain,⁰ usura plague

blunteth the needle in the maid's hand and stoppeth the spinner's cunning. Pietro Lombardo² came not by usura
Duccio³ came not by usura
30 nor Pier della Francesca; Zuan Bellin' not by usura nor was "La Calunnia"⁴ painted.
Came not by usura Angelico; came not Ambrogio Praedis,
Came no church of cut stone signed: Adamo me fecit.⁵
Not by usura St Trophime
35 Not by usura Saint Hilaire,⁶ Usura rusteth the chisel

8. Usury (Latin). "N.B. Usury: a charge for the use
2. Italian architect and sculptor (1435—1515). He of purchasing power, levied without regard to proand other artists in the poem were supported by duction; often without regard to the possibilities of patrons.

production. (Hence the failure of the Medici

3. Agostino di Duccio (1418?-1481), Italian bank)" [Pound's note]. Medici bank: operated sculptor.

1397-1494 by the Medici family of Florence.

4. Calumny (Italian); title of painting by Sandro Pound felt that the legalizing of usury during the Botticelli (1444-1510). Piero della Francesca (ca.
Reformation had profound, negative effects on 1420-1492) and Giovanni Bellini (ca. 1430-society.

1516), Italian painters.

9. Allusion to a poem of the Grand Testament, by

5. Adam made me (Latin); a sculptor's inscription

the French poet Francois Villon (1431—1463?):

in the Church of San Zeno, Verona, Italy. Fra

“Painted paradise where there are harps and lutes.”

Angelico (ca. 1400-1455) and Ambrogio Praedis

1 . Gonzaga, His Heirs and Concubines is a paint-

(1455?-! 508), Italian painters.

ing of a powerful patron of Mantua, Francesco

6. Church in Poitiers, France. St Trophime:

Gonzaga (1444-1483), by the Italian painter church in Aries, France.

Andrea Mantegna (1431-1506).

1 3 1 0 / E L I N O R W Y L I E

It rusteth the craft and the craftsman

It gnaweth the thread in the loom

None learneth to weave gold in her pattern;

40 Azure hath a canker by usura; cramoisi⁷ is unbroidered

Emerald findeth no Memling⁸

Usura slayeth the child in the womb

It stayeth the young man's courting

It hath brought palsey to bed, lyeth

45 between the young bride and her bridegroom

CONTRA NATURAM⁹

They have brought whores for Eleusis¹

Corpses are set to banquet

at behest of usura.

1937

E L I N O R W Y L I E

1885-1928

Full Moon

My bands of silk and miniver⁰ white fur

Momently grew heavier;

The black gauze was beggarly thin;

The ermine muffled mouth and chin;

5 I could not suck the moonlight in.

Harlequin in lozenges¹

Of love and hate, I walked in these

Striped and ragged rigmaroles;²

Along the pavement my footsoles

io Trod warily on living coals.

Shouldering the thoughts I loathed,

In their corrupt disguises clothed,

Mortality I could not tear

From my ribs, to leave them bare

15 Ivory in silver air.

There I walked, and there I raged;

The spiritual savage caged

Within my skeleton, raged afresh

To feel, behind a carnal mesh,

20 The clean bones crying in the flesh.

1923

7. Crimson cloth (French).

tutes “whores”).

8. Hans Memling (1430?—1495), Flemish painter.

1. Diamond shapes. Harlequin: a buffoon, a char-
9. Against nature (Latin); phrase used in Arisacter in the Italian commedia dell'arte, or one tote's Politics to describe usury.

dressed in fabric of certain variegated patterns.

1. Town in ancient Greece known for spring fer-

2. Literally, confused or meaningless statements.

tility rites (involving priestesses—Pound substi-

S E A R O S E / 1 3 1 1

Doomsday

T h e e n d o f e v e r y t h i n g a p p r o a c h e s ;

I h e a r i t c o m i n g

L o u d a s t h e w h e e l s o f p a i n t e d c o a c h e s

O n t u r n p i k e s d r u m m i n g ;

5 L o u d a s t h e p o m p o f p l u m y h e a r s e s ,

O r p e n n o n e d c h a r g e s ; 3

L o u d a s w h e n e v e r y o a r r e v e r s e s

V e n e t i a n b a r g e s ;

L o u d a s t h e c a v e s o f c o v e r e d b r i d g e s

1 0 F u l f i l l e d w i t h r u m b l e

O f h o o v e s ; a n d l o u d a s c l o u d y r i d g e s

W h e n g l a c i e r s t u m b l e ;

L i k e c r e e p i n g t h u n d e r t h i s c o n t i n u e s

D i f f u s e d a n d d i s t a n t ,

1 5 L o u d i n o u r e a r s a n d i n o u r s i n e w s ,

I n s a n e , i n s i s t e n t ;

L o u d a s a l i o n s c o r n i n g c a r r i o n

F u r t h e r a n d f u r t h e r ;

Loud as the ultimate loud clarion

20 Or the first murder. 0 murder

1932

H. D. (HILDADOOLITTLE)

1886-1961

Sea Rose

Rose, harsh rose,
marred and with stint of petals,
meager flower, thin,
sparse of leaf,
5 more precious than a wet rose single on a stem—
you are caught in the drift.
Stunted, with small leaf,
io you are flung on the sand,
you are lifted
in the crisp sand
that drives in the wind.

3. Military charges with streaming banners.

1312/H. D. (HILDADOOLITTLE)

Can the spice-rose drip such acrid fragrance hardened in a leaf?

1916

Sea Violet

The white violet
is scented on its stalk,

thesea-violet
fragileasagate, 5liesfrontingallthewind amongthetornshells
onthesand-bank.
Thegreaterblueviolets
flutteronthehill, iobutwhowouldchangeforthese whowouldchangeforthese onerootofthewhitesort?

Violet
yourgraspisfrail 15ontheedgeofthesand-hill, butyoucatchthelight—
frost,astaredgeswithitsfire.

1916

Helen1

AllGreecehates
thetilleyesinthewhiteface, thelusterasofolives
whereshestands, 5Andthewhitehands.
AllGreecereviles
thewanfacewhenshesmiles, hatingitdeeperstill
whenitgrowswanandwhite, iorememberingpastenchantments andpastills.

1. In Greek mythology, the beautiful wife of the Greek leader Menelaus; abducted by the Trojan prince Paris, she was blamed for the Trojan War, waged to regain her.

WINE BOWL / 1313

Greece sees unmoved, God's daughter, born of love, 2
the beauty of cool feet 15 and slenderest knees, could love indeed the maid,
only if she were laid,
white ash amid funereal cypresses.

1924

Wine Bowl

I will rise from my troth
with the dead,
I will sweeten my cup
5 and my bread
with a gift;
I will chisel a bowl for the wine,
for the white wine
and red;
io I will summon a Satyr to dance, 3
a Centaur, a Nymph
and a Faun;
I will picture
15 a warrior King, a Giant,

a N a i a d ,
a M o n s t e r ;
I w i l l c u t r o u n d t h e r i m o f t h e c r a t e r , 4
2 0 s o m e s i m p l e
f a m i l i a r t h i n g ,
v i n e l e a v e s
o r t h e s e a - s w a l l o w ' s w i n g ;
I w i l l w o r k a t e a c h s e p a r a t e p a r t
2 5 t i l l m y m i n d i s w o r n o u t a n d m y h e a r t :
i n m y s k u l l ,
w h e r e t h e v i s i o n h a d b i r t h ,
w i l l c o m e w i n e ,
3 0 w o u l d p o u r s o n g o f t h e h o t e a r t h , o f t h e f l o w e r a n d t h e s w e e t

2. Helen was said to be the daughter of Zeus, ruler with the legs of goats and with pointed ears or of the gods, and Leda, a mortal woman, whom Zeus raped in the guise of a swan.

woodland spirits, the fauns. Centaurs had the faces

3. Lines 10—18 evoke figures from classical and chests of men and the bodies of horses. Satyrs mythology. Nymphs were minor nature goddesses; are usually associated with lechery; centaurs, with those who lived in springs, fountains, rivers, and savagery.

lakes were called naiads. In Greek mythology,
4. I.e., a krater, the usual Greek term for a drink-satyrs were woodland spirits in the form of men
ing bowl.

1314/H.D.(HILDADOOOLITTLE)

of the hill,

thyme,

35 meadow-plant,

grass-blade and sorrel;

in my skull,

from which vision took flight,

will come wine

40 will pour song

of the cool night,

of the silver and blade of the moon,

of the star,

of the sun's kiss at midnoon;

45 I will challenge the reed-pipe and stringed lyre, 5

to sing sweeter,
pipe wilder,
praise louder
50 the fragrance and sweet of the wine jar,
till each lover
must summon another,
to proffer a rose 55 where all flowers are,
in the depths of the exquisite crater;
flower will fall upon flower till the red shower inflame all 60 with intimate fervor;
till:
men who travel afar
will look up,
sensing grape 65 and hill-slope
in the cup;
men who sleep by the wood will arise,
hearing ripple and fall 70 of the tide,
being drawn by the spell of the sea;
the bowl will ensnare and enchant men who crouch by the hearth

till they want 75 but the riot of stars in the night;
those who dwell far inland will seek ships;
the deep-sea fisher,
plying his nets,
so will forsake them
for wheat-sheaves and loam;
men who wander

5. The pipe was the instrument of Pan, Greek god of forests, pastures, flocks, and herds; the lyre was the instrument of Apollo, Greek and Roman god of sunlight, prophecy, music, and poetry.

THE WALLS DO NOT FALL / 1315

will yearn for their home, men at home
85 will depart.

I will rise

from my troth with the dead,

I will sweeten my cup

and my bread

90 with a gift;

I will chisel a howl for the wine,

for the white wine

and red.

1931

*From The Walls Do Not Fall*⁶

m

An incident here and there,

and rails gone (for guns)
from your (and my) old town square:
mist and mist-grey, no colour,
5 still the Luxor⁷ bee, chick and hare pursue unalterable purpose in green, rose-red, lapis;
they continue to prophesy
from the stone papyrus:
io there, as here, ruin opens the tomb, the temple; enter,
there as here, there are no doors:
the shrine lies open to the sky,
the rain falls, here, there 15 sand drifts; eternity endures:
ruin everywhere, yet as the fallen roof leaves the sealed room
open to the air,

6. The first of three book-length poems (the other our past ‘on show,’ as it were ‘another sliced wall two being Tribute to the Angels and The Flowering where poor utensils show like rare objects in a of the Rod) that would be known as H. D.’s war museum’ ” (H. D., in a letter to her eventual lit-trilogy. “The parallel between ancient Egypt and erary executor, the American scholar Norman ‘ancient’ London is obvious. In I (The Walls Do Not Holmes Pearson).

Fall) the ‘fallen roof leaves the sealed room open

7. An Egyptian town on the Nile, near the ruins to the air' is of course true of our own house of ancient Thebes. Representations of the bee, life—outer violence touching the deepest hidden chick, and hare appear on the Temple of Karnak, subconscious terrors, etc. and we see so much of in Thebes.

1316 / H . D . (H I L D A D O O L I T T L E)

so, through our desolation, 20 thoughts stir, inspiration stalks us through gloom:
unaware, Spirit announces the Presence;
shivering overtakes us,
as of old, Samuel:8 25 trembling at a known street-corner,
we know not nor are known;
the Pythian⁹ pronounces—we pass on to another cellar, to another sliced wall where poor utensils show 30 like rare objects in a museum;
Pompeii¹ has nothing to teach us,
we know crack of volcanic fissure,
slow flow of terrible lava,
pressure on heart, lungs, the brain
35 about to burst its brittle case
(what the skull can endure!):
over us, Apocryphal² fire,
under us, the earth sway, dip of a floor,

slope of a pavement 40 where men roll, drunk with a new bewilderment,
sorcery, bedevilment:
the bone-frame was made for
no such shock knit within terror, 45 yet the skeleton stood up to it:
the flesh? it was melted away,
the heart burnt out, dead ember,
tendons, muscles shattered, outer husk dismembered,
yet the frame held:
50 we passed the flame: we wonder what saved us? what for?

1944

8. Cf. 1 Samuel 28.15, where the prophet Samuel eruption of Mt. Vesuvius in 79 c.E.

is disturbed at being raised from the dead, and 1

2. Or perhaps “apocalyptic,” meaning the fiery

Samuel 28.3: “When Saul saw the army of the judgments of the Apocalypse prophesied in the Philistines, he was afraid, and his heart trembled

Christian Scriptures. Cf. 1 Corinthians 3.15: “If greatly.”

any man’s work shall be burned, he shall suffer

9. In Greek mythology, high priestess of the oracle loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire.”

at Delphi.

The Apocrypha are books rejected from the Bible

1. Ancient city on the bay of Naples, buried by an because of dubious authenticity.

1 3 1 7

S I E G F R I E D S A S S O O N

1886-1967

Christ and the Soldier

I

The straggled soldier halted—stared at Him—

Then clumsily dumped down upon his knees,

Gasping, “O blessed crucifix, I’m beat!”

And Christ, still sentried by the seraphim,¹

5 Near the front-line, between two splintered trees,

Spoke him: “My son, behold these hands and feet.”

The soldier eyed Him upward, limb by limb,

Paused at the Face; then muttered, “Wounds like these

Would shift a bloke to Blighty² just a treat!”

io Christ, gazing downward, grieving and ungrim,

Whispered, “I made for you the mysteries,

Beyond all battles moves the Paraclete.”³

II

The soldier chucked his rifle in the dust,

And slipped his pack, and wiped his neck, and said—

15 “O Christ Almighty, stop this bleeding fight!”

Above that hill the sky was stained like rust

With smoke. In sullen daybreak flaring red

The guns were thundering bombardment’s blight.

The soldier cried, “I was born full of lust,

20 With hunger, thirst, and wishfulness to wed.

Who cares today if I done wrong or right?”
Christ asked all pitying, “Can you put no trust
In my known word that shrives each faithful head?
Am I not resurrection, life and light?”

III

25 Machine-guns rattled from below the hill;
High bullets flicked and whistled through the leaves;
And smoke came drifting from exploding shells.

Christ said, “Believe; and I can cleanse your ill.

I have not died in vain between two thieves;

30 Nor made a fruitless gift of miracles.”

1. Angels of the highest of nine orders. In the

3. Advocate or counselor; sometimes, as here,

Bible (Isaiah 6), six-winged celestial beings.

applied to the Holy Ghost.

2. Slang for Britain.

1 3 1 8 / S I E G F R I E D S A S S O O N

The soldier answered, “Heal me if you will,

Maybe there’s comfort when a soul believes

In mercy, and we need it in these hells.

But be you for both sides? I’m paid to kill

35 And if I shoot a man his mother grieves.

Does that come into what your teaching tells?”

A bird lit on the Christ and twittered gay;

Then a breeze passed and shook the ripening corn.

A Red Cross waggon bumped along the track.

40 Forsaken Jesus dreamed in the desolate day—

Uplifted Jesus, Prince of Peace forsworn—

An observation post for the attack.

“Lord Jesus, ain’t you got no more to say?”

Bowed hung that head below the crown of thorns.

45 The soldier shifted, and picked up his pack,

And slung his gun, and stumbled on his way.

“O God,” he groaned, “why ever was I born?” ...

The battle boomed, and no reply came back.

1916 1973

“They”

The Bishop tells us: “When the boys come back

They will not be the same; for they’ll have fought

In a just cause: they lead the last attack

On Anti-Christ; their comrades’ blood has bought

5 New right to breed an honourable race,

They have challenged Death and dared him face to face.”

“We’re none of us the same!” the boys reply.

“For George lost both his legs; and Bill’s stone blind;

Poor Jim’s shot through the lungs and like to die;

io And Bert’s gone syphilitic: you’ll not find

A chap who’s served that hasn’t found some change.”

And the Bishop said: “The ways of God are strange!”

1916 1917

The General

“Good-morning, good-morning!” the General said

When we met him last week on our way to the line.

Now the soldiers he smiled at are most of ‘em dead,

And we’re cursing his staff for incompetent swine.

EVERYONESANG / 1319

5 “He’s a cheery old card,” grunted Harry to Jack
As they slogged up to Arras⁴ with rifle and pack.
But he did for them both by his plan of attack.

1917

1918

Glory of Women

You love us when we’re heroes, home on leave,
Or wounded in a mentionable place.

You worship decorations; you believe
That chivalry redeems the war’s disgrace.

5 You make us shells. You listen with delight,
By tales of dirt and danger fondly thrilled.

You crown our distant ardours while we fight,
And mourn our laurelled memories when we’re killed.

You can’t believe that British troops “retire”

io When hell’s last horror breaks them, and they run,
Trampling the terrible corpses—blind with blood.

O German mother dreaming by the fire,
While you are knitting socks to send your son
His face is trodden deeper in the mud.

1917

1918

Everyone Sang

Everyone suddenly burst out singing;

And I was filled with such delight

As prisoned birds must find in freedom,

Winging wildly across the white

5 Orchards and dark-green fields; on—on—and out of sight.

Everyone's voice was suddenly lifted;
And beauty came like the setting sun:
My heart was shaken with tears; and horror Drifted away ... O, but Everyone io Was a bird; and the song was wordless; the singing will never be done.

1919

1919

4. A city in northern France, in the front line British suffered casualties of eighty-four thousand throughout much of World War I. The British troops, inflicted casualties of seventy-five thousand assault on the Western Front that began on April on the Germans, and took thirteen thousand pris-9, 1917, was known as the Battle of Arras. The oners.

1 3 2 0 / R O B I N S O N J E F F E R S

On Passing the New Menin Gate⁵

Who will remember, passing through this Gate,
The unheroic Dead who fed the guns?

Who shall absolve the foulness of their fate,—
Those doomed, conscripted, unvictorious ones?

5 Crudely renewed, the Salient⁶ holds its own.

Paid are its dim defenders by this pomp;
Paid, with a pile of peace-complacent stone,
The armies who endured that sullen swamp.

Here was the world's worst wound. And here with pride

10 "Their name liveth for ever," the Gateway claims.

Was ever an immolation so belied

As these intolerably nameless names?

Well might the Dead who struggled in the slime

Rise and deride this sepulchre of crime.

1927-28 1928

ROBINSON JEFFERS

1887-1962

Shine, Perishing Republic

While this America settles in the mold of its vulgarity, heavily thickening to empire,

And protest, only a bubble in the molten mass, pops and sighs out,

and the mass hardens,

I sadly smiling remember that the flower fades to make fruit,
the fruit

rots to make earth.

Out of the mother; and through the spring exultances, ripeness
and

decadence; and home to the mother.

5 You making haste haste on decay: not blameworthy; life is good, be it

stubbornly long or suddenly

A mortal splendor: meteors are not needed less than mountains:

shine, perishing republic.

But for my children, I would have them keep their distance from the

thickening center; corruption

Never has been compulsory, when the cities lie at the monster's feet

there are left the mountains.

5. The names of 54,889 men killed in World War 6. Projecting part of a line of defensive trenches, I are engraved on the gate, a war memorial in Bel- open to attack from the front and both sides, gium.

HURTHAWKS / 1321

And boys, be in nothing so moderate as in love of man, a clever

servant, insufferable master.

There is the trap that catches noblest spirits, that caught—they say—

God, when he walked on earth.

1924

Boats in a Fog

Sports and gallantries, the stage, the arts, the antics of dancers,

The exuberant voices of music,

Have charm for children but lack nobility; it is bitter earnestness

That makes beauty; the mind

Knows, grown adult.

A sudden fog-drift muffled the ocean,

A throbbing of engines moved in it,

At length, a stone's throw out, between the rocks and the vapor,

One by one moved shadows

Out of the mystery, shadows, fishing-boats, trailing each other,

Following the cliff for guidance,

Holding a difficult path between the peril of the sea-fog

And the foam on the shore granite.

One by one, trailing their leader, six crept by me,

Out of the vapor and into it,

The throb of their engines subdued by the fog, patient and cautious,

Coasting all round the peninsula

Back to the buoys in Monterey harbor.¹ A flight of pelicans

Is nothing lovelier to look at;
The flight of the planets is nothing nobler; all the arts lose virtue
Against the essential reality
Of creatures going about their business among the equally Earnest elements of nature.

1924

Hurt Hawks

I

The broken pillar of the wing jags from the clotted shoulder,
The wing trails like a banner in defeat,
No more to use the sky forever but live with famine
And pain a few days: cat nor coyote
Will shorten the week of waiting for death, there is game without talons.

He stands under the oak-bush and waits
The lame feet of salvation; at night he remembers freedom
And flies in a dream, the dawns ruin it.
Part of Monterey Bay, a Pacific inlet in California.

1 3 2 2 / R O B I N S O N J E F F E R S

He is strong and pain is worse to the strong, incapacity is worse.

10 The curs of the day come and torment him

At distance, no one but death the redeemer will humble that
head,

The intrepid readiness, the terrible eyes.

The wild God of the world is sometimes merciful to those
That ask mercy, not often to the arrogant.

15 You do not know him, you communal people, or you have forgotten

him;

Intemperate and savage, the hawk remembers him;

Beautiful and wild, the hawks, and men that are dying,
remember

him.

2

I'd sooner, except the penalties, kill a man than a hawk;

but the great red-tailed hawk

Had nothing left but unable misery

20 From the bone too shattered for mending, the wing that trailed under his talons when he moved.

We had fed him six weeks, I gave him freedom,

He wandered over the foreland hill and returned in the evening,

asking for death,

Not like a beggar, still eyed with the old

Implacable arrogance. I gave him the lead gift in the twilight.
What

fell was relaxed,

25 Owl-downy, soft feminine feathers; but what

Soared: the fierce rush: the night-herons by the flooded river
cried

fear at its rising

Before it was quite unsheathed from reality.

1928

The Purse-Seine²

Our sardine fishermen work at night in the dark of the moon;
daylight
or moonlight
They could not tell where to spread the net, unable to see the phosphorescence of the shoals⁰ of fish. schools
They work northward from Monterey, coasting Santa Cruz; off
New Year's Point or off Pigeon Point³
The look-out man will see some lakes of milk-color light on the sea's
night-purple; he points, and the helmsman
5 Turns the dark prow, the motorboat circles the gleaming shoal and drifts out her seine-net. They close the circle
And purse the bottom of the net, then with great labor haul it
in.

I cannot tell you

How beautiful the scene is, and a little terrible, then, when the crowded fish

2. Large fishing net with a closeable bottom.

3. These are all places in the Monterey Bay area of western California.

BIRDS AND FISHES / 1 3 2 3

Know they are caught, and wildly beat from one wall to the other of their closing destiny the phosphorescent

10 Water to a pool of flame, each beautiful slender body sheeted with flame, like a live rocket

A comet's tail wake of clear yellow flame; while outside the narrowing

Floats and cordage of the net great sea-lions come up to watch, sigh-

ing in the dark; the vast walls of night

Stand erect to the stars.

Lately I was looking from a night mountain-top

15 On a wide city, the colored splendor, galaxies of light: how could I

help but recall the seine-net

Gathering the luminous fish? I cannot tell you how beautiful the city

appeared, and a little terrible.

I thought, We have geared the machines and locked all together into

interdependence; we have built the great cities; now

There is no escape. We have gathered vast populations incapable of

free survival, insulated

From the strong earth, each person in himself helpless, on all depend-

ent. The circle is closed, and the net

20 Is being hauled in. They hardly feel the cords drawing, yet they shine

already. The inevitable mass-disasters

Will not come in our time nor in our children's, but we and our children

Must watch the net draw narrower, government take all powers—or

revolution, and the new government

Take more than all, add to kept bodies kept souls—or anarchy,
the

mass-disasters.

These things are Progress;

25 Do you marvel our verse is troubled or frowning, while it keeps its

reason? Or it lets go, lets the mood flow

In the manner of the recent young men into mere hysteria, splintered

gleams, crackled laughter. But they are quite wrong.

There is no reason for amazement: surely one always knew
that

cultures decay, and life's end is death.

1937

Birds and Fishes

Every October millions of little fish come along the shore,

Coasting this granite edge of the continent

On their lawful occasions: but what a festival for the sea-fowl.

What a witches' sabbath⁴ of wings

5 Hides the dark water. The heavy pelicans shout "Haw!" like Job's friend's warhorse⁵

And dive from the high air, the cormorants⁶

4. Midnight meeting of witches and wizards, the horse, who "saith among the trumpets Ha, ha;

believed to be devil worshipers, to celebrate the

and he smelleth the battle afar off, the thunder of witchcraft cult.

the captains and the shouting."

5. In Job 39.19—25, God describes the strength of

6. Aquatic birds with dark plumage.

1 3 2 4 / R U P E R T B R O O K E

Slip their long black bodies under the water and hunt like wolves

Through the green half-light. Screaming, the gulls watch, Wild with envy and malice, cursing and snatching. What hysterical greed!

10 What a filling of pouches! the mob

Hysteria is nearly human—these decent birds!—as if they were finding

Gold in the street. It is better than gold,

It can be eaten: and which one in all this fury of wild-fowl pities the fish?

No one certainly. Justice and mercy

15 Are human dreams, they do not concern the birds nor the fish nor eternal God.

However—look again before you go.

The wings and wild hungers, the wave-worn skerries,^{0 reefs}
the bright quick minnows

Living in terror to die in torment—

Man's fate and theirs—and the island rocks and immense ocean

beyond, and Lobos⁷

20 Darkening above the bay: they are beautiful?

That is their quality: not mercy, not mind, not goodness, but
the beauty of God.⁸

1963

R U P E R T B R O O K E

1887-1915

Sonnet

Oh! Death will find me, long before I tire
Of watching you; and swing me suddenly
Into the shade and loneliness and mire^o mud
Of the last land! There, waiting patiently,
5 One day, I think, I'll feel a cool wind blowing,
See a slow light across the Stygian¹ tide,
And hear the Dead about me stir, unknowing,
And tremble. And I shall know that you have died,
And watch you, a broad-browed and smiling dream,
io Pass, light as ever, through the lightless host,
Quietly ponder, start, and sway, and gleam—
Most individual and bewildering ghost!—
7. Point Lobos, a promontory on the Pacific in the place beneath.”

California.

1. Of Styx, one of the mythological rivers of

8. Cf. Shakespeare, The Merchant of Venice

Hades, across which the ferryman Charon rowed

4.1.179—81: “The quality of mercy is not strained.
the souls of the dead.

/ It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven / Upon

THE OLD VICARAGE, GRANTCHESTER / 1
3 2 5

And turn, and toss your brown delightful head

Amusedly, among the ancient Dead.

April 1909 1911

*From The Old Vicarage, Grantchester*²

(Café des Westens, Berlin, May 1912)

Just now the lilac is in bloom,
All before my little room;
And in my flower-beds, I think,
Smile the carnation and the pink;
5 And down the borders, well I know,
The poppy and the pansy blow ...
Oh! there the chestnuts, summer through,
Beside the river make for you
A tunnel of green gloom, and sleep
io Deeply above; and green and deep
The stream mysterious glides beneath,
Green as a dream and deep as death.
—Oh, damn! I know it! and I know
How the May fields all golden show,
15 And when the day is young and sweet,
Gild gloriously the bare feet
That run to bathe ...

*Du lieber Gott!*³

Here am I, sweating, sick, and hot,
20 And there the shadowed waters fresh
Lean up to embrace the naked flesh.

Temperamentvoll 4 German Jews

Drink beer around;—and there the dews
Are soft beneath a morn of gold.
25 Here tulips bloom as they are told;
Unkempt about those hedges blows
An English unofficial rose;
And there the unregulated sun

Slopes down to rest when day is done,
30 And wakes a vague unpunctual star,
A slippered Hesper;⁰ and there are evening star (Venus)
Meads⁰ towards Haslingfield and Coton meadows
Where das Betreten's not verboten.⁵
ei'0e yevoifxTiv6 ... would I were 35 In Grantchester, in Grantchester!—

2. Like Haslingfield and Coton (both line 32) and
4. Temperamental (German).

Madingley (line 129), a village near Cambridge,
5. Forbidden (German). Das Betreten: walking on England. The Old Vicarage was Brooke's house.
the grass (German).

3. [You] dear God! (German).

6. Would I were (Greek).

1 3 2 6 / R U P E R T B R O O K E

Some, it may be, can get in touch
With Nature there, or Earth, or such.
And clever modern men have seen
A Faun a-peeping through the green,
40 And felt the Classics were not dead,
To glimpse a Naiad's reedy head,
Or hear the Goat-foot⁷ piping low: ...
But these are things I do not know.
I only know that you may lie
45 Day-long and watch the Cambridge sky,
And, flower-lulled in sleepy grass,
Hear the cool lapse of hours pass,

Until the centuries blend and blur
In Grantchester, in Grantchester... .
50 Still in the dawnlit waters cool
His ghostly Lordship swims his pool,⁸
And tries the strokes, essays the tricks,
Long learnt on Hellespont, or Styx.⁹
Dan Chaucer¹ hears his river still 55 Chatter beneath a phantom mill.
Tennyson² notes, with studious eye,
How Cambridge waters hurry by ...
And in that garden, black and white,
Creep whispers through the grass all night;
60 And spectral dance, before the dawn,
A hundred Vicars down the lawn;
Curates,³ long dust, will come and go
On lissom,⁰ clerical, printless toe; lithe, nimble
And oft between the boughs is seen 65 The sly shade of a Rural Dean⁴ ...
Till, at a shiver in the skies,
Vanishing with Satanic cries,
The prim ecclesiastic rout
Leaves but a startled sleeper-out,
70 Grey heavens, the first bird's drowsy calls,
The falling house that never falls.
ii⁶ Ah God! to see the branches stir
Across the moon at Grantchester!
7. I.e., Pan, Greek god of pastures, flocks, and which Charon ferried the souls of the dead. Hel- shepherds; half man and half goat, he played the lespont: the “Sea of Helle”—now known as the reed flute. Faun: Roman mythological figure Dardanelles—between Bulgaria and Turkey; (Greek satyr), also half man and half goat, associated with nature. Naiad: a nymph (i.e., Greek

1. Geoffrey Chaucer (ca. 1343-1400; see pp. 19-70), who set “The Reeve’s Tale” at the border of (Greek satyr) associated with lakes, rivers, springs, and Cambridge and Grantchester, near a mill. Dan: fountains.

master, sir (archaic).

8. “Byron’s Pool,” a favorite bathing place in the

2. Alfred, Lord Tennyson (1809-1892; see pp. 982-1009).

bridge student) George Gordon, Lord Byron

3. Junior clergyman in the Church of England. (1788-1824; see pp. 833-63).

4. Clergyman in the Church of England with

9. One of the mythological rivers of Hades over responsibility for certain country parishes.

T H E S O L D I E R / 1 3 2 7

To smell the thrilling-sweet a n d rotten

U n f o r g e t t a b l e , u n f o r g o t t e n

120 R i v e r - s m e l l , a n d h e a r t h e b r e e z e

S o b b i n g in the little trees.
Say, do the e l m - c l u m p s greatly s t a n d
Still g u a r d i a n s of that holy land?
T h e c h e s t n u t s s h a d e, in reverend d r e a m , 125 T h e y e t u n a c a d e m i c s t r e a m ?
Is dawn a secret shy a n d cold
A n a d y o m e n e, 5 silver-gold?
A n d s u n s e t still a golden s e a
F r o m H a s l i n g f i e l d t o M a d i n g l e y ?
130 A n d after, ere the night is born,
D o h a r e s c o m e out a b o u t the corn?
O h, is the water sweet a n d cool,
G e n t l e a n d brown, above the pool?
A n d l a u g h s the i m m o r t a l river still 135 U n d e r the mill, u n d e r the mill?
Say, is there B e a u t y yet to find?
A n d C e r t a i n t y ? a n d Q u i e t kind?
D e e p m e a d o w s yet, for to forget
T h e l i e s, a n d truths, a n d p a i n ? ... O h ! yet 140 S t a n d s the C h u r c h c l o c k at ten to three?
A n d is there h o n e y still for tea?

1 9 1 2 1 9 1 4

The Soldier

If I s h o u l d die, think only this of m e :
T h a t there's s o m e corner of a foreign field
T h a t is for ever E n g l a n d . T h e r e shall be
In that rich earth a richer d u s t c o n c e a l e d ;

5 A dust w h o m E n g l a n d bore, s h a p e d , m a d e aware,
G a v e , once, her flowers to love, her ways to r o a m ,
A body of England's, breathing English air,
W a s h e d by the rivers, blest by s u n s of h o m e .
A n d think, this heart, all evil s h e d away,
io A p u l s e in the eternal mind, no less Gives s o m e w h e r e b a c k the t h o u g h t s by E n g l a n d given; H e r sights a n d s o u n d s ; d r e a m s h a p p y as her day;
A n d laughter, learnt of friends; a n d g e n t l e n e s s ,
In hearts at p e a c e , u n d e r an E n g l i s h heaven.

N o v e m b e r - D e c e m b e r 1 9 1 4 1 9 1 4

5. Rising (Greek); name given to the goddess Aphrodite, who rose (at her birth) from the sea.

1 3 2 8

M A R I A N N E M O O R E

1887-1972

To a Steam Roller

The illustration

is nothing to you without the application.

You lack half wit. You crush all the particles down into close conformity, and then walk back and forth on them.

5 Sparkling chips of rock

are crushed down to the level of the parent block.

Were not "impersonal judgment in aesthetic matters, a metaphysical impossibility,"¹ you might fairly achieve

io it. As for butterflies, I can hardly conceive of one's attending upon you, but to question

the congruence of the complement is vain, if it exists.

1915 1921

To a Chameleon²

Hid by the august foliage and fruit of the grape-vine twine

your anatomy

round the pruned and polished stem,

5 Chameleon.

Fire laid upon an emerald as long as the Dark King's massy

one,

io could not snap the spectrum up for food as you have done.

1916 1921

The Fish

wade

through black jade.

Of the crow-blue mussel-shells, one keeps adjusting the ash-heaps;

5 opening and shutting itself like

1. Quotation, slightly changed, from an article by

2. Originally published with the title "You are Like the American music critic Lawrence Gilman

the Realistic Product of an Idealistic Search for (1878-1939) in the April 1915 New American

Gold at the Foot of the Rainbow."

Review.

POETRY / 1 3 2 9

an injured fan.

The barnacles which encrust the side of the wave, cannot hide

10 there for the submerged shafts of the sun,

split like spun

glass, move themselves with spotlight swiftness

into the crevices—

15 in and out, illuminating

the turquoise sea

of bodies. The water drives a wedge of iron through the iron edge

20 of the cliff; whereupon the stars, pink

rice-grains, ink-

bespattered jelly-fish, crabs like green

lilies, and submarine

25 toadstools, slide each on the other.

All

e x t e r n a l

marks of abuse are present on this defiant edifice—

30 all the physical features of accident—lack of cornice, dynamite grooves, burns, and hatchet strokes, these things stand 35 out on it; the chasm-side is dead.

Repeated evidence has proved that it can live on what can not revive 40 its youth. The sea grows old in it.
1918 1921, 1935

Poetry3

I, too, dislike it: there are things that are important beyond all this fiddle.

Reading it, however, with a perfect contempt for it, one discovers in

3. Moore later cut this poem to the first three lines.

1 3 3 0 / M A R I A N N E M O O R E

it after all, a p l a c e for the g e n u i n e .

H a n d s that c a n grasp, eyes

5 that c a n dilate, hair that c a n rise

if it m u s t , these things are i m p o r t a n t not b e c a u s e e a h i g h - s o u n d i n g interpretation c a n b e p u t u p o n t h e m b u t b e c a u s e they are u s e f u l . W h e n they b e c o m e so derivative as to b e c o m e unintelligible, the s a m e thing m a y be said for all of us, that we

10 do not a d m i r e what

w e c a n n o t u n d e r s t a n d : the bat

holding on u p s i d e down or in q u e s t of s o m e t h i n g
to

eat, elephant pushing, a wild horse taking a roll, a tireless wolf under a tree, the immortal critic twitching his skin like a horse that feels a flea, the base-15 ball fan, the statistician —

nor is it valid

to discriminate against "business documents and school-books";⁴ all these phenomena are important. One must make a distinction

however: when dragged into prominence by half poets, the result is not poetry,

20 nor till the poets among us can be

"literalists of the imagination"⁵ — above

insolence and triviality and can present for inspection, "imaginary gardens with real toads in them", shall we²⁵ have it. In the meantime, if you demand on the one hand, the raw material of poetry in all its rawness and that which is on the other hand

genuine, you are interested in poetry.

1919 1921

A Grave

Man looking into the sea,

taking the view from those who have as much right to it as you have to it yourself,

it is human nature to stand in the middle of a thing, but you cannot stand in the middle of this;

4. Diary of Tolstoy (Dutton), p. 84. 'Where the

p. 182. 'The limitation of [Blake's] view was from boundary between prose and poetry lies, I shall

the very intensity of his vision; he was a too literal never be able to understand. The question is raised realist of imagination, as others are of nature; and in manuals of style, yet the answer to it lies beyond because he believed that the figures seen by the me. Poetry is verse: prose is not verse. Or else mind's eye, when exalted by inspiration, were "eter-
poetry is everything with the exception of business nal existences," symbols of divine essences, he documents and school books' " [Moore's note].
hated every grace of style that might obscure their Leo Tolstoy (1828-1910), Russian novelist, philineaments' " [Moore's note], William Butler Yeats losopher, and mystic.

(1865-1939; see pp. 1188-1211), Irish poet and
5. "Yeats: Ideas of Good and Evil (A. H. Bullen), dramatist.

T H E S T E E P L E - J A C K / 1 3 3 1

5 the sea has nothing to give but a well excavated grave.

T h e f i r s t a n d i n a p r o c e s s i o n , e a c h w i t h a n e m e r a l d t u r k e y - f o o t a t t h e t o p , r e s e r v e d a s t h e i r c o n t o u r s , s a y i n g n o t h i n g ;

r e p r e s s i o n , h o w e v e r , i s n o t t h e m o s t o b v i o u s c h a r a c t e r i s t i c o f t h e s e a ; t h e s e a i s a c o l l e c t o r , q u i c k t o r e t u r n a r a p a c i o u s l o o k .

10 T h e r e a r e o t h e r s b e s i d e s y o u w h o h a v e w o r n t h a t l o o k —

w h o s e e x p r e s s i o n i s n o l o n g e r a p r o t e s t ; t h e f i s h n o l o n g e r i n v e s t i g a t e t h e m

for their bones have not lasted:

men lower nets, unconscious of the fact that they are desecrating a grave,

and row quickly away — the blades of the oars

15 moving together like the feet of water-spiders as if there were no such thing as death.

The wrinkles progress among themselves in a phalanx 6 — beautiful under networks of foam, and fade breathlessly while the sea rustles in and out of the seaweed; the birds swim through the air at top speed, emitting cat-calls as heretofore —

the tortoise-shell scurges about the feet of the cliffs, in motion beneath them;

20 and the ocean, under the pulsation of lighthouses and noise of bell-buoys, advances as usual, looking as if it were not that ocean

in which dropped things are bound to sink —

in which if they turn and twist, it is neither with volition nor consciousness.

1921 1924, 1935

The Steeple-Jack

Revised, 1961

Diirer⁷ would have seen a reason for living in a town like this, with eight stranded whales

to look at; with the sweet sea air coming into your house

on a fine day, from water etched

5 with waves as formal as the scales

on a fish.

O n e by o n e in two's and three's, the seagulls k e e p flying b a c k a n d forth over the town clock, or sailing a r o u n d the lighthouse without m o v i n g their w i n g s —

io rising steadily with a slight quiver of the b o d y — o r flock
m e w i n g where

a s e a the purple of the p e a c o c k ' s n e c k is p a l e d to greenish azure as Diirer c h a n g e d

6. Compact body of troops. and engraver particularly gifted in rendering

7. Albrecht Diirer (1471 — 1528), German painter closely and meticulously observed detail.

1 3 3 2 / M A R I A N N E M O O R E

15 the pine green of the Tyrol⁸ to p e a c o c k b l u e a n d g u i n e a gray.⁹ You c a n see a twenty-five-p o u n d lobster; a n d f i s h n e t s a r r a n g e d

to dry. T h e

whirlwind fife-and-drum of the s t o r m b e n d s the salt

20 m a r s h grass, disturbs stars in the sky a n d the star on the steeple; it is a privilege to see so

m u c h c o n f u s i o n . D i s g u i s e d b y w h a t

m i g h t s e e m the opposite, the seaside flowers a n d

25 trees are favored by the f o g so that you have the tropics at first h a n d : the trumpet-vine, fox-glove, giant s n a p - d r a g o n , a salpiglossis¹ that has spots a n d stripes; morning-glories, gourds,

or moon-vines trained on fishing-twine

30 at the b a c k

door; cat-tails, flags, blueberries a n d spiderwort, striped grass, lichens, sunflowers, asters, d a i s i e s — yellow a n d crab-claw r a g g e d sailors with green b r a c t s 2 — t o a d - p l a n t , p e t u n i a s , ferns; p i n k lilies, blue

35 ones, tigers; p o p p i e s ; b l a c k sweet-peas.

T h e climate is not right for the b a n y a n , frangipani, or jack-fruit trees;³ or an exotic s e r p e n t life. R i n g lizard a n d snake-skin for the foot, if you see fit;

40 b u t here they've cats, not c o b r a s , to k e e p down the rats. T h e diffident little newt

with white pin-dots on b l a c k horizontal s p a c e d

out b a n d s lives here; yet there is n o t h i n g that 45 ambition c a n b u y or take away. T h e college s t u d e n t

n a m e d A m b r o s e sits on the hillside

with his not-native b o o k s a n d hat

a n d s e e s b o a t s at s e a p r o g r e s s white a n d rigid as if in

50 a groove. Liking an e l e g a n c e of which the s o u r c e is not bravado, he knows by heart the a n t i q u e

sugar-bowl s h a p e d s u m m e r - h o u s e o f interlacing slats, a n d the pitch

of the c h u r c h

8. The mountainous western area of Austria.

ing dogwood).

9. The slate gray, speckled with white, of the

3. The banyan is an East Indian tree, some of guinea fowl.

whose branches send out trunks that grow down-

1. An herb with large, varicolored flowers that ward; frangipani is a tropical American shrub (red often have striking markings.

jasmine is a species); the jackfruit is a large East

2. Flowerlike leaves on some plants (e.g., flower-Indian tree with large edible fruit.

N o S W A N S o F I N E / 1 3 3 3

55 spire, not true, 4 f r o m which a m a n in scarlet lets down a rope as a spider spins a thread;

he m i g h t be part of a novel, but on the sidewalk a sign says C. J. Poole, S t e e p l e J a c k , in b l a c k a n d white; a n d one in red

60 a n d white says

D a n g e r . T h e c h u r c h portico has f o u r fluted
c o l u m n s , e a c h a single piece of stone, m a d e m o d e s t e r by white-wash. T h i s w o u l d be a fit haven for

waifs, children, a n i m a l s , prisoners,

65 a n d p r e s i d e n t s w h o have repaid sin-driven

senators by not thinking a b o u t them. T h e

p l a c e has a s c h o o l - h o u s e , a post-office in a store, f i s h - h o u s e s , h e n - h o u s e s , a t h r e e - m a s t e d 70 s c h o o n e r on the stocks. T h e hero, the student,

the steeple-jack, e a c h in his way,
is at h o m e .

I t c o u l d n o t b e d a n g e r o u s t o b e l i v i n g

75 i n a t o w n l i k e t h i s , o f s i m p l e p e o p l e , w h o h a v e a s t e e p l e - j a c k p l a c i n g d a n g e r - s i g n s b y t h e c h u r c h w h i l e h e i s g i l d i n g t h e s o l i d - p o i n t e d s t a r , w h i c h o n a s t e e p l e s t a n d s f o r h o p e .

1932 1935,1961

No Swan So Fine

” N o w a t e r s o s t i l l a s t h e d e a d f o u n t a i n s o f V e r s a i l l e s . “ 5 N o s w a n , w i t h s w a r t b l i n d l o o k a s k a n c e

a n d g o n d o l i e r i n g l e g s , 6 s o f i n e

5 a s t h e c h i n t z c h i n a o n e w i t h f a w n - b r o w n e y e s a n d t o o t h e d g o l d

c o l l a r o n t o s h o w w h o s e b i r d i t w a s .

L o d g e d i n t h e L o u i s F i f t e e n t h

c a n d e l a b r u m - t r e e 7 o f c o c k s c o m b -

I O t i n t e d b u t t o n s , d a h l i a s , s e a - u r c h i n s , a n d e v e r l a s t i n g s , 8

i t p e r c h e s o n t h e b r a n c h i n g f o a m

4. Not placed or fitted accurately.

7. “A pair of Louis XV candelabra with Dresden

5. “Percy Phillip, New York Times Magazine, May figures of swans belonging to Lord Balfour”

10, 1931” [Moore’s note]. Famed palace of French [Moore’s note].

kings, including Louis XV, in the late seventeenth

8. Plants with flowers that may be dried without and early eighteenth centuries; now a museum.
losing their form or color; also, the flowers from
6. Italian gondoliers paddle from the stern to pro-such plants.
pel their gondolas.

1 3 3 4 / M A R I A N N E M O O R E

of polished sculptured flowers—at ease and tall. The king is dead.

1932 1935, 1951

What Are Years?

What is our innocence,
what is our guilt? All are naked, none is safe. And whence is courage: the unanswered question, 5 the resolute doubt,— dumbly calling, deafly listening—that in misfortune, even death, encourages others
and in its defeat, stirs io the soul to be strong? He sees deep and is glad, who accedes to mortality and in his imprisonment rises upon himself as 15 the sea in a chasm, struggling to be free and unable to be,
in its surrendering

finds its continuing.
So he who strongly feels,
20 behaves. The very bird, grown taller as he sings, steels
his form straight up. Though he is captive, his mighty singing
says, satisfaction is a lowly 25 thing, how pure a thing is joy.

This is mortality,
this is eternity.

1931-39 1941

Nevertheless

you've seen a strawberry
that's had a struggle; yet was, where the fragments met, a hedgehog or a star-5 fish for the multitude of seeds. What better food

THE MIND IS AN ENCHANTING THING / 13
3 5

than a p p l e - s e e d s — t h e fruit within the f r u i t — l o c k e d i n like c o u n t e r - c u r v e d twin 10 hazel-nuts? Frost that kills the little rubber-plant-leaves of kok-saghyz-stalks,⁹ can't h a r m the roots; they still grow in frozen ground. O n c e w h e r e

15 there w a s a prickly-pear-leaf clinging to b a r b e d wire, a root shot d o w n to grow
in earth two f e e t below;
a s carrots f o r m m a n d r a k e s ‘ 20 or a ram’s-horn root s o m e - times. Victory won’t c o m e to me u n l e s s I go to it; a grape-tendrill ties a knot in knots till 25 knotted thirty t i m e s , — s o
the b o u n d twig that’s under-g o n e a n d over-gone, can’t stir.
T h e w e a k o v e r c o m e s i t s m e n a c e , the strong over-30 c o m e s itself. W h a t is there like fortitude! W h a t s a p went t h r o u g h that little thread to m a k e the cherry red!

1944

The Mind Is an Enchanting Thing
is an e n c h a n t e d thing like the glaze on a katydid-wing
subdivided by s u n
5 till the nettings are legion.
Like G i e s e k i n g playing Scarlatti;2

9. Russian dandelions. German (French-born) pianist, was famous for his

1. Medicinal plants with forked roots. renditions of the music of the Italian composer 2. Walter Wilhelm Giesecking (1895-1956), Domenico Scarlatti (1685-1757).

1 3 3 6 / E D W I N M U I R

like the apteryx-aw13

as a beak, or the

kiwi's rain-shawl

10 of haired feathers, the mind

feeling its way as though blind,

walks along with its eyes on the ground.

It has memory's ear

that can hear without 15 having to hear.

Like the gyroscope's fall,

truly unequivocal

because trued0 by regnant0 certainty, balanced / authoritative

it is a power of 20 strong enchantment. It is like the dove-neck animated by

sun; it is memory's eye;

it's conscientious inconsistency.

25

It tears off the veil; tears

the temptation, the mist the heart wears,

from its eyes—if the heart

has a face; it takes apart

30 dejection. It's fire in the dove-neck's iridescence; in the inconsistencies

of Scarlatti.

Unconfusion submits

35 its confusion to proof; it's not a Herod's oath⁴ that cannot change.

1944

EDWIN MUIR

1887-1959

Childhood

Long time he lay upon the sunny hill,

To his father's house below securely bound.

Far off the silent, changing sound was still,

With the black islands lying thick a r o u n d .

3. New Zealand bird, related to the kiwi, with an filled an oath to Salome by having John the Baptist awl-shaped beak.

beheaded. Cf. Mark 6.22-27.

4. Herod, ruler of Judea under the Romans, ful-

T H E R E T U R N O F T H E G R E E K S / 1 3 3 7

5 He saw each separate height, each vaguer hue,

Where the massed islands rolled in mist away,

And though all ran together in his view

He knew that unseen straits between them lay.

Often he wondered what new shores were there.

10 In thought he saw the still light on the sand,
The shallow water clear in tranquil air,
And walked through it in joy from strand to strand.
Over the sound a ship so slow would pass
That in the black hill's gloom it seemed to lie.
15 The evening sound was smooth like sunken glass,
And time seemed finished ere the ship passed by.
Grey tiny rocks slept round him where he lay,
Moveless as they, more still as evening came,
The grasses threw straight shadows far away,
20 And from the house his mother called his name.
1925

The Return of the Greeks

The veteran Greeks came home
Sleepwandering from the war.¹
We saw the galleys come Blundering over the bar.
5 Each soldier with his scar
In rags and tatters came home.
Reading the wall of Troy
Ten years without a change
Was such intense employ io (Just out of the arrows' range),
All the world was strange
After ten years of Troy.
Their eyes knew every stone
In the huge heartbreaking wall
15 Year after year grown

Till there was nothing at all
But an alley steep and small,
Tramped earth and towering stone.

Now even the hills seemed low 20 In the boundless sea and land,
Weakened by distance so.

1. The Trojan War, during which the Greeks besieged the city of Troy for ten years (as described in Homer's Iliad).

1 3 3 8 / E D W I N M U I R

How could they understand
Space empty on every hand
And the hillock squat and low?
25 And when they arrived at last
They found a childish scene
Embosomed in the past,
And the war lying between—
A child's preoccupied scene
30 When they came home at last.
But everything trite and strange,
The peace, the parcelled ground,
The vine rows—never a change!
The past and the present bound
35 In one oblivious round
Past thinking trite and strange.
But for their grey-haired wives
And their sons grown shy and tall
They would have given their lives
40 To raise the battered wall

Again, if this was all
In spite of their sons and wives.
Penelope² in her tower
Looked down upon the show
45 And saw within an hour
Each man to his wife go,
Hesitant, sure and slow:
She, alone in her tower.

1946

Adam's Dream

They say the first dream Adam our father had
After his age long day dream in the Garden³
When heaven and sun woke in his wakening mind, The earth with all its hills and woods and waters,⁵ The friendly tribes of trees and animals, And earth's last wonder Eve (the first great dream Which is the ground of every dream since then) —

They say he dreamt lying on the naked ground, The gates shut fast behind him as he lay
io Fallen in Eve's fallen arms, his terror drowned In her engulfing terror, in the abyss

2. Wife of Odysseus, a Greek leader who took Adam and Eve were expelled from the Garden of another ten years to return home (as described in Eden because they ate the fruit of the one tree the Odyssey).

forbidden to them by God (the tree of the knowl-
3. I.e., after the Fall. According to Genesis 2—3, edge of good and evil).

ADAM'S DREAM / 1339

Whence there's no further fall, and comfort is—
That he was standing on a rocky ledge
High on the mountainside, bare crag behind, 15 In front a plain as far as eye could reach,
And on the plain a few small figures running
That were like men and women, yet were so far away
He could not see their faces. On they ran,
And fell, and rose again, and ran, and fell,
20 And rising were the same yet not the same,
Identical or interchangeable,
Different in indifference. As he looked Still there were more of them, the plain was filling
As by an alien arithmetical magic 25 Unknown in Eden, a mechanical Addition without meaning, joining only Number to number in no mode or order,
Weaving no pattern. For these creatures moved Towards no fixed mark even when in growing bands
BO They clashed against each other and clashing fell
In mounds of bodies. For they rose again,
Identical or interchangeable,
And went their way that was not like a way;
Some back and forward, back and forward, some 35 In a closed circle, wide or narrow, others
In zigzags on the sand. Yet all were busy,
And tense with purpose as they cut the air
Which seemed to press them back. Sometimes they paused

While one stopped one—fortuitous assignments
40 In the disorder, whereafter two by two
They ran awhile,
Then parted and again were single. Some Ran straight against the frontier of the plain Till the horizon drove them back. A few 45 Stood still and never moved. Then Adam cried
Out of his dream, “What are you doing there?”
And the crag answered “Are you doing there?”
“What are you doing there?”—“you doing there?”
The animals had withdrawn and from the caves
50 And woods stared out in fear or condemnation,
Like outlaws or like judges. All at once Dreaming or half-remembering, “This is time,”
Thought Adam in his dream, and time was strange
To one lately in Eden. “I must see,” 55 He cried, “the faces. Where are the faces? Who Are you all out there?” Then in his changing dream
He was a little nearer, and he saw
They were about some business strange to him
That had a form and sequence past their knowledge;
60 And that was why they ran so frenziedly.
Yet all, it seemed, made up a story, illustrated
By these the living, the unknowing, cast
Each singly for his part. But Adam longed
1 3 4 0 / T . S . ELIOT
For more, not this mere moving pattern, not 65 This illustrated storybook of mankind

Always a-making, improvised on nothing.
At that he was among them, and saw each face
Was like his face, so that he would have hailed them
As sons of God but that something restrained him.
70 And he remembered all, Eden, the Fall,
The Promise, and his place, and took their hands
That were his hands, his and his children's hands,
Cried out and was at peace, and turned again
In love and grief in Eve's encircling arms.

1950, 1952

T. S. E L I O T

1888-1965

The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock

S'io credesse che mia risposta fosse

A persona che mai tornasse al mondo,

Questafiamma staria senza piu scosse.

Ma perciocche giammai di questo fondo

Non torno vivo alcun, s'i'odo il vero,

Senza tema d'infamia ti rispondo. |

Let us go then, you and I,

When the evening is spread out against the sky

Like a patient etherised upon a table;

Let us go, through certain half-deserted streets,

5 The muttering retreats

Of restless nights in one-night cheap hotels

And sawdust restaurants with oyster-shells:

Streets that follow like a tedious argument

Of insidious intent

io To lead you to an overwhelming question ...

Oh, do not ask, "What is it?"

Let us go and make our visit.

In the room the women come and go

Talking of Michelangelo.

15 The yellow fog that rubs its back upon the window-panes,

The yellow smoke that rubs its muzzle on the window-panes

Licked its tongue into the corners of the evening,

Lingered upon the pools that stand in drains,

1. Dante, Inferno 27.61—66. These words are sporeturn to the world, / this flame would stand still ken by Guido da Montefeltro, whom Dante has without moving any further. / But since never from encountered among the false counselors (each

this abyss / has anyone ever returned alive, if what spirit is concealed within a flame): "If I thought my

I hear is true, / without fear of infamy I answer

answer were given / to anyone who would ever

you."

THE LOVESONG OF J. ALFRED PRUFRO CK / 1341

Let fall upon its back the soot that falls from chimneys,

20 Slipped by the terrace, made a sudden leap,

And seeing that it was a soft October night,

Curled once about the house, and fell asleep.

And indeed there will be time²

For the yellow smoke that slides along the street,

25 Rubbing its back upon the window-panes;

There will be time, there will be time
To prepare a face to meet the faces that you meet;
There will be time to murder and create,
And time for all the works and days³ of hands
30 That lift and drop a question on your plate;
Time for you and time for me,
And time yet for a hundred indecisions,
And for a hundred visions and revisions,
Before the taking of a toast and tea.
35 In the room the women come and go
Talking of Michelangelo.
And indeed there will be time
To wonder, “Do I dare?” and, “Do I dare?”
Time to turn back and descend the stair,
40 With a bald spot in the middle of my hair—
[They will say: “How his hair is growing thin!”]
My morning coat, my collar mounting firmly to the chin,
My necktie rich and modest, but asserted by a simple pin—
[They will say: “But how his arms and legs are thin!”]
45 Do I dare
Disturb the universe?
In a minute there is time
For decisions and revisions which a minute will reverse.
For I have known them all already, known them all—
50 Have known the evenings, mornings, afternoons,
I have measured out my life with coffee spoons;
I know the voices dying with a dying fall⁴
Beneath the music from a farther room.

So how should I presume?

55 And I have known the eyes already, known them all—

The eyes that fix you in a formulated phrase,

And when I am formulated, sprawling on a pin,

When I am pinned and wriggling on the wall,

Then how should I begin

60 To spit out all the butt-ends of my days and ways?

And how should I presume?

2. Cf. Andrew Marvell, “To His Coy Mistress,” farming and family life.

line 1 (p. 478).

4. Cf. Shakespeare, Twelfth Night 1.1.1-4: “If

3. Works and Days, by the Greek poet Hesiod

music be the food of love, play on... . That strain

(eighth century B.C.E.), is a didactic poem about again, it had a dying fall.”

1 3 4 2 / T . S . E L I O T

A n d I h a v e k n o w n t h e a r m s a l r e a d y , k n o w n t h e m
a l l —

A r m s t h a t a r e b r a c e l e t e d a n d w h i t e a n d b a r e

[B u t i n t h e l a m p l i g h t , d o w n e d w i t h l i g h t b r o w n h a i r !]

65 I s i t p e r f u m e f r o m a d r e s s

T h a t m a k e s m e s o d i g r e s s ?

A r m s t h a t l i e a l o n g a t a b l e , o r w r a p a b o u t a s h a w l .

A n d s h o u l d I t h e n p r e s u m e ?

A n d h o w s h o u l d I b e g i n ?

70 S h a l l I s a y , I h a v e g o n e a t d u s k t h r o u g h n a r r o w
s t r e e t s

A n d w a t c h e d t h e s m o k e t h a t r i s e s f r o m t h e p i p e s

Of lonely men in shirt-sleeves, leaning out of windows
? ...

It should have been a pair of ragged claws

Scuttling across the floors of silent seas.

75 And the afternoon, the evening, sleeps so peacefully!

Smoothed by long fingers,

Asleep ... tired ... or it malingers,

Stretched on the floor, here beside you and me.

Should I, after tea and cakes and ices,

so have the strength to force the moment to its crisis?

But though I have wept and fasted, wept and prayed,

Though I have seen my head [grown slightly bald]
brought in upon a platter,

I am no prophet — and here's no great matter;

I have seen the moment of my greatness flicker,

85 And I have seen the eternal Footman hold my coat, and snicker, and in short, I was afraid.

And would it have been worth it, after all,

After the cups, the marmalade, the tea,

Among the porcelain, among some talk of you and me, 90 Would it have been worth while,

To have bitten off the matter with a smile,

To have squeezed the universe into a ball

To roll it toward some overwhelming question,

To say: "I am Lazarus, 7 come from the dead,

95 Come back to tell you all, I shall tell you all" —

If one, settling a pillow by her head,

S h o u l d s a y : ” T h a t i s n o t w h a t I m e a n t a t a l l .

T h a t i s n o t i t , a t a l l .”

5. The head of John the Baptist was presented to 6. Cf. “To His Coy Mistress,” lines 41-44.

Salome on a plate at her request (Mark 6.17-20, 7. On the resurrection of Lazarus, see John 11.1 — Matthew 14.3-11). 44, Luke 16.19-31.

T H E L O V E S O N G O F J . A L F R E D P R U F R O
C K / 1 3 4 3

A n d w o u l d i t h a v e b e e n w o r t h i t , a f t e r a l l , 100 W o u l d i t h a v e b e e n w o r t h w h i l e ,

A f t e r t h e s u n s e t s a n d t h e d o o r y a r d s a n d t h e e s p r i n k l e d s t r e e t s , A f t e r t h e n o v e l s , a f t e r r t h e t e a c u p s , a f t e r t h e s k i r t s t h a t t r a i l a l o n g t h e f l o o r —

A n d t h i s , a n d s o m u c h m o r e ? —

I t i s i m p o s s i b l e t o s a y j u s t w h a t I m e a n !

105 B u t a s i f a m a g i c l a n t e r n t h r e w t h e n e r v e s i n p a t t e r n s o n a s c r e e n : W o u l d i t h a v e b e e n w o r t h w h i l e

I f o n e , s e t t l i n g a p i l l o w o r t h r o w i n g o f f a s h a w l , A n d t u r n i n g t o w a r d t h e w i n d o w , s h o u l d
s a y :

” T h a t i s n o t i t a t a l l , n o T h a t i s n o t w h a t I m e a n t , a t a l l .”

N o ! I a m n o t P r i n c e H a m l e t , n o r w a s m e a n t t o b e ; A m a n a t t e n d a n t l o r d , o n e t h a t w i l l d o

T o s w e l l a p r o g r e s s , 8 s t a r t a s c e n e o r t w o , A d v i s e t h e p r i n c e ; n o d o u b t , a n e a s y t o o l , 115
D e f e r e n t i a l , g l a d t o b e o f u s e ,

P o l i t i c , c a u t i o u s , a n d m e t i c u l o u s ;

F u l l o f h i g h s e n t e n c e , 0 b u t a b i t o b t u s e ;
sententiousness A t t i m e s , i n d e e d , a l m o s t r i d i c u

l o u s —

A l m o s t , a t t i m e s , t h e F o o l .

120 I g r o w o l d . . . I g r o w o l d . . .

I s h a l l w e a r t h e b o t t o m s o f m y t r o u s e r s r o l l e d .

S h a l l I p a r t m y h a i r b e h i n d ? D o I d a r e t o e a t a p e a c h ?

I s h a l l w e a r w h i t e f l a n n e l t r o u s e r s , a n d w a l k u p o n t h e b e a c h .

I h a v e h e a r d t h e m e r m a i d s s i n g i n g , e a c h t o e a c h .

125 I d o n o t t h i n k t h a t t h e y w i l l s i n g t o m e .

I h a v e s e e n t h e m r i d i n g s e a w a r d o n t h e w a v e s C o m b i n g t h e w h i t e h a i r o f t h e w a v e s b l o w n b a c k W h e n t h e w i n d b l o w s t h e w a t e r w h i t e a n d b l a c k .

W e h a v e l i n g e r e d i n t h e c h a m b e r s o f t h e s e a 130 B y s e a - g i r l s w r e a t h e d w i t h s e a w e e d r e d a n d b r o w n T i l l h u m a n v o i c e s w a k e u s , a n d w e d r o w n .

1910-11 1915,1917

8. Journey made by a royal court, often depicted in Elizabethan drama, in which the Fool (line 119) was also a fixture.

1 3 4 4 / T . S . E L I O T

The Waste Land⁹

” N a m S i b y l l a m q u i d e m C u m i s e g o i p s e o c u l i s m e i s v i d i i n a m p u l l a p e n d e r e , e t c u m i l l i p u e r i d i c e r e n t : 2iBuA.A.a TI 0E?IEI5 r e s p o n d e b a -

tilla: djTO0au£iv QkXm.“1

F O R E Z R A P O U N D

IL MIGLIOR FABBRO.2

*I. The Burial of the Dead*³

April is the cruellest month, breeding⁴

Lilacs out of the dead land, mixing

Memory and desire, stirring

Dull roots with spring rain.

5 Winter kept us warm, covering

Earth in forgetful snow, feeding

A little life with dried tubers.

Summers surprised us, coming over the Sta
rnberger see⁵

With a shower of rain; we stopped in the col onnade, io And went on in sunlight, into the e Hofgarten, And drank coffee, and talked for an hour.

Bin gar keine Russin, stamm' aus Litauen, echt deutsch.⁶

And when we were children, staying at the arch-duke's, My cousin's, he took me out to nasled,

15 And I was frightened. He said, Marie,

Marie, hold on tight. And down we went.

In the mountains, there you feel free.

I read, much of the night, and go south in the winter.

What are the roots that clutch, what branches grow 20 Out of this stony rubbish? Son of man,⁷

You cannot say, or guess, for you know only
A heap of broken images, where the sun beats,
And the dead tree gives no shelter, the cricket no relief,⁸

A n d t h e d r y s t o n e n o s o u n d o f w a t e r . O n l y 9.
On its publication in book form, T. S. Eliot pro-you want?' she replied, 'I want to die.' ” From vided The Waste Land with many (and perhaps Petronius (d. 66), Satyricon, chapter 48. The Sibyl sometimes parodic) notes. They begin: “Not only of Cumae, a prophetess of the god Apollo, was the title, but the plan and a good deal of the inci-immortal but not eternally young.

dental symbolism of the poem were suggested by
2. The better craftsman (Italian). So the poet Miss Jessie L. Weston’s book on the Grail legend: Guido Guinizelli characterizes the Provençal poet From Ritual to Romance (Cambridge, [1902]).

Arnaut Daniel in Dante’s Purgatorio 26.117.

Indeed, so deeply am I indebted, Miss Weston’s

3. The burial service of the Anglican Church.

book will elucidate the difficulties of the poem

4. Perhaps an echo of Chaucer, “General Pro-much better than my notes can do; and I recom-logue” to The Canterbury Tales, line 1 (p. 19).

mend it (apart from the great interest of the book

5. Lake a few miles south of Munich. The Hof-itself) to any who think such elucidation of the garten (line 10) is a public garden in Munich, poem worth the trouble. To another work of partly surrounded by a colonnaded walk.

anthropology I am indebted in general, one which

6. I am certainly no Russian, I come from Lithu-has influenced our generation profoundly; I mean ania, a true German (German).

The Golden Bough [by Sir James Frazer; 12 vol-
7. “Cf. Ezekiel II, i” [Eliot’s note], where God umes, 1890-1915]; I have used especially the two addresses Ezekiel: “Son of man, stand upon thy volumes Adonis, Attis, Osiris. Anyone who is feet, and I will speak unto thee.”

acquainted with these works will immediately rec-
8. “Cf. Ecclesiastes XII, v” [Eliot’s note], a ognize in the poem certain references to vegetation description of times of fear and death, when “the ceremonies [i.e., fertility rites].”

grasshopper shall be a burden, and desire shall
1. “For indeed I myself have seen, with my own fail.” The passage continues, “Then shall the dust eyes, the Sibyl hanging in a bottle at Cumae, and return to the earth as it was” (12.7); cf. line 30 when those boys would say to her: ‘Sibyl, what do below.

T H E W A S T E L A N D / 1 3 5 5

25 T h e r e i s s h a d o w u n d e r t h i s r e d r o c k ,
(C o m e i n u n d e r t h e s h a d o w o f t h i s r e d r o c k),⁹
A n d I w i l l s h o w y o u s o m e t h i n g d i f f e r e n t f r o m e i t h e r
Y o u r s h a d o w a t m o r n i n g s t r i d i n g b e h i n d y o u
O r y o u r s h a d o w a t e v e n i n g r i s i n g t o m e e t y o u ;
30 I w i l l s h o w y o u f e a r i n a h a n d f u l o f d u s t .

Frisch weht der Wind

Der Heimat zu

Mein Irisch Kind,

Wo weilest du?1

35 “You gave me hyacinth s first a year ago ;

“They called me the hyacinth girl.”

— Y e t w h e n w e c a m e back, late, f r o m the H y a c i n t h g a r d e n , Y o u r a r m s full, a n d your hair wet, I c o u l d not

S p e a k , a n d my eyes failed, I w a s neither

40 Living nor dead, a n d I k n e w nothing,

L o o k i n g into the heart of light, the silence.

Oed' und leer das Meer.2

M a d a m e Sosostris,3 f a m o u s clairvoyante,

H a d a b a d cold, nevertheless

45 I s k n o w n to be the wisest w o m a n in E u r o p e ,

With a w i c k e d p a c k of c a r d s . 4 H e r e , said she,

I s your card, the d r o w n e d P h o e n i c i a n Sailor,

(T h o s e are pearls that were his eyes.5 L o o k !)

H e r e is B e l l a d o n n a , the L a d y of the R o c k s ,

50 T h e lady of situations.

H e r e is the m a n with three staves, a n d here the W h e e l ,

A n d here is the one-eyed m e r c h a n t , a n d this card,

W h i c h is blank, is s o m e t h i n g he carries on his back,

W h i c h I a m f o r b i d d e n to see. I do not find 55 T h e H a n g e d M a n . F e a r d e a t h by water.

I s e e c r o w d s of p e o p l e , walking r o u n d in a ring.

T h a n k you. If you s e e d e a r M r s . E q u i t o n e ,

Tell her I bring the h o r o s c o p e myself:

O n e m u s t b e s o c a r e f u l t h e s e d a y s .

60 U n r e a l C i t y , 6

U n d e r t h e b r o w n f o g o f a w i n t e r d a w n ,

9. Cf. Isaiah's prophecy of a Messiah who will befits my purpose in two ways: because he is associated in my mind with the Hanged God of Frazer, a great rock in a weary land" (Isaiah 32.2).

and because I associate him with the hooded figure

1. "V. Tristan und Isolde, I, verses 5—8" [Eliot's note]. The sailor's song from an opera by the

V. The Phoenician Sailor and the Merchant appear German composer Richard Wagner (1813-1883):

later; also the 'crowds of people' and Death by "Frjsh blows the wind / Toward home. / My Irish Water is executed in Part IV. The Man with Three child, / Where are you waiting?"

Staves (an authentic member of the Tarot pack) I

2. "Id. Ill, verse 24" [Eliot's note]. Empty and associate, quite arbitrarily, with the Fisher King waste the sea (German); i.e., the ship bringing himself" [Eliot's note]. The tarot cards are used in Isolde back to the dying Tristan is nowhere in fortune-telling; some of the figures named in the sight.

following lines come from tarot decks.

3. A pseudo-Egyptian name assumed by a fortune-teller in the English writer Aldous Huxley's novel "Full fathom five thy father lies." Phoenician Chrome Yellow (1921).

Sailor: the Phoenicians were seagoing merchants

4. "I am not familiar with the exact constitution (cf. "Mr. Eugenides," line 209, and "Phlebas the Phoenician," line 312).

ously departed to suit my own convenience. The

6. "Cf. Baudelaire: 'Fourmillante cite, cite pleine Hanged Man, a member of the traditional pack, de reves, / Ou le spectre en plein jour raccroche le

1 3 4 6 / T . S . E L I O T

A crowd flowed over London Bridge, so many,

I had not thought death had undone so many.⁷

Sighs, short and infrequent, were exhaled,⁸

65 And each man fixed his eyes before his feet.

Flowed up the hill and down King William Street,

To where Saint Mary Woolnoth kept the hours

With a dead sound on the final stroke of nine.⁹

There I saw one I knew, and stopped him, crying: "Stetson!

70 "You who were with me in the ships at Mylae!1

"That corpse you planted last year in your garden,

"Has it begun to sprout? Will it bloom this year?

"Or has the sudden frost disturbed its bed?

"Oh keep the Dog far hence, that's friend to men,

75 “Or with his nails he’ll dig it up again!2

“You! hypocrite lecteur!—mon semblable,—mon frere!”3

*II. A Game of Chess*4

The Chair she sat in, like a burnished throne,5

Glowed on the marble, where the glass

Held up by standards wrought with fruited vines

so From which a golden Cupidon peeped out

(Another hid his eyes behind his wing)

Doubled the flames of sevenbranched candelabra6

Reflecting light upon the table as

The glitter of her jewels rose to meet it,

85 From satin cases poured in rich profusion;

In vials of ivory and coloured glass

Unstoppered, lurked her strange synthetic perfumes,

Unguent,0 powdered, or liquid—troubled, confused ointment

And drowned the sense in odours; stirred by the air

90 That freshened from the window, these ascended

In fattening the prolonged candle-flames,

passant’ ” [Eliot’s note]. Swarming city, city filled

B.C.E.), the Romans defeated the Carthaginians.

with dreams, / Where the specter in broad daylight

2. “Cf. the Dirge in Webster’s White Devil [1612]”

accosts the passerby (French); from one of the [Eliot’s note]. In the English dramatist John Web-poems in the French poet Charles Baudelaire’s Les

ster’s play, the song is sung by a crazed mother,

Fleurs du mal (1857).

who has witnessed one son murder another, and

7. “Cf. Inferno III, 55-57: ‘si lunga tratta / di ends, “But keep the wolf far thence, that’s foe to gente, ch’ io non avrei mai creduto / che morte men; / For with his nails he’ll dig them up again” tanta n’avesse disfatta’ ” [Eliot’s note]. On his arrival (5.4.97-98).

val in the Inferno, Dante sees the vast crowd, “such

3. “V. Baudelaire, Preface to Fleurs du mal” a long procession of people, that I would never [Eliot’s note]. Hypocrite reader!—my likeness,— have believed that death had undone so many” my brother! (French); last line of the prefatory (Italian).

poem, “Au lecteur” (“To the Reader”).

8. “Cf. Inferno IV, 25—27: ‘Quivi, secondo che per

4. The title alludes to two plays by the English ascoltare, / non avea pianto, ma’ che di sospiri, / dramatist Thomas Middleton, A Game of Chess che l’aura eterna facevan tremare’ ” [Eliot’s note].

(1627) and Women Beware Women (1657), both Dante descends into the first circle of Hell, filled of which involve sexual intrigue. In the second, a with virtuous pagans condemned to Limbo game of chess is used to mark a seduction, the because they had lived before Christianity: “Here, moves in the game paralleling its steps.

if one trusted to hearing, there was no weeping but

5. “Cf. Antony and Cleopatra, II, ii, 1 [line] 190”

so many sighs as caused the everlasting air to trem-[Eliot's note]. Eliot's language recalls the passage ble" (Italian).

in Shakespeare that describes Cleopatra's first
9. "A phenomenon which I have often noticed" meeting with Antony, which begins: "The barge [Eliot's note]. The church and the other London she sat in, like a burnished throne / Burned on the sites are in the City, London's financial and busi-
water."
ness center.

6. The Menorah, used in Jewish worship.

1. Sicilian seaport; at the battle of Mylae (260

i

THE WASTELAND / 135 5

Flung their smoke into the laquearia, 7

Stirring the pattern on the coffered ceiling . with recessed panels Hugesea-wood fed with copper

95 Burned green and orange, framed by the coloured stone, In which sad light a carved dolphinswam.

Above the antique mantel was displayed

As though a window gave upon the sylvan scene 8

The change of Philomel, by the barbarous king 9

100 So rudely forced; yet there the nightingale 1

Filled all the desert with inviolable voice
And still she cried, and still the world pursues,

”Jug Jug” 2 to dirty years.

And other withered stumps of time

105 Were told upon the walls; staring forms
Leaned out, leaning, hushing the room enclosed.

Footsteps shuffled on the stair.

Under the firelight, under the brush, her hair Spread out in fiery points

no Glow ed into words, then would be savagely still.

”My nerves are bad to-night. Yes, bad. Stay with me.

”Speak to me. Why do you never speak. Speak.

”What are you thinking of? What thinking? What?”

”I never know what you are thinking. Think.”

us I think we are in rats’ alley ^

Where the dead men lost their bones.

”What is that noise?”

The wind under the door. 4

”What is that noise now? What is the wind doing?”

120 Nothing again nothing.

”Do

”You know nothing? Do you see nothing? Do you remember

”Nothing?”

I r e m e m b e r

125 T h o s e a r e p e a r l s t h a t w e r e h i s e y e s . 5

” A r e y o u a l i v e , o r n o t ? I s t h e r e n o t h i n g i n y o u r h e a d ? ”

B u t

O O O O t h a t S h a k e s p e h e r i a n R a g —

I t ’ s s o e l e g a n t

7. “Laquearia. V. Aeneid, I, 726: dependent lychni
To avenge her, his wife, Procne, murdered her son laquearibus aureis / Incensi, et noctem flammis and fed him to Tereus. All three were changed into funalia vincunt” [Eliot’s note]. Lighted lamps hang birds: the sisters into the nightingale and swallow, from the golden paneled ceiling [laquearia], and Tereus into the hoopoe pursuing them.

the torches conquer the night with their flames

1. “Cf. Part III, 1 [ine] 204” [Eliot’s note],
(Latin); description of the banquet hall where Dido
2. In Elizabethan poetry, the conventional render-welcomes Aeneas to Carthage (her passion for the ing of the nightingale’s song.

visitor, like Cleopatra’s, ended in suicide).

3. “Cf. Part III, 1 [ine] 195” [Eliot’s note],

8. “Sylvan scene. V. Milton, Paradise Lost, IV,

4. “Cf. Webster: ‘Is the wind in that door still?’ ”

140” [Eliot’s note]. The phrase occurs in the [Eliot’s note], referring to John Webster’s play The description of Eden as first seen by Satan.

Devil's Law Case (1623) 3.2.162. In context, the

9. "V. Ovid, Metamorphoses, VI, Philomela"

speaker is asking if someone is still alive.

[Eliot's note]. Ovid describes how Tereus raped his

5. "Cf. Part I, 11. 37, 48" [Eliot's note]. See note sister-in-law, Philomela, and cut out her tongue.

5, p. 1345.

1 3 4 8 / T . S . E L I O T

BO So intelligent⁶

"What shall I do now? What shall I do?"

"I shall rush out as I am, and walk the street

"With my hair down, so. What shall we do tomorrow?

"What shall we ever do?"

135 The hot water at ten.

And if it rains, a closed car at four.

And we shall play a game of chess,

Pressing lidless eyes and waiting for a knock upon the door.⁷

When Lil's husband got demobbed,⁸ I said—

MO I didn't mince my words, I said to her myself,

HURRY UP PLEASE ITS TIME⁹

Now Albert's coming back, make yourself a bit smart.

He'll want to know what you done with that money he gave
you

To get yourself some teeth. He did, I was there.

145 You have them all out, Lil, and get a nice set,

He said, I swear, I can't bear to look at you.

And no more can't I, I said, and think of poor Albert,

He's been in the army four years, he wants a good time,

And if you don't give it him, there's others will, I said.

150 Oh is there, she said. Something o' that, I said.

Then I'll know who to thank, she said, and give me a straight look.

H U R R Y UP PLEASE ITS TIME

If you don't like it you can get on with it, I said.

Others can pick and choose if you can't.

155 But if Albert makes off, it won't be for lack of telling.

You ought to be ashamed, I said, to look so antique.

(And her only thirty-one.)

I can't help it, she said, pulling a long face,

It's them pills I took, to bring it off,¹ she said.

160 (She's had five already, and nearly died of young George.)

The chemist⁰ said it would be all right, but I've never been druggist

the same.

You are a proper fool, I said.

Well, if Albert won't leave you alone, there it is, I said,

What you get married for if you don't want children?

165 H U R R Y UP PLEASE ITS TIME

Well, that Sunday Albert was home, they had a hot

g a m m o n , 0 smoked ham

And they asked me in to dinner, to get the beauty of it hot—

HURRY UP PLEASE ITS TIME

H U R R Y UP PLEASE ITS TIME

170 Goonight Bill. Goonight Lou. Goonight May. Goonight.

Ta ta. Goonight. Goonight.

Good night, ladies, good night, sweet ladies, good night, good night.²

6. Cf. the chorus to “The Shakespearian Rag,” a

9. Typical call of a British bartender to clear the popular song from 1912: “That Shakespearian bar at closing time.

Rag, most intelligent, very elegant.”

1. To cause an abortion.

7. “Cf. the game of chess in Middleton’s Women

2. Cf. Ophelia’s farewell before drowning (Hamlet Beware Women ” [Eliot’s note].

4.5.69—70) and the popular song lyric “Good night

8. Demobilized (discharged from military service) ladies, we’re going to leave you now.”

after World War I.

THE WASTELAND / 1355

III. The Fire Sermon³

The river’s tent is broken: the last fingers of leaf

Clutch and sink into the wet bank. The wind

175 Crosses the brown land, unheard. The nymphs are departed

Sweet Thames, run softly, till I end my song.⁴

The river bears no empty bottles, sandwich papers,

Silk handkerchiefs, cardboard boxes, cigarette ends

Or other testimony of summer nights. The nymphs are departed.

180 And their friends, the loitering heirs of city directors;

Departed, have left no addresses.

By the waters of Leman I sat down and wept⁵ ...

Sweet Thames, run softly till I end my song,

Sweet Thames, run softly, for I speak not loud or long.

185 But at my back in a cold blast I hear⁶
 The rattle of the bones, and chuckle spread from ear to ear.
 A rat crept softly through the vegetation
 Dragging its slimy belly on the bank
 While I was fishing in the dull canal
 190 On a winter evening round behind the gashouse
 Musing upon the king my brother's wreck⁷
 And on the king my father's death before him.
 White bodies naked on the low damp ground
 And bones cast in a little low dry garret, 195 Rattled by the rat's foot only, year to year.
 But at my back from time to time I hear⁸
 The sound of horns and motors, which shall bring Sweeney to Mrs. Porter in the spring.⁹
 O the moon shone bright on Mrs. Porter
 200 And on her daughter
 They wash their feet in soda water¹
*Et O ces voix d'enfants, chantant dans la coupole!*²
 3. I.e., Buddha's Fire Sermon; see Eliot's note to den, listening, you shall hear, / A noise of horns
 line 309.
 and hunting, which shall bring / Actaeon to Diana 4. "V. Spenser, Prothalamion" [Eliot's note]. The in the spring' " [Eliot's note]. In Greek mythology, line is the refrain of the marriage song by Edmund
 Actaeon saw Diana, chaste goddess of the hunt, Spenser (ca. 1552-1599; see pp. 159-205), a pas-naked as she bathed; the goddess changed him into toral celebration of a wedding near the Thames, a stag, and his own hounds killed him. The Parliament of Bees is the best-known work of the Elizabethan dramatist John Day.

5. An echo of the exiled Jews mourning for their homeland (Psalm 137): “By the rivers of Babylon, which these lines are taken: it was reported to me from Sydney, Australia” [Eliot’s note]. The bawdy Lake Geneva, and much of The Waste Land was written at Lausanne, on its shore. Leman is also an archaic word for lover or mistress.

1. “I do not know the origin of the ballad from there we sat down, yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion.” Lac Leman is the French name for Lake Geneva, and much of The Waste Land was written at Lausanne, on its shore. Leman is also an archaic word for lover or mistress.

thoughtless sexual enterprise who figures in Eliot’s 6. Cf. Andrew Marvell, “To His Coy Mistress,” “Sweeney Among the Nightingales” and “Sweeney Agonistes.”

7. “Cf. The Tempest, I, ii” [Eliot’s note]. Just before Ariel sings “Full fathom five thy father lies” those children’s voices singing in the dome! (see line 48), Ferdinand describes himself as “sit- (French); last line of a sonnet by the French poet

ting on a bank, / Weeping again the King my Paul Verlaine (1844-1896) that treats ironically father's wreck. / This music crept by me upon the the conquering of fleshly temptation. In Wagner's waters."

opera Parsifal, the feet of the title character, a 8. "Cf. Marvell, To His Coy Mistress" [Eliot's note].
questing knight, are washed before he enters the See line 185.

sanctuary of the Grail.

9. "Cf. Day, Parliament of Bees: "When of the sud-

1350 / T . S . E L I O T

Twit twit twit

Jug jug jug jug jug jug

205 So rudely forc'd.

Tereu³

Unreal City

Under the brown fog of a winter noon

Mr. Eugenides, the Smyrna⁰ m e r c h a n t port in West Turkey

210 Unshaven, with a pocket full of currants

C.i.f. London: documents at sight,⁴

Asked me in demotic⁵ French

To luncheon at the C a n n o n Street Hotel

Followed by a weekend at the Metropole.⁶

215 At the violet hour, when the eyes and back

Turn upward from the desk, when the h u m a n engine waits

Like a taxi throbbing waiting,

I Tiresias,⁷ though blind, throbbing between two lives,

Old m a n with wrinkled female breasts, can see 220 At the violet hour, the evening h o u r that strives Homeward, and brings the sailor h o m e from sea,8
 The typist h o m e at teatime, clears her breakfast, lights
 H e r stove, and lays out food in tins.
 O u t of the window perilously spread 225 H e r drying combinations⁰ touched by the sun's last rays, underwear On the divan are piled (at night her bed)
 Stockings, slippers, camisoles, and stays.⁰ corset
 I Tiresias, old m a n with wrinkled dug^o breasts
 Perceived the scene, and foretold the rest—
 230 I too awaited the expected guest.

He, the young m a n carbuncular,⁰ arrives, with pimples

A small house agent's clerk, with one bold stare,

3. Another conventional Elizabethan rendering of refer the question to wise Tiresias who knew love the nightingale's song, as well as a form of the from both points of view. For once, with a blow of name Tereus (see lines 99—103).

his staff, he had separated two huge snakes who

4. "The currants were quoted at a price 'carriage were copulating in the forest, and miraculously and insurance free to London'; and the Bill of Lad- was changed instantly from a man into a woman ing etc. were to be handled to the buyer upon pay- and remained so for seven years. In the eighth year ment of the sight draft" [Eliot's note]. "C.i.f." can he saw the snakes again and said: 'If a blow against also mean “cost, insurance, and freight.”

you is so powerful that it changes the sex of the

5. I.e., vulgar or simplified.

author of it, now I shall strike you again.’ With

6. A large hotel at Brighton, a seaside town on these words he struck them, and his former shape

England’s south coast. Cannon Street Hotel: a very and masculinity were restored. As referee in the large hotel in London’s commercial district.

sportive quarrel, he supported Jove’s claim. Juno,

7. “Tiresias, although a mere spectator and not overly upset by the decision, condemned the arbi-indeed a ‘character,’ is yet the most important per-trator to eternal blindness. But the all-powerful sonage in the poem, uniting all the rest. Just as the father (inasmuch as no god can undo what has one-eyed merchant, seller of currants, melts into been done by another god) gave him the power of the Phoenician sailor, and the latter is not wholly prophecy, with this honor compensating him for distinct from Ferdinand Prince of Naples, so all the

the loss of sight.”

women are one woman, and the two sexes meet in

8. “This may not appear as exact as Sappho’s lines,

Tiresias. What Tiresias sees, in fact, is the sub-

but I had in mind the ‘longshore’ or ‘dory’ fisher-stance of the poem. The whole passage from Ovid man, who returns at nightfall” [Eliot’s note]. Fragis of great anthropological interest” [Eliot’s note].

 ment 149 of the Greek poet Sappho (fl. ca. 61 fl-Eliot then cites in Latin Ovid’s version of why Tiresias was blinded, then granted a seer’s power (Met- amorphoses 3.320—38): “Evening, bringing all that light-giving dawn has scattered, you bring the sheep, you bring the goat, you bring the child to its mother.”
 here very drunk] said jokingly to Juno [his wife]:
 But cf. “Requiem,” by the Scottish poet Robert Louis Stevenson (1850-1894): “Home is the enjoyed by men.’ She denied it. So they decided to sailor, home from the sea.”

T H E W A S T E L A N D / 1 3 5 5

O n e of the low on w h o m assurance sits
 As a silk hat on a Bradford⁹ millionaire.
 235 The time is now propitious, as he guesses,
 The meal is ended, she is bored and tired,
 Endeavours to engage her in caresses
 W h i c h still are unproved, if undesired.
 Flushed and decided, he assaults at once;
 240 Exploring hands e n c o u n t e r no defence;
 His vanity requires no response,
 And makes a welcome of indifference.
 (And I Tiresias have foresuffered all Enacted on this same divan or bed;
 245 I who have sat by Thebes below the wall¹

And walked among the lowest of the dead.)
Bestows one final patronizing kiss,
And gropes his way, finding the stairs unlit ...
She turns and looks a m o m e n t in the glass,
250 Hardly aware of her departed lover;
Her brain allows one half-formed thought to pass:
“Well now that’s done: and I’m glad it’s over.”
W h e n lovely woman stoops to folly and Paces about her room again, alone,
255 She smooths her hair with automatic hand,
And puts a record on the gramophone.²
“This music crept by me upon the waters”³
And along the Strand, up Q u e e n Victoria Street.
O City city, I can sometimes hear 260 Beside a public bar in Lower Thames Street,
The pleasant whining of a mandoline
And a clatter and a chatter from within
W h e r e fishermen lounge at noon: where the walls
Of Magnus Martyr⁴ hold 265 Inexplicable splendour of Ionian white and gold.
The river sweats⁵
Oil and tar
The barges drift
With the turning tide
270 Red sails
Wide
To leeward, swing on the heavy spar.
The barges wash

9. A manufacturing town in Yorkshire, England, note to line 191, p. 1349.

that enjoyed an industrial boom during World

4. “The interior of [London’s] St. Magnus Martyr War I.

is to my mind one of the finest among [Christo-

1. Tiresias prophesied in the marketplace by the pher| Wren’s interiors” [Eliot’s note],

wall of Thebes, foretold the fall of the Theban

5. “The song of the (three) Thames-daughters kings Oedipus and Crcon, and continued to prophbegins here. From line 292 to 306 inclusive they esy in the underworld.

speak in turn. V. Gotterdammerung, III, i: the

2. “V. Goldsmith, the song in The Vicar of Wake- Rhine-daughters” [Eliot’s note]. Lines 277—78 and field” [Eliot’s note]. Cf. Oliver Goldsmith, “When 290—91 repeat the refrain of the Rhine maidens

Lovely Woman Stoops to Folly” (p. 686).

lamenting the lost beauty of their river in Wagner’s

3. “V. The Tempest, as above” [Eliot’s note]. See opera.

1 3 5 2 / T . S . E L I O T

Drifting logs

Down Greenwich reach

Past the Isle of Dogs.⁶

Weialala leia

Wallala leialala

Elizabeth and Leicester⁷

Beating oars

The stern was formed

A gilded shell

Red and gold

The brisk swell

Rippled both shores

Southwest wind

Carried down stream

The peal of bells

White towers

Weialala leia

Wallala leialala

“Trams and dusty trees.

Highbury bore me. Richmond and Kew

Undid me.⁸ By Richmond I raised my knees

Supine on the floor of a narrow canoe.”

“My feet are at Moorgate,⁹ and my heart
Under my feet. After the event
He wept. He promised ‘a new start.’
I made no comment. What should I resent?”
“On Margate Sands.¹
I can connect
Nothing with nothing.
The broken fingernails of dirty hands.
My people humble people who expect Nothing.”

la la

To Carthage then I came²

6. A peninsula extending into the Thames oppo-
8. “Cf. Purgatorio, V, 133” [Eliot’s note], referring site Greenwich, a borough of London and Queen to Dante’s “Remember me, who am la Pia; Sien Elizabeth I’s birthplace.
made me, the Maremma undid me”; also quoted
7. “V. Froude, [Reign of] Elizabeth, Vol. I, ch. iv, by Ezra Pound in “Hugh Selwyn Mauberley” (see letter of [Bishop] De Quadra [the ambassador] to note 9, p. 1302). Highbury is a residential suburb Philip of Spain: ‘In the afternoon we were in a in North London; Richmond and Kew are up the barge, watching the games on the river. (The river from London.
queen) was alone with the Lord Robert and myself
9. A slum in East London.

on the poop, when they began to talk nonsense,
1. A beach resort in Kent—popular with London and went so far that Lord Robert at last said, as I residents—where the Thames broadens into the was on the spot there was no reason why they Channel.

should not be married if the queen pleased' ”

2. “V. St. Augustine’s Confessions: ‘to Carthage [Eliot’s note]. Sir Robert Dudley (15327-1588), then I came, where a cauldron of unholy loves sang earl of Leicester, was romantically involved with all about mine ears’ ” [Eliot’s note], Augustine is the queen.

recounting his licentious youth.

T H E W A S T E L A N D / 1 3 5 5

Burning burning burning burning³

O Lord Thou pluckest me out⁴

310 O Lord Thou pluckest

burning

IV. Death hy Water

Phlebas the Phoenician, a fortnight dead,

Forgot the cry of gulls, and the deep sea swell

And the profit and loss.

315 A current under sea

Picked his bones in whispers. As he rose and fell

He passed the stages of his age and youth

Entering the whirlpool.

Gentile or Jew

320 O you who turn the wheel and look to windward,
Consider Phlebas, who was once handsome and tall as you.

*V. What the Thunder Said*⁵

After the torchlight red on sweaty faces

After the frosty silence in the gardens

After the agony in stony places

325 The shouting and the crying

Prison and palace and reverberation

Of thunder of spring over distant mountains

He who was living is now dead

We who were living are now dying

330 With a little patience

Here is no water but only rock

Rock and no water and the sandy road

The road winding above among the mountains

Which are mountains of rock without water

335 If there were water we should stop and drink

Amongst the rock one cannot stop or think

Sweat is dry and feet are in the sand

If there were only water amongst the rock

Dead mountain mouth of carious⁰ teeth that cannot spit decayed

340 Here one can neither stand nor lie nor sit

There is not even silence in the mountains

But dry sterile thunder without rain

There is not even solitude in the mountains

3. Taken from “the complete text of the Buddha’s employed: the journey to Emmaus, the approach

Fire Sermon (which corresponds in importance to the Chapel Perilous (see Miss Weston's book) the Sermon on the Mount)" [Eliot's note], and the present decay of eastern Europe" [Eliot's 4. "From St. Augustine's Confessions again. The note]. On the third day after his Crucifixion, Jesus collocation of these two representatives of eastern appeared to two of his disciples as they walked to and western asceticism, as the culmination of this the village of Emmaus, but they knew him only part of the poem, is not an accident" [Eliot's note]. when he vanished (Luke 24.13—34). The Chapel Cf. Zechariah 3.2, where the Lord (i.e., God) calls Perilous is connected with the quest for the Holy Joshua "a brand plucked out of the fire." Grail, in which only those of perfect purity can 5. "In the first part of Part V three themes are succeed.

1 3 5 4 / T . S . E L I O T

But red sullen faces sneer and snarl
345 From doors of mudcracked houses
If there were water
And no rock
If there were rock
And also water
350 And water
A spring
A pool among the rock

If there were the sound of water only
Not the cicada⁶
355 And dry grass singing
But sound of water over a rock
Where the hermit-thrush⁷ sings in the pine trees
Drip drop drip drop drop drop drop
But there is no water
360 Who is the third who walks always beside you?⁸
When I count, there are only you and I together
But when I look ahead up the white road
There is always another one walking beside you
Gliding wrapt in a brown mantle, hooded 365 I do not know whether a man or a woman
—But who is that on the other side of you?
What is that sound high in the air⁹
Murmur of maternal lamentation
Who are those hooded hordes swarming
370 Over endless plains, stumbling in cracked earth
Ringed by the flat horizon only
What is the city over the mountains
Cracks and reforms and bursts in the violet air Falling towers
375 Jerusalem Athens Alexandria
Vienna London
Unreal
A woman drew her long black hair out tight
And fiddled whisper music on those strings
380 And bats with baby faces in the violet light

Whistled, and beat their wings

And crawled head downward down a blackened wall

6. Grasshopper. Cf. line 23 and note 8, p. 1344.

from the nonfiction book Blick ins Chaos (A

7. “This is ... the hermit-thrush which I have Glimpse into Chaos), by the German writer Her-heard in Quebec Province. ... Its ‘water-dripping man Hesse (1877-1962), that may be translated song’ is justly celebrated” [Eliot’s note].

as follows: “Already half Europe, already at least

8. “The following lines were stimulated by the half of Eastern Europe, is on the road to Chaos, account of one of the Antarctic expeditions (I for-drives drunken in holy madness along the abyss get which, but I think one of Shackleton’s): it was and sings the while, sings drunk and hymnlike as related that the party of explorers, at the extremity Dmitri Karamazov sang [in the novel The Brothers of their strength, had the constant delusion that Karamazov, by the Russian writer Fyodor Dostothere was one more member than could actually be yevsky (1821-1881)]. The bourgeois laughs, counted” [Eliot’s note]. These lines also recall the offended, at these songs, the saint and the prophet journey to Emmaus; see note 2 directly above.
hear them with tears.”

9. Eliot’s note to lines 367—77 quotes a passage

THE WASTELAND / 1355

And upside down in air were towers
Tolling reminiscent bells, that kept the hours
385 And voices singing out of empty cisterns and exhausted wells.

In this decayed hole among the mountains
In the faint moonlight, the grass is singing
Over the tumbled graves, about the chapel
There is the empty chapel, only the wind's home.

390 It has no windows, and the door swings,
Dry bones can harm no one.

Only a cock stood on the rooftree

Co co rico co co rico 1

In a flash of lightning. Then a damp gust

395 Bringing rain

Ganga² was sunken, and the limp leaves

Waited for rain, while the black clouds

Gathered far distant, over Himavant.⁰ Himalayan peak

The jungle crouched, humped in silence.

400 Then spoke the thunder

D A 3

Datta: what have we given?

My friend, blood shaking my heart

The awful daring of a moment's surrender

405 Which an age of prudence can never retract

By this, and this only, we have existed

Which is not to be found in our obituaries

Or in memories draped by the beneficent spider⁴

Or under seals broken by the lean solicitor⁰ lawyer

4io In our empty rooms

D A

Dayadhvam: I have heard the key⁵

Turn in the door once and turn once only

We think of the key, each in his prison

415 Thinking of the key, each confirms a prison

Only at nightfall, ethereal rumours

Revive for a moment a broken Coriolanus⁶

1. When Peter denied Jesus, “immediately the epitaphs’ ” [Eliot’s note].

cock crew,” as Jesus had predicted (Matthew

5. “Cf. Inferno, XXXIII, 46” [Eliot’s note], where

26.34, 74—75). Also, in folklore a cock’s crow sig-

Ugolino recalls his imprisonment with his sons in nals the departure of ghosts.

the tower where they starved to death: “And I

2. The Sanskrit name of the Indian river Ganges.

heard below the door of the horrible tower being

3. ” ‘Datta, dayadhvam, damyata’ (Give, sympa-

locked up.” Eliot also cites F. H. Bradley, Appear- thize, control). The fable of the meaning of the ance and Reality (1893), p. 346: “My external sen-

Thunder is found in the Brihadaranyaka—Upani- sations are no less private to myself than are my shad, 5, 1” [Eliot’s note]. In the Hindu fable (found thoughts or my feelings. In either case my experi-within the ancient, sacred Sanskrit dialogues

ence falls within my own circle, a circle closed on known as the Upanishads), the supreme deity, Prathe outside; and, with all its elements alike, every japati, gives instruction in the form of the syllable sphere is opaque to the others which surround it.

Da, which the gods understand as “be restrained”
... In brief, regarded as an existence which (damyata), humans as “give alms” (datta), and appears in a soul, the whole world for each is pecudemons as “have compassion” (dayadhvam). All are liar and private to that soul.”

correct, and a divine voice repeats the syllable with 6. Legendary Roman patrician, the protagonist of the force of thunder.

Shakespeare’s tragedy Coriolanus, who joined

4. “Cf. Webster, The White Devil, V. vi:

forces with the enemy he had once defeated when they’ll remarry / Ere the worm pierce your winding-the leaders of the Roman populace opposed him.
sheet, ere the spider / Make a thin curtain for your

1 3 5 6 / T . S . E L I O T

D A

Damyata: The boat responded

420 Gaily, to the hand expert with sail and oar

The sea was calm, your heart would have responded

Gaily, when invited, beating obedient

To controlling hands

I sat upon the shore

425 Fishing,⁷ with the arid plain behind me

Shall I at least set my lands in order?⁸

London Bridge is falling down falling down falling down⁹

Poi s'ascose nelfoco che gli ajfina'

*Quando fiatn uti chelidon*²—O swallow swallow'

430 *Le Prince d'Aquitaine a la tour abolie*⁴

These fragments I have shored against my ruins

Why then lie fit you. Hieronymo's mad againe.⁵

Datta. Dayadhvam. Damyata.

Shantih shantih shantih⁶

1922

The Hollow Men

Mistah Kurtz — he dead.⁷

A penny for the Old Guy⁸

I

We are the hollow men

We are the stuffed men

7. "V. Weston: Front Ritual to Romance; chapter Swallow, Swallow, flying, flying south."

on the Fisher King" [Eliot's note].

4. "V. [French writer] Gerard de Nerval [1808-

8. Cf. Isaiah 38.1: "Thus saith the Lord, Set thine house in order: for thou shalt die, and not live."

line reads: "The prince of Aquitania in the ruined

9. One of the later lines of this nursery rhyme is tower" (French).

"Take the key and lock her up, my fair lady."

5. "V. Kyd's Spanish Tragedy" [Eliot's note]. The

1. “V. Purgatorio, XXVI, 148” [Eliot’s note]. Eliot subtitle of The Spanish Tragedy, by the English here quotes the final lines of Dante’s encounter playwright Thomas Kyd (1558-1594), is Hieronymo’s Mad Againe. Hieronymo, driven mad by his encountered among the lustful in Purgatory:

son’s death, “fits” the parts in a court masque so
” ‘And so I pray you, by that Virtue which guides that in the course of it he kills his son’s murderers you to the top of the stair, be reminded in time of before himself committing suicide.

my pain.’ Then he hid himself in the fire that puri-

6. “Shantih. Repeated as here, a formal ending to fies them” (Italian). This last sentence translates an Upanishad. ‘The Peace which passeth underline 428 of The Waste Land.

standing’ is our nearest equivalent to this word”

2. “V. Pervigilium Veneris. Cf. Philomela in Parts [Eliot’s note],

I and II” [Eliot’s note]. The Vigil of Venus, an anon-

7. From the novella Heart of Darkness, by the ymous Latin poem (ca. second century C.E.) cele- Polish English (Ukrainian-born) novelist Joseph brating the spring festival of the goddess Venus, Conrad (1857-1924). The dying words of Mr. ends with an allusion to the Procne-Philomela- Kurtz, the official of a trading company, who has Tereus myth. The quoted line means “When shall entered the African jungle and descended into evil, I become like the swallow”; the Latin continues, are “The horror! The horror!”

“that I may cease to be silent.”

8. I.e., money to buy fireworks to burn Guy

3. Cf. “Itylus,” by Algernon Charles Swinburne

Fawkes in effigy. Said by begging children in (1837-1909; see pp. 1146-52), which begins:

England on November 5, Guy Fawkes Day, a com-

“Swallow, my sister, O sister Swallow.” Cf. also the memoration of Fawkes’s failed conspiracy, for song in The Princess, by Alfred, Lord Tennyson which he was executed, to blow up the House of (1809-1892; see pp. 982-1009), that begins: “O

Commons in 1605.

THE HOLLOW MEN / 1 3 5 7

Leaning together

Headpiece filled with straw. Alas!

5 Our dried voices, when

We whisper together

Are quiet and meaningless

As wind in dry grass

Or rats’ feet over broken glass

10 In our dry cellar

Shape without form, shade without colour,

Paralysed force, gesture without motion;

Those who have crossed

With direct eyes, to death's other Kingdom
15 Remember us—if at all—not as lost
Violent souls, but only
As the hollow men
The stuffed men.

II

Eyes I dare not meet in dreams
20 In death's dream kingdom
These do not appear:
There, the eyes are Sunlight on a broken column
There, is a tree swinging 25 And voices are
In the wind's singing
More distant and more solemn
Than a fading star.
Let me be no nearer
30 In death's dream kingdom
Let me also wear
Such deliberate disguises
Rat's coat, crowskin, crossed staves
In a field
35 Behaving as the wind behaves
No nearer—
Not that final meeting
In the twilight kingdom

III

This is the dead land

40 This is cactus land
Here the stone images
Are raised, here they receive
The supplication of a dead man's hand
Under the twinkle of a fading star.

1 3 5 8 / T . S . E L I O T

45 Is it like this
In death's other kingdom
Waking alone
At the hour when we are Trembling with tenderness
50 Lips that would kiss
Form prayers to broken stone.

IV

The eyes are not here
There are no eyes here
In this valley of dying stars
55 In this hollow valley
This broken jaw of our lost kingdoms
In this last of meeting places
We grope together
And avoid speech
60 Gathered on this beach of the tumid river Sightless, unless
The eyes reappear
As the perpetual star
Multifoliate rose⁹
65 Of death's twilight kingdom

The hope only
Of empty men.

V

Here we go round the prickly pear

Prickly pear prickly pear

70 Here we go round the prickly pear

At five o'clock in the morning.1

Between the idea

And the reality

Between the motion

75 And the act

Falls the Shadow

For Thine is the Kingdom2

Between the conception

And the creation

so Between the emotion

And the response

Falls the Shadow

Life is very long

9. Reference to the vision of saved souls surround-

“Here we go round the mulberry bush.”

ing God in Paradiso, the third part of Dante’s

2. Fragment from the end of the Lord’s Prayer:

Divine Comedy,

“For Thine is the Kingdom, and the power, and the

1. An ironic variation on the children’s chant glory, forever and ever, Amen.”

JOURNEY OF THE MAGI / 1359

Between the desire

85 And the spasm

Between the potency

And the existence

Between the essence

And the descent

90 Falls the Shadow

For Thine is the Kingdom

For Thine is

Life is

For Thine is the

95 This is the way the world ends

This is the way the world ends

This is the way the world ends

Not with a hang hut a whimper.

1925

Journey of the Magi³

“A cold coming we had of it,⁴

Just the worst time of the year

For a journey, and such a long journey:

The ways deep and the weather sharp,

5 The very dead of winter.”

And the camels galled, sore-footed, refractory,

Lying down in the melting snow.

There were times we regretted

The summer palaces on slopes, the terraces,

io And the silken girls bringing sherbet.

Then the camel men cursing and grumbling

And running away, and wanting their liquor and women,
And the night-fires going out, and the lack of shelters,
And the cities hostile and the towns unfriendly 15 And the villages dirty and charging high prices:
A hard time we had of it.
At the end we preferred to travel all night,
Sleeping in snatches,
With the voices singing in our ears, saying 20 That this was all folly.
Then at dawn we came down to a temperate valley,
Wet, below the snow line, smelling of vegetation;
With a running stream and a water-mill beating the darkness,

3. The poem re-creates the recollections of one of

4. The first five lines are adapted from the sermon the wise men, or Magi, who followed the star to preached at Christmas, 1622, by Bishop Lancelot Bethlehem bearing gifts for the newly born Jesus Andrewes.

(Matthew 2.1-12).

1 3 6 0

/ T. S. ELIOT

And three trees on the low sky,⁵
25 And an old white horse galloped away in the meadow.
Then we came to a tavern with vine-leaves over the lintel,
Six hands at an open door dicing for pieces of silver,
And feet kicking the empty wine-skins.
But there was no information, and so we continued
30 And arrived at evening, not a moment too soon

Finding the place; it was (you may say) satisfactory.
All this was a long time ago, I remember,
And I would do it again, but set down
This set down
35 This: were we led all that way for Birth or Death? There was a Birth, certainly,
We had evidence and no doubt. I had seen birth and death,
But had thought they were different; this Birth was Hard and bitter agony for us, like Death, our death.
40 We returned to our places, these Kingdoms,
But no longer at ease here, in the old dispensation,
With an alien people clutching their gods.
I should be glad of another death.

1927

FROM FOUR QUARTETS

Little Gidding⁶

I

Midwinter spring is its own season
Sempiternal⁰ though sodden towards sundown, everlasting Suspended in time, between pole and tropic.
When the short day is brightest, with frost and fire,
5 The brief sun flames the ice, on pond and ditches,
In windless cold that is the heart's heat,
Reflecting in a watery mirror
A glare that is blindness in the early afternoon.
And glow more intense than blaze of branch, or brazier,
io Stirs the dumb spirit: no wind, but pentecostal fire⁷
5. The image prefigures the three crosses of the Gidding, an Anglican religious community, was Crucifixion (Luke 23.32), as line 27 suggests the founded by Nicholas Ferrar in 1625. The com-Roman soldiers casting lots for Jesus' robe (John munity was dispersed after the Puritans' victory in 19.23—24), as well as the pieces of silver paid to the English Civil War, but in the nineteenth cen-Judas for betraying him (Matthew 26.14—15). tury its chapel was rebuilt.

6. The final and, in Eliot's opinion, the best poem

7. See Acts 2.2—4, where Jesus' disciples are of Four Quartets, each of which is divided into five assembled on the feast of Pentecost: "And sud-parts. This quartet, like the others, addresses one denly there came a sound from heaven, as of a of the four elements; in "Little Gidding" it is fire. rushing mighty wind... . And there appeared unto The imagery is reminiscent of the "Fire Sermon" them cloven tongues, like as of fire... . And they section of The Waste Land (p. 1349), in which were all filled with the Holy Ghost."

fire suggests both torment and salvation. Little

LITTLE GIDDING / 13

In the dark time of the year. Between melting and freezing
The soul's sap quivers. There is no earth smell
Or smell of living thing. This is the spring time
But not in time's covenant. Now the hedgerow
Is blanched for an hour with transitory blossom

Of snow, a bloom more sudden
Than that of summer, neither budding nor fading,
Not in the scheme of generation.
Where is the summer, the unimaginable Zero summer?
If you came this way,
Taking the route you would be likely to take
From the place you would be likely to come from,
If you came this way in may time, you would find the hedges
White again, in May, with voluptuary sweetness.
It would be the same at the end of the journey,
If you came at night like a broken king,⁸
If you came by day not knowing what you came for,
It would be the same, when you leave the rough road
And turn behind the pig-sty to the dull façade
And the tombstone. And what you thought you came for
Is only a shell, a husk of meaning
From which the purpose breaks only when it is fulfilled
If at all. Either you had no purpose
Or the purpose is beyond the end you figured
And is altered in fulfilment. There are other places
Which also are the world's end, some at the sea jaws,
Or over a dark lake, in a desert or a city—
But this is the nearest, in place and time,
Now and in England.
If you came this way,
Taking any route, starting from anywhere,
At any time or at any season,

It would always be the same: you would have to put off
Sense and notion. You are not here to verify,
Instruct yourself, or inform curiosity
Or carry report. You are here to kneel
Where prayer has been valid. And prayer is more Than an order of words, the conscious occupation
Of the praying mind, or the sound of the voice praying.
And what the dead had no speech for, when living,
They can tell you, being dead: the communication Of the dead is tongued with fire beyond the language of the living.

Here, the intersection of the timeless moment
Is England and nowhere. Never and always.

King Charles I (1600-1649), who went to Little Gidding after his defeat in the civil war.

1 3 6 2 / T . S . E L I O T

Ash on an old man's sleeve
Is all the ash the burnt roses leave.
Dust in the air suspended
Marks the place where a story ended.
60 Dust inbreathed was a house—
The wall, the wainscot and the mouse.
The death of hope and despair,
This is the death of air.⁹
There are flood and drouth
65 Over the eyes and in the mouth,
Dead water and dead sand
Contending for the upper hand.
The parched eviscerate soil

Gapes at the vanity of toil,
70 Laughs without mirth.
This is the death of earth.
Water and fire succeed
The town, the pasture and the weed.
Water and fire deride
75 The sacrifice that we denied.
Water and fire shall rot
The marred foundations we forgot,
Of sanctuary and choir.
This is the death of water and fire.
so In the uncertain hour before the morning¹
Near the ending of interminable night
At the recurrent end of the unending
After the dark dove with the flickering tongue²
Had passed below the horizon of his homing 85 While the dead leaves still rattled on like tin
Over the asphalt where no other sound was Between three districts whence the smoke arose
I met one walking, loitering and hurried
As if blown towards me like the metal leaves
90 Before the urban dawn wind unresisting.
And as I fixed upon the down-turned face
That pointed scrutiny with which we challenge
The first-met stranger in the waning dusk
I caught the sudden look of some dead master
95 Whom I had known, forgotten, half recalled
Both one and many; in the brown baked features

The eyes of a familiar compound ghost³

Both intimate and unidentifiable.

9. The Greek philosopher Heraclitus (ca. 540—raid warden in London during World War II.

ca. 480 B.C.E.) theorized about the conflict among

2. The Nazi dive bomber.

the elements: “Fire lives in the death of air.”

3. I.e., compounding the ghosts of two Irish-Anglo

1. The terza rima stanza pattern used by Dante in poets, William Butler Yeats (1865-1939; see his Divine Comedy is roughly suggested by Eliot’s

pp. 1188-1211) and Jonathan Swift (1667-1745;

form in this final section of part II. The speaker

see pp. 568-89).

here patrols the streets as Eliot had done as an air-

L I T T L E G I D D I N G / 1 3 6 3

So I assumed a double part, and cried

100 And heard another’s voice cry: “What! are you here?”⁴

Although we were not. I was still the same,

Knowing myself yet being someone other—

And he a face still forming; yet the words sufficed

To compel the recognition they preceded.

105 And so, compliant to the common wind,

Too strange to each other for misunderstanding,

In concord at this intersection time

Of meeting nowhere, no before and after,

We trod the pavement in a dead patrol.

110 I said: “The wonder that I feel is easy,

Yet ease is cause of wonder. Therefore speak:
I may not comprehend, may not remember.”
And he: “I am not eager to rehearse
My thought and theory which you have forgotten.
115 These things have served their purpose: let them be.
So with your own, and pray they be forgiven
By others, as I pray you to forgive
Both bad and good. Last season’s fruit is eaten
And the fullfed beast shall kick the empty pail.
120 For last year’s words belong to last year’s language
And next year’s words await another voice.
But, as the passage now presents no hindrance
To the spirit unappeased and peregrine0 wandering
Between two worlds become much like each other,
125 So I find words I never thought to speak
In streets I never thought I should revisit
When I left my body on a distant shore.
Since our concern was speech, and speech impelled us
To purify the dialect of the tribe5
BO And urge the mind to aftersight and foresight,
Let me disclose the gifts reserved for age
To set a crown upon your lifetime’s effort.
First, the cold friction of expiring sense
Without enchantment, offering no promise
135 But bitter tastelessness of shadow fruit
As body and soul begin to fall asunder.
Second, the conscious impotence of rage6
At human folly, and the laceration

Of laughter at what ceases to amuse.⁷

140 And last, the rending pain of re-enactment
Of all that you have done, and been; the shame
Of motives late revealed, and the awareness

4. Dante's words when he recognizes his mentor, think it horrible that lust and rage / Should dance Brunetto Latini, in Inferno 15.30.

attendance upon my old age.”

5. From the poem “Le Tombeau d’Edgar Poe,” by

7. Allusion to Swift’s Latin epitaph for himself, as the French poet Stephane Mallarme (1842-1898):
translated by Yeats: “Savage indignation now /
“Donner un sens plus pur aux mots de la tribu.”
Cannot lacerate his breast.”

6. Cf. W. B. Yeats, “The Spur,” lines 1 - 2 : “You

1 3 6 4 / T . S . E L I O T

Of things ill done and done to others’ harm

Which once you took for exercise of virtue.⁸

145 Then fools’ approval stings, and honour stains.

From wrong to wrong the exasperated spirit

Proceeds, unless restored by that refining fire⁹

Where you must move in measure, like a dancer.¹

The day was breaking. In the disfigured street

150 He left me, with a kind of valediction,

And faded on the blowing of the horn.²

There are three conditions which often look alike

Yet differ completely, flourish in the same hedgerow:

Attachment to self and to things and to persons, detachment

155 From self and from things and from persons; and, growing between them, indifference

Which resembles the others as death resembles life,

Being between two lives—unflowering, between

The live and the dead nettle. This is the use of memory:

For liberation—not less of love but expanding

i60 Of love beyond desire, and so liberation

From the future as well as the past. Thus, love of a country

Begins as attachment to our own field of action

And comes to find that action of little importance

Though never indifferent. History may be servitude,

165 History may be freedom. See, now they vanish,

The faces and places, with the self which, as it could, loved
them,

To become renewed, transfigured, in another pattern.

Sin is Behovely,³ but

All shall be well, and 170 All manner of thing shall be well.

If I think, again, of this place,

And of people, not wholly commendable,

Of no immediate kin or kindness,

But some of peculiar genius,

175 All touched by a common genius,

United in the strife which divided them;

If I think of a king at nightfall,

Of three men, and more, on the scaffold⁴

And a few who died forgotten

i80 In other places, here and abroad,

8. Cf. Yeats, "Vacillation," esp. lines 51—56:

2. Eliot's description of the "All clear" siren fading
"Things said or done long years ago, / Or things
after the air raid is phrased to recall the disapdid not do or say / But thought that I might say or pearance of Hamlet's father's ghost in Hamlet
do, / Weigh me down ... "

1.1.138: "It faded on the crowing of the cock."

9. As in the "Fire Sermon" section of The Waste

3. Necessary in God's eye. The fourteenth-century Land, which alludes to Buddha's counseling his mystic Julian of Norwich wrote, "Sin is behovable followers to turn away from the fires of passion and but all shall be well ... and all manner of things to attain freedom from earthly things.
shall be well."

1. Allusion to the images of humankind as dancers

4. King Charles I and, earlier, his aides Thomas in Yeats, "Among School Children" and "Nineteen Wentworth and Archbishop Laud were executed Hundred and Nineteen."

on the scaffold.

L I T T L E G I D D I N G / 1 3 6 5

And a few who died blind and quiet,⁵

Why should we celebrate

These dead men more than the dying?

It is not to ring the bell backward
185 Nor is it an incantation
To summon the spectre of a Rose.⁶
We cannot revive old factions
We cannot restore old policies
Or follow an antique drum.
190 These men, and those who opposed them
And those whom they opposed
Accept the constitution of silence
And are folded in a single party.
Whatever we inherit from the fortunate
195 We have taken from the defeated
What they had to leave us—a symbol:
A symbol perfected in death.
And all shall be well and
All manner of thing shall be well
200 By the purification of the motive
In the ground of our beseeching.⁷

IV

The dove⁸ descending breaks the air
With flame of incandescent terror
Of which the tongues declare 205 The one discharge from sin and error.
The only hope, or else despair
Lies in the choice of pyre or pyre—
To be redeemed from fire by fire.
Who then devised the torment? Love.
210 Love is the unfamiliar Name

Behind the hands that wove
The intolerable shirt of flame
Which human power cannot remove.⁹

We only live, only suspire⁰ breathe
215 Consumed by either fire or fire.

V

What we call the beginning is often the end
And to make an end is to make a beginning.

5. I.e., Milton, who sided against Charles during our beseeching” is love.

the civil war.

8. Here, symbolizing the Holy Ghost, with its

6. Allusions here to the title of a ballet in which a tongues of fire, and the dive bomber.

girl dreams of a rose she wore to a ball, and to the

9. In Greek mythology, the shirt that Hercules’

Wars of the Roses, in which the house of Lancaster wife gave Nessus because she believed it would win was the white rose and the house of York the red.

his love; it clung to his skin so painfully that he

7. According to Julian of Norwich, “the ground of immolated himself on a pyre.

1 3 6 6 / T . S . E L I O T

The end is where we start from. And every phrase
And sentence that is right (where every word is at home, 220 Taking its place to support the others,
The word neither diffident nor ostentatious,
An easy commerce of the old and the new,

The common word exact without vulgarity,
The formal word precise but not pedantic,
225 The complete consort dancing together)
Every phrase and every sentence is an end and a beginning, Every poem an epitaph. And any action
Is a step to the block, to the fire, down the sea's throat
Or to an illegible stone: and that is where we start.

230 We die with the dying:
See, they depart, and we go with them.

We are born with the dead:
See, they depart, and we go with them.

The moment of the rose and the moment of the yew-tree¹
235 Are of equal duration. A people without history
Is not redeemed from time, for history is a pattern
Of timeless moments. So, while the light fails
On a winter's afternoon, in a secluded chapel
History is now and England.

240 With the drawing of this Love and the voice of this Calling²

We shall not cease from exploration
And the end of all our exploring
Will be to arrive where we started
And know the place for the first time.

245 Through the unknown, remembered gate
When the last of earth left to discover
Is that which was the beginning;
At the source of the longest river
The voice of the hidden waterfall

250 And the children in the apple-tree
Not known, because not looked for
But heard, half-heard, in the stillness
Between two waves of the sea.

Quick now, here, now, always—3

255 A condition of complete simplicity (Costing not less than everything)

And all shall be well and

All manner of thing shall be well

When the tongues of flame are in-folded

260 Into the crowned knot⁴ of fire

And the fire and the rose are one.

1942, 1943

1. Symbolizing death and grief, in contrast with Quartets's first poem, "Burnt Norton": "There rises
the rose.

the hidden laughter / Of children in the foliage /

2. Quotation from the anonymous fourteenth-century religious work The Cloud of Unknowing.
Quick now, here, always."

3. Eliot comes full circle, to an image from Four

4. A nautical knot, tied to prevent untwisting.

3. Eliot comes full circle, to an image from Four

1 3 6 7

JOHN CROWER ANSOM

1888-1974

Bells for John Whiteside's Daughter

There was such speed in her little body,

And such lightness in her footfall,

It is no wonder her brown study
Astonishes us all.

5 Her wars were bruited⁰ in our high window. loudly voiced

We looked among orchard trees and beyond

Where she took arms against her shadow,

Or harried unto the pond

The lazy geese, like a snow cloud

io Dripping their snow on the green grass,

Tricking and stopping, sleepy and proud,

Who cried in goose, Alas,

For the tireless heart within the little

Lady with rod that made them rise

15 From their noon apple-dreams and scuttle

Goose-fashion under the skies!

But now go the bells, and we are ready,

In one house we are sternly stopped

To say we are vexed at her brown study,

20 Lying so primly propped.

1924

Piazza Piece1

—I am a gentleman in a dustcoat trying

To make you hear. Your ears are soft and small

And listen to an old man not at all,

They want the young men's whispering and sighing.

5 But see the roses on your trellis dying

And hear the spectral singing of the moon;

For I must have my lovely lady soon,

I am a gentleman in a dustcoat trying.

—I am a lady young in beauty waiting
io Until my truelove comes, and then we kiss.

But what gray man among the vines is this Whose words are dry and faint as in a dream?

1. This sonnet plays upon the old folktale of Death and the Maiden. Piazza: porch.

1 3 6 8 / J O H N C R O W E R A N S O M

Back from my trellis, Sir, before I scream!

I am a lady young in beauty waiting.

1925 1927

Blue Girls

Twirling your blue skirts, travelling the sward° grass

Under the towers of your seminary,

Go listen to your teachers old and contrary

Without believing a word.

5 Tie the white fillets⁰ then about your hair ribbons

And think no more of what will come to pass

Than bluebirds that go walking on the grass

And chattering on the air.

Practise your beauty, blue girls, before it fail;

io And I will cry with my loud lips and publish

Beauty which all our power shall never establish,

It is so frail.

For I could tell you a story which is true;

I know a woman with a terrible tongue,

15 Blear⁰ eyes fallen from blue, bleary

All her perfections tarnished—yet it is not long

Since she was lovelier than any of you.

1927

Parting, without a Sequel

She has finished and sealed the letter

At last, which he so richly has deserved,

With characters venomous and hatefully curved,

And nothing could be better.

5 But even as she gave it

Saying to the blue-capped functioner of doom,

“Into his hands,” she hoped the leering groom

Might somewhere lose and leave it.

Then all the blood

io Forsook the face. She was too pale for tears,

Observing the ruin of her younger years.

She went and stood

L A D Y L O S T / 1 3 6 9

Under her father’s vaunting oak

Who kept his peace in wind and sun, and glistened

15 Stoical in the rain; to whom she listened

If he spoke.

And now the agitation of the rain

Rasped his sere leaves, and he talked low and gentle

Reproaching the wan daughter by the lintel;

20 Ceasing and beginning again.

Away went the messenger’s bicycle,

His serpent’s track went up the hill forever,

And all the time she stood there hot as fever

And cold as any icicle.

1927

Lady Lost

This morning, flew up the lane
A timid lady bird to our birdbath
And eyed her image dolefully as death;
This afternoon, knocked on our windowpane
5 To be let in from the rain.
And when I caught her eye
She looked aside, but at the clapping thunder
And sight of the whole world blazing up like tinder Looked in on us again so miserably
io It was as if she would cry.
So I will go out into the park and say,
“Who has lost a delicate brown-eyed lady
In the West End section? Or has anybody Injured some fine woman in some dark way
15 Last night, or yesterday?
“Let the owner come and claim possession,
No questions will be asked. But stroke her gently
With loving words, and she will evidently Return to her full soft-haired white-breasted fashion
20 And her right home and her right passion.”

1 9 2 7

1 3 7 0

C O N R A D A I K E N

1889-1973

From Senlin:1 A Biography

II. His Futile Preoccupations

22

It is morning, Senlin says, and in the morning
When the light drips through the shutters like the dew,
I arise, I face the sunrise,
And do the things my fathers learned to do.
5 Stars in the purple dusk above the rooftops
Pale in a saffron mist and seem to die,
And I myself on a swiftly tilting planet
Stand before a glass and tie my tie.
Vine leaves tap my window,
io Dew-drops sing to the garden stones,
The robin chirps in the chinaberry tree
Repeating three clear tones.
It is morning. I stand by the mirror
And tie my tie once more.
15 While waves far off in a pale rose twilight
Crash on a coral shore.
I stand by a mirror and comb my hair:
How small and white my face!—
The green earth tilts through a sphere of air
20 And bathes in a flame of space.
There are houses hanging above the stars
And stars hung under a sea.
And a sun far off in a shell of silence
Dapples my walls for me.
25 It is morning, Senlin says, and in the morning
Should I not pause in the light to remember god?
Upright and firm I stand on a star unstable,
He is immense and lonely as a cloud.³

I will dedicate this moment before my mirror
30 To him alone, for him I will comb my hair.
Accept these humble offerings, cloud of silence!
I will think of you as I descend the stair.

Vine leaves tap my window,

The snail-track shines on the stones,

1. An invented name that, according to Aiken's is it that I am I, Senlin, and not someone else?"

preface to The Divine Pilgrim (1949), "means lit-

2. This section has also been published separately erally the 'little old man' that each of us must as "Morning Song."

become"; the poem poses "the basic and possibly

3. An allusion to William Wordsworth, "I Wan-unanswerable question, who and what am I, how dered Lonely as a Cloud" (p. 801).

T o H i s L O V E / 1 3 7 1

35 Dew-drops flash from the chinaberry tree

Repeating two clear tones.

It is morning, I awake from a bed of silence,

Shining I rise from the starless waters of sleep.

The walls are about me still as in the evening,

40 I am the same, and the same name still I keep.

The earth revolves with me, yet makes no motion,

The stars pale silently in a coral sky.

In a whistling void I stand before my mirror,

Unconcerned, and tie my tie.

45 There are horses neighing on far-off hills

Tossing their long white manes,
And mountains flash in the rose-white dusk,
Their shoulders black with rains.
It is morning. I stand by the mirror
50 And surprise my soul once more;
The blue air rushes above my ceiling,
There are suns beneath my floor.
... It is morning, Senlin says, I ascend from darkness
And depart on the winds of space for I know not where,
55 My watch is wound, a key is in my pocket,
And the sky is darkened as I descend the stair.
There are shadows across the windows, clouds in heaven,
And a god among the stars; and I will go
Thinking of him as I might think of daybreak 60 And humming a tune I know.
Vine leaves tap at the window,
Dewdrops sing to the garden stones,
The robin chirps in the chinaberry tree
Repeating three clear tones.

1918

IVOR GURNEY

1890-1937

To His Love

He's gone, and all our plans
Are useless indeed.

We'll walk no more on Cotswold
Where the sheep feed
5 Quietly and take no heed.

1. Range of hills in Gloucestershire, in southwest-central England.

1 3 7 2 / I V O R G U R N E Y

His body that was so quick

Is not as you

Knew it, on Severn river²

Under the blue

10 Driving our small boat through.

You would not know him now ...

But still he died

Nobly, so cover him over

With violets of pride

15 Purple from Severn side.

Cover him, cover him soon!

And with thick-set

Masses of memoried flowers—

Hide that red wet

20 Thing I must somehow forget.

1919

The Silent One

Who died on the wires,³ and hung there, one of two—

Who for his hours of life had chattered through

Infinite lovely chatter of Bucks⁴ accent:

Yet faced unbroken wires; stepped over, and went

5 A noble fool, faithful to his stripes—and ended.

But I weak, hungry, and willing only for the chance

Of line—to fight in the line, lay down under unbroken

Wires, and saw the flashes and kept unshaken,

Till the politest voice—a finicking accent, said:

io “Do you think you might crawl through there: there’s a hole.”

Darkness, shot at: I smiled, as politely replied—

“I’m afraid not, Sir.” There was no hole no way to be seen

Nothing but chance of death, after tearing of clothes.

Kept flat, and watched the darkness, hearing bullets whizzing

—

15 And thought of music—and swore deep heart’s deep oaths

(Polite to God) and retreated and came on again,

Again retreated—and a second time faced the screen.

1954

First Time In

After the dread tales and red yarns of the Line

Anything might have come to us; but the divine

2. Which flows west of the Cotswolds. infantry attack.

3. The barbed wire protecting the front from 4.

Buckinghamshire, in southern England.

B R E A K O F D A Y I N T H E T R E N C H E S / 1 3 7 3

Afterglow brought us up to a Welsh colony

Hiding in sandbag ditches, whispering consolatory

5 Soft foreign things. Then we were taken in

To low huts candle-lit, shaded close by slitten0 slit

Oilsheets, and there the boys gave us kind welcome,

So that we looked out as from the edge of home,

Sang us Welsh things, and changed all former notions

10 To human hopeful things. And the next day’s guns

Nor any line-pangs ever quite could blot out

That strangely beautiful entry to war’s rout;

Candles they gave us, precious and shared over-rations—
Ulysses⁵ found little more in his wanderings without doubt.
15 “David of the White Rock”, the “Slumber Song” so soft, and that Beautiful tune to which roguish words by Welsh pit boys
Are sung—but never more beautiful than there under the guns’ noise.

1919-20 1982

ISAAC R O S E N B E R G

1890-1918

Break of Day in the Trenches

The darkness crumbles away.

It is the same old druid¹ Time as ever,

Only a live thing leaps my hand,

A queer sardonic rat,

5 As I pull the parapet’s² poppy

To stick behind my ear.

Droll rat, they would shoot you if they knew

Your cosmopolitan sympathies.

Now you have touched this English hand

io You will do the same to a German

Soon, no doubt, if it be your pleasure

To cross the sleeping green between.

It seems you inwardly grin as you pass

Strong eyes, fine limbs, haughty athletes,

15 Less chanced than you for life,

Bonds to the whims of murder,

Sprawled in the bowels of the earth,

The torn fields of France.

What do you see in our eyes
20 At the shrieking iron and flame
Hurled through still heavens?

What quaver—what heart aghast?

5. Or Odysseus, the hero of Homer's Odyssey, who 1. Member of an ancient Celtic order of priest-spent ten years wandering on his way home after magicians.

the Trojan War. 2. Wall protecting a trench in World War I.

1 3 7 4 / I S A A C R O S E N B E R G

Poppies whose roots are in man's veins

Drop, and are ever dropping;

25 But mine in my ear is safe—

Just a little white with the dust.

June 1916 1922

Louse Hunting

Nudes—stark and glistening,

Yelling in lurid glee. Grinning faces

And raging limbs

Whirl over the floor one fire.

5 For a shirt verminously busy

Yon soldier tore from his throat, with oaths

Godhead might shrink at, but not the lice.

And soon the shirt was aflame

Over the candle he'd lit while we lay.

io Then we all sprang up and stript

To hunt the verminous brood.

Soon like a demons' pantomime

The place was raging.

See the silhouettes agape,

15 See the gibbering shadows
Mixed with the battled arms on the wall.
See gargantuan hooked fingers
Pluck in supreme flesh
To smutch supreme littleness.
20 See the merry limbs in hot Highland fling'
Because some wizard vermin
Charmed from the quiet this revel
When our ears were half lulled
By the dark music
25 Blown from Sleep's trumpet.
1917 1922

Dead Man's Dump

The plunging limbers⁴ over the shattered track
Racketed with their rusty freight,
Struck out like many crowns of thorns,
And the rusty stakes like sceptres old
5 To stay the flood of brutish men
Upon our brothers dear.

3. Scottish dance.

4. Two-wheeled vehicles for pulling guns or caissons (ammunition wagons).

DEAD MAN 'S DUMP / 1 3 7 5

The wheels lurched over sprawled dead
But pained them not, though their bones crunched,
Their shut mouths made no moan,
io They lie there huddled, friend and foeman,
Man born of man, and born of woman,

And shells go crying over them
From night till night and now.
Earth has waited for them
15 All the time of their growth
Fretting for their decay:
Now she has them at last!
In the strength of their strength
Suspended—stopped and held.
20 What fierce imaginings their dark souls lit
Earth! have they gone into you?
Somewhere they must have gone,
And flung on your hard back
Is their souls' sack,
25 Emptied of God-ancestral essences.
Who hurled them out? Who hurled?
None saw their spirits' shadow shake the grass,
Or stood aside for the half-used life to pass
Out of those doomed nostrils and the doomed mouth,
30 When the swift iron burning bee
Drained the wild honey of their youth.
What of us, who flung on the shrieking pyre,
Walk, our usual thoughts untouched,
Our lucky limbs as on ichor⁵ fed,
35 Immortal seeming ever?
Perhaps when the flames beat loud on us,
A fear may choke in our veins
And the startled blood may stop.
The air is loud with death,

40 The dark air spurts with fire
The explosions ceaseless are.
Timelessly now, some minutes past,
These dead strode time with vigorous life,
Till the shrapnel called “an end!”
45 But not to all. In bleeding pangs
Some borne on stretchers dreamed of home,
Dear things, war-blotted from their hearts.
A man’s brains splattered on
A stretcher-bearer’s face;
50 His shook shoulders slipped their load,
But when they bent to look again

5. In Greek mythology, the ethereal fluid flowing through the veins of the gods.

1 3 7 6 / H U G H M A C D I A R M I D

The drowning soul was sunk too deep
For human tenderness.
They left this dead with the older dead,
55 Stretched at the cross roads.
Burnt black by strange decay,
Their sinister faces lie
The lid over each eye,
The grass and coloured clay 60 More motion have than they,
Joined to the great sunk silences.
Here is one not long dead;
His dark hearing caught our far wheels,
And the choked soul stretched weak hands

65 To reach the living word the far wheels said,
The blood-dazed intelligence beating for light,
Crying through the suspense of the far torturing wheels
Swift for the end to break,
Or the wheels to break,
70 Cried as the tide of the world broke over his sight.
Will they come? Will they ever come?
Even as the mixed hoofs of the mules,
The quivering-bellied mules,
And the rushing wheels all mixed
75 With his tortured upturned sight,
So we crashed round the bend,
We heard his weak scream,
We heard his very last sound,
And our wheels grazed his dead face.

1917 1922

HUGH MACDIARMID

(CHRISTOPHER MURRAY GRIEVE)

1892-1978

From Lament for the Great Music

Yet there is no great problem in the world to-day

Except disease and death men cannot end

If no man tries to dominate another.

The struggle for material existence is over. It has been won.

5 The need for repressions and disciplines has passed.

The struggle for truth and that indescribable necessity,

Beauty, begins now, hampered by none of the lower needs.

L A M E N T F O R T H E G R E A T M u s i c / 1377

No one now needs live less or be less than his utmost.

And in the slow and devious development that has brought men to this stage

10 Scottish genius has played a foremost role. Yet I turn to
you,

For unselfish intellect rises like a perfume

Above the faults and follies of the world of will.

But for the excellence of the typical swift life no nation

Deserves to be remembered more than the sands of the sea.

15 I am only that Job¹ in feathers, a heron myself,

Gaunt and unsubstantial—yet immune to the vicissitudes

Other birds accept as a matter of course; impervious to the effects

Of even the wildest weather, no mean consideration in a country

like this;

And my appetite is not restricted to any particular fare.

20 Hence I am encountered in places far removed from one another

And widely different in an intimately topographical sense

—Spearing a rat at the mouth of a culvert at midnight

And bolting an eel on the seashore in the halflight of dawn—

Communal dweller yet lone hunter, lumbering yet swift and sustained flier,

25 The usual steely expression of my eyes does not flatter me;

Few birds perhaps have so successfully solved

The problem of existence as my grey lanky self

That in light or darkness, wet or shine, subsists

By a combination of alertness, patience, and passivity.

30 A kind of Caolite mac Ronain² too; but it takes

All my wits in Scotland to-day.

This is the darkness where you have been; and have left

I think forever. It is the darkness from which nothing is cast out,

No loss, no wanton pain, no disease, no insanity,

35 None of the unripe intelligence of so-called dead nature,

Abortive attempts of nature to reflect itself.

All the unintelligible burden that alone leads to the height

Where it seems that extremes meet and I could reach you

*i bh-fogus do dhul ar neamh-nidh, with a leim eanamhail.*³

40 In this depth that I dare not leave

I who am no dilettante of chaos and find

No bitter gratification in the contemplation of ultimate

Incoherence

Know that the world is at any given moment anything it may be called

And even more difficult to group round any central character,

45 Yet it is out of this aimless dispersion, all these zig-zagging efforts,

All this disorderly growth, that the ideal of an epoch ends

By disentangling itself. Myriads of human activities

Are scattered in all directions by the indifferent forces

1. Biblical character who has come to represent birds from the Erne, two cormorants from the patience in adversity.

Cliannth, two foxes from Slieve Gullion, and the

2. "The grey spare swift runner, he who saved rest)” [MacDiarmid’s note].

Fionn once by that wonderful feat of gathering

3. Birdlike leap (Gaelic). I bh-fogus do dhul ar

couples of all the wild beasts and birds of Ireland

neamh-nidh: on the confines of vanishing (Gaelic).

(a ram and a crimson sheep from Inis, two water-

1 3 7 8 / H U G H M A C D I A R M I D

Of self-interest, passion, crime, madness—but out of their number

50 Some few of these activities are endowed with a little constancy

By the pure in heart, for reasons which seem to respond

To the most elementary designs of the spirit.

Civilisation, culture, all the good in the world

Depends ultimately on the existence of a few men of good will.

55 The perspective will converge upon them yet.

I dare not leave this dark and distracted scene.

I believe in the necessary and unavoidable responsibility of
man

And in the ineluctable certainty of the resurrection

And know that the mind of man creates no ideas

60 Though it is ideas alone that create.

Mind is the organ through which the Universe reaches

Such consciousness of itself as is possible now, and I must not brood

On the intermittence of genius, the way consciousness varies

Or declines, as in Scotland here, till it seems

65 Heaven itself may be only the best that is feasible

For most people, but a sad declension from music like yours.
Yes, I am prepared to see the Heavens open
And find the celestial music poor by comparison.
Yet my duty is here. It is now the duty of the Scottish genius 70 Which has provided the economic freedom for it
To lead in the abandonment of creeds and moral compromises
Of every sort and to commence to express the unity of life
By confounding the curse of short-circuited thought Circumscribing consciousness, for that is the thought 75 Of compromise, the medium of the time-server.
This must be done to lead men to cosmic consciousness
And as it cannot be quick, except on occasion
And that the creative instant, the moment of divine realisation,
When the self is lit up by its own inner light
so Caused in the self by its intensity of thought Possibly over a long period, it must be thought of as a craft
In which the consummation of the idea, not in analysis but in synthesis,
Must be the subject of the object—life.
Wherefore I cannot take the bird-like leap to you 85 Though well I know that: “He that can endure
To follow with allegiance a fallen lord
Does conquer him that did his master conquer.”⁴
I dare not leap to you now. But after all since I cannot believe
You will ever be really for everyone or even for many 90 And are likely to pursue in the hereafter
A separate destiny from theirs—or simply because

I long to hear the great pipers play their great music themselves.

And they all dead (save one) centuries before I was born,
And have one glimpse of my beloved Scotland yet

95 As the land I have dreamt of where the supreme values
Which the people recognise are states of mind

4. Shakespeare, Antony and Cleopatra 3.13.42—44.

A N O T H E R E P I T A P H O N A N A R M Y O F M E R
C E N A R I E S / 1 3 7 9

Their ruling passion the attainment of higher consciousness,
And their actual rulers those in whom they find,
Or think they do, the requisite knowledge for such attainments

100 And where one is not required to believe anything

But even warned of the dangers of doing so

Except with infinite qualifications and care,

My duty done, I will try to follow you on the last day of the world,

And pray I may see you all standing shoulder to shoulder

105 With Patrick Mor MacCrimmon and Duncan Ban MacCrimmon in the centre

In the hollow⁵ at Boreraig or in front of Dunvegan Castle

Or on the lip of the broken graves in Kilmuir Kirkyard⁶

While, the living stricken ghastly in the eternal light

And the rest of the dead all risen blue-faced from their graves

no (Though, the pipes to your hand, you will be once more Perfectly at ease, and as you were in your prime)

All ever born crowd the islands and the West Coast of Scotland

Which has standing room for them all, and the air curdled with angels,

And everywhere that feeling seldom felt on the earth before us Save in the hearts of parents or in youth untouched by tragedy

That in its very search for personal experience often found
A like impersonality and self-forgetfulness,

And you playing: "Farewell to Scotland, and the rest of the Earth,"

The only fit music there can be for that day

120 —And I will leap then and hide behind one of you,

*Us Caismeachd phiob-mora bras shroiceadh am puirt.*⁷

Look! Is that only the setting sun again?

Or a piper coming from far away?

1934

Another Epitaph on an Army of Mercenaries⁸

It is a God-damned lie to say that these

Saved, or knew, anything worth any man's pride.

They were professional murderers and they took

Their blood money and impious risks and died.

5 In spite of all their kind some elements of worth

With difficulty persist here and there on earth.

1935

5. I.e., the pipers' hollow where the students at the

7. While the notes of the great pipes shrilly college of the MacCrimmons (1500-1800) prac-sounded out their cries (Gaelic); from "Charles ticed. Ten generations of MacCrimmons were the Son of James," by the Scottish poet Alasdair hereditary pipers of MacLeod, whose seat is at MacMhaighstir Alasdair (1695-1770).

Dunvegan Castle in the Isle of Skye. Boreraig was

8. “In reply to A. E. Housman’s” [MacDiarmid’s where the MacCrimmons lived.

note]. See A. E. Housman’s poem “Epitaph on an 6. Near Dunvegan.

Army of Mercenaries” (p. 1180).

1 3 8 0 / H U G H M A C D I A R M I D

From In Memoriam James Joyce

*We Must Look at the Harebell*⁹

We must look at the harebell as if

We had never seen it before.

Remembrance gives an accumulation of satisfaction

Yet the desire for change is very strong in us

5 And change is in itself a recreation.

To those who take any pleasure

In flowers, plants, birds, and the rest

An ecological change is recreative.

(Come. Climb with me. Even the sheep are different

10 And of new importance.

The coarse-fleeced, hardy Herdwick,

The Hampshire Down, artificially fed almost from birth,

And butcher-fat from the day it is weaned,

The Lincoln-Longwool, the biggest breed in England,

15 With the longest fleece, and the Southdown

Almost the smallest—and between them thirty other breeds,

Some whitefaced, some black,

Some with horns and some without,

Some long-wooled, some short-wooled,
20 In England where the men, and women too,
Are almost as interesting as the sheep.)
Everything is different, everything changes,
Except for the white bedstraw which climbs all the way
Up from the valleys to the tops of the high passes
25 The flowers are all different and more precious Demanding more search and particularity of vision.
Look! Here and there a pinguicula¹ eloquent of the Alps
Still keeps a purple-blue flower
On the top of its straight and slender stem.
30 Bog-asphodel, deep-gold, and comely in form,
The queer, almost diabolical, sundew,
And when you leave the bog for the stag moors and the rocks
The parsley fern—a lovelier plant
Than even the proud *Osmunda Regalis*²—
35 Flourishes in abundance
Showing off oddly contrasted fronds
From the cracks of the lichened stones.
It is pleasant to find the books
Describing it as “very local.”
40 Here is a change indeed!
The universal is the particular.

1955

9. A blue flower, with bell-shaped blossom, that sticky liquid to catch insects, grows wild in Scotland. 2. The flowering, or “royal,” fern.

1. The butterwort, a small herb that secretes a

1 3 8 1

ARCHIBALD MACLEISH

1892-1982

Ars Poetica¹

A poem should be palpable and mute

As a globed fruit,

Dumb

As old medallions to the thumb,

5 Silent as the sleeve-worn stone

Of casement ledges where the moss has grown—

A poem should be wordless

As the flight of birds.

A poem should be motionless in time

10 As the moon climbs,

Leaving, as the moon releases

Twig by twig the night-entangled trees,

Leaving, as the moon behind the winter leaves,

Memory by memory the mind—

15 A poem should be motionless in time

As the moon climbs.

A poem should be equal to:

Not true.

For all the history of grief

20 An empty doorway and a maple leaf.

For love

The leaning grasses and two lights above the sea—

A poem should not mean

But be.

1926

1. The art of poetry (Latin); title of a treatise on poetics by the Roman poet Horace (65—8 b.c.e.).

1 3 8 2 / E D N A S T . V I N C E N T M I L L A Y

The Snowflake Which Is Now and Hence Forever

Will it last? he says.

Is it a masterpiece?

Will generation after generation

Turn with reverence to the page?

5 Birdseye scholar of the frozen fish,

What would he make of the sole, clean, clear

Leap of the salmon that has disappeared?

To be, yes!—whether they like it or not!

But not to last when leap and water are forgotten,

10 A plank of standard pinkness in the dish.

They also live

Who swerve and vanish in the river.²

1952

E D N A S T . V I N C E N T M I L L A Y

1892-1950

First Fig1

My candle burns at both ends;

It will not last the night;

But ah, my foes, and oh, my friends—

It gives a lovely light!

1920

Second Fig2

Safe upon the solid rock the ugly houses stand:

Come and see my shining palace built upon the sand!

1920

2. An allusion to Milton, “When I Consider How thorns, or figs of thistles?”

My Light Is Spent” (p. 418), a sonnet that con-

2. See the preceding note and Matthew 7.26—27, cludes, “They also serve who only stand and wait.”

referring to “a foolish man, which built his house

1. From A Few Figs from Thistles, a title derived upon the sand.”

from Matthew 7.16: “Do m e n gather grapes of

[I , B E I N G B O R N A W O M A N A N D D I S T R E S S E D] / 1 3 8 3

Euclid Alone Has Looked on Beauty Bare

Euclid³ alone has looked on Beauty bare.

Let all who prate of Beauty hold their peace,

And lay them prone upon the earth and cease

To ponder on themselves, the while they stare

5 At nothing, intricately drawn nowhere

In shapes of shifting lineage; let geese

Gabble and hiss, but heroes seek release

From dusty bondage into luminous air.

O blinding hour, O holy, terrible day,

10 When first the shaft into his vision shone

Of light anatomized! Euclid alone

Has looked on Beauty bare. Fortunate they

Who, though once only and then but far away,

Have heard her massive sandal set on stone.

1 9 2 0

Spring

To what purpose, April, do you return again?

Beauty is not enough.

You can no longer quiet me with the redness

Of little leaves opening stickily.

5 I know what I know.

The sun is hot on my neck as I observe

The spikes of the crocus.

The smell of the earth is good.

It is apparent that there is no death,

io But what does that signify?

Not only under ground are the brains of men

Eaten by maggots.

Life in itself

Is nothing,

is An empty cup, a flight of uncarpeted stairs.

It is not enough that yearly, down this hill,

April

Comes like an idiot, babbling and strewing flowers.

1 9 2 1

[I, Being Born a Woman and Distressed]

I, being born a woman and distressed

By all the needs and notions of my kind,

3. Greek mathematician (ca. 300 B.C .L.), best-known for his treatise on geometry.

1 3 8 4 / E D N A S T . V I N C E N T M I L L A Y

Am urged by your propinquity⁰ to find nearness

Your person fair, and feel a certain zest

5 To bear your body's weight upon my breast:
So subtly is the fume of life designed,
To clarify the pulse and cloud the mind,
And leave me once again undone, possessed.
Think not for this, however, the poor treason
10 Of my stout blood against my staggering brain,
I shall remember you with love, or season
My scorn with pity,—let me make it plain:
I find this frenzy insufficient reason
For conversation when we meet again.

1923

The Buck in the Snow

White sky, over the hemlocks bowed with snow,
Saw you not at the beginning of evening the antlered buck and his doe
Standing in the apple-orchard? I saw them. I saw them
suddenly go,
Tails up, with long leaps lovely and slow,
5 Over the stone-wall into the wood of hemlocks bowed with snow.
Now lies he here, his wild blood scalding the snow.
How strange a thing is death, bringing to his knees, bringing to his antlers
The buck in the snow.
How strange a thing,—a mile away by now, it may be,
10 Under the heavy hemlocks that as the moments pass
Shift their loads a little, letting fall a feather of snow—

Life, looking out attentive from the eyes of the doe.

1928

I Dreamed I Moved among the Elysian Fields⁴

I dreamed I moved among the Elysian fields,
In converse with sweet women long since dead;
And out of blossoms which that meadow yields
I wove a garland for your living head.

⁵ Danae,⁵ that was the vessel for a day
Of golden Jove, I saw, and at her side,
Whom Jove the Bull desired and bore away,
Europa⁶ stood, and the Swan's featherless bride.⁷
All these were mortal women, yet all these

4. The abode of the happy dead in the Greek by descending upon her as a shower of gold, mythological underworld. 6. Carried away by Jove in the form of a bull.

5. Whom Jove (Zeus), the supreme god, seduced 7. Leda, raped by Jove in the form of a swan.

ARMENONVILLE / 1385

10 Above the ground had had a god for guest;
Freely I walked beside them and at ease,
Addressing them, by them again addressed,
And marveled nothing, for remembering you,
Wherefore I was among them well I knew.

1930

Ragged Island

There, there where those black spruces crowd
To the edge of the precipitous cliff,
Above your boat, under the eastern wall of the island;
And no wave breaks; as if

5 All had been done, and long ago, that needed
Doing; and the cold tide, unimpeded
By shoal or shelving ledge, moves up and down,
Instead of in and out;
And there is no driftwood there, because there is no beach;
10 Clean cliff going down as deep as clear water can reach;
No driftwood, such as abounds on the roaring shingle,⁸
To be hefted home, for fires in the kitchen stove;
Barrels, banged ashore about the boiling outer harbor;
Lobster-buoys, on the eel-grass of the sheltered cove:
15 There, thought unbraids itself, and the mind becomes single.

There you row with tranquil oars, and the ocean
Shows no scar from the cutting of your placid keel;
Care becomes senseless there; pride and promotion
Remote; you only look; you scarcely feel.

20 Even adventure, with its vital uses,
Is aimless ardour now; and thrift is waste.
Oh, to be there, under the silent spruces,
Where the wide, quiet evening darkens without haste
Over a sea with death acquainted, yet forever chaste.

1954

Armenonville⁹

By the lake at Armenonville in the Bois de Boulogne Small begonias had been set in the embankment, both pink and red;

With polished leaf and brittle, juicy stem;
They covered the embankment; there were wagon-loads of
them,

5 Charming and neat, gay colours in the warm shade.
8. Stones on a seashore.
9. Pavilion in the park of the Bois de Boulogne, in Paris.

1 3 8 6 / W I L F R E D O W E N

We had preferred a table near the lake, half out of view,
Well out of hearing, for a voice not raised above
A low, impassioned question and its low reply.
We both leaned forward with our elbows on the table, and you
10 Watched my mouth while I answered, and it made me shy.
I looked about, but the waiters knew we were in love,
And matter-of-factly left us blissfully alone.

There swam across the lake, as I looked aside, avoiding Your eyes for a moment, there swam from under the pink and red

begonias

15 A small creature; I thought it was a water-rat; it swam very well,

In complete silence, and making no ripples at all

Hardly; and when suddenly I turned again to you,

Aware that you were speaking, and perhaps had been speaking
for some time,

I was aghast at my absence, for truly I did not know

20 Whether you had been asking or telling.

1954

W I L F R E D O W E N

1893-1918

Anthem for Doomed Youth

What passing-bells for these who die as cattle?1

—Only the monstrous anger of the guns.
 Only the stuttering rifles' rapid rattle
 Can patter out their hasty orisons.⁰ prayers
 5 No mockeries now for them; no prayers nor bells;
 Nor any voice of mourning save the choirs,—
 The shrill, demented choirs of wailing shells;
 And bugles calling for them from sad shires.⁰ counties
 What candles may be held to speed them all?
 io Not in the hands of boys but in their eyes
 Shall shine the holy glimmers of goodbyes.
 The pallor of girls' brows shall be their pall;
 Their flowers the tenderness of patient minds,
 And each slow dusk a drawing-down of blinds.
 September-October 1917 1920

1. Owen was probably responding to the anonymous, while one of the youngest, almost as these mous prefatory note to Poems of Today (1916), of words are written, has gone singing to lay down his which he possessed a copy: "This book has been life for his country's cause... . There is no arbitrary compiled in order that boys and girls, already pertrary isolation of one theme from another; they haps familiar with the great classics of the English mingle and interpenetrate throughout, to the speech, may also know something of the newer music of Pan's flute, and of Love's viol, and the poetry of their own day. Most of the writers are bugle-call of Endeavour, and the passing-bells of living, and the rest are still vivid memories among Death.”

INSENSIBILITY / 1387

Dulce Et Decorum Est²

Bent double, like old beggars under sacks,
Knock-kneed, coughing like hags, we cursed through sludge,
Till on the haunting flares we turned our backs
And towards our distant rest began to trudge.
5 Men marched asleep. Many had lost their boots
But limped on, blood-shod. All went lame; all blind;
Drunk with fatigue; deaf even to the hoots
Of tired, outstripped Five-Nines³ that dropped behind.
Gas! GAS! Quick, boys!—An ecstasy of fumbling,
10 Fitting the clumsy helmets just in time;
But someone still was yelling out and stumbling,
And flound'ring like a man in fire or lime ...
Dim, through the misty panes⁴ and thick green light,
As under a green sea, I saw him drowning.
15 In all my dreams, before my helpless sight,
He plunges at me, guttering, choking, drowning.
If in some smothering dreams you too could pace
Behind the wagon that we flung him in,
And watch the white eyes writhing in his face,
20 His hanging face, like a devil's sick of sin;
If you could hear, at every jolt, the blood
Come gargling from the froth-corrupted lungs,
Obscene as cancer, bitter as the cud
Of vile, incurable sores on innocent tongues,—

25 My friend,⁵ you would not tell with such high zest
To children ardent for some desperate glory,
The old Lie: Dulce et decorum est
Pro patria mori.

October 1917-March 1918

1920

Insensibility

I

Happy are men who yet before they are killed
Can let their veins run cold.

Whom no compassion fleers⁰

mocks

Or makes their feet

2. “The famous Latin tag [from Horace, Odes

4. Of the gas mask’s celluloid window.

3.2.13] means, of course, It is sweet and meet to

5. Jessie Pope, to whom the poem was originally die for one’s country. Sweet! And decorous!”

to have been dedicated, was the author of numer-

[Owen’s letter to his mother, October 16, 1917],

ous prewar children’s books as well as Jessie Pope’s

3. I.e., 5.9-caliber shells.

War Poems (1915).

1 3 8 8 /

W I L F R E D O W E N

5 Sore on the alleys cobbled⁶ with their brothers.

The front line withers.

But they are troops who fade, not flowers,

For poets' tearful fooling:

Men, gaps for filling:

10 Losses, who might have fought

Longer; but no one bothers.

2

And some cease feeling

Even themselves or for themselves.

Dullness "best solves

15 The tease and doubt of shelling,

And Chance's strange arithmetic

Comes simpler than the reckoning of their shilling.⁷

They keep no check on armies' decimation.

3

Happy are these who lose imagination:

20 They have enough to carry with ammunition.

Their spirit drags no pack.

Their old wounds, save with cold, can not more ache.

Having seen all things red,

Their eyes are rid

25 Of the hurt of the colour of blood for ever.

And terror's first constriction over,

Their hearts remain small-drawn.

Their senses in some scorching cautery of battle

Now long since ironed,

30 Can laugh among the dying, unconcerned.

4

Happy the soldier home, with not a notion

How somewhere, every dawn, some men attack,

And many sighs are drained.

Happy the lad whose mind was never trained:

35 His days are worth forgetting more than not.

He sings along the march

Which we march taciturn, because of dusk,

The long, forlorn, relentless trend

From larger day to huger night.

6. "They are dying again at Beaumont Hamel, 7. A "King's shilling" was traditionally given to the which already in 1916 was cobbled with skulls" newly established soldier by the recruiting officer.

[Owen's letter to his sister, March 1918],

S T R A N G E M E E T I N G / 1 3 8 9

5

40 We wise,8 who with a thought besmirch

Blood over all our soul,

How should we see our task

But through his blunt and lashless eyes?

Alive, he is not vital overmuch;

45 Dying, not mortal overmuch;

Nor sad, nor proud,

Nor curious at all.

He cannot tell

Old men's placidity from his.

50 But cursed are dullards whom no cannon stuns,

That they should be as stones.

Wretched are they, and mean

With paucity that never was simplicity.

By choice they made themselves immune

55 To pity and whatever moans in man
Before the last sea and the hapless stars;
Whatever mourns when many leave these shores;
Whatever shares
The eternal reciprocity of tears.

1 9 1 7 - 1 8 1 9 2 0

Strange Meeting⁹

It seemed that out of battle I escaped
Down some profound dull tunnel, long since scooped
Through granites which titanic wars had groined.⁰ grooved
Yet also there encumbered sleepers groaned,
5 Too fast in thought or death to be bestirred.
Then, as I probed them, one sprang up, and stared
With piteous recognition in fixed eyes,
Lifting distressful hands, as if to bless.
And by his smile, I knew that sullen hall,— io By his dead smile I knew we stood in Hell.
With a thousand pains that vision's face was grained;
Yet no blood reached there from the upper ground,
And no guns thumped, or down the flues made moan.

8. I.e., poets.

Seemed like some brothers on a journey wide

9. Cf. Shelley, The Revolt of Islam, lines 1 8 2 8 -

Gone forth, whom now strange meeting did befall

32:

In a strange land.

And one whose spear had pierced me, leaned beside,

The speaker of Owen's poem imagines his victim a

With quivering lips and humid eyes;—and all German poet.

1390 / WILFRED OWEN

“Strange friend,” I said, “here is no cause to mourn.”

15 “None,” said that other, “save the undone years,
The hopelessness. Whatever hope is yours,

Was my life also; I went hunting wild

After the wildest beauty in the world,

Which lies not calm in eyes, or braided hair,

20 But mocks the steady running of the hour,

And if it grieves, grieves richer than here.

For by my glee might many men have laughed.
d.

And of my weeping something had been left,

Which must die now. I mean the truth untold,

25 The pity of war, the pity war distilled.¹

Now men will go content with what we spoiled,

Or, discontent, boil bloody, and be spilled.

They will be swift with swiftness of the tigress.

None will break ranks, though nations trek from progress.

30 Courage was mine, and I had mystery,

Wisdom was mine, and I had mastery:

To miss the march of this retreating world

Into vain citadels that are not walled.

Then, when much blood had clogged their chariot-wheels,
35 I would go up and wash them
from sweet wells,

Even with truths that lie too deep for taint.

I would have poured my spirit without stint

B u t n o t t h r o u g h w o u n d s ; n o t o n t h e c e s s 2 o f war.

F o r e h e a d s o f m e n h a v e b l e d w h e r e n o w o u n d s w e r e .

40 “I a m t h e e n e m y y o u k i l l e d , m y f r i e n d .

I k n e w y o u i n t h i s d a r k : f o r s o y o u f r o w n e d

Y e s t e r d a y t h r o u g h m e a s y o u j a b b e d a n d k i l l e d .

I p a r r i e d ; b u t m y h a n d s w e r e l o a t h a n d c o l d .

L e t u s s l e e p n o w”

J a n u a r y — M a r c h 1 9 1 8

1 9 2 0

F u t i l i t y

M o v e h i m i n t o t h e s u n —

G e n t l y i t s t o u c h a w o k e h i m o n c e ,

A t h o m e , w h i s p e r i n g o f f i e l d s h a l f - s o w n .

A l w a y s i t w o k e h i m , e v e n i n F r a n c e ,

5 U n t i l t h i s m o r n i n g a n d t h i s s n o w .

I f a n y t h i n g m i g h t r o u s e h i m n o w

T h e k i n d o l d s u n w i l l k n o w .

T h i n k h o w i t w a k e s t h e s e e d s —

W o k e o n c e t h e c l a y s o f a c o l d s t a r .

1. “My subject is War, and the pity of War. The

2. Luck, as in the phrase had cess to you (may evil Poetry is in the pity” [Owen’s draft preface to his befall you); also muck or excrement, as in the word poems].

cesspool.

O N E P E R F E C T R O S E / 1 3 9 1

10 A r e l i m b s , s o d e a r a c h i e v e d , a r e s i d e s

Full-nerved, still warm, too hard to stir?

Was it for this the clay grew tall?

—O what made fatuous sunbeams toil

To break earth's sleep at all?

May 1918 1920

D O R O T H Y P A R K E R

1893-1967

Unfortunate Coincidence

By the time you swear you're his,

Shivering and sighing,

And he vows his passion is Infinite, undying—

5 Lady, make a note of this:

One of you is lying.

1926

Resume

Razors pain you;

Rivers are damp;

Acids stain you;

And drugs cause cramp.

5 Guns aren't lawful;

Nooses give;

Gas smells awful;

You might as well live.

1926

One Perfect Rose

A single flow'r he sent me, since we met.

All tenderly his messenger he chose;

Deep-hearted, pure, with scented dew still wet—

One perfect rose.

5 I knew the language of the floweret;

“My fragile leaves,” it said, “his heart enclose.”

Love long has taken for his amulet

One perfect rose.

1 3 9 2 / E . E . C U M M I N G S

W h y i s i t n o o n e e v e r s e n t m e y e t

10 O n e p e r f e c t l i m o u s i n e , d o y o u s u p p o s e ?

A h n o , i t ' s a l w a y s j u s t m y l u c k t o g e t

O n e p e r f e c t r o s e .

1 9 2 6

E . E . C U M M I N G S

1894-1962

All in green went my love riding

A l l i n g r e e n w e n t m y l o v e r i d i n g

o n a g r e a t h o r s e o f g o l d

i n t o t h e s i l v e r d a w n .

f o u r l e a n h o u n d s c r o u c h e d l o w a n d s m i l i n g 5 t h e m e r r y d e e r r a n b e f o r e .

F l e e t e r b e t h e y t h a n d a p p l e d d r e a m s t h e s w i f t s w e e t d e e r

t h e r e d r a r e d e e r .

F o u r r e d r o e b u c k a t a w h i t e w a t e r

i o t h e c r u e l b u g l e s a n g b e f o r e .

H o r n a t h i p w e n t m y l o v e r i d i n g

r i d i n g t h e e c h o d o w n

i n t o t h e s i l v e r d a w n .

four lean hounds crouched low and smiling
15 the level meadows ran before.

Softer bethey than slippered sleep

the lean lithe deer

the fleet flown deer.

Four fleet does at a gold valley

20 the famished arrow sang before.

Bow at belt went my love riding

riding the mountain down

into the silver dawn.

four lean hounds crouched low and smiling
25 the sheer peaks ran before.

Paler bethey than a daunting death

the sleek slim deer

the tall tense deer.

SPRING is LIKE A PERHAPS HAND / 1393

Four tall stags at a green mountain

30 the lucky hunter sang before.

All in green went my love riding

on a great horse of gold

into the silver dawn.

four lean hounds crouched low and smiling

35 my heart fell dead before.

1923

the Cambridge ladies who live in furnished souls

the Cambridge ladies who live in furnished souls

are unbeautiful and have comfortable minds

(also, with the church's protestant blessings daughters, unscented shapeless spirited)

5 they believe in Christ and Longfellow,¹ both dead, are invariably interested in so many things—
at the present writing one still finds delighted fingers knitting for the is it Poles?
perhaps. While permanent faces coyly bandy io scandal of Mrs. N and Professor D
. . . . the Cambridge ladies do not care,above Cambridge if sometimes in its box of sky lavender and cornerless,the moon rattles like a fragment of angry candy

1 9 2 3

Spring is like a perhaps hand
Spring is like a perhaps hand (which comes carefully out of Nowhere)arranging a window,into which people look(while 5 people stare arranging and changing placing carefully there a strange thing and a known thing here)and changing everything carefully io spring is like a perhaps Hand in a window (carefully to

1. For most of his life, the American poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (1807—1882; see pp. 951—57) lived in Cambridge, Massachusetts, where for two decades he taught modern languages at Harvard University.

1 3 9 4 / E . E . C U M M I N G S

and from moving New and Old things, while 15 people stare carefully moving a perhaps fraction of flower here placing an inch of air there)and without breaking anything.

1925

“next to of course god america i “next to of course god america i love you land of the pilgrims’ and so forth oh say can you see by the dawn’s early my country ‘tis of centuries come and go 5 and are no more what of it we should worry in every language even deaf and dumb thy sons acclaim your glorious name by gorry by jingo² by gee by gosh by gum
why talk of beauty what could be more beaut-10 iful than these heroic happy dead who rushed like lions to the roaring slaughter they did not stop to think they died instead then shall the voice of liberty be muffled”

He spoke. And drank rapidly a glass of water 1926

since feeling is first
since feeling is first
who pays any attention
to the syntax of things

will never wholly kiss you;
5 wholly to be a fool while Spring is in the world
my blood approves,
and kisses are a better fate
than wisdom
io lady i swear by all flowers. Don't cry —the best gesture of my brain is less than your eyelids' flutter which says

2. "Jingo" is both part of a mild oath and a reference to jingoism: extreme nationalism, especially as demonstrated in a belligerent foreign policy.

MAY I F E E L S A I D H E / 1 3 9 5

we are for each other:then laugh,leaning back in my arms 15 for life's not a paragraph
And death i think is no parenthesis
1 9 2 6

somewhere i have never travelled,gladly beyond
somewhere i have never travelled,gladly beyond any experience,your eyes have their silence:
in your most frail gesture are things which enclose me,
or which i cannot touch because they are too near 5 your slightest look easily will uncloze me though i have closed myself as fingers,
you open always petal by petal myself as Spring opens (touching skilfully,mysteriously)her first rose or if your wish be to close me,i and io my life will shut very beautifully,suddenly,

as when the heart of this flower imagines
the snow carefully everywhere descending;
nothing which we are to perceive in this world equals
the power of your intense fragility: whose texture 15 compels me with the colour of its countries, rendering death and forever with each breathing
(i do not know what it is about you that closes and opens; only something in me understands the voice of your eyes is deeper than all roses)
20 nobody, not even the rain, has such small hands
1 9 3 1

may i feel said he
may i feel said he (i'll squeal said she just once said he)
it's fun said she 5 (may i touch said he how much said she a lot said he)
why not said she

1 3 9 6 / E . E . C U M M I N G S

(let's go said he
10 not too far said she what's too far said he where you are said she) may i stay said he (which way said she 15 like this said he

if you kiss said she may i move said he is it love said she) if you're willing said he 20 (but you're killing said she but it's life said he but your wife said she now said he)

ow said she 25 (tiptop said he don't stop said she oh no said he)

go slow said she (cccome?said he 30 ummm said she) you're divinelsaid he (you are Mine said she)

1 9 3 5

anyone lived in a pretty how town
anyone lived in a pretty how town (with up so floating many bells down) spring summer autumn winter
he sang his didn't he danced his did.
5 Women and men(both little and small) cared for anyone not at all they sowed their isn't they reaped their same sun moon stars rain
children guessed(but only a few

io and down they forgot as up they grew autumn winter spring summer)

that noone loved him more by more

when by now and tree by leaf

she laughed his joy she cried his grief

WHO ARE YOU, LITTLE I / 1397

15 bird by snow and stir by still anyone's any was all to her someone's married their everyone's laughed their cryings and did their dance

(sleep wake hope and then) they

20 said their neverst they slept their dream

stars rain sun moon

(and only the snow can begin to explain

how children are apt to forget to remember with ups of floating many bells down)

25 one day anyone died i guess

(and no one stooped to kiss his face)

busy folk buried them side by side little by little and was by was all by all and deep by deep

30 and more by more they dream their sleep

no one and anyone earth by april wish by spirit and if by yes.

Women and men (both doing and ding)

summer autumn winter spring

35 reaped their sowing and went their came

sun moon stars rain

1940

who are you, little i

who are you, little i

(five or six years old) peering from some high

window; at the gold

5 of november sunset

(and feeling: that if day

has to become night

this is a beautiful way)

1963

1398

JEAN T O O M E R

1894-1967

FROM CANE 1

Reapers

Black reapers with the sound of steel on stones

Are sharpening scythes. I see them place the hones

In their hip-pockets as a thing that's done,

And start their silent swinging, one by one.

5 Black horses drive a mower through the weeds,

And there, a field rat, startled, squealing bleeds,

His belly close to ground. I see the blade,

Blood-stained, continue cutting weeds and shade.

Face

Hair—

silver-gray,

like streams of stars,

Brows—
5 recurved canoes
quivered by the ripples blown by pain,
Her eyes—
mist of tears
condensing on the flesh below 10 And her channeled muscles are cluster grapes of sorrow purple in the evening sun
nearly ripe for worms.

Georgia Dusk

The sky, lazily disdaining to pursue
The setting sun, too indolent to hold
A lengthened tournament for flashing gold,
Passively darkens for night's barbecue,
5 A feast of moon and men and barking hounds,
An orgy for some genius of the South
With blood-hot eyes and cane-lipped scented mouth,
Surprised in making folksongs from soul sounds.

1. A collection—of fiction, drama, and poetry— D.C., it was partly inspired by the period in which that Toomer saw as a unified book not to be the urban Toomer, of black and white ancestry, excerpted. Set in Georgia and in Washington, worked in a school in Sparta, Georgia.

H A R V E S T S O N G / 1 3 9 9

The sawmill blows its whistle, buzz-saws stop,
10 And silence breaks the bud of knoll and hill,
Soft settling pollen where plowed lands fulfill
Their early promise of a bumper crop.

Smoke from the pyramidal sawdust pile
Curls up, blue ghosts of trees, tarrying low 15 Where only chips and stumps are left to show
The solid proof of former domicile.
Meanwhile, the men, with vestiges of pomp,
Race memories of king and caravan,
High-priests, an ostrich, and a juju-man,²
20 Go singing through the footpaths of the swamp.
Their voices rise . . . the pine trees are guitars,
Strumming, pine-needles fall like sheets of rain . . .
Their voices rise . . . the chorus of the cane
Is caroling a vesper to the stars . . .
25 O singers, resinous and soft your songs
Above the sacred whisper of the pines,
Give virgin lips to cornfield concubines,
Bring dreams of Christ to dusky cane-lipped throngs.
Portrait in Georgia
Hair—braided chestnut,
coiled like a lyncher's rope,
Eyes—fagots,⁰ bundles of sticks
Lips—old scars, or the first red blisters,
5 Breath—the last sweet scent of cane,
And her slim body, white as the ash
of black flesh after flame.

Harvest Song

I am a reaper whose muscles set at sundown. All my oats are cradled.
But I am too chilled, and too fatigued to bind them. And I hunger.

I crack a grain between my teeth. I do not taste it.

I have been in the fields all day. My throat is dry. I hunger.

5 My eyes are caked with dust of oatfields at harvest-time.

I am a blind man who stares across the hills, seeking stacked fields of other harvesters.

2. One who controls the magic associated with jujus, the fetishes or charms of West African peoples.

1 4 0 0 / R O B E R T G R A V E S

It would be good to see them . . . crook'd, split, and iron-ringed handles of the scythes. It would be good to see them, dust-caked and blind. I hunger.

(Dusk is a strange feared sheath their blades are dulled in.)

My throat is dry. And should I call, a cracked grain like the oats ...

eoho—

10 I fear to call. What should they hear me, and offer me their grain,

oats, or wheat, or corn? I have been in the fields all day. I fear could not taste it. I fear knowledge of my hunger.
I

My ears are caked with dust of oatfields at harvest-time.

I am a deaf man who strains to hear the calls of other harvesters

whose throats are also dry.

It would be good to hear their songs . . . reapers of the sweetstalked

cane, cutters of the corn . . . even though their throats cracked
and

the strangeness of their voices deafened me.

I hunger. My throat is dry. Now that the sun has set and I am chilled,
I fear to call. (Eoho, my brothers!) is I am a reaper. (Eoho!) All my oats are cradled. But I am too fatigued to bind them. And I hunger. I crack a grain. It has no taste to it.
My throat is dry ...
O my brothers, I beat my palms, still soft, against the stubble of my harvesting. (You beat your soft palms, too.) My pain is sweet.
Sweeter than the oats or wheat or corn. It will not bring me knowledge of my hunger.

1 9 2 3

R O B E R T G R A V E S

1895-1985

Love Without Hope

Love without hope, as when the young bird-catcher
Swept off his tall hat to the Squire's own daughter,
So let the imprisoned larks escape and fly
Singing about her head, as she rode by.

1 9 2 5

In Broken Images

He is quick, thinking in clear images;
I am slow, thinking in broken images.

W A R N I N G T O C H I L D R E N / 1 4 0 1

He becomes dull, trusting to his clear images;
I become sharp, mistrusting my broken images.
5 Trusting his images, he assumes their relevance;
Mistrusting my images, I question their relevance.

Assuming their relevance, he assumes the fact;
Questioning their relevance, I question the fact.
When the fact fails him, he questions his senses;
io When the fact fails me, I approve my senses.
He continues quick and dull in his clear images;
I continue slow and sharp in my broken images.
He in a new confusion of his understanding;
I in a new understanding of my confusion.

1 9 2 9

Warning to Children

Children, if you dare to think
Of the greatness, rareness, muchness,
Fewness of this precious only Endless world in which you say
5 You live, you think of things like this:
Blocks of slate enclosing dappled
Red and green, enclosing tawny
Yellow nets, enclosing white
And black acres of dominoes,
io Where a neat brown paper parcel Tempts you to untie the string.
In the parcel a small island,
On the island a large tree,
On the tree a husky fruit.
15 Strip the husk and pare the rind off:
In the kernel you will see
Blocks of slate enclosed by dappled
Red and green, enclosed by tawny

Yellow nets, enclosed by white
20 And black acres of dominoes,
Where the same brown paper parcel—
Children, leave the string alone!
For who dares undo the parcel
Finds himself at once inside it,
25 On the island, in the fruit,
Blocks of slate about his head,
Finds himself enclosed by dappled
Green and red, enclosed by yellow
Tawny nets, enclosed by black

1402 / ROBERT GRAVES

30 And white acres of dominoes,
With the same brown paper parcel
Still unopened on his knee.
And, if he then should dare to think
Of the fewness, muchness, rareness,
3s Greatness of this endless only Precious world in which he says
He lives — he then unties the string.

1929

The Persian Version

Truth-loving Persians do not dwell upon
The trivial skirmish fought near Marathon. 1
As for the Greek theatrical tradition
Which represents that summer 's expedition on 5 Not as a mere reconnaissance in force
By three brigades of foot and one of horse (Their left flank covered by some obsolete

Light craft detached from the main Persian fleet) But as a grandiose, ill-starred attempt io To conquer Greece — they treat it with cont empt; And only incidentally refute
Major Greek claims, by stressing what repu te The Persian monarch and the Persianna tion Won by this salutary demonstration:
is Despite a strong defence and adverse weath er All arms combined magnificently together.

1945

To Juan at the Winter Solstice²

There is one story and one story only
That will prove worth your telling,
Whether as learned bard or gifted child;³
To it all lines or lesser gauds⁴ belong
5 That startle with their shining Such common stories as they stray into.
Is it of trees you tell, their months and virtues,⁵
Or strange beasts that beset you,

1. The Rattle of Marathon (490 H.C.C.) was a deci-light to the north) is in many religions the birthday sive Greek victory over the Persians.

of the Sun Hero.

2. Graves's "grammar of poetic myth," The White

3. The ancient Celtic bard Taliesin, as a "gifted Goddess (1948), finds the only theme for true child," outmatched twenty-four experienced court poetry in the story of the life cycle of the Sun God, poets.

or Sun Hero, his marriage with the Goddess, and

4. The larger beads placed between the decades his inevitable death at her hands or by her command of “aves” in a Roman Catholic rosary (i.e., every mand. The poet’s son Juan was born on December eleventh bead).

21, 1945, one day before the winter solstice, which

5. Graves cites, in addition to Taliesin’s poem

(being the time when the sun gives least heat and

“The Rattle of the Trees,” an ancient Druidic “tree-

T o J U A N A T T H E W I N T E R S O L S T I C E / 1 4 0 3

Of birds that croak at you the Triple will?⁶

Or of the Zodiac and how slow it turns

Below the Boreal Crown,⁷

Prison of all true kings that ever reigned?

Water to water, ark again to ark,

From woman back to woman:

So each new victim treads unfalteringly

The never altered circuit of his fate,

Bringing twelve peers⁸ as witness

Both to his starry rise and starry fall.⁹

Or is it of the Virgin’s silver beauty,

All fish below the thighs?

She in her left hand bears a leafy quince;¹

When with her right she crooks a finger, smiling,

How may the King hold back?

Royally then he barter life for love.

Or of the undying snake from chaos hatched,

Whose coils contain the ocean,

Into whose chops with naked sword he springs,
Then in black water, tangled by the reeds,
Battles three days and nights,
To be spewed up beside her scalloped shore?²
Much snow is falling, winds roar hollowly,
The owl hoots from the elder,
Fear in your heart cries to the loving-cup:
Sorrow to sorrow as the sparks fly upward.
The log groans and confesses:³
There is one story and one story only.
Dwell on her graciousness, dwell on her smiling,
Do not forget what flowers
The great boar trampled down in ivy time.⁴
Her brow was creamy as the crested wave,
Her sea-grey eyes were wild⁵
But nothing promised that is not performed.

1 9 4 5

calendar” that describes the natural and magic the water.

properties of different trees and associates each

1. Two forms of the Goddess are Aphrodite, Greek with a different month or season.

goddess of love, whose emblem is the quince, and

6. The Goddess sometimes speaks through such

Rahab, the Hebraic sea goddess, who was depicted “prophetic” birds as the owl and eagle and has been with a fish’s tail.

called the Triple Goddess because of her threefold

2. The snake, Ophion, was created by the Goddess aspect as Goddess of the Underworld, Earth, and and mated with her. From their egg, the world was Sky.

hatched by the sun's rays. The king (or Solar Hero)

7. "Corona Borealis, . . . which in Thracian- must kill the snake to win the Goddess, but in Libyan mythology carried to Bronze Age Britain, October the snake (perhaps reincarnated as the was the purgatory where Solar Heroes went after boar of line 39) must kill the king.

death" [Graves's note]. The twelve signs of the

3. Cf. Job 5.7: "Man is born unto trouble, as the turning zodiac correspond to the twelve months. sparks fly upward." "The log is the Yule [or Christ-

8. Perhaps the twelve knights of King Arthur's mas] log, burned at the year's end" [Graves's note]. round table, Christ's twelve apostles, or the twelve

4. Aphrodite's lover, Adonis, was killed by a boar. signs of the zodiac.

5. Cf. Keats, "La Belle Dame sans Merci," line 16:

9. The king (or Solar Hero), reincarnated, reap- "And her eyes were wild" (p. 917).

appears at the winter solstice floating in an ark on

1 4 0 4 / E D M U N D B L U N D E N

The White Goddess⁶

All saints revile her, and all sober men

Ruled by the God Apollo's golden mean⁷—

In scorn of which we sailed to find her
In distant regions likeliest to hold her 5 Whom we desired above all things to know,
Sister of the mirage and echo.
It was a virtue not to stay,
To go our headstrong and heroic way
Seeking her out at the volcano's head,
10 Among pack ice, or where the track had faded
Beyond the cavern of the seven sleepers:⁸
Whose broad high brow was white as any leper's,
Whose eyes were blue, with rowan-berry lips,
With hair curled honey-coloured to white hips.
15 Green sap of Spring in the young wood a-stir
Will celebrate the Mountain Mother,
And every song-bird shout awhile for her;
But we are gifted, even in November
Rawest of seasons, with so huge a sense
20 Of her nakedly worn magnificence
We forget cruelty and past betrayal,
Heedless of where the next bright bolt may fall.

1 9 5 3

E D M U N D B L U N D E N

1896-1974

Forefathers

Here they went with smock and crook,
Toiled in the sun, lolled in the shade,
Here they mudded out the brook
And here their hatchet cleared the glade:

5 Harvest-supper woke their wit,
Huntsman's moon their wooings lit.
From this church they led their brides,
From this church themselves were led Shoulder-high; on these waysides io Sat to take their beer and bread.

6. See note 2, p. 1402.

8. Cf. Donne, "The Good Morrow," line 4

7. The middle way, moderation. Apollo's motto
(p. 293): "Or snorted we in the Seven Sleepers' was "Nothing in Excess."
den?"

1 9 1 6 S E E N F R O M 1 9 2 1 / 1 4 0 5

Names are gone—what men they were These their cottages declare.

Names are vanished, save the few

In the old brown Bible scrawled;

15 These were men of pith and thew,¹

Whom the city never called;

Scarce could read or hold a quill,

Built the barn, the forge, the mill.

On the green they watched their sons

20 Playing till too dark to see,

As their fathers watched them once,

As my father once watched me;

While the bat and beetle flew

On the warm air webbed with dew.

25 Unrecorded, unrenowned,

Men from whom my ways begin,
Here I know you by your ground
But I know you not within—
There is silence, there survives
30 Not a moment of your lives.
Like the bee that now is blown
Honey-heavy on my hand,
From his toppling tansy²-throne
In the green tempestuous land—
35 I'm in clover now, nor know
Who made honey long ago.

1 9 2 2

1916 seen from 1921

Tired with dull grief, grown old before my day,
I sit in solitude and only hear
Long silent laughters, murmurings of dismay,
The lost intensities of hope and fear;
5 In those old marshes yet the rifles lie,
On the thin breastwork flutter the grey rags,
The very books I read are there—and I
Dead as the men I loved, wait while life drags
Its wounded length from those sad streets of war
10 Into green places here, that were my own;
But now what once was mine is mine no more,
I seek such neighbours here and I find none.

1. Strong muscle. Of pith: i.e., forcible and terse. 2. Tall, yellow-flowered plant.

1 4 0 6 / L O U I S E B O G A N

With such strong gentleness and tireless will
Those ruined houses seared themselves in me, 15 Passionate I look for their dumb story still,
And the charred stub outspeaks the living tree.
I rise up at the singing of a bird
And scarcely knowing slink along the lane,
I dare not give a soul a look or word
20 Where all have homes and none s at home in vain:
Deep red the rose burned in the grim redoubt,
The self-sown wheat around was like a flood,
In the hot path the lizard lolled time out,
The saints in broken shrines were bright as blood.
25 Sweet Mary's shrine between the sycamores!
There we would go, my friend of friends and I,
And snatch long moments from the grudging wars,
Whose dark made light intense to see them by.
Shrewd bit the morning fog, the whining shots
30 Spun from the wrangling wire;⁴ then in warm swoon
The sun hushed all but the cool orchard plots,
We crept in the tall grass and slept till noon.

1 9 2 2 1 9 3 0

L O U I S E B O G A N

1897-1970

Medusa¹

I had come to the house, in a cave of trees,
Facing a sheer sky.
Everything moved,—a bell hung ready to strike,
Sun and reflection wheeled by.

5 When the bare eyes were before me
And the hissing hair,
Held up at a window, seen through a door.
The stiff bald eyes, the serpents on the forehead Formed in the air.

io This is a dead scene forever now.

Nothing will ever stir.

The end will never brighten it more than this,

Nor the rain blur.

3. Earthwork defensive position enclosed on all of whom was so terrible it turned people to stone.
sides.

Perseus killed Medusa by cutting off her head,

4. Barbed wire.

which retained the power to petrify (in both

1. One of the Gorgons, Greek mythological sisters senses) its viewers.

with monstrous faces and snakes for hair, the sight

M A N A L O N E / 1 4 0 7

The water will always fall, and will not fall,

15 And the tipped bell make no sound.

The grass will always be growing for hay

Deep on the ground.

And I shall stand here like a shadow

Under the great balanced day,

20 My eyes on the yellow dust, that was lifting in the wind,

And does not drift away.

1 9 2 3

Juan's Song

When beauty breaks and falls asunder

I feel no grief for it, but wonder.

When love, like a frail shell, lies broken,

I keep no chip of it for token.

5 I never had a man for friend

Who did not know that love must end.

I never had a girl for lover

Who could discern when love was over.

What the wise doubt, the fool believes—

io Who is it, then, that love deceives?

1 9 2 3

Man Alone

It is yourself you seek

In a long rage,

Scanning through light and darkness

Mirrors, the page,

5 Where should reflected be

Those eyes and that thick hair,

That passionate look, that laughter.

You should appear

Within the book, or doubled,

io Freed, in the silvered glass;

Into all other bodies

Yourself should pass.

The glass does not dissolve;

Like walls the mirrors stand;

15 The printed page gives back

Words by another hand.

1 4 0 8 / L O U I S E B O G A N

And your infatuate eye

Meets not itself below:

Strangers lie in your arms

20 As I lie now.

1 9 3 7

Roman Fountain

Up from the bronze, I saw

Water without a flaw

Rush to its rest in air,

Reach to its rest, and fall.

5 Bronze of the blackest shade,

An element man-made,

Shaping upright the bare

Clear gouts of water in air.

O, as with arm and hammer,

io Still it is good to strive

To beat out the image whole,

To echo the shout and stammer

When full-gushed waters, alive,

Strike on the fountain's bowl

15 After the air of summer.

1 9 3 7

Song for the Last Act

Now that I have your face by heart, I look

Less at its features than its darkening frame

Where quince and melon, yellow as young flame,

Lie with quilled dahlias and the shepherd's crook.
5 Beyond, a garden. There, in insolent ease
The lead and marble figures watch the show
Of yet another summer loath to go
Although the scythes hang in the apple trees.
Now that I have your face by heart, I look.
io Now that I have your voice by heart, I read
In the black chords upon a dulling page
Music that is not meant for music's cage,
Whose emblems mix with words that shake and bleed.
The staves² are shuttled over with a stark
2. Horizontal lines on which music is written.

N I G H T / 1 4 0 9

15 Unprinted silence. In a double dream
I must spell out the storm, the running stream.
The beat's too swift. The notes shift in the dark.
Now that I have your voice by heart, I read.
Now that I have your heart by heart, I see 20 The wharves with their great ships and architraves;³
The rigging and the cargo and the slaves
On a strange beach under a broken sky.
O not departure, but a voyage done!
The bales stand on the stone; the anchor weeps
25 Its red rust downward, and the long vine creeps
Beside the salt herb, in the lengthening sun.
Now that I have your heart by heart, I see.

1 9 5 4

Night

The cold remote islands
And the blue estuaries
Where what breathes, breathes
The restless wind of the inlets,
5 And what drinks, drinks
The incoming tide;
Where shell and weed
Wait upon the salt wash of the sea,
And the clear nights of stars
10 Swing their lights westward
To set behind the land;
Where the pulse clinging to the rocks
Renews itself forever;
Where, again on cloudless nights,
15 The water reflects
The firmament's partial setting;
—O remember
In your narrowing dark hours
That more things move
20 Than blood in the heart.

1 9 6 8

3. Beams on columns.

1 4 1 0

H A R T C R A N E

1899-1932

My Grandmother's Love Letters

There are no stars to-night

But those of memory.

Yet how much room for memory there is
In the loose girdle of soft rain.
5 There is even room enough
For the letters of my mother's mother, Elizabeth,
That have been pressed so long
Into a corner of the roof
io That they are brown and soft,
And liable to melt as snow.
Over the greatness of such space
Steps must be gentle.
It is all hung by an invisible white hair.
15 It trembles as birch limbs webbing the air.
And I ask myself:
"Are your fingers long enough to play
Old keys that are but echoes:
Is the silence strong enough
20 To carry back the music to its source
And back to you again
As though to her?"
Yet I would lead my grandmother by the hand
Through much of what she would not understand;
25 And so I stumble. And the rain continues on the roof
With such a sound of gently pitying laughter.
1926
At Melville's Tomb
Often beneath the wave, wide from this ledge
The dice² of drowned men's bones he saw bequeath

An embassy. Their numbers as he watched,
Beat on the dusty shore and were obscured.

5 And wrecks passed without sound of bells,
The calyx³ of death's bounty giving back

1. The American poet and novelist Herman Mel-note to editor Harriet Monroe].

ville (1819-1891; see pp. 1054-57), best-known

3. Literally, the outer whorl of a flower, formed by for his works dealing with the sea.

modified leaves. "This calyx refers in a double

2. Small, broken pieces. "Dice as a symbol of ironic sense both to a cornucopia (cone-shaped chance and circumstance is also implied" [Crane's receptacle) and the vortex made by a sinking ves-

VOYAGES / 1 4 1 1

A scattered chapter, livid hieroglyph,

The portent wound in corridors of shells.

Then in the circuit calm of one vast coil,

io Its lashings charmed and malice reconciled,

Frosted eyes there were that lifted altars;

And silent answers crept across the stars.

Compass, quadrant and sextant⁴ contrive

No farther tides ... High in the azure steeps

15 Monodys shall not wake the mariner.

This fabulous shadow only the sea keeps.

1 9 2 6

Voyages

I

Above the fresh ruffles of the surf
Bright striped urchins flay each other with sand.
They have contrived a conquest for shell shucks,
And their fingers crumble fragments of baked weed
5 Gaily digging and scattering.
And in answer to their treble interjections
The sun beats lightning on the waves,
The waves fold thunder on the sand;
And could they hear me I would tell them:
io O brilliant kids, frisk with your dog,
Fondle your shells and sticks, bleached
By time and the elements; but there is a line
You must not cross nor ever trust beyond it Spry cordage⁰ of your bodies to caresses ropes in ship's rigging

15 Too lichen-faithful from too wide a breast.
The bottom of the sea is cruel.

2

—And yet this great wink of eternity,
Of rimless floods, unfettered leewardings, Samite⁶ sheeted and processioned where
Her undinal⁷ vast belly moonward bends,
5 Laughing the wrapt inflections of our love;
sel” [Crane’s note to Monroe].

original boundaries of the entity measured.”

4. Instruments used in navigation: the compass

5. Elegy or dirge sung by one person.

determines geographic directions; the quadrant

6. A rich, silky fabric interwoven with gold or silver and sextant measure angles and reckon altitudes.
ver. Leewardings: ship's movements away from the Crane's note to Monroe suggests that they "have wind.

inadvertently so extended the concepts of the

7. The adjective suggests both waves and undines, entity they were invented to measure ... that they or water spirits.

may metaphorically be said to have extended the

1 4 1 2 / H A R T C R A N E

Take this Sea, whose diapason⁰ knells burst of sound

On scrolls of silver snowy sentences,

The sceptered terror of whose sessions rends

As her demeanors motion well or ill.

10 All but the pieties of lovers' hands.

And onward, as bells off San Salvador⁸

Salute the crocus lusters of the stars,

In these poinsettia⁹ meadows of her tides—

Adagios of islands, O my Prodigal,¹

15 Complete the dark confessions her veins spell.

Mark how her turning shoulders wind the hours,

And hasten while her penniless rich palms

Pass superscription of bent foam and wave—

Hasten, while they are true—sleep, death, desire,

20 Close round one instant in one floating flower.

Bind us in time, O Seasons clear, and awe.

O minstrel galleons of Carib² fire,

Bequeath us to no earthly shore until
Is answered in the vortex of our grave
25 The seal's wide spindrift gaze toward paradise.

3

Infinite consanguinity⁰ it bears— blood relationship

This tendered theme of you that light
Retrieves from sea plains where the sky
Resigns a breast that every wave enthrones;

5 While ribboned water lanes I wind
Are laved and scattered with no stroke

Wide from your side, whereto this hour
The sea lifts, also, reliquary hands.³

And so, admitted through black swollen gates

io That must arrest all distance otherwise,

Past whirling pillars and lithe pediments,
Light wrestling there incessantly with light,

Star kissing star through wave on wave unto

Your body rocking!

15 and where death, if shed,

Presumes no carnage, but this single change,

Upon the steep floor flung from dawn to dawn

The silken skilled transmemberment⁴ of song;

Permit me voyage, love, into your hands ...

8. An island of the Bahamas group, Columbus's are musically slow and graceful.

first landfall on the first voyage.

2. Some of the West Indian islands, or the sea sur-

9. Showy plant native to Central America.

rounding them.

1. Wasteful, lavish one; cf. the Prodigal Son in

3. I.e., hands holding sacred relics.

Luke 15. Adagios: divisions of a composition that

4. Exchange or transformation of parts.

V O Y A G E S / 1 4 1 3

4

Whose counted smile of hours and days, suppose

I know as spectrum of the sea and pledge

Vastly now parting gulf on gulf of wings

Whose circles bridge, I know, (from palms to the severe

5 Chilled albatross's⁵ white immutability)

No stream of greater love advancing now

Than, singing, this mortality alone

Through clay aflow immortally to you.

All fragrance irrefragibly,⁶ and claim

io Madly meeting logically in this hour

And region that is ours to wreath again,

Portending eyes and lips and making told

The chancel⁷ port and portion of our June—

Shall they not stem and close in our own steps

15 Bright staves of flowers and quills to-day as I

Must first be lost in fatal tides to tell?

In signature of the incarnate word

The harbor shoulders to resign in mingling

Mutual blood, transpiring as foreknown

20 And widening noon within your breast for gathering

All bright insinuations that my years have caught

For islands where must lead inviolably
Blue latitudes and levels of your eyes—
In this expectant, still exclaim receive 25 The secret oar and petals of all love.

5

Meticulous, past midnight in clear rime, 0 frost
Infrangible 0 and lonely, smooth as though cast inviolable
Together in one merciless white blade—
The bay estuaries fleck the hard sky limits.
5 —As if too brittle or too clear to touch!
The cables of our sleep so swiftly filed,
Already hang, shred ends from remembered stars.

One frozen trackless smile ... What words Can strangle this deaf moonlight? For we io Are overtaken. Now no cry, no sword
Can fasten or deflect this tidal wedge,
Slow tyranny of moonlight, moonlight loved
And changed ... “There’s

5. That of a large seabird capable of long, sus- 6. Undeniably; unalterably.

tained flights away from land, believed to sleep in 7. The part of a church that contains the altar and the air without moving its wings. seats for the clergy and choir.

1 4 1 4 / H A R T C R A N E

Nothing like this in the world,” you say,
15 Knowing I cannot touch your hand and look Too, into that godless cleft of sky
Where nothing turns but dead sands flashing.
“—And never to quite understand!” No,

In all the argosy⁸ of your bright hair I dreamed

20 Nothing so flagless as this piracy.

But now

Draw in your head, alone and too tall here.

Your eyes already in the slant of drifting foam;

Your breath sealed by the ghosts I do not know:

25 Draw in your head and sleep the long way home.

6

Where icy and bright dungeons lift

Of swimmers their lost morning eyes,

And ocean rivers, churning, shift

Green borders under stranger skies,

5 Steadily as a shell secretes

Its beating leagues of monotone,

Or as many waters trough the sun's

Red kelson⁹ past the cape's wet stone;

10 rivers mingling toward the sky

io And harbor of the phoenix¹ breast—

My eyes pressed black against the prow,

—Thy derelict and blinded guest

Waiting, afire, what name, unspoke,

1 cannot claim: let thy waves rear

15 More savage than the death of kings,

Some splintered garland for the seer.

Beyond siroccos² harvesting

The solstice thunders, crept away,

Like a cliff swinging or a sail

20 Flung into April's inmost day—

Creation's blithe and petaled word
To the lounged goddess when she rose Conceding dialogue with eyes
That smile unsearchable repose—

8. A rich supply; also, a large ship or a fleet of by burning itself; from its ashes arises a new phoe-ships.

nix. The phoenix is also a symbol of the Resurrec-

9. A beam laid parallel to the keel of a ship to hold tion.

together the flooring and the keel.

2. Hot, moist winds, usually those from North

1. A mythological bird said to end its very long life African deserts.

T H E B R I D G E / 1 4 1 5

25 Still fervid covenant, Belle Isle,³

—Unfolded floating dais before

Which rainbows twine continual hair—

Belle Isle, white echo of the oar!

The imaged Word, it is, that holds

30 Hushed willows anchored in its glow.

It is the unbetrayable reply

Whose accent no farewell can know.

1 9 2 6

From The Bridge

Proem: To Brooklyn Bridge

How many dawns, chill from his rippling rest

The seagull's wings shall dip and pivot him,

Shedding white rings of tumult, building high
Over the chained bay waters Liberty—
5 Then, with inviolate curve, forsake our eyes
As apparitional as sails that cross
Some page of figures to be filed away;
—Till elevators drop us from our day ...
I think of cinemas, panoramic sleights
io With multitudes bent toward some flashing scene Never disclosed, but hastened to again,
Foretold to other eyes on the same screen;
And Thee,⁴ across the harbor, silver-paced
As though the sun took step of thee, yet left 15 Some motion ever unspent in thy stride—
Implicitly thy freedom staying thee!
Out of some subway scuttle, cell or loft
A bedlamite⁰ speeds to thy parapets, madman
Tilting there momentarily, shrill shirt ballooning,
20 A jest falls from the speechless caravan.
Down Wall,^s from girder into street noon leaks,
A rip-tooth of the sky's acetylene,
All afternoon the cloud-flown derricks turn ...
Thy cables breathe the North Atlantic still.
25 And obscure as that heaven of the Jews,⁶
Thy guerdon⁰ ... Accolade thou dost bestow reward
3. Tiny island near Newfoundland that is the first bridge's Manhattan end.
land seen by boats coming from Europe.
6. I.e., heaven is a vaguer notion in the Jewish tra-

4. I.e., Brooklyn Bridge.

dition than in the Christian.

5. Wall Street is less than half a mile south of the

1 4 1 6 / H A R T C R A N E

Of anonymity time cannot raise:

Vibrant reprieve and pardon thou dost show.

O harp and altar, of the fury fused,

30 (How could mere toil align thy choiring strings!)⁷

Terrific threshold of the prophet's pledge,

Prayer of pariah, and the lover's cry—

Again the traffic lights that skim thy swift

Unfractioned idiom, immaculate sigh of stars,

35 Beading thy path—condense eternity:

And we have seen night lifted in thine arms.

Under thy shadow by the piers I waited;

Only in darkness is thy shadow clear.

The City's fiery parcels all undone,

40 Already snow submerges an iron year ...

O Sleepless as the river under thee,

Vaulting the sea, the prairies' dreaming sod,

Unto us lowliest sometime sweep, descend

And of the curveship lend a myth to God.

1 9 3 0

To Emily Dickinson⁸

You who desired so much—in vain to ask—

Yet fed your hunger like an endless task,

Dared dignify the labor, bless the quest—

Achieved that stillness ultimately best,

5 Being, of all, least sought for: Emily, hear!
O sweet, dead Silencer, most suddenly clear
When singing that Eternity possessed
And plundered momentarily in every breast;
—Truly no flower yet withers in your hand,
io The harvest you descried and understand Needs more than wit to gather, love to bind.
Some reconciliation of remotest mind—
Leaves Ormus rubyless, and Ophir chill.⁹
Else tears heap all within one clay-cold hill.

1 9 3 3

7. The suspension bridge has cables formed from Gulf; in 1 Kings 10.11, Solomon receives rich gifts, parallel steel wires that were spun in place.

including gold and precious stones, from a region

8. American poet (1 8 3 0 - 1 8 8 6 ; see pp. 1110-27).
called Ophir.

9. Ormus (or Hormuz), ancient city on the Persian 1417

A L L E N T A T E

1899-1979

Ode to the Confederate Dead

Row after row with strict impunity

The headstones yield their names to the element,

The wind whirrs without recollection;

In the riven troughs the splayed leaves

5 Pile up, of nature the casual sacrament

To the seasonal eternity of death;

Then driven by the fierce scrutiny
Of heaven to their election in the vast breath,
They sought the rumor of mortality. moan
io Autumn is desolation in the plot
Of a thousand acres where these memories grow
From the inexhaustible bodies that are not Dead, but feed the grass row after rich row.
Think of the autumns that have come and gone!
is Ambitious November with the humors of the year,
With a particular zeal for every slab,
Staining the uncomfortable angels that rot
On the slabs, a wing chipped here, an arm there:
The brute curiosity of an angel's stare
20 Turns you, like them, to stone,
Transforms the heaving air
Till plunged to a heavier world below
You shift your sea-space blindly
Heaving, turning like the blind crab.
25 Dazed by the wind, only the wind
The leaves flying, plunge
You know who have waited by the wall
The twilight certainty of an animal,
Those midnight restitutions of the blood
30 You know—the immitigable¹ pines, the smoky frieze
Of the sky, the sudden call: you know the rage,
The cold pool left by the mounting flood,
Of muted Zeno and Parmenides.²
You who have waited for the angry resolution

35 Of those desires that should be yours tomorrow,
You know the unimportant shrift of death
And praise the vision

And praise the arrogant circumstance
Of those who fall

40 Rank upon rank, hurried beyond decision—
Here by the sagging gate, stopped by the wall.

1. Unable to become less harsh.

changeable, all “development,” is illusory, for real-

2. Greek philosophers (fifth century B.C.E.) of the ity is one and changeless.

Eleatic school. They held that what is various and

1 4 1 8 / A L L E N T A T E

Seeing, seeing only the leaves

Flying, plunge and expire

Turn your eyes to the immoderate past,

45 Turn to the inscrutable infantry rising

Demons out of the earth—they will not last.

Stonewall, Stonewall, and the sunken fields of hemp,

Shiloh, Antietam, Malvern Hill, Bull Run.’

Lost in that orient of the thick and fast

50 You will curse the setting sun.

Cursing only the leaves crying

Like an old man in a storm

You hear the shout, the crazy hemlocks point

With troubled fingers to the silence which 55 Smothers you, a mummy, in time.

The hound bitch

Toothless and dying, in a musty cellar
Hears the wind only.
Now that the salt of their blood
60 Stiffens the saltier oblivion of the sea,
Seals the malignant purity of the flood,
What shall we who count our days and bow
Our heads with a commemorial woe
In the ribboned coats of grim felicity,
65 What shall we say of the bones, unclean,
Whose verdurous⁴ anonymity will grow?
The ragged arms, the ragged heads and eyes
Lost in these acres of the insane green?
The gray lean spiders come, they come and go;
70 In a tangle of willows without light
The singular screech-owl's tight
Invisible lyric seeds the mind
With the furious murmur of their chivalry.
We shall say only the leaves
75 Flying, plunge and expire
We shall say only the leaves whispering
In the improbable mist of nightfall
That flies on multiple wing:
Night is the beginning and the end
so And in between the ends of distraction
Waits mute speculation, the patient curse
That stones the eyes, or like the jaguar leaps
For his own image in a jungle pool, his victim.
3. Names of important Civil War battles. St one- first battle of Bull Run (1861); fatally wounded by wall: Thomas “Stonewall” Jackson (1824—1863), his men at Chancellorsville.

Confederate general, earned his nickname at the
4. Green (i.e., vigorous) as growing vegetation.

T H E S W I M M E R S / 1 4 1 9

What shall we say who have knowledge 85 Carried to the heart? Shall we take the act
To the grave? Shall we, more hopeful, set up the grave
In the house? The ravenous grave?

Leave now

The shut gate and the decomposing wall:
90 The gentle serpent, green in the mulberry bush,
Riots with his tongue through the hush—
Sentinel of the grave who counts us all!

1 9 2 8

The Swimmers

SCENE: Montgomery County,
Kentucky, July 1911

Kentucky water, clear springs: a boy fleeing
To water under the dry Kentucky sun,
His four little friends in tandem with him, seeing Long shadows of grapevine wriggle and run
5 Over the green swirl; mullein under the ear
Soft as Nausicaa’s⁵ palm; sullen fun
Savage as childhood’s thin harmonious tear:
O fountain, bosom source undying-dead
Replenish me the spring of love and fear

io And give me back the eye that looked and fled
When a thrush idling in the tulip tree
Unwound the cold dream of the copperhead.
—Along the creek the road was winding; we Felt the quicksilver sky. I see again
15 The shrill companions of that odyssey:
Bill Eaton, Charlie Watson, “Nigger” Layne
The doctor’s son, Harry Duesler who played
The flute; and Tate, with water on the brain.
Dog-days:6 the dusty leaves where rain delayed
20 Hung low on poison-oak and scuppernong,7
And we were following the active shade
Of water, that bells and bickers all night long.
“No more’n a mile,” Layne said. All five stood still.
Listening, I heard what seemed at first a song;
5. The king’s daughter who welcomes Odysseus in 6. The hottest days of the year, book 6 of the Odyssey. Mullein:
wooly-leaved herb. 7. Kind of grapevine.

1 4 2 0 / A L L E N T A T E

2 5 P e e r i n g , I h e a r d t h e h o o v e s c o m e d o w n t h e h i l l .

T h e p o s s e p a s s e d , t w e l v e h o r s e ; t h e l e a d e r
' s f a c e W a s w o r n a s l i m e s t o n e o n a n a n c i e n t s i l l .

T h e n , a s s l e e p w a l k e r s s h i f t f r o m a h a r d p l a c e
I n b e d , a n d r i s i n g t o k e e p a f o r m a l p l e d g e
3 0 D e s c e n d a l a d d e r i n t o e m p t y s p a c e , W e s c u t t l e d d o w n t h e b a n k b e l o w a l e d g e
A n d m a r c h e d s t i f f - l e g g e d i n o u r c o m m o n f r i g h t A l o n g a h o g - t r a c k b y t h e r i f f l e ' s 8 e d g e :

Into a world where sound shaded the sight
35 Dropped the dull hooves again; the horse men came again, all but the leader: it was
night

Momentarily and I feared: eleven same

Jesus-Christers unremembered and unmade,
e,

Whose Corpse had died again in dirty shame

40 The bank then levelling in a speckled glade,
We stopped to breathe above the swimming-hole;
I gazed at its reticulated shade
netlike

Recoiling in blue fear, and felt it roll

Over my ears and eyes and lift my hair

45 Like seaweed tossing on a sunk atoll.

I rose again. Borne on the copper air

A distant voice green as a funeral wreath

Against a grave: "That dead nigger there."

The melancholy sheriff slouched beneath

50 A giant sycamore; shaking his head

He plucked a sassafras twig and picked his teeth:

"We come too late." He spoke to the tired dead Whose ragged shirt soaked up the viscous flow of blood in which I lay discomfited.

55 A butting horse-fly gave one ear a blow

And glanced off, as the sheriff kicked the rope loose from the neck and hooked it with his toe away from the blood. — I looked back down the slope: The friends were gone that I had hoped to greet. —

60 A single horseman came at a slowlope

A n d p u l l e d u p a t t h e h a n g e d m a n ' s h o r n y f e e t ; T h e s h e r i f f n o o s e d t h e f e e t , t h e o t h e r e n d T h e s t r a n g e r t i e d t o h i s p o m m e l i n a n e a t

8. Shallow part of a stream.

B R I G G F L A T T S / 1 4 2 1

Slip-knot. I saw the Negro's body bend

65 And straighten, as a fish-line cast transverse

Yields to the current that it must subtend.

The sheriff's Goddamn was a murmured curse

Not for the dead but for the blinding dust

That boxed the cortege⁹ in a cloudy hearse

70 And dragged it towards our town. I knew I must

Not stay till twilight in that silent road;

Sliding my bare feet into the warm crust,

I hopped the stonecrop like a panting toad

Mouth open, following the heaving cloud

75 That floated to the court-house square its load

Of limber corpse that took the sun for shroud.

There were three figures in the dying sun

Whose light were company where three was crowd.

My breath crackled the dead air like a shotgun

80 As, sheriff and the stranger disappearing,

The faceless head lay still. I could not run

Or walk, but stood. Alone in the public clearing

This private thing was owned by all the town,

Though never claimed by us within my hearing.

1 9 5 3

B A S I L B U N T I N G

1900-1985

*From Briggflatts*¹

From I

Brag, sweet tenor bull, descant on Rawthey's madrigal,² each pebble its part for the fells' ³ late spring.

5 Dance tiptoe, bull,
black against may.⁴ Ridiculous and lovely chase hurdling shadows morning into noon.

9. Funeral procession.

2. Part-song for three or more voices. Descant:

1. In an interview, Bunting remarked, "My auto-sing the upper part of a part-song.

biography is Briggflatts." His poem's title is the

3. Hills or stretches of high moorland.

name of a small village, straddling the river Raw-

4. Flowers, pink or white, of the hawthorn tree.

they, in the Lake District of northern England.

1 4 2 2 / B A S I L B U N T I N G

10 May on the bull's hide and through the dale furrows fill with may,
paving the slowworm's⁵ way.

A mason times his mallet

15 to a lark's twitter, listening while the marble rests,

lays his rule
at a letter's edge,
fingertips checking, 20 till the stone spells a name naming none,
a man abolished.

Painful lark, labouring to rise!
the solemn mallet says:
25 In the grave's slot
he lies. We rot.

Decay thrusts the blade,
Wheat stands in excrement trembling. Rawthey trembles.
30 Tongue stumbles, ears err for fear of spring.

Rub the stone with sand,
wet sandstone rending roughness away. Fingers
35 ache on the rubbing stone.

The mason says: Rocks happen by chance.

No one here bolts the door,
love is so sore.

40 Stone smooth as skin, cold as the dead they load
on a low lorry⁰ by night.

truck

The moon sits on the fell

but it will rain.

45 Under sacks on the stone

two children lie,

hear the horse stale,⁰ urinate

the mason whistle,

harness mutter to shaft,

50 felloe⁰ to axle squeak,

exterior rim of a wheel

rut thud the rim,

crushed grit.

Stocking to stocking, jersey⁰ to jersey, head to a hard arm,

55 they kiss under the rain,

bruised by their marble bed.

5. Or blind worm, a small, burrowing, limbless lizard.

B R I G G F L A T T S / 1 4 2 3

In Garsdale, dawn;

at Hawes, tea from the can.⁶

Rain stops, sacks

60 steam in the sun, they sit up.

Copper-wire moustache,

sea-reflecting eyes

and Baltic plainsong speech declare: By such rocks

65 men killed Bloodaxe.⁷

Fierce blood throbs in his tongue,

lean words.

Skulls cropped for steel caps
huddle round Stainmore.8 70 Their becks ring on limestone, whisper to peat.9
The clogged cart pushes the horse downhill.
In such soft air
they trudge and sing,
75 laying the tune frankly on the air.
All sounds fall still,
fellside bleat,
hide-and-seek peewit.1
Her pulse their pace, 80 palm countering palm,
till a trench is filled,
stone white as cheese
jeers at the dale.
Knotty wood, hard to rive,^o split 85 smoulders to ash;
smell of October apples.
The road again,
at a trot.
Wetter, warmed, they watch 90 the mason meditate on name and date.
Rain rinses the road,
the bull streams and laments.
Sour rye porridge from the hob²
95 with cream and black tea,

meat, crust and crumb.

Her parents in bed
the children dry their clothes.

He has untied the tape

6. Metal container with handle and cover (not, caps: helmets.

i.e., a modern sealed can). Garsdale and Hawes are

9. “Beck” is a dialect word for a mattock, an agri-small country towns in northern England.

cultural instrument; it would “ring” on hard lime-

7. Eric Bloodaxe, ruler of the Viking kingdom of stone, but “whisper” cutting into soft “peat,” or Northumbria, was overthrown and killed by the decayed vegetable tissue in the earth.

English in 954. “Baltic plainsong” refers to the

1. Bird noted for its shrill, wailing cry.

Vikings’ rough yet rhythmic speech.

2. Shelf in a fireplace, where a kettle can be kept

8. Desolate forest in the north of England. Steel warm.

1 4 2 4 / B A S I L B U N T I N G

100 of her striped flannel drawers

before the range. Naked

on the pricked rag mat³

his fingers comb

thatch of his manhood’s home.

105 Gentle generous voices weave over bare night

words to confirm and delight till bird dawn.

Rainwater from the butt
no she fetches and flannel
to wash him inch by inch, kissing the pebbles.

Shining slowworm part of the marvel.

The mason stirs: us Words!

Pens are too light.

Take a chisel to write.

Every birth a crime,
every sentence life.

120 Wiped of mould and mites would the ball run true?

No hope of going back.

Hounds falter and stray,
Shame deflects the pen.

125 Love murdered neither bleeds nor stifles
but jogs the draftsman's elbow, what can he, changed, tell her, changed, perhaps dead?

Delight dwindles. Blame
no stays the same.

Brief words are hard to find,
shapes to carve and discard:

Bloodaxe, king of York,
king of Dublin, king of Orkney.⁴

135 Take no notice of tears;
letter the stone to stand over love laid aside lest insufferable happiness impede flight to Stainmore, HO to trace lark, mallet, becks, flocks
and axe knocks.

Dung will not soil the slowworm's

145 mosaic. Breathless lark

3. Rug made from strips of rag hooked through a “king” here is in the sense of an early tribal chiefsacking base.

tain.

4. Islands off the northeast coast of Scotland;

THE WINDSUFFERS / 1425

drops to nest in sodden trash;

Rawthey truculent, dingy.

Drudge at the mallet, the may is down,

fog on fells. Guilty of spring

150 and spring's ending amputated years ache after the bull is beef, love a convenience.

It is easier to die than to remember.

N a m e and date

155 split in soft slate

a few m o n t h s obliterate.

###

1965 1966

LAURA (RIDING) JACKSON

1901-1991

The Wind Suffers

The wind suffers of blowing,

The sea suffers of water,

And fire suffers of burning,

And I of a living name.

5 As stone suffers of stoniness,

As light of its shiningness,

As birds of their wingedness,

SO I of my whoness.

And what the cure of all this?

io What the not and not suffering?

What the better and later of this?

What the more me of me?

How for the pain-world to be

More world and no pain?

15 How for the old rain to fall

More wet and more dry?

How for the wilful blood to run

More salt-red and sweet-white?

And how for me in my actualness

20 To more shriek and more smile?

By no other miracles,

By the same knowing poison,

By an improved anguish,

By my further dying.

1 9 3 0

1 4 2 6 / S T E R L I N G A . B R O W N

Ding-Donging

With old hours all belfry heads

Are filled, as with thoughts.

With old hours ring the new hours

Between their bells.

5 And this hour-long ding-donging

So much employs the hour-long silences

That bells hang thinking when not striking,

When striking think of nothing.

Chimes of forgotten hours

10 More and more are played

While bells stare into space,

And more and more space wears

A look of having heard

But hearing not:

15 Forgotten hours chime louder

In the meantime, as if always,

And spread ding-donging back

More and more to yesterdays.

1930

S T E R L I N G A . B R O W N

1901-1989

Slim in Atlanta1

Down in Atlanta,

De whitefolks got laws

For to keep all de niggers
From laughin' outdoors.
5 Hope to Gawd I may die
If I ain't speakin' truth
Make de niggers do deir laughin'
In a telefoam booth.
Slim Greer hit de town
io An' de rebs² got him told,— “Dontcha laugh on de street,
If you want to die old.”

1. One of a series of poems about the fictional federacy in the Civil War; here, a general term for character Slim Greer.

southerners.

2. Abbreviation for rebels, or members of the Con-

S L I M I N A T L A N T A / 1 4 2 7

Den dey showed him de booth,
An' a hundred shines⁰ black people
In front of it, waitin'
In double lines.
Slim thought his sides
Would bust in two,
Yelled, “Lookout, everybody,
I'm coming through!”
Pulled de other man out,
An' bust in de box,
An' laughed four hours
By de Georgia clocks.

Den he peeked through de door,

An' what did he see?

Three hundred niggers there

In misery.—

Some holdin' deir sides,

Some holdin' deir jaws,

To keep from breakin'

De Georgia laws.

An' Slim gave a holler,

An' started again;

An' from three hundred throats

Come a moan of pain.

An' everytime Slim

Saw what was outside,

Got to whoopin' again

Till he nearly died.

An' while de poor critters

Was waitin' deir chance,

Slim laughed till dey sent

Fo' de ambulance.

De state paid de railroad

To take him away;

Den, things was as usural

In Atlanta, Gee A.3

1932

3. GA; abbreviation for the state of Georgia.

1 4 2 8 / S T E R L I N G A . B R O W N

Chillen Get Shoes

Hush little Lily,
Don't you cry;
You'll get your silver slippers
Bye and bye.⁴

5 Moll wears silver slippers
With red heels,
And men come to see her
In automobiles.

Lily walks wretched,
io Dragging her doll,
Worshipping stealthily
Good-time Moll;
Envyng bitterly
Moll's fine clothes,
i5 And her plump legs clad
In openwork hose.

Don't worry, Lily,
Don't you cry;
You'll be like Moll, too,
20 Bye and bye.

1932

Bitter Fruit of the Tree

They said to my grandmother: "Please do not be bitter,"
When they sold her first-born and let the second die,
When they drove her husband till he took to the swamplands,
And brought him home bloody and beaten at last.

5 They told her, "It is better you should not be bitter,
Some must work and suffer so that we, who must, can live,

Forgiving is noble, you must not be heathen bitter;
These are your orders: you are not to be bitter.”
And they left her shack for their porticoed house.
io They said to my father: “Please do not be bitter,”
When he ploughed and planted a crop not his,
When he weatherstripped a house that he could not enter,
And stored away a harvest he could not enjoy.
They answered his questions: “It does not concern you,
4. Cf. the lullaby “Hush Little Baby.”

T H E W E A R Y B L U E S / 1 4 2 9

15 It is not for you to know, it is past your understanding,⁵
All you need know is: you must not be bitter.”

1939 1980

Conjured

“She done put huh little hands
On the back uh my head;
I cain’t git away from her
Twill I’m dead.

5 “She done laid her little body
Beneaf my breast,
And I won’t never Git no rest.

“She done been in my arms
io Twill the break of day Won’t never Git away... .

“She done put her little shoes
Underneaf my bed

is Never git away from her

Twill I'm dead.

“Won't want to leave her

Then,” he said.

“Oh, baby, gotta lay

20 So long

Alone ”

1930s 1980

L A N G S T O N H U G H E S

1902-1967

The Weary Blues

Droning a drowsy syncopated tune,

Rocking back and forth to a mellow croon,

I heard a Negro play.

Down on Lenox Avenue¹ the other night

5. Ironic echo of Phillipians 4, esp. 4.7: “And the Jesus.”

peace of God, which passeth all understanding, 1. A main thoroughfare in New York City, in the shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ heart of Harlem; now called Malcolm X Blvd.

1 4 3 0 / L A N G S T O N H U G H E S

By the pale dull pallor of an old gas light

He did a lazy sway... .

He did a lazy sway... .

To the tune o' those Weary Blues.

With his ebony hands on each ivory key

He made that poor piano moan with melody.

O Blues!

Swaying to and fro on his rickety stool

He played that sad raggy tune like a musical fool.

Sweet Blues!

Coming from a black man's soul.

O Blues!

In a deep song voice with a melancholy tone

I heard that Negro sing, that old piano moan—

“Ain't got nobody in all this world,

Ain't got nobody but ma self.

I's gwine to quit ma frownin'

And put ma troubles on the shelf.”

Thump, thump, thump, went his foot on the floor.

He played a few chords then he sang some more—

“I got the Weary Blues

And I can't be satisfied.

Got the Weary Blues

And can't be satisfied—

I ain't happy no mo'

And I wish that I had died.”

And far into the night he crooned that tune.

The stars went out and so did the moon.

The singer stopped playing and went to bed

While the Weary Blues echoed through his head.

He slept like a rock or a man that's dead.

1926

The Negro Speaks of Rivers

*(To W.E.B. Du Bois)*²

I've known rivers:

I've known rivers ancient as the world and older than the flow
of

human blood in human veins.

My soul has grown deep like the rivers.

I bathed in the Euphrates when dawns were young.

5 I built my hut near the Congo and it lulled me to sleep.

I looked upon the Nile and raised the pyramids above it.

I heard the singing of the Mississippi when Abe Lincoln went down

to New Orleans,³ and I've seen its muddy bosom turn all golden

in the sunset.

2. American historian, educator, and activist increasingly interested in Pan-Africanism.

(1868—1963); he was one of the founders of the

3. President Lincoln's decision to end slavery was NAACP (National Association for the Advancepartly inspired by this trip.

ment of Colored People), and in later life became

C R O S S / 1 4 3 1

I've known rivers:

Ancient, dusky rivers.

10 My soul has grown deep like the rivers.

1926

Dream Variations

To fling my arms wide

In some place of the sun,

To whirl and to dance

Till the white day is done.

5 Then rest at cool evening
Beneath a tall tree
While night comes on gently,
Dark like me—
That is my dream!
io To fling my arms wide
In the face of the sun, Dance! Whirl! Whirl!
Till the quick day is done.
Rest at pale evening ...

15 A tall, slim tree ...
Night coming tenderly Black like me.

1926

Cross

My old man's a white old man
And my old mother's black.
If ever I cursed my white old man
I take my curses back.

5 If ever I cursed my black old mother
And wished she were in hell,
I'm sorry for that evil wish
And now I wish her well.

My old man died in a fine big house,
io My ma died in a shack.
I wonder where I'm gonna die,
Being neither white nor black?

1 9 2 6

1 4 3 2 / L A N G S T O N H U G H E S

Bad Luck Card

Cause you don't love me

Is awful, awful hard.

Gypsy done showed me

My bad luck card.

5 There ain't no good left

In this world for me.

Gypsy done tole me—

Unlucky as can be.

I don't know what

10 Po' weary me can do.

Gypsy says I'd kill my self

If I was you.

1927

Song for a Dark Girl

Way Down South in Dixie

(Break the heart of me)

They hung my black young lover

To a cross roads tree.

5 Way Down South in Dixie

(Bruised body high in air)

I asked the white Lord Jesus

What was the use of prayer.

Way Down South in Dixie

io (Break the heart of me)

Love is a naked shadow

On a gnarled and naked tree.

1927

Harlem Sweeties

Have you dug the spill

Of Sugar Hill?⁴

Cast your gims⁰

eyes

On this sepia⁰ thrill:

brown

5 Brown sugar lassie,

Caramel treat,

4. In the early part of the twentieth century, the most fashionable residential area of Harlem.

H A R L E M / 1 4 3 3

Honey-gold baby

Sweet enough to eat.

Peach-skinned girlie,

Coffee and cream,

Chocolate darling

Out of a dream.

Walnut tinted

Or cocoa brown,

Pomegranate-lipped

Pride of the town.

Rich cream-colored

To plum-tinted black,

Feminine sweetness

In Harlem's no lack.

Glow of the quince

To blush of the rose.
Persimmon bronze
To cinnamon toes.
Blackberry cordial,
Virginia Dare⁵ wine—
All those sweet colors
Flavor Harlem of mine!
Walnut or cocoa,
Let me repeat:
Caramel, brown sugar,
A chocolate treat.
Molasses taffy,
Coffee and cream,
Licorice, clove, cinnamon
To a honey-brown dream.
Ginger, wine-gold,
Persimmon, blackberry,
All through the spectrum
Harlem girls vary—
So if you want to know beauty's
Rainbow-sweet thrill,
Stroll down luscious,
Delicious, fine Sugar Hill.

1942

Harlem

What happens to a dream deferred?

Does it dry up

like a raisin in the sun?

Or fester like a sore—

And then run?

1 4 3 4 / L A N G S T O N H U G H E S

Does it stink like rotten meat?

Or crust and sugar over—

like a syrupy sweet?

Maybe it just sags

10 like a heavy load.

Or does it explode?

1951

Theme for English B

The instructor said,
*Go home and write a page tonight.
And let that page come out of you—
5 Then, it will be true.*

I wonder if it's that simple?
I am twenty-two, colored, born in Winston-Salem.
I went to school there, then Durham,⁶ then here
to this college⁷ on the hill above Harlem,
so I am the only colored student in my class.
The steps from the hill lead down into Harlem,
through a park, then I cross St. Nicholas, Eighth Avenue, Seventh, and I come to the Y,
the Harlem Branch Y, where I take the elevator is up to my room, sit down, and write this page:
It's not easy to know what is true for you or me at twenty-two, my age. But I guess I'm what I feel and see and hear, Harlem, I hear you:
hear you, hear me—we two—you, me, talk on this page.
20 (I hear New York, too.) Me—who?
Well, I like to eat, sleep, drink, and be in love.
I like to work, read, learn, and understand life.
I like a pipe for a Christmas present,
or records—Bessie,⁸ bop, or Bach.
25 I guess being colored doesn't make me not like the same things other folks like who are other races.
So will my page be colored that I write?
Being me, it will not be white.

6. Like Winston-Salem, a city in North Carolina. 8. Bessie Smith (1894 or 1898-1937), American blues singer. 7. City College of the City University of New York blues singer.

(CCNY).

D I N N E R G U E S T : M E / 1 4 3 5

But it will be

30 a part of you, instructor.

You are white—

yet a part of me, as I am a part of you.

That's American.

Sometimes perhaps you don't want to be a part of me.

35 Nor do I often want to be a part of you.

But we are, that's true!

I guess you learn from me—

although you're older—and white—and somewhat more free.

40 This is my page for English B.

1951

Dinner Guest: Me

I know I am

The Negro Problem⁹

Being wined and dined,

Answering the usual questions

5 That come to white mind

Which seeks demurely

To probe in polite way

The why and wherewithal

Of darkness U.S.A.—

io Wondering how things got this way

In current democratic night,
Murmuring gently
Over /raises du bois, I “I’m so ashamed of being white.”

15 The lobster is delicious,
The wine divine,
And center of attention
At the damask table, mine.

To be a Problem on 20 Park Avenue at eight
Is not so bad.

Solutions to the Problem,
Of course, wait.

1967

9. Allusion to the controversial 1963 essay “My
1. Wild strawberries (French); ironic allusion to Negro Problem—and Ours,” by the American
W. E. B. Du Bois (see note 2, p. 1430).
writer Norman Podhoretz (b. 1930).

1 4 3 6

ROY C A M P B E L L

1902-1957

The Zulu Girl

To F. C. Slater

When in the sun the hot red acres smoulder,
Down where the sweating gang its labour plies,
A girl flings down her hoe, and from her shoulder
Unslings her child tormented by the flies.

5 She takes him to a ring of shadow pooled
By thorn-trees: purpled with the blood of ticks,
While her sharp nails, in slow caresses ruled,
Prowl through his hair with sharp electric clicks,
His sleepy mouth, plugged by the heavy nipple,
io Tugs like a puppy, grunting as he feeds:
Through his frail nerves her own deep languors ripple
Like a broad river sighing through its reeds.
Yet in that drowsy stream his flesh imbibes
An old unquenched unsmotherable heat—
15 The curbed ferocity of beaten tribes,
The sullen dignity of their defeat.
Her body looms above him like a hill
Within whose shade a village lies at rest,
Or the first cloud so terrible and still 20 That bears the coming harvest in its breast.

1926 1930

The Sisters

After hot loveless nights, when cold winds stream
Sprinkling the frost and dew, before the light,
Bored with the foolish things that girls must dream
Because their beds are empty of delight,
5 Two sisters rise and strip. Out from the night
Their horses run to their low-whistled pleas—
Vast phantom shapes with eyeballs rolling white
That sneeze a fiery steam about their knees:
Through the crisp manes their stealthy prowling hands,
io Stronger than curbs, in slow caresses rove,

They gallop down across the milk-white sands
And wade far out into the sleeping cove:

R E Q U I E M / 1 4 3 7

The frost stings sweetly with a burning kiss
As intimate as love, as cold as death:

15 Their lips, whereon delicious tremors hiss,
Fume with the ghostly pollen of their breath.

Far out on the grey silence of the flood

They watch the dawn in smouldering gyres⁰ expand spiral
*turnings

Beyond them: and the day burns through their blood

20 Like a white candle through a shuttered hand.

1926 1930

O G D E N N A S H

1902-1971

The Cow

The cow is of the bovine ilk;

One end is moo, the other, milk.

1931

Reflections on Ice-breaking

Candy

Is dandy

But liquor

Is quicker.

1931

Requiem

There was a young belle of old Natchez¹

Whose garments were always in patchez.

When comment arose
On the state of her clothes,
5 She drawled, When Ah itchez, Ah scratchez!
1 9 3 5

1. Town in Mississippi.

1 4 3 8 / O G D E N N A S H

Columbus

Once upon a time there was an Italian,
And some people thought he was a rascalion,
But he wasn't offended,
Because other people thought he was splendid,
5 And he said the world was round,
And everybody made an uncomplimentary sound,
But he went and tried to borrow some money from Ferdinand
But Ferdinand said America was a bird in the bush and he'd rather have a berdinand,
But Columbus' brain was fertile, it wasn't arid,
10 And he remembered that Ferdinand was married,
And he thought, there is no wife like a misunderstood one,
Because if her husband thinks something is a terrible idea
she is bound to think it a good one,
So he perfumed his handkerchief with bay rum and citronella,
And he went to see Isabella,
15 And he looked wonderful but he had never felt sillier,
And she said, I can't place the face but the aroma is familiar,

And Columbus didn't say a word,

All he said was, I am Columbus, the fifteenth-century
Admiral Byrd,²

And, just as he thought, her disposition was very malleable,

20 And she said, Here are my jewels, and she wasn't penurious like

Cornelia the mother of the Gracchi,¹ she wasn't referring to her

children, no, she was referring to her jewels, which were very

very valuable,

So Columbus said, Somebody show me the sunset and somebody

did and he set sail for it,

And he discovered America and they put him in jail for it,

And the fetters gave him welts,

And they named America after somebody else,⁴

25 So the sad fate of Columbus ought to be pointed out to every child

and every voter,

Because it has a very important moral, which is, Don't be a discoverer,

be a promoter.

1935

The Turtle

The turtle lives 'twixt plated decks

Which practically conceal its sex.

I think it clever of the turtle

In such a fix to be so fertile.

1940

2. Richard Evelyn Byrd (1888-1957), American show her jewels by producing her two sons (famous explorer of the North and South Poles. men in their own right).

3. Cornelia (second century B.C.E.) was the

4. Amerigo Vespucci (1454-1512), Italian navigator and explorer, who first sailed across the Atlantic in 1497. penurious, she famously responded to a request to Roman model of matronly virtue. Though hardly

1 4 3 9

S T E V I E S M I T H

1902-1971

No Categories!

I cry I cry

To God who created me

Not to you Angels who frustrated me

Let me fly, let me die,

5 Let me come to Him.

Not to you Angels on the wing,

With your severe faces,

And your scholarly grimaces,

And your do this and that,

io And your exasperating pit-pat

Of appropriate admonishment.

That is not what the Creator meant.

In the day of his gusty creation

He made this and that

15 And laughed to see them grow fat.

Plod on, you Angels say, do better aspire higher

And one day you may be like us, or those next below us,

Or nearer the lowest,

Or lowest,

20 Doing their best.

Oh no no, you Angels, I say,

No hierarchies I pray.

Oh God, laugh not too much aside

Say not, it is a small matter.

25 See what your Angels do; scatter

Their pride; laugh them away.

Oh no categories I pray.

1950

Mr. Over

Mr. Over is dead

He died fighting and true

And on his tombstone they wrote

Over to You.

5 And who pray is this You

To whom Mr. Over is gone?

1 4 4 0 / S T E V I E S M I T H

Oh if we only knew that

We should not do wrong.

But who is this beautiful You

10 We all of us long for so much

Is he not our friend and our brother

Our father and such?

Yes he is this and much more

This is but a portion

15 A sea-drop in a bucket

Taken from the ocean

So the voices spake

Softly above my head

And a voice in my heart cried: Follow

20 Where he has led

And a devil's voice cried: Happy

Happy the dead.

1950

The Death Sentence

Cold as No Plea,

Yet wild with all negation,

Weeping I come

To my heart's destination,

5 To my last bed

Between th' unhallowed boards—

The Law allows it

And the Court awards.

1950

Not Waving but Drowning

Nobody heard him, the dead man,

But still he lay moaning:

I was much further out than you thought

And not waving but drowning.

5 Poor chap, he always loved larking

And now he's dead

It must have been too cold for him his heart gave way,

They said.

THOUGHTS ABOUT THE PERSON FROM PORLOCK / 1441

Oh, no no no, it was too cold always

10 (Still the dead one lay moaning)

I was much too far out all my life

And not waving but drowning.

1957

The Celts

I think of the Celts¹ as rather a whining lady

Who was beautiful once but is not so much so now

She is not very loving, but there is one thing she loves

It is her grievance which she hugs and takes out walking.

5 The Celtic lady likes fighting very much for freedom

But when she has got it she is a proper tyrant

Nobody likes her much when she is governing.

The Celtic lady is not very widely popular

But the English love her oh they love her very much

io Especially when the Celtic lady is Irish they love her

Which is odd as she hates them then more than anyone else,

When she's Welsh the English stupidly associate her chiefly

With national hats, eisteddfods² and Old Age Pensions.

(They don't think of her at all when she is Scotch, it is rather a problem.)

15 Oh the Celtic lady when she's Irish is the one for me
Oh she is so witty and wild, my word witty,
And flashing and spiteful this Celtic lady we love
All the same she is not so beautiful as she was.

1957

Thoughts about the Person from Porlock³

Coleridge received the Person from Porlock

And ever after called him a curse,

Then why did he hurry to let him in?

He could have hid in the house.

5 It was not right of Coleridge in fact it was wrong
(But often we all do wrong)

1. Peoples speaking languages related to those of Khan" and, especially, note 8 (p. 809). Coleridge the ancient Gauls, including Bretons, Cornish, attributed his leaving "Kubla Khan" unfinished to Welsh, Irish, etc.

an interruption, while he was writing it, by "a per-

2. Traditional Welsh congresses of bards, min-son on business from Porlock." Having been strels, and poets, at which contests of minstrelsy,
"detained by him for above an hour," Coleridge singing, or oratory are conducted.

proved unable to recapture the vision that was the

3. See Samuel Taylor Coleridge's poem "Kubla substance of the poem.

1 4 4 2 / S T E V I E S M I T H

As the truth is I think he was already stuck

With Kubla Khan.

He was weeping and wailing: I am finished, finished,

10 I shall never write another word of it,

When along comes the Person from Porlock

And takes the blame for it.

It was not right, it was wrong,

But often we all do wrong.

15 May we enquire the name of the Person from Porlock?

Why, Porson, didn't you know?

He lived at the bottom of Porlock Hill

So had a long way to go,

He wasn't much in the social sense

20 Though his grandmother was a Warlock,

One of the Rutlandshire ones I fancy

And nothing to do with Porlock,

And he lived at the bottom of the hill as I said

And had a cat named Flo,

25 And had a cat named Flo.

I long for the Person from Porlock

To bring my thoughts to an end,

I am becoming impatient to see him

I think of him as a friend,

30 Often I look out the window

Often I run to the gate

I think, He will come this evening,

I think it is rather late.

I am hungry to be interrupted

35 For ever and ever amen

0 Person from Porlock come quickly

And bring my thoughts to an end.

1 felicitate the people who have a Person from Porlock

To break up everything and throw it away

40 Because then there will be nothing to keep them

And they need not stay.

Why do they grumble so much?

He comes like a benison⁰ blessing

They should be glad he has not forgotten them

45 They might have had to go on.

These thoughts are depressing I know. They are depressing,

I wish I was more cheerful, it is more pleasant,

HERITAGE / 1443

Also it is a duty, we should smile as well as submitting

To the purpose of One Above who is experimenting

50 With various mixtures of human character which goes best,

All is interesting for him it is exciting, but not for us.

There I go again. Smile, smile, and get some work to do

Then you will be practically unconscious without positively having to go.

1962

C O U N T E E C U L L E N

1903-1946

Heritage

For Harold Jackman

What is Africa to me:

Copper sun or scarlet sea,

Jungle star or jungle track,
Strong bronzed men, or regal black
5 Women from whose loins I sprang
When the birds of Eden sang?
One three centuries removed
From the scenes his fathers loved,
Spicy grove, cinnamon tree,
io What is Africa to me?
So I lie, who all day long
Want no sound except the song
Sung by wild barbaric birds
Goading massive jungle herds,
15 Juggernauts of flesh that pass
Trampling tall defiant grass
Where young forest lovers lie,
Plighting troth beneath the sky.
So I lie, who always hear,
20 Though I cram against my ear
Both my thumbs, and keep them there,
Great drums throbbing through the air.
So I lie, whose fount of pride,
Dear distress, and joy allied,
25 Is my somber flesh and skin,
With the dark blood dammed within
Like great pulsing tides of wine
That, I fear, must burst the fine
Channels of the chafing net
30 Where they surge and foam and fret.

1. Great forces or massive objects that crush everything in their path.

1 4 4 4 / C o U N T E E C U L L E N

Africa? A book one thumbs

Listlessly, till slumber comes.

Unremembered are her bats

Circling through the night, her cats

35 Crouching in the river reeds,

Stalking gentle flesh that feeds

By the river brink; no more

Does the bugle-throated roar

Cry that monarch claws have leapt

40 From the scabbards where they slept.

Silver snakes that once a year

Doff the lovely coats you wear,

Seek no covert in your fear

Lest a mortal eye should see;

45 What's your nakedness to me?

Here no leprous flowers rear

Fierce corollas⁰ in the air; petals

Here no bodies sleek and wet,

Dripping mingled rain and sweat,

50 Tread the savage measures of Jungle boys and girls in love.

What is last year's snow to me,²

Last year's anything? The tree

Budding yearly must forget

55 How its past arose or set—

Bough and blossom, flower, fruit,
Even what shy bird with mute
Wonder at her travail there,
Meekly labored in its hair.

*60 One three centuries removed
From the scenes his fathers loved,
Spicy grove, cinnamon tree,
What is Africa to me?*

So I lie, who find no peace
65 Night or day, no slight release
From the unremittent beat
Made by cruel padded feet
Walking through my body's street.

Up and down they go, and back,
70 Treading out a jungle track.

So I lie, who never quite Safely sleep from rain at night—
I can never rest at all

When the rain begins to fall;
75 Like a soul gone mad with pain
I must match its weird refrain;
Ever must I twist and squirm,
Writhing like a baited worm,

2. Cf. the refrain of "Ballad of the Ladies of Bygone Time," by the French poet Francois Villon (1431-1463?): "Where are the snows of yesteryear?"

HERITAGE / 1445

While its primal measures drip so Through my body, crying, "Strip!

Doff this new exuberance.
Come and dance the Lover's Dance!"
In an old remembered way
Rain works on me night and day.
85 Quaint, outlandish heathen gods
Black men fashion out of rods,
Clay, and brittle bits of stone,
In a likeness like their own,
My conversion came high-priced;
90 I belong to Jesus Christ,
Preacher of Humility;
Heathen gods are naught to me.
Father, Son, and Holy Ghost,
So I make an idle boast;
95 Jesus of the twice-turned cheek,³
Lamb of God, although I speak
With my mouth thus, in my heart
Do I play a double part.
Ever at Thy glowing altar
100 Must my heart grow sick and falter,
Wishing He I served were black,
Thinking then it would not lack Precedent of pain to guide it,
Let who would or might deride it;
105 Surely then this flesh would know
Yours had borne a kindred woe.
Lord, I fashion dark gods, too,
Daring even to give You

Dark despairing features where,
110 Crowned with dark rebellious hair,
Patience wavers just so much as Mortal grief compels, while touches
Quick and hot, of anger, rise
To smitten cheek and weary eyes.
115 Lord, forgive me if my need
Sometimes shapes a human creed.

*All day long and all night through,
One thing only must I do:
Quench my pride and cool my blood,
120 Lest I perish in the flood,
Lest a hidden ember set
Timber that I thought was wet
Burning like the driest flax,
Melting like the merest wax,*

3. Cf. Matthew 5.39: "I say unto you, that ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on the right cheek, turn to him the other also."

1 4 4 6 / C o U N T E E C u L L E N

*125 Lest the grave restore its dead.
Not yet has my heart or head
In the least way realized
They and I are civilized.*

1925

Incident

Once riding in old Baltimore,
Heart-filled, head-filled with glee,
I saw a Baltimorean

Keep looking straight at me.
5 Now I was eight and very small,
And he was no whit bigger,
And so I smiled, but he poked out
His tongue, and called me, "Nigger."
I saw the whole of Baltimore
io From May until December;
Of all the things that happened there
That's all that I remember.

1925

Yet Do I Marvel
I doubt not God is good, well-meaning, kind,
And did He stoop to quibble could tell why
The little buried mole continues blind,
Why flesh that mirrors Him must some day die,
5 Make plain the reason tortured Tantalus⁴
Is baited by the fickle fruit, declare
If merely brute caprice dooms Sisyphus⁵
To struggle up a never-ending stair.
Inscrutable His ways are, and immune
io To catechism by a mind too strewn
With petty cares to slightly understand
What awful brain compels His awful hand.
Yet do I marvel at this curious thing:
To make a poet black, and bid him sing!

1925

I 4. Figure in Greek mythology who was offered 5. Figure in Greek mythology who perpetually food and water only to have it taken away. rolled a stone uphill only to see it roll down again.

1 4 4 7

E A R L E B I R N E Y

1904-1991

Bushed

He invented a rainbow but lightning struck it shattered it into the lake-lap of a mountain
so big his mind slowed when he looked at it

Yet he built a shack on the shore

s learned to roast porcupine belly and wore the quills on his hatband

At first he was out with the dawn

whether it yellowed bright as wood-columbine or was only a fuzzed moth in a flannel of storm

10 But he found the mountain was clearly alive sent messages whizzing down every hot morning boomed proclamations at noon and spread out a white guard of goat

before falling asleep on its feet at sundown

is When he tried his eyes on the lake ospreys¹ would fall like valkyries²

choosing the cut-throat

He took then to waiting

till the night smoke rose from the boil of the sunset

20 But the moon carved unknown totems out of the lakeshore

owls in the beardusky woods derided him

moosehorned cedars circled his swamps and tossed their antlers up to the stars 25 Then he knew though the mountain slept the winds were shaping its peak to an arrowhead poised
And now he could only bar himself in and wait
30 for the great flint to come singing into his heart 1952

The Bear on the Delhi Road³

Unreal tall as a myth
by the road the Himalayan bear

1. Large, fish-eating hawks.

battle and afterwards carried them to Valhalla, the

2. In Norse mythology, the warrior-maidens of hall of the heroic slain.

Odin; they selected the heroes who were to die in

3. In India.

1 4 4 8 / C . D A Y L E W I S

is beating the brilliant air

with his crooked arms

About him two men bare

spindly as locusts leap

One pulls on a ring

in the great soft nose His mate

flicks flicks with a stick

10 up at the rolling eyes

They have not led him here

down from the fabulous hills to this bald alien plain and the clamorous world to kill 15

but simply to teach him to dance
They are peaceful both these spare men of Kashmir⁴ and the bear alive is their living too
If far on the Delhi way

20 around him galvanic⁵ they dance

it is merely to wear wear from his shaggy body the tranced wish forever to stay
only an ambling bear

25

four-footed in berries
It is no more joyous for them
in this hot dust to prance out of reach of the praying claws sharpened to paw for ants

30 in the shadows of deodars⁰ East Indian cedars

It is not easy to free myth from reality
or rear this fellow up to lurch lurch with them
in the tranced dancing of men

1962

1975

C . DAY L E W I S

1904-1972

Two Songs

I've heard them liltng at loom and belting,

Lasses liltng before dawn of day:

4. Mountainous region of northern India.

1. Cf. Jean Elliot, "The Flowers of the Forest"

5. I.e., exciting him as if with electric shock.

(p. 677).

W H E R E A R E T H E W A R P O E T S ? / 1 4 4 9

But now they are silent, not gamesome and gallant—

The flowers of the town are rotting away.

5 There was laughter and loving in the lanes at evening;

Handsome were the boys then, and girls were gay.

But lost in Flanders² by medalled commanders

The lads of the village are vanished away.

Cursed be the promise that takes our men from us—

10 All will be champion if you choose to obey:

They fight against hunger but still it is stronger—

The prime of our land grows cold as the clay.

The women are weary, once lilted so merry,

Waiting to marry for a year and a day:

15 From wooing and winning, from owning or earning

The flowers of the town are all turned away.

Come, live with me and be my love,^s

And we will all the pleasures prove

Of peace and plenty, bed and board,
20 That chance employment may afford.
I'll handle dainties⁰ on the docks delicacies
And thou shalt read of summer frocks:
At evening by the sour canals
We'll hope to hear some madrigals.
25 Care on thy maiden brow shall put
A wreath of wrinkles, and thy foot
Be shod with pain: not silken dress
But toil shall tire thy loveliness.
Hunger shall make thy modest zone⁰ belt
30 And cheat fond death of all but bone—
If these delights thy mind may move,
Then live with me and be my love.

1935

Where are the War Poets?
They who in folly or mere greed
Enslaved religion, markets, laws,
Borrow our language now and bid
Us to speak up in freedom's cause.

2. Site of many of the most murderous battles of Shepherd to His Love" (p. 256) and Sir Walter World War I. Raleigh, "The Nymph's Reply to the Shepherd"

3. Cf. Christopher Marlowe, "The Passionate (p. 152).

1 4 5 0 / P A T R I C K K A V A N A G H

5 It is the logic of our times,
No subject for immortal verse—
That we who lived by honest dreams
Defend the bad against the worse.

1943

RICHARDEBERHART

b. 1904

The Fury of Aerial Bombardment

You would think the fury of aerial bombardment

Would rouse God to relent; the infinite spaces

Are still silent. He looks on shock-pried faces.

History, even, does not know what is meant.

5 You would feel that after so many centuries

God would give man to repent; yet he can kill

As Cain¹ could, but with multitudinous will,

No farther advanced than in his ancient furies.

Was man made stupid to see his own stupidity?

io Is God by definition indifferent, beyond us all?

Is the eternal truth man's fighting soul

Wherein the Beast ravens in its own avidity?

Of Van Wattering I speak, and Averill,

Names on a list, whose faces I do not recall

15 But they are gone to early death, who late⁰ in school recently

Distinguished the belt feed lever from the belt holding pawl.²

1947

PATRICK KAVANAGH

1904-1967

Sanctity

To be a poet and not know the trade,

To be a lover and repel all women;

Twin ironies by which great saints are made,

The agonising pincer-jaws of Heaven.

1936

I. The firstborn son of Adam and Eve, he murdered his brother Abel (Genesis 4.8).

II. Eberhart was an aerial gunnery instructor during

2. Parts of the .50-caliber Browning machine gun, during the summer of 1944.

THE GREAT HUNGER / 1 4 5 1

*From The Great Hunger*¹

I

Clay is the word and clay is the flesh

Where the potato-gatherers like mechanised scarecrows move

Along the side-fall of the hill—Maguire and his men.

If we watch them an hour is there anything we can prove

5 Of life as it is broken-backed over the Book

Of Death? Here crows gabble over worms and frogs

And the gulls like old newspapers are blown clear of the hedges, luckily.

Is there some light of imagination in these wet clods?

Or why do we stand here shivering?

10 Which of these men

Loved the light and the queen

Too long virgin? Yesterday was summer. Who was it promised marriage to himself

Before apples were hung from the ceilings for Hallowe'en?

We will wait and watch the tragedy to the last curtain,

15 Till the last soul passively like a bag of wet clay
Rolls down the side of the hill, diverted by the angles
Where the plough missed or a spade stands, straitening the way.
A dog lying on a torn jacket under a heeled-up cart,
A horse nosing along the posied headland, trailing 20 A rusty plough. Three heads hanging between wide-apart Legs. October playing a symphony on a slack wire paling.
Maguire watches the drills flattened out
And the flints that lit a candle for him on a June altar Flameless. The drills slipped by and the days slipped by 25 And he trembled his head away and ran free from the world's halter,
And thought himself wiser than any man in the townland²
When he laughed over pints of porter⁰ strong, dark ale
Of how he came free from every net spread
In the gaps of experience. He shook a knowing head
30 And pretended to his soul
That children are tedious in hurrying fields of April
Where men are spanging⁰ across wide furrows. leaping
Lost in the passion that never needs a wife—
The pricks that pricked were the pointed pins of harrows.
35 Children scream so loud that the crows could bring
The seed of an acre away with crow-rude jeers.
Patrick Maguire, he called his dog and he flung a stone in the air
And hallooed the birds away that were the birds of the years.
1. Kavanagh's most famous work is his long poem Maguire, who is bound to the soil by the need not in fourteen sections, The Great Hunger (1942).

to leave his aged mother, and whose Church-Named for a severe famine that decimated the induced sense of sin is so strong that he dies a Irish population during the 1840s, the poem bachelor and perhaps a virgin.

focuses on the spiritual and sexual hunger of the
2. In Ireland, an area of land comparable to a Irish peasantry among whom Kavanagh grew up. township.

The central figure is a potato farmer named Patrick

1 4 5 2 / P A T R I C K K A V A N A G H

Turn over the weedy clods and tease out the tangled skeins.

40 What is he looking for there?

He thinks it is a potato, but we know better

Than his mud-gloved fingers probe in this insensitive hair.

“Move forward the basket and balance it steady

In this hollow. Pull down the shafts of that cart, Joe,

45 And straddle the horse,” Maguire calls.

“The wind’s over Brannagan’s, now that means rain.

Graip⁰ up some withered stalks and see that no potato falls *fork

Over the tail-board going down the ruckety pass—

And that’s a job we’ll have to do in December,

50 Gravel it and build a kerb on the bog-side. Is that Cassidy’s ass

Out in my clover? Curse o’ God—

Where is that dog?

Never where he’s wanted.” Maguire grunts and spits

Through a clay-wattled moustache and stares about him
from the height.

55 His dream changes again like the cloud-swung wind

And he is not so sure now if his mother was right

When she praised the man who made a field his bride.

Watch him, watch him, that man on a hill whose spirit

Is a wet sack flapping about the knees of time.

60 He lives that his little fields may stay fertile when his own body

Is spread in the bottom of a ditch under two coulter's crossed in Christ's Name.

He was suspicious in his youth as a rat near strange bread,

When girls laughed; when they screamed he knew that meant

The cry of fillies in season. He could not walk

65 The easy road to his destiny. He dreamt

The innocense of young brambles to hooked treachery.

O the grip, O the grip of irregular fields! No man escapes.

It could not be that back of the hills love was free

And ditches straight.

70 No monster hand lifted up children and put down apes

As here

“O God if I had been wiser!”

That was his sigh like the brown breeze in the thistles.

He looks towards his house and haggard.0 “O God if I had been wiser!” yard

75 But now a crumpled leaf from the whitethorn bushes

Darts like a frightened robin, and the fence

Shows the green of after-grass through a little window,
And he knows that his own heart is calling his mother a liar.

God's truth is life—even the grotesque shapes of its foulest fire.

so The horse lifts its head and cranes

Through the whins⁰ and stones masses of gorse shrub

To lip late passion in the crawling clover.

3. Iron blades in ploughs.

CANAL BANK WALK / 1 4 5 3

In the gap there's a bush weighted with boulders like morality,
The fools of life bleed if they climb over.

85 The wind leans from Brady's, and the coltsfoot leaves are holed with rust,

Rain fills the cart-tracks and the sole-plate grooves;

A yellow sun reflects in Donaghmoyne⁴

The poignant light in puddles shaped by hooves.

Come with me, Imagination, into this iron house

90 And we will watch from the doorway the years run back,

And we will know what a peasant's left hand wrote on the page.

Be easy, October. No cackle hen, horse neigh, tree sough, duck quack.

1942

Epic

I have lived in important places, times

When great events were decided, who owned

That half a rood⁰ of rock, a no-man's land quarter acre

Surrounded by our pitchfork-armed claims.

5 I heard the Duffys shouting “Damn your soul”
And old McCabe stripped to the waist, seen
Step the plot defying blue cast-steel—
“Here is the march along these iron stones”
That was the year of the Munich bother.⁵ Which io Was more important? I inclined To lose my faith in Ballyrush and Gortin⁶
Till Homer’s ghost came whispering to my mind
He said: I made the Iliad⁷ from such A local row. Gods make their own importance.

1951

Canal Bank Walk⁸

Leafy-with-love banks and the green waters of the canal
Pouring redemption for me, that I do
The will of God, wallow in the habitual, the banal,
Grow with nature again as before I grew.

5 The bright stick trapped, the breeze adding a third Party to the couple kissing on an old seat,
And a bird gathering materials for the nest for the Word
Eloquently new and abandoned to its delirious beat.

4. A stream in County Monaghan.

6. Small townships, near Kavanagh’s home, in

5. Diplomatic crisis of September 1939 (involving County Monaghan.

Britain, Czechoslovakia, France, and Germany)

7. Homer’s epic poem about the Trojan War.

that precipitated World War II.

8. Along Dublin’s Grand Canal.

1 4 5 4 / S T A N L E Y K U N I T Z

O unworn world enrapture me, encapture me in a web
10 Of fabulous grass and eternal voices by a beech,
Feed the gaping need of my senses, give me ad lib
To pray unselfconsciously with overflowing speech
For this soul needs to be honoured with a new dress woven From green and blue things and arguments that cannot be proven.

1960

S T A N L E Y K U N I T Z

b. 1905

He1

He runs before the wise men: he
Is moving on the hills like snow.

No gifts, no tears, no company
He brings, but wind-rise and water-flow.

5 In meadows of descended day

His motion leans, dividing air:

He takes the unforgiving way

Beneath the apostolic star.²

She who has known him calls him stranger,

io Parting the night's long hair, he steals

Within the heart, that humble manger

Where the white, astonished spirit kneels.

His vertical inflicting pride,

Whose shadow cuts the nib of space,

15 Bends to this virtue fructified.³

But though he kiss the little face

Like rapture breaking on the mind,
The necessary fierce details
Implacably he has designed.
20 Redemption hangs upon the nails.
1928, 1958 1930, 1958

Robin Redbreast

It was the dingiest bird
you ever saw, all the color

1. Kunitz's preferred version of a poem he wrote Incarnation, at twenty-three, inspired by Luke's account, in the 2. The star of Bethlehem.

Christian Scriptures, of the Annunciation and 3. Made fruitful, productive. Nib: point of a pen.

T O U C H M E / 1 4 5 5

washed from him, as if he had been standing in the rain, 5 friendless and stiff and cold,
since Eden went wrong.

In the house marked For Sale,
where nobody made a sound,
in the room where I lived 10 with an empty page, I had heard the squawking of the jays
under the wild persimmons tormenting him.

So I scooped him up 15 after they knocked him down, in league with that ounce of heart pounding in my palm,

that dumb beak gaping.
Poor thing! Poor foolish life!
20 without sense enough to stop running in desperate circles, needing my lucky help
to toss him back into his element.
But when I held him high,
25 fear clutched my hand,
for through the hole in his head,
cut whistle-clean ...
through the old dried wound
between his eyes
30 where the hunter's brand had tunneled out his wits ...
I caught the cold flash of the blue unappeasable sky.

1971

Touch Me

Summer is late, my heart.

Words plucked out of the air
some forty years ago
when I was wild with love 5 and torn almost in two scatter like leaves this night of whistling wind and rain.
It is my heart that's late,
it is my song that's flown,
io Outdoors all afternoon

under a gun-metal sky
staking my garden down,
I kneeled to the crickets trilling underfoot as if about

1 4 5 6 / R O B E R T P E N N W A R R E N

15 to burst from their crusty shells; and like a child again
marveled to hear so clear and brave a music pour from such a small machine.

20 What makes the engine go?

Desire, desire, desire.

The longing for the dance
stirs in the buried life.

One season only,

25 and it's done.

So let the battered old willow thrash against the windowpanes and the house timbers creak.

Darling, do you remember

30 the man you married? Touch me, remind me who I am.

1995

R O B E R T P E N N W A R R E N

1905-1989

Bearded Oaks

The oaks, how subtle and marine,
Bearded, and all the layered light

Above them swims; and thus the scene,
Recessed, awaits the positive night.

5 So, waiting, we in the grass now lie
Beneath the languorous tread of light:

The grasses, kelp-like, satisfy
The nameless motions of the air.

Upon the floor of light, and time,

io Unmurmuring, of polyp made,

We rest; we are, as light withdraws,

Twin atolls on a shelf of shade.

Ages to our construction went,

Dim architecture, hour by hour:

15 And violence, forgot now, lent

The present stillness all its power.

The storm of noon above us rolled,

Of light the fury, furious gold,

The long drag troubling us, the depth:

20 Dark is unrocking, unrippling, still.

M A S T S A T D A W N / 1 4 5 7

Passion and slaughter, ruth, decay

Descend, minutely whispering down,

Silted down swaying streams, to lay

Foundation for our voicelessness.

25 All our debate is voiceless here,

As all our rage, the rage of stone;

If hope is hopeless, then fearless is fear,

And history is thus undone.

Our feet once wrought the hollow street

30 With echo when the lamps were dead
At windows, once our headlight glare
Disturbed the doe that, leaping, fled.
I do not love you less that now
The caged heart makes iron stroke, 35 Or less that all that light once gave
The graduate⁰ dark should now revoke. increasing
We live in time so little time
And we learn all so painfully,
That we may spare this hour's term
40 To practice for eternity.

1944

Masts at Dawn

Past second cock-crow yacht masts in the harbor go slowly white.

No light in the east yet, but the stars show a certain fatigue.

They withdraw into a new distance, have discovered our unworthiness.

It is long since

The owl, in the dark eucalyptus, dire and melodious, last called, and

5 Long since the moon sank and the English

Finished fornicating in their ketches.¹ In the evening there was a strong swell.

Red died the sun, but at dark wind rose easterly, white sea nagged the black harbor headland.

When there is a strong swell, you may, if you surrender to
it,

experience

A sense, in the act, of mystic unity with that rhythm. Your peace is the

sea's will.

io But now no motion, the bay-face is glossy in darkness,
like

1. Sailing vessels.

58 / R O B E R T P E N N W A R R E N

An old window pane flat on black ground by the wall, near the ash

heap. It neither

Receives nor gives light. Now is the hour when the sea

Sinks into meditation. It doubts its own mission. The drowned cat

That on the evening swell had kept nudging the piles of the pier and had seemed

To want to climb out and lick itself dry, now floats free. On that

surface a slight convexity only, it is like

An eyelid, in darkness, closed. You must learn to accept the kiss of fate, for

The masts go white slow, as light, like dew, from darkness

Condensed on them, on oiled wood, on metal. Dew whitens in darkness.

I lie in my bed and think how, in darkness, the masts go white.

The sound of the engine of the first fishing dory dies seaward.
Soon

In the inland glen wakes the dawn-dove. We must try

To love so well the world that we may believe, in the end, in God.

1968

There's a Grandfather's Clock in the Hall

There's a grandfather's clock in the hall, watch it closely. The minute

hand stands still, then it jumps, and in between jumps there is no-

Time,

And you are a child again watching the reflection of early morning

sunlight on the ceiling above your bed,

Or perhaps you are fifteen feet under water and holding your breath

as you struggle with a rock-snagged anchor, or holding your breath just long enough for one more long, slow thrust to make the orgasm really intolerable,

Or you are wondering why you really do not give a damn, as they

trundle you off to the operating room,

Or your mother is standing up to get married and is very pretty, and

excited and is a virgin, and your heart overflows, and you watch

her with tears in your eyes, or

She is the one in the hospital room and she is really dying.

They have taken out her false teeth, which are now in a tumbler on the bedside table, and you know that only the undertaker will ever put them back in.

You stand there and wonder if you will ever have to wear false teeth.

EVENINGHAWK / 1459

She is lying on her back, and God, is she ugly, and 10 With gum-flabby lips and each word a special problem, she is asking if it is a new suit that you are wearing.

You say yes, and hate her uremic² guts, for she has no right to make you hurt the way that question hurts.

You do not know why that question makes your heart hurt like a kick in the scrotum,

For you do not yet know that the question, in its murderous triviality, is the last thing she will ever say to you,

Nor know what baptism is occurring in a sod-roofed hut or hole on the night-swept steppes of Asia, and a million mouths, like ruined stars in darkness, make a rejoicing that howls like wind, or wolves,

15 Nor do you know the truth, which is: Seize the nettle of innocence in both your hands, for this is the only way, and every

Ulcer in love's lazaret³ may, like a dawn-stung gem, sing—or even hurst into whoops of, perhaps, holiness.

But, in any case, watch the clock closely. Hold your breath and wait.

Nothing happens, nothing happens, then suddenly, quick as a wink, and slick as a mink's prick, Time thrusts through the time of no-

Time.

1974

Evening Hawk

From plane of light to plane, wings dipping through

Geometries and orchids that the sunset builds,

Out of the peak's black angularity of shadow, riding

The last tumultuous avalanche of 5 Light above pines and the guttural gorge,

The hawk comes.

His wing

Scythes down another day, his motion

Is that of the honed steel-edge, we hear

io The crashless fall of stalks of Time.

The head of each stalk is heavy with the gold of our error.

Look! Look! he is climbing the last light

Who knows neither Time nor error, and under

Whose eye, unforgiving, the world, unforgiven, swings

15 Into shadow.

2. Characterized by a toxic condition associated 3. Storeroom; also (lazaretto), quarters for quar-with kidney disease. antine or contagious hospital.

1 4 6 0 / J O H N B E T J E M A N

Long now,

The last thrush is still, the last bat

Now cruises in his sharp hieroglyphics. His wisdom

Is ancient, too, and immense. The star

20 Is steady, like Plato,⁴ over the mountain.

If there were no wind we might, we think, hear
The earth grind on its axis, or history
Drip in darkness like a leaking pipe in the cellar.

1975

J O H N B E T J E M A N

1906-1984

Death in Leamington¹

She died in the upstairs bedroom
By the light of the evening star
That shone through the plate glass window
From over Leamington Spa.

5 Beside her the lonely crochet
Lay patiently and unstirred,
But the fingers that would have worked it
Were dead as the spoken word.

And Nurse came in with the tea-things to Breast high 'mid the stands and chairs—
But Nurse was alone with her own little soul,
And the things were alone with theirs.

She bolted the big round window,
She let the blinds unroll,

15 She set a match to the mantle,²
She covered the fire with coal.

And “Tea!” she said in a tiny voice
“Wake up! It’s nearly five.”

Oh! Chintzy,³ chintzy cheeriness,

20 Half dead and half alive!

Do you know that the stucco is peeling?

Do you know that the heart will stop?

From those yellow Italianate arches

Do you hear the plaster drop?

4. Here, a symbol of the “steady” because he char-

2. The incandescent cloth hood of a gaslight jet.

acterized physical objects as impermanent repre-

3. Not in the slang sense of gaudy or cheap, but sentations of unchanging ideas.

meaning that the room’s hangings and furniture

1. Leamington Spa is a health resort in Warwickcoverings are of the flower-patterned, glazed-shire, England, with medicinal springs and baths.

cotton fabric called chintz.

THE ARREST OF OSCAR WILDE AT THE CADOGAN HOTEL / 1461

25 Nurse looked at the silent bedstead,

At the grey, decaying face,

As the calm of a Leamington evening

Drifted into the place.

She moved the table of bottles

30 Away from the bed to the wall;

And tiptoeing gently over the stairs

Turned down the gas in the hall.

1932

The Arrest of Oscar Wilde at the Cadogan Hotel⁴

He sipped at a weak hock⁵ and seltzer

As he gazed at the London skies

Through the Nottingham lace of the curtains

Or was it his bees-winged⁶ eyes?
5 To the right and before him Pont Street
Did tower in her new built red,
As hard as the morning gaslight
That shone on his unmade bed,
“I want some more hock in my seltzer,
10 And Robbie,⁷ please give me your hand—
Is this the end or beginning?
How can I understand?
“So you’ve brought me the latest Yellow Book:⁸
And Buchan⁹ has got in it now:
15 Approval of what is approved of
Is as false as a well-kept vow.
“More hock, Robbie—where is the seltzer?
Dear boy, pull again at the bell!
They are all little better than cretins,
20 Though this is the Cadogan Hotel.
“One astrakhan coat is at Willis’s—
Another one’s at the Savoy:
Do fetch my morocco portmanteau,
And bring them on later, dear boy.”

4. On May 27, 1895, the Irish writer Oscar Wilde
Wilde after the latter’s downfall.

(1856—1900) was convicted of “indecent

8. An elaborately illustrated hardcover periodical, between grown men, in public or private” (i.e., of which appeared quarterly from 1894 to 1897, and homosexuality) and was sentenced to two years in which many writers associated with the Aes-hard labor.

thetic movement were published.

5. Generic term for German white wine.

9. John Buchan, later Lord Tweedsmuir (1875—

6. Filmed over (from beeswing: a film that forms 1940), author of several popular novels, contrib-on old wines).

uted two stories to The Yellow Book in 1896.

7. Robert Ross, a friend who remained loyal to

1 4 6 2 / J O H N B E T J E M A N

25 A thump, and a murmur of voices—

(“Oh why must they make such a din?”)

As the door of the bedroom swung open

And TWO PLAIN CLOTHES POLICEMEN came in:

“Mr. Woilde, we ave come for tew take yew

30 Where felons and criminals dwell:

We must ask yew tew leave with us quietly

For this is the Cadogan Hotel.”

He rose, and he put down The Yellow Book.

He staggered—and, terrible-eyed,

35 He brushed past the palms on the staircase

And was helped to a hansom outside.

1937

East Anglian Bathel

Oh when the early morning at the seaside

Took us with hurrying steps from Horsey Mere

To see the whistling bent-grass on the leaside

And then the tumbled breaker-line appear,
5 On high, the clouds with mighty adumbration0 shadows
Sailed over us to seaward fast and clear
And jellyfish in quivering isolation
Lay silted in the dry sand of the breeze
And we, along the tableland of beach blown io Went gooseflesh from our shoulders to our knees
And ran to catch the football, each to each thrown,
In the soft and swirling music of the seas.
There splashed about our ankles as we waded
Those intersecting wavelets morning-cold, 15 And sudden dark a patch of sea was shaded,
And sudden light, another patch would hold
The warmth of whirling atoms in a sun-shot
And underwater sandstorm green and gold.
So in we dived and louder than a gunshot
20 Sea water broke in fountains down the ear.
How cold the bathe, how chattering cold the drying,
How welcoming the inland reeds appear,
The wood smoke and the breakfast and the frying,
And your warm freshwater ripples, Horsey Mere.
1945

1. East Anglia comprises the English counties of area of the town of Horsey) is on the coast of Nor-Norfolk and Suffolk; Horsey Mere (“Mere,” derivfolk, north of Great Yarmouth.

ing from Latin mare, the sea, indicating the resort

False Security

I remember the dread with which I at a quarter past four
Let go with a bang behind me our house front door
And, clutching a present for my dear little hostess tight,
Sailed out for the children's party into the night
5 Or rather the gathering night. For still some boys
In the near municipal acres were making a noise
Shuffling in fallen leaves and shouting and whistling
And running past hedges of hawthorn, spikey and bristling.
And black in the oncoming darkness stood out the trees
10 And pink shone the ponds in the sunset ready to freeze
And all was still and ominous waiting for dark
And the keeper was ringing his closing bell in the park
And the arc lights started to fizzle and burst into mauve
As I climbed West Hill to the great big house in The Grove, 15 Where the children's party was and the dear little hostess.
But halfway up stood the empty house where the ghost is
I crossed to the other side and under the arc
Made a rush for the next kind lamppost out of the dark
And so to the next and the next till I reached the top 20 Where the Grove branched off to the left. Then ready to drop
I ran to the ironwork gateway of number seven Secure at last on the lamplit fringe of Heaven.
Oh who can say how subtle and safe one feels Shod in one's children's sandals from Daniel Neal's, 25 Clad in one's party clothes made of stuff from Heal's?
And who can still one's thrill at the candle shine

On cakes and ices and jelly and blackcurrant wine,
And the warm little feel of my hostess's hand in mine?
Can I forget my delight at the conjuring show?

30 And wasn't I proud that I was the last to go?

Too overexcited and pleased with myself to know
That the words I heard my hostess's mother employ
To a guest departing, would ever diminish my joy,

I W O N D E R W H E R E J U L I A F O U N D T H A T
S T R A N G E , R A T H E R C O M M O N L I T T L E
B O Y ?

1958

W I L L I A M E M P S O N

1906-1984

Legal Fiction1

Law makes long spokes of the short stakes of men.

Your well fenced out real estate of mind

2. English interior-design chain. Daniel Neal's: 1. Something assumed to be true for the purpose famous English shoe store. of legal argument, whether or not it is true.

1 4 6 4 / W I L L I A M E M P S O N

No high flat of the nomad citizen

Looks over, or train leaves behind.

5 Your rights extend under and above your claim

Without bound; you own land in heaven and hell;

Your part of earth's surface and mass the same,

Of all cosmos' volume, and all stars as well.

Your rights reach down where all owners meet, in hell's

10 Pointed exclusive conclave, at earth's centre

(Your spun farm's root still on that axis dwells);

And up, through galaxies, a growing sector.
You are nomad yet; the lighthouse beam you own
Flashes, like Lucifer,² through the firmament.
15 Earth's axis varies; your dark central cone
Wavers a candle's shadow, at the end.

1935

Missing Dates

Slowly the poison the whole blood stream fills.
It is not the effort nor the failure tires.
The waste remains, the waste remains and kills.
It is not your system or clear sight that mills
5 Down small to the consequence a life requires;
Slowly the poison the whole blood stream fills.
They bled an old dog dry yet the exchange rills⁰ streams
Of young dog blood gave but a month's desires;
The waste remains, the waste remains and kills.
io It is the Chinese tombs and the slag hills
Usurp the soil, and not the soil retires.³
Slowly the poison the whole blood stream fills.
Not to have fire is to be a skin that shrills.
The complete fire is death. From partial fires
15 The waste remains, the waste remains and kills.
It is the poems you have lost, the ills
From missing dates, at which the heart expires.
Slowly the poison the whole blood stream fills.
The waste remains, the waste remains and kills.

1940

2. The morning star (Venus); also, a name of reported somewhere, but the legend that a fifth or Satan (meaning “light-bearer”) before he was cast some such part of the soil of China is given up to out of heaven.

ancestral tombs is (by the way) not true” [Empson’s

3. “It is true about the old dog, at least I saw it note].

1 4 6 5

W . H . A U D E N

1907-1973

Lullaby

Lay your sleeping head, my love,

Human on my faithless arm;

Time and fevers burn away

Individual beauty from

5 Thoughtful children, and the grave

Proves the child ephemeral:

But in my arms till break of day

Let the living creature lie,

Mortal, guilty, but to me

10 The entirely beautiful.

Soul and body have no bounds:

To lovers as they lie upon

Her tolerant enchanted slope

In their ordinary swoon,

15 Grave the vision Venus¹ sends

Of supernatural sympathy,

Universal love and hope;

While an abstract insight wakes
Among the glaciers and the rocks
20 The hermit's carnal ecstasy.
Certainty, fidelity
On the stroke of midnight pass
Like vibrations of a bell
And fashionable madmen raise 25 Their pedantic boring cry:
Every farthing² of the cost,
All the dreaded cards foretell,
Shall be paid, but from this night
Not a whisper, not a thought,
30 Not a kiss nor look be lost.
Beauty, midnight, vision dies:
Let the winds of dawn that blow
Softly round your dreaming head
Such a day of welcome show
35 Eye and knocking heart may bless,
Find our mortal world enough;
Noons of dryness find you fed
By the involuntary powers,
Nights of insult let you pass
40 Watched by every human love.

January 1937 1940

1. Roman goddess of love and beauty.
2. Old British coin worth one fourth of a penny.

1 4 6 6 / W . H . A U D E N

Spain 19373

Yesterday all the past. The language of size
Spreading to China along the trade-routes; the diffusion
Of the counting-frame and the cromlech;⁴
Yesterday the shadow-reckoning in the sunny climates.
5 Yesterday the assessment of insurance by cards,
The divination of water; yesterday the invention
Of cart-wheels and clocks, the taming of Horses; yesterday the bustling world of the navigators.
Yesterday the abolition of fairies and giants;
10 The fortress like a motionless eagle eyeing the valley,
The chapel built in the forest;
Yesterday the carving of angels and of frightening gargoyles;
The trial of heretics among the columns of stone;
Yesterday the theological feuds in the taverns
15 And the miraculous cure at the fountain;
Yesterday the Sabbath of Witches.⁵ But to-day the struggle.
Yesterday the installation of dynamos and turbines;
The construction of railways in the colonial desert;
Yesterday the classic lecture
20 On the origin of Mankind. But to-day the struggle.
Yesterday the belief in the absolute value of Greek;
The fall of the curtain upon the death of a hero;
Yesterday the prayer to the sunset,
And the adoration of madmen. But to-day the struggle.
25 As the poet whispers, startled among the pines
Or, where the loose waterfall sings, compact, or upright
On the crag by the leaning tower:
“O my vision. O send me the luck of the sailor.”

And the investigator peers through his instruments

30 At the inhuman provinces, the virile bacillus

Or enormous Jupiter finished:

“But the lives of my friends. I inquire, I inquire.”

And the poor in their fireless lodgings dropping the sheets

Of the evening paper: “Our day is our loss. O show us

35 History the operator, the Organiser, Time the refreshing river.”

3. Auden traveled to Spain in January 1936, say-seen.

ing he was going to drive an ambulance for the left-

4. Ancient stone monument.

wing Republican forces then engaged in a civil war

5. Ceremonial gathering of witches in parody of

with the Fascist Nationalists, but returned shortly,

Christian service.

without having done so, horrified by what he had

S P A I N 1 9 3 7 / 1 4 6 7

And the nations combine each cry, invoking the life

That shapes the individual belly and orders

T h e private nocturnal terror:

40 “Did you not f o u n d once the city state of the sponge,

“Raise the vast military empires of the shark

And the tiger, establish the robin’s plucky canton?0 district

Intervene. O descend as a dove6 or

A furious papa or a mild engineer:7 but descend.”

45 And the life, if it answers at all, replies from the heart

And the eyes and the lungs, from the shops and squares of the city:

“O no, I am not the Mover,

Not to-day, not to you. To you I’m the “Yes-man, the bar-companion, the easily-duped:

50 I am whatever you do; I am your vow to be Good, your h u m o r o u s story;

I am your business voice; I am your marriage.

“What’s your proposal? To build the Just City?8 I will.

I agree. Or is it the suicide pact, the romantic 55 Death? Very well, I accept, for

I am your choice, your decision: yes, I am Spain.”

Many have heard it on remote peninsulas,

On sleepy plains, in the aberrant fishermen’s islands,

In the corrupt heart of the city;

60 Have heard and migrated like gulls or the seeds of a flower.

They clung like burrs to the long expresses that lurch

Through the unjust lands, through the night, through the alpine tunnel;

They floated over the oceans;

They walked the passes: they came to present their lives.

65 On that arid square, that fragment nipped off from hot

Africa, soldered so crudely to inventive Europe,

On that tableland scored by rivers,

O u r fever’s menacing shapes are precise and alive.

To-morrow, perhaps, the future: the research on fatigue

70 And the movements of packers; the gradual exploring of all the

Octaves of radiation;

To-morrow the enlarging of consciousness by diet and breathing.

To-morrow the rediscovery of romantic love;

The photographing of ravens; all the fun under

75 Liberty's masterful shadow;

To-morrow the hour of the pageant-master and the musician.

6. In the Bible and Christian iconography, the of the Greek for "god from the machinery"), the Holy Ghost often takes the form of a dove descend-device by which in Greek theater the gods were ing to Earth.

shown in the air.

7. Refers to a deus ex machina (Latin translation

8. A topic discussed by Plato in his Republic.

1 4 6 8 / W . H . A U D E N

To-morrow for the young the poets exploding like bombs,

The walks by the lake, the winter of perfect communion;

To-morrow the bicycle races

so Through the suburbs on summer evenings: but to-day the struggle.

To-day the inevitable increase in the chances of death;

The conscious acceptance of guilt in the fact of murder;⁹

To-day the expending of powers

On the flat ephemeral pamphlet and the boring meeting.

85 To-day the makeshift consolations; the shared cigarette;

The cards in the candle-lit barn and the scraping concert,

The masculine jokes; to-day the Fumbled and unsatisfactory embrace before hurting.

The stars are dead; the animals will not look:

90 We are left alone with our day, and the time is short and History to the defeated

May say Alas but cannot help or pardon.

April 1937 1937, 1940

As I Walked Out One Evening

As I walked out one evening,

Walking down Bristol Street,

The crowds upon the pavement

Were fields of harvest wheat.

5 And down by the brimming river

I heard a lover sing

Under an arch of the railway:

“Love has no ending.

“I’ll love you, dear, I’ll love you

io Till China and Africa meet,

And the river jumps over the mountain

And the salmon sing in the street,

“I’ll love you till the ocean

Is folded and hung up to dry

15 And the seven stars go squawking

Like geese about the sky.

“The years shall run like rabbits,

For in my arms I hold

The Flower of the Ages,

20 And the first love of the world.”

9. At its first printing, this line read: “The conscious acceptance of guilt in the necessary murder.” Auden later suppressed the poem, largely because of its seeming support for murder.

A s I W A L K E D O U T O N E E V E N I N G / 1 4 6 9

But all the clocks in the city

Began to whirr and chime:

“O let not Time deceive you,

You cannot conquer Time.

25 “In the burrows of the Nightmare

Where Justice naked is,

Time watches from the shadow

And coughs when you would kiss.

“In headaches and in worry

30 Vaguely life leaks away,

And Time will have his fancy

Tomorrow or today.

“Into many a green valley

Drifts the appalling snow;

35 Time breaks the threaded dances

And the diver’s brilliant bow.

“O plunge your hands in water,

Plunge them in up to the wrist;

Stare, stare in the basin

40 And wonder what you’ve missed.

“The glacier knocks in the cupboard,

The desert sighs in the bed,

And the crack in the teacup opens

A lane to the land of the dead.

45 “Where the beggars raffle the banknotes

And the Giant is enchanting to Jack,

And the Lily-white Boy is a Roarer,

And Jill goes down on her back.

“O look, look in the mirror,

50 O look in your distress;

Life remains a blessing

Although you cannot bless.

“O stand, stand at the window

As the tears scald and start;

55 You shall love your crooked neighbour

With your crooked heart.”

It was late, late in the evening,

The lovers they were gone;

The clocks had ceased their chiming,

60 And the deep river ran on.

November 1937

1940

1 4 7 0 / W . H . A U D E N

From Twelve Songs

IX. [Funeral Blues]

Stop all the clocks, cut off the telephone,

Prevent the dog from barking with a juicy bone,

Silence the pianos and with muffled drum

Bring out the coffin, let the mourners come.

Let aeroplanes circle moaning overhead

Scribbling on the sky the message He Is Dead,

Put crepe bows round the white necks of the public doves,

Let the traffic policemen wear black cotton gloves.

He was my North, my South, my East and West,

10 My working week and my Sunday rest,

My noon, my midnight, my talk, my song;
I thought that love would last for ever: I was wrong.
The stars are not wanted now: put out every one;
Pack up the moon and dismantle the sun;
is Pour away the ocean and sweep up the wood;
For nothing now can ever come to any good.

1936?

XII. [Tell Me the Truth About Love]

Some say that love's a little boy,
And some say it's a bird,
Some say it makes the world go round,
And some say that's absurd,
5 And when I asked the man next-door,
Who looked as if he knew,
His wife got very cross indeed,
And said it wouldn't do.
Does it look like a pair of pyjamas,
io Or the ham in a temperance hotel?¹
Does its odour remind one of llamas,²
Or has it a comforting smell?
Is it prickly to touch as a hedge is,
Or soft as eiderdown fluff?³
15 Is it sharp or quite smooth at the edges?
O tell me the truth about love.
Our history books refer to it
In cryptic little notes,
It's quite a common topic on 20 The Transatlantic boats;

1. A hotel where no alcohol is available.

3. Fluffy duck feathers.

2. South American camel-like animals.

M U S I S E D E S B E A U X A R T S / 1 4 7 1

I've found the subject m e n t i o n e d in Accounts of suicides,

And even seen it scribbled on

The backs of railway-guides.

25 D o e s it howl like a hungry Alsatian,

Or b o o m like a military band?

Could one give a first-rate imitation

On a saw or a Steinway Grand?4

Is its singing at parties a riot?

30 D o e s it only like Classical stuff?

Will it stop w h e n o n e wants to be quiet?

O tell me the truth about love.

I looked inside the summer-house;

It wasn't ever there:

35 I tried the T h a m e s at Maidenhead,

And Brighton's5 bracing air.

I don't know what the blackbird sang,

Or what the tulip said;

But it wasn't in the chicken-run,

40 Or underneath the bed.

Can it pull extraordinary faces?

Is it usually sick on a swing?

D o e s it spend all its time at the races,

Or fiddling with pieces of string?

45 Has it views of its own about money?

D o e s it think Patriotism enough?

Are its stories vulgar but funny?

O tell me the truth about love.

W h e n it c o m e s , will it c o m e without warning

50 Just as I'm picking my nose?

Will it knock on my door in the morning,

Or tread in the bus on my toes?

Will it c o m e like a change in the weather?

Will its greeting be courteous or rough?

55 Will it alter my life altogether?

O tell me the truth about love.

January 1 9 3 8 1 9 4 0

Musee des Beaux Artsf

About suffering they were never wrong,

T h e Old Masters: h o w well they understood

4. Brand of grand piano. through a town west of London.

5. Resort town on the English Channel. Thames 6. Museum of Fine Arts (French).

at Maidenhead: the river Thames, as it runs

1 4 7 2

/ W . H . A U D E N

Its human position; how it takes place

While someone else is eating or opening a window or just walking dully along;

5 How, when the aged are reverently, passionately waiting

For the miraculous birth, there always must be

Children who did not specially want it to happen, skating

On a pond at the edge of the wood:

They never forgot

10 That even the dreadful martyrdom must run its course

Anyhow in a corner, some untidy spot

Where the dogs go on with their doggy life and the torturer's horse

Scratches its innocent behind on a tree.

In Brueghel's Icarus,⁷ for instance: how everything turns
away

15 Quite leisurely from the disaster; the ploughman may

Have heard the splash, the forsaken cry,

But for him it was not an important failure; the sun shone

As it had to on the white legs disappearing into the green

Water; and the expensive delicate ship that must have seen

20 Something amazing, a boy falling out of the sky,

Had somewhere to get to and sailed calmly on.

December 1938 1940

In Memory of W. B. Yeats⁸

(d. Jan. 1939)

I

He disappeared in the dead of winter:

The brooks were frozen, the airports almost deserted,

And snow disfigured the public statues;

The mercury sank in the mouth of the dying day.

5 What instruments we have agree

The day of his death was a dark cold day.

Far from his illness

The wolves ran on through the evergreen forests,

The peasant river was untempted by the fashionable quays;

io By mourning tongues

The death of the poet was kept from his poems.

7. The Fall of Icarus, by the Flemish artist Pieter

The poem also alludes to the Nativity scene in Brueghel (ca. 1525—1569), the painting described Brueghel's Numbering at Bethlehem, skaters in his here, is in the Musee d'Art Ancien, a section of the Winter Landscape with Skaters and a Bird Trap, Musees Royaux des Beaux Arts, in Brussels. Dae- and a horse scratching its behind in his Massacre dalus, the legendary Athenian craftsman, con-of the Innocents.

structed a labyrinth for Minos, king of Crete, but

Cf. William Carlos Williams, "Pictures from

was then imprisoned in it with his son, Icarus. Dae-Brueghel" (p. 1283).

dalus made wings of feathers and wax, with which

8. The Irish poet and dramatist William Butler

they flew away, but Icarus flew too near the sun,

Yeats (b. 1865; see pp. 1188-1211), died in Roque-
the wax melted, and he fell into the sea.

brune (southern France) on January 29, 1939.

IN MEMORY OF W. B. YEATS / 1473

But for him it was his last afternoon as himself,

An afternoon of nurses and rumours;

The provinces of his body revolted,

15 The squares of his mind were empty,

Silence invaded the suburbs,

The current of his feeling failed; he became his admirers.
Now he is scattered among a hundred cities
And wholly given over to unfamiliar affections.
20 To find his happiness in another kind of wood⁹
And be punished under a foreign code of conscience.¹
The words of a dead man
Are modified in the guts of the living.
But in the importance and noise of to-morrow
25 When the brokers are roaring like beasts on the floor of the Bourse,²
And the poor have the sufferings to which they are fairly
accustomed,
And each in the cell of himself is almost convinced of his freedom,
A few thousand will think of this day
As one thinks of a day when one did something slightly unusual.
30 What instruments we have agree
The day of his death was a dark cold day.

II

You were silly like us;³ your gift survived it all:
The parish of rich women,⁴ physical decay,
Yourself. Mad Ireland hurt you into poetry.
35 Now Ireland has her madness and her weather still,
For poetry makes nothing happen: it survives
In the valley of its making where executives
Would never want to tamper, flows on south
From ranches of isolation and the busy griefs,
40 Raw towns that we believe and die in; it survives,

A way of happening, a mouth.

III

Earth, receive an honoured guest:

William Yeats is laid to rest.

Let the Irish vessel lie

45 Emptied of its poetry.⁵

9. At the beginning of the Inferno (1.1—3), middle- and rhyme of Yeats's late poem "Under Ben Bulage J Dante finds himself in a metaphorical "dark ben" (see p. 1208). In Collected Shorter Poems wood."

(1966) and thereafter, Auden omitted the three

1. Yeats, as represented by his work, must endure stanzas that originally followed:

the judgment of the living; a veiled reference to his Irish nationalism.

Time that is intolerant

2. The French stock exchange.

Of the brave and innocent,

3. In his prose pieces, Auden objects to aspects of

And indifferent in a week

Yeats's thought, particularly to his interest in the

To a beautiful physique, supernatural.

4. Lady Augusta Gregory (1852-1932), Irish

Worships language and forgives

dramatist, was one of several wealthy women who

Everyone by whom it lives;

provided financial help to Yeats.

Pardons cowardice, conceit

5. This section's stanza pattern echoes the meter

Lays its honours at their feet,

1 4 7 4 / W . H . A U D E N

In the nightmare of the dark

All the dogs of Europe bark.⁶

And the living nations wait,

Each sequestered in its hate;

50 Intellectual disgrace

Stares from every human face,

And the seas of pity lie

Locked and frozen in each eye.

Follow, poet, follow right

55 To the bottom of the night,

With your unconstraining voice

Still persuade us to rejoice;

With the farming of a verse

Make a vineyard of the curse,

60 Sing of human unsuccess

In a rapture of distress;

In the deserts of the heart

Let the healing fountain start,

In the prison of his days

65 Teach the free man how to praise.

February 1939

1940

September 1, 1939

I sit in one of the dives
On Fifty-Second Street⁸ Uncertain and afraid
As the clever hopes expire

5

Of a low dishonest decade:
Waves of anger and fear
Circulate over the bright
And darkened lands of the earth,
Obsessing our private lives;

10

The unmentionable odour of death
Offends the September night.
Accurate scholarship can Unearth the whole offence
Time that with this strange excuse
Yeats was at times antidemocratic and appeared to Pardon Kipling and his views, favor dictatorship.

And will pardon Paul Claudel,

6. A reference to World War II, which began in Pardons him for writing well.

September 1939.

The English writer Rudyard Kipling (1865-1936;

7. The date of Hitler's invasion of Poland, which see pp. 1181—88) was imperialistic and jingoistic.
started World War II.

The French poet, dramatist, and diplomat Paul

8. Perhaps the Dizzy Club, a bar on West 52nd Caudel (1868—1955) was extremely right-wing.
Street, New York City.

S E P T E M B E R 1 , 1 9 3 9 / 1 4 7 5

From Luther⁹ until now

15 That has driven a culture mad,

Find what occurred at Linz,¹

What huge imago² made

A psychopathic god:

I and the public know

20 What all schoolchildren learn,

Those to whom evil is done

Do evil in return.

Exiled Thucydides³ knew

All that a speech can say

25 About Democracy,

And what dictators do,

The elderly rubbish they talk

To an apathetic grave;

Analysed all in his book,

30 The enlightenment driven away,

The habit-forming pain,

Mismanagement and grief:

We must suffer them all again.

Into this neutral air

35 Where blind skyscrapers use

Their full height to proclaim

The strength of Collective Man,

Each language pours its vain
Competitive excuse:
40 But who can live for long
In an euphoric dream;
Out of the mirror they stare,
Imperialism's face
And the international wrong.
45 Faces along the bar
Cling to their average day:
The lights must never go out,
The music must always play,
All the conventions conspire
50 To make this fort assume
The furniture of home;
Lest we should see where we are,
Lost in a haunted wood,
Children afraid of the night
55 Who have never been happy or good.
The windiest militant trash

Important Persons shout

9. Martin Luther (1483-1546), biblical scholar image that influences a person's attitudes and and founder of the Protestant Reformation.

behavior.

1. Hitler spent his boyhood in the Austrian city of

3. Greek general (460-400 B.C.E.), whose History Linz.

of the Peloponnesian War Auden read in the sum-

2. Psychoanalytic term for the subconscious mer of 1939.

1 4 7 6 / W . H . A U D E N

Is not so crude as our wish:

What mad Nijinsky wrote

60 About Diaghilev⁴

Is true of the normal heart;

For the error bred in the bone

Of each woman and each man

Craves what it cannot have,

65 Not universal love

But to be loved alone.⁵

From the conservative dark

Into the ethical life

The dense commuters come,

70 Repeating their morning vow,

“I will be true to the wife,

I’ll concentrate more on my work”,

And helpless governors wake

To resume their compulsory game:

75 Who can release them now,

Who can reach the deaf,
Who can speak for the dumb?
All I have is a voice
To undo the folded lie,
so The romantic lie in the brain
Of the sensual man-in-the-street
And the lie of Authority
Whose buildings grope the sky:
There is no such thing as the State 85 And no one exists alone;
Hunger allows no choice
To the citizen or the police;
We must love one another or die.⁶
Defenceless under the night
90 Our world in stupor lies;
Yet, dotted everywhere,
Ironic points of light
Flash out wherever the Just Exchange their messages:
95 May I, composed like them
Of Eros⁷ and of dust,

4. Vaslav Nijinsky (1890-1950), dancer and choreographer, was a star of the Russian Ballet, myself: “That’s a damned lie! We must die any- directed by the impresario Sergey Diaghilev way.” So, in the next edition, I altered it to (1872-1929).

“We must love one another and die.” This didn’t 5. Auden borrowed lines 65—66 from The Diary of seem to do either, so I cut the stanza. Still no Vaslav Nijinsky (1937): “Some politicians are hypgood. The whole poem, I realized, was infected ocrites like Diaghilev, who does not want universal with an incurable dishonesty—and must be love, but to be loved alone. I want universal love.”
scrapped.

6. In his foreword to the first edition of B. C.
Bloomfield’s
The popularity of the poem persuaded Auden to
W. H. Auden: A Bibliography (1964), Auden writes:
restore it in later editions of his work.

7. Greek god of erotic love; hence, here, sexual Rereading a poem of mine, 1st September, 1939,
love.

after it had been published, I came to the line

I N P R A I S E O F L I M E S T O N E / 1 4 7 7

Beleaguered by the same

N e g a t i o n and despair,

S h o w an affirming flame.

S e p t e m b e r 1 9 3 9 1 9 3 9

In Praise of Limestone

If it form the one landscape that we, the inconstant ones,

Are consistently homesick for, this is chiefly

Because it dissolves in water. Mark these rounded slopes

W i t h their surface fragrance of thyme and, beneath,
5 A secret system of caves and conduits; hear the springs
That spurt out everywhere with a chuckle,
Each filling a private pool for its fish and carving
Its o w n little ravine w h o s e cliffs entertain
T h e butterfly and the lizard; examine this region
io Of short distances and definite places:
W h a t could be more like Mother or a fitter background
For her son, the flirtatious male w h o lounges
Against a rock in the sunlight, never doubting
That for all his faults he is loved; w h o s e works are but 15 Extensions of his power to charm? From weathered outcrop
To hilltop temple, from appearing waters to C o n s p i c u o u s fountains, from a wild to a formal vineyard,
Are ingenious but short steps that a child's wish
To receive more attention than his brothers, whether 20 By pleasing or teasing, can easily take.
Watch, then, the band of rivals as they climb up and down
Their steep stone gennels⁰ in twos and threes, at times channels
Arm in arm, but never, thank God, in step; or engaged On the shady side of a square at midday in 25 Voluble discourse, knowing e a c h other too well to think
There are any important secrets, unable
To conceive a god w h o s e temper tantrums are moral
And not to be pacified by a clever line

Or a good lay: for, a c c u s t o m e d to a stone that responds,

30 They have never had to veil their faces in awe

Of a crater w h o s e blazing fury could not be fixed;

Adjusted to the local needs of valleys

Where everything can be touched or reached by walking,

Their eyes have never looked into infinite space

35 Through the latticework of a nomad's comb; born lucky,

Their legs have never encountered the fungi

And insects of the jungle, the monstrous forms and lives

With which we have nothing, we like to hope, in c o m m o n .

So, w h e n o n e of them goes to the bad, the way his mind works

40 Remains comprehensible: to b e c o m e a pimp

1 4 7 8 / W . H . A U D E N

Or deal in fake jewelry or ruin a fine tenor voice

For effects that bring down the house, could happen to all

But the best and the worst of us ...

That is why, I suppose,

The best and worst never stayed here long but sought

45 Immoderate soils where the beauty was not so external,

The light less public and the meaning of life

Something more than a mad camp. "Come!" cried the granite wastes,

"How evasive is your humour, how accidental

Your kindest kiss, how permanent is death." (Saints-to-be 50 Slipped away sighing.) "Come!" purred the clays and gravels.

“On our plains there is room for armies to drill; rivers
Wait to be tamed and slaves to construct you a tomb
In the grand manner: soft as the earth is mankind and both Need to be altered.” (Intendant Caesars⁸ rose and 55 Left, slamming the door.) But the really reckless were fetched
By an older colder voice, the oceanic whisper:
“I am the solitude that asks and promises nothing;
That is how I shall set you free. There is no love;
There are only the various envies, all of them sad.”
60 They were right, my dear, all those voices were right
And still are; this land is not the sweet home that it looks,
Nor its peace the historical calm of a site
Where something was settled once and for all: A backward
And dilapidated province, connected 65 To the big busy world by a tunnel, with a certain Seedy appeal, is that all it is now? Not quite:
It has a worldly duty which in spite of itself
It does not neglect, but calls into question
All the Great Powers assume; it disturbs our rights. The poet, 70 Admired for his earnest habit of calling
The sun the sun, his mind Puzzle, is made uneasy
By these marble statues which so obviously doubt
His antimythological myth; and these gamins,⁰ street urchins
Pursuing the scientist down the tiled colonnade
75 With such lively offers, rebuke his concern for Nature’s Remotest aspects: I, too, am reproached, for what
And how much you know. Not to lose time, not to get caught,

Not to be left behind, not, please! to resemble
The beasts who repeat themselves, or a thing like water so Or stone whose conduct can be predicted, these Are our Common Prayer, whose greatest comfort is music
Which can be made anywhere, is invisible,
And does not smell. In so far as we have to look forward To death as a fact, no doubt we are right: But if 85 Sins can be forgiven, if bodies rise from the dead,
These modifications of matter into Innocent athletes and gesticulating fountains,
Made solely for pleasure, make a further point:
The blessed will not care what angle they are regarded from, 90 Having nothing to hide. Dear, I know nothing of
8. I.e., administrative emperors.

T H E S H I E L D O F A C H I L L E S / 1 4 7 9

Either, but when I try to imagine a faultless love
Or the life to come, what I hear is the murmur
Of underground streams, what I see is a limestone landscape.

May 1948 1951

Their Lonely Betters

As I listened from a beach-chair in the shade
To all the noises that my garden made,
It seemed to me only proper that words
Should be withheld from vegetables and birds.
5 A robin with no Christian name ran through
The Robin-Anthem which was all it knew,
And rustling flowers for some third party waited
To say which pairs, if any, should get mated.

Not one of them was capable of lying,
io There was not one which knew that it was dying
Or could have with a rhythm or a rhyme
Assumed responsibility for time.

Let them leave language to their lonely betters
Who count some days and long for certain letters;
15 We, too, make noises when we laugh or weep:
Words are for those with promises to keep.

1950 1951

The Shield of Achilles⁹

She looked over his shoulder
For vines and olive trees,
Marble well-governed cities
And ships upon untamed seas,
5 But there on the shining metal
His hands had put instead An artificial wilderness
And a sky like lead.

9. In books 16—17 of Homer's Iliad, Achilles, the chief Greek hero in the Trojan War, loses his armor when his great friend Patroclus, wearing it, is slain by Hector. While Achilles mourns his friend, his mother, the goddess Thetis, goes to Mt. Olympus; a city in peace (with a wedding and a trial) and

Olympus to entreat Hephaestos to make new a city at war; country life (including a harvest feast armor for Achilles, whom both she and Hephaestos and a grape-gathering), animal life, and the joyful pity because he is fated to die soon and his life has life of young men and women. Around all these not been happy. The splendid shield, incorporating scenes, closing them in as the outer border, flows gold and silver as well as less precious metals, is the ocean.

1 4 8 0 / W . H . A U D E N

A plain without a feature, bare and brown,
10 No blade of grass, no sign of neighbourhood,
Nothing to eat and nowhere to sit down,
Yet, congregated on its blankness, stood
An unintelligible multitude,
A million eyes, a million boots in line,
15 Without expression, waiting for a sign.
Out of the air a voice without a face Proved by statistics that some cause was just
In tones as dry and level as the place:
No one was cheered and nothing was discussed;
20 Column by column in a cloud of dust
They marched away enduring a belief
Whose logic brought them, somewhere else, to grief.
She looked over his shoulder
For ritual pieties, 25 White flower-garlanded heifers,

Libation and sacrifice,1

But there on the shining metal

Where the altar should have been,

She saw by his flickering forge-light

30 Quite another scene.

Barbed wire enclosed an arbitrary spot

Where bored officials lounged (one cracked a joke)

And sentries sweated for the day was hot:

A crowd of ordinary decent folk

35 Watched from without and neither moved nor spoke

As three pale figures were led forth and bound

To three posts driven upright in the ground.

The mass and majesty of this world, all

That carries weight and always weighs the same

40 Lay in the hands of others; they were small

And could not hope for help and no help came:

What their foes liked to do was done, their shame

Was all the worst could wish; they lost their pride

And died as men before their bodies died.

45 She looked over his shoulder

For athletes at their games,

Men and women in a dance

Moving their sweet limbs

Quick, quick, to music,

50 But there on the shining shield

His hands had set no dancing-floor

But a weed-choked field.

1. Lines 23-26: cf. John Keats, "Ode on a Grecian Urn," lines 31-34 (p. 939). Libation: sacrifice involving wine or other liquid.

A U S T R A L I A / 1 4 8 1

A ragged urchin, aimless and alone,
Loitered about that vacancy, a bird
55 Flew up to safety from his well-aimed stone:
That girls are raped, that two boys knife a third,
Were axioms to him, who'd never heard
Of any world where promises were kept,
Or one could weep because another wept.
60 The thin-lipped armourer,
Hephaestos hobbled away,
Thetis of the shining breasts
Cried out in dismay
At what the god had wrought
65 To please her son, the strong Iron-hearted man-slaying Achilles
Who would not live long.

1952 1955

A. D. H O P E

1907-2000

Australia

A Nation of trees, drab green and desolate grey
In the field uniform of modern wars,
Darkens her hills, those endless, outstretched paws
Of Sphinx¹ demolished or stone lion worn away.
5 They call her a young country, but they lie:
She is the last of lands, the emptiest,

A woman beyond her change of life,² a breast
Still tender but within the womb is dry.
Without songs, architecture, history:
io The emotions and superstitions of younger lands,
Her rivers of water drown among inland sands,
The river of her immense stupidity
Floods her monotonous tribes from Cairns to Perth.³
In them at last the ultimate men arrive
15 Whose boast is not: “we live” but “we survive.”
A type who will inhabit the dying earth.

1. A reference to the monumental stone sphinx of
3. I.e., from one end of the continent to the other.
Egypt.

Cairns is at the far northeast of Australia, Perth at
2. Menopause; i.e., she is past her childbearing the southwest.
years.

1 4 8 2 / A . D . H O P E

And her five cities, like five teeming sores,
Each drains her: a vast parasite robber-state
Where second-hand Europeans pullulate⁰ breed
20 Timidly on the edge of alien shores.
Yet there are some like me turn gladly home
From the lush jungle of modern thought, to find
The Arabian desert of the human mind,
Hoping, if still from the deserts the prophets come,
25 Such savage and scarlet as no green hills dare
Springs in that waste, some spirit which escapes

The learned doubt, the chatter of cultured apes
Which is called civilization over there.

1939

Imperial⁴ Adam

Imperial Adam, naked in the dew,
Felt his brown flanks and found the rib was gone.
Puzzled he turned and saw where, two and two,
The mighty spoor of Jahweh⁰ marked the lawn. Jehovah, God

5 Then he remembered through mysterious sleep

The surgeon fingers probing at the bone,

The voice so far away, so rich and deep:

“It is not good for him to live alone.”⁵

Turning once more he found Man’s counterpart

io In tender parody breathing at his side.

He knew her at first sight, he knew by heart

Her allegory of sense unsatisfied.

The pawpaw⁶ drooped its golden breasts above

Less generous than the honey of her flesh;

15 The innocent sunlight showed the place of love;

The dew on its dark hairs winked crisp and fresh.

This plump gourd severed from his virile root,

She promised on the turf of Paradise

Delicious pulp of the forbidden fruit;

20 Sly as the snake she loosed her sinuous thighs,

And waking, smiled up at him from the grass;

Her breasts rose softly and he heard her sigh—

From all the beasts whose pleasant task it was

In Eden to increase and multiply

4. I.e., emperor. from one of Adam's ribs (cf. line 6).

5. Genesis 2.18: "And the Lord said, It is not good 6. Papaya tree, that the man should be alone." Eve was created

A D V I C E T O Y O U N G L A D I E S / 1 4 8 3

25 Adam had learned the jolly deed of kind:

He took her in his arms and there and then,

Like the clean beasts, embracing from behind,

Began in joy to found the breed of men.

Then from the spurt of seed within her broke

30 Her terrible and triumphant female cry,

Split upward by the sexual lightning stroke.

It was the beasts now who stood watching by:

The gravid elephant, the calving hind,

The breeding bitch, the she-ape big with young

35 Were the first gentle midwives of mankind;

The teeming lioness rasped her with her tongue;

The proud vicuna⁷ nuzzled her as she slept

Lax on the grass; and Adam watching too

Saw how her dumb breasts at their ripening wept,

40 The great pod of her belly swelled and grew,

And saw its water break, and saw, in fear,

Its quaking muscles in the act of birth,

Between her legs a pigmy face appear,

And the first murderer⁸ lay upon the earth.

1955

Advice to Young Ladies

A.U.C.9 334: about this date

For a sexual misdemeanour, which she denied,
The vestal virgin¹ Postumia was tried.
Livy records it among affairs of state.
5 They let her off: it seems she was perfectly pure;
The charge arose because some thought her talk
Too witty for a young girl, her eyes, her walk
Too lively, her clothes too smart to be demure.
The Pontifex Maximus, summing up the case,
io Warned her in future to abstain from jokes,
To wear less modish and more pious frocks.
She left the court reprieved, but in disgrace.

7. Species of wild llama, a camel-like animal.

its Foundation, the Roman historian Livy (59

8. Cf. Genesis 4: “And Adam knew Eve his wife; B.C.E.—17 C.E.) records the incident narrated in the
and she conceived, and bare Cain ... and it came first three stanzas.

to pass ... that Cain rose up against Abel his

1. One of the young, female priests who tended brother, and slew him.”

the shrine of Vesta, goddess of the hearth. They

9. Ah urbe Condita, “from the founding of the were governed by the Pontifex Maximus (line 9), city” (Latin); the city is Rome, traditionally chief priest of the Roman religion.

founded in 753 B.C.E. In his History of Rome from

1484 / A . D . H O P E

What then? With her the annalist⁰ is less historian

Concerned than what the men achieved that year:
15 Plots, quarrels, crimes, with oratory to spare!
I see Postumia with her dowdy dress,
Stiff mouth and listless step; I see her strive
To give dull answers. She had to knuckle down.
A vestal virgin who scandalized that town
20 Had fair trial, then they buried her alive.²
Alive, bricked up in suffocating dark,
A ration of bread, a pitcher if she was dry,
Preserved the body they did not wish to die
Until her mind was quenched to the last spark.
25 How many the black maw has swallowed in its time!
Spirited girls who would not know their place;
Talented girls who found that the disgrace
Of being a woman made genius a crime;
How many others, who would not kiss the rod³
30 Domestic bullying broke or public shame?
Pagan or Christian, it was much the same:
Husbands, St. Paul declared,⁴ rank next to God.
Livy and Paul, it may be, never knew
That Rome was doomed; each spoke of her with pride.
35 Tacitus,⁵ writing after both had died,
Showed that whole fabric rotten through and through.
Historians spend their lives and lavish ink
Explaining how great commonwealths collapse
From great defects of policy—perhaps 40 The cause is sometimes simpler than they think.
It may not seem so grave an act to break

Postumia's spirit as Galileo's,⁶ to gag

Hypatia as crush Socrates,⁷ or drag

Joan as Giordano Bruno⁸ to the stake.

45 Can we be sure? Have more states perished, then,
For having shackled the inquiring mind,

2. As punishment for breaking her vows of chastity.
demn his own scientific conclusions and was for a tity.

time imprisoned.

3. As the symbol of obedience and chastisement.

7. In 415, Hypatia, a beautiful and learned Egyptian

4. In Ephesians 5.22: "Wives, submit yourselves to your own husbands, as unto the Lord."

an archbishop. In 399 B.C.E., Socrates was sen-

5. Roman historian (ca. 77-117), whose Histories tenced to die by poison because of his supposedly criticize the degeneracy of the times as exemplified subversive teachings.

by three Roman emperors who ruled and were suc-

8. Both were burned at the stake, Joan of Arc in cessively deposed in 68—69.

1431 for heresy and sorcery, Bruno in 1600 for

6. In 1633, the Italian astronomer Galileo Galilei theological and scientific heresies.

was forced by the Roman Catholic Church to con-

THE SUNLIGHT ON THE GARDEN / 1485

Than whose who, in their folly not less blind,

Trusted the servile womb to breed free men?

1966

Inscription for a War

Stranger, go tell the Spartans
we died here obedient to their commands.

— Inscription at Thermopylae 9

Linger not, stranger; shed no tear;
Go back to those who sent us here.
We are the young they drafted out
To wars their folly brought about.
Go tell those old men, safe in bed,
We took their orders and are dead.

1981

LOUIS MACNEICE

1907 - 1963

The Sunlight on the Garden¹

The sunlight on the garden
Hardens and grows cold,
We cannot cage the minute
Within its nets of gold,
5 When all is told
We cannot beg for pardon.
Our freedom as free lances
Advances towards its end;
The earth compels, upon it
io Sonnets and birds descend;
And soon, my friend,
We shall have no time for dances.

The sky was good for flying

Defying the church bells

9. Thermopylae takes its name from hot baths against a huge Persian army led by Xerxes. The near the pass, twenty-five feet wide at its narrow-Persians infiltrated the Greek line by treachery, est, between Thessaly and Locris in Greece. This and the Spartans were wiped out.

place was defended by Leonides and three hun-

1. MacNeice's farewell to his first wife, Mary (nee dred Spartans (with seven hundred Thespians)

Ezra), once the best dancer in Oxford (see line 12).

1486 / Louis M A C N E I C E

15 And every evil iron

Siren and what it tells:

The earth compels,

We are dying, Egypt, dying²

And not expecting pardon,

20 Hardened in heart anew,

But glad to have sat under

Thunder and rain with you,

And grateful too

For sunlight on the garden.

1938

Bagpipe Music³

It's no go the merrygoround, it's no go the rickshaw,

All we want is a limousine and a ticket for the peepshow.

Their knickers⁴ are made of crepe-de-chine, their shoes are made of python,

Their halls are lined with tiger rugs and their walls with heads of bison.

5 John MacDonald found a corpse, put it under the sofa,

Waited till it came to life and hit it with a poker,

Sold its eyes for souvenirs, sold its blood for whiskey,

Kept its bones for dumbbells to use when he was fifty.

It's no go the Yogi-man, it's no go Blavatsky⁵

io All we want is a bank balance and a bit of skirt in a taxi.

Annie MacDougall went to milk, caught her foot in the heather,

Woke to hear a dance record playing of Old Vienna.

It's no go your maidenheads, it's no go your culture,

All we want is a Dunlop tyre and the devil mend the puncture.

15 The Laird o' Phelps spent Hogmanay⁶ declaring he was sober,

Counted his feet to prove the fact and found he had one foot over.

Mrs. Carmichael had her fifth, looked at the job with repulsion,

Said to the midwife "Take it away; I'm through with overproduction."

It's no go the gossip column, it's no go the Ceilidh,⁷

20 All we want is a mother's help and a sugar-stick for the baby.

2. From Shakespeare, Antony and Cleopatra

5. Madame Helena Petrovna Blavatsky (1831—

4.16.43, Antony's speech to Cleopatra: "I am

1891), Russian occultist and theosophist, in whose dying, Egypt, dying.”

writings there was renewed interest in the 1930s.

3. The poem is set in Scotland in the 1930s, the

6. New Year's Eve (Scottish).

years of the Depression, years that led up to the

7. Pronounced kaley; Gaelic term for a social

Munich crisis of 1938 and to the outbreak of gathering with traditional music, storytelling, or

World War II in 1939.

dancing.

4. Women's panties.

A U T U M N J O U R N A L / 1 4 8 7

Willie Murray cut his thumb, couldn't count the damage,

Took the hide of an Ayrshire cow and used it for a bandage.

His brother caught three hundred cran8 when the seas were lavish,

Threw the bleeders back in the sea and went upon the parish.⁹

25 It's no go the Herring Board, it's no go the Bible,

All we want is a packet of fags⁰ when our hands are idle.

cigarettes

It's no go the picture palace, it's no go the stadium,

It's no go the country cot⁰ with a pot of pink geraniums, cottage

It's no go the Government grants, it's no go the elections,

30 Sit on your arse for fifty years and hang your hat on a pension.

It's no go my honey love, it's no go my poppet;

Work your hands from day to day, the winds will blow the profit.

The glass⁰ is falling hour by hour, the glass will fall forever, barometer

But if you break the bloody glass you won't hold up the weather.

1937 1938

From Autumn Journal

IV

September has come and I wake

And I think with joy how whatever, now or in future, the system

Nothing whatever can take

The people away, there will always be people

5 For friends or for lovers though perhaps

The conditions of love will be changed and its vices diminished

And affection not lapse

To narrow possessiveness, jealousy founded on vanity.

September has come, it is hers

io Whose vitality leaps in the autumn,

Whose nature prefers

Trees without leaves and a fire in the fire-place;

So I give her this month and the next

Though the whole of my year should be hers who has rendered already

15 So many of its days intolerable or perplexed

But so many more so happy;

Who has left a scent on my life and left my walls

Dancing over and over with her shadow,

Whose hair is twined in all my waterfalls

20 And all of London littered with remembered kisses.

So I am glad

That life contains her with her moods and moments

More shifting and more transient than I had

8. A measure of just-caught herrings (about 750).

events (public and, as here, private) in autumn

9. I.e., went on relief.

1938.

1. A book-length “documentary” poem covering

1 4 8 8 / L o u i s M A C N E I C E

Yet thought of as being integral to beauty;

25 Whose mind is like the wind on a sea of wheat,

Whose eyes are candour,

And assurance in her feet

Like a homing pigeon never by doubt diverted.

To whom I send my thanks

30 That the air has become shot silk, the streets are music,

And that the ranks

Of men are ranks of men, no more of cyphers.0 zeros

So that if now alone

I must pursue this life, it will not be only

35 A drag from numbered stone to numbered stone

But a ladder of angels, river turning tidal.

Off-hand, at times hysterical, abrupt,

You are one I always shall remember,

W h o m cant can never corrupt

40 Nor argument disinherit.

Frivolous, always in a hurry, forgetting the address,

Frowning too often, taking enormous notice
Of hats and backchat—how could I assess
The thing that makes you different?
45 You whom I remember glad or tired,
Smiling in drink or scintillating anger,
Inopportunately desired
On boats, on trains, on roads when walking.
Sometimes untidy, often elegant,
50 So easily hurt, so readily responsive,
To whom a trifle could be an irritant
Or could be balm and manna.0 food (from heaven)
Whose words would tumble over each other and pelt
From pure excitement,
55 Whose fingers curl and melt
W h e n you were friendly.
I shall remember you in bed with bright
Eyes or in a cafe stirring coffee
Abstractedly and on your plate the white
60 Smoking stub your lips had touched with crimson.
And I shall remember how your words could hurt
Because they were so honest
And even your lies were able to assert
Integrity of purpose.
65 And it is on the strength of knowing you
I reckon generous feeling more important Than the mere deliberating what to do
W h e n neither the pros nor cons affect the pulses.
And though I have suffered from your special strength

70 W h o never flatter for points nor fake responses
I should be proud if I could evolve at length
An equal thrust and pattern.

1 9 3 8

L O N D O N R A I N / 1 4 8 9

London Rain

T h e rain of London pimples
T h e ebony street with white
And the neon-lamps of London
Stain the canals of night
5 And the park b e c o m e s a jungle
In the alchemy of night.
My wishes turn to violent
Horses black as c o a l —
T h e randy mares of fancy,
10 T h e stallions of the s o u l —
Eager to take the f e n c e s
That f e n c e about my soul.
Across the countless chimneys
T h e horses ride and across 15 The country to the channel
Where warning b e a c o n s toss,
To a place where God and N o - G o d
Play at pitch and toss.
Whichever wins I am happy
20 For G o d will give me bliss
But N o - G o d will absolve me
From all I do amiss

And I need not suffer c o n s c i e n c e

If the world was made amiss.

25 Under God we can reckon

On pardon w h e n we fall

But if we are under N o - G o d

N o t h i n g will matter at all,

Adultery and murder

30 Will c o u n t for nothing at all.

So reinforced by logic

As having nothing to lose

My lust goes riding horseback

To ravish where I choose,

35 To burgle all the turrets

Of beauty as I choose.

But n o w the rain gives over

Its dance upon the town,

Logic and lust together

40 C o m e dimly tumbling down,

And neither God nor N o - G o d

Is either up or down.

1490 / L o u i s M A C N E I C E

The argument was wilful,

The alternatives untrue,

45 We need no metaphysics

To sanction what we do

Or to muffle us in comfort

From what we did not do.

Whether the living river

50 Began in bog or lake,
The world is what was given,
The world is what we make.
And we only can discover Life in the life we make.

55 So let the water sizzle
Upon the gleaming slates,
There will be sunshine after
W h e n the rain abates
And rain returning duly 60 W h e n the sun abates.

My wishes now come homeward,
Their gallopings in vain,
Logic and lust are quiet
And again it starts to rain;
65 Falling asleep I listen
To the falling London rain.

1941

Star-gazer

Forty-two years ago (to me if to no one else

The number is of some interest) it was a brilliant starry
night

And the westward train was empty and had no corridors

So darting from side to side I could catch the unwonted⁰ sight unaccustomed

5 Of those almost intolerably bright

Holes, punched in the sky, which excited me partly because Of their Latin names and partly because I had read in the textbooks

How very far off they were, it seemed their light
Had left them (some at least) long years before I was.
io And this remembering now I mark that what Light was leaving some of them at least then,
Forty-two years ago, will never arrive
In time for me to catch it, which light when
It does get here may find that there is not 15 Anyone left alive

T H E P R I M E R / 1 4 9 1

To run from side to side in a late night train
Admiring it and adding noughts in vain.

January 1 9 6 3 1 9 6 7

J O S E P H I N E J A C O B S E N

1908-2003

The Primer

I said in my youth

“they lie to children”

but it is not so.

Mother my goose I know

5 told me the truth.

I remember that treetop minute.

That was a baby is a w o m a n now;

in a rough wind, it was a broken bough brought down the cradle with the baby in it.

io I had a dumpy friend (you would not know his name,

though he indeed had several), after his fall

lay in live pieces by my garden wall

in a vain tide of epaulets and manes.

I had another friend (and you would know her name),
15 took up her candle on her way to bed.
She had a steady hand and a yellow head up the tall stairwell, but the chopper came.
So small they meant to run away, from sightless eyes
three mice ran toward my mind instead; 20 I seized the shapely knife. They fled in scarlet haste, the blind and tailless mice.
Cock robin was three birds of a single feather.
Three times cock robin fell w h e n a breeze blew;
eye of fly watched; arrow of sparrow flew:
25 three times cock robin died in the same weather.
Sheep, cows, meander in the corn and meadow;
soundless the horn, fine, fine my seam;
nothing I feed, but rosy grows my cream.
My blue boy sleeps under the stack's huge shadow.

1 9 7 4

1. As in the Mother Goose nursery rhymes. Each stanza of the poem rewrites one of these rhymes.

1 4 9 2 / J O S E P H I N E J A C O B S E N

Bush

It is the sound of lions lapping.

They drink themselves

from the gold shapes that waver and grow shallower.

5 Blue peels itself in the waterhole; it is the sun coming.

Crouched, the lions m e e t

their m a t c h e s at the surface.

T h e foxy jackals are far off

10 but the vultures cloud the flat treetop;

the drum of the zebra's body

is lined with red sunrise.

T h e jackals and vultures are waiting for what happened under the moon.

15 T h e lions are through with it; they lift their dripping chins and look ahead.

It is six o'clock on Christmas morning.

N o w the lions have stopped lapping

the bush makes no sound

20 the vultures shift, but without sound.

T h e day is perfectly seamless.

Slowly the lions move like pistons past the dry grasses;

the jackals do not move yet;

the vultures show patience.

25 T h e lions pass a thornbush and melt.

T h o u g h the w h o l e day is unbroken

the passage of the sun will represent heaven;

the b o n e s will represent time.

1974

Hourglass

“Flawless” is the word, no doubt, for this third of May that has landed on the grounds of Mayfair,

the Retirement C o m m u n i t y par excellence.

Right behind the wheels of the mower, grass

5 explodes again, the bare trees most tenderly push out their chartreuse tips.

R O O T C E L L A R / 1 4 9 3

Bottle bees are back. Feckless, reckless, stingless, they probably have a function.

Above the cardinal, scarlet on the rim

10 of the birdbath, twinning himself,

they hover, cruise the flowers, mate.

The tiny water catches the sky.

On the circular inner road, the lady untangles the poodle's leash from her cane.

15 He is wild to chase the splendid smells.

T h e small m a n with the small smile, rapidly steering his Amigo,² bowls past. She would wave, but can't.

All around, birds and sexual flowers

20 are intent on color, flight, fragrance.

The gardener sweeps his sweaty face with a khaki sleeve. His tulips are shined black at their centers. They have c o m e along nicely.

He is young and will be gone before dark.

25 The man in the Amigo has in mind a May a mirror of this, but unobtainable

as the touch of the w o m a n in that glass.

The sun's force chills him. But the lady with the curly poodle could melt her cane

30 in the very heat of her precious pleasure.

She perfectly understands the calendar and the sun's passage. But she grips the leash and leans on the air that is hers and here.

1995

T H E O D O R E R O E T H K E

1908-1963

Root Cellar

Nothing would sleep in that cellar, dank as a ditch,
Bulbs broke out of boxes hunting for chinks in the dark,
Shoots dangled and drooped,
Lolling obscenely from mildewed crates,

2. Brand of sport utility vehicle.

1 5 0 0 / T H E O D O R E R O E T H K E

5 H u n g down long yellow evil necks, like tropical snakes.

And what a congress of stinks!

Roots ripe as old bait,

Pulpy stems, rank, silo-rich,

Leaf-mold, manure, lime, piled against slippery planks.

1 0 N o t h i n g would give up life:

Even the dirt kept breathing a small breath.

1948

Child on Top of a Greenhouse¹

The wind billowing out the seat of my britches,

My feet crackling splinters of glass and dried putty,

The half-grown chrysanthemums staring up like accusers,

Up through the streaked glass, flashing with sunlight,

5 A f e w white clouds all rushing eastward,

A line of elms plunging and tossing like horses,

And everyone, everyone pointing up and shouting!

1948

My Papa's Waltz

The whiskey on your breath
Could make a small boy dizzy;
But I h u n g on like death:
Such waltzing was not easy.
5 We romped until the pans
Slid from the kitchen shelf;
My mother's c o u n t e n a n c e
Could not unfrown itself.
The hand that held my wrist
io Was battered on one knuckle;
At every step you missed
My right ear scraped a buckle.
You beat time on my head
With a palm caked hard by dirt,
15 T h e n waltzed me off to bed
Still clinging to your shirt.

1948

1. Roethke, author of a series of "greenhouse poems," called the greenhouse "my symbol for the whole of life, a womb, a heaven-on-earth." His father, a florist, owned a greenhouse in Saginaw, Michigan.

T H E L O S T S O N / 1 4 9 5

The Lost Son

1. The Flight

At Woodlawn² I heard the dead cry:
I was lulled by the slamming of iron,
A slow drip over stones,
Toads brooding wells.

5 All the leaves stuck out their tongues;
I shook the softening chalk of my bones,
Saying,
Snail, snail, glister me forward,
Bird, soft-sigh me h o m e ,
io Worm, be with me.
This is my hard time.
Fished in an old w o u n d ,
The soft pond of repose;
N o t h i n g nibbled my line,
15 N o t even the m i n n o w s came.
Sat in an empty h o u s e
W a t c h i n g shadows crawl, Scratching.
There was o n e fly.
20 Voice, c o m e out of the silence.
Say something.
Appear in the form of a spider
Or a m o t h beating the curtain.
Tell me:
25 W h i c h is the way I take;
Out of what door do I go,
W h e r e and to whom?
Dark hollows said, lee0 to the wind, shelter
T h e m o o n said, back of an eel,
30 The salt said, look by the sea,
Your tears are not enough praise,
You will find no comfort here,

In the kingdom of bang and blab.
Running lightly over spongy ground,
35 Past the pasture of flat stones,
The three elms,
The sheep strewn on a field,
Over a rickety bridge
Toward the quick-water, wrinkling and rippling.

2. The New York City cemetery where Roethke's father was buried.

1 5 0 0 / T H E O D O R E R O E T H K E

40 Hunting along the river,
D o w n among the rubbish, the bug-riddled foliage,
By the muddy pond-edge, by the bog-holes,
By the shrunken lake, hunting, in the heat of summer.
The shape of a rat?
45 It's bigger than that.
It's less than a leg
And more than a nose,
Just under the water
It usually goes.
50 Is it soft like a mouse?
C a n it wrinkle its nose?
Could it c o m e in the house
On the tips of its toes?
Take the skin of a cat
55 And the back of an eel,
T h e n roll them in grease,—
That's the way it would feel.

It's sleek as an otter
With wide webby toes
60 Just under the water

It usually goes.

2. The Pit

W h e r e do the roots go?
Look down under the leaves.
W h o put the moss there?

65

These stones have b e e n here too long.
W h o stunned the dirt into noise?
Ask the mole, he knows.³

I feel the slime of a wet nest.

Beware Mother Mildew.

70

Nibble again, fish nerves.

3. The Gibber⁴

At the wood's mouth,
By the cave's door,
I listened to s o m e t h i n g
I had heard before.

75 Dogs of the groin

Barked and howled,

The sun was against me,

The m o o n would not have me.

3. Cf. William Blake, The Book of Thel, lines 1-

4. A possible triple pun: meaningless utterance,

2: "Does the Eagle know what is in the pit? / Or the pouch at the base of a flower's calyx, and wilt thou go ask the Mole?" (p. 737).

working-class slang for a key.

T H E L O S T S O N / 1 4 9 7

The weeds whined,

so The snakes cried,

The cows and briars

Said to me: Die.

What a small song. What slow clouds. What dark water.

Hath the rain a father? All the caves are ice. Only the snow's here.

85 I'm cold. I'm cold all over. Rub me in father and mother.

Fear was my father, Father Fear.

His look drained the stones.

What gliding shape

Beckoning through halls,

90 Stood poised on the stair,

Fell dreamily down?

From the mouths of jugs

Perched on many shelves,

I saw substance flowing

95 That cold morning.

Like a slither of eels

That watery cheek

As my own tongue kissed

My lips awake.

100 Is this the storm's heart? The ground is unstilling itself.

My veins are running nowhere. Do the bones cast out their fire?

Is the seed leaving the old bed? These buds are live as birds.

Where, where are the tears of the world?

Let the kisses resound, flat like a butcher's palm;

105 Let the gestures freeze; our doom is already decided.

All the windows are burning! What's left of my life?

I want the old rage, the lash of primordial milk!

Goodbye, goodbye, old stones, the time-order is going,

I have married my hands to perpetual agitation,

110 I run, I run to the whistle of money.

Money money money

Water water water

How cool the grass is.

Has the bird left?

115 The stalk still sways.

Has the worm a shadow?

What do the clouds say?

These sweeps of light undo me.

Look, look, the ditch is running white!

120 I've more veins than a tree!

Kiss me, ashes, I'm falling through a dark swirl.

5. Quoted from Job 38.28.

1 4 9 8 / T H E O D O R E R O E T H K E

4. The Return

The way to the boiler was dark,

Dark all the way,

Over slippery cinders

125 Through the long greenhouse.
The roses kept breathing in the dark.
They had many mouths to breathe with.
My knees made little winds underneath
Where the weeds slept.

130 There was always a single light
Swinging by the fire-pit,
Where the fireman pulled out roses,
The big roses, the big bloody clinkers.⁶
Once I stayed all night.

135 The light in the morning came slowly over the white Snow.

There were many kinds of cool
Air.

Then came steam.

140 Pipe-knock.
Scurry of warm over small plants.
Ordnung!⁷ ordnung!
Papa is coming!

A fine haze moved off the leaves;

145 Frost melted on far panes;
The rose, the chrysanthemum turned toward the light.
Even the hushed forms, the bent yellowy weeds
Moved in a slow up-sway.

5. "It was beginning winter"

It was beginning winter,

150 An in-between time,
The landscape still partly brown:

The bones of weeds kept swinging in the wind,
Above the blue snow.
It was beginning winter,
155 The light moved slowly over the frozen field,
Over the dry seed-crowns,
The beautiful surviving bones
Swinging in the wind.

6. Large cinders, the remains of burned coal. 7. Order!
(German).

E L E G Y F O R J A N E / 1 4 9 9

Light traveled over the wide field; Stayed.
The weeds stopped swinging.
The mind moved, not alone,
Through the clear air, in the silence.
Was it light?
Was it light within?
Was it light within light?
Stillness becoming alive,
Yet still?
A lively understandable spirit
Once entertained you.
It will come again.
Be still.
Wait.
1948
Elegy for Jane
My Student, Thrown by a Horse

I remember the neckcurls, limp and damp as tendrils;
And her quick look, a sidelong pickerel smile;
And how, once startled into talk, the light syllables leaped for her,
And she balanced in the delight of her thought,
5 A wren, happy, tail into the wind,
Her song trembling the twigs and small branches.
The shade sang with her;
The leaves, their whispers turned to kissing;
And the mold sang in the bleached valleys under the rose.
io Oh, when she was sad, she cast herself down into such a pure depth,
Even a father could not find her:
Scraping her cheek against straw;
Stirring the clearest water.
My sparrow, you are not here,
15 Waiting like a fern, making a spiny shadow.
The sides of wet stones cannot console me,
Nor the moss, wound with the last light.
If only I could nudge you from this sleep,
My maimed darling, my skittery pigeon.
20 Over this damp grave I speak the words of my love:
I, with no rights in this matter,
Neither father nor lover.

1 9 5 3

1 5 0 0 / T H E O D O R E R O E T H K E

The Waking

I wake to sleep, and take my waking slow.

I feel my fate in what I cannot fear.

I learn by going where I have to go.
We think by feeling. What is there to know?
5 I hear my being dance from ear to ear.
I wake to sleep, and take my waking slow.
Of those so close beside me, which are you?
God bless the Ground! I shall walk softly there,
And learn by going where I have to go.
10 Light takes the Tree; but who can tell us how?
The lowly worm climbs up a winding stair;
I wake to sleep, and take my waking slow.
Great Nature has another thing to do
To you and me; so take the lively air,
15 And, lovely, learn by going where to go.
This shaking keeps me steady. I should know.
What falls away is always. And is near.
I wake to sleep, and take my waking slow.
I learn by going where I have to go.

1953

I Knew a Woman

I knew a woman, lovely in her bones,
When small birds sighed, she would sigh back at them;
Ah, when she moved, she moved more ways than one:
The shapes a bright container can contain!
5 Of her choice virtues only gods should speak,
Or English poets who grew up on Greek (I'd have them sing in chorus, cheek to cheek).
How well her wishes went! She stroked my chin,
She taught me Turn, and Counter-turn, and Stand;8

io She taught me Touch, that undulant white skin;
I nibbled meekly from her proffered hand;
She was the sickle; I, poor I, the rake,
Coming behind her for her pretty sake
(But what prodigious mowing we did make).

8. Translations of the Greek literary terms strophe, antistrophe, and epode (more properly, “the song that follows”), which are the three parts of the Pindaric ode.

I N A D A R K T I M E / 1 5 0 1

15 Love likes a gander, and adores a goose:
Her full lips pursed, the errant note to seize;
She played it quick, she played it light and loose,
My eyes, they dazzled at her flowing knees;
Her several parts could keep a pure repose,
20 Or one hip quiver with a mobile nose
(She moved in circles, and those circles moved).

Let seed be grass, and grass turn into hay:
I’m martyr to a motion not my own;
What’s freedom for? To know eternity.
25 I swear she cast a shadow white as stone.
But who would count eternity in days?
These old bones live to learn her wanton ways:
(I measure time by how a body sways).

1958

Wish for a Young Wife
My lizard, my lively writher,
May your limbs never wither,
May the eyes in your face
Survive the green ice

5 Of envy's mean gaze;
May you live out your life
Without hate, without grief,
And your hair ever blaze,
In the sun, in the sun,
io When I am undone,
When I am no one.

1964

In a Dark Time

In a dark time, the eye begins to see,
I meet my shadow in the deepening shade;
I hear my echo in the echoing wood—
A lord of nature weeping to a tree.
5 I live between the heron and the wren,⁹
Beasts of the hill and serpents of the den.
What's madness but nobility of soul
At odds with circumstance? The day's on fire!
I know the purity of pure despair,
io My shadow pinned against a sweating wall.

9. The heron is a large, solitary wading bird, the wren a small, sociable songbird.

1 5 0 2 / R I C H A R D W R I G H T

That place among the rocks—is it a cave,
Or winding path? The edge is what I have.
A steady storm of correspondences!
A night flowing with birds, a ragged moon,
15 And in broad day the midnight come again!
A man goes far to find out what he is—

Death of the self in a long, tearless night,
All natural shapes blazing unnatural light.
Dark, dark my light, and darker my desire.
20 My soul, like some heat-maddened summer fly,
Keeps buzzing at the sill. Which I is I?
A fallen man, I climb out of my fear.
The mind enters itself, and God the mind,
And one is One, free in the tearing¹ wind.

1964

R I C H A R D W R I G H T

1908-1960

FROM HAIKU: THIS OTHER WORLD

21

On winter mornings
The candle shows faint markings
Of the teeth of rats.

31

In the falling snow
A laughing boy holds out his palms
Until they are white.

120

Crying and crying,
Melodious strings of geese
Passing a graveyard.

1. With a pun on “tearless” (line 17), according to a note of Roethke’s.

D E L I R I U M I N V E R A C R U Z / 1 5 0 3

490

Waking from a nap
And hearing summer rain falling,—
What else has happened?

762

Droning autumn rain:
A boy lines up toy soldiers
For a big battle.

783

I cannot find it,
That very first violet Seen from my window.

ca. 1960 2000

M A L C O L M LOWRY

1909-1957

Delirium in Vera Cruz¹

Where has tenderness gone, he asked the mirror
Of the Biltmore Hotel, cuarto 216. Alas, room
Can its reflection lean against the glass
Too, wondering where I have gone, into what horror?
Is that it staring at me now with terror
Behind your frail tilted barrier? Tenderness
Was here, in this very bedroom, in this Place, its form seen, cries heard, by you. What error
Is here? Am I that rashed image?
Is this the ghost of the love you reflected?
Now with a background of tequila, stubs, dirty collars,
Sodium perborate,² and a scrawled page
1. The chief seaport of Mexico; now Veracruz.

(whose 1962 selected edition included some questionable changes), or the editor of the 1992 Col-Mexico, where his most celebrated work, the novel lected Poetry of Malcolm Lowry, Kathleen Sherf. Under the Volcano (1947), was set. The state of This poem is a Birney version.

Lowry's poem texts is extraordinarily complicated, 2. A water-soluble solid used as a bleach and as and the versions here are chosen from among seven an antiseptic.

eral, offered either by his first editor, Earle Birney

1 5 0 4 / M A L C O L M L O W R Y

To the dead, telephone off the hook? In rage
He smashed all the glass in the room. (Bill: $50.) 1936 1962

The Wild Cherry³

We put a prop beneath the sagging bough
That yearned over the beach, setting four stones
Cairn-like against it, but we thought our groans
Were the wild cherry's, for it was as though 5 Utterly set with broken seams on doom
It listed wilfully down like a mast,
Stubborn as some smashed recalcitrant boom
That will neither be cut loose nor made fast.
Going—going—it was yet no bidder
io For life, whether for such sober healing
We left its dead branches to consider

Until its sunward pulse renewed, feeling
The passionate hatred of that tree
Whose longing was to wash away to sea.

1940-47 1962, 1992

Eye-Opener⁴

How like a man, is Man, who rises late
And gazes on his unwashed dinner plate
And gazes on the bottles, empty too,
All gulphed in last night's loud long how-do-you-do,
5 —Although one glass yet holds a gruesome bait—
How like to Man is this man and his fate—
Still drunk and stumbling through the rusty trees
To breakfast on stale rum sardines and peas.

1953 1962, 1992

Strange Type⁵

I wrote: in the dark cavern of our birth.
The printer had it tavern, which seems better:
But herein lies the subject of our mirth,
Since on the next page death appears as dearth.

3. Sherf version.

accurate, Birney's version is given here for its read-

4. Sherf version.

ing of the last word, "bitter," which seems more

5. The title is Birney's; Lowry left the poem unlikely than Sherf's "better."

tioned. Though Sherf's punctuation is probably more

U L T I M A R A T I O R E G U M / 1 5 0 5

5 So it may be that God's word was distraction,

Which to our strange type appears destruction,
Which is bitter.

1946-54 1962

S T E P H E N S P E N D E R

1909-1995

I Think Continually of Those Who Were Truly Great

I think continually of those who were truly great.

Who, from the womb, remembered the soul's history

Through corridors of light where the hours are suns

Endless and singing. Whose lovely ambition

5 Was that their lips, still touched with fire,

Should tell of the Spirit clothed from head to foot in song.

And who hoarded from the Spring branches

The desires falling across their bodies like blossoms.

What is precious is never to forget

io The essential delight of the blood drawn from ageless springs

Breaking through rocks in worlds before our earth.

Never to deny its pleasure in the morning simple light

Nor its grave evening demand for love.

Never to allow gradually the traffic to smother

15 With noise and fog the flowering of the spirit.

Near the snow, near the sun, in the highest fields

See how these names are feted⁰ by the waving grass honored

And by the streamers of white cloud

And whispers of wind in the listening sky.

20 The names of those who in their lives fought for life

Who wore at their hearts the fire's centre.

Born of the sun they travelled a short while towards the sun,
And left the vivid air signed with their honour.

1933

Ultima Ratio Regum¹

The guns spell money's ultimate reason
In letters of lead on the Spring hillside.
But the boy lying dead under the olive trees
Was too young and too silly

1. Kings' ultimate reason, i.e., for taking action (Latin).

1 5 0 6 / S T E P H E N S P E N D E R

5 To have been notable to their important eye.

He was a better target for a kiss.

When he lived, tall factory hooters⁰ never summoned him sirens

Nor did restaurant plate-glass doors revolve to wave him in.

His name never appeared in the papers.

10 The world maintained its traditional wall

Round the dead with their gold sunk deep as a well,

Whilst his life, intangible as a Stock Exchange rumour, drifted outside.

O too lightly he threw down his cap

One day when the breeze threw petals from the trees.

15 The unflowering wall sprouted with guns,

Machine-gun anger quickly scythed the grasses;

Flags and leaves fell from hands and branches;

The tweed cap rotted in the nettles.

Consider his life which was valueless

20 In terms of employment, hotel ledgers, news files.

Consider. One bullet in ten thousand kills a man.

Ask. Was so much expenditure justified
On the death of one so young, and so silly
Lying under the olive trees, O world, O death?

1939

Seascape

(In Memoriam, M.A.S.)

There are some days the happy ocean lies

Like an unfingered harp, below the land.

Afternoon gilds all the silent wires

Into a burning music for the eyes.

5 On mirrors flashing between fine-strung fires

The shore, heaped up with roses, horses, spires,

Wanders on water, walking above ribbed sand.

The motionlessness of the hot sky tires

And a sigh, like a woman's, from inland

io Brushes the instrument with shadowing hand

Drawing across its wires some gull's sharp cries

Or bell, or shout, from distant, hedged-in shires;0 counties

These, deep as anchors, the hushing wave buries.

Then from the shore, two zig-zag butterflies,

15 Like errant dog-roses, cross the bright strand

Spiraling over sea in foolish gyres0 spiral turnings

Until they fall into reflected skies.

They drown. Fishermen understand

Such wings sunk in such ritual sacrifice,

FIGLIOMAGGIORE / 1507

20 Recalling legends of undersea, drowned cities.

W h a t voyagers, oh what heroes, flamed like pyres

With helmets plumed, have set forth from some island
And them the sea engulfed. Their eyes,
Contorted by the cruel waves' desires
25 Glitter with coins through the tide scarcely scanned, While, above them, that harp assumes their sighs.

1947

R O B E R T FITZGERALD

1910-1985

Figlio Maggiore¹

Benedict Robert Champion Fitzgerald

Twitched in her belly, or he raised a fist,
and came and cried. O red and meager baby, umbilical, priapic,⁰ knobby, phallic
mashed and wrinkled as an old pugilist.

5 A lyric name he got and a saint's name,
a third stout name from Pa, doe Roberto.²

Think of this Christian if you care to filling his giant napkin⁰ without shame. diaper

And soon for happy trilled at goldy leaves
io by a summer air. What hours our boy would warble.

You find my doting lines intolerable?

Never was infant such under such eaves.

Behave. "I'm being hayve." With Harpo's³ grin.

At three he shook his cap and bells, our jester,

15 or tented him in a souwester⁰ rain hat

and fragrant slicker to stay in the rain in.

Never (ah!) to inherit that dripping grove,

in a DC—⁶ he peered at cumulo-cirrus

“trees” on ocean. (Graciously hear us,
20 lord of the aircraft gaily named LOVE)

Ligurian fry⁴ inquired, “Why is your old man home all day? W h a t m e s t i e r e ⁵ has he?”

1. Eldest son (Italian). 3. Harpo Marx (1893-1964), one member of the

2. That is, Robert (Fitzgerald) (Italian). Lyric Marx Brothers comedy team.

name: from Thomas Campion (1567—1620; see 4. Children in Liguria, Italy, pp. 278—82), English poet and composer.
Saint’s ⁵. Job, profession (Italian).

name: Benedict.

1508 / NORMAN MACCAIG

“Da notte vafuori a rubare case.”⁶

A penman’s alibi. Tie it if you can.

25 Off iodine-scented rock pure undersea, fronded, astir, awaited our explorer.

Noon. With a tentacled small horror draped on his tines⁷ he swam ashore in glee.

Daemonic lightning, ire of rebellious powers
30 could rend this patient hunter of the polyp.⁸

Bone-ache from one corrective wallop disabled the parental hand for hours.

Child of my own rage, rippling in Tuscan speech through five hard winters’ compiti, my Benny,

35 *temi, storie, disegni!*⁹

W h a t will the next years teach?

1971

N O R M A N M A C C A I G

1910-1996

Summer Farm

Straws like tame lightnings lie about the grass
And hang zigzag on hedges. Green as glass
The water in the horse-trough shines.
Nine ducks go wobbling by in two straight lines.
5 A hen stares at nothing with one eye,
Then picks it up. Out of an empty sky
A swallow falls and, flickering through
The barn, dives up again into the dizzy blue.
I lie, not thinking, in the cool, soft grass,
io Afraid of where a thought might take me—as
This grasshopper with plated⁰ face armor-plated.
Unfolds his legs and finds himself in space.
Self under self, a pile of selves I stand
Threaded on time, and with metaphysic hand
15 Lift the farm like a lid and see
Farm within farm, and in the centre, me.

1955

6. At night he goes out to burgle houses (Italian).
8. Tentacled sea creature.
7. Meant to suggest the tines of the triton of Nep-
9. Themes, stories, drawings! (Italian). Compiti:
tune, Roman god of the sea.
homework (Italian).

RETURN TO SCALPAY / 1509

Return to Scalpay¹

The ferry wades across the kyle. I drive

T h e car ashore
On to a trim tarred road. A car on Scalpay?
Yes, and a road where never was one before.
5 T h e ferrymen's Gaelic wonders who I am (Not knowing I know it), this m a n back from the dead,
W h o takes the blue-black road (no traffic jam)
From by Craig Lexie over to Bay Head.
A m a n bows in the North wind, shaping up 10 His lazybeds,²
And through the salt air vagrant peat smells waver
From houses where no house should be. The sheds
At the curing station³ have been newly tarred.
Aunt Julia's⁴ house has vanished. T h e Red Well
15 Has been bulldozed away. But sharp and hard
The c h u r c h still stands, barring the road to Hell.
A chugging prawn boat slides round Cuddy Point
W h e r e in a gale
I spread my batwing jacket and j u m p e d farther
20 T h a n I've j u m p e d since. There's where I used to sail Boats looped from rushes. On the jetty there
I caught eels, cut their heads off and watched them slew
Slow through the water. A h — C a p e Finisterre⁵
I called that point, to show how m u c h I knew.
25 While Hamish sketches, a crofter⁰ tells me that tenant farmer
T h e Scalpay folk,
Though very intelligent, are not Spinozas ...⁶
We walk the O u t End road (no need to invoke

That troublemaker, Memory, she's everywhere)

30 To Laggandoan, greeted all the way—

My city eyeballs prickle; it's hard to bear

With such affection and such gaiety.

Scalpay revisited?—more than Scalpay. I

Have no defence,

35 For half my thought and half my blood is Scalpay,

Against that pure, hardheaded innocence

1. Island in the Scottish Outer Hebrides, to the

4. The subject of a well-known poem by MacCaig:

east of Harris and separated from it by a kyle, or

“Aunt Julia spoke Gaelic / very loud and fast.”

narrow channel.

5. Promontory—the name meaning “world's end”

2. Earthen beds, about six feet wide, on which (Latin)—on the Atlantic coast of northern Spain.

potatoes are grown.

6. I.e., not as smart as the Dutch philosopher Ben-

3. Place where fish are salted and dried.

edict de (Baruch) Spinoza (1632-1677).

1 5 1 0 / N O R M A N M A C C A I G

That shows love without shame, weeps without shame,

Whose every thought is hospitality—

Edinburgh, Edinburgh, you're dark years away.

40 Scuttering snowflakes riddling the hard wind

Are almost spent

W h e n we reach Johann's⁷ house. She fills the doorway,

Sixty years of size and astonishment,

Then laughs and cries and laughs, as she always did 45 And will (Easy glum, easy glow, a friend would say) ...

Scones, oatcakes, herrings from under a bubbling lid.

Then she comes with us to put us on our way.

Hugging my arm in her stronger one, she says,

Fancy me

50 Walking this road beside my darling Norman!

And what is there to say? ... We look back and see

Her monumental against the flying sky

And I am filled with love and praise and shame

Knowing that I have been, and knowing why,

55 Diminished and enlarged. Are they the same?

1974

Kingfisher

That kingfisher jewelling upstream

seems to leave a streak of itself behind it in the bright air. The trees are all the better for its passing.

5 It's not a mineral eater, though it looks it:

It doesn't nip nicks out of the edges of rainbows.—It dives

into the burly water, then, perched on a Japanese bough, gulps

io into its own incandescence

a wisp of minnow, a warrior stickleback.

— Or it vanishes into its burrow, resplendent

Samurai, returning home to his stinking slum.

1977

7. Johann Macleod, a native of Scalpay.

1 1 5 1 1

C H A R L E S O L S O N

1910-1970

Mercel of Egypt

I

I sing the tree is a heron

I praise long grass²

I wear the lion skin

over the long skirt

5 to the ankle. T h e ankle

is a heron

I look straightly backward. Or I bend to the side straightly to raise the sheaf

up the stick of the leg

io as the bittern's leg, raised as slow as his neck grows

as the wheat. T h e presentation, the representation,

is is flat,

I am followed by w o m e n and a small boy in white carrying a duck,

all have flat feet and, foot before foot, the w o m e n with black wigs

And I intent

upon idlers,

20 and flowers

2

the sedge

as tall as I am, the rushes

as I am

as far as I am animal, antelope

25 with such's attendant carnivores and rows of beaters

drive the game to the hunter, or into nets,

where it is thick-wooded or there are open spaces

with low shrubs

3

30 I speak downfall, the ball of my foot

on the neck of the earth, the hardsong

of the rise of all trees, the jay

w h o uses the air. I am the recovered sickle

I. Merce Cunningham (b. 1919), American

2. Olson's references to song and grass recall dancer and choreographer. While head of Black "Song of Myself," part of Leaves of Grass, by the Mountain College, an experimental school in American poet Walt Whitman (1819-1892; see North Carolina, Olson brought him there to teach pp. 1060-86).

and even participated in some of his dance classes.

1 5 1 2 / C H A R L E S O L S O N

with the grass-stains still on the flint of its teeth.

35 I am the six-rowed barley

they cut down.

I am tree. The boy of the back of my legs is roots. I am water fowl when motion is the season of my river, and the wild boar 40 casts me. But my time is hawkweed,

4

I hold what the wind blows, and silt.
I hide in the swamps of the valley to escape civil war,
and marauding soldiers. In the new procession 45 I am first, and carry wine made of dandelions. The new rites are my bones

I built my first settlement in groves

5

50 as they would flail crops
when the spring comes, and flood, the tassels rise, as my head

1953

Variations Done for Gerald Van De Wiele³

*I. Le Bonheur*⁴

dogwood flakes

what is green

the petals

from the apple

5 blow on the road

mourning doves

mark the sway

of the afternoon, bees

dig the plum blossoms

3. A student at Black Mountain College during Saison en enfer (A Season in Hell, 1873). Some-Olson's time as head there (see note 1 above).

times Olson cites a word or a phrase from the poem

4. The "Variations" allude repeatedly, and in comin French, sometimes he translates a word by the plex, subtle ways, to a poem by the French poet
English word it resembles (trepas as "trespass"), Arthur Rimbaud (1854-1891), "Le Bonheur" then later by the word that translates it correctly ("Happiness"), the last of the poems that occur
("death").

throughout Rimbaud's poem-prose complex Une

VARIATIONS DONE FOR GERALD V AND EWIELE / 1513

10 the morning

stands up straight, the night

is blue from the full of the April moon

iris and lilac, birds

birds, yellow flowers

15 white flowers, the Diesel

does not let up dragging the plow

as the whippoorwill,

the night's tractor, grinds

20 his song

and no other birds but us are as busy (O saisons, o chateaux!
Delires!⁵
What soul
25 is without fault?
Nobody studies happiness
Every time the cock crows
I salute him
30 I have no longer any excuse for envy. My life has been given its orders: the seasons seize the soul and the body, and make mock 35 of any dispersed effort. The hour of death is the only trespass

II. The Charge

dogwood flakes
the green
the petals from the apple-trees 40 fall for the feet to walk on the birds are so many they are loud, in the afternoon

5. Two sections of Une Saison en enfer are entitled teaux!” (“O seasons! o castles!”) is the first line and “Delires” (“Deliriums,” “Frenzies”), and “Le Bon-refrain of “Le Bonheur.”

heur” occurs in “Delires II.” “O saisons, o cha-

1514 / CHARLES OLSON

they distract, as so many bees do suddenly all over the place 45 With spring one knows today to see that in the morning each thing is separate but by noon
they have melted into each other and by night only crazy things 50 like the full moon and the whippoorwill and us, are busy. We are busy if we can get by that whiskered bird, that nightjar, and get across, the moon a nocturnal bird
is our conversation, she will say 55 what soul
isn't in default?
can you afford not to make the magical study
which happiness is? do you hear 60 the cock when he crows? do you know the charge, that you shall have no envy, that your life has its orders, that the seasons seize you too, that no body and soul are one if they are not wrought
65 in this retort? that otherwise efforts are efforts? And that the hour of your flight will be the hour of your death?

III. Spring

The dogwood lights up the day.

70 The April moon

flakes the night.

Birds, suddenly,

are a multitude

The flowers are ravined0 hollowed out

75 by bees, the fruit blossoms

C A S A B I A N C A

/ 1 5 1 5

are thrown to the ground, the wind

the rain forces everything. Noise—

even the night is drummed

by whippoorwills, and we get

so as busy, we plow, we move,

we break out, we love. The secret which got lost neither hides

nor reveals itself, it shows forth

tokens. And we rush

85 to catch up. The body whips the soul. In its great desire it demands the elixir

In the roar of spring,

transmutations. Envy

90 drags herself off. The fault of the body and the soul

—that they are not one—

the matutinal0 cock clangs morning

and singleness: we salute you

season of no bungling

1960

ELIZABETH B I S H O P

1911-1979

Casabianca¹

Love's the boy stood on the burning deck trying to recite "The boy stood on the burning deck." Love's the son stood stammering elocution
5 while the poor ship in flames went down.

Love's the obstinate boy, the ship, even the swimming sailors, who would like a schoolroom platform, too,

1. Cf. Felicia Dorothea Hemans, "Casabianca" ing ship during the 1798 Battle of the Nile (a deci-

(p. 899), line 1 of which is "The boy stood on the sive defeat for Napoleon), thinking that his father, burning deck." The boy had remained on the burn- the admiral, had not released him from duty.

1 5 1 6 / E L I Z A B E T H B I S H O P

or an excuse to stay

10 on deck. And love's the burning boy.

1 9 4 6

The Fish

I caught a tremendous fish and held him beside the boat half out of water, with my hook fast in a corner of his mouth.

5 He didn't fight.

He hadn't fought at all.

He hung a grunting weight, battered and venerable and homely. Here and there 10 his brown skin hung in strips like ancient wallpaper,
and its pattern of darker brown
was like wallpaper:
shapes like full-blown roses
15 stained and lost through age.
He was speckled with barnacles,
fine rosettes of lime,
and infested
with tiny white sea-lice, 20 and underneath two or three rags of green weed hung down.
While his gills were breathing in the terrible oxygen
—the frightening gills,
25 fresh and crisp with blood,
that can cut so badly—
I thought of the coarse white flesh packed in like feathers,
the big bones and the little bones, 30 the dramatic reds and blacks of his shiny entrails,
and the pink swim-bladder
like a big peony.
I looked into his eyes

35 which were far larger than mine but shallower, and yellowed, the irises backed and packed with tarnished tinfoil seen through the lenses 40 of old scratched isinglass.²
They shifted a little, but not to return my stare.

2. Mica in thin, transparent sheets; originally prepared from the air bladders of certain fish.

FILLING STATION / 1517

—It was more like the tipping of an object toward the light.
45 I admired his sullen face,
the mechanism of his jaw,
and then I saw that from his lower lip
—if you could call it a lip—
50 grim, wet, and weaponlike, hung five old pieces of fish-line,
or four and a wire leader
with the swivel still attached, with all their five big hooks 55 grown firmly in his mouth.
A green line, frayed at the end
where he broke it, two heavier lines,
and a fine black thread
still crimped from the strain and snap

60 when it broke and he got away.
Like medals with their ribbons
frayed and wavering,
a five-haired beard of wisdom
trailing from his aching jaw.
65 I stared and stared and victory filled up
the little rented boat,
from the pool of bilge
where oil had spread a rainbow 70 around the rusted engine to the bailer rusted orange,
the sun-cracked thwarts,
the oarlocks on their strings,
the gunnels—until everything
75 was rainbow, rainbow, rainbow!
And I let the fish go.

1 9 4 6

Filling Station

Oh, but it is dirty!
—this little filling station,
oil-soaked, oil-permeated to a disturbing, over-all 5 black translucency.
Be careful with that match!
Father wears a dirty,
oil-soaked monkey suit
that cuts him under the arms,

io and several quick and saucy

1 1 5 1 8 / E L I Z A B E T H B I S H O P

and greasy sons assist him (it's a family filling station),
all quite thoroughly dirty.

Do they live in the station?

15 It has a cement porch behind the pumps, and on it a set of crushed and grease-impregnated wickerwork;
on the wicker sofa

20 a dirty dog, quite comfy.

Some comic books provide the only note of color—of certain color. They lie upon a big dim doily

25 draping a taboret drum-shaped table

(part of the set), beside a big hirsute begonia.

Why the extraneous plant?

Why the taboret?

BO Why, oh why, the doily?

(Embroidered in daisy stitch with marguerites, I think, small daisies and heavy with gray crochet.)

Somebody embroidered the doily.

35 Somebody waters the plant, or oils it, maybe. Somebody arranges the rows of cans

so that they softly say:

ESSO—so—so—so³

40 to high-strung automobiles.

Somebody loves us all.

1965

Sandpiper

The roaring alongside he takes for granted,

and that every so often the world is bound to shake.

He runs, he runs to the south, finical, awkward,

in a state of controlled panic, a student of Blake.⁴

5 The beach hisses like fat. On his left, a sheet of interrupting water comes and goes

3. The company name Esso, later changed to

Exxon. cence” begins, “To see a World in a Grain of Sand Exxon.

/ And a Heaven in a Wild Flower, / Hold Infinity

4. William Blake (1 7 5 7 - 1 8 2 7 ; see pp. 732-47),

in the palm of your hand / And Eternity in an English poet, whose 1803 poem “Auguries of Innohour.”

T H E A R M A D I L L O / 1 5 1 9

and glazes over his dark and brittle feet.

He runs, he runs straight through it, watching his toes.

—Watching, rather, the spaces of sand between them,

10 where (no detail too small) the Atlantic drains rapidly backwards and downwards. As he runs,

he stares at the dragging grains.

The world is a mist. And then the world is minute and vast and clear. The tide 15 is higher or lower. He couldn't tell you which.
His beak is focussed; he is preoccupied,
looking for something, something, something.
Poor bird, he is obsessed!
The millions of grains are black, white, tan, and gray,
20 mixed with quartz grains, rose and amethyst.

1965

The Armadillo⁵

For Robert Lowell

This is the time of year
when almost every night
the frail, illegal fire balloons appear.
Climbing the mountain height,
5 rising toward a saint still honored in these parts,
the paper chambers flush and fill with light that comes and goes, like hearts.

Once up against the sky it's hard to tell them from the stars—
planets, that is—the tinted ones:
Venus going down, or Mars,
or the pale green one. With a wind,
they flare and falter, wobble and toss;
15 but if it's still they steer between the kite sticks of the Southern Cross,⁶ receding, dwindling, solemnly and steadily forsaking us,
or, in the downdraft from a peak,
20 suddenly turning dangerous.

5. Cf. Robert Lowell, "Skunk Hour" (p. 1601), 6. Bright constellation, which is modeled on Bishop's poem.

1 5 2 0 / E L I Z A B E T H B I S H O P

Last night another big one fell.
It splattered like an egg of fire against the cliff behind the house.
The flame ran down. We saw the pair 25 of owls who nest there flying up and up, their whirling black-and-white stained bright pink underneath, until they shrieked up out of sight.
The ancient owls' nest must have burned.
30 Hastily, all alone,
a glistening armadillo left the scene,
rose-flecked, head down, tail down,
and then a baby rabbit jumped out,

short-eared, to our surprise.

35 So soft!—a handful of intangible ash with fixed, ignited eyes.

Too pretty, dreamlike mimicry!

O falling fire and piercing cry and panic, and a weak mailed fist

40 clenched ignorant against the sky!

1965

Sestina⁷

September rain falls on the house.

In the failing light, the old grandmother sits in the kitchen with the child

beside the Little Marvel Stove,⁸

5 reading the jokes from the almanac,
laughing and talking to hide her tears.

She thinks that her equinoctial tears and the rain that beats on the roof of the house were both foretold by the almanac, io but only known to a grandmother.

The iron kettle sings on the stove.

She cuts some bread and says to the child,

It 's time for tea now; but the child is watching the teakettle's small hard tears

15 dance like mad on the hot black stove,
the way the rain must dance on the house.

Tidying up, the old grandmother

hangs up the clever almanac

7. On this verse form, see “Versification,” p. 2045. 8. Brand of wood-burning stove.

IN THE WAITING ROOM / 1 5 2 1

on its string. Birdlike, the almanac 20 hovers half open above the child, hovers above the old grandmother and her teacup full of dark brown tears.
She shivers and says she thinks the house
feels chilly, and puts more wood in the stove.

25 It was to he, says the Marvel Stove.

I know what I know,* says the almanac.

With crayons the child draws a rigid house and a winding pathway. Then the child puts in a man with buttons like tears 30 and shows it proudly to the grandmother.

But secretly, while the grandmother
busies herself about the stove,
the little moons fall down like tears
from between the pages of the almanac

35 into the flower bed the child has carefully placed in the front of the house.

Time to plant tears,* says the almanac.

The grandmother sings to the marvelous stove and the child draws another inscrutable house.

1 9 6 5

In the Waiting Room

In Worcester, Massachusetts,

I went with Aunt Consuelo

to keep her dentist's appointment and sat and waited for her 5 in the dentist's waiting room.

It was winter. It got dark early. The waiting room was full of grown-up people,
arctics and overcoats,
10 lamps and magazines.

My aunt was inside
what seemed like a long time and while I waited I read
the National Geographic 15 (I could read) and carefully studied the photographs:
the inside of a volcano,
black, and full of ashes;
then it was spilling over 20 in rivulets of fire.

Osa and Martin Johnson⁹

9. Famous husband-and-wife explorers and writers.

1 5 2 2 / E L I Z A B E T H B I S H O P

dressed in riding breeches, laced boots, and pith helmets.

A dead man slung on a pole
25 —“Long Pig,”¹ the caption said.
Babies with pointed heads wound round and round with string;
black, naked women with necks

wound round and round with wire 30 like the necks of light bulbs.
Their breasts were horrifying.
I read it right straight through.
I was too shy to stop.
And then I looked at the cover:
35 the yellow margins, the date.
Suddenly, from inside,
came an oh! of pain
—Aunt Consuelo’s voice—
not very loud or long.
40 I wasn’t at all surprised;
even then I knew she was a foolish, timid woman.
I might have been embarrassed,
but wasn’t. What took me 45 completely by surprise was that it was me:
my voice, in my mouth.
Without thinking at all
I was my foolish aunt,
50 I—we—were falling, falling,
our eyes glued to the cover of the National Geographic,
February, 1918.
I said to myself: three days
55 and you’ll be seven years old.
I was saying it to stop

the sensation of falling off
the round, turning world into cold, blue-black space.

60 But I felt: you are an I,
you are an Elizabeth,
you are one of them.

Why should you be one, too?

I scarcely dared to look

65 to see what it was I was.

I gave a sidelong glance

—I couldn't look any higher—

at shadowy gray knees,

trousers and skirts and boots

70 and different pairs of hands

1. Polynesian cannibals' name for the h u m a n body as food.

T H E M O O S E / 1 5 2 3

lying under the lamps.

I knew that nothing stranger had ever happened, that nothing stranger could ever happen.

75 Why should I be my aunt,

or me, or anyone:1

What similarities—

boots, hands, the family voice

I felt in my throat, or even so the National Geographic and those awful hanging breasts—

held us all together

or made us all just one?
How—I didn't know any 85 word for it—how “unlikely” ...

How had I come to be here,
like them, and overhear
a cry of pain that could have got loud and worse but hadn't?

90 The waiting room was bright and too hot. It was sliding beneath a big black wave, another, and another.

Then I was back in it.

95 The War² was on. Outside,
in Worcester, Massachusetts,
were night and slush and cold,
and it was still the fifth of February, 1918.

1976

The Moose

For Grace Bulmer Bowers

From narrow provinces³
of fish and bread and tea,
home of the long tides
where the bay leaves the sea 5 twice a day and takes the herrings long rides, where if the river
enters or retreats

in a wall of brown foam

io depends on if it meets

2. World War I. Nova Scotia, where Bishop was born, and New

3. The maritime provinces of Canada, including Brunswick.

1 5 2 4 / E L I Z A B E T H B I S H O P

the bay coming in,

the bay not at home;

where, silted red,

sometimes the sun sets

15 facing a red sea,

and others, veins the flats'

lavender, rich mud

in burning rivulets;

on red, gravelly roads,

20 down rows of sugar maples,

past clapboard farmhouses

and neat, clapboard churches,

bleached, ridged as clamshells,

past twin silver birches,

25 through late afternoon

a bus journeys west,

the windshield flashing pink,

pink glancing off of metal,

brushing the dented flank

30 of blue, beat-up enamel;

down hollows, up rises,

and waits, patient, while a lone traveller gives kisses and embraces 35 to seven relatives

and a collie supervises.
Goodbye to the elms,
to the farm, to the dog.
The bus starts. The light 40 grows richer; the fog,
shifting, salty, thin,
comes closing in.
Its cold, round crystals form and slide and settle 45 in the white hens' feathers, in gray glazed cabbages,
on the cabbage roses
and lupins like apostles;
the sweet peas cling 50 to their wet white string on the whitewashed fences;
bumblebees creep
inside the foxgloves,
and evening commences.

T H E M O O S E / 1 5 2 5

One stop at Bass River.
Then the Economies—Lower, Middle, Upper;
Five Islands, Five Houses,⁴ where a woman shakes a tablecloth out after supper.

A pale flickering. Gone.
The Tantramar marshes⁵
and the smell of salt hay.
An iron bridge trembles and a loose plank rattles
but doesn't give way.
On the left, a red light
swims through the dark:
a ship's port lantern.
Two rubber boots show,
illuminated, solemn.
A dog gives one bark.
A woman climbs in
with two market bags,
brisk, freckled, elderly.
"A grand night. Yes, sir,
all the way to Boston."
She regards us amicably.
Moonlight as we enter
the New Brunswick woods, hairy, scratchy, splintery;
moonlight and mist
caught in them like lamb's wool
on bushes in a pasture.
The passengers lie back.
Snores. Some long sighs.
A dreamy divagation

begins in the night,
a gentle, auditory,
slow hallucination. . . .

In the creakings and noises,
an old conversation
—not concerning us,
but recognizable, somewhere,
95 back in the bus:

Grandparents' voices

4. Towns in Nova Scotia.

5. Marshes of the Tantramar River, which empties into the Bay of Fundy.

1 1 5 2 6 / E L I Z A B E T H B I S H O P

uninterruptedly talking, in Eternity:
names being mentioned, 100 things cleared up finally;
what he said, what she said,
who got pensioned;
deaths, deaths and sicknesses;
the year he remarried;
105 the year (something) happened.
She died in childbirth.
That was the son lost
when the schooner foundered.
He took to drink. Yes.
110 She went to the bad.
When Amos began to pray

even in the store and finally the family had to put him away.

ii5 “Yes ...” that peculiar affirmative. “Yes ... ”

A sharp, indrawn breath,
half groan, half acceptance,
that means “Life’s like that.
120 We know it (also death).”

Talking the way they talked in the old featherbed, peacefully, on and on,
dim lamplight in the hall,
125 down in the kitchen, the dog
tucked in her shawl.

Now, it’s all right now even to fall asleep
just as on all those nights.

130 —Suddenly the bus driver stops with a jolt,
turns off his lights.

A moose has come out of the impenetrable wood 135 and stands there, looms, rather,
in the middle of the road.

It approaches; it sniffs at the bus’s hot hood.

Towering, antlerless,

140 high as a church,
homely as a house

ONE ART / 1527

(or, safe as houses).

A man's voice assures us
"Perfectly harmless... ."

145 Some of the passengers exclaim in whispers,
childishly, softly,

"Sure are big creatures."

"It's awful plain."

150 "Look! It's a she!"

Taking her time,
she looks the bus over,
grand, otherworldly.

Why, why do we feel

155 (we all feel) this sweet sensation of joy?

"Curious creatures," says our quiet driver, rolling his r's.

160 "Look at that, would you."

T h e n he shifts gears.

For a m o m e n t longer,
by craning backward,
the moose can be seen

165 on the moonlit macadam;
then there's a dim

smell of moose, an acrid smell of gasoline.

1 9 7 6

One Art

The art of losing isn't hard to master;
so many things seem filled with the intent to be lost that their loss is no disaster.

Lose something every day. Accept the fluster of lost door keys, the hour badly spent.

The art of losing isn't hard to master.

Then practice losing farther, losing faster:
places, and names, and where it was you meant to travel. None of these will bring disaster.

io I lost my mother's watch. And look! my last, or next-to-last, of three loved houses went.

The art of losing isn't hard to master.

1 5 2 8 / A L L E N C U R N O W

I lost two cities, lovely ones. And, vaster, some realms I owned, two rivers, a continent.

15 I miss them, but it wasn't a disaster.

—Even losing you (the joking voice, a gesture

I love) I shan't have lied. It's evident

the art of losing's not too hard to master

though it may look like (Write it!) like disaster.

1 9 7 6

A L L E N C U R N O W

1911-2001

Landfall in Unknown Seas1

The 300th Anniversary of the Discovery of New Zealand by Abel Tasman, 13 December 1642

I

Simply by sailing in a new direction

You could enlarge the world

You picked your captain,

Keen on discoveries, tough enough to make them,

5 Whatever vessels could be spared from other

More urgent service for a year's adventure;

Took stock of the more probable conjectures

About the Unknown to be traversed, all

Guesses at golden coasts and tales of monsters

io To be digested into plain instructions

For likely and unlikely situations.

All this resolved and done, you launched the whole

On a fine morning, the best time of year,

Skies widening and the oceanic furies

15 Subdued by summer illumination; time

To go and to be gazed at going

On a fine morning, in the Name of God

Into the nameless waters of the world.

O you had estimated all the chances

20 Of business in those waters, the world's waters

Yet unexploited.

But more than the sea-empire's

Cannon, the dogs of bronze and iron barking

From Timor to the Straits, backed up the challenge.

25 Between you and the South an older enmity

Lodged in the searching mind, that would not tolerate

1. Written as part of New Zealand's tercentenary celebrations.

LANDFALL IN UNKNOWN SEAS / 1529

So huge a hegemony of ignorance.

There, where your Indies had already sprinkled

Their tribes like ocean rains, you aimed your voyage;

30 Like them invoked your God, gave seas to history

And islands to new hazardous tomorrows.

II

Suddenly exhilaration

Went off like a gun, the whole

Horizon, the long chase done,

35 Hove to.² There was the seascape

Crammed with coast, surprising

As new lands will, the sailor

Moving on the face of the waters,

Watching the earth take shape

40 Round the unearthly summits, brighter

Than its emerging colour.

Yet this, no far fool's errand,

Was less than the heart desired,

In its old Indian dream

45 The glittering gulfs ascending

Past palaces and mountains

Making one architecture.

Here the uplifted structure,

Peak and pillar of cloud—

50 O splendour of desolation—reared

Tall from the pit of the swell,
With a shadow, a finger of wind, forbade
Hopes of a lucky landing.
Always to islanders danger
55 Is what comes over the sea;
Over the yellow sands and the clear
Shallows, the dull filament
Flickers, the blood of strangers:
Death discovered the Sailor
60 O in a flash, in a flat calm,
A clash of boats in the bay
And the day marred with murder.
The dead required no further Warning to keep their distance;
65 The rest, noting the failure,
Pushed on with a reconnaissance
To the north; and sailed away.

III

Well, home is the Sailor,³ and that is a chapter
In a schoolbook, a relevant yesterday

2. Dropped anchor. writer Robert Louis Stevenson (1850-1894):

3. From line 7 of “Requiem,” by the Scottish “Home is the sailor, home from sea.”

1 5 3 0 / I R V I N G L A Y T O N

70 We thought we knew all about, being m u c h apter
To profit, sure of our ground,
No murderers mooring in our Golden Bay.
But now there are no more islands to be found

And the eye scans risky horizons of its own
75 In unsettled weather, and m u r m u r s of the drowned
H a u n t their familiar beaches—
W h o navigates us towards what unknown
But not improbable provinces? W h o reaches
A f u t u r e down for us from the high shelf
so Of spiritual daring? Not those speeches Pinning on the Past like a decoration
For merit that congratulates itself,
O not the self-important celebration
Or most painstaking history, can release
85 The current of a discoverer's elation
And silence the voices saying,
“Here is the world's end where wonders cease.”
Only by a more faithful memory, laying
On him the half-light of a diffident glory, 90 T h e Sailor lives, and stands beside us, paying
O u t into our time's wave
T h e stain of blood that writes an island story.

1 9 4 2 1 9 4 3

IRVING LAYTON

b. 1912

The Birth of Tragedy¹

And me happiest when I compose poems.

Love, power, the huzza of battle

are something, are much;

yet a poem includes them like a pool

5 water and reflection.

In me, nature's divided things—tree, mold on tree—
have their fruition;
I am their core. Let them swap, io bandy, like a flame swerve
I am their mouth; as a m o u t h I serve.

1. The first book (1872) by the German philosoemotionalism as well as Apollonian rationalism in pher Friedrich Nietzsche (1844-1900), The Birth
the creation of tragedy.

of Tragedy argued for the importance of Dionysian

THE C O L D G R E E N E L E M E N T / 1 5 3 1

And I observe how the sensual moths big with odor and sunshine
dart into the perilous shrubbery;
15 or drop their visiting shadows upon the garden I one year made of flowering stone to be a footstool
for the perfect gods:
who, friends to the ascending orders, 20 sustain all passionate meditations and call down pardons
for the insurgent blood.
A quiet m a d m a n , never far from tears,
I lie like a slain thing
25 under the green air the trees inhabit, or rest upon a chair towards which the inflammable air tumbles on many robins' wings;

noting how seasonably
30 leaf and blossom uncurl and living things arrange their death, while someone from afar off
blows birthday candles for the world.

1 9 5 4

The Cold Green Element

At the end of the garden walk
the wind and its satellite wait for me;
their meaning I will not know
until I go there,
5 but the black-hatted undertaker who, passing, saw my heart beating in the grass, is also going there. Hi, I tell him, a great squall in the Pacific blew a dead poet out of the water,
io Who now hangs from the city's gates.
Crowds depart daily to see it, and return with grimaces and incomprehension;
if its limbs twitched in the air
they would sit at its feet 15 peeling their oranges.
And turning over I embrace like a lover
the trunk of a tree, one of those for whom the lightning was too m u c h and grew a brilliant 20 h u n c h b a c k with a crown of leaves.

1 5 3 2 / I R V I N G L A Y T O N

The ailments escaped from the labels of medicine bottles are all fled to the wind;
I've seen myself lately in the eyes
of old women,
25 spent streams mourning my manhood, in whose old pupils the sun became a bloodsmear on broad catalpa leaves and hanging from ancient twigs,
my murdered selves
30 sparked the air like the muted collisions of fruit. A black dog howls down my blood,
a black dog with yellow eyes;
he too by someone's inadvertence saw the bloodsmear
35 on the broad catalpa leaves.

But the furies² clear a path for me to the worm who sang for an hour in the throat of a robin, and misled by the cries of young boys

I am again

40 a breathless swimmer in that cold green element.

1 9 5 5

Berry Picking

Silently my wife walks on the still wet furze

Now darkgreen the leaves are full of metaphors

Now lit up is each tiny lamp of blueberry.

The white nails of rain have dropped and the sun is free.

5 And whether she bends or straightens to each bush

To find the children's laughter among the leaves
Her quiet hands seem to make the quiet summer hush—
Berries or children, patient she is with these.
I only vex and perplex her; madness, rage io Are endearing perhaps put down upon the page;
Even silence daylong and sullen can then
Enamor as restraint or classic discipline.
So I envy the berries she puts in her mouth,
The red and succulent juice that stains her lips;
15 I shall never taste that good to her, nor will they Displease her with a thousand barbarous jests.

2. In classical mythology, goddesses who punished the doers of unavenged wrongs.

MOURNING POEM FOR THE QUEEN OF SUNDAY / 1533

How they lie easily for her hand to take,
Part of the unoffending world that is hers;
Here beyond complexity she stands and stares
20 And leans her marvelous head as if for answers.
No more the easy soul my childish craft deceives
Nor the simpler one for whom yes is always yes;
No, now her voice comes to me from a far way off
Though her lips are redder than the raspberries.

1958

ROBERT HAYDEN

1913-1980

Those Winter Sundays

Sundays too my father got up early

and put his clothes on in the blueblack cold,

then with cracked hands that ached from labor in the weekday weather made 5 banked fires blaze. No one ever thanked him.
I'd wake and hear the cold splintering, breaking.
W h e n the rooms were warm, he'd call,
and slowly I would rise and dress,
fearing the chronic angers of that house,
io Speaking indifferently to him,
who had driven out the cold
and polished my good shoes as well.
W h a t did I know, what did I know of love's austere and lonely offices?

1 9 6 2

Mourning Poem for the Queen of Sunday

Lord's lost Him His mockingbird,

His fancy warbler;

Satan sweet-talked her,

four bullets hushed her.

5 W h o would have thought

she'd end that way?

Four bullets hushed her. And the world a-clang with evil.

Who's going to make old hardened sinner m e n tremble now and the righteous rock?

1 5 3 4 / R O B E R T H A Y D E N

10 Oh who and oh who will sing Jesus down to help with struggling and doing without and being colored all through blue Monday?

Till way next Sunday?

All those angels
15 in their cretonne¹ clouds and finery the true believer saw
when she rared back her head and sang,
all those angels are surely weeping.
W h o would have thought
20 she'd end that way?
Four holes in her heart. The gold works wrecked.
But she looks so natural in her big bronze coffin
among the Broken Hearts and Gates-Ajar, it's as if any m o m e n t she'd lift her head 25 from its pillow of chill gardenias and turn this quiet into shouting Sunday and make folks forget what she did on Monday.
O h , Satan sweet-talked her,
and four bullets hushed her.
30 Lord's lost Him His diva,
His fancy warbler's gone.
W h o would have thought,
who would have thought she'd end that way?

1 9 6 6

Night, Death, Mississippi²

I

A quavering cry. Screech-owl?

Or one of them?

The old m a n in his reek

and gauntness laughs—

5 O n e of them, I bet—

and turns out the kitchen lamp, limping to the porch to listen
in the windowless night.

Be there with Boy and the rest
io if I was well again.

Time was. Time was.

White robes like moonlight

1. Cotton or linen cloth.

civil rights activists known as Freedom Fighters,

2. In Philadelphia, Mississippi, in 1964, Ku Klux who were challenging segregationist laws in the Klansmen and police deputies murdered Michael South.

Schwerner, Andrew Goodman, and James Chaney,

” ‘ M Y S T E R Y B O Y ‘ L O O K S F O R K I N I N N A S H V I L L E ” / 1 5 3 5

In the sweetgum^ dark.

Unbucked that one then

15 and him squealing bloody Jesus

as we cut it off.

Time was. A cry?

A cry all right.

He hawks and spits,

20 fevered as by groinfire.

Have us a bottle,

Boy and me—

he’s earned him a bottle—

when he gets home.

II

25 Then we beat them, he said, beat them till our arms was tired and the big old chains messy and red.

O Jesus burning on the lily cross

30 Christ, it was better than hunting bear which don't know why
you want him dead.

O night, rawhead and bloodyhones night

35 You kids fetch Paw some water now so's he can wash that blood
off him, she said.

O night betrayed by darkness not its own

1 9 6 6

” ‘Mystery Boy’ Looks for Kin in Nashville”

Puzzle faces in the dying elms promise him treats if he will stay.
Sometimes they hiss and spit at him
like varmints caught

5 in a thicket of butterflies.

3. The dark woods of the sweet gum, a North American tree of a deep reddish brown grain.

1 5 3 6 / R O B E R T H A Y D E N

A black doll,
one disremembered time,

came floating down to him
through mimosa's fancywork leaves and blooms 10 to be his hidden bride.
From the road beyond the creepered walls
they call to him now and then,
and he'll take off in spite of the angry trees,
hearing like the loudening of his heart
15 the name he never can he never can repeat.
And when he gets to where the voices were—
Don't cry, his dollbaby wife implores;
I know where they are, don't cry.
We'll go and find them, we'll go 20 and ask them for your name again.

1 9 7 7

Paul Laurence Dunbar⁴

For Herbert Martin

We lay red roses on his grave,
speak sorrowfully of him
as if he were but newly dead
And so it seems to us
5 this raw spring day, though years before we two were born he was a young poet dead.
Poet of our youth—
his "cri du coeur"⁵ our own,
in his verses "in a broken tongue" beguiling as an elder brother's antic lore.

Their sad blackface lilt and croon survive him like

15 The happy look (subliminal of victim, dying man)
a summer's tintypes⁶ hold.

4. African American poet (1872—1906; see cry from the heart). The next line is probably a
pp. 1222-24).

reference to Dunbar's poems in dialect (blackface).

5. Passionate appeal or protest (French; literally,

6. I.e., old photographs.

NIGHTFEEDING / 1537

The roses flutter in the wind;
we weight their stems
20 with stones, then drive away.

1978

MURIEL RUKEYSER

1913-1980

Boy with His Hair Cut Short

Sunday shuts down on this twentieth-century evening.

The EP passes. Twilight and bulb define elevated train
the brown room, the overstuffed plum sofa,
the boy, and the girl's thin hands above his head.

5 A neighbor radio sings stocks, news, serenade.

He sits at the table, head down, the young clear neck exposed,
watching the drugstore sign from the tail of his eye;
tattoo, neon, until the eye blears, while his solicitous tall sister, simple in blue, bending

io behind him, cuts his hair with her cheap shears.
T h e arrow's electric red always reaches its mark, successful neon! He coughs, impressed by that precision.
His child's forehead, forever protected by his cap,
is bleached against the lamplight as he turns head 15 and steadies to let the snippets drop.
Erasing the failure of weeks with level fingers,
she sleeks the fine hair, combing: "You'll look fine tomorrow!
You'll surely find something, they can't keep turning you
down;
the finest gentleman's not so trim as you!" Smiling, he raises 20 the adolescent forehead wrinkling ironic now.
He sees his decent suit laid out, new-pressed, his carfare on the shelf. He lets his head fall, meeting her earnest hopeless look, seeing the sharp blades splitting, the darkened room, the impersonal sign, her motion,
25 the blue vein, bright on her temple, pitifully beating.

1 9 3 8

Night Feeding

Deeper than sleep but not so deep as death

I lay there sleeping and my magic head

1 5 3 8 / M U R I E L R U K E Y S E R

remembered and forgot. On first cry I remembered and forgot and did believe.

5 I knew love and I knew evil:

woke to the burning song and the tree burning blind, despair of our days and the calm milk-giver who knows sleep, knows growth, the sex of fire and grass,

and the black snake with gold bones.

10 Black sleeps, gold burns; on second cry I woke fully and gave to feed and fed on feeding.

Gold seed, green pain, my wizards in the earth walked through the house, black in the morning dark.

Shadows grew in my veins, my bright belief,

15 my head of dreams deeper than night and sleep.

Voices of all black animals crying to drink,

cries of all birth arise, simple as we,

found in the leaves, in clouds and dark, in dream,

deep as this hour, ready again to sleep.

1 9 5 1

Rondell

Now that I am fifty-six

Come and celebrate with me—

What happens to song and sex

Now that I am fifty-six?

5 They dance, but differently,

Death and distance in the mix;

Now that I'm fifty-six

Come and celebrate with me.

1 9 7 3

Ballad of Orange and Grape

After you finish your work

after you do your day

after you've read your reading

after you've written your say—

5 you go down the street to the hot dog stand,

one block down and across the way.

On a blistering afternoon in East Harlem in the twentieth century.

1. Based loosely on the French syllabic verse form, a thirteen-line poem that turns on two rhymes, with a refrain.

B A L L A D O F O R A N G E A N D G R A P E / 1 5 3 9

Most of the windows are boarded up,

the rats run out of a sack—

10 sticking out of the c r u m m y garage

one shiny long Cadillac;

at the glass door of the drug-addiction center,

a m a n who'd like to break your back.

But here's a brown w o m a n with a little girl dressed in rose and pink,

too.

15 Frankfurters frankfurters sizzle on the steel where the hot-dog-man leans—

nothing else on the counter

but the usual two machines,

the grape one, empty, and the orange one, empty,

20 I face him in between.

A black boy comes along, looks at the hot dogs, goes on walking.

I watch the m a n as he stands and pours

in the familiar shape

bright purple in the one marked ORANGE

25 orang e in th e on e marke d GRAPE,

the grape drink in the machine marked ORANGE and orange drink in the GRAPE.

Just the one word large and clear, unmistakable, on each machine.

I ask him : How can we go on reading
30 and make sense out of what we read?—

How can they write and believe what they're writing,
the young ones across the street,

while you go on pouring grape into ORANGE

and orange into the one marked G R A P E — ?

35 (How are we going to believe what we read and we write and we hear

and we say and we do?)

He looks at the two machines and he smiles and he shrugs and smiles and pours again.

It could be violence and nonviolence
it could be white and black women and m e n

40 it could be war and peace or any binary system, love and hate, enemy, friend.

Yes and no, be and not-be, what we do and what we don't do.

On a corner in East Harlem garbage, reading, a deep smile, rape,

45 forgetfulness, a hot street of murder,
misery, withered hope,

a man keeps pouring grape into ORANGE

and orange into the one marked GRAPE,

pouring orange into GRAPE and grape into ORANGE forever.

1953

MAY S W E N S O N

1913-1989

Motherhood

She sat on a shelf,
her breasts two bellies
on her poked-out belly, on which the navel looked like a sucked-in m o u t h — her knees bent and apart,
her long left arm raised,
with the large h a n d knuckled
to a bar in the ceiling—
her right hand clamping
the skinny infant to her chest—its round, pale, new,
soft muzzle hunting
in the brown hair for a nipple, its splayed, tiny hand picking at her naked, dirty ear.
Twisting its little neck,
with tortured, ecstatic eyes the size of lentils, it looked into her severe, close-set, solemn eyes, that beneath bald eyelids glared—dull lights in sockets of leather.
She twitched some chin-hairs,
with pain or pleasure,
as the baby-mouth found and yanked at her nipple;

its pink-nailed, jointless fingers, wandering her face, tangled in the tufts
of her cliffy brows.
She brought her big hand down from the bar—
with pretended exasperation unfastened the little hand,
and locked it within her palm—while her right hand,
with snag-nailed forefinger and short, sharp thumb, raked
the new orange hair
of the infant's skinny flank—
and found a louse,
which she lipped, and thoughtfully crisped between broad teeth.

CARDINAL IDEOGRAMS / 1541

She wrinkled appreciative nostrils which, without a nose, stood open—damp holes
above the poke of her mouth.
50 She licked her lips, flicked her leather eyelids—then, suddenly flung up both arms and grabbed the bars overhead.

55 The baby's scrabbly fingers instantly caught the hair—
as if there were metal rings there—in her long, stretched armpits.
And, as she stately swung,
60 and then proudly, more swiftly slung herself from corner to corner of her cell—
arms longer than her round body, short knees bent—65 her little wild-haired,
poke-mouthed infant hung,
like some sort of trophy,
or decoration, or shaggy medal—shaped like herself—but new,
70 clean, soft and shining on her chest.

1 9 6 7

Cardinal Ideograms 1

A mouth. Can blow or breathe,

0 be funnel, or Hello.

A grass blade or a cut.

1

A question seated. And a proud

2 bird's neck.

Shallow mitten for two-fingered hand.

3

4 Three-cornered hut

on one stilt. Sometimes built so the roof gapes.

1. Counting numbers interpreted as if they were pictures.

1 5 4 2 / M A Y S W E N S O N

5 A policeman. Polite.

Wearing visored cap.

6 O unrolling,

tape of ambiguous length

on which is written the mystery of everything curly.

7 A step,

detached from its stair.

The universe in diagram:

A cosmic hourglass.

8 (Note enigmatic shape,
absence of any valve of origin,
how end overlaps beginning.)

Unknotted like a shoelace

and whipped back and forth,

can serve as a model of time.

9 Lorgnette for the right eye.

In England or if you are Alice²

the stem is on the left.

10 A grass blade or a cut

companioned by a mouth.

Open? Open. Shut? Shut.

1 9 6 7

Waterbird

Part otter, part snake, part bird the bird Anhinga,³ jalousie⁰ wings, draped open, dry. When slack- shutterlike hinged, the wind flips them shut. Her cry, a slatted clatter, inflates her chin-5 pouch; it's like a fish's swim-bladder. Anhinga's body, otterfurry, floats, under watermosses, neck a snake with white-rimmed blue round roving eyes. Those long feet stilt-10 paddle the only bird of the marsh that flies submerged. Otter-quick over bream⁰ that hover in water- fish
shade, she feeds, finds fillets among the water-weeds. Her beak, ferrule⁰ of a folded black metal tip

2. Alice, who sees the mirror images of things in glasses or opera glasses with a handle.

the book Through the Looking-Glass, by the

3. Also known as snake-bird or water-turkey. With English mathematician and writer Lewis Carroll
a long fantail and thin neck, it swims submerged (1832-1898; see pp. 1135-39). Lorgnette: eye-up to the neck, thus resembling a snake.

GOODBYE, GOLDENEYE / 1543

15 umbrella, with neat thrust impales her prey.
She flaps up to dry on the crooked, look-dead-limb of the Gumbo Limbo,⁴ her tan-tipped wing fans spread, tail a shut fan dangled.

1987

Goodbye, Goldeneye

,5

Rag of black plastic, shred of a kite caught on the telephone cable above the bay has twisted in the wind all winter, summer, fall.
Leaves of birch and maple, brown paws of the oak 5 have all let go but this. Shiny black Mylar⁶ on stem strong as fishline, the busted kite string whipped around the wire and knotted—how long will it cling there? Through another spring?
Long barge nudged up channel by a snorting tug,
io its blunt front aproned with rot-black tires—
what is being hauled in slime-green drums?
The herring gulls that used to feed their young on the shore—puffy, wide-beaked babies standing spraddle-legged and crying—are not here this year.
15 Instead, steam shovel, bulldozer, cement mixer rumble over sand, beginning the big new beach house.
There'll be a hotdog stand, flush toilets, trash—
plastic and glass, greasy cartons, crushed beercans, barrels of garbage for water rats to pick through.
20 So, goodbye, goldeneye, and grebe and scaup and loon.
Goodbye, morning walks beside the tide tinkling
among clean pebbles, blue mussel shells and snail shells that look like staring eyeballs. Goodbye, kingfisher, little green, black crowned heron, 25 snowy egret. And, goodbye, oh faithful pair of swans that used to glide—god and goddess shapes of purity—over the wide water.

1 9 8 7

4. Tropical American tree with a smooth, coppery bark mentioned in line 20, is a freshwater diving duck.

6. Brand of strong, thin polyester film, here used

5. The goldeneye, like the grebe, scaup, and loon in string.

1 5 4 4

R. S. T H O M A S

1913-2000

Welsh Landscape

To live in Wales is to be conscious

At dusk of the spilled blood

That went to the making of the wild sky,

Dyeing the immaculate rivers

5 In all their courses.

It is to be aware,

Above the noisy tractor

And hum of the machine

Of strife in the strung woods,

io Vibrant with sped arrows.

You cannot live in the present,

At least not in Wales.

There is the language for instance,

The soft consonants

15 Strange to the ear.

There are cries in the dark at night

As owls answer the moon,
And thick ambush of shadows,
Hushed at the fields' corners.

20 There is no present in Wales,
And no future;
There is only the past,
Brittle with relics,
Wind-bitten towers and castles
25 With sham ghosts;
Mouldering quarries and mines;
And an impotent people,
Sick with inbreeding,
Worrying the carcass of an old song.

1 9 5 5

The View from the Window
Like a painting it is set before one,
But less brittle, ageless; these colours
Are renewed daily with variations
Of light and distance that no painter
5 Achieves or suggests. Then there is movement, Change, as slowly the cloud bruises
Are healed by sunlight, or snow caps
A black mood; but gold at evening
To cheer the heart. All through history
10 The great brush has not rested,

L O R E / 1 5 4 5

Nor the paint dried; yet what eye,
Looking coolly, or, as we now,

Through the tears' lenses, ever saw
This work and it was not finished?

1958

On the Farm

There was Dai Puw. He was no good.

They put him in the fields to dock0 swedes,0 cut/ turnips

And took the knife from him, when he came home

At late evening with a grin

5 Like the slash of a knife on his face.

There was Llew Puw, and he was no good.

Every evening after the ploughing

With the big tractor he would sit in his chair,

And stare into the tangled fire garden,

io Opening his slow lips like a snail.

There was Huw Puw, too. What shall I say?

I have heard him whistling in the hedges

On and on, as though winter

Would never again leave those fields,

15 And all the trees were deformed.

And lastly there was the girl:

Beauty under some spell of the beast.

Her pale face was the lantern

By which they read in life's dark book

20 The shrill sentence: God is love.

1963

Lore

Job Davies, eighty-five

Winters old, and still alive

After the slow poison
And treachery of the seasons.
5 Miserable? Kick my arse!
It needs more than the rain's hearse,
Wind-drawn, to pull me off
The great perch of my laugh.

1 5 4 6 / J O H N B E R R Y M A N

What's living but courage?
10 Paunch full of hot porridge,
Nerves strengthened with tea,
Peat-black, dawn found me
Mowing where the grass grew,
Bearded with golden dew.
15 Rhythm of the long scythe
Kept this tall frame lithe.
What to do? Stay green.
Never mind the machine,
Whose fuel is human souls.
20 Live large, man, and dream small.

1 9 6 4

J O H N B E R R Y M A N

1914-1972

From Homage to Mistress Bradstreet I

U7]

The winters close, Springs open, no child stirs
130 under my withering heart, O seasoned heart
God grudged his aid.
All things else soil like a shirt.

Simon is much away. My executive² stales.
The town came through for the cartway by the pales,³ 135 but my patience is short.

I revolt from, I am like, these savage foresters

[J8]

whose passionless dicker in the shade, whose glance impassive & scant, belie their murderous cries when quarry seems to show.

140 Again I must have been wrong, twice.⁴

Unwell in a new way. Can that begin?

God brandishes. O love, O I love. Kin, gather. My world is strange and merciful, ingrown months, blessing a swelling trance.

1. Berryman's book-length poem about, and as well as the form of the "dream song," see the mostly in the voice of, the early American poet
introduction to Berryman's Collected Poems 1937—
Anne Bradstreet (ca. 1612 - 1672 ; see pp. 458 - 67) .
1971 (1989) by Charles Thornbury, xl-xliii.

Bradstreet speaks here of her struggle in child-

2. Power to act. Simon: her husband.

birth. For a discussion of the complex stanza form

3. Stockade fence.

Berryman invented for this poem (modeled partly

4. I.e., she twice failed to conceive.

on W. B. Yeats's "In Memory of Major Gregory"),

ASYMPATHY, A WELCOME / 1547

[19]

145 So squeezed, wince you I scream? I love you & hate off with you. Ages! Useless. Below my waist
he has me in Hell's vise.

Stalling. He let go. Come back: brace me somewhere. No. No. Yes! everything down

150 hardens I press with horrible joy down my back cracks like a wrist

shame I am voiding oh behind it is too late [20]

hide me forever I work thrust I must free

now I all muscles & bones concentrate 155 what is living from dying?

Simon I must leave you so untidy

Monster you are killing me Be sure

I'll have you later W o m e n do endure

I can can no longer

160 and it passes the wretched trap whelming and I am me

[21]

drencht & powerful, I did it with my body!

One proud tug greens Heaven. Marvellous, unforbidding Majesty.

Swell, imperious bells. I fly.

165 Mountainous, woman not breaks and will bend:

sways God nearby: anguish comes to an end.

Blossomed Sarah,5 and I blossom. Is that thing alive? I hear a famisht howl.

1 9 4 8 - 5 3 1 9 5 6

A Sympathy, A Welcome

Feel for your bad fall how could I fail,
poor Paul, who had it so good.
I can offer you only: this world like a knife.
Yet you'll get to know your mother
5 and humourless as you do look you will laugh and all the others
will NOT be fierce to you, and loverhood will swing your soul like a broken bell deep in a forsaken wood, poor Paul,
io whose wild bad father loves you well.

1 9 5 8

5. Wife of Abraham, who after long barrenness gave birth to Isaac (Genesis 17.19).

1 5 4 8 / J O H N B E R R Y M A N

*From The Dream Songs*⁶

I

H u f f y Henry hid the day,
unappeasable Henry sulked.
I see his point,—a trying to put things over.
It was the thought that they thought
5 they could do it made Henry wicked & away.
But he should have come out and talked.
All the world like a woolen lover
once did seem on Henry's side.
T h e n came a departure,
io Thereafter nothing fell out as it might or ought.
I don't see how Henry, pried
open for all the world to see, survived.

W h a t he has now to say is a long wonder the world can bear & be.

15 O n c e in a sycamore I was glad all at the top, and I sang.

Hard on the land wears the strong sea
and empty grows every bed.

1 9 6 4

4

Filling her compact & delicious body with chicken paprika, she glanced at me twice.

Fainting with interest, I hungered back

5 and only the fact of her husband & four other people kept me from springing on her or falling at her little feet and crying

“You are the hottest one for years of night

Henry’s dazed eyes

io have enjoyed, Brilliance.” I advanced upon (despairing) my spumoni.—Sir Bones: is stuffed, de world, wif feeding girls.

—Black hair, complexion Latin, jeweled eyes downcast ... The slob beside her feasts ... W h a t wonders is 15 she sitting on, over there?

The restaurant buzzes. She might as well be on Mars.

6. “[The Dream Songs are] essentially about an person, sometimes in the third, sometimes even in imaginary character (not the poet, not me) named the second; he has a friend, never named, who

Henry, a white American in early middle age some-addresses him as Mr. Bones and variants thereof” times in blackface, who has suffered an irreversible [Berryman’s note]. These poems were written over loss and talks about himself sometimes in the first a period of thirteen years.

THE DREAMSONGS : 29 / 1549

Where did it all go wrong? There ought to be a law against Henry.

— Mr. Bones: there is.

1964

14

Life, friends, is boring. We must not say so.
After all, the sky flashes, the great sea yearns,
we ourselves flash and yearn,
and more over my mother told me as a boy
5 (repeatingly) ”Ever to confess you ‘rebored means you have no Inner Resources.” I conclude now I have no inner resources, because I am heavily bored.
People bore me,
io literature bores me, especially great literature, Henry bores me, with his plights & gr-ipes as bad as achilles, 7
who loves people and valiant art, which bore
me.
And the tranquil hills, & gin, look like a drag 15 and somehow a dog has taken itself & its tail considerably away into mountains or sea or sky, leaving behind: me, wag.

1964

29

There sat down, once, a thing on Henry's heart
so heavy, if he had a hundred years

& more, & weeping, sleepless, in all the time
Henry could not make good.

5 Starts again always in Henry's ears
the little cough somewhere, an odor, a chime

And there is another thing he has in mind like a grave Sieneſe face 8 a thousand years would fail to blur the still profiled reproach
of. Ghastly, iowith open eyes, he attends, blind.

All the bells say: too late. This is not for tears;
thinking.

But never did Henry, as he thought he did,
end anyone and hack her body up

7. The Greek hero of Homer's Iliad, who withdrew with Henry's father" [John Haffenden, John Berryman: A Critical Commentary, 1980, 55].

Berryman claimed that some of the structure of

8. The painters of thirteenth- and fourteenth-
The Dream Songs could be traced to parallel scenes century Siena, Italy, were known for their austere in the Iliad. "The chief enemy, in Achilles case, religious portraits.

was Hector, whom Berryman explicitly equated

1550 / JOHN BERRYMAN

15 and hideth pieces, wher they may be found.

He knows: he went over everyone, & nobody's missing.

Often hereckons, in the dawn, them up.

Nobody is ever missing.

1964

40

I'm scared alone. Never see my son, easy benottosee anyone,
combers out to sea
know they're goin somewhere but not me.

5 Got a little poison, got a little gun,

I'm scared alone.

I'm scared a only one thing, which is me,
from othering I don't take nothin, see,
for any hound dog's sake,

io But this is where I live in, where I rake my leaves and cop my promise, 9 this 'where we cry oursel's awake.

Wishin was dy in but I gotta make it all this way to that bed on these feet 15 where peoplessaid to meet.

Maybe but even if I see my son forever never, get back on the take, free, black & forty-one. 1

1964

145

Also I love him: me he's donenowrong forgoing on forty years — forgiveness time

—

Itouchnowhisdespair,

hefeltasbadasWhitman²onhistower

5buthedidnotswimoutwithmeormybrother rashethreatened—

a powerfull swimmer, totakeoneofusalonga scompanyinthedefeat sublime,

freezingmyhelplessmother:

ioheonly,veryearlyinthemorning, rosewithhisgunandwentoutdoorsbymywi ndowanddidwhatwasneeded.

9. Build my potential.

campus with bullets for eighty minutes on August

1. A play on the phras efree, white and twenty-one,

1, 1966. Whitman wrote of fear and violent connoting independence.

impulses before his mass killing. “He” here refers

2. Charles Whitman, a sniper who, from a tower to Berryman’s father, John Smith, who committed at the University of Texas at Austin, sprayed the suicide when the poet was twelve years old.

THE DREAMSONGS : 382 / 1551

Icannotreadthatwretchedmind,sostrong

&soundone.I’vealways tried.I—I’m

15 tryingtoforgive

whosefranticpassage,whenhecouldnotliv eaninstantlonger,inthesummerdawn leftHenrytoliveon.

1968

324. An Elegy for W. C. W., 3 The Lovely Man Henry
in Ireland to Bill Underground:

Restwell, who worked so hard, whom made a good sound constantly, for so many years:

your high-jinks delighted the continents & our ears: 5 you had so many girls your life was a triumph and you loved your new wife.

At dawn you rose & wrote — the book poured forth —

you delivered infinite babies, 4 in one great birth —

and your generosity

into juniors made you deeply loved, deeply:
if envy was a Henry trademark, he would envy
you, especially the being through.

Too many journeys lie for him ahead,

too many galleys & page-proof to be read, 1 5 he would like to lie down

in your sweet silence, to whom was not denied the mysterious late excellence which is the crown of four trials & our last bride.

1968

382

At Henry's bier let something fall out well: e nтер there none who somewhat has to sell, the music ancient & gradual,

the voice solemn but the grief subdued,

5 no hairy jokes but everybody's mood

subdued, subdued,

until the Dancer comes, in a short short dress
shair black & long & loose, dark dark glasses
, up tilted face,

io pallor & strangeness, the music changes
o "Give!" & "Ow!" and how! the music changes,
she kicks a backward limb

3. The American poet William Carlos Williams 4. Williams was a physician and specialized in (1883-1963; see pp. 1272-83). pediatrics.

1552 / RANDALL JARRELL

on tiptoe, pirouettes, & she is free to the knocking music, sails, dips, & suddenly ly 15 return to the terrible gay occasion hopeless & mad, she weaves, it 'shell, she flings to her head a leg, bobs, all is well,

she dances Henry away.

1968

RANDALL JARRELL

1914-1965

90 North 1

At home, in my flannel gown, like a bear to its floe, I clambered to bed; up the globe 's impossible sides I sailed all night—till at last, with my black beard, My furs and my dogs, I stood at the northern pole.

5 There in the childish night my companions lay frozen, The stiff furs knocked at my star-veling throat, And I gave my great sigh: the lakes came huddling, Were they really my end? In the darkness I turned to my rest.

—Here, the flags snap in the glare and silence
io Of the unbroken ice. I stand here,

The dogs bark, my beard is black, and I stare
At the North Pole...

And now what? Why, go back.

Turn as I please, my step is to the south.

The world—my world spin on this final point 15 Of cold and wretchedness: all lines, all winds End in this whirlpool I at last discover

And it is meaningless. In the child's bed
After the night's voyage, in that warm world
Where people work and suffer for the end

20 That crown the pain—in that Cloud-Cuckoo-Land²

I reached my North and it had meaning.
Here at the actual pole of my existence,
Where all that I have done is meaningless,
Where I die or live by accident alone—

25 Where, living or dying, I am still alone; Here where North, the night, the berg of death
1. Ninety degrees north latitude; the North Pole. tist Aristophanes (ca. 450—ca. 388 B.C.E.), an imaginary city the cuckoos build in the clouds.

EIGHTH AIR FORCE / 1553

Crowd me out of the ignorant darkness,

I see at last that all the knowledge

I wrung from the darkness—that the darkness flung me—

BO Is worthless as ignorance: nothing comes from nothing,³

The darkness from the darkness. Pain comes from the darkness

And we call it wisdom. It is pain.

1942

The Death of the Ball Turret Gunner⁴

From my mother's sleep I fell into the State,

And I hunched in its belly till my wet fur froze.

Six miles from earth, loosed from its dream of life,
I woke to black flak and the nightmare fighters.
5 When I died they washed me out of the turret with a hose.

1 9 4 5

Eighth Air Force⁵

If, in an odd angle of the hutment,⁰ encampment

A puppy laps the water from a can

Of flowers, and the drunk sergeant shaving

Whistles O *Paradiso!*⁶—shall I say that man

5 Is not as men have said: a wolf to man?

The other murderers troop in yawning;

Three of them play Pitch,⁰ one sleeps, and one a card game

Lies counting missions, lies there sweating

Till even his heart beats: One; One; One.

io O murderers! . . . Still, this is how it's done:

This is a war... . But since these play, before they die,

Like puppies with their puppy; since, a man,

I did as these have done, but did not die—

I will content the people as I can

15 And give up these to them: Behold the man!⁷

3. Cf. Shakespeare, King Lear 1.1.89: “Nothing shells. The hose was a steam hose” [Jarrell’s note].

will come of nothing”; also a statement in Aristotle,

5. “A poem about the air force which bombed the Physics I.

Continent from England. The man who lies count-

4. “A ball turret was a plexiglass sphere set into

ing missions has one to go before being sent home.
the belly of a B-17 or B-24, and inhabited by two
The phrases from the Gospels compare such crim-
.50 caliber machine-guns and one man, a short inals and scapegoats as these with that earlier small man. When this gunner tracked with his criminal and scapegoat about whom the Gospels machine-guns a fighter attacking his bomber from were written” [Jan-ell’s note],

below, he revolved with the turret; hunched

6. A popular operatic aria.

upside-down in his little sphere, he looked like the

7. Quoting John 19.5: these are Pilate’s words as foetus in the womb. The fighters which attacked he presents Jesus, scourged and wearing a crown him were armed with cannon firing explosive of thorns, to the crowd.

1 5 5 4 / R A N D A L L J A R R E L L

I have suffered, in a dream, because of him,

Many things;8 for this last saviour, man,

I have lied as I lie now. But what is lying?

Men wash their hands, in blood, as best they can:

20 I find no fault in this just man.9

1 9 4 5

A Front1

Fog over the base: the beams ranging

From the five towers pull home from the night

The crews cold in fur, the bombers banging

Like lost trucks down the levels of the ice.
5 A glow drifts in like mist (how many tons of it?),
Bounces to a roll, turns suddenly to steel
And tires and turrets, huge in the trembling light.
The next is high, and pulls up with a wail,
Comes round again—no use. And no use for the rest
io In drifting circles out along the range;
Holding no longer, changed to a kinder course,
The flights drone southward through the steady rain.
The base is closed... . But one voice keeps on calling,
The lowering pattern of the engines grows;
15 The roar gropes downward in its shaky orbit
For the lives the season quenches. Here below
They beg, order, are not heard; and hear the darker Voice rising: Can't you hear me? Over. Over—
All the air quivers, and the east sky glows.

1 9 4 5

A Field Hospital

He stirs, beginning to awake.

A kind of ache

Of knowing troubles his blind warmth; he moans,

And the high hammering drone

5 Of the first crossing fighters shakes

His sleep to pieces, rakes

The darkness with its skidding bursts, is done.

All that he has known

8. Pilate's wife wrote to him about Jesus: "Have for Christ's death.

nothing to do with that just man: for I have suf-
1. “A front is closing in over a bomber base; the fered many things this day in a dream because of bombers, guided in by signals from the five towers him” (Matthew 27.19).

of the radio range, are landing. Only one lands
9. After the crowd had called on him to free the before the base is closed; the rest fly south to fields robber Barabbas and execute Jesus, Pilate had that are still open. One plane’s radio has gone Jesus brought forth, “that you may know that I find bad—it still transmits, but doesn’t receive—and no fault in him” (John 19.4-5). Pilate washed his this plane tries to land and crashes” [Jarrell’s note].
hands to symbolize his freedom from responsibility

N E X T D A Y / 1 5 5 5

Floods in upon him; but he dreads

10 The crooked thread

Of fire upon the darkness: “The great drake

Flutters to the icy lake—

The shotguns stammer in my head.

I lie in my own bed,”

15 He whispers, “dreaming”; and he thinks to wake.

The old mistake.

A cot creaks; and he hears the groan

He thinks his own—

And groans, and turns his stitched, blind, bandaged head

20 Up to the tent-flap, red

With dawn. A voice says, “Yes, this one”;
His arm stings; then, alone,
He neither knows, remembers—but instead Sleeps, comforted.

1948

Next Day

Moving from Cheer to Joy, from Joy to All,
I take a box
And add it to my wild rice, my Cornish game hens.
The slacked or shorted, basketed, identical
5 Food-gathering flocks
Are selves I overlook. Wisdom, said William James,
Is learning what to overlook.² And I am wise
If that is wisdom.
Yet somehow, as I buy All from these shelves
io And the boy takes it to my station wagon,
What I’ve become
Troubles me even if I shut my eyes.
When I was young and miserable and pretty
And poor, I’d wish
15 What all girls wish: to have a husband,
A house and children. Now that I’m old, my wish
Is womanish:
That the boy putting groceries in my car
See me. It bewilders me he doesn’t see me.
20 For so many years
I was good enough to eat: the world looked at me

And its mouth watered. How often they have undressed
me,

The eyes of strangers!

And, holding their flesh within my flesh, their vile

2. From Principles of Psychology, by the American philosopher William James (1842-1910).

1 5 5 6 / R A N D A L L J A R R E L L

25 Imaginings within my imagining,

I too have taken

The chance of life. Now the boy pats my dog

And we start home. Now I am good.

The last mistaken,

BO Ecstatic, accidental bliss, the blind

Happiness that, bursting, leaves upon the palm

Some soap and water—

It was so long ago, back in some Gay

Twenties, Nineties, I don't know ... Today I miss

35 My lovely daughter

Away at school, my sons away at school,

My husband away at work—I wish for them.

The dog, the maid,

And I go through the sure unvarying days

40 At home in them. As I look at my life,

I am afraid

Only that it will change, as I am changing:

I am afraid, this morning, of my face.

It looks at me

45 From the rear-view mirror, with the eyes I hate,

The smile I hate. Its plain, lined look

Of gray discovery

Repeats to me: "You're old." That's all, I'm old.

And yet I'm afraid, as I was at the funeral

50 I went to yesterday.

My friend's cold made-up face, granite among its flowers,

Her undressed, operated-on, dressed body

Were my face and body.

As I think of her I hear her telling me

55 How young I seem; I am exceptional;

I think of all I have.

But really no one is exceptional,

No one has anything, I'm anybody,

I stand beside my grave

60 Confused with my life, that is commonplace and solitary.

1 9 6 5

A Man Meets a Woman in the Street

Under the separated leaves of shade

Of the gingko, that old tree

That has existed essentially unchanged

Longer than any other living tree,

A M A N M E E T S A W O M A N I N T H E S T R E E T /
1 5 5 7

5 I walk behind a woman. Her hair's coarse gold

Is spun from the sunlight that it rides upon.

W o m e n were paid to knit from sweet champagne

Her second skin: it winds and unwinds, winds

Up her long legs, delectable haunches,

10 As she sways, in sunlight, up the gazing aisle.

The shade of the tree that is called maidenhair,
That is not positively known
To exist in a wild state, spots her fair or almost fair
Hair twisted in a French twist; tall or almost tall,
15 She walks through the air the rain has washed, a clear thing
Moving easily on its high heels, seeming to men Miraculous ... Since I can call her, as Swann³ couldn't,
A woman who is my type, I follow with the warmth
Of familiarity, of novelty, this new 20 Example of the type,
Reminded of how Lorenz's⁴ just-hatched goslings
Shook off the last remnants of the egg
And, looking at Lorenz, realized that Lorenz
Was their mother. Quacking, his little family 25 Followed him everywhere; and when they met a goose,
Their mother, they ran to him afraid.
Imprinted upon me
Is the shape I run to, the sweet strange Breath-taking contours that breathe to me: "I am yours, 30 Be mine!"
Following this new
Body, somehow familiar, this young shape, somehow old,
For a m o m e n t I'm younger, the century is younger.
The living Strauss,⁵ his moustache just getting gray,
35 Is shouting to the players: "Louder!
Louder! I can still hear Madame Schumann-Heink—"6
Or else, white, bald, the old man's joyfully
Telling conductors they must play Elektra

Like A Midsummer Night's Dream 7—like fairy music;
40 Proust, dying, is swallowing his iced beer
And changing in proof the death of Bergotte⁸
According to his own experience; Garbo,⁹
A commissar in Paris, is listening attentively
To the voice telling how McGillicuddy met McGillivray,
45 And McGillivray said to McGillicuddy—no, McGillicuddy

3. Charles Swann, a protagonist of the first book in

6. Ernestine Schumann-Heink (1861-1936), the seven-volume novel A la recherche du temps
American (Bohemian-born) contralto.

perdu (In Search of Lost Time), by the French

7. Incidental music, based on Shakespeare's play, writer Marcel Proust (1871-1922). After Swann's by Felix Mendelssohn (1809-1847), German cominfatuation with his lover Odette ceases, he poser.

remarks that she was never his type.

8. Character in Proust's novel, a distinguished

4. Konrad Lorenz (1903-1989), Austrian etholo-writer.

gist who in a 1935 study described the process of

9. Greta Garbo (1905-1990), American (Swed-

“imprinting.” Just-hatched goslings preferred ish-born) film actor, famous for her unsmiling

Lorenz to their natural mother after having re-demeanor. Here quoted from the film Ninotchka

ceived certain stimuli.

(1939), before she finally laughs for the first time

5. Richard Strauss (1864-1949), German composer, on screen.

poser, wrote the opera Electra.

1 5 5 8 / R A N D A L L J A R R E L L

Said to McGillivray—that is, McGillivray ... Garbo

Says seriously: “I wish dey’d never met.”

As I walk behind this woman I remember

That before I flew here—waked in the forest

50 At dawn, by the piece called Birds Beginning Day

That, each day, birds play to begin the day—

I wished as men wish: “May this day be different!”

The birds were wishing, as birds wish—over and over,

With a last firmness, intensity, reality—

55 “May this day be the same!”

Ah, turn to me

And look into my eyes, say: “I am yours,

Be mine!”

My wish will have come true. And yet

60 W h e n your eyes meet my eyes, they’ll bring into

The weightlessness of my pure wish the weight

Of a h u m a n being: someone to help or hurt,

Someone to be good to me, to be good to,

Someone to cry w h e n I am angry

65 That she doesn’t like Elektra, someone to start out on Proust with.

A wish, come true, is life. I have my life.

W h e n you turn just slide your eyes across my eyes

And show in a look flickering across your face
As lightly as a leaf's shade, a bird's wing, 70 That there is no one in the world quite like me,
That if only ... If only ...
That will be enough.
But I've pretended long enough: I walk faster
And come close, touch with the tip of my finger
75 The nape of her neck, just where the gold
Hair stops, and the champagne-colored dress begins.
My finger touches her as the gingko's shadow Touches her.
Because, after all, it is my wife
so In a new dress from Bergdorf's, walking toward the park.
She cries out, we kiss each other, and walk arm in arm
Through the sunlight that's much too good for New York,
The sunlight of our own house in the forest.
Still, though, the poor things need it ... We've no need 85 To start out on Proust, to ask each other about Strauss.
We first helped each other, hurt each other, years ago.
After so many changes made and joys repeated,
Our first bewildered, transcending recognition
Is pure acceptance. We can't tell our life
90 From our wish. Really I began the day
Not with a man's wish: "May this day be different,"
But with the birds' wish: "May this day
Be the same day, the day of my life."

1 9 6 7

1 1 5 5 9

W E L D O N K E E S

1914-1955

What the Spider Heard

Will there be time for egnogs and eclogues

In the place where we're going?

Said the spider to the fly.1

I think not, said the fly.

5 I think not, sang the chorus.

I think not, said a stranger

W h o mysteriously happened by.

Will they beat me and treat me the way they did here,

In the place where we're going?

io Asked the spider of the fly.

It is likely, said the fly.

Very likely, sang the chorus.

Extremely likely, said the stranger,

With an eager gleam in his eye.

15 O, why go there w h e n we know there is nothing there but fear

At this place where we're going?

Said the spider to the fly.

What a question! said the fly.

What a question! sang the chorus.

20 What a question! said the stranger,

Leering slightly at the spider,

Winking slyly at the fly.

1 9 4 3

For H. V. (1901-1927)

I remember the clumsy surgery: the face
Scarred out of recognition, ruined and not his own.
Wax hands fattened a m o n g pink silk and pinker roses.
The minister was in fine form that afternoon.
5 I remember the ferns, the organ faintly out of tune,
The gray light, the two extended prayers,
Rain falling on stained glass; the pallbearers,
Selected by the family, and n o n e of t h e m his friends.

1 9 4 3

1. Allusion to the children's poem "The Spider my parlor?" said the spider to the fly.' "The spider and the Fly," by the English writer Mary Howitt seduces the fly "up his winding stair" and kills her.

(1799-1888), which begins, "Will you walk into

1 5 6 0 / W E L D O N K E E S

When the Lease Is Up

Walk the horses down the hill

Through the darkening groves;

Pat their rumps and leave the stall;

Even the eyeless cat perceives

5 Things are not going well.

Fasten the lock on the drawingroom door,

Cover the tables with sheets:

This is the end of the swollen year

W h e n even the sound of the rain repeats:

10 The lease is up, the time is near.

Pull the curtains to the sill,

Darken the rooms, cut all the wires.

Crush the embers as they fall

From the dying fires:

15 Things are not going well.

1 9 4 3

Robinson²

The dog stops barking after Robinson has gone.

His act is over. The world is a gray world,

Not without violence, and he kicks under the grand piano,

The nightmare chase well under way.

5 The mirror from Mexico, stuck to the wall,

Reflects nothing at all. The glass is black.

Robinson alone provides the image Robinsonian.

W h i c h is all of the room—walls, curtains,

Shelves, bed, the tinted photograph of Robinson's first wife,

io Rugs, vases, panatellas⁰ in a humidor. cigars

They would fill the room if Robinson came in.

The pages in the books are blank,

The books that Robinson has read. That is his favorite chair,

Or where the chair would be if Robinson were here.

15 All day the phone rings. It could be Robinson

Calling. It never rings w h e n he is here.

Outside, white buildings yellow in the sun.

Outside, the birds circle continuously

Where trees are actual and take no holiday.

1 9 4 7

2. A fictional everyman who appears in a number of Kees's poems.

1 1 5 6 1

NORMANNICHOLSON

1914-1987

To the River Duddon¹

I wonder, D u d d o n , if y o u still r e m e m b e r
An oldish m a n w i t h a n o s e like a pony's n o s e , Broad b o n e s , legs l o n g and l e a n b u t strong e n o u g
h
To carry h i m over Hardknott at seventy years of age.
5 He c a m e to y o u first as a boy w i t h a fishing-rod
A n d a h u n k of A n n Tyson's bread and c h e e s e in his pocket,
W a l k i n g f r o m H a w k s h e a d across W a l n a Scar;²
T h e n as a m i d d l e - a g e d Rydal³ landlord,
W i t h a d o t i n g sister and a p e n s i o n on the civil list, io W h o left his verse s g u m m e d to your rocks like
lichen ,
T h e dry and y e l l o w e d g e s of a o n c e - g r e e n
spring.
H e m a d e a g u i d e - b o o k for you, f r o m your source
T h e r e w h e r e y o u bubble through the m o s s o n W r y n o s e (A m o n g the ribs of bald and b o n y fells⁰ upland tracts
15 W i t h screes⁴ scratched in the turf like grey scabs),
A n d twist and slither u n d e r h u m p b a c k e d b r i d g
e s —
B u i l t like a child's h o u s e from odds and e n d s
O f s t o n e s that lie about the m o u n t a i n s i d e —
P a s t C o c k l e y B e c k Farm and on to Birk's Bridge, 20 W h e r e the rocks stride about like legs in armour,

A n d the steel birches buckle and b o u n c e in the wind
W i t h a crinkle of silver foil in the crisp of the leaves;
O n t h e n to Seathwaite, w h e r e like a steam-navvy⁵
You shovel and slash your way t h r o u g h the gorge

25 By Wallabarrow Crag, broader n o w

F r o m b e c k s that f l o w out of black upland tarns⁰ small lakes Or o o z e t h r o u g h g o l d e n saxifrage and the roots of rowans; N e x t U l p h a , w h e r e a s t o n e dropped f r o m the bridge

S w i m s like a tadpole d o w n thirty f e e t of water

30 B e t w e e n steep skirting-boards of rock; and t h e n c
e

You dribble into lower D u n n e r d a l e

T h r o u g h w e t w o o d s and w o o d - s o i l and w o o d l a n d flowers, T u t s o n , the St. John's-wort w i t h a single y e l l o w bead,

M a r s h marigold, c r e e p i n g j e n n y and daffodils;

35 H e r e f r o m hazel islands in the late spring

T h e catkins⁰ fall and ride along the stream spiky
*flowerings

Like little y e l l o w w e a s e l s , and the soil is l o o s e d

From bulbs of the w h i t e lily that smells of garlic,

A n d dippers rock up and d o w n on rubber legs,

40 A n d long-tailed tits^o are f l u n g t h r o u g h the air like darts; birds 1. In England's southwest Lake District, flowing

Wordsworth lodged with Hugh and Ann Tyson down Dunnerdale from Wrynose and Hardknott while attending Hawshead Grammar School, passes. This poem recalls The River Duddon: A Cumbria.

Series of Sonnets (1820), by William Wordsworth

3. Lake District village where Wordsworth later (1770-1850; see pp. 763-805), the “oldish man” lived with his sister, Dorothy (1771-1855).

in line 2.

4. Masses of debris at the foot of a cliff.

2. A rocky eminence in England’s Lake District.

5. Steam-powered excavator {navvy: laborer).

1 5 6 2 / N O R M A N N I C H O L S O N

By Foxfield n o w y o u taste the salt in your m o u t h ,

A n d thrift m i n g l e s w i t h the turf, and the h e r o n stands

W a t c h i n g the wagtails. W o r d s w o r t h wrote:

“Remote f r o m every taint of sordid industry”.⁶

45 But y o u and I k n o w better, D u d d o n lass.

For I, who’ve lived for nearly thirty years

U p o n your shore, have s e e n the slagbanks⁷ slant

Like screes s h e e r into the sand, and s e e n the tide

Purple with ore back up the m u d d y gullies

50 A n d w i p e d the sinter dust from the farmyard d a m s o n s . ⁸

A h u n d r e d years of floods and rain and w i n d

Have w a s h e d your rocks clear of his words again,

M a n y of t h e m half-forgotten, b r i m m i n g the Irish Sea,

But that w h i c h W o r d s w o r t h knew, e v e n the old m a n

55 W h e n poetry had failed like desire, was s o m e t h i n g

I have yet to learn, and you, D u d d o n ,

Have learned and re-learned to forget and forget again.
N o t the radical, the poet and heretic,
T o w h o m the water-forces s h o u t e d and the fells
60 W e r e like a blackboard for the scrawls of God,
B u t the old man, inarticulate and h u m b l e ,
K n e w that eternity flows in a m o u n t a i n b e c k 0 — creek T h e l o n g cord of the water, the shepherd's n u m e r a l s T h a t run upstream, through the singing d e c a d e s of dialect.

65 He knew, b e n e a t h m u t a t i o n of year and s e a s o n ,
Flood and drought, frost and fire and thunder,
T h e frothy b l o s s o m on the rowan and the r e d d e n i n g of the berries, T h e silt, the sand, the slagbanks and the shingle,9

A n d the wild c a t a s t r o p h e s of the breaking m o u n t a i n s , 70 There stands the base and root of the living rock,

Thirty t h o u s a n d f e e t of solid C u m b e r l a n d .

1 9 4 4

Halley's Comet

My father s a w it back in 1 9 1 0 ,

T h e year King Edward died.

Above dark telegraph poles, above the high

Spiked steeple of the Liberal Club, the w h i t e

5 Gas-lit dials of the Market Clock,

B e y o n d the w i d e

S u n s e t - g l o w cirrus of blast-furnace smoke,

My father s a w it fly

Its thirty-seven-million-mile-long kite

io Across Black Combe's 1 black sky.

6. From The River Duddon, sonnet II, lines 1—2.

9. Round, water-worn gravel and pebbles.

7. Accumulations of volcanic rock.

1. Place-name meaning dark, armchair-shaped

8. Plum trees. Sinter: cinder (i.e., from slag).
rock formation.

CHARD WHITLOW / 1 5 6 3

And what of me,
Born four years too late?
Will I have breath to wait
Till the long-circuiting commercial traveller 15 Turns up at his due?
In 1986, aged seventy-two,
Watery in the eyes and phlegmy in the flue
And a bit bad tempered at so delayed a date,
Will I look out above whatever is left of the town—
20 The Liberal Club long closed and the clock stopped,
And the chimneys smokeless above damped-down
Furnace fires? And then will I
At last have chance to see it
With my own as well as my father's eyes,
25 And share his long-ago Edwardian surprise
At that high, silent jet, laying its bright trail Across Black Combe's black sky?

1981

HENRY REED

1914-1986

Chard Whitlow

(Mr Eliot's Sunday Evening Postscript) I

As we get older we do not get any younger.
Seasons return, and today I am fifty-five,
And this time last year I was fifty-four,

And this time next year I shall be sixty-two.
 5 And I cannot say I should care (to speak for myself)
 To see my time over again—if you can call it time,
 Fidgeting uneasily under a draughty stair,
 Or counting sleepless nights in the crowded Tube.²
 There are certain precautions—though none of them very reliable—
 io Against the blast from bombs, or the flying splinter,
 But not against the blast from Heaven, vento dei venti,³
 The wind within a wind, unable to speak for wind;
 And the frigid burnings of purgatory will not be touched
 By any emollient.

15 I think you will find this put,
 Far better than I could ever hope to express it,
 In the words of Kharma:⁴ “It is, we believe,

1. Mr. Eliot is the British (American-born) poet which thousands of Londoners were sheltering T. S. Eliot (1888-1965; see pp. 1340-66). Reed’s during the firebombing of London (known as the title and subtitle evoke three of Eliot’s titles: Burnt Blitz) of World War II, when this poem was writ-Norton, “Mr. Eliot’s Sunday Morning Service,” and ten.

“The Boston Evening Transcript.” Whitlow: inflam-

3. Wind of winds (Italian).

matory sore on the finger.

4. A concept common to Hinduism, Buddhism,

2. Colloquial term for the London subway, in and Jainism, the doctrine of Karma asserts that

1 5 6 4 / H E N R Y R E E D

Idle to hope that the simple stirrup-pump⁵

Can extinguish hell.”

20 Oh, listeners,

And you especially who have switched off the wireless,⁶

And sit in Stoke or Basingstoke, listening appreciatively to the silence

(Which is also the silence of hell), pray not for yourselves but your souls.

And pray for me also under the draughty stair.

25 As we get older we do not get any younger.

And pray for Kharma under the holy mountain.

1 9 4 1 1 9 4 6

Lessons of the War

T O A L A N M I C H E L L

Vixi duellis nuper idoneus

*Et militavi non sine gloria*⁷

1. Naming of Parts

Today we have naming of parts. Yesterday,

We had daily cleaning. And tomorrow morning,

We shall have what to do after firing. But today,

Today we have naming of parts. Japonica⁸

5 Glistens like coral in all of the neighbouring gardens,

And today we have naming of parts.

This is the lower sling swivel. And this

Is the upper sling swivel, whose use you will see,

When you are given your slings. And this is the piling swivel,

io Which in your case you have not got. The branches
Hold in the gardens their silent, eloquent gestures,
Which in our case we have not got.

This is the safety-catch, which is always released
With an easy flick of the thumb. And please do not let me

15 See anyone using his finger. You can do it quite easy one's state in this life is a result of actions in past

7. The opening lines of a Latin poem by Horace incarnations, and that action in this life can deter-(3.26), but with Horace's word puellis (girls)

mine one's destiny in future incarnations. Reed changed to duellis (war, battles): "Lately I have deliberately misspells Karma and confuses it with lived in the midst of battles, creditably enough, / Buddha.

And have soldiered, not without glory."

5. A portable foot pump used to combat fires dur-

8. The flowering quince (Cydonia japonica), a ing the Blitz.

shrub with brilliant scarlet flowers.

6. I.e., radio.

LESSONS OF THE WAR / 1565

If you have any strength in your thumb. The blossoms
Are fragile and motionless, never letting anyone see
Any of them using their finger.

And this you can see is the bolt. The purpose of this 20 Is to open the breech, as you see. We can slide it Rapidly backwards and forwards: we call this Easing the spring.⁹ And rapidly backwards and forwards

The early bees are assaulting and fumbling the flowers:
They call it easing the Spring.
25 They call it easing the Spring: it is perfectly easy
If you have any strength in your thumb: like the bolt,
And the breech, and the cocking-piece, and the point of balance,
Which in our case we have not got; and the almond-blossom Silent in all of the gardens and the bees going backwards and forwards,
30 For today we have naming of parts.

1 9 4 2 1 9 4 6

2. Judging Distances

Not only how far away, but the way that you say it Is very important. Perhaps you may never get
The knack of judging a distance, but at least you know
How to report on a landscape: the central sector,
5 The right of arc and that, which we had last Tuesday,
And at least you know
That maps are of time,¹ not place, so far as the army
Happens to be concerned—the reason being,
Is one which need not delay us. Again, you know io There are three kinds of tree, three only, the fir and the poplar,
And those which have bushy tops to; and lastly
That things only seem to be things.
A barn is not called a barn, to put it more plainly,

Or a field in the distance, where sheep may be safely grazing.

15 You must never be over-sure. You must say, when reporting:

At five o'clock in the central sector is a dozen
Of what appear to be animals; whatever you do,
Don't call the bleeders sheep.

I am sure that's quite clear; and suppose, for the sake of example,

20 The one at the end, asleep, endeavours to tell us
What he sees over there to the west, and how far away,
After first having come to attention. There to the west,
On the fields of summer the sun and the shadows bestow
Vestments of purple and gold.

9. Moving the bolt of a rifle "rapidly backwards

1. I.e., they convey the locations of targets and forwards," thereby ejecting any bullets remain-through an imaginary clock with a topographical ing in the magazine and taking pressure off the feature at its center.

spring.

1572 / D Y L A N T H O M A S

25 The still white dwellings are like a mirage in the heat, And under the swaying elms a man and a woman Lie gently together. Which is, perhaps, only to say That there is a row of houses to the left of arc, And that under some poplars a pair of what appear to be humans 30 Appear to be loving.

Well that, for an answer, is what we might rightly call Moderately satisfactory only,

the reason being, I sth at two things have been omitted, and those are important.

The human beings, now: in what direction are they, 35 And how far away, would you say? And do not forget There may be dead ground 2 in between.

There may be dead ground in between; and I may not have got The knack of judging a distance; I will only venture A guess that perhaps between me and the apparent lovers 40 (Who, incidentally, appear by now to have finished) At seven o'clock from the house, is roughly a distance O of about one year and a half.

1943 1946

DYLAN THOMAS

1914-1953

The Force That Through the Green Fuse Drives the Flower

The force that through the green fuse drives the flower Drives my green age; that blasts the roots of trees Is my destroyer.

And I am dumb to tell the crooked rose

5 My youth is bent by the same wintry fever.

The force that drives the water through the rocks Drives my red blood; that dries the mouthing streams Turns mine to wax.

And I am dumb to mouth hunt to my veins

io How at the mountains spring the same mouths suck.

The hand that whirls the water in the pool

Stirs the quicksand; that ropes the blowing wind Hauls my shrouds aile.

And I am dumb to tell the hanging man

15 How of my clay is made the hangman's lime. 2

2. Military term for space that cannot be reached making the water curative.

by fire from a given weapon or a given point. 2. Quicklime poured into the graves of people 1. In John 5.1—4, an angel stirs the pool Bethesda, publically hanged, to hasten decomposition.

AFTER THE FUNERAL / 1567

The lips of time leech to the fountain head;
Love drips and gathers, but the fallen blood
Shall calm her sores.

And I am dumb to tell a weather's wind
20 How time has ticked a heaven round the stars.
And I am dumb to tell the lover's tomb
How at my sheet³ goes the same crooked worm.

1934

The Hand That Signed the Paper
The hand that signed the paper felled a city;
Five sovereign fingers taxed the breath,
Doubled the globe of dead and halved a country;
These five kings did a king to death.

5 The mighty hand leads to a sloping shoulder,
The finger joints are cramped with chalk;
A goose's quill has put an end to murder
That put an end to talk.

The hand that signed the treaty bred a fever,
io And famine grew, and locusts came;
Great is the hand that holds dominion over
Man by a scribbled name.

The five kings count the dead but do not soften
The crusted wound nor stroke the brow;
15 A hand rules pity as a hand rules heaven;
Hands have no tears to flow.

1 9 3 6

After the Funeral

*(In Memory of Ann Jones)*⁴

After the funeral, mule praises, brays,
Windshake of sailshaped ears, muffle-toed tap
Tap happily of one peg in the thick
Grave's foot, blinds down the lids, the teeth in black,
5 The spittled eyes, the salt ponds in the sleeves,
Morning smack of the spade that wakes up sleep,
Shakes a desolate boy who slits his throat
3. Corpse's winding-sheet.

rented farm, in the Welsh countryside, was Fern

4. Ann [Williams] Jones (d. 1933), Dylan Tho-Hill (seep. 1571).

mas's maternal aunt, married a tenant farmer; their

1 5 7 2 / D Y L A N T H O M A S

In the dark of the coffin and sheds dry leaves,
That breaks one bone to light with a judgment clout,
io After the feast of tear-stuffed time and thistles
In a room with a stuffed fox and a stale fern,
I stand, for this memorial's sake, alone
In the snivelling hours with dead, h u m p e d Ann
W h o s e hooded, fountain heart o n c e fell in puddles

15 Round the parched worlds of W a l e s and drowned each sun

(Though this for her is a monstrous image blindly

Magnified out of praise; her death was a still drop;

She would not have me sinking in the holy

Flood of her heart's fame; she would lie dumb and deep 20 And n e e d no druid⁵ of her broken body).

But I, Ann's bard on a raised hearth, call all

The seas to service that her wood-tongued virtue

Babble like a bellbuoy over the hymning heads,

Bow down the walls of the ferned and foxy woods

25 That her love sing and swing through a brown chapel,

Bless her bent spirit with four, crossing birds.

Her flesh was m e e k as milk, but this skyward statue

With the wild breast and blessed and giant skull

Is carved from her in a room with a wet w i n d o w

30 In a fiercely mourning h o u s e in a crooked year.

I know her scrubbed and sour humble hands

Lie with religion in their cramp, her threadbare

Whisper in a damp word, her wits drilled hollow,

Her fist of a face died c l e n c h e d on a round pain;

35 And sculptured Ann is seventy years of stone.

These cloud-sopped, marble hands, this m o n u m e n t a l

Argument of the h e w n voice, gesture and psalm,

Storm me forever over her grave until

The stuffed lung of the fox twitch and cry Love

40 And the strutting fern lay seeds on the black sill.

f 9 3 9

The Hunchback in the Park

The h u n c h b a c k in the park

A solitary mister

Propped between trees and water

From the opening of the garden lock

5 That lets the trees and water enter

Until the Sunday sombre bell at dark⁶

Eating bread from a newspaper

Drinking water from the chained cup

That the children filled with gravel

5. Priest, among ancient Celts of Gaul or Britain; 6. The bell that warns visitors that the park gates also, magician or soothsayer. are about to be closed for the night.

A R E F U S A L T O M O U R N T H E D E A T H , B Y F I
R E , O F A C H I L D / 1 5 6 9

10 In the fountain basin where I sailed my ship

Slept at night in a dog kennel

But nobody chained him up.

Like the park birds he c a m e early

Like the water he sat down

15 And Mister they called Hey mister

T h e truant boys from the town

Running w h e n he had heard them clearly

On out of sound

Past lake and rockery

20 Laughing when he shook his paper

H u n c h b a c k e d in mockery

Through the loud zoo of the willow groves

Dodging the park keeper

W i t h his stick that picked up leaves.
25 And the old dog sleeper
Alone between nurses and swans
While the boys a m o n g willows
Made the tigers jump out of their eyes
To roar on the rockery stones
30 And the groves were blue with sailors
Made all day until bell time
A w o m a n figure without fault
Straight as a young elm
Straight and tall from his crooked b o n e s 35 That she might stand in the night
After the locks and chains
All night in the u n m a d e park
After the railings and shrubberies
T h e birds the grass the trees the lake
40 And the wild boys innocent as strawberries
Had followed the h u n c h b a c k
To his kennel in the dark.

1 9 4 2

A Refusal to Mourn the Death, by Fire,⁷ of a Child in London

Never until the mankind making
Bird beast and flower
Fathering and all humbling darkness
Tells with silence the last light breaking 5 And the still hour
Is c o m e of the sea tumbling in harness

7. During the firebombing of London, known as the Blitz, in World War II.

1 5 7 0 / D Y L A N T H O M A S

And I must enter again the round

Zion⁸ of the water bead

And the synagogue of the ear of corn

io Shall I let pray the shadow of a soun d

Or sow my salt seed

In the least valley of sackcloth to mourn

The majesty and burning of the child's death.

I shall not murder

15 The mankind of her going with a grave truth

Nor blaspheme down the stations of the breath

With any further

Elegy of i n n o c e n c e and youth.

D e e p with the first dead lies London's daughter,

20 Robed in the long friends,

T h e grains beyond age, the dark veins of her mother,

Secret by the unmourning water

Of the riding Thames.⁹

After the first death, there is no other.

1 9 4 6

The Conversation of Prayer

T h e conversation of prayers about to be said

By the child going to bed and the man on the stairs

W h o climbs to his dying love in her high room,

The o n e not caring to w h o m in his sleep he will move

5 And the other full of tears that she will be dead,

Turns in the dark on the sound they know will arise
Into the answering skies from the green ground,
From the man on the stairs and the child by his bed.
The sound about to be said in the two prayers
io For the sleep in a safe land and the love who dies
Will be the same grief flying. Who shall they calm?
Shall the child sleep unharmed or the man be crying?
The conversation of prayers about to be said
Turns on the quick and the dead, and the man on the stairs
15 Tonight shall find no dying but alive and warm
In the fire of his care his love in the high room.
And the child not caring to whom he climbs his prayer
Shall drown in a grief as deep as his true grave,
And mark the dark eyed wave, through the eyes of sleep,
20 Dragging him up the stairs to one who lies dead.

1946

8. Heaven (from a Palestinian citadel, the nucleus 9. River that flows through London, of Jerusalem).

FERNHILL / 1571

Fern Hill¹

Now as I was young and easy under the apple boughs
About the lilting house and happy as the grass was
green,
The night above the dingle² starry,
Time let me hail and climb
5 Golden in the heydays of his eyes,
And honoured among wagons I was prince of the apple towns
And once below a time I lordly had the trees and leaves

Trail with daisies and barley

D o w n the rivers of the windfall light.

10 And as I was green and carefree, famous among the barns

About the happy yard and singing as the farm was home,

In the sun that is young o n c e only,

Time let me play and be

Golden in the mercy of his means,

15 And green and golden I was h u n t s m a n and herdsman, the calves

Sang to my horn, the foxes on the hills barked clear and cold,

And the sabbath rang slowly

In the pebbles of the holy streams.

All the sun long it was running, it was lovely, the hay

20 Fields high as the house, the tunes from the chimneys, it was air

And playing, lovely and watery

And fire green as grass.

And nightly under the simple stars

As I rode to sleep the owls were bearing the farm away,

25 All the m o o n long I heard, blessed a m o n g stables, the night-jars Flying with the ricks,³ and the horses

Flashing into the dark.

And then to awake, and the farm, like a wanderer white

With the dew, c o m e back, the cock on his shoulder: it was all

30 Shining, it was Adam and maiden,⁴

T h e sky gathered again

And the sun grew round that very day.

So it must have been after the birth of the simple light
In the first, spinning place, the spellbound horses walking warm

35 Out of the whinnying green stable

On to the fields of praise.

And honoured among foxes and pheasants by the gay
house

Under the new made clouds and happy as the heart was long,

In the sun born over and over,

40 I ran my heedless ways,

My wishes raced through the house high hay

And nothing I cared, at my sky blue trades, that time allows

In all his tuneful turning so few and such morning songs

1. Welsh farm, rented by Thomas's aunt and

3. Haystacks. Night-jars: nocturnal birds.

uncle, in which he spent summer holidays as a boy.

4. Adam and Eve (Genesis 1).

2. Small wooded valley.

1 5 7 2 / D Y L A N T H O M A S

Before the children green and golden

45 Follow him out of grace,

Nothing I cared, in the lamb white days, that time would take me

Up to the swallow thronged loft by the shadow of my hand,

In the moon that is always rising,

Nor that riding to sleep

50 I should hear him fly with the high fields

And wake to the farm forever fled from the childless land.

Oh as I was young and easy in the mercy of his means,
Time held me green and dying
T h o u g h I sang in my chains like the sea.

1 9 4 6

In My Craft or Sullen Art

In my craft or sullen art

Exercised in the still night

W h e n only the m o o n rages

And the lovers lie abed

5 W i t h all their griefs in their arms,

I labour by singing light

N o t for ambition or bread

Or the strut and trade of charms

On the ivory stages

io But for the c o m m o n wages

Of their most secret heart.

N o t for the proud man apart

From the raging m o o n I write

On these spindrift⁵ pages

15 Nor for the towering dead

With their nightingales and psalms

But for the lovers, their arms

Round the griefs of the ages,

W h o pay no praise or wages

20 Nor heed my craft or art.

1 9 4 6

Do Not Go Gentle into That Good Night⁶

Do not go gentle into that good night,

Old age should burn and rave at close of day;

Rage, rage against the dying of the light.

5. Driven by the wind, like sea spray.

6. This villanelle was written in May 1951, during the final, prolonged illness of Thomas's father.

A L L D A Y I T H A S R A I N E D / 1 5 7 3

T h o u g h wise men at their end know dark is right,

5 Because their words had forked no lightning they

Do not go gentle into that good night.

Good men, the last wave by, crying h o w bright

Their frail deeds might have danced in a green bay,

Rage, rage against the dying of the light.

io Wild men w h o caught and sang the sun in flight,

And learn, too late, they grieved it on its way,

Do not go gentle into that good night.

Grave men, near death, who see with blinding sight

Blind eyes could blaze like meteors and be gay,

15 Rage, rage against the dying of the light.

And you, my father, there on the sad height,

Curse, bless, me n o w with your fierce tears, I pray.

Do not go gentle into that good night.

Rage, rage against the dying of the light.

1 9 5 2

ALUN LEWIS

1915-1944

All Day It Has Rained

All day it has rained, and we on the edge of the moors

Have sprawled in our bell-tents,1 moody and dull as boors,

Groundsheets and blankets spread on the muddy ground

And from the first grey wakening we have found

5 No refuge from the skirmishing fine rain

And the wind that made the canvas heave and flap

And the taut wet guy-ropes ravel out and snap.

All day the rain has glided, wave and mist and dream,

Drenching the gorse and heather, a gossamer stream

10 Too light to stir the acorns that suddenly

Snatched from their cups by the wild south-westerly

Pattered against the tent and our upturned dreaming faces.

And we stretched out, unbuttoning our braces,

Smoking a Woodbine, 2 darning dirty socks,

15 Reading the Sunday papers—I saw a fox

And mentioned it in the note I scribbled home;—

And we talked of girls, and dropping bombs on Rome,

And thought of the quiet dead and the loud celebrities

Exhorting us to slaughter, and the herded refugees;

1. Conical tents with a central pole.

2. Brand of cheap cigarette.

1574 / A L U N L E W I S

20 —Yet thought softly, morosely of them, and as indifferently

As of ourselves or those whom we

For years have loved, and will again

Tomorrow maybe love; but now it is the rain

Possesses us entirely, the twilight and the rain.

25 And I can remember nothing dearer or more to my heart

Than the children I watched in the woods on Saturday Shaking down burning chestnuts for the schoolyard's merry play,

Or the shaggy patient dog who followed me

By Sheet and Steep and up the wooded scree³

30 To the Shoulder o' Mutton where Edward Thomas brooded long

On death and beauty—till a bullet stopped his song.⁴

1 9 4 0

1 9 4 1 , 1 9 4 2

Song

(On seeing dead bodies floating off the Cape⁵)

The first month of his absence

I was numb and sick

And where he'd left his promise

Life did not turn or kick.

5 The seed, the seed of love was sick.

The second month my eyes were sunk

In the darkness of despair,

And my bed was like a grave

And his ghost was lying there,

io And my heart was sick with care.

The third month of his going

I thought I heard him say

“Our course deflected slightly

On the thirty-second day—”

15 The tempest blew his words away.

And he was lost among the waves,

His ship rolled helpless in the sea,

The fourth month of his voyage

He shouted grievously

20 “Beloved, do not think of me.”

The flying fish like kingfishers

Skim the sea’s bewildered crests,

3. Mass of debris at the foot of a cliff. Sheet and Trumpet and Other Poems: “I have been garrisoned Steep: villages.

for six months in Edward Thomas country and

4. The English poet Edward Thomas (1878-1917; walked his walks. I have sheltered from the rain in see pp. 1253-56) was killed in World War I. In the the beautiful house he built but did not inhabit.”

issue of the magazine Horizon in which this poem Shoulder o’ Mutton: a hill in Hampshire.

first appeared, Lewis reviewed Thomas’s The

5. The Cape of Good Hope, South Africa.

GOODBYE / 1 5 7 5

T h e w h a l e s b l o w s t e a m i n g f o u n t a i n s ,

T h e s e a g u l l s h a v e n o n e s t s

2 5 W h e r e m y l o v e r s w a y s a n d r e s t s .

W e n e v e r t h o u g h t t o b u y a n d s e l l

T h i s l i f e t h a t b l o o m s o r w i t h e r s i n t h e l e a f ,
A n d I ’ l l n o t s t i r , s o h e s l e e p s w e l l ,

T h o u g h c e l l b y c e l l t h e c o r a l r e e f

3 0 B u i l d s a n e t e r n i t y o f g r i e f .

B u t o h ! t h e d r a g a n d d u l l n e s s o f m y S e l f ; T h e r e t u r n i n g s e a s o n s w i t h e r i n m y h e a d ;

A l l t h i s s l o w n e s s , a l l t h i s h a r d n e s s ,

The nearness that is waiting in my bed,
35 The gradual self-effacement of the dead.

1944

Goodbye

So we must say Goodbye, my darling,

And go, as lovers go, forever;

Tonight remains, to pack and fix on labels
And make an end of flying down together.

5 I put a final shilling in the gas, 6

And watch you slip your dress below your knees
And lies so still I hear your rustling comb
Modulate the autumn in the trees.

And all the countless things I shall remember
io Lay mummy-cloths 7 of silence round
my head; I fill the car a few with a drink of water;

You say "We paid a guinea 8 for this bed,"

And then, "We'll leave some gas, a little warmth
For the next resident, and these dry flowers,"

15 And turn your face away, afraid to speak
The big word, that Eternity is ours.

Your kisses close my eyes and yet you stare
As though God struck a child with nameless fears; Perhaps the water glitters and discloses 20 Time's chalice and its limpid useless tears.

Everything we renounce except ourselves
; Selfishness is the last to go;

6. Gas fire, the fuel supply of which is controlled mummy.

by a meter that must be fed with shilling coins. 8. Old British currency: one pound and one shil-7. Bandages wrapped around an Egyptian ling (105p.).

1 5 7 6 / M A R G A R E T W A L K E R

Our sighs are exhalations of the earth,
Our footprints leave a track across the snow.
25 We made the universe to be our h o m e ,
Our nostrils took the wind to be our breath,
Our hearts are massive towers of delight,
We stride across the seven seas of death.
Yet w h e n all's done you'll keep the emerald
30 I placed upon your finger in the street;
And I will keep the patches⁹ that you sewed
On my old battledress tonight, my sweet.

1 9 4 5

MARGARET WALKER

1915-1998

Since 1619¹

H o w many years since 1 6 1 9 have I been singing
Spirituals?

H o w long have I been praising God and shouting hallelujahs?

H o w long have I been hated and hating?

H o w long have I been living in hell for heaven?

5 W h e n will I see my brother's face wearing another color?

W h e n will I be ready to die in a honest fight?

W h e n will I be conscious of the struggle—now to do or die?

W h e n will these scales fall away from my eyes?²

W h a t will I say w h e n days of wrath³ descend:

io W h e n the money-gods take all my life away;
W h e n the death knell sounds
And p e a c e is a flag of far-flung blood and filth?
W h e n will I understand the cheated and the cheaters;
Their paltry pittances and cold c o n c e s s i o n s to my pride?

15 W h e n will I burst from my kennel an angry mongrel, Lean and hungry and tired of my dry bones and years?

1 9 4 2

9. Cloth badges of rank attached to a soldier's uniform.
9.18: "And immediately there fell from his eyes as form.

it had been scales: and he received sight forthwith,

1. The year that the first African slaves arrived in and arose, and was baptized."

Jamestown, Virginia, aboard a Dutch frigate.

3. According to the Bible (e.g., Zephaniah 1.1.15),

2. Cf. the account of Saul's conversion in Acts days of God's judgment.

W O M A N T O M A N / 1 5 7 7

Childhood

W h e n I was a child I knew red miners dressed raggedly and wearing carbide lamps.

I saw t h e m c o m e down red hills to their camps
dyed with red dust from old Ishkooda⁴ mines.

5 Night after night I met them on the roads,
or on the streets in town I caught their glance;
the swing of dinner buckets in their hands,

and grumbling undermining all their words.

I also lived in low cotton country

10 where moonlight hovered over ripe haystacks, or stumps of trees, and croppers' rotting shacks with famine, terror, flood, and plague near by;
where sentiment and hatred still held sway
and only bitter land was washed away.

1 9 4 2

J U D I T H W R I G H T

1915-2000

Woman to Man

The eyeless labourer in the night,
the selfless, shapeless seed I hold,
builds for its resurrection day—
silent and swift and deep from sight
5 foresees the unimagined light.

This is no child with a child's face;
this has no name to name it by:
yet you and I have known it well.

This is our hunter and our chase,
io the third w h o lay in our embrace.

This is the strength that your arm knows,
the arc of flesh that is my breast,
the precise crystals of our eyes.

This is the blood's wild tree that grows 15 the intricate and folded rose.

This is the maker and the made;
this is the question and reply;

4. South of Birmingham, Alabama, where Walker's family lived until she was five. The sestet of this sonnet shifts to her second childhood home, near New Orleans.

1 5 7 8 / J U D I T H W R I G H T

the blind head butting at the dark,

the blaze of light along the blade.

20 Oh hold me, for I am afraid.

1 9 4 9

Train Journey

Glassed with cold sleep and dazzled by the moon,

out of the c o n f u s e d hammering dark of the train

I looked and saw under the moon's cold sheet

your delicate dry breasts, country that built my heart;

5 and the small trees on their uncoloured slope

like poetry moved, articulate and sharp and purposeful under the great dry flight of air,

under the crosswise currents of wind and star.

C l e n c h down your strength, box-tree and ironbark.1

io Break with your violent root the virgin rock.

Draw from the flying dark its breath of dew

till the unliving c o m e to life in you.

Be over the blind rock a skin of sense,

under the barren height a slender dance ...

15 I woke and saw the dark small trees that burn suddenly into flowers more lovely than the white moon.

1 9 5 3

Request to a Year

If the year is meditating a suitable gift,

I should like it to be the attitude of my great-great-grandmother, legendary devotee of the arts,

5 who, having had eight children and little opportunity for painting pictures, sat o n e day on a high rock
beside a river in Switzerland and from a difficult distance viewed io her s e c o n d son, balanced on a small ice-floe, drift down the current towards a waterfall that struck rock-bottom eighty feet below,

1. Australian eucalyptus tree.

E V E T O H E R D A U G H T E R S / 1 5 7 9

while her second daughter, impeded,
no doubt, by the petticoats of the day,
15 stretched out a last-hope alpenstock²
(which luckily later caught him on his way).
Nothing, it was evident, could be done;
and with the artist's isolating eye
my great-great-grandmother hastily sketched the scene.
20 The sketch survives to prove the story by.
Year, if you have no Mother's day present planned;
reach back and bring me the firmness of her hand.

1 9 5 3

Eve³ to Her Daughters

It was not I w h o began it.

Turned out into draughty caves,
hungry so often, having to work for our bread,
hearing the children whining,

5 I was nevertheless not unhappy.
W h e r e A d a m went I was fairly contented to go.
I adapted myself to the punishment: it was my life.
But Adam, you know ... !
He kept on brooding over the insult,
io over the trick The y had played on us, over the scolding.
He had discovered a flaw in himself and he had to make up for it.
Outside Eden the earth was imperfect,
the seasons changed, the game was fleet-footed, 15 he had to work for our living, and he didn't like it.
He even complained of my cooking
(it was hard to compete with Heaven).
So he set to work.
T h e earth must be made a n e w Eden
20 with central heating, domesticated animals,
m e c h a n i c a l harvesters, combustion engines,
escalators, refrigerators,
and modern m e a n s of communication and multiplied opportunities for safe investment 25 and higher education for Abel and Cain and the rest of the family.
You can see h o w his pride had b e e n hurt.

2. Staff used in mountain climbing.

3. According to Genesis, the first woman, wife of Adam.

1 5 8 0 / D A V I D G A S C O Y N E

In the process he had to unravel everything, because he believed that mechanism

30 was the whole secret—he was always mechanical-minded.
He got to the very inside of the whole machine
exclaiming as he went, So this is how it works!
And now that I know how it works, why, I must have invented
it.
As for God and the Other, they cannot be demonstrated, 35 and what cannot be demonstrated doesn't exist.
You see, he had always been jealous.
Yes, he got to the centre
where nothing at all can be demonstrated.
40 And clearly he doesn't exist; but he refuses to accept the conclusion.
You see, he was always an egotist.
It was warmer than this in the cave;
there was none of this fall-out.
45 I would suggest, for the sake of the children,
that it's time you took over.
But you are my daughters, you inherit my own faults of character;
you are submissive, following Adam even beyond existence.
50 Faults of character have their own logic
and it always works out.
I observed this with Abel and Cain.
Perhaps the whole elaborate fable right from the beginning 55 is meant to demonstrate this; perhaps it's the whole secret.
Perhaps nothing exists but our faults?

At least they can be demonstrated.

But it's useless to make such a suggestion to Adam.

60 He has turned himself into God,

who is faultless, and doesn't exist.

1 9 6 6

DAVID GASCOYNE

1916-2001

Yves Tanguy¹

The worlds are breaking in my head

Blown by the brainless wind

1. American (French-born) Surrealist painter (1900—1955).

E C C E H O M O / 1 5 8 1

That c o m e s from afar

Swollen with dusk and dust

5 And hysterical rain

The fading cries of the light

Awaken the endless desert

Engrossed in its tropical slumber

Enclosed by the dead grey oceans

10 Enclasped by the arms of the night

The worlds are breaking in my head

Their fragments are crumbs of despair

The food of the solitary damned

W h o await the gross tumult of turbulent

15 Days bringing change without end.

The worlds are breaking in my head

The fuming future sleeps no more

For their seeds are beginning to grow
To creep and to cry midst the 20 Rocks of the deserts to c o m e
Planetary seed
S o w n by the grotesque wind
W h o s e head is so swollen with rumours
W h o s e hands are so urgent with tumours
25 W h o s e feet are so deep in the sand.

1 9 3 6

Ecce Homo²

W h o s e is this horrifying face,
This putrid flesh, discoloured, flayed,
Fed on by flies, scorched by the sun?
W h o s e are these hollow red-filmed eyes
5 And thorn-spiked head and spear-stuck side?
Behold the Man: He is Man's Son.
Forget the legend, tear the decent veil
That cowardice or interest devised
To make their mortal e n e m y a friend,
io To hide the bitter truth all His w o u n d s tell,
Lest the great scandal be no more disguised:
He is in agony till the world's end,

2. Behold the man (Latin); Pilate's words when presenting Christ, beaten and crowned with thorns before his Crucifixion, to the people (John 19.5).

1 5 8 2 / D A V I D G A S C O Y N E

And we must never sleep during that time!

He is suspended on the cross-tree now

15 And we are onlookers at the crime,

Callous contemporaries of the slow
Torture of God. Here is the hill
Made ghastly by His spattered blood
Whereon He hangs and suffers still:
20 See, the centurions wear riding-boots,
Black shirts and badges and peaked caps,
Greet one another with raised-arm salutes;
They have cold eyes, unsmiling lips;
Yet these His brothers know not what they do.³
25 And on his either side hang dead
A labourer and a factory hand,
Or one is maybe a lynched Jew
And one a Negro or a Red,
Coolie or Ethiopian, Irishman,
30 Spaniard or German democrat.
Behind His lolling head the sky
Glares like a fiery cataract
Red with the murders of two thousand years Committed in His name and by 35 Crusaders, Christian warriors
Defending faith and property.
Amid the plain beneath His transfixed hands,
Exuding darkness as indelible
As guilty stains, fanned by funereal
40 And lurid airs, besieged by drifting sands
And clefted⁰ landslides our about-to-be cloven, split
Bombed and abandoned cities stand.
He who wept for Jerusalem

Now sees His prophecy extend 45 Across the greatest cities of the world,
A guilty panic reason cannot stem
Rising to raze^o them all as He foretold; knock down
And He must watch this drama to the end.

Though often named, He is unknown
50 To the dark kingdoms at His feet
Where everything disparages His words,
And each man bears the common guilt alone
And goes blindfolded to his fate,
And fear and greed are sovereign lords.

3. “Then said Jesus, Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do” (Luke 23.34).

S T O R I E S O F S N O W / 1 5 8 3

55 T h e turning point of history
Must c o m e . Yet the complacent and the proud
And w h o exploit and kill, may be d e n i e d —
Christ of Revolution and of Poetry—

T h e resurrection and the life⁴

60 W r o u g h t by your spirit’s blood.

Involved in their o w n sophistry

T h e black priest and the upright man

Faced by subversive truth shall be struck dumb,

Christ of Revolution and of Poetry,

65 W h i l e the rejected and c o n d e m n e d b e c o m e

Agents of the divine.

N o t from a monstrance⁵ silver-wrought

But from the tree of h u m a n pain

Redeem our sterile misery,
70 Christ of Revolution and of Poetry,
That man's long journey through the night
May not have been in vain.

1943

P. K. PAGE

b. 1916

Stories of Snow

T h o s e in the vegetable rain retain an area behind their sprouting eyes held soft and rounded with the dream of snow precious and reminiscent as those globes—5 souvenir of some never-nether land—
w h i c h hold their snow-storms circular, complete, high in a tall and teakwood cabinet.

In countries where the leaves are large as hands where flowers protrude their fleshy chins
io and call their colors,
an imaginary snow-storm sometimes falls
a m o n g the lilies.

And in the early morning one will waken
to think the glowing linen of his pillow 15 a northern drift, will find himself mistaken and lie back weeping.

4. "Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and (sanctified bread or wafer) is carried in the Roman the life" (John 11.25).

Catholic service known as the Mass.

5. Open or transparent box in which the Host
1 5 8 4 / P . K . P A G E

And there the story shifts from head to head, of how in Holland, from their feather beds
hunters arise and part the flakes and go 20 forth to the frozen lakes in search of swans—
the snow-light falling white along their guns, their breath in plumes.

While tethered in the wind like sleeping gulls ice-boats wait the raising of their wings 25 to skim the electric ice at such a speed
they leap jet strips of naked water, and how these flying, sailing hunters feel air in their mouths as terrible as ether.

And on the story runs that even drinks
30 in that white landscape dare to be no color;
how flaked and water clear, the liquor slips
silver against the hunters' moving hips.

And of the swan in death these dreamers tell
of its last flight and how it falls, a plummet, 35 pierced by the freezing bullet and how three feathers, loosened by the shot, descend like snow upon it.

While hunters plunge their fingers in its down deep as a drift, and dive their hands 40 up to the neck of the wrist in that warm metamorphosis of snow
as gentle as the sort that woodsmen know who, lost in the white circle, fall at last and dream their way to death.

45 And stories of this kind are often told in countries where great flowers bar the roads with reds and blues which seal the route to snow—as if, in telling, raconteurs unlock the color with its complement and go 50 through to the area behind the eyes where silent, unrefractive whiteness lies.

1 9 4 6

Deaf-Mute in the Pear Tree

His clumsy body is a golden fruit
pendulous in the pear tree

Blunt fingers among the multitudinous buds

Adriatic¹ blue the sky above and through

5 the forking twigs

1. Adriatic Sea, part of the Mediterranean Sea.

D E A F - M U T E I N T H E P E A R T R E E / 1 5 8 5

Sun ruddying tree's trunk, his trunk

his massive head thick-nobbed with burnished curls

tight-clenched in bud

(Painting by Generalic.² Primitive.)

10 I watch him prune with silent secateurs⁰ pruning shears

Boots in the crotch of branches shift their weight

heavily as oxen in a stall

Hear small inarticulate mewes from his locked mouth

a kitten in a box

15 Pear clippings fall

soundlessly on the ground
Spring finches sing
soundlessly in the leaves
A stone. A stone in ears and on his tongue 20 Through palm and fingertip he knows the tree's quick springtime pulse Smells in its sap the sweet incipient pears Pale sunlight's choppy water glistens on his mutely snipping blades 25 and flags and scraps of blue above him make regatta of the day boat race
But when he sees his wife's foreshortened shape sudden and silent in the grass below uptilt its face to him 30 then air is kisses, kisses stone dissolves
his locked throat finds a little door and through it feathered joy flies screaming like a jay

1 9 8 5

2. Ivan Generalic (1914—1992), Croatian painter in a “naive,” or “primitive,” style.

1 5 8 6

G W E N D O L Y N B R O O K S

1917-2000

kitchenette building

We are things of dry hours and the involuntary plan,
Grayed in, and gray. “Dream” makes a giddy sound, not strong

Like “rent,” “feeding a wife,” “satisfying a man.”
But could a dream send up through onion fumes
5 Its white and violet, fight with fried potatoes
And yesterday’s garbage ripening in the hall,
Flutter, or sing an aria down these rooms
Even if we were willing to let it in,
Had time to warm it, keep it very clean,
io Anticipate a message, let it begin?
We wonder. But not well! not for a minute!
Since Number Five is out of the bathroom now,
We think of lukewarm water, hope to get in it.

1 9 4 5

my dreams, my works, must wait till after hell
I hold my honey and I store my bread
In little jars and cabinets of my will.
I label clearly, and each latch and lid
I bid, Be firm till I return from hell.
5 I am very hungry. I am incomplete.
And none can tell when I may dine again.
No man can give me any word but Wait,
The puny light. I keep eyes pointed in;
Hoping that, when the devil days of my hurt
io Drag out to their last dregs and I resume
On such legs as are left me, in such heart
As I can manage, remember to go home,
My taste will not have turned insensitive
To honey and bread old purity could love.

1 9 4 5

the birth in a narrow room

Weeps out of western country something new.

Blurred and stupendous. Wanted and unplanned.

T H E B E A N E A T E R S / 1 5 8 7

Winks. Twines, and weakly winks

Upon the milk-glass fruit bowl, iron pot,

5 The bashful china child tipping forever

Yellow apron and spilling pretty cherries.

Now, weeks and years will go before she thinks

“How pinchy is my room! how can I breathe!

I am not anything and I have got

10 Not anything, or anything to do!”—

But prances nevertheless with gods and fairies

Blithely about the pump and then beneath

The elms and grapevines, then in darling endeavor

By privy foyer, where the screenings stand

15 And where the bugs buzz by in private cars

Across old peach cans and old jelly jars.

1 9 4 9

the rites for Cousin Vit

Carried her unprotesting out the door.

Kicked back the casket-stand. But it can't hold her,

That stuff and satin aiming to enfold her,

The lid's contrition nor the bolts before.

5 Oh oh. Too much. Too much. Even now, surmise,

She rises in the sunshine. There she goes,

Back to the bars she knew and the repose

In love-rooms and the things in people's eyes.

Too vital and too squeaking. Must emerge,
io Even now she does the snake-hips with a hiss,
Slops the bad wine across her shantung,1 talks
Of pregnancy, guitars and bridgework, walks
In parks or alleys, comes haply on the verge Of happiness, haply hysterics. Is.

1 9 4 9

The Bean Eaters

They eat beans mostly, this old yellow pair.

Dinner is a casual affair.

Plain chipware on a plain and creaking wood,

Tin flatware.

5 Two who are Mostly Good.

Two who have lived their day,

1. Silk of an uneven texture.

1 5 8 8 / G W E N D O L Y N B R O O K S

But keep on putting on their clothes

And putting things away.

And remembering ...

10 Remembering, with twinklings and twinges,

As they lean over the beans in their rented back room that is full of beads and receipts and dolls and clothes, tobacco crumbs, vases

and fringes.

1 9 6 0

We Real Cool

T H E P O O L P L A Y E R S . S E V E N A T T H E G O L D E N S H O V E L .

We real cool. We Left school. We Lurk late. We Strike straight. We Sing sin. We Thin gin. We Jazz June. We Die soon.

1 9 6 0

Medgar Evers²

For Charles Evers

The man whose height his fear improved he arranged to fear no further. The raw intoxicated time was time for better birth or a final death.

5 Old styles, old tempos, all the engagement of the day—the sedate, the regulated fray—
the antique light, the Moral rose, old gusts, tight whistlings from the past, the mothballs
in the Love at last our man forswore.

io Medgar Evers annoyed confetti and assorted brands of businessmen's eyes.

2. Prominent black civil rights activist (1925—ored People) in Mississippi, he was murdered by a 1963). The first field secretary of the NAACP white supremacist.

(National Association for the Advancement of Col-

BOY BREAKING GLASS / 1 5 8 9

The shows came down: to maxims and surprise.
And palsy.

Roaring no rapt arise-ye to the dead, he 15 leaned across tomorrow. People said that he was holding clean globes in his hands.

1 9 6 8

Boy Breaking Glass

To Marc Crawford From Whom the Commission

W h o s e broken window is a cry of art

(success, that winks aware as elegance, as a treasonable faith)

is raw: is sonic: is old-eyed premiere.

5 Our beautiful flaw and terrible ornament.

Our barbarous and metal little man.

“I shall create! If not a note, a hole.

If not an overture, a desecration.”

Full of pepper and light

io and Salt and night and cargoes.

“Don’t go down the plank

if you see there’s no extension.

Each to his grief, each to his loneliness and fidgety revenge.

15 Nobody knew where I was and now I am no longer there.”

The only sanity is a cup of tea.

The music is in minors.

Each one other

is having different weather.

20 “It was you, it was you who threw away my name!

And this is everything I have for me.”

W h o has not Congress, lobster, love, luau, the Regency Room, the Statue of Liberty, runs. A sloppy amalgamation.

25 A mistake.

A cliff.

A hymn, a snare, and an exceeding sun.

1 9 6 8

1 1 5 9 0

C H A R L E S CAUSLEY

1917-2003

Armistice Day¹

I stood with three comrades in Parliament Square

November her freights of grey fire unloading,

No sound from the city upon the pale air,

Above us the sea-bell eleven exploding.

5 Down by the bands and the burning memorial

Beats all the brass in a royal array,

But at our end we are not so sartorial:

Out of (as usual) the rig of the day.

Starry is wearing a split pusser's flannel²

io Rubbed, as he is, by the regular tide;

Oxo the ducks³ that he ditched in the Channel

In June, 1940 (when he was inside).

Kitty recalls his abandon-ship station,

Running below at the Old Man's salute

15 And (with a deck-watch) going down for duration

Wearing his oppo's pneumonia-suit.⁴

Comrades, for you the black captain of carracks

Writes in Whitehall⁵ his appalling decisions,

But as was often the case in the Barracks
20 Several ratings are not at Divisions.⁶
Into my eyes the stiff sea-horses stare,
Over my head sweeps the sun like a swan.
As I stand alone in Parliament Square
A cold bugle calls, and the city moves on.

1957

At the British War Cemetery, Bayeux⁷

I walked where in their talking graves

And shirts of earth five thousand lay,

1. November 11, when, at the eleventh hour (of Oppo's: friend, comrade (from opposite number).

the eleventh day of the eleventh month), church

5. London street on which navy headquarters is services throughout Britain commemorate the located. Carracks: large merchant ships equipped dead of the two world wars. A "Remembrance Day" for warfare.

service held at London's Parliament Square

6. I.e., noncommissioned sailors have skipped the includes two minutes of silence.

parade (religious service) of the ship's company.

2. A torn naval-issue shirt.

7. Town in northern France where many British

3. Suit made of white duck (a canvaslike mate-soldiers killed in Normandy and Flanders during rial).

World War II are buried.

4. Canvas suit worn while painting the ship.

E D E N R O C K / 1 5 9 1

W h e n history with ten feasts of fire
Had eaten the red air away.

5 “I am Christ’s boy,” I cried. “I bear
In iron hands the bread, the fishes.⁸

I hang with honey and with rose
This tidy wreck of all your wishes.

“On your geometry of sleep

10 The chestnut and the fir-tree fly,

And lavender and marguerite

Forge with their flowers an English sky.

“Turn now towards the belling town

Your jigsaws of impossible bone,

15 And rising read your rank of snow

Accurate as death upon the stone.”

About your easy heads my prayers

I said with syllables of clay.

“What gift,” I asked, “shall I bring now

20 Before I weep and walk away?”

Take, they replied, the oak and laurel.

Take our fortune of tears and live

Like a spendthrift lover. All we ask

Is the one gift you cannot give.

1 9 5 7

Eden Rock

They are waiting for me somewhere beyond Eden Rock:

My father, twenty-five, in the same suit

Of Genuine Irish Tweed, his terrier Jack
Still two years old and trembling at his feet.
5 My mother, twenty-three, in a sprigged⁰ dress floral
Drawn at the waist, ribbon in her straw hat,
Has spread the stiff white cloth over the grass.
Her hair, the colour of wheat, takes on the light.
She pours tea from a Thermos, the milk straight io From an old H.P. sauce⁹ bottle, a screw
Of paper for a cork; slowly sets out
The same three plates, the tin cups painted blue.
8. Allusion to Christ's feeding of the five thousand 9. A brand of steak sauce.

(John 6, Matthew 14).

1 5 9 2 / R O B E R T L O W E L L

The sky whitens as if lit by three suns.
My mother shades her eyes and looks my way
15 Over the drifted stream. My father spins
A stone along the water. Leisurely,
They beckon to me from the other bank.
I hear them call, "See where the stream-path is!
Crossing is not as hard as you might think."
20 I had not thought that it would be like this.

1 9 8 8

R O B E R T L O W E L L

1917-1977

The Quaker Graveyard in Nantucket

(F O R W A R R E N W I N S L O W , 1 D E A D A T S E A
)

Let man have dominion over the fishes of the sea and the fowls of the air and the beasts and the whole earth, and every creeping creature that moveth upon the earth. 2

1

A brackish reach of shoal off Madaket³
The sea was still breaking violently and night
Had steamed into our North Atlantic Fleet,
When the drowned sailor clutched the drag-net. Light
5 Flashed from his matted head and marble feet,
He grappled at the net
With the coiled, hurdling muscles of his thighs:
The corpse was bloodless, a botch of reds and whites,
Its open, staring eyes
10 Were lusterless dead-lights^o porthole covers
Or cabin-windows on a stranded hulk
Heavy with sand.⁴ We weight the body, close
Its eyes and heave it seaward whence it came,
Where the heel-headed dogfish barks its nose
15 On Ahab's⁵ void and forehead; and the name Is blocked in yellow chalk.

Sailors, who pitch this portent at the sea
Where dreadnaughts^o shall confess battleships

1. Lowell's cousin, who died when his naval vessel Thoreau (1817-1862; see pp. 1045-46).

was sunk during World War II.

5. Captain Ahab, protagonist of the novel Moby-

2. Cf. Genesis 1.26.

Dick, by the American writer Herman Melville

3. Small settlement on Nantucket Island, Massachusetts (1819-1891; see pp. 1054-57), and a recurring presence in this sequence of poems, sailed from whaling industry.

Nantucket on the Pequod in obsessive pursuit of

4. Lines 1 — 12 are based on the opening chapter of Cape Cod, by the American writer Henry David of Cape Cod, by the American writer Henry David

THE QUAKER GRAVEYARD IN NANTUCKET / 1593

Its hell-bent deity,

20 When you are powerless

To sand-bag this Atlantic bulwark, faced

By the earth-shaker, green, unwearied, chaste

In his steel scales: ask for no Orphean lute

To pluck life back.⁶ The guns of the steeled fleet

25 Recoil and then repeat

The hoarse salute.

2

Whenever winds are moving and their breath

Heaves at the roped-in bulwarks of this pier,

The terns and sea-gulls tremble at your death

30 In these home waters. Sailor, can you hear

The Pequod's sea wings, beating landward, fall

Headlong and break on our Atlantic wall

Off 'Sconset, where the yawing S-boats⁷ splash

The bellbuoy, with ballooning spinnakers,⁰ sails

35 As the entangled, screeching mainsheet clears
The blocks: off Madaket, where lubbers⁰ lash landlubbers
The heavy surf and throw their long lead squids
For blue-fish? Sea-gulls blink their heavy lids Seaward. The winds' wings beat upon the stones, 40 Cousin, and scream for you and the claws rush
At the sea's throat and wring it in the slush
Of this old Quaker graveyard where the bones
Cry out in the long night for the hurt beast
Bobbing by Ahab's whaleboats in the East.

3

45 All you recovered from Poseidon died
With you, my cousin, and the harrowed brine
Is fruitless on the blue beard of the god,
Stretching beyond us to the castles in Spain,
Nantucket's westward haven. To Cape Cod
50 Guns, cradled on the tide,
Blast the eelgrass about a waterclock
Of bilge and backwash, roil the salt and sand
Lashing earth's scaffold, rock
Our warships in the hand
55 Of the great God, where time's contrition blues
Whatever it was these Quaker sailors lost
In the mad scramble of their lives. They died
When time was open-eyed,
Wooden and childish; only bones abide 60 There, in the nowhere, where their boats were tossed
6. In Greek mythology, the musician Orpheus

Greek god of the sea.

used song to win his wife, Eurydice, back from the

7. Racing sailboats. Sconset: Siasconset, a town underworld (though he lost her again before he on Nantucket. Yawing: moving from side to side in reached the surface). Earth-shaker: Poseidon, a heavy sea.

1 5 9 4 / R O B E R T L O W E L L

Sky-high, where mariners had fabled news
Of IS,⁸ the whited monster. What it cost Them is their secret. In the sperm-whale's slick
I see the Quakers drown and hear their cry:
65 "If God himself had not been on our side,
If God himself had not been on our side,
W h e n the Atlantic rose against us, why,
T h e n it had swallowed us up quick."

4

This is the end of the whaleroad⁹ and the whale
70 W h o spewed Nantucket bones on the thrashed swell
And stirred the troubled waters to whirlpools
To send the Pequod packing off to hell:
This is the end of them, three-quarters fools,
Snatching at straws to sail
75 Seaward and seaward on the turntail whale,
Spouting out blood and water as it rolls,
Sick as a dog to these Atlantic shoals:
Clamavimus, O depths.¹ Let the sea-gulls wail
For water, for the deep where the high tide

so Mutter to its hurt self, mutters and ebbs.

Waves wallow in their wash, go out and out,

Leave only the death-rattle of the crabs,

The beach increasing, its enormous snout

Sucking the ocean's side.

85 This is the end of running on the waves;

We are poured out like water. W h o will dance

The mast-lashed master of Leviathans²

Up from this field of Quakers in their unstoned graves?

5

W h e n the whale's viscera go and the roll

90 Of its corruption overruns this world

Beyond tree-swept Nantucket and Wood's Hole³

And Martha's Vineyard, Sailor, will your sword

Whistle and fall and sink into the fat?

In the great ash-pit of Jehoshaphat⁴

95 The bones cry for the blood of the white whale,

The fat flukes arch and whack about its ears,

The death-lance churns into the sanctuary, tears

The gun-blue swingle,⁵ heaving like a flail,

And hacks the coiling life out: it works and drags

8. Cf. God's naming of himself to Moses as "I AM"

of Martha's Vineyard, which lies to the west of (Exodus 3.14).

Nantucket.

9. An Anglo-Saxon epithet for the sea.

4. "The valley of judgment. The world, according

1. Adaptation of the Vulgate opening of Psalm to some prophets, and scientists, will end in fire”

130: “Out of the depths have I cried unto thee, O [Lowell’s note to the American scholars Kimon
Lord” (here, “we have cried”).

Friar and John Malcolm Brinnin]. Ahab, king of

2. In various biblical accounts, Leviathan is a sea Israel, persuaded Jehoshaphat, king of Judah, to go monster defeated by God.

to war (Joel 3.12).

3. On the coast of Massachusetts, near the island

5. Rod for beating flax.

THE QUAKER GRAVEYARD IN NANTUCKET / 1595

100 And rips the sperm-whale’s midriff into rags,

Gobbets of blubber spill to wind and weather,

Sailor, and gulls go round the stoven timbers

W h e r e the morning stars sing out together

And thunder shakes the white surf and dismembers

105 The red flag hammered in the mast-head.⁶ Hide,

Our steel, Jonas Messias,⁷ in Thy side.

6. Our Lady of Walsingham⁸

There once the penitents took off their shoes

And then walked barefoot the remaining mile;

And the small trees, a stream and hedgerows file

110 Slowly along the munching English lane,

Like cows to the old shrine, until you lose

Track of your dragging pain.

The stream flows down under the druid tree,⁹

Shiloh's¹ whirlpools gurgle and make glad us The castle of God. Sailor, you were glad
And whistled Sion by that stream. But see:
Our Lady, too small for her canopy,
Sits near the altar. There's no comeliness
At all or charm in that expressionless
120 Face with its heavy eyelids. As before,
This face, for centuries a memory,
*Non est species, neque decor,*²
Expressionless, expresses God: it goes Past castled Sion. She knows what God knows, 125 Not Calvary's Cross nor crib at Bethlehem
Now, and the world shall come to Walsingham.

7

The empty winds are creaking and the oak Splatters and splatters on the cenotaph,³
The boughs are trembling and a gaff^o spar
130 Bobs on the untimely stroke
Of the greased wash exploding on a shoal-bell^P bell buoy
In the old mouth of the Atlantic. It's well;
Atlantic, you are fouled with the blue sailors,
Sea-monsters, upward angel, downward fish:⁴
6. As was the flag in the concluding chapter of Gaul and Britain who served as priests, teachers, Moby-Dick.

and magicians; their beliefs and practices are asso-
7. The prophet Jonah (also called Jonas), who ciated with trees.

emerged alive from the whale, is often linked with
1. According to Isaiah 8.6, the stream that flows the Messiah as a figure of salvation. Here he is past God's Temple on Mt. Sion. In Isaiah 51.11, pierced by a harpoon as Jesus was pierced by a
the redeemed come "singing into Zion," the heav-Roman soldier's spear (cf. Matthew 12.39-41).
only city.

8. Walsingham is a small town in Norfolk,
2. There is no beauty or charm (Latin); quoted England; a shrine to the Virgin Mary, built in the from Watkin.

eleventh century, was an object of pilgrimage until
3. An empty tomb or monument erected to the
it was destroyed during the Reformation. Lowell dead but not containing their remains.

adapted this section from the description in E. I.

4. Cf. Milton, Paradise Lost 1.462-63: "Dagon his Watkin's Catholic Art and Culture (1942).

name, sea monster, upward man / And downward

9. The Druids were an order of ancient Celts of fish."

1 5 9 6 / R O B E R T L O W E L L

135 Unmarried and corroding, spare of flesh
Mart0 once of supercilious, wing'd clippers, market
Atlantic, where your bell-trap guts its spoil
You could cut the brackish winds with a knife
Here in Nantucket, and cast up the time

140 When the Lord God formed man from the sea's slime
And breathed into his face the breath of life,
And blue-lung'd combers lumbered to the kill.
The Lord survives the rainbow of His will.⁵

1 9 4 6

Mr. Edwards⁶ and the Spider

I saw the spiders marching through the air,
Swimming from tree to tree that mildewed day
In latter August when the hay Came creaking to the barn. But where 5 The wind is westerly,

Where gnarled November makes the spiders fly
Into the apparitions of the sky,
They purpose nothing but their ease and die
Urgently beating east to sunrise and the sea;
io What are we in the hands of the great God?

It was in vain you set up thorn and briar
In battle array against the fire
And treason crackling in your blood;

For the wild thorns grow tame
15 And will do nothing to oppose the flame;
Your lacerations tell the losing game
You play against a sickness past your cure.

How will the hands be strong? How will the heart endure?⁷
A very little thing, a little worm,

20 Or hourglass-blazoned spider,⁸ it is said,
Can kill a tiger. Will the dead
Hold up his mirror and affirm

To the four winds the smell

And flash of his authority? It's well

25 If God who holds you to the pit of hell,

5. The rainbow symbolizes God's covenant with over the pit of Hell, much as one holds a spider or Noah never again to destroy the earth by flood (see some loathsome insect, over the fire, abhors you, Genesis 9.11-17).

and is dreadfully provoked; his wrath towards you

6. Jonathan Edwards (1703-1758), Puritan the-burns like fire.”

ologian and preacher whose works are alluded to

7. Cf. Ezekiel 22.14 (the point of departure of throughout. The first stanza draws upon a paper, “Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God”): “Can “On Insects,” probably written ca. 1719—20, in thine heart endure, or can thine hands be strong, which Edwards records his observations of the in the days that I shall be strong, in the days that behavior of spiders. The poem is also heavily I shall deal with thee?”

indebted to Edwards's most famous sermon, “Sin-

8. The black widow spider, common in North ners in the Hands of an Angry God,” which com-America, is marked with a red hourglass pattern on pares humans to spiders: “The God that holds you its abdomen.

MY LAST AFTERNOON WITH UNCLE DE
VEREUX WINSLOW / 1597

Much as one holds a spider, will destroy,
Baffle and dissipate your soul. As a small boy
On Windsor Marsh,⁹ I saw the spider die
When thrown into the bowels of fierce fire:
30 There's no long struggle, no desire
To get up on its feet and fly—
It stretches out its feet
And dies. This is the sinner's last retreat;
Yes, and no strength exerted on the heat
35 Then sinews the abolished will, when sick
And full of burning, it will whistle on a brick.
But who can plumb the sinking of that soul?
Josiah Hawley,¹ picture yourself cast
Into a brick-kiln where the blast
40 Fans your quick vitals to a coal—
If measured by a glass,
How long would it seem burning! Let there pass
A minute, ten, ten trillion; but the blaze
Is infinite, eternal: this is death,
45 To die and know it. This is the Black Widow, death.

1946

My Last Afternoon with Uncle Devereux Winslow

1922: THE STONE PORCH OF MY GRANDF ATHER'S SUMMER HOUSE

I

“I won't go with you. I want to stay with Grandpa!”

That's how I threw cold water on my Mother and Father's watery martini pipe dreams at Sunday dinner.

 5 ... Fontainebleau, Mattapoisett, Puget Sound. ... 2
 Nowhere was anywhere after a summer
 at my Grandfather's farm.
 Diamond-pointed, athirst and Norman,³ its alley of poplars
 io paraded from Grandmother's rose garden to a scary stand of virgin pine, scrub, and paths forever pioneering.
 One afternoon in 1922,
 I sat on the stone porch, looking through 15 screens as black-grained as drifting coal.
 9. Near East Windsor, Connecticut, Edwards's setts, and Washington State, respectively).
 childhood home.
 3. A version of Romanesque architecture devel-
 1. Edwards's uncle, Joseph Hawley, who killed oped in the French province of Normandy in the himself in 1735.
 tenth century.
 2. Desirable places to visit (in France, Massachu-
1598 / ROBERT LOWELL
Tockytock, tockytock
 clumped our Alpine, Edwardian cuckoo clock, slung with strangled, wooden game.
 Our farmer was cementing a root-house⁴ under the hill.
 20 One of my hands was cool on a pile of black earth, the other warm on a pile of lime. All about me were the works of my Grandfather's hands:

snapshots of his Liberty Bell silver mine;
25 his high school at Stuttgart am Neckar; 5
stogie-brown beams; fools'-gold nuggets;
octagonal red tiles,
sweaty with a secret dank, crummy with ant-stale;
a Rocky Mountain chaise longue,
30 its legs, shellacked saplings.
A pastel-pale Huckleberry Finn⁶ fished with a broom straw in a basin hollowed out of a millstone.
Like my Grandfather, the decor 35 was manly, comfortable, overbearing, disproportioned.
W h a t were those sunflowers? Pumpkins floating shoulder-
high?
It was sunset, Sadie and Nellie bearing pitchers of ice-tea, 40 oranges, lemons, mint, and peppermints, and the jug of shandygaff,
which Grandpa made by blending half and half yeasty, wheezing homemade sarsaparilla with beer.
The farm, entitled Char-de-sa
45 in the Social Register, was named for my Grandfather's children:
Charlotte, Devereux, and Sarah.

No one had died there in my lifetime ...

Only Cinder, our Scottie puppy

50 paralyzed from gobbling toads.

I sat mixing black earth and lime.

2

I was five and a half.

My formal pearl gray shorts

had been worn for three minutes.

55 My perfection was the Olympian poise of my models in the imperishable autumn

display windows

of Rogers Peet's boys' store below the State House in Boston. Distorting drops of water

60 pinpricked my face in the basin's mirror.

4. Small building, partly underground, used for 6. Boy hero of the novel The Adventures of Huckstering root vegetables, bulbs, etc. leherry Finn, by the American writer Mark Twain

5. German city on the Neckar River. (1835—1910).

MY LAST AFTERNOON WITH UNCLE DE
VEREUX WINSLOW / 1599

I was a stuffed toucan

with a bibulous, multicolored beak.

3

Up in the air

by the lakeview window in the billiards-room,

65 lurid in the doldrums of the sunset hour,

my Great Aunt Sarah

was learning Samson and Delilah.⁷

She thundered on the keyboard of her dummy piano,

with gauze curtains like a boudoir table, 70 accordionlike yet soundless.
It had been bought to spare the nerves
of my Grandmother,
tone-deaf, quick as a cricket,
now needing a fourth for “Auction,”⁰ auction bridge
75 and casting a thirsty eye on Aunt Sarah, risen like the phoenix⁸ from her bed of troublesome snacks and Tauchnitz⁹ classics.
Forty years earlier,
twenty, auburn headed,
so grasshopper notes of genius!
Family gossip says Aunt Sarah tilted her archaic Athenian nose and jilted an Astor.¹
Each morning she practiced 85 on the grand piano at Symphony Hall, deathlike in the off-season summer—
its naked Greek statues draped with purple like the saints in Holy Week... .
On the recital day, she failed to appear.

4

90 I picked with a clean finger nail at the blue anchor on my sailor blouse washed white as a spinnaker.
W h a t in the world was I wishing?
... A sail-colored horse browsing in the bullrushes ...
A fluff of the west wind puffing 95 my blouse, kiting me over our seven chimneys, troubling the waters... .

As small as sapphires were the ponds: Quittacus, Snippituit, and Assawompset, halved by “the Island,”

where my Uncle’s duck blind

IOO floated in a barrage of smoke-clouds.

7. Piano arrangement of an opera by the French

9. German publisher of inexpensive paperbacks, composer Camille Saint-Saens (1835-1921).

including many English and American works in

8. A long-lived mythological bird that consumed English.

itself in flames and was then reborn from its ashes.

1. In the nineteenth century, three generations of

Aunt Sarah: Sarah Stark Winslow, Robert Lowell’s Astors in New York accumulated one of the largest mother’s aunt.

fortunes in the world.

1 1 6 0 0 / R O B E R T L O W E L L

Double-barreled shotguns

stuck out like bundles of baby crow-bars.

A single sculler⁰ in a camouflaged kayak rower
was quacking to the decoys... .

105 At the cabin between the waters,

the nearest windows were already boarded.

Uncle Devereux was closing camp for the winter.

As if posed for “the engagement photograph,”

he was wearing his severe

110 war-uniform of a volunteer Canadian officer.

Daylight from the doorway riddled his student posters,
tacked helter-skelter on walls as raw as a boardwalk.

Mr. Punch,² a water melon in hockey tights, was tossing off a decanter of Scotch.

ii⁵ La Belle France in a red, white and blue toga was accepting the arm of her “protector,” the ingenu and porcine Edward VII.³

The pre-war music hall belles
had goose necks, glorious signatures, beauty-moles, 120 and coils of hair like rooster tails.

The finest poster was two or three young m e n in khaki kilts

being bushwhacked on the veldt⁴—

They were almost life-size... .

My Uncle was dying at twenty-nine.

125 “You are behaving like children,” said my Grandfather,

w h e n my Uncle and Aunt left their three baby daughters, and sailed for Europe on a last honeymoon ...

I cowered in terror.

BO I wasn’t a child at all—

unseen and all-seeing, I was Agrippina⁵ in the Golden H o u s e of Nero... .

Near me was the white measuring-door
my Grandfather had penciled with my Uncle’s heights.

135 In 1911, he had stopped growing at just six feet.

While I sat on the tiles,

and dug at the anchor on my sailor blouse,

Uncle Devereux stood behind me.

He was as brushed as Bayard, our riding horse.

140 His face was putty.

His blue coat and white trousers grew sharper and straighter.

His coat was a blue jay's tail,

his trousers were solid cream from the top of the bottle.

2. A cartoon figure used as emblem for the English the traditional emblem for France.

humor magazine Punch.

4. Open country in South Africa. The Boer War

3. Edward VII, king of England from 1901 to (1899-1902) was fought by the British against the 1910, helped initiate the era of good feeling descendants of Dutch settlers in South Africa.

between England and France known as "L'Entente

5. Mother of Nero (first century); her scheming Cordiale." On a poster, he is pictured with an arm helped make him Roman emperor. He later had around the waist of Marianne, "La Belle France," her murdered.

SKUNKHOUR / 1601

145 He was animated, hierarchical,

like a gingersnap man in a clothes-press.

He was dying of the incurable Hodgkin's disease

My hands were warm, then cool, on the pile sofearthandle,

150 a black pile and a white pile

Comewinter, UncleDevereuxwouldblendtotheonecolor.

1959

Skunk Hour

(FOR ELIZABETH BISHOP) 6

NautilusIsland'shermit

heiresstilllivessthroughwinterinherSpartancottage;hershpeestillgrazeabovethesea.

Herson'sabishop.Herfarmer 5isfirstselectman8inourvillage; she'sinherdotage.

Thirstingfor
thehierarchicprivacy
ofQueenVictoria'scentury, ioshebuysupall
theeyesoreshacinghershore, andletsthemfall.

Theseason'sill—we'velostoursummermillionaire, 15whoseemedtoleapfromanL.L.Bean9 catalogue.Hisnine-knotyawl wasauctionedofftolobstermen.

AredfoxstaincoversBlueHill.

Andnowourfairly

20decoratorbrightenshisshopforfall;hisfishnet'sfilledwithorangecork, orange,hiscobbler'sbenchandawl;

there is no money in his work,
he'd rather marry.

25 On a dark night,

my Tudor Ford climbed the hill's skull;

I watched for love-cars. Lights turned down,
they lay together, hull to hull,

6. Lowell said that he modeled this poem on 8. Many New England towns are administered by Bishop's "The Armadillo" (see p. 1519). an elected board of selectmen.

7. In Castine, Maine, where Lowell had a summer 9. A mail-order company in Maine, originally specializing in hunting, fishing, and camping gear.

11602 / ROBERT LOWELL

where the graveyard shelves on the town... .

30 My mind's not right.

A car radio bleats,

"Love, O careless Love... ." I hear my ill-spirit sob in each blood cell,

as if my hand were at its throat... .

35 I myself am hell;2

nobody's here—

only skunks, that search

in the moonlight for a bite to eat.

They march on their soles up Main Street:

40 white stripes, moonstruck eyes' red fire

under the chalk-dry and spar0 spire mastlike

of the Trinitarian Church.

I stand on top of our back steps and breathe the rich air—

45 a mother skunk with her column of kittens swills the garbage pail.

She jabs her wedge-head in a cup of sour cream, drops her ostrich tail,
and will not scare.

1 9 5 7 1 9 5 9

Water

It was a Maine lobster town—
each morning boatloads of hands pushed off for granite quarries on the islands, 5 and left dozens of bleak
white frame houses stuck like oyster shells
on a hill of rock,
and below us, the sea lapped
io the raw little match-stick mazes of a weir,
where the fish for bait were trapped.
Remember? We sat on a slab of rock.

From this dance in time,
15 it seems the color
of iris, rotting and turning purpler,

1. From a popular song of the time, “Careless and your sweetheart too.”

Love,” which includes the lines “Now you see what 2. Cf.
Satan in Milton’s Paradise Lost 4.75: careless love will do ... /
Make you kill yourself “Which way I fly is Hell; myself am Hell.”

F O R T H E U N I O N D E A D / 1 6 0 3

but it was only
the usual gray rock
turning t h e usual green 20 w h e n drenched by the sea.
T h e sea d r e n c h e d the rock
at our feet all day,
and kept tearing away
flake after flake.

25 O n e night y o u d r e a m e d
you w e r e a m e r m a i d clinging to a wharf-pile, and trying to pull off the barnacles w i t h your h a n d s .

W e w i s h e d our two souls
30 might return like gulls to the rock. In the end,
the water w a s too cold for us.

1 9 6 4

For the Union Dead³

“Relinquunt Omnia Sew are Rem Publicam.”

T h e old S o u t h B o s t o n A q u a r i u m stands in a Sahara of s n o w n o w . Its broken w i n d o w s are boarded.

T h e bronze w e a t h e r v a n e c o d has lost half its scales.

T h e airy tanks are dry.

5 O n c e my n o s e crawled like a snail on the glass;
my h a n d tingled
to burst t h e b u b b l e s

drifting from the noses of the cowed, compliant fish.

My hand draws back. I often sigh still for the dark downward and vegetating kingdom of the fish and reptile. One morning last March,

I pressed against the new barbed and galvanized fence on the Boston Common. Behind their cage, yellow dinosaur steamshovels were grunting

as they cropped up tons of mush and grass to gouge their underworld garage.

3. At the edge of Boston Common, across from born) sculptor Augustus Saint-Gaudens (1848—

the Massachusetts State House, stands a monu-

1907), was dedicated in 1897. In the upper right

ment to Colonel Robert Gould Shaw (1837-1863)

it bears the Latin motto of the Society of the Cinand the first all-black Civil War regiment, the 54th

cinnati, Omnia relinquit servare rem publicam

Massachusetts; Shaw and many of his troops were

("He gives up everything to serve the republic").

killed in the assault on Fort Wagner, South Caro-

Lowell's epigraph changes "he gives" to "they give."

lina. The bronze relief, by the American (Irish-

11604 / ROBERT LOWELL

Parking spaces luxuriate like civic sandpiles in the heart of Boston.

A girdle of orange, Puritan-pumpkin colored girders

20 braces the tingling Statehouse, shaking over the excavations, as it faces Colonel Shaw and his bell-cheeked Negro infantry on St. Gaudens' shaking Civil War relief, propped by a plank splint against the garage's earthquake.

25 Two months after marching through Boston, half the regiment was dead;
at the dedication,

William James⁴ could almost hear the bronze Negroes breathe.

Their monument sticks like a fishbone
30 in the city's throat.

Its Colonel is as lean
as a compass-needle.

He has an angry wrenlike vigilance,
a greyhound's gentle tautness;
35 he seems to wince at pleasure,
and suffocate for privacy.

He is out of bounds now. He rejoices in man's lovely, peculiar power to choose life and die—
when he leads his black soldiers to death, 40 he cannot bend his back.

On a thousand small town New England greens,
the old white churches hold their air of sparse, sincere rebellion; frayed flags quilt the graveyards of the Grand Army of the Republic.

45 The stone statues of the abstract Union Soldier grow slimmer and younger each year—

wasp-waisted, they doze over muskets and muse through their sideburns ...

Shaw's father wanted no monument

50 except the ditch,

where his son's body was thrown and lost with his "niggers."

The ditch is nearer.

There are no statues for the last war here;

55 on Boylston Street,⁵ a commercial photograph shows Hiroshima boiling

4. Philosopher and psychologist (1842—1910), 5. A major street in Boston. Last war: World War who taught at Harvard University. II.

E P I L O G U E / 1 6 0 5

over a Mosler Safe, the "Rock of Ages"

that survived the blast. Space is nearer.

W h e n I crouch to my television set,

60 the drained faces of Negro school-children rise like balloons.⁶

Colonel Shaw

is riding on his bubble,

he waits

for the blessed break.

65 The Aquarium is gone. Everywhere, giant finned cars nose forward like fish;

a savage servility

slides by on grease.

1 9 6 4

Harriet⁷

A repeating fly, blueback, thumbthick—so gross,
it seems apocalyptic in our h o u s e —
whams back and forth across the nursery bed manned by a madhouse of stuffed animals, 5 not one a fighter. It is like a plane dusting apple orchards or Arabs on the screen—
one of the mighty ... one of the helpless. It bumbles and bumps its brow on this and that,
making a short, unhealthy life the shorter.
10 I kill it, and another instant's added to the horrifying mortmain⁸ of ephemera: keys, drift, sea-urchin shells, you packrat off with joy ... a dead fly swept under the carpet, wrinkling to fulfillment.

1 9 7 0 1 9 7 3

Epilogue

Those blessed structures, plot and rhyme—
why are they no help to me now

I want to make something imagined, not recalled?

5 I hear the noise of my own voice:

*The painter's vision is not a lens,
it trembles to caress the light.*

6. The struggles to integrate public schools (first

8. A legal term (“dead hand”) referring to perpet-

in the South, and later in the North) were fre-ual ownership; more generally, the influence of the quently featured in television newscasts.

past on the present.

7. The poet's daughter, born January 4, 1945.

1 6 0 6 / L A W R E N C E F E R L I N G H E T T I

But sometimes everything I write with the threadbare art of my eye

1 0 s e e m s a snapshot,

lurid, rapid, garish, grouped,

heightened from life,

yet paralyzed by fact.

All's misalliance.

15 Yet why not say what happened?

Pray for the grace of accuracy

Vermeer⁹ gave to the sun's illumination stealing like the tide across a map to his girl solid with yearning.

20 We are poor passing facts, warned by that to give each figure in the photograph his living name.

1 9 7 7

L A W R E N C E F E R L I N G H E T T I

b. 1919

Sometime During Eternity ...

S o m e t i m e during eternity

some guys show up and one of t h e m

w h o shows up real late

5 is a kind of carpenter¹

from some square-type place like Galilee²

and he starts wailing

and claiming he is hip

io to w h o made heaven and earth

and that the cat

w h o really laid it on us

is his Dad

15 And moreover

he adds

It's all writ down

on s o m e scroll-type parchments

w h i c h s o m e h e n c h m e n

20 leave lying around the Dead Sea³ somewheres

9. Jan Vermeer (1632—1675), Dutch painter 3. Sea between the West Bank and Jordan, where known for his treatment of light. the Dead Sea Scrolls, fragments of the Jewish 1. Jesus was a carpenter. Essene order's library dating back to 130 B . C . E . , 2. Region in northern Israel, home of Jesus. were found in 1947.

S O M E T I M E D U R I N G E T E R N I T Y ... / 1 6 0 7

a long time ago

and which you won't even find for a coupla thousand years or so or at least for nineteen hundred and fortyseven

of them to be exact

and even then

nobody really believes them

or me

for that matter

You're hot

they tell him

And they cool him

They stretch him on the Tree to cool

And everybody after that is always making models of this Tree

with Him hung up and always crooning His name and calling Him to come down and sit in on their combo

as if he is the king cat who's got to blow⁴
or they can't quite make it Only he don't come down from His Tree
Him just hang there on His Tree looking real Petered out⁵ and real cool
and also according to a roundup of late world news
from the usual unreliable sources real dead

1 9 5 8

4. Play. King cat: slang for leader (Jesus was also exhaustion and to St. Peter, who denied being a called king of the Jews). Combo: group of music-disciple three times after Jesus' arrest (John 18.17—cians, particularly jazz players.
27).

5. Pun referring both to a sense of defeat or

1 1 6 0 8

WILLIAM M E R E D I T H

b. 1919

The Illiterate

Touching your goodness, I am like a man
Who turns a letter over in his hand
And you might think this was because the hand
Was unfamiliar but, truth is, the man
5 Has never had a letter from anyone;
And now he is both afraid of what it means
And ashamed because he has no other means
To find out what it says than to ask someone.
His uncle could have left the farm to him,
10 Or his parents died before he sent them word,
Or the dark girl changed and want him for beloved.
Afraid and letter-proud, he keeps it with him.
What would you call his feeling for the words
That keep him rich and orphaned and beloved?

1958

Rhode Island

Here at the seashore they use the clouds over & over again, like the rented animals in Aida.1

In the late morning the land breeze turns and now the extras are driving 5 all the white elephants the other way.

What language are the children shouting in?

He2 is lying on the beach listening.

The sand knocks like glass, struck by bare heels.

He tries to remember snow noise,

10 Would powder snow ping like that?

But you don't lie with your ear to powder snow.

Why doesn't the girl who takes care of the children, a Yale girl without flaw, know the difference between lay and lie?

15 He tries to remember snow, his season.

The mind is in charge of things then.

Summer is for animals, the ocean is erotic,
all that openness and swaying.

1. During a triumphal procession in this opera by often hire horses and elephants to augment the the Italian composer Giuseppe Verdi (1813—spectacle.

1901), the victorious Egyptian forces return to

2. Hazard, the Painter (title character of the vol-Memphis with their captives; major companies ume from which this poem comes); cf. line 25.

BEACH GLASS / 1609

N o m a t t e r h o w o f t e n y o u m a k e l o v e

20 i n A u g u s t y o u ' r e a l w a y s a w a r e o f g e n i t a l i a , y o u r o w n a n d t h e h a l f - n a k e d o t h e r s ' .

E v e n w i t h t h e g r a c e f u l e s t b a t h e r s

y o u ' r e a w a r e o f t h e i r k i n s h i p w i t h p o r p o i s e s , m a m m a l s d i s p o r t i n g t h e m s e l v e s i n a b l u e e l e m e n t , 25 s m e l l i n g s l i g h t l y o f f i s h . P o r p o i s e H a z a r d w a t c h e s h i m s e l f a w h i l e , l i k e a b l u e m o v i e .

I n t h e o t h e r h e m i s p h e r e n o w p e o p l e

a r e s t a n d i n g u p , a t w o r k a t t h e i r e a s e l s .

T h e r e t h e y t h i n k a b o u t l o v e a t n i g h t

30 w h e n t h e y t a k e o f f t h e i r s e r i o u s c l o t h e s a n d g o t o b e d s a n d l e s s l y , u n d e r b l a n k e t s .

T o d a y t h e c h i l d r e n , h i s o w n a m o n g t h e m , are apparently shouting fluently in Portuguese, using the colonial dialect of Brazil

35 It is just as well, they have all been changed into small shrill marginal animals, he would not want to understand them again until after Labor Day. He just lays there.

1975

AMY CLAMPITT

1920-1994

Beach Glass

While you walk the water's edge,
turning over concepts

I can't envision, the honking buoy serves notice that at any time

5 the wind may change,
the reef-bell clatters

its treble monotone, deaf as Cassandra to any note but warning. The ocean, cumbered by no business more urgent io than keeping open old accounts that never balanced,

goes on shuffling its millenniums of quartz, granite, and basalt.

It behaves

15 toward the permutations of novelty—driftwood and shipwreck, last night's beer cans, spilt oil, the coughed-up

1. In Greek mythology, the daughter of Priam (last king of Troy), and a prophetess who predicted the fall of Troy. Her gift of prophecy was marred by the curse of never being believed.

1610 / AMYCLAMPITT

residue of plastic — with random impartiality, playing catch or tag 20 or touch-last like a terrier, turning the same thing over and over,
over and over. For the ocean, nothing is beneath consideration.

The houses

25 of so many mussels and periwinkles⁰ mollusks, snails have been abandoned here, it's hopeless to know which to salvage. Instead

I keep a lookout for beach glass—

a amber of Budweiser, chrysoprase²

30 of Almaden and Gallo, lapis³

by way of (no getting around it,

I'm afraid) Phillips'

Milk of Magnesia, with now and then a rare

translucent turquoise or blurred amethyst

35 of no known origin.

The process

goes on forever: they came from sand,

they go back to gravel,

along with the treasures

40 of Murano, the butressed

astonishments of Chartres,⁵

which even now are readying

for being turned over and over as gravely

and gradually as an intellect 45 e n g a g e d in the hazardous redefinition of structures
no o n e has yet looked at.

1 9 8 3

Beethoven, Opus 1116

F O R N O R M A N C A R E Y

There are epochs ... when mankind, not content with the present, longing for time's deeper layers, like the plowman, thirsts for the virgin soil of time.

OSIP MANDELSTAM⁷

— O r , conversely, h u n g e r s

for the levitations of the c o n c e r t hall:

the h a n d s like rafts of *putti*⁸

2. The green color of chalcedony quartz.

(1770-1827). An exemplar of Romanticism and

3. The deep-blue color of lapis lazuli, a mineral.

revolution, Beethoven had become deaf by the

4. An island near Venice, famous for manufactur-time he wrote this piece, in 1821—22.

ing fine glass.

7. Russian poet and critic (1891-1938), who was

5. The cathedral of Notre Dame de Chartres, in arrested for a poem on Joseph Stalin and later died

France, celebrated for its stained-glass windows.

in a transit camp.

6. Piano Sonata No. 32 in C Minor, Opus 111, the

8. “The stylized infant cherubs that appear to soar, last work in the form, as Clampitt’s note remarks, plunge or hover in some Italian and Spanish paintings by the German composer Ludwig van Beethoven on Christian themes” [Clampitt’s note].

BEETHOVEN, OPUS 111 / 1611

out of a region where the dolorous stars are fixed in glassy ceremonies of Art;
the ancien regime’s diaphanous splash⁹
athwart the mounting throb of hobnails—shodsquadrons of vibration mining the air, its struck core hardening into a plowshare, a downward wandering disrupting every formal symmetry:
from the supine harp-case, the strung-foot end on under the mahogany, the bulldozer in the bass unearths a Piranesian catacomb: Beethoven ventilating, with a sound he cannot hear, the cave-in
of recurring rage.
In the tornado country
of mid-America, my father might have been his twin—a farmer hacking at our dock, at the strangle-root of thistles and wild morning glories, setting out trashly, one October,
torid the fencerows of poison ivy:
livid seed-glob sturtead
in trinities of glitter, ripe

with the malefic gleen of farmer doubts lives deep down things.² My father was naive enough — by nature revolutionary, though he'd have disowned the label — to suppose he might in some way, minor but radical, disrupt the given of existence: set his neighbors' thinking straight, undo
the stranglehold of freasons nations
send their boys off to war. That fall, after the oily fireworks had cooled down
to tellises of hairy wicks,
he dug them up, root stocks and all,
and burned them. Do-gooder!

The well-meant holocaust became a mist of venom, sowing itself along the sculptured hollows of his overalls, braceleting wrists and collarbone —
a mesh of blisters spreading to a shirt worn like a curse. For weeks he writhed inside it. Awful.

High art

with a stiff neck: an upright Steinway³ bought in Chicago; a chromo of a Hobbema
9. I.e., the extremely delicate splash of France's Grandeur" (p. 1166), in which "There lives the political and social system before the revolution in dearest freshness deep down things." Malefic:

1789. Cerements: shrouds for the dead.

malignant, malicious.

1. As in the work of Giambattista Piranesi (1720—

3. Meindert Hobbema (1638-1709), Dutch

1778), Italian architect, painter, and engraver.

painter. Chromo: chromolithograph, print. Stein-

2. An allusion to Gerard Manley Hopkins, “God’s way: one of the best brands of pianos.

1 6 1 2 / A M Y C L A M P I T T

tree-avenue, or of Millet’s imagined peasant, the lark she listens to invisible, 4 perhaps irrelevant: harp strings and fripperies of a fir congealed into an object nailed against the wall, 5 its sole ironic function (if it has any)

to demonstrate that one, though he may grunt and sweat at work, is not a clod.

Beethoven might declare the air

his domicile, the wind skin, 5 the tornado

60 a kind of second cousin; here,

his labor merely shimmers— a deracinated album leaf, a bagatelle, the “Moonlight” rendered with a dying fall 6 (the chords

subside, disintegrate, regroup

65 in climbing sequences con brio); 7 there’s no

dwelling on the sweet past here,

there being no past to speak of other than the setbacks: typhoid

in the wells, half the first settlers

70 dead or fit before a year was out;

diphtheria and scarlet fever
every winter; drought, the Depression, a mortgage on the mortgage. High art as a susurrus, 0 the silk and perfume whisper 7 5 of unsullied hands. Those hands! — driving the impressionable wild with anguish for another life entirely: the Lyceum 8 circuit, the doomed diving bell of Art.

Beethoven

so in his workroom: ear trumpet, conversation book and pencil, candlestick, broken crockery, the Graf piano wrecked by repeated efforts to hear himself
—

out of a humdrum squalor the levitations, 85 the shakes and triplets, the Adagio
molto semplice e cantabile, 9 the Arietta 0 little air

a disintegrating surf of blossom

opening along the keyboard, along the fence row the astonishment of sweetness. My father, 90 driving somewhere in Kansas or Colorado, in dust bowl country, stopped the car to dig up by the roots a flower

he'd never seen before — a kind of prickly poppy most likely, its luminous-ness 95 wounding the blank plains like desire

.

4. Because the European skylark sings in flight,

6. Cf. Shakespeare, Twelfth Night 1.1.1-4: "...

often too high to be seen, as in the famous painting that strain again! It had a dying fall." "Moonlight":

of the listening peasant, by the French painter
Beethoven's Piano Sonata in C Sharp Minor
Jean-Francois Millet (1814-1875).

(Moonlight), Opus 27, No. 2.

5. "In a letter to Count Brunswick dated February

7. With vigor (Italian); musical direction.

13, 1814, Beethoven wrote: 'As regards me, great

8. A building used for cultural activities, such as heavens! my dominion is in the air; the tones whirl concerts.

like the wind, and often there is a whirl in my

9. A slow movement, played very simply and in a soul' " [Clampitt's note].

songlike manner (Italian).

THE SUN UNDERFOOT AMONG THE SUNDEWS / 1 6 1 3

H e m e n t i o n e d i n a l e t t e r t h e d i s a p p o i n t m e n t o f h i s h a v i n g h o p e d i t m i g h t t r a n s p l a n t

—

a n e p i s o d e t h a t b r i n g s m e n e a r t e a r s , still, a s e v e n h i s d y i n g d o e s n o t —

ioo t h a t a w f u l d y i n g , m o n t h s - l o n g , h u n k e r e d , i r a s c i b l e . F r o m a c l o d n o p l o w s h a r e

c o u l d d e l i v e r , a g r o a n f o r s o m e o n e

(b e c a u s e h e d i d n ' t w a n t t o l o o k

a t a n y t h i n g) t o t a k e a w a y t h e f l o w e r s ,

105 a b a w l i n g a s o f s l a u g h t e r h o u s e s , s l o g a n s o f a g e n e r a l u p r i s i n g : *Freiheit!

B e e t h o v e n , s h u t u p w i t h t h e f o u r w a l l s

of his deafness, rehearsing the unbearable
semplice e cantabile, somehow reconstituting 110 the blister shirt of the intolerable into these shakes and triplets, a hurrying into flowering along the fence rows: dying
, for my father, came to be like that finally — in its message the levitation 115 of serenity, as though the spirit might aspire, in its last act,
to walk on air.

1983

The Sun Underfoot Among the Sundews²
A ingenuity too astonishing to be quite fortuitous is this bog full of sundews, sphagnum - 0 moss- lined and shaped like a teacup.

5 A step

down and you're into it; a wilderness swallows you up:
ankle-, then knee-, then midriffto-shoulder-deep in wet footed io understory, an overhead spruce-tamarack horizon hinting you'll never get out of here.

But the sun

among the sundews, down there, 15 is so bright, an underfoot
webwork of carnivorous rubies,
a star-swarm thick as the gnats

they're set to catch, delectable double-faced cockleburs, each 20 hair-tip a sticky mirror
a fire with sunlight, a million of them and again a million,

1. Freedom! (German).

2. Carnivorous bog plants.

1614 / AMY CLAMPITT

each mirror a trap set to unhand unbelieveing,

25 that either

a First Cause said once, "Let there be sundews,"³ and there were, or they've made their way here unaided

other than by that backhand, round-

30 about refusal to assume responsibility now as Natural Selection.⁴

But the sun

underfoot is so dazzling

down there among the sundews,

35 there is so much light

in the cup that, looking,

you start to fall upward.

1983

The Cormorant in Its Element

That bonypot bellied arrow, wing-pumping along implacably, with a ramrod's rigid adherence, airborne, to the horizontal, discloses a talent so new would never have guessed at. Plummeting⁵ waterward, big black feet pla yed for a landing gear, slim head turning and turning, vermilionstrapped, this way and that, with a lightning glance over the shoulder, the cormorant astounding-

ly, in one sleek involuted arabesque, a vertical otturnonadime, goes into that inimitable vanishing-and-emerging-from-under-the-brinydeep act which, unlike the works of Homo Houdini, 5 is performed for reasons having nothing at all to do with the ego, guilt, ambition, or even money.

1983

Syrinx⁶

Like the foghorn that 's all lung,
the windchime that 's all percussion,

3. See Genesis 1.14: "And God said, Let there be

6. The vocal organ of birds, named after the Arca-lights in the firmament of the heaven."

dian mountain nymph in Greek mythology who, to

4. The theory of evolution as formulated by the protect her chastity from the god Pan, was trans-English naturalist Charles Darwin (1809-1882).

formed into a reed. From that reed Pan made the

5. An invented term conflating the Latin Homo pan-pipe, also called the syrinx. Pastoral poets considered Pan a patron of their art.

cian Harry Houdini (1874-1926).

SYRINX / 1 6 1 5

like the wind itself, that's merely air in a terrible fret,⁷ without so much 5 as a finger to articulate what ails it, the aeolian⁸
syrinx, that reed
in the throat of a bird, when it comes to the shaping of 10 what we call consonants, is too imprecise for consensus about what it even seems to be saying: is it o-ka-lee
or con-ka-ree, is it really jug jug, 15 is it cuckoo for that matter?— much less whether a bird's call means anything in particular, or at all.
Syntax comes last, there can be 20 no doubt of it: came last, can be thought of (is thought of by some) as a higher form of expression:
is, in extremity, first to 25 be jettisoned: as the diva onstage, all soaring pectoral breathwork, takes off, pure vowel
breaking free of the dry,

30 the merely fricative husk of the particular, rises past saying anything, any more than the wind in the trees, waves breaking,
35 or Homer's gibbering Thespisae iache:9
those last-chance vestiges above the threshold, the ail-but dispossessed of breath.

1 9 9 4

7. In the double sense of 1) worried agitation, and from out of Erebus the spirits of those that are 2) a ridge set across the fingerboard of a stringed dead, brides, and unwedded youths, and toil-worn instrument to help the fingers stop the strings cor-old men, and tender maidens with hearts yet new rectly.

to sorrow, and many, too, that had been wounded

8. Producing a windlike moaning or sighing with bronze-tipped spears, men slain in fight, wear-sound.

ing their blood-stained armour. These came

9. Clampitt's oblique commentary, in a note, is a thronging in crowds about the pit from every side, quotation from Homer's Odyssey 10.34—43, as with a wondrous cry ...”

translated by A. T. Murray: “Then there gathered

1 6 1 6

BARBARA G U E S T

b. 1920

Roses

“painting has n o air ... ”

G E R T R U D E S T E I N 1

T h a t t h e r e s h o u l d n e v e r b e a i r
i n a p i c t u r e s u r p r i s e s m e .

I t w o u l d s e e m t o b e o n l y a p i c t u r e
o f a c e r t a i n k i n d , a p o r t r a i t i n p a p e r 5 o r g l u e d , s o m e w h e r e a s t i c k i n e s s a s o p p o s e d t o a s t i c k - t o - i t - n e s s o f a n o t h e r g e n r e . I t m i g h t b e q u i t e n e w t o d o w i t h o u t
t h a t a i r , o r t o f i n d o x y g e n
i o o n t h e l a n d s c a p e l i n e l i k e a b o a t w h i c h i s a n o b j e c t o r a s h o e w h i c h n e v e r f l o a t s a n d i s s t a t i o n a r y .

S t i l l t h e r e

15

a r e c e r t a i n i l l n e s s e s t h a t r e q u i r e a i r , l o t s o f i t . A n d t h e r e a r e n e r v o u s p e o p l e w h o c a n n o t m a n u f a c t u r e e n o u g h a i r a n d m u s t s e e k
f o r i t w h e n t h e y d o n ' t h a v e p l a n t s , 20

i n p i c t u r e s . T h e r e i s t h e m y s t e r i o u s

traveling that one does outside the cube and this takes place in air.

It is why one develops

25 an attitude toward roses picked in the morning air, even roses without sun shining on them.

The roses of Juan Gris² from which we learn the selflessness of roses

30 existing perpetually without air,
the lid being down, so to speak,
a 1912 fragrance sifting to the left corner where we read

"The Marvelous" and escape.

1973

1. American writer (1874—1946; see pp. 1248—ists and writers between the two world wars.

50), whose Paris home was a salon for leading art- 2. Spanish Cubist painter (1887—1927).

TWILIGHT POLKA DOTS / 1617

Twilight Polka Dots

The lake was filled with distinguished fish purchased at much expense in their prime.
It was a curious lake, half salt, wishing to set at one of solitude edged with poetry.

This was a conscious body aware of shelves and wandering rootlings, dutysuggeste dit provide a scenic atmosphere of content
, a solicitude for the brooding emotions.

It despised the fish who enriched the waters.
Fish with their lithesome bodies, and th

birds disagreeable concern with feeding. They disturbed the water which preferred the cultivated echoes of a hunting horn. Inside a mercantile heart the lake dwelt on boning and deboning, skin and sharpened eyes, a ritual search through dependable deposits for slimier luxuries. The surface presented an appeal to meditation and surcease.

15 Situated below the mountain, surrounded by aged trees, the lake offered a picture appealing both to young and mature romance. At last it was the visual choice of two figures who in the fixity of their shared glance were admired by the lake. Tactfully they ignored the lacustrine

20 fish, their gaze faltered lightly on the lapping margins, their thoughts flew elsewhere, even beyond the loop of her twisted hair and the accent of his poised tie-pin.

The scenes supplied them with theatre, it was an evening performance and the water understood and strained its source for bugle echoes and silvered laments. The couple referred to the lake without speech, by the turn of a head, a hand waved, they placed a dignity upon the lake brow causing an undercurrent of physical pleasure to shake the water.

30 Until the letter fell. Torn into fragments the manta tossed it on the water, and the wind spilled the paper forward, the cypress bent, the mountains sent a glacial flake.

Fish leapt. Polka dots now stippled the twilight water and a superannuated gleam like a browned autumnal stalk follow

ed the couple where they shied in the lake
a rsh grass like two eels who were caught.

1989

3. Of or pertaining to a lake.

1618

EDWIN MORGAN

b. 1920

Strawberries

There were never strawberries

like the ones we had

that sultry afternoon

sitting on the step

5 of the open french window facing each other

your knees held in mine

the blue plates in our laps

the strawberries glistening

io in the hot sunlight

we dipped them in sugar

looking at each other

not hurrying the feast

for one to come

15 the empty plates

laid on the stone together with the two forks crossed and I bent towards you

sweet in that air

20 in my arms

abandoned like a child from your eager mouth
the taste of strawberries
in my memory
25 lean back again
let me love you let the sun beat on our forgetfulness
one hour of all 30 the heat intense and summer lightning on the Kilpatrick hills¹
let the storm wash the plates

1 9 6 5

King Billy

Grey over Riddrie² the clouds piled up, dragged their rain through the cemetery trees.

The gates shone cold. Wind rose

1. Upland plateau in the county of West Dunbar- 2. A district of Glasgow,

tonshire, Scotland.

T H E D O W S E R / 1 6 1 9

f l a r i n g t h e h i s s i n g l e a v e s , t h e b r a n c h e s s w u n g , h e a v y , a c r o s s t h e l a m p s .

G r a v e s t o n e s h u d d l e d i n d r i z z l i n g s h a d o w
, f l i c k e r i n g s t r e e t l i g h t s c a n n e d t h e r e q u i e s c a t s , 3

a n a m e a n d a n u r n , a d a t e , a d o v e p i c k e d o u t , l o s t , h a l f r e g a i n e d .

10

What is this dripping wreath, blown from its grave red, white, blue, and gold

“To Our Leader of Thirty years Ago” —

Bare headed, in dark suits, with flutes and drums, they brought him here, in proc ession 15

seriously, King Billy of Brighton, dead, from Bridgeton Cross: a memory of violen ce, brooding days of empty bellies,

billiard smoke 4 and a sour pint,

boots or fists, famous sherrickings, s 20

the word, the scuffle, the flash, the shout, bloody crumpling in the close,

bricks for papish windows, get Roman Catholic

the Conks 6 next time, the Conks ambush

the Billy Boys, the Billy Boys the Conks till 25

Sillito escuffs the razors down the tank 0 — drain

No, but it isn't the violence they remember b ut the legend of a violent man

born poor, gang-leader in the bad times

of idleness and boredom, lost in better days, 30

a bouncer in a betting club,

quiet man at last, dying

alone in Bridgeton in a box bed.

So a thousand people stopped the traffic

f o r t h e h e a r s e o f a f o l k h e r o a n d t h e f l u t e s

35

t h r e w " O n w a r d C h r i s t i a n S o l d i e r s " t o t h e w i n d s f r o m u n i r o n i c l i p s , t h e m o u r n e r s k e p
t

i n s t e p , a n d t h e r e w e r e s o m e w h o w e p t .

G o f r o m t h e g r a v e . T h e s h r i l l f l u t e s a r e s i l e n t , t h e m a r c h d i s p e r s e d .

D e p l o r e w h a t i s t o b e d e p l o r e d ,
a n d t h e n f i n d o u t t h e r e s t .

1 9 6 8

The Dowser⁷

W i t h m y f o r k e d b r a n c h o f L e b a n e s e c e d a r

I q u a r t e r t h e d u n e s l i k e d o w n s a n d g u i d e

3. Requiescat in pace is Latin for "Rest in peace"

7. Someone who searches for underground (often shortened to R.I.P. on gravestones).

streams by holding a forked branch of cedar or

4. Cigarette smoke from a billiard saloon.

hazel, which twitches when it is above water. A

5. Fussing over nothing (Scottish slang).

"water-table" (line 10) is the level to which under-

6. Name of a Roman Catholic gang.

ground water rises.

1 6 2 0 / K E I T H D O U G L A S

a n i n v i s i b l e p l o u g h f a r o v e r t h e s a n d .

B u t h o w t o q u a r t e r s u c h s h i f t i n g a c r e s

5 w h e n t h e w i n d m e l t s t h e i r s h a p e s , a n d s h a d o w s m a s s w h e r e a l l w a s b r i g h t b e f o r e ,

and landmarks walk like wraiths 0 at noon?
ghosts

All I know is that underneath,
how many miles no one can say,
10 an unbroken water-table waits like a lake; it has seen no bird or sail in its long darkness, and no man;
not even pharaohs dug so far
for all their thirst, or thirst of glory, 15 or thrust-power of ten thousand slaves.
I tell you I can smell it though, that water. I am old and black and I know the manners of the sun which makes me bend, not break. I lose 20 my ghostly footprints without complaint.

I put every mirage in its place.
I watch the lizard make its lace.
Like one not quite blind I go feeling for the sunken face.
25 So hot the days, then nights so cold,
I gather my white rags and sigh
but sighing steps so steadily that any vibrance in so deep a lake would never fail to rise 30 towards the snowy cedar's bait.
Great desert, let your sweetness wake.

1986 1988

KEITH DOUGLAS

1920-1944

Vergissmeinnicht1

Three weeks gone and the combatants gone
returning over the nightmare ground

we found the place again, and found the soldiers sprawling in the sun.

5 The frowning barrel of his gun overshadowing. As we came on that day, he hit my tank with one like the entry of a demon.

1. Forget me not (German).

ARISTOCRATS / 1 6 2 1

Look. Here in the gun pits spoil 10 the dishonoured picture of his girl who has put: Steffi. Vergissmeinnicht in a copy book gothic script.

We see him almost with content,
abased, and seeming to have paid 15 and mocked at by his own equipment
that's hard and good when he's decayed.

But she would weep to see today how on his skin the swart flies move; black
the dust upon the paper eye

20 and the burst stomach like a cave.

For here the lover and killer are mingled who had one body and one heart.

And death who had the soldiers singled has done the lover mortal hurt.

1943

1944

Aristocrats

The noble horse with courage in his eye,
clean in the bone, looksup at a shellburst:
away fly the images of the shires²

but he puts the pipe back in his mouth.

5 Peter was unfortunately killed by an 88:
3

it took his leg away, he died in the ambulance.

I saw him crawling on the sand; he said
It's most unfair, they've shot my foot off.

How can I live among this gentle

io obsolescent breed of heroes, and not weep?

Unicorns, almost,

for they are falling into two legends

in which their stupidity and chivalry are celebrated. Each, fool and hero, will be an immortal.

15 The plains were their cricket pitch⁴ and in the mountain the tremendous drop fences⁵

brought down some of the runners. Here they en under the stones and earth they dispose themselves, I think with their famous un-concern.

20 It is not gunfire I hear, but a hunting horn
.6

Tunisia, 1943

1 9 4 6

2. Counties. Cf. Wilfred Owen, "Anthem for
4. Field on which the game of cricket is played.

Doomed Youth," line 8 (p. 1386).

5. Fences in the course of a steeplechase horse

3. A German tank fitted with an eighty-eight-race.

millimeter gun.

6. See note 7 below.

1 6 2 2 / K E I T H D O U G L A S

Gallantry

The Colonel⁷ in a casual voice

spoke into the microphone a joke

Which through a hundred earphones broke into the ears of a doomed race.⁸

5 Into the ears of the doomed boy, the fool whose perfectly mannered flesh fell in opening the door for a shell
as he had learnt to do at school.

Conrad luckily survived the winter:

10 he wrote a letter to welcome the auspicious spring: only his silken intentions severed with a single splinter.

Was George fond of little boys?

We always suspected it,

15 but who will say: since George was hit
we never mention our surmise.

It was a brave thing the Colonel said,

but the whole sky turned too hot and the three heroes never heard what 20 it was, gone deaf with steel and lead.
But the bullets cried with laughter,
the shells were overcome with mirth,
plunging their heads in steel and earth—
(the air commented in a whisper).

April 1943 1949

On a Return from Egypt
To stand here in the wings of Europe
disheartened, I have come away from the sick land where in the sun lay the gentle sloe-eyed⁹ murderers 5 of themselves, exquisites under a curse;
here to exercise my depleted fury.

7. “Lt. Col. J. D. Player, killed in Tunisia, Enfi-on one of the manuscripts of “Aristocrats”; Player daviile, February 1943, left £3,000 to the Beaufort was in fact killed in April].

Hunt, and directed that the incumbent of the liv-

8. Cf. Wilfred Owen, “Anthem for Doomed ing in his gift [i.e., the church whose vicar he was Youth” (p. 1386).

entitled to appoint] should be a ‘man who approves

9. Dark-eyed: a sloe is the dark fruit of the black-of hunting, shooting, and all manly sports, which thorn.

are the backbone of the nation’ ” [Douglas’s note

T H E G O O S E F I S H / 1 6 2 3

For the heart is a coal, growing colder when jewelled cerulean¹ seas change into grey rocks, grey water-fringe, 10 sea and sky altering like a cloth till colour and sheen are gone both:
cold is an opiate of the soldier.

And all my endeavours are unlucky explorers
come back, abandoning the expedition; 15 the specimens, the lilies of ambition still spring in their climate, still unpicked:
but time, time is all I lacked to find them, as the great collectors before me.

The next month, then, is a window
20 and with a crash I'll split the glass.
Behind it stands one I must kiss, person of love or death
a person or a wraith,
I fear what I shall find.

March-April 1944? 1944

H O W A R D N E M E R O V

1920-1991

The Goose Fish

On the long shore, lit by the moon
To show them properly alone,
Two lovers suddenly embraced
So that their shadows were as one.

5 The ordinary night was graced

For them by the swift tide of blood
That silently they took at flood,
And for a little time they prized Themselves emparadised.

10

Then, as if shaken by stage-fright
Beneath the hard moon's bony light,
They stood together on the sand
Embarrassed in each other's sight
But still conspiring hand in hand,

15

Until they saw, there underfoot,
As though the world had found them out,
The goose fish turning up, though dead,
His hugely grinning head.

1. Dark blue or green.

1 6 2 4 / H O W A R D N E M E R O V

There in the china light he lay,
20 Most ancient and corrupt and gray
They hesitated at his smile,
Wondering what it seemed to say
To lovers who a little while Before had thought to understand,
25 By violence upon the sand,
The only way that could be known
To make a world their own.
It was a wide and moony grin
Together peaceful and obscene;

30 They knew not what he would express,
So finished a comedian
He might mean failure or success,
But took it for an emblem of
Their sudden, new and guilty love
35 To be observed by, when they kissed,
That rigid optimist.
So he became their patriarch,
Dreadfully mild in the half-dark.
His throat that the sand seemed to choke,
40 His picket teeth, these left their mark
But never did explain the joke
That so amused him, lying there
While the moon went down to disappear
Along the still and tilted track
45 That bears the zodiac.

1 9 5 5

A Primer of the Daily Round
A peels an apple, while B kneels to God,
C telephones to D, who has a hand
On E's knee, F coughs, G turns up the sod
For H's grave, I do not understand
5 But J is bringing one clay pigeon down
While K brings down a nightstick on L's head,
And M takes mustard, N drives into town,
O goes to bed with P, and Q drops dead,
R lies to S, but happens to be heard
io By T, who tells U not to fire V

For having to give W the word
That X is now deceiving Y with Z,
Who happens just now to remember A Peeling an apple somewhere far away.

1 9 5 8

T H E B L U E S W A L L O W S / 1 6 2 5

The Blue Swallows

Across the millstream below the bridge
Seven blue swallows divide the air
In shapes invisible and evanescent,
Kaleidoscopic beyond the mind's
5 Or memory's power to keep them there.

“History is where tensions were,”

“Form is the diagram of forces.”

Thus, helplessly, there on the bridge,
While gazing down upon those birds—
10 How strange, to be above the birds!—

T h u s helplessly the mind in its brain

Weaves up relation's spindrift web,

Seeing the swallows' tails as nibs

Dipped in invisible ink, writing ...

15 Poor mind, what would you have them write?

Some cabalistic⁰ history occult

Whose authorship you might ascribe

To God? to Nature? Ah, poor ghost,

You've capitalized your Self enough.

20 That villainous William of Occam¹

Cut out the feet from under that dream

Some seven centuries ago.
It's taken that long for the mind
To waken, yawn and stretch, to see 25 With opened eyes emptied of speech
The real world where the spelling mind
Imposes with its grammar book
Unreal relations on the blue Swallows. Perhaps when you will have 30 Fully awakened, I shall show you
A new thing: even the water
Flowing away beneath those birds
Will fail to reflect their flying forms,
And the eyes that see become as stones
35 W h e n c e never tears shall fall again.
O swallows, swallows, 2 poems are not
The point. Finding again the world,
That is the point, where loveliness
Adorns intelligible things
40 Because the mind's eye lit the sun.

1 9 6 7

1. Fourteenth-century scholastic philosopher; his complications.

central principle (“Occam’s razor”) was that the

2. Cf. T. S. Eliot, The Waste Land, line 429 simplest, most economical explanation is always

(p. 1356).

preferable over one that introduces unnecessary

1 6 2 6 / H O W A R D N E M E R O V

Boy with Book of Knowledge³

He holds a volume open in his hands:

Sepia portraits of the hairy great,

The presidents and poets in their beards

Alike, simplified histories of the wars,

5 Conundrums, quizzes, riddles, games and poems,

“Immortal Poems”; at least he can’t forget them,

Barbara Fritchie and the Battle Hymn,

And best of all America the Beautiful,⁴

Whose platitudinous splendors ended with

io “From sea to shining sea,” and made him cry

And wish to be a poet, only to say such things,

From sea to shining sea. Could that have been

Where it began? the vast pudding of knowledge,

With poetry rare as raisins in the midst

15 Of those gold-lettered volumes black and green?

Mere piety to think so. But being now

As near his deathday as his birthday then,

He would acknowledge all he will not know,

The silent library brooding through the night

20 With all its lights continuing to burn

Insomniac, a luxury liner on what sea

Unfathomable of ignorance who could say?

And poetry, as steady, still, and rare

As the lighthouses now unmanned and obsolete

25 That used to mark America’s dangerous shores.

1 9 7 5

Strange Metamorphosis of Poets

From epigram to epic is the course
For riders of the American winged horse.⁵
They change both size and sex over the years,
The voice grows deeper and the beard appears;
5 Running for greatness they sweat away their salt,
They start out Emily and wind up Walt.⁶

1 9 7 5

3. A type of reference book once used in schools.
ular patriotic poems of the Civil War.

4. “America the Beautiful” was often, and some-

5. Pegasus, the winged horse of Greek mythology, times still is, sung in classrooms. “Barbara bore poets in flights of genius.

Frietchie” (Nemerov misspelled it), by the Ameri-

6. Emily Dickinson (1830-1886; see pp. 1110—can abolitionist John Greenleaf Whittier (1807—27) and Walt Whitman (1819-1892; see 1892; see pp. 957-60), and the “Battle-Hymn of

pp. 1060—86), American poets known for their epi-the Republic,” by the American suffragist Julia grammatic and epic styles, respectively.

Ward Howe (1819-1910; see p. 1054), were pop-

T H E O L D W O M E N / 1 6 2 7

A Cabinet of Seeds Displayed

These are the original monies of the earth,

In which invested, as the spark in fire,

They will produce a green wealth toppling tall,

A trick they do by dying, by decay,

5 In burial becoming each his kind
To rise in glory and be magnified
A million times above the obscure grave.
Reader, these samples are exhibited
For contemplation, locked in potency io And kept from act for reverence's sake.
May they remind us while we live on earth
That all economies are primitive;
And by their reservations may they teach
Our governors, who speak of husbandry
i5 And think the hurricane, where power lies.

1 9 7 5

G E O R G E M A C K A Y B R O W N

1921-1996

The Old Women

Go sad or sweet or riotous with beer
Past the old women gossiping by the hour,
They'll fix on you from every close and pier
An acid look to make your veins run sour.
5 "No help," they say, "his grandfather that's dead
Was troubled with the same dry-throated curse,
And many a night he made the ditch his bed.
This blood comes welling from the same cracked source."
On every kind of merriment they frown,
io But I have known a gray-eyed sober boy
Sail to the lobsters in a storm, and drown.
Over his body dripping on the stones
Those same old hags would weave into their moans

An undersong of terrible holy joy.

1 9 5 9

M O N A VAN DUYN

b. 1921

Letters from a Father

I

Ulcerated tooth keeps me awake, there is such pain, would have to go to the hospital to have
it pulled or would bleed to death from the blood thinners,
but can't leave Mother, she falls and forgets her salve
and her tranquilizers, her ankles swell so and her bowels
are so bad, she almost had a stoppage and sometimes what she passes is green as grass. There are big holes in my thigh where my leg brace buckles the size of dimes.
My head pounds from the high pressure. It is awful not to be able to get out, and I fell in the bathroom
and the girl could hardly get me up at all.

Sure thought my back was broken, it will be next time.

Prostate is bad and heart has given out,
feel bloated after supper. Have made my peace
because am just plain done for and have no doubt that the Lord will come any day with my release.

You say you enjoy your feeder, I don't see why
you want to spend good money on grain for birds
and you say you have a hundred sparrows, I'd buy poison and get rid of their diseases and turds.

II

We enjoyed your visit, it was nice of you to bring

the feeder but a terrible waste of your money
for that big bag of feed since we won't be living more than a few weeks longer. We can see them good from where we sit, big ones and little ones
but you know when I farmed I used to like to hunt
and we had many a good meal from pigeons
and quail and pheasant but these birds won't be good for nothing and are dirty to have so near
the house. Mother likes the redbirds though.
My bad knee is so sore and I can't hardly hear
and Mother says she is hoarse from yelling but I know it's too late for a hearing aid. I belch up all the time and have a sour mouth and of course with my heart
it's no use to go to a doctor. Mother is the same.
Has a scab she thinks is going to turn to a wart.

III

The birds are eating and fighting, Ha! Ha! All shapes
and colors and sizes coming out of our woods
but we don't know what they are. Your Mother hopes
M O N A VAN DUYN

b. 1921

Letters from a Father

I

Ulcerated tooth keeps me awake, there is such pain, would have to go to the hospital to have
it pulled or would bleed to death from the blood thinners,
but can't leave Mother, she falls and forgets her salve
and her tranquilizers, her ankles swell so and her bowels

are so bad, she almost had a stoppage and sometimes what she passes is green as grass. There are big holes
in my thigh where my leg brace buckles the size of dimes.
My head pounds from the high pressure. It is awful not to be able to get out, and I fell in the bathroom
and the girl could hardly get me up at all.
Sure thought my back was broken, it will be next time.
Prostate is bad and heart has given out,
feel bloated after supper. Have made my peace
because am just plain done for and have no doubt that the Lord will come any day with my release.
You say you enjoy your feeder, I don't see why
you want to spend good money on grain for birds
and you say you have a hundred sparrows, I'd buy poison and get rid of their diseases and turds.

II

We enjoyed your visit, it was nice of you to bring
the feeder but a terrible waste of your money
for that big bag of feed since we won't be living
more than a few weeks longer. We can see them good from where we sit, big ones and little ones
but you know when I farmed I used to like to hunt
and we had many a good meal from pigeons
and quail and pheasant but these birds won't
be good for nothing and are dirty to have so near
the house. Mother likes the redbirds though.
My bad knee is so sore and I can't hardly hear
and Mother says she is hoarse from yelling but I know

it's too late for a hearing aid. I belch up all the time and have a sour mouth and of course with my heart
it's no use to go to a doctor. Mother is the same.
Has a scab she thinks is going to turn to a wart.

III

The birds are eating and fighting, Ha! Ha! All shapes
and colors and sizes coming out of our woods
but we don't know what they are. Your Mother hopes
1 6 3 0 / M O N A V A N D U Y N
40 you can send us a kind of book that tells about birds.
There is one the folks called snowbirds, they eat on the ground,
we had the girl sprinkle extra there, but say,
they eat something awful. I sent the girl to town to buy some more feed, she had to go anyway.

IV

45 Almost called you on the telephone but it costs so much to call thought better write.
Say, the funniest thing is happening, one day we had so many birds and they fight and get excited at their feed you know 50 and it's really something to watch and two or three flew right at us and crashed into our window and bang, poor little things knocked themselves silly.
They come to after awhile on the ground and flew away.
And they been doing that. We felt awful 55 and didn't know what to do but the other day a lady from our Church drove out to call and a little bird knocked itself out while she sat

and she brought it in her hands right into the house, it looked like dead. It had a kind of hat 60 of feathers sticking up on its head, kind of rose or pinky color, don't know what it was,
and I petted it and it come to life right there in her hands and she took it out and it flew. She says they think the window is the sky on a fair 65 day, she feeds birds too but hasn't got so many. She says to hang strips of aluminum foil in the window so we'll do that. She raved about our birds. P.S. The book just come in the mail.

V

Say, that book is sure good, I study 70 in it every day and enjoy our birds.
Some of them I can't identify for sure, I guess they're females, the Latin words
I just skip over. Bet you'd never guess the sparrows I've got here, House Sparrows you wrote, 75 but I have Fox Sparrows, Song Sparrows, Vesper Sparrows, Pine Woods and Tree and Chipping and White Throat and White Crowned Sparrows. I have six Cardinals, three pairs, they come at early morning and night,
the males at the feeder and on the ground the females,
so Juncos, maybe 25, they fight for the ground, that's what they used to call snowbirds. I miss the Bluebirds since the weather warmed. Their breast is the color of a good ripe muskmelon. Tufted Titmouse is sort of blue with a little tiny crest.

85 And I have Flicker and Red-Bellied and Red-

FALLING IN LOVE AT SIXTY-FIVE / 1 6 3 1

Headed Woodpeckers, you would die laughing

to see Red-Bellied, he hangs on with his head

flat on the board, his tail braced up under,

wing out. And Dickcissel and Ruby Crowned Ringlet

90 and Nuthatch stands on his head and Veery on top

the color of a bird dog and Hermit Thrush with spot

on breast, Blue Jay so funny, he will hop right on the backs of the other birds to get the grain.

We bought some sunflower seeds just for him.

95 And Purple Finch I bet you never seen, color of a watermelon, sits on the rim

of the feeder with his streaky wife, and the squirrels,

you know, they are cute too, they sit tall and eat with their little hands, they eat bucketfuls.

100 I pulled my own tooth, it didn't bleed at all.

VI

It's sure a surprise how well Mother is doing,

she forgets her laxative but bowels move fine.

Now that windows are open she says our birds sing

all day. The girl took a Book of Knowledge¹ on loan

105 from the library and I am reading up on the habits of birds, did you know some males have three wives, some migrate some don't. I am going to keep feeding all spring, maybe summer, you can see they expect it. Will need thistle seed for Goldfinch and Pine 110 Siskin next winter. Some folks are going to come see us from Church, some bird watchers, pretty soon.

They have birds in town but nothing to equal this.

So the world woos its children back for an evening kiss.

1 9 8 2

Falling in Love at Sixty-Five

It is like the first and last time I tried a Coleman⁰ lamp for reading in bed in Maine. Too early the camp went dark for fossil habits, no longer could candleflame convince my eyes, and I lit that scary lamp.

5 Instant outcry came from the savage white light of the mantles,² as if a star had been brought down out of space and trapped by the unchinked logs of the bedroom,
roaring its threat to explode the walls and be gone,
or as if the lamp could tell time and knew that one tongue io was no longer enough to speak with, it must double its blare,
overwhelm two senses at once, that the jaded heart might burst into ravished applause for its son et lumiere.³

1. A general reference book. 3. Sound and light show (French).

2. Incandescent cloth hoods of gaslight jets.

1 6 3 2 / R I C H A R D W I L B U R

Perched on a pile of books on the seat of a chair drawn to the head of the bed, the lamp called out 15 the guilty years and shamed them for cracks and shrivels that bent the patient, scabbed logs of the walls and ceiling.
Then I opened a book whose every radiant page was illuminated in colors of lightning and thunder

by the quick-witted lamp in its artistry of rage.

20 The book and the lamp fused to one voice, whose sense became mine, strokes of a slow, rhythmic broom swept a dusty pith that seemed to lie still until some other sense told me that there were wings in the room.

In one much earlier year I had fallen asleep

25 in the meadow, head near bright heights of fireweed, fireweed

strewn on my chest from a hand that let go its bouquet, and had wakened at eyelash touches, the delicate need of five blue butterflies that found me in bloom.

Now, striking my neck and cheeks, came the first

BO wave of this late invasion, three flying bugs

that hit me, lit, flew again, hit, an outburst

the lamp had called for through log-gaps and screenholes, then more entered the air, winged in gray, brown, dun, and more, as I tried to read on, in the muted shades

35 brushed on by sundown's dimming imagination.

Beetle-bodied or light as moths they came and, big and small, bombed the lit skin of face, arms, shoulders, rested, crawled, unfurled, and sent

the blind wanting that stuffed full each one's carapace

40 in a clicking crash at the lampglass, then crazily flew back to me, the bared part of me becoming a plan for plates of an insect book whose specimens

rearranged themselves fiercely over and over again.

For as long as the lantern lasted they would have kept coming,

45 as if the grave darkness had smiled at that tiny dawn and had hurled them in fistfuls straight at the speaking light in answer to what was being insisted upon.

1 9 9 0

R I C H A R D W I L B U R

b. 1921

First Snow in Alsace¹

The snow came down last night like moths
Burned on the moon; it fell till dawn,
Covered the town with simple cloths.

1. Region of northern France.

LOVE CALLS U S T O T H E T H I N G S O F T H I S W O R L D / 1 6 3 3

Absolute snow lies rumpled on 5 What shellbursts scattered and deranged,
Entangled railings, crevassed lawn.
As if it did not know they'd changed,
Snow smoothly clasps the roofs of homes
Fear-gutted, trustless and estranged.
10 The ration stacks are milky domes;
Across the ammunition pile
The snow has climbed in sparkling combs.
You think: beyond the town a mile
Or two, this snowfall fills the eyes is Of soldiers dead a little while.
Persons and persons in disguise,
Walking the new air white and fine,
Trade glances quick with shared surprise.

At children's windows, heaped, benign,
20 As always, winter shines the most,
And frost makes marvelous designs.
The night guard coming from his post,
Ten first-snows back in thought, walks slow
And warms him with a boyish boast:
25 He was the first to see the snow.

1 9 4 7

Love Calls Us to the Things of This World²
The eyes open to a cry of pulleys,
And spirited from sleep, the astounded soul
Hangs for a moment bodiless and simple
As false dawn.

Outside the open window
5 The morning air is all awash with angels.
Some are in bed-sheets, some are in blouses,
Some are in smocks: but truly there they are.
Now they are rising together in calm swells
Of halcyon feeling, filling whatever they wear
io With the deep joy of their impersonal breathing;
Now they are flying in place, conveying
The terrible speed of their omnipresence, moving 2. A quotation from St. Augustine (354—430), author of works such as the Confessions.

1 6 3 4 / R I C H A R D W I L B U R

And staying like white water; and now of a sudden
They swoon down into so rapt a quiet
15 That nobody seems to be there.

The soul shrinks
From all that it is about to remember,
From the punctual rape of every blessed day,
And cries,
“Oh, let there be nothing on earth but laundry,
Nothing but rosy hands in the rising steam
20 And clear dances done in the sight of heaven.”
Yet, as the sun acknowledges
With a warm look the world’s hunks and colors,
The sou] descends once more in bitter love
To accept the waking body, saying now
25 In a changed voice as the man yawns and rises,
“Bring them down from their ruddy gallows;
Let there be clean linen for the backs of thieves;
Let lovers go fresh and sweet to be undone,
And the heaviest nuns walk in a pure floating 30 Of dark habits,
keeping their difficult balance.”

1 9 5 6

Piazza di Spagna,³ Early Morning

I can’t forget
How she stood at the top of that long marble stair
Amazed, and then with a sleepy pirouette
Went dancing slowly down to the fountain-quieted square;
5 Nothing upon her face
But some impersonal loneliness,—not then a girl,
But as it were a reverie of the place,
A called-for falling glide and whirl;

As when a leaf, petal, or thin chip io Is drawn to the falls of a pool and, circling a moment above
it,
Rides on over the lip—
Perfectly beautiful, perfectly ignorant of it.

1 9 5 6

3. Plaza in Rome, famous for its long, curved stairway.

A BAROQUE WALL - FOUNTAIN IN THE VILLA
SCIARRA / 1 6 3 5

A Plain Song for Comadre⁴

Though the unseen may vanish, though insight fails
And doubter and downcast saint
Join in the same complaint,

What holy things were ever frightened off

5 By a fly's buzz, or itches, or a cough?

Harder than nails

They are, more warmly constant than the sun,

At whose continual sign

The dimly prompted vine

io Upbraids itself to a green excellence.

What evening, when the slow and forced expense

Of sweat is done,

Does not the dark come flooding the straight furrow

Or filling the well-made bowl?

15 What night will not the whole

Sky with its clear studs and steady spheres

Turn on a sound chimney? It is seventeen years

Come tomorrow

That Bruna Sandoval has kept the church

20 Of San Ysidro,⁵ sweeping
And scrubbing the aisles, keeping
The candlesticks and the plaster faces bright,
And seen no visions but the thing done right
From the clay porch
25 To the white altar. For love and in all weathers
This is what she has done.
Sometimes the early sun
Shines as she flings the scrubwater out, with a crash
Of grimy rainbows, and the stained suds flash
30 Like angel-feathers.

1 9 5 6

A Baroque Wall-Fountain in the Villa Sciarra⁶

For Dore and Adja

Under the bronze crown
Too big for the head of the stone cherub whose feet
4. Peasant woman (Spanish); also, midwife, god-
5. Village in San Diego County, near the Mexican mother, neighbor. Plain song: or plainsong; the border.

unisonous vocal music of the early Christian

6. A large public park in Rome.

Church; also, any simple melody.

1 6 3 6 / R I C H A R D W I L B U R

A serpent has begun to eat,
Sweet water brims a cockle⁷ and braids down
5 Past spattered mosses, breaks
On the tipped edge of a second shell, and fills

The massive third below. It spills
In threads then from the scalloped rim, and makes
A scrim or summery tent
10 For a faun-menage⁸ and their familiar goose.
Happy in all that ragged, loose
Collapse of water, its effortless descent
And flatteries of spray,
The stocky god upholds the shell with ease,
15 Watching, about his shaggy knees,
The goatish innocence of his babes at play;
His fauness all the while Leans forward, slightly, into a clambering mesh
Of water-lights, her sparkling flesh
20 In a saecular⁹ ecstasy, her blinded smile
Bent on the sand floor
Of the trefoil¹⁰ pool, where ripple-shadows come three-leaved
And go in swift reticulum,⁰ netlikeform
More addling to the eye than wine, and more 25 Interminable to thought
Than pleasure's calculus. Yet since this all
Is pleasure, flash, and waterfall, Must it not be too simple? Are we not
More intricately expressed 30 In the plain fountains that Maderna¹ set Before St. Peter's—the main jet Struggling aloft until it seems at rest
In the act of rising, until
The very wish of water is reversed,

35 That heaviness borne up to burst
In a clear, high, cavorting head, to fill
With blaze, and then in gauze
Delays, in a gnatlike shimmering, in a fine
Illumined version of itself, decline,
40 And patter on the stones its own applause?
7. Shell-shaped basin, part of the fountain.
1. Carlo Maderno (1556-1629), Italian architect
8. Group surrounding the faun, in classical and designer responsible for giving St. Peter's mythology a lusty rural god usually pictured with Basilica, in Rome, the shape of a cross and for a goat's legs and tail.
completing the facade.
9. Lasting for ages (punning on secular, worldly).

A D V I C E T O A P R O P H E T / 1 6 3 7

If that is what men are
Or should be, if those water-saints display
The pattern of our arete,²
What of these showered fauns in their bizarre,
45 Spangled, and plunging house?
They are at rest in fulness of desire
For what is given, they do not tire
Of the smart of the sun, the pleasant water-douse
And riddled pool below,
50 Reproving our disgust and our ennui
With humble insatiety.
Francis,³ perhaps, who lay in sister snow

Before the wealthy gate
Freezing and praising, might have seen in this 55 No trifle, but a shade of bliss—
That land of tolerable flowers, that state
As near and far as grass
Where eyes become the sunlight, and the hand
Is worthy of water: the dreamt land
60 Toward which all hungers leap, all pleasures pass.

1 9 5 6

Advice to a Prophet
When you come, as you soon must, to the streets of our city,
Mad-eyed from stating the obvious,
Not proclaiming our fall but begging us
In God's name to have self-pity,
5 Spare us all word of the weapons, their force and range,
The long numbers that rocket the mind;
Our slow, unreckoning hearts will be left behind,
Unable to fear what is too strange.
Nor shall you scare us with talk of the death of the race,
io How should we dream of this place without us?—
The sun mere fire, the leaves untroubled about us,
A stone look on the stone's face?
Speak of the world's own change. Though we cannot conceive
Of an undreamt thing, we know to our cost 15 How the dreamt cloud crumbles, the vines are blackened by frost,
How the view alters. We could believe,
2. "A Greek word meaning roughly 'virtue' " [Wil- 3. I.e., St.
Francis of Assisi (1182—1226), known bur's note], for his vow of poverty and love of nature.

1 6 3 8 / R I C H A R D W I L B U R

If you told us so, that the white-tailed deer will slip
Into perfect shade, grown perfectly shy,
The lark avoid the reaches of our eye,
20 The jack-pine lose its knuckled grip
On the cold ledge, and every torrent burn
As Xanthus⁴ once, its gliding trout Stunned in a twinkling. What should we be without The dolphin's arc, the dove's return,
25 These things in which we have seen ourselves and spoken?
Ask us, prophet, how we shall call
Our natures forth when that live tongue is all Dispelled, that glass obscured or broken
In which we have said the rose of our love and the clean 30 Horse of our courage, in which beheld
The singing locust of the soul unshelled,
And all we mean or wish to mean.
Ask us, ask us whether with the worldless rose
Our hearts shall fail us; come demanding
35 Whether there shall be lofty or long standing
When the bronze annals of the oak-tree close.

1 9 6 1

Junk

Huru Welandes

wore ne geswiced

monna senigum

dara de Mimming can

heardne gehealdan.

—*Waldere*5

An axe angles
from my neighbor's ashcan;
It is hell's handiwork,
The flow of the grain
the wood not hickory,
The shivered shaft
not faithfully followed,
Of plastic playthings, rises from a shellheap
And the sheer shards paper plates,
of shattered tumblers

4. "Haphaestus, invoked by Achilles, scalded the Wayland, and may roughly be translated: 'Truly, river Xanthus (Scamander) in Iliad, xxi' [Wilbur's Wayland's handiwork—the sword Mimmingwhich note]. he made—will never fail any man who knows how

5. "The epigraph, taken from a fragmentary to use it bravely' ” [Wilbur's note].

Anglo-Saxon poem, concerns the legendary smith

J U N K / 1 6 3 9

That were not annealed
for the time needful.
15 At the same curbside,
a cast-off cabinet
Of wavily-warped
unseasoned wood
Waits to be trundled
20 in the trash-man's truck.

Haul them off! Hide them!
The heart winces
For junk and gimcrack,
for jerrybuilt things
25 And the men who make them
for a little money, Bartering pride
like the bought boxer
Who pulls his punches,
30 or the paid-off jockey
Who in the home stretch holds in his horse.
Yet the things themselves
in thoughtless honor 35 Have kept composure, like captives who would not Talk under torture.
Tossed from a tailgate
Where the dump displays
40 its random dolmens,⁶
Its black barrows
and blazing valleys,
They shall waste in the weather toward what they were.
45 The sun shall glory
in the glitter of glass-chips, Foreseeing the salvage
of the prisoned sand,

And the blistering paint
50 peel off in patches,
That the good grain
be discovered again.
Then burnt, bulldozed,
they shall all be buried 55 To the depth of diamonds, in the making dark
Where halt Hephaestus⁷ keeps his hammer
And Wayland's work
60 is worn away.

1 9 6 1

6. Prehistoric monuments of horizontal stone tombs.
slabs supported by upright stones; believed to be 7. Greek god of fire and the forge.

1 6 4 0 / R I C H A R D W I L B U R

Cottage Street, 1953

Framed in her phoenix fire-screen, Edna Ward⁸
Bends to the tray of Canton,⁹ pouring tea
For frightened Mrs. Plath;¹ then, turning toward
The pale, slumped daughter, and my wife, and me,
5 Asks if we would prefer it weak or strong.
Will we have milk or lemon, she enquires?
The visit seems already strained and long.
Each in his turn, we tell her our desires.
It is my office to exemplify io The published poet in his happiness,

Thus cheering Sylvia, who has wished to die;
But half-ashamed, and impotent to bless,
I am a stupid life-guard who has found,
Swept to his shallows by the tide, a girl
15 Who, far from shore, has been immensely drowned,
And stares through water now with eyes of pearl.
How large is her refusal; and how slight
The genteel chat whereby we recommend Life, of a summer afternoon, despite 20 The brewing dusk which hints that it may end.
And Edna Ward shall die in fifteen years,
After her eight-and-eighty summers of Such grace and courage as permit no tears,
The thin hand reaching out, the last word love,
25 Outliving Sylvia who, condemned to live, Shall study for a decade, as she must,
To state at last her brilliant negative
In poems free and helpless and unjust.

1 9 7 6

Zea2

Once their fruit is picked,
The cornstalks lighten, and though Keeping to their strict

8. Wilbur's mother-in-law.

already attempted suicide and eventually took her

9. Porcelain named after the city in China.

own life.

1. Mother of Sylvia Plath, the American poet

2. Indian corn.

(1932-1963; see pp. 1836-45), who by 1953 had

REMEMBERING THE 'THIRTIES / 1641

Rows, begin to be

5 The tall grasses that they are—

Lissom, now, and free

As canes that clatter

In island wind, or plumed reeds

Rocked by lake water.

10 Soon, if not cut down,

Their ranks grow whistling-dry, and Blanch to lightest brown,

So that, one day, all

Their ribbon-like, down-arcing

is Leaves rise up and fall

In tossed companies,

Like goose-wings beating southward

Over the changed trees.

Later, there are days

20 Full of bare expectancy,

Downcast hues, and haze,

Days of an utter

Calm, in which one white corn-leaf,

Oddly aflutter,

25 Its fabric sheathing

A gaunt stem, can seem to be

The sole thing breathing.

2000

D O N A L D D A V I E

1922-1995

Remembering the 'Thirties

I

Hearing one saga, we enact the next.

We please our elders when we sit enthralled;

But then they're puzzled; and at last they're vexed

To have their youth so avidly recalled.

5 It dawns upon the veterans after all

That what for them were agonies, for us

Are high-brow thrillers, though historical;

And all their feats quite strictly fabulous.

1 6 4 2 / D O N A L D D A V I E

This novel written fifteen years ago,

10 Set in my boyhood and my boyhood home,

These poems about "abandoned workings", show

Worlds more remote than Ithaca¹ or Rome.

The Anschluss, Guernica²—all the names

At which those poets thrilled or were afraid

15 For me mean schools and schoolmasters and games;

And in the process some-one is betrayed.

Ourselves perhaps. The Devil for a joke

Might carve his own initials on our desk,

And yet we'd miss the point because he spoke

20 An idiom too dated, Audenesque.³

Raleigh's Guiana also killed his son.⁴

A pretty pickle if we came to see

The tallest story really packed a gun,

The Telemachiad⁵ an Odyssey.

II

25 Even to them the tales were not so true

As not to be ridiculous as well;

The ironmaster met his Waterloo,

But Rider Haggard⁶ rode along the fell.

“Leave for Cape Wrath tonight!” They lounged away

30 On Fleming’s trek or Isherwood’s ascent.⁷

England expected every man that day

To show his motives were ambivalent.

They played the fool, not to appear as fools

In time’s long glass. A deprecating air

35 Disarmed, they thought, the jeers of later schools;

Yet irony itself is doctrinaire,

And curiously, nothing now betrays

Their type to time’s derision like this coy

Insistence on the quizzical, their craze

40 For showing Hector⁸ was a mother’s boy.

1. Greek island; home of Odysseus, the story of

5. The first four books of the Odyssey, which center on Telemachus,

Penelope, and son, Telemachus, is told in Homer’s

6. English writer (1856-1925), famous for boys’ Odyssey.

adventure stories and novels such as King Solo-

2. Spanish town bombed by German aircraft in mon’s Mines (1885). Waterloo: battle of 1815, in the Spanish Civil War, an event commemorated by Belgium, in which Napoleon was finally defeated. the Spanish expatriate artist Pablo Picasso's painting Guernica (1937). Anschluss: union (German); by W. H. Auden and the American (English-born) name given to the German seizure of Austria in writer Christopher Isherwood (1904-1986), both March 1938.

of whom met the English explorer and travel writer 3. In the style of the American (English-born) Peter Fleming (1907-1971) on a trip to China. poet W. H. Auden (1907-1973; see pp. 1465-81). The quoted line, from Auden's 1929 poem "Miss- 4. In search of gold, the English courtier-poet Sir ing," refers to the northernmost point of mainland Walter Raleigh (ca. 1552-1618; see pp. 151-58) Scotland.

led a military expedition to Guiana, in South Amer- 8. In Homer's Iliad, leader of the Trojans at the ica, on which his son was killed in 1617. siege of Troy.

TIME PASSING , BELOVED / 1643

A neutral tone is nowadays preferred.

And yet it may be better, if we must,

To praise a stance impressive and absurd

Than not to see the hero for the dust.

45 For courage is the vegetable king,

The sprig of all ontologies, the weed
That beards the slag-heap with his hectoring,
Whose green adventure is to run to seed.

1 9 5 5

The Fountain

Feathers up fast, and steeples; then in clods
Thuds into its first basin; thence as surf
Smokes up and hangs; irregularly slops
Into its second, tattered like a shawl;
5 There, chill as rain, stipples a darker green,
Where urgent tritons⁹ lob their heavy jets.
For Berkeley¹ this was human thought, that mounts
From bland assumptions to inquiring skies,
There glints with wit, fumes into fancies, plays
io With its negations, and at last descends,
As by a law of nature, to its bowl
Of thus enlightened but still common sense.
We who have no such confidence must gaze
With all the more affection on these forms, 15 These spires, these plumes, these calm reflections, these Similitudes of surf and turf and shawl,
Graceful returns upon acceptances.
We ask of fountains only that they play,
Though that was not what Berkeley meant at all.

1 9 5 7

Time Passing, Beloved

Time passing, and the memories of love
Coming back to me, carissima,² no more mockingly

Than ever before; time passing, unslackening,
Unhastening, steadily; and no more

9. I.e., statues depicting the Greek demigod of the not an independent entity of which our minds may sea, Triton, whose lower body was that of a fish.

be an effect, but, rather, depends on our sensory

1. George Berkeley (1685-1753), Irish bishop perception for its existence.

and philosopher, who maintained that the world is

2. Darling (Italian).

1 6 4 4 / S I D N E Y K E Y E S

5 Bitterly, beloved, the memories of love

Coming into the shore.

How will it end? Time passing and our passages of love

As ever, beloved, blind

As ever before; time binding, unbinding

10 About us; and yet to remember

Never less chastening, nor the flame of love

Less like an ember.

What will become of us? Time

Passing, beloved, and we in a sealed

15 Assurance unassailed

By memory. How can it end,

This siege of a shore that no misgivings have steeled,

No doubts defend?

1 9 5 7

S I D N E Y K E Y E S

1922-1943

Elegy

*(In memoriam S. K. K.)*¹

April again, and it is a year again
Since you walked out and slammed the door
Leaving us tangled in your words. Your brain
Lives in the bank-book, and your eyes look up 5 Laughing from the carpet on the floor:
And we still drink from your silver cup.
It is a year again since they poured
The dumb ground into your mouth:
And yet we know, by some recurring word
io Or look caught unawares, that you still drive
Our thoughts like the smart cobs² of your youth—
When you and the world were alive.
A year again, and we have fallen on bad times
Since they gave you to the worms.
15 I am ashamed to take delight in these rhymes
Without grief; but you need no tears.
We shall never forget nor escape you, nor make terms
With your enemies, the swift departing years.

1 9 3 8 1 9 4 5

1. Keyes was sixteen when he wrote this elegy for 2. Stocky, short-legged riding horses, his grandfather.

T H E F O R E I G N G A T E / 1 6 4 5

From The Foreign Gate

The moon is a poor woman.
The moon returns to weep with us. The crosses Burn raw and white upon the night's stiff banners.

The wooden crosses and the marble trees
5 Shrink from the foreign moon.
The iron gate glitters. Here the soldiers lie.
Fold up the flags, muffle the soldier's drum;
Silence the calling fife. O drape small flute
The soldier's drum with heavy crepe;
10 With mourning weeds muffle the soldier's girl.
It's a long way and a long march
To the returning moon and to the soil
No time at all.

O call

H The soldier's glory by another name:
Shroud up the soldier's common shame
And drape the soldier's drum, but spare
The steel-caged brain, the feet that walk to war.
Once striding under a horsehair plume
20 Once beating the taut drums for war
The sunlight rang from brass and iron;
History was an angry play—
The boy grew tall and roae away;
The door hung slack; the pale girl wept
25 And cursed the company he kept.
And dumb men spoke
Through the glib mouths of smoke;
The servile learned to strike
The proud to shriek;
30 And strangled in their lovers' lips
The young fell short of glory in the sand

Raking for graves among the scattered sand;
The tattered flags strained at the wind
Scaring the thrifty kite, mocking the dead.
35 But muffle the soldier's drum, hide his pale head,
His face a spider's web of blood. O fold
The hands that grip a splintered gun.
The glittering gate
Baffles him still, his starvecrow³ soul. O drape 40 The soldier's drum and cry, who never dare
Defy the ironbound brain, the feet that walk to war.
The cold hand clenches. The stupid mouth Writhes like a ripple. Now the field is full Of noises and dead voices ...
45 "My rags flap
3. Cursed (from the Australian slang Gawd starve the crows!).
1 6 4 6 / S I D N E Y K E Y E S
Though the great flags are trampled ... "
"My mouth speaks Terror and truth, instead of hard command."
"Remember the torn lace, the fine coats slashed
50 With steel instead of velvet. Kiinersdorf⁴ Fought in the shallow sand was my relief."
"I rode to Naseby" ... "And the barren land
Of Tannenberg drank me. Remember now
The grey and jointed corpses in the snow,
55 The struggle in the drift, the numb hands freezing
Into the bitter iron ... "
"At Dunkirk I

Rolled in the shallows, and the living trod
Across me for a bridge ... ”

60 “Let me speak out Against this sham of policy, for pain
Alone is true. I was a general
Who fought the cunning Africans, returned Crowned with harsh laurel,⁵ frantically cheered 65 Through Roman streets. I spoke of fame and glory.
Women grabbed at my robe. Great poets praised me.
I died of cancer, screaming, in a year.”

“I fell on a black Spanish hillside
Under the thorn-hedge, fighting for a dream
70 That troubled me in Paris; vomited
My faith and courage out among the stones ...”

“I was a barb of light, a burning cross
Of wood and canvas, falling through the night.”

“I was shot down at morning, in a yard.”

75 The moon regards them without shame. The wind Rises and twitters through the wreck of bone ...

“It is so hard to be alone
Continually, watching the great stars march
Their circular unending route; sharp sand
so Straying about the eyes, blinding the quick-eyed spirit.”

A soldier’s death is hard;
There’s no prescribed or easy word
For dissolution in the Army books.
The uniform of pain with pain put on is straiter
85 Than any lover’s garment; yet the death

Of these is different, and their glory greater.
Once men, then moving figures on a map,
Patiently giving time and strength and vision
Even identity

90 Into the future's keeping;
Nourished on wounds and weeping
Faces and laughing flags and pointed laurels,
Their pain cries down the noise of poetry.

4. Lines 50—57 refer to famous battles from dif- 5. In ancient Greece and Rome, crowns of laurel ferent periods of history. leaves were awarded as honors.

W A R P O E T / 1 6 4 7

So muffle the soldier's drum, forget the battles;

95 Remember only fame's a way of living:

The writing may be greater than the speaking

And every death for something different

From time's compulsion, is a written word.

Whatever gift, it is the giving

100 Remains significant: whatever death

It is the dying matters.

Emblematic

Bronze eagle or bright banner or carved name

Of fighting ancestor; these never pardon

105 The pain and sorrow. It is the dying pardons,

For something different from man or emblem.

Then drape the soldier's drum

And carry him down

Beyond the moon's inspection, and the noise

no Of bands and banners and the striking sun.

Scatter the soldier's emblems and his fame:
Shroud up the shattered face, the empty name;
Speak out the word and drape the drum and spare
The captive brain, the feet that walk to war
ii5 The ironbound brain, the hand unskilled in war
The shrinking brain, sick of an inner war.

1 9 4 2 1 9 4 2

War Poet

I am the man who looked for peace and found
My own eyes barbed.

I am the man who groped for words and found
An arrow in my hand.

5 I am the builder whose firm walls surround
A slipping land.

When I grow sick or mad

Mock me not nor chain me:

When I reach for the wind

io Cast me not down:

Though my face is a burnt book

And a wasted town.

1 9 4 2

1 9 4 3

1 6 4 8

P H I L I P L A R K I N

1922-1985

For Sidney Bechet¹

That note you hold, narrowing and rising, shakes
Like New Orleans reflected on the water,

And in all ears appropriate falsehood wakes,
Building for some a legendary Quarter
5 Of balconies, flower-baskets and quadrilles,²
Everyone making love and going shares—
Oh, play that thing! Mute glorious Storyvilles³
Others may license, grouping round their chairs Sporting-house girls like circus tigers (priced io Far above rubies)⁴ to pretend their fads,
While scholars manques ⁵ nod around unnoticed
Wrapped up in personnels⁰ like old plaids. band members
On me your voice falls as they say love should,
Like an enormous yes. My Crescent City
15 Is where your speech alone is understood,
And greeted as the natural noise of good,
Scattering long-haired grief and scored pity.

1 9 5 4

1 9 6 4

Born Yesterday

*for Sally Amis*⁶

Tightly-folded bud,
I have wished you something
None of the others would:
Not the usual stuff
5 About being beautiful,
Or running off a spring
Of innocence and love—
They will all wish you that,
And should it prove possible,

io Well, you're a lucky girl.

1. American jazz clarinetist and saxophonist
rious Milton here may rest.”

(1897-1959), born in New Orleans (“Crescent

4. Cf. Proverbs 31.10: “Who can find a virtuous City,” line 14), where he spent his teenage years woman? For her price is far above rubies.”

playing in the dance halls and brothels of the 5. Would-be scholars.

Storyville (line 7) Quarter (line 4), or district.

6. Daughter (1954-2000) of Larkin's friend the

2. Square dance for couples.

English novelist Kingsley Amis and Amis's wife,

3. Cf. Thomas Gray, “Elegy Written in a Country
Hilary. Cf. W. B. Yeats, “A Prayer for my Daugh-Churchyard,” line 59 (p. 671): “Some mute inglo-ter” (p. 1196).

CHURCHGOING / 1649

But if it shouldn't, then

May you be ordinary;

Have, like other women,

An average of talents:

15 Not ugly, not good-looking,

Nothing uncustomary

To pull you off your balance,

That, unworkable itself,

Stops all the rest from working.

20 In fact, may you be dull—

If that is what a skilled,
Vigilant, flexible,
Unemphasised, enthralled
Catching of happiness is called.

1 9 5 4 1 9 5 5

Church Going

Once I am sure there's nothing going on
I step inside, letting the door thud shut.
Another church: matting, seats, and stone,
And little books; sprawlings of flowers, cut
5 For Sunday, brownish now; some brass and stuff
Up at the holy end; the small neat organ;
And a tense, musty unignorable silence,
Brewed God knows how long. Hatless, I take off
My cycle-clips⁷ in awkward reverence,
io Move forward, run my hand around the font.
From where I stand, the roof looks almost new—Cleaned, or restored? Someone would know: I don't.
Mounting the lectern, I peruse a few Hectoring large-scale verses,⁸ and pronounce 15 "Here endeth" much more loudly than I'd meant.
The echoes snigger briefly. Back at the door
I sign the book, donate an Irish sixpence,⁹ Reflect the place was not worth stopping for.
Yet stop I did: in fact I often do,
20 And always end much at a loss like this,
Wondering what to look for; wondering, too,
When churches fall completely out of use

What we shall turn them into, if we shall keep
A few cathedrals chronically on show,
25 Their parchment, plate and pyx¹ in locked cases,
And let the rest rent-free to rain and sheep.

Shall we avoid them as unlucky places?

7. Devices worn below the knee to keep trouser

9. An Irish sixpence has no value in England.

legs from getting caught in a bicycle chain.

1. Box, often made of gold or silver, in which com-

8. I.e., biblical verses printed in large type for munion wafers are kept.

reading aloud.

1 6 5 0 / P H I L I P L A R K I N

Or, after dark, will dubious women come

To make their children touch a particular stone;

30 Pick simples⁰ for a cancer; or on some medicinal herbs

Advised night see walking a dead one?

Power of some sort or other will go on

In games, in riddles, seemingly at random;

But superstition, like belief, must die,

35 And what remains when disbelief has gone?

Grass, weedy pavement, brambles, buttress, sky,

A shape less recognisable each week,

A purpose more obscure. I wonder who

Will be the last, the very last, to seek

40 This place for what it was; one of the crew

That tap and jot and know what rood-lofts² were?

Some ruin-bibber, randy for antique,

Or Christmas-addict, counting on a whiff
Of gown-and-bands and organ-pipes and myrrh?³
45 Or will he be my representative,
Bored, uninformed, knowing the ghostly silt
Dispersed, yet tending to this cross of ground
Through suburb scrub because it held unspilt
So long and equably what since is found
50 Only in separation—marriage, and birth,
And death, and thoughts of these—for which was built
This special shell? For, though I've no idea
What this accoutred frowsty barn is worth,
It pleases me to stand in silence here;
55 A serious house on serious earth it is,
In whose blent air all our compulsions meet,
Are recognized, and robed as destinies.
And that much never can be obsolete,
Since someone will forever be surprising
60 A hunger in himself to be more serious,
And gravitating with it to this ground,
Which, he once heard, was proper to grow wise in,
If only that so many dead lie round.

1 9 5 4 1 9 5 5

An Arundel Tomb⁴

Side by side, their faces blurred,
The earl and countess lie in stone,
2. In churches, galleries on top of carved screens ents given to the infant Jesus (Matthew 2, Luke 2).
separating the naves, or main halls, from the Gown-and-bands: gown and decorative collar worn choirs, or areas where services are performed by clergymen.

(rood: cross).

4. Fourteenth-century table tomb of Richard Fitz-

3. Gum resin, from trees of eastern Africa and alan III, thirteenth earl of Arundel, and his wife, Arabia, used to make incense; one of three pres-Eleanor, in Chichester Cathedral, Sussex.

A N A R U N D E L T O M B / 1 6 5 1

Their proper habits⁰ vaguely shown clothing

As jointed armour, stiffened pleat,

5 And that faint hint of the absurd—

The little dogs under their feet.

Such plainness of the pre-baroque

Hardly involves the eye, until

It meets his left-hand gauntlet, still

10 Clasped empty in the other; and

One sees, with a sharp tender shock

His hand withdrawn, holding her hand.

They would not think to lie so long.

Such faithfulness in effigy

15 Was just a detail friends would see:

A sculptor's sweet commissioned grace

Thrown off in helping to prolong

The Latin names around the base.

They would not guess how early in 20 Their supine stationary voyage

The air would change to soundless damage,
Turn the old tenantry away;
How soon succeeding eyes begin
To look, not read. Rigidly they 25 Persisted, linked, through lengths and breadths
Of time. Snow fell, undated. Light
Each summer thronged the glass. A bright Litter of birdcalls strewed the same
Bone-riddled ground. And up the paths 30 The endless altered people came,
Washing at their identity.
Now, helpless in the hollow of An unarmorial age, a trough
Of smoke in slow suspended skeins
35 Above their scrap of history,
Only an attitude remains:
Time has transfigured them into Untruth. The stone fidelity
They hardly meant has come to be 40 Their final blazon,0 and to prove record, of virtue
Our almost-instinct almost true:
What will survive of us is love.

1 9 5 6

1 9 6 4

1 6 5 2 / P H I L I P L A R K I N

The Whitsun⁵ Weddings

That Whitsun, I was late getting away:

Not till about

One-twenty on the sunlit Saturday
Did my three-quarters-empty train pull out,
5 All windows down, all cushions hot, all sense
Of being in a hurry gone. We ran
Behind the backs of houses, crossed a street
Of blinding windscreens, smelt the fish-dock; thence
The river's level drifting breadth began,
10 Where sky and Lincolnshire and water meet.
All afternoon, through the tall heat that slept
For miles inland,
A slow and stopping curve southwards we kept.
Wide farms went by, short-shadowed cattle, and 15 Canals with floatings of industrial froth;
A hothouse flashed uniquely: hedges dipped
And rose: and now and then a smell of grass
Displaced the reek of buttoned carriage-cloth
Until the next town, new and nondescript,
20 Approached with acres of dismantled cars.
At first, I didn't notice what a noise
The weddings made
Each station that we stopped at: sun destroys
The interest of what's happening in the shade,
25 And down the long cool platforms whoops and skirls shrill cries
I took for porters larking with the mails,
And went on reading. Once we started, though,
We passed them, grinning and pomaded, girls
In parodies of fashion, heels and veils,

30 All posed irresolutely, watching us go,
As if out on the end of an event
Waving goodbye
To something that survived it. Struck, I leant
More promptly out next time, more curiously,
35 And saw it all again in different terms:
The fathers with broad belts under their suits
And seamy foreheads; mothers loud and fat;
An uncle shouting smut; and then the perms,
The nylon gloves and jewellery-substitutes,
40 The lemons, mauves, and olive-ochres that Marked off the girls unreally from the rest.

Yes, from cafes

And banquet-halls up yards, and bunting-dressed
5. Or Whitsunday, the seventh Sunday after white robes. In the 1950s, British taxlawmade the Easter, commemorating the day of Pentecost, Whitsun weekend a financially advantageous time when converts to the early Christian Church wore to be married.

MCMXIV / 1653

Coach-party annexes, the wedding-days
Were coming to an end. All down the line
Fresh couples climbed aboard: the rest stood round;
The last confetti and advice were thrown,
And, as we moved, each face seemed to define
Just what it saw departing: children frowned

50

At something dull; fathers had never known Success so huge and wholly farcical;
The women shared
The secret like a happy funeral;
While girls, gripping their handbags tighter, stared 55

At a religious wounding. Free at last,
And loaded with the sum of all they saw,
We hurried towards London, shuffling gout of steam.
Now fields were building-plots, and poplars cast
Long shadows over major roads, and for 60

Some fifty minutes, that in time would seem
Just long enough to settle hats and say
I nearly died,

A dozen marriages got under way.
They watched the landscape, sitting side by side 65

—An Odeon went past, a cooling tower,⁶
And someone running up to bowl⁷—and none
Thought of the others they would never meet
Or how their lives would all contain this hour.
I thought of London spread out in the sun, 70

Its postal districts packed like squares of wheat:
There we were aimed. And as we raced across Bright knots of rail
Past standing Pullmans,⁸ walls of blackened moss

Came close, and it was nearly done, this frail

75

Travelling coincidence; and what it held

Stood ready to be loosed with all the power

That being changed can give. We slowed again,

And as the tightened brakes took hold, there swelled

A sense of falling, like an arrow-shower

80

Sent out of sight, somewhere becoming rain.

1 9 5 8

MCMXIV9

Those long uneven lines

Standing as patiently

As if they were stretched outside

6. Industrial structure for cooling hot water before

8. Railway saloons or sleeping cars first made in reuse. Odeon: one in a chain of movie theaters.

the United States by George M. Pullman.

7. In the sport of cricket, to pitch the ball to the

9. 1914, in roman numerals, as incised on stone batsman.

memorials to the dead of World War I.

1 6 5 4 / P H I L I P L A R K I N

The Oval or Villa Park,1

5 The crowns of hats, the sun

On moustached archaic faces

Grinning as if it were all

An August Bank Holiday lark;

And the shut shops, the bleached,
10 Established names on the sunblinds,
The farthings and sovereigns,²
And dark-clothed children at play
Called after kings and queens,
The tin advertisements
15 For cocoa and twist,⁰ and the pubs tobacco
Wide open all day;³
And the countryside not caring:
The place-names all hazed over
With flowering grasses, and fields
20 Shadowing Domesday lines⁴
Under wheat's restless silence;
The differently-dressed servants
With tiny rooms in huge houses,
The dust behind limousines;
25 Never such innocence,
Never before or since,
As changed itself to past
Without a word—the men
Leaving the gardens tidy,
30 The thousands of marriages
Lasting a little while longer:
Never such innocence again.

1 9 6 0 1 9 6 4

Talking in Bed

Talking in bed ought to be easiest,
Lying together there goes back so far,

An emblem of two people being honest.

Yet more and more time passes silently.

5 Outside, the wind's incomplete unrest

Builds and disperses clouds about the sky,

1. I.e., outside a (London) cricket ground or a public houses ("pubs").

(Birmingham) soccer field. The lines consist of

4. The still-visible boundaries of medieval farmers' men waiting to enlist.

long and narrow plots, ownership of which is

2. At that time, the least valuable and the most recorded in William the Conqueror's Domesday valuable British coins, respectively.

Rook (1085-86).

3. A 1915 law restricted the business hours of

A M B U L A N C E S / 1 6 5 5

And dark towns heap up on the horizon.

None of this cares for us. Nothing shows why

At this unique distance from isolation

10 It becomes still more difficult to find

Words at once true and kind,

Or not untrue and not unkind.

1 9 6 0 1 9 6 4

Ambulances

Closed like confessionals,5 they thread

Loud noons of cities, giving back

None of the glances they absorb.

Light glossy grey, arms on a plaque,

5 They come to rest at any kerb:
All streets in time are visited.
Then children strewn on steps or road,
Or women coming from the shops
Past smells of different dinners, see io A wild white face that overtops
Red stretcher-blankets momentarily
As it is carried in and stowed,
And sense the solving emptiness
That lies just under all we do,
15 And for a second get it whole,
So permanent and blank and true.
The fastened doors recede. Poor soul,
They whisper at their own distress;
For borne away in deadened air
20 May go the sudden shut of loss
Round something nearly at an end,
And what cohered in it across
The years, the unique random blend
Of families and fashions, there 25 At last begin to loosen. Far From the exchange of love to lie
Unreachable inside a room
The traffic parts to let go by Brings closer what is left to come,
30 And dulls to distance all we are.

1 9 6 1 1 9 6 4

5. Enclosed stalls in Roman Catholic churches, in which priests hear confession.

1 6 5 6 / P H I L I P L A R K I N

The Trees

The trees are coming into leaf
Like something almost being said;
The recent buds relax and spread,
Their greenness is a kind of grief.
5 Is it that they are born again
And we grow old? No, they die too.
Their yearly trick of looking new
Is written down in rings of grain.
Yet still the unresting castles thresh
10 In fullgrown thickness every May.
Last year is dead, they seem to say,
Begin afresh, afresh, afresh.

1 9 6 7 1 9 7 4

Sad Steps⁶

Groping back to bed after a piss
I part thick curtains, and am startled by
The rapid clouds, the moon's cleanliness.
Four o'clock: wedge-shadowed gardens lie
5 Under a cavernous, a wind-picked sky.
There's something laughable about this,
The way the moon dashes through clouds that blow
Loosely as cannon-smoke to stand apart (Stone-coloured light sharpening the roofs below)
io High and preposterous and separate—

Lozenge of love! Medallion of art!
O wolves of memory! Immensements! No,
One shivers slightly, looking up there.
The hardness and the brightness and the plain 15 Far-reaching singleness of that wide stare
Is a reminder of the strength and pain
Of being young; that it can't come again,
But is for others undiminished somewhere.

1 9 6 8 1 9 7 4

6. Cf. Sir Philip Sidney, Astrophil and Stella 31.1: "With how sad steps, O Moon, thou climb'st the skies"

(p. 214).

T H I S B E T H E V E R S E / 1 6 5 7

The Explosion

On the day of the explosion
Shadows pointed towards the pithead.
In the sun the slagheap⁷ slept.
Down the lane came men in pitboots
5 Coughing oath-edged talk and pipe-smoke,
Shouldering off the freshened silence.
One chased after rabbits; lost them;
Came back with a nest of lark's eggs;
Showed them; lodged them in the grasses.
10 So they passed in beards and moleskins,⁸
Fathers, brothers, nicknames, laughter,
Through the tall gates standing open.
At noon, there came a tremor; cows
Stopped chewing for a second; sun,

15 Scarfed as in a heat-haze, dimmed.

*The dead go on before us, they
Are sitting in God's house in comfort,
We shall see them face to face—*

Plain as lettering in the chapels

20 It was said, and for a second

Wives saw men of the explosion

Larger than in life they managed—

Gold as on a coin, or walking

Somehow from the sun towards them,

25 One showing the eggs unbroken.

1 9 7 0 1 9 7 4

This Be The Verse⁹

They fuck you up, your mum and dad.

They may not mean to, but they do.

They fill you with the faults they had

And add some extra, just for you.

7. Pile of debris. Pithead: entrance to a coal mine. 9. Cf. Robert Louis Stevenson, "Requiem," esp.

8. Clothes made of heavy, durable cotton fabric. line 5: "This be the verse you grave for me."

1 6 5 8 / P H I L I P L A R K I N

5 But they were fucked up in their turn

By fools in old-style hats and coats,

Who half the time were soppo-stern

And half at one another's throats.

Man hands on misery to man.

10 It deepens like a coastal shelf.

Get out as early as you can,

And don't have any kids yourself.

1 9 7 1 1 9 7 4

Aubade1

I work all day, and get half-drunk at night.

Waking at four to soundless dark, I stare.

In time the curtain-edges will grow light.

Till then I see what's really always there:

Unresting death, a whole day nearer now,

Making all thought impossible but how

And where and when I shall myself die.

Arid interrogation: yet the dread

Of dying, and being dead,

Flashes afresh to hold and horrify.

The mind blanks at the glare. Not in remorse

—The good not done, the love not given, time

Torn off unused—nor wretchedly because

An only life can take so long to climb

Clear of its wrong beginnings, and may never;

But at the total emptiness for ever,

The sure extinction that we travel to

And shall be lost in always. Not to be here,

Not to be anywhere,

And soon; nothing more terrible, nothing more true.

This is a special way of being afraid

No trick dispels. Religion used to try,

That vast moth-eaten musical brocade

Created to pretend we never die,

And specious stuff that says No rational being

Can fear a thing it will not feel, not seeing
That this is what we fear—no sight, no sound,
No touch or taste or smell, nothing to think with,
Nothing to love or link with,
The anaesthetic from which none come round.

1. Music or poem announcing dawn.

THE PERSISTENCE OF SONG / 1659

And so it stays just on the edge of vision, As small unfocused blur, a standing chill

That slow seachimpulsedowntoindecision.

Most things may never happen: this one will,
35 And realisation of it rages out

In furnace-fear when we are caught without People or drink. Courage is no good:

It means not scaring others. Being brave Lets no one off the grave.

40 Death is no different whined at than with stood.

Slowly light strengthens, and the room takes shape.

It stands plain as a wardrobe, what we know,
Have always known, know that we can't escape, Yet can't accept. One side will have to go.

45 Meanwhile telephones crouch, getting ready to ring In locked-up offices, and all the uncaring Intricate rented world begins to rouse.

The sky is white as clay, with no sun.

Work has to be done.

50 Postmen like doctors go from house to house.

1977

HOWARD MOSS

1922-1987

The Persistence of Song

Although it is not yet evening,

These secretaries have changed their frocks

As if it were time for dancing,

And locked up in the scholars' books

5 There is a kind of rejoicing,

There is a kind of singing

That even the dark stone canyon makes

As though all fountains were going

At once, and the color flowed from bricks i o In one wild, lit up surging.

What is the weather doing?

And who arrived on a scallop shell

With the smell of these at this morning? 1

— Creating a small upheaval

15 High above the scaffolding

By saying, "All will be well.

There is a kind of rejoicing."

1. Venus, Roman goddess of love and beauty, was said to have been born from a shell in the sea.

1660 / HOWARD MOSS

Is there a kind of rejoicing

In saying, "All will be well"?

20 High above the scaffolding,

Creating a small upheaval,
The smell of the sea this morning
Arrived on a scallop shell.
What was the weather doing
25 In one wild, lit upsurging?
At once, the color flowed from bricks
As though all fountains were going,
And even the dark stone canyon makes
Here a kind of singing,
30 And there a kind of rejoicing,
And locked up in the scholars' books
There is a time for dancing
When the secretaries have changed their frocks,
And though it is not yet evening,
35 There is the persistence of song.

1 9 6 8

Tourists
Cramped like sardines on the Queens,² and sedated,
The sittings all first, the roommates mismated,
Three nuns at the table, the waiter a barber,
Then dumped with their luggage at some frumpish harbor,
5 Veering through rapids in a vapid rapido
To view the new moon from a ruin on the Lido,³
Or a sundown in London from a rundown Mercedes,
Then high-borne to Glyndebourne for Orfeo in Hades,⁴ Embarrassed in Paris in Harris tweed, dying to io Get to the next museum piece that they're flying to,
Finding, in Frankfurt, that one indigestible

Comestible makes them too ill for the Festival, Footloose in Lucerne, or taking a pub in in Stratford or Glasgow, or maudlin in Dublin, in-
2. Ocean liner.

4. Reference to the opera Orphee aux Enfers, by
3. A chain of islands between the Lagoon of Venthe French composer Jacques Offenbach (1819—ice and the Adriatic Sea. Rapido: Italian term for 1880).

an express passenger boat in Venice.

T H E L I F E G U A R D / 1 6 6 1

15 sensitive, garrulous, querulous, audible,
Drunk in the Dolomites, tuning a portable,
Homesick in Stockholm, or dressed to toboggan
At the wrong time of year in too dear0 Copenhagen, expensive
Generally being too genial or hostile—
20 Too grand at the Grand, too old at the Hostel—
Humdrum conundrums, what's to become of them?
Most will come home, but there will be some of them
Subsiding like Lawrence in Florence,5 or crazily Ending up tending shop up in Fiesole.6

1 9 7 6

J A M E S D I C K E Y

1923-1997

The Lifeguard

In a stable of boats I lie still,
From all sleeping children hidden.
The leap of a fish from its shadow

Makes the whole lake instantly tremble.

5 With my foot on the water, I feel
The moon outside
Take on the utmost of its power.
I rise and go out through the boats.
I set my broad sole upon silver,
10 On the skin of the sky, on the moonlight,
Stepping outward from earth onto water
In quest of the miracle
This village of children believed
That I could perform as I dived
15 For one who had sunk from my sight.
I saw his cropped haircut go under.
I leapt, and my steep body flashed
Once, in the sun.
Dark drew all the light from my eyes.
20 Like a man who explores his death
5. The English writer D. H. Lawrence (1885— 6. Town in Italy, near Florence.

1930; see pp. 1284—95) lived in Italy several times.

1 6 6 2 / J A M E S D I C K E Y

By the pull of his slow-moving shoulders,
I hung head down in the cold,
Wide-eyed, contained, and alone
Among the weeds,
25 And my fingertips turned into stone
From clutching immovable blackness.
Time after time I leapt upward
Exploding in breath, and fell back

From the change in the children's faces
30 At my defeat.
Beneath them I swam to the boathouse
With only my life in my arms
To wait for the lake to shine back
At the risen moon with such power
35 That my steps on the light of the ripples
Might be sustained.
Beneath me is nothing but brightness
Like the ghost of a snowfield in summer.
As I move toward the center of the lake,
40 Which is also the center of the moon,
I am thinking of how I may be
The savior of one
Who has already died in my care.
The dark trees fade from around me.
45 The moon's dust hovers together.
I call softly out, and the child's Voice answers through blinding water.
Patiently, slowly,
He rises, dilating to break
50 The surface of stone with his forehead.
He is one I do not remember
Having ever seen in his life.
The ground I stand on is trembling
Upon his smile.
55 I wash the black mud from my hands.
On a light given off by the grave

I kneel in the quick of the moon
At the heart of a distant forest
And hold in my arms a child
60 Of water, water, water.

1 9 6 2

B U C K D A N C E R ' S C H O I C E / 1 6 6 3

Buckdancer's1 Choice

So I would hear out those lungs,
The air split into nine levels,
Some gift of tongues of the whistler
In the invalid's bed: my mother,
5 Warbling all day to herself
The thousand variations of one song;
It is called Buckdancer's Choice.
For years, they have all been dying
Out, the classic buck-and-wing men
10 Of traveling minstrel shows;
With them also an old woman
Was dying of breathless angina,
Yet still found breath enough
To whistle up in my head 15 A sight like a one-man band,
Freed black, with cymbals at heel,
An ex-slave who thrivingly danced
To the ring of his own clashing light
Through the thousand variations of one song
20 All day to my mother's prone music,
The invalid's warbler's note,

While I crept close to the wall
Sock-footed, to hear the sounds alter,
Her tongue like a mockingbird's break
25 Through stratum after stratum of a tone
Proclaiming what choices there are
For the last dancers of their kind,
For ill women and for all slaves
Of death, and children enchanted at walls
so With a brass-beating glow underfoot,
Not dancing but nearly risen
Through barnlike, theaterlike houses
On the wings of the buck and wing.

1 9 6 5

1. Performer of the buck-and-wing, a solo tap dance invented by black entertainers.

1 6 6 4 / J A M E S D I C K E Y

Sled Burial, Dream Ceremony

W h i l e t h e s o u t h r a i n s , t h e n o r t h

I s s n o w i n g , a n d t h e d e a d s o u t h e r n e r

I s t a k e n t h e r e . H e l i e s w i t h t h e t o p o f h i s c a s k e t O p e n , h i s h a i r c o m b e d , t h e p a r t i c l e s i n t h e a i r 5 C h a n g i n g t o o t h e r t h i n g s . T h e t r a i n s t o p s I n a s m a l l f u r r y v i l l a g e , a n d m e n i n f l a p - e a r e d c a p s A n d o t h e r s w i t h w o m e n ' s s c a r v e s t i e d a r o u n d t h e i r h e a d s A n d b u s i n e s s h a t s o v e r t h o s e , u n l o a d h i m , A n d o n e o f t h e m r e a c h e s i n s i d e t h e c o f f i n a n d p l a c e s i o T h e s o u t h e r n e r ' s h a n d a t t h e c e n t e r

O f h i s d e a d b r e a s t . T h e y l o a d h i m o n t o a s l e d , A n o l d - f a s h i o n e d s l e d w i t h h i g h - c u r l e d r u n n e r s , D r a w n b y h o r s e s w i t h b e l l s , a n d b e g i n

To walk out of town, past dull red barns

15 Inching closer to the road as its snows
Harder, past an army of gunny-sacked bushes, Past horses with flakes in the hollows of their way-backs, Past round faces drawn by children

On kitchen windows, all shedding basic-shaped tears.

20 The coffin top still is wide open;

His dead eyes stare through his lids,

Not fooled that the snow is cotton. The woods fall slowly off all of them, until they are walking between rigid little houses of ice-fishers
25 On a plain which is a great plain of water

Until the last rabbit track fails, and they are at the center. They take axes, shovels, mattocks, dig the snow away, and saw the ice in the form of his coffin, lifting the slab like a door
30 Without hinges. The snow creaks under the sled as they unload him like hay, holding his weight by ropes.

Sensing an unwanted freedom, a fish

Slides by, under the hole leading up through the snow to nothing, and is gone. The coffin
's shadow
35 Is white, and they stand there, gunny-sacked bushes, summoned from villagesleep into someone else's dream
Of death, and let him down, still seeing the flakes in the air At the place they are born of pure shadow Like his dead eyelids, rocking for a moment like a boat 40 On utter foreignness,
before he fills and sails down.

1965

1665

PETER KANE D U F A U L T

b. 1923

A Letter for All-Hallows¹ (1949)

I am still hurt, Plin,
by your desertion. Now and again, between rains, or among sagged syllables on a page, 5 I am stopped suddenly by your grinning lantern-jawed, monkey-eared beautiful
face —

and I am hurt because you went to war and died right in the middle of your letters and never said goodbye.

io And then your father followed you,
at a respectful distance,

and the high house on the hill went for a Trappist monkery.² ... I hope those em
onks have veneration for the juniper

15 and the blackberries and the frog pond a nd the dust of toy-soldiers in the attic whe re we warred long November afternoons.

—

Above all, for the black road that, if I listen on All-Souls' Eve, I will clatter² 0 to the gait of your riding home from the whitewoodson Diamond, your ho rse.

The glue is long since dry
they made of him. Yet we mark well:
He was the last of the historic horses.

25 Revererodehim, and Sheridan, and Sitting Bull. 4 ...

I hope those monks treat you gently, shade sgallopingsidetheemptyingmeadow ws, from Concord and Lexington,

30 from the fords of the Shenandoah, theforksoftheLittleBighorn. 5

Surely they would not be unmerciful and frighten away with signs and bells and torches 1. Or All Saints' Day, a church festival celebrated 1818), American patriot famous for a horseback

November 1 in honor of all saints.

ride on the evening of April 18, 1775, in which he

2. The Trappist monks are members of a branch warned Massachusetts colonists of the arrival of
of the austere Cistercian order.

British troops. Philip Henry Sheridan (1831-

3. Evening of November 1, before All Souls' Day 1888), Union general in the American Civil War.

(a day of prayer for all the dead).

5. Scenes of the battles associated with Revere,

4. Native American warrior, victor at the Battle of Sheridan, and Sitting Bull.

the Little Big Horn (1876). Paul Revere (1735—

1666 / PETER KANE DUFAULT

so young an old-soldier and his friend

35 who, one way or another, were made ghosts

in all their country's wars.

1949 1978

A First Night

It's the first night, I suppose,
in more than eighty year
Hattie has slept alone... .
And outdoors, in the falling 5 snow, without bedclothes or night light and none near but the deaf sunken stone were one to awake calling.
What could old Hattie have done
io wrong, anyway?—Made raw-milk cheese, rubbed eggs, admired her rose-red Christmas cactus, and rocked, looking out at one more mid-February thaw, 15 drifts melting and dungwagon mired—
that now like a reprimand
she might have heard sixty-eight or seventy years ago,
(such as “Hattie thinks she is clever,
20 but will go to bed with boxed ears and no supper”) she is told: “Tonight you'll sleep with shoes on in the snow in the cemetery and never never wake up in a million years.”

1 9 7 8

Burden

I called you because I could not stand alone

looking north to that skyline-tree globed with its yellow apples balancing like a fountain of planets
5 in the bright light and the blue air.
And because on the way there
I looked at a smooth cirque⁰ circle
the brook had worn in a stone;
A H I L L / 1 6 6 7
and nothing as soft as water 10 could, by taking care, have so pestled⁰ and polished pounded that granite mortar; only by a thousand years of indifference, of aiming elsewhere.
is I wish we might do—or no,
look back and find we had done—
some un-advertized thing, overwhelming and un-self-aware as water streamlining a stone, or a tree's 20 kindling in an empty meadow its casual Hesperides.⁶

1 9 7 6 1 9 7 8

A N T H O N Y H E C H T

1923-2004

A Hill

In Italy, where this sort of thing can occur,
I had a vision once—though you understand
It was nothing at all like Dante's,¹ or the visions of saints,

And perhaps not a vision at all. I was with some friends,
5 Picking my way through a warm sunlit piazza
In the early morning. A clear fretwork of shadows
From huge umbrellas littered the pavement and made
A sort of lucent shallows in which was moored
A small navy of carts. Books, coins, old maps, io Cheap landscapes and ugly religious prints
Were all on sale. The colors and noise
Like the flying hands were gestures of exultation,
So that even the bargaining
Rose to the ear like a voluble godliness.
15 And then, when it happened, the noises suddenly stopped,
And it got darker; pushcarts and people dissolved
And even the great Farnese Palace² itself
Was gone, for all its marble; in its place
Was a hill, mole-colored and bare. It was very cold, 20 Close to freezing, with a promise of snow.
The trees were like old ironwork gathered for scrap Outside a factory wall. There was no wind,
And the only sound for a while was the little click
Of ice as it broke in the mud under my feet.
25 I saw a piece of ribbon snagged on a hedge,
6. In Greek mythology, a garden where golden 1. As in the Italian poet's Divine Comedy.
apples were grown. 2. Palace in Rome.

1 6 6 8 / A N T H O N Y H E C H T

But no other sign of life. And then I heard
What seemed the crack of a rifle. A hunter, I guessed;

At least I was not alone. But just after that Came the soft and papery crash
30 Of a great branch somewhere unseen falling to earth.
And that was all, except for the cold and silence
That promised to last forever, like the hill.
Then prices came through, and fingers, and I was restored
To the sunlight and my friends. But for more than a week 35 I was scared by the plain bitterness of what I had seen.
All this happened about ten years ago,
And it hasn't troubled me since, but at last, today,
I remembered that hill; it lies just to the left
Of the road north of Poughkeepsie;³ and as a boy
40 I stood before it for hours in wintertime.

1 9 6 7

The Dover Bitch

A Criticism of Life

F O R A N D R E W S W A N N I N G

So there stood Matthew Arnold⁴ and this girl
With the cliffs of England crumbling away behind them,
And he said to her, "Try to be true to me,
And I'll do the same for you, for things are bad
5 All over, etc., etc."⁵

Well now, I knew this girl. It's true she had read Sophocles in a fairly good translation
And caught that bitter allusion to the sea,⁶
But all the time he was talking she had in mind
io The notion of what his whiskers would feel like
On the back of her neck. She told me later on

That after a while she got to looking out
At the lights across the channel, and really felt sad,
Thinking of all the wine and enormous beds
15 And blandishments in French and the perfumes.
And then she got really angry. To have been brought
All the way down from London, and then be addressed
As a sort of mournful cosmic last resort
Is really tough on a girl, and she was pretty.
20 Anyway, she watched him pace the room
And finger his watch-chain and seem to sweat a bit,
And then she said one or two unprintable things.

3. Town in upstate New York.

5. Cf. "Dover Reach," lines 29-37: "Ah, love, let

4. English poet (1822-1888; see pp. 1087-1101), us be true / To one another! ... "

whose most famous poem, "Dover Reach"

6. Cf. "Dover Reach," lines 15—18 and note 9

(p. 1101), is set on the southern coast of England.
there.

THE GHOST IN THE MARTINI / 1669

B u t y o u m u s t n ' t j u d g e h e r b y t h a t . W h a t I m e a n t o s a y i s , S h e ' s r e a l l y a l l r i g h t . I s t i l l s e e h e r o n c e i n a w h i l e 2 5 A n d s h e a l w a y s t r e a t s m e r i g h t . W e h a v e a d r i n k A n d I g i v e h e r a g o o d t i m e , a n d p e r h a p s i t ' s a y e a r B e f o r e I s e e h e r a g a i n , b u t t h e r e s h e i s ,

R u n n i n g t o f a t , b u t d e p e n d a b l e a s t h e y c o
m e .

A n d s o m e t i m e s I b r i n g h e r a b o t t l e o f Nuit d'Amour. 7

1968

The Ghost in the Martini⁸

Over the rim of the glass

Containing a good martini with a twist

I eye her bosom and consider a pass,

Certain we 'd not be missed

5 In the general hubbub.

Her lips, which I forgot to say, are superb,

Never stop babbling once (Aye, there 's the erub)⁹

But who would want to curb

Such delicious, artful flattery?

io It seems she adores my work, the distinguished grey Of my hair. I muse on the salt and battery¹

Of the sexual clinch, and say

Something terse and gruff

About the marked disparity in our ages.

15 She looks like twenty-three, though he age enough.

As for the famous wages

Of sin, 2 she can 't have attained

Event on unions scale, though you never can tell.

Her waist is slender and suggestively chained,²⁰ And things are going well.

The martin does its job,

God bless it, seeping down to the dark old id

.

(“Is there no cradle, Sir, you would not rob?”

S a y s e g o , b u t t h e l i d

25 I s o f f . T h e w o r d i s S t r i k e

W h i l e t h e i r o n ' s h o t .) A n d n o w , i n g e n u o u s a n d g a y , S h e i s a s k i n g m e a b o u t w h a t I w a s l i k e

A t t w e n t y . (T w e n t y , e h ?)

7. Night of love (French).

a quite different double bind of the speaker, Prince

8. Alludes to the expression the ghost in the Hamlet, who is considering suicide.

machine, a way of describing the mind/body oppo-

1. A play on assault and battery.
sition.

2. Cf. Romans 6.23: "For the wages of sin is

9. Cf. Hamlet 3.1.64, where the phrase refers to death."

1 6 7 0 / A N T H O N Y H E C H T

You wouldn't have liked me then,

30 I answer, looking carefully into her eyes.

I was shy, withdrawn, awkward, one of those men

That girls seemed to despise,

Moody and self-obsessed,

Unhappy, defiant, with guilty dreams galore,

35 Full of ill-natured pride, an unconfessed

Snob and a thorough bore.

Her smile is meant to convey

How changed or modest I am, I can't tell which,

When I suddenly hear someone close to me say,

40 "You lousy son-of-a-bitch!"

A young man's voice, by the sound,
 Coming, it seems, from the twist in the martini.
 "You arrogant, elderly leech, you broken-down
 Brother of Apeneck Sweeney!³
 45 Thought I was buried for good
 Under six thick feet of mindless self-regard?
 Dance on my grave, would you, you galliard⁰ stud, lively
 Silenus⁴ in leotard?
 Well, summon me you did,
 50 And I come unwillingly, like Samuel's ghost.⁵
All things shall he revealed that have been hid. ⁶
There's something for you to toast!
 You only got where you are
 By standing upon my ectoplasmic⁰ shoulders, ghostly
 55 And wherever that is may not be so high or far
 In the eyes of some beholders.
 Take, for example, me.
 I have sat alone in the dark, accomplishing little,
 And worth no more to myself, in pride and fee,
 60 Than a cup of luke-warm spittle.
 But honest about it, withal ..."
 ("Withal," forsooth!) "Please not to interrupt.
 And the lovelies went by, 'the long and the short and the tall,'⁷
 Hankered for, but untapped.⁸
 3. Cf. T. S. Eliot, "Sweeney Among the Nightinfound his prayers for guidance unanswered, and so gales": "Apeneck Sweeney spreads his knees / consulted a medium to raise the unwilling Samuel

Letting his arms hang down to laugh.”

from the dead (1 Samuel 28).

4. In Greek mythology, foster father and compan-

6. A rewriting of a recurrent theme in the Gospels, ion of the wine god, Dionysus; of human form,
as in Luke 12.2 or Matthew 10.26.

with a horse’s ears and tail. Generally old, bald, and

7. As in the 1940 popular song by Jimmy Hughes bearded. A famous legend relates that Midas made and Frank Lake, “Bless Em All.”

Silenus drunk to learn his secrets.

8. Not copulated with (as a ewe is tugged by a

5. Saul, fearful of the army of the Philistines, ram).

S T I L L L I F E / 1 6 7 1

65 Bloody monastic it was.

A neurotic mixture of self-denial and fear;

The verse halting, the cataleptic pause,

No sensible pain, no tear,

But an interior drip

70 As from an ulcer, where, in the humid deep

Center of myself, I would scratch and grip

The wet walls of the keep,

Or lie on my back and smell

From the corners the sharp, ammoniac, urine stink.

75 ‘No light, hut rather darkness visible. ‘9

And plenty of time to think.

In that thick, fetid air

I talked to myself in giddy recitative:
7 have been studying how I may compare
so This prison where I live Unto the world ... 1 I learned
Little, and was awarded no degrees.
Yet all that sunken hideousness earned
Your negligence and ease.
85 Nor was it wholly sick,
Having procured you a certain modest fame;
A devotion, rather, a grim device to stick
To something I could not name.”
Meanwhile, she babbles on 90 About men, or whatever, and the juniper juice
Shuts up at last, having sung, I trust, like a swan.²
Still given to self-abuse!
Better get out of here;
If he opens his trap again it could get much worse.
95 I touch her elbow, and, leaning toward her ear,
Tell her to find her purse.

1 9 7 7

Still Life

Sleep-walking vapor, like a visitant ghost,
Hovers above a lake
Of T e n n y s o ^ a ^ calm just before dawn.

9. Cf. Milton, Paradise Lost 1.61-63, where Satan prison).

views hell: “A Dungeon horrible, on all sides round

2. A swan is said to sing before it dies. Juniper

/ As one great Furnace flam'd, yet from those juice is an ingredient used in flavoring gin.

flames / No light, but rather darkness visible.”

3. As in the work of the English poet Alfred, Lord

1. Cf. Shakespeare, Richard II 5.5.1 ff. (the Tennyson (1809-1892; see pp. 982-1009).

poetic, self-absorbed King Richard's soliloquy in

1 6 7 2 / A N T H O N Y H E C H T

Inverted trees and boulders waver and coast

5 In polished darkness. Glints of silver break

Among the liquid leafage, and then are gone.

Everything's doused and diamonded with wet.

A cobweb, woven taut

On bending stanchion⁰ frames of tentpole grass, upright prop

10 Sags like a trampoline or firemen's net

With all the glitter and riches it has caught,

Each drop a paperweight of Steuben glass.⁴

No birdsong yet, no cricket, nor does the trout

Explode in water-scrolls

15 For a skimming fly. All that is yet to come.

Things are as still and motionless throughout

The universe as ancient Chinese bowls,

And nature is magnificently dumb.

Why does this so much stir me, like a code

20 Or muffled intimation

Of purposes and preordained events?

It knows me, and I recognize its mode

Of cautionary, spring-tight hesitation,

This silence so impacted and intense.
25 As in a water-surface I behold
The first, soft, peach decree
Of light, its pale, inaudible commands.
I stand beneath a pine-tree in the cold,
Just before dawn, somewhere in Germany,
30 A cold, wet, Garand rifle in my hands.

1 9 7 9

The Book of Yolek

Wir haben ein Gesetz,

Und nach dem Gesetz soll er sterben

The dowsed coals fume and hiss after your meal
Of grilled brook trout, and you saunter off for a walk Down the fern trail, it doesn't matter where to,
Just so you're weeks and worlds away from home,
And among midsummer hills have set up camp
In the deep bronze glories of declining day.

4. Brand of handmade, heavy lead crystal.

Walk," by the Polish poet Hannah Mortkowicz-

5. From the German translation of John 19.7

Olczakowa (1905-1968)—in Jacob Glatstein and ("We have a law, and by that law he ought to die")

Israel Knox, eds., Anthology of Holocaust Literature

by the theologian Martin Luther (1483-1546),

(1973), 134—37—which recounts a historical leader in Germany of the Protestant Reformation.

event in Germany.

Hecht's poem is inspired by "Yanosz Korezak's Last

DEATH THE PAINTER / 1673

You remember, peacefully, an earlier day
In childhood, remember a quite specific meal:
A corn roast and bonfire in summer camp.
10 That summer you got lost on a Nature Walk
; More than you dared admit, you thought of home;
No one else knows where the mind wanders to.

The fifth of August, 1942.

It was morning and very hot. It was the day 15
They came at dawn with rifles to The Home For Jewish Children, cutting short the meal of bread and soup, lining them up to walk
In close formation off to a special camp.

How often you have thought about that camp
, 20 As though in some strange way you were riveto, And about the children, and how they were made to walk, Yolek who had bad lungs, who wasn't a day

Over five years old, commanded to leave his meal and shamble between armed guards to his long home.

25 We're approaching August again. It will drive home the regulation torments of that camp

Yolek was sent to, his small, unfinished meal,
The electric fences, the numeral tattoo,

The quite extraordinary heat of the day

30 They all were forced to take that terrible walk.

Whether on a silent, solitary walk

Or among crowds, far off for safe at home,

You will remember, helplessly, that day,

And the smell of smoke, and the loud speaker of the camp.

35 Wherever you are, Yolek will be there, to o.

His unuttered name will interrupt your meal
.

Prepare to receive him in your home some da y.

Though they killed him in the camp they sent him to, He will walk in as you're sitting down to a meal.

1990

Death the Painter⁶

Snub-nosed, bone-fingered, deft with engr aving tools, I have alone been given

The powers of Joshua, who stayed the sun

In its traverse of heaven.⁷

6. From The Presumptions of Death, a series of

7. Cf. Joshua 10.12-13; when Joshua asked the twenty-two poems written from the perspective of sun and the moon to stand still, "the sun stood still,

Death, to accompany woodcuts by the American and the moon stayed, until the people had avenged artist Leonard Baskin (1922-2000).

themselves upon their enemies."

1674 / R I C H A R D WilbUr

5 Here in this Gotham 8 of unnumbered fools
I have sought out and arrested everyone.

Under my watchful eye all human creatures

Convert to a still life,

As with unique precision I apply
10 White lead and palette knife.
A model student of remodelled features,
The final barber, the last beautician, I.
You lordlings, what is Man, his blood and vit als, 9

When all is said and done?

15 A poor forked animal, I amest of flies.

Tellus, what is this one

Once a horn of all his dignities and titles, Di vested of his testicles and eyes?

1995

RICHARD HUGO

1923-1982

The Way a Ghost Dissolves

Where she lived the closer remained the best.

The nearest music and the static cloud,
sun and dirt were all she understood.

She planted corn and left the rest

5 to elements, convinced that God

with giant faucets regulates the rain and saves the crops from frost or foreign win

d.

Fate assisted her with special cures.

Rub a half potato on your wart

io and wrap it in a damp cloth. Close you eyes and whirl three times and throw.

Then bury rag and spud exactly where they fall. The only warts that I have now

a r e m e m o r i e s o r c o m i c o n m y n o s e .

8. Proverbial town (in England) known for its foolters Edgar, disguised in rags as a madman, ish inhabitants.

laments, “Is man no more than this?” and says,

9. Cf. Psalm 8.4: “What is man, that thou art “unaccommodated man is no more but such a mindful of him?”

poor, bare, fork’d animal as thou art.”

1. Cf. King Lear 3.4.101 ff., where Lear encoun-

THE LADY IN KICKING HORSE RESERVOI
R / 1 6 7 5

1 5 U p a t d a w n . T h e e a r t h p r o v i d e d f o o d i f w o r k e d a n d w a t e r e d , p l a n t e d g r e e n w i t h r y e g r a s s e v e r y f a l l . O r d r i v e n w i l d b y s n a k e s t h a t k e p t t h e c a r r o t s c l e a n , s h e b u t c h e r e d s n a k e s a n d c a r r o t s w i t h a h o e .

2 0 H e r s c r e a m s w e r e s e a b i r d s i n t h e w i n d , h e r c h o p p i n g — n o t h i n g l i k e i t n o w .

I w i l l g a r d e n o n t h e d o u b l e r u n , m y r h y t h m o b v i o u s i n r i n g i n g r a k e s , a n d t r u s t i n f a t e t o k e e p m e p o o r a n d k i n d

2 5 a n d w o r k u n t i l m y h e a r t i s s h o r t , t h e n g o o u t s l o w l y w i t h a f e e b l e g r i n , m y f i n g e r s f l e x i n g b u t m y e y e s g o n e g r a y
f r o m c r a m p s a n d t h e l a c k o f o x y g e n .

F o r g e t t h e t o n e . C a l l t h e n e i g h b o r ‘ s t r u m p e t 3 0 g o l d e n a s i t g r a t e s . E x a l t t h e w e e d s .

S a y t h e l o c a l a n i m a l s h a v e c l a s s

or help me say that ghost has gone to seed.
And why attempt to see the cloud again—
the screaming face it was before it cracked 3 5 in wind from Asia and a want on rain.

1961

The Lady in Kicking Horse Reservoir 1

Not my hands but green across you now.
Green tons hold you down, and ten bass curve teasing in your hair. Summer slime will pile deep on your breast. Four months of ice 5 will keep you firm. I hope each spring to find you tangled in those pads pulled not quite loose by the spillway pour, s tars in dead reflection of your teeth.
Lie there lily still. The spillway 's closed, i o Two feet down most lakes are common gray

This lake is dark from the black blue Mission range climbing sky like music dying Indian sonce wailed.

On ocean beaches, mystery fish are offered to the moon. Your jaw s g blue.
15 Your hands start waving every wind.
Wave to the ocean where we crushed a mile of foam.

1. Both Kicking Horse Reservoir and the Mission mountain range (line 11) are on the Flathead Indian Reservation, in Montana.

1676 / R I C H A R D WilbUr

We still love there in thundering foam and love. Whales fall in love with gulls and tide reclaims the Dolly skeletons²

20

gone with a blast of aching horns to China.

Landlocked in Montana here

the end is limited by light, the final note will trail off at the farthest point we see,

already faded, lover, where you bloat.

25

All girls should be nicer. Arrows rain above us in the Indian wind. My future should be full of windy gems, my past will stop this roaring in my dreams.

Sorry. Sorry. Sorry. But the arrows sing:

30

no way to float her up. The dead sink from dead weight. The Mission range turns this water black late afternoons.

One boy slapped the other. Hard.

The slapped boy talked until his dignity

35 dissolved, screamed a single "stop"

and went down sobbing in the company pond.

I swam for him all night. My only suit got wet and factory hands went home.

No one cared the coward disappeared.

40

Morning then: cold music I had never heard.

Loners like work best on second shift.

No one liked our product and the factory closed.

Off south, the bison multiply so fast
a slaughter's mandatory every spring

45 and every spring the creeks get fat and Kicking Horse fills up. My hope is vague.

The far blur of your bones in May may be nourished by the snow.

The spillway's open and you spill out

50

into weather, lover down the bright canal and mother, irrigating crops dead Indians forgot to plant.

I'm sailing west with arrows to dissolving foam
where waves strand naked Dollys.

Their eyes are white as oriental mountains and their tongues are teasing oil from whales.

1 9 7 3

2. Specifically, here, skeletons of the Dolly Varden trout (but see also line 54).

D E N I S E L E V E R T O V

1923-1997

Scenes from the Life of the Peppertrees

I

The peppertrees, the peppertrees!

Cats are stretching in the doorways, sure of everything. It is morning.

But the peppertrees

stand aside in diffidence, with berries of modest red.

Branch above branch, an air of lightness; of shadows scattered lightly.

A cat
closes upon its shadow.

Up and up goes the sun,
sure of everything.

The peppertrees shiver a little.

Robust
and soot-black, the cat leaps to a low branch. Leaves close about him.

2

The yellow moon dreamily
tipping buttons of light down among the leaves. Marimba, marimba—from beyond the black street.

Somebody dancing,
somebody
getting the hell outta here. Shadows of cats weave round the tree trunks,
the exposed knotty roots.

3

The man on the bed sleeping defenseless. Look—his bare long feet together sideways, keeping each other warm. And the foreshortened shoulders, the head barely visible. He is good.

1 6 7 8 / D E N I S E L E V E R T O V

let him sleep.

But the third peppertree

40 is restless, twitching thin leaves in the light of afternoon. After a while it walks over and taps

on the upstairs window with a bunch of red berries. Will he wake?

45

1 9 5 8

Triple Feature

Innocent decision: to enjoy.

And the pathos

of hopefulness, of his solicitude:

—he in mended serape,

5 she having plaited carefully

magenta ribbons into her hair,

the baby a round half-hidden shape

slung in her rebozo,⁰ and the young son steadfastly shawl

gripping a fold of her skirt, io pale and severe under a handed-down sombrero—all regarding the stills with full attention, preparing to pay and go in—15 to worlds of shadow-violence, half-familiar, warm with popcorn, icy with strange motives, barbarous splendors!

1 9 5 9

O Taste and See

The world is not with us enough.¹

O taste and see

the subway Bible poster said,

5 meaning The Lord,² meaning

if anything all that lives

to the imagination's tongue,

1. Cf. William Wordsworth's sonnet "The World

2. "O taste and see that the Lord is good" (Psalms

Is Too M u c h with Us" (p. 802).

34.8).

T E N E B R A E / 1 6 7 9

grief, mercy, language,

tangerine, weather, to 10 breathe them, bite,

savor, chew, swallow, transform into our flesh our

deaths, crossing the street, plum, quince, living in the orchard and being 15 hungry, and plucking
the fruit.

1 9 6 4

Tenebrae³

*(Fall of 1967)*⁴

Heavy, heavy, heavy, hand and heart.

We are at war,

bitterly, bitterly at war.

And the buying and selling

5 buzzes at our heads, a swarm of busy flies, a kind of innocence.

Gowns of gold sequins are fitted,
sharp-glinting. What harsh rustlings of silver moire⁰ there are, -watered silk
io to remind me of shrapnel splinters.

And weddings are held in full solemnity not of desire but of etiquette,
the nuptial pomp of starched lace;
a grim innocence.

15 And picnic parties return from the beaches burning with stored sun in the dusk;
children promised a TV show when they get home
fall asleep in the backs of a million station wagons, sand in their hair, the sound of waves 20 quietly persistent at their ears.

They are not listening.

Their parents at night
dream and forget their dreams.

They wake in the dark

25 and make plans. Their sequin plans

3. Darkness (Latin); church service observed dur- 4. Time of a march on the Pentagon to protest the ing the final part of Holy Week to commemorate continuing presence of American troops in Viet-the sufferings and death of Christ. nam.

1 6 8 0 / D E N I S E L E V E R T O V

glitter into tomorrow.

They buy, they sell.

They fill freezers with food.

Neon signs flash their intentions

30 into the years ahead.

And at their ears the sound of the war. They are not listening, not listening.

1 9 7 2

Caedmon5

All others talked as if

talk were a dance.

Clodhopper I, with clumsy feet

would break the gliding ring.

5 Early I learned to hunch myself

close by the door:

then when the talk began

I'd wipe my

io mouth and wend

unnoticed back to the barn
to be with the warm beasts, dumb among body sounds of the simple ones.

15 I'd see by a twist of lit rush⁶ the motes of gold moving from shadow to shadow
slow in the wake 20 of deep untroubled sighs.

The cows munched or stirred or were still. I was at home and lonely, both in good measure. Until 25 the sudden angel affrighted me—light effacing
my feeble beam,
a forest of torches, feathers of flame, sparks upflying:
but the cows as before
were calm, and nothing was burning,

5. The earliest known English Christian poet (fl.
English Church and People, but I first read it as a 658—680), an unlettered cowherd who, the legend child in John Richard Green's History of the goes, received a divine call to praise in verse. (Cf.
English People, 1855" [Levertov's note],

Caedmon's "Hymn," p. 1.) "The story comes, of
6. Rush plants were lit to serve as candlewicks.
course, from the Venerable Bede's History of the

L A M E N T F O R A L E G / 1 6 8 1

30 nothing but I, as that hand of fire touched my lips and scorched my tongue and pulled my voice into the ring of the dance.

1 9 8 7

J O H N O R M O N D

1923-1990

Cathedral Builders

They climbed on sketchy ladders towards God,
With winch and pulley hoisted hewn rock into heaven,
Inhabited sky with hammers, defied gravity,
Deified stone, took up God's house to meet Him,
5 And came down to their suppers and small beer;
Every night slept, lay with their smelly wives,
Quarrelled and cuffed¹ the children, lied,
Spat, sang, were happy or unhappy,
And every day took to the ladders again;
io Impeded the rights of way of another summer's Swallows, grew greyer, shakier, became less inclined
To fix a neighbour's roof of a fine evening,
Saw naves sprout arches, clerestories² soar,
Cursed the loud fancy glaziers⁰ for their luck, glass cutters
15 Somehow escaped the plague, got rheumatism,
Decided it was time to give it up,
To leave the spire to others; stood in the crowd
Well back from the vestments at the consecration,
Envied the fat bishop his warm boots,

20 Cocked up a squint eye and said, "I bloody did that."

1 9 6 9

Lament for a Leg

Near the yew tree under which the hody of Dafydd ap Gwilym³ is hurried in Strata Florida, Cardiganshire, there stands a stone with the following inscription: "The left leg and part of the thigh of Henry Hughes, Cooper, was cut off and interr'd here, June 18, 1756". Later the rest of Henry Hughes set off across the Atlantic in search of better fortune.

1. Struck, especially with the palm of the hand. main sections of churches.

2. Upper stories with their own windows. Naves: 3. Fourteenth-century Welsh poet.

1 6 8 2 / J O H N O R M O N D

A short service, to be sure,
With scarcely half a hymn they held,
Over my lost limb, suitable curtailment.

Out-of-tune notes a crow cawed

5 By the yew tree, and me,
My stump still tourniqued,
Awkward on my new crutch,
Being snatched towards the snack
Of a funeral feast they made.

10 With seldom a dry eye, for laughter,
They jostled me over the ale
I'd cut the casks for, and the mead.

"Catch me falling under a coach",
Every voice jested, save mine,

15 Henry Hughes, cooper. A tasteless caper!

Soon with my only, my best, foot forward
I fled, quiet, to far America:
Where, with my two tried hands, I plied
My trade and, true, in time made good
20 Though grieving for Pontrhydfendigaid.⁴
Sometimes, all at once, in my tall cups,
I'd cry in *hiraeth*⁵ for my remembered thigh
Left by the grand yew in Ystrad Fflur's Bare ground, near the good bard.
25 Strangers, astonished at my high
Beer-flush, would stare, not guessing,
Above the bar-board, that I, of the starry eye,
Had one foot in the grave; thinking me,
No doubt, a drunken dolt in whom a whim
30 Warmed to madness, not knowing a tease
Of a Welsh worm was tickling my distant toes.
"So I bequeath my leg", I'd say and sigh,
Baffling them, "my unexiled part, to Dafydd
The pure poet who, whole, lies near and far 35 From me, still pining for Morfudd's heart",⁶ Giving him, generous to a fault
With what was no more mine to give,
Out of that curt plot, my quarter grave,
Good help, I hope. What will the great God say 40 At Dafydd's wild-kicking-climbing extra leg, Jammed hard in heaven's white doorway
(I'll limp unnimble round the narrow back)
Come the quick trumpet of the Judgement Day?

1 9 7 3

4. Welsh place-name, as is Ystrad Fflur (line 23). very drunk.
5. Longing, nostalgia (Welsh). In my tall cups: 6. The love of Morfudd.

1 1 6 8 3

J A M E S S C H U Y L E R

1923-1991

Freely Espousing

a commingling sky

a semi-tropic night

that cast the blackest shadow of the easily torn, untrembling banana leaf

5 or Quebec! what a horrible city

so Steubenville¹ is better?

the sinking sensation

when someone drowns thinking, "This can't be happening to me!"

the profit of excavating the battlefield where Hannibal whomped the

Romans²

io the sinuous beauty of words like allergy

the tonic resonance of pill when used as in

"she is a pill"

on the other hand I am not going to espouse any short stories
in which lawn mowers clack.

15 No, it is absolutely forbidden for words to echo the act described; or try to. Except very directly

as in bong. And tickle. Oh it is inescapable kiss.

Marriages of the atmosphere

20 are worth celebrating where Tudor City³

catches the sky or the glass side of a building lit up at night in fog

“What is that gold green tetrahedron down the river?”

25 “You are experiencing a new sensation.”

if the touch-me-nots

are not in bloom

neither are the chrysanthemums

the bales of pink cotton candy

30 in the slanting light are ornamental cherry trees.

The greens around them, and the browns, the grays, are the park.

It’s. Hmm. No.

35 Their scallop shell of quiet

is the S.S. United States.

It is not so quiet and they

1. Town in Ohio.

armies, using brilliant military tactics.

2. In 217—216 B.C.E., the Carthaginian general

3. Large apartment complex on the east side of Hannibal crossed the Alps and defeated Roman Manhattan.

1 6 8 4 / D O N A L D J U S T I C E

are a medium-size couple who when they fold each other up 40 well, thrill. That's their story.

1 9 7 9

Shimmer

The pear tree that last year
was heavy laden this year bears little fruit. Was it that wet spring we had?
5 All the pear tree leaves go shimmer, all at once. The August sun blasts down into the coolness from the ocean. The New York Times is on strike. My daily fare! I'll starve! Not quite. On my sill, balls of twine wrapped up in cellophane glitter. The 15 brown, the white, and one
I think you'd call ecru.° beige
The sunlight falls partly in a cup: it has a blue transfer of two boys, a 20 dog and a duck and says,
"Come Away Pompey." I like that cup, half full of sunlight. Today

you could take up the 25 tattered shadows off the grass. Roll them and stow them. And collect the shimmerings in a cup, like the coffee
30 here at my right hand.

1 9 7 4

D O N A L D J U S T I C E

1925-2004

Counting the Mad1

This one was put in a jacket,

This one was sent home,

1. This poem plays on the nursery rhyme that begins “this little pig went to market.”

M E N A T F O R T Y / 1 6 8 5

T h i s o n e w a s g i v e n b r e a d a n d m e a t

B u t w o u l d e a t n o n e ,

5 A n d t h i s o n e c r i e d N o N o N o N o

All day long.

T h i s o n e l o o k e d a t t h e w i n d o w

A s t h o u g h i t w e r e a w a l l ,

T h i s o n e s a w t h i n g s t h a t w e r e n o t t h e r e ,

10 T h i s o n e t h i n g s t h a t w e r e ,

A n d t h i s o n e c r i e d N o N o N o N o

All day long.

T h i s o n e t h o u g h t h i m s e l f a b i r d ,

T h i s o n e a d o g ,

15 A n d t h i s o n e t h o u g h t h i m s e l f a m a n ,
A n o r d i n a r y m a n ,
A n d c r i e d a n d c r i e d N o N o N o N o
A l l d a y l o n g .

1 9 6 0

Men at Forty

M e n a t f o r t y

L e a r n t o c l o s e s o f t l y

T h e d o o r s t o r o o m s t h e y w i l l n o t b e

C o m i n g b a c k t o .

5 A t r e s t o n a s t a i r l a n d i n g ,

T h e y f e e l i t m o v i n g

B e n e a t h t h e m n o w l i k e t h e d e c k o f a s h i p ,

T h o u g h t h e s w e l l i s g e n t l e .

A n d d e e p i n m i r r o r s i o T h e y r e d i s c o v e r

T h e f a c e o f t h e b o y a s h e p r a c t i c e s t y i n g

H i s f a t h e r ' s t i e t h e r e i n s e c r e t ,

A n d t h e f a c e o f t h a t f a t h e r ,

S t i l l w a r m w i t h t h e m y s t e r y o f l a t h e r .

15 T h e y a r e m o r e f a t h e r s t h a n s o n s t h e m s e l v e s n o w .

S o m e t h i n g i s f i l l i n g t h e m , s o m e t h i n g

T h a t i s l i k e t h e t w i l i g h t s o u n d

O f t h e c r i c k e t s , i m m e n s e ,

F i l l i n g t h e w o o d s a t t h e f o o t o f t h e s l o p e

20 B e h i n d t h e i r m o r t g a g e d h o u s e s .

1 9 6 7

1686 / DONALD JUSTICE

Nostalgia of the Lakefronts

Cities burn behind us; the lake glitters.

A tall loudspeaker is announcing prizes;

Another, by the lake, the times of cruises.

Childhood, once vast with terrors and surprises,

5 Is fading to a landscape deep with distance —

And always the sad piano in the distance,

Faintly in the distance, a ghostly tinkling

(O indecipherable blurred harmonies)

Or some far horn repeating over water

10 Its high lost note, cut loose from all harmonies.

At such times, wakeful, a child will dream the world,
And this is the world we run to from the world.

Or the two worlds come together and are one
On dark, sweet afternoons of storm and of rain,

15 And stereopticons brought out and dusted, slide projectors Stacks of old Geographies,² or, through the rain,
A mad wet dash to the local movie palace

And the shriek, perhaps, of Kane's³ white cock atoo.

(Would this have been summer, 1942?)

20 By June the city always seems neurotic.

But lakes are good all summer for reflection,

And ours is famed among painters for its blues,

Yet not entirely sad, upon reflection.

Why sad at all? Is their wish so unique —
25 To anthropomorphize the inanimate
With a love that masquerades as pure technique?
Art and the child were innocent together!
But landscapes grow abstract, like aging parents.
Soon now the war will shutter the grand hotels
, 30 And we, when we come back, will come as parents.
There are no lanterns now strung between pines—
Only, like history, the stark bare northern pines.
And after a time the lake front disappears
Into the stubborn verses of its exiles 35 Or a few gifted sketches of old piers.
It rains perhaps on the other side of the heart;
Then we remember, whether we would or no.
—Nostalgia comes with the smell of rain, you know.

1987

2. Issues of National Geographic. magnate in Orson Welles's 1941 film, Citizen 3. Charles Foster Kane, the fictional newspaper Kane.

PANTOUM OF THE GREAT DEPRESSION /
1687

Pantoum⁴ of the Great Depression

Our lives avoided tragedy
Simply by going on and on,

Without end and with little apparent meaning.

Oh, there were storms and small catastrophes.

5 Simply by going on and on

We managed. No need for the heroic.

Oh, there were storms and small catastrophes.

I don't remember all the particulars.

We managed. No need for the heroic.

10 There were the usual celebrations, the usual sorrows.

I don't remember all the particulars.

Across the fence, the neighbors were our chorus.

There were the usual celebrations, the usual sorrows
Thank god no one said anything in verse.

15 The neighbors were our only chorus,

And if we suffered we kept quiet about it.

At no time did anyone say anything in verse.

It was the ordinary pities and fears consumed us,
pnp And if we suffered we kept quiet about it.

20 No audience would ever know our story.

It was the ordinary pities and fears consumed us.

We gathered on porches; the moon rose; we were poor.

What audience would ever know our story?

Beyond our windows shone the actual world.

25 We gathered on porches; the moon rose; we were poor.

A n d t i m e w e n t b y, d r a w n b y s l o w h o r s e s .
S o m e w h e r e b e y o n d o u r w i n d o w s s h o n e t h e w o r l d .

T h e G r e a t D e p r e s s i o n h a d e n t e r e d o u r s o u l s
l i k e f o g .

A n d t i m e w e n t b y, d r a w n b y s l o w h o r s e s .

3 0 W e d i d n o t o u r s e l v e s k n o w w h a t t h e e n d w a s .

T h e G r e a t D e p r e s s i o n h a d e n t e r e d o u r s o u l s
l i k e f o g .

W e h a d o u r f l a w s, p e r h a p s a f e w p r i v a t e v i r t u e s .

B u t w e d i d n o t o u r s e l v e s k n o w w h a t t h e e n d w a s .

P e o p l e l i k e u s s i m p l y g o o n .

3 5 W e h a v e o u r f l a w s, p e r h a p s a f e w p r i v a t e v i r t u e s ,

B u t i t i s b y b l i n d c h a n c e o n l y t h a t w e e s c a p e t r a g e d y .

A n d t h e r e i s n o p l o t i n t h a t; i t i s d e v o i d o f p o e t r y .

1 9 9 5

4. Verse form in which alternating lines repeat in the following stanza (see "Versification," p. 2046).

1 6 8 8 / C A R O L Y N K I Z E R

C A R O L Y N K I Z E R

b. 1925

The Erotic Philosophers

Part Five of "Pro Femina" I

I t ' s a s p r i n g m o r n i n g ; s u n p o u r s i n t h e w i n d o w

A s I s i t h e r e d r i n k i n g c o f f e e , r e a d i n g A u g u s t i n e . 2

A n d f i n d i n g h i m , a s a l w a y s, n e w l y m i n t e d

From when I first encountered him in school.

5 Today I'm overcome with astonishment
At the way we girls denied all that was meant
In those revered philosophers we studied;
Who found us loathsome, loathsome lyse ductive; Irrelevant, at best, to noble discourse
io Among the sex, the only sex that counted.

Wounded, we pretended not to mind it
And wore tight sweaters to tease our shy professor.

We sat in autumn sunshine "as the clouds arose From slimy desires of the flesh, and from 15 Youth's seething spring." Thank you, Augustine.

Attempting to seem blase, our cheeks on fire
It didn't occur to us to rush from the room.

Instead we brushed aside "the briars of unclean
n desire"

And struggled on through mires of misogyny ny 20 Till we arrived at Kierkegaard,³ and began to see

That though Saint A. and Soren had much in n common Including fear and trembling before o women, The Saints scared himself, while e Soren was scared of us.

Had we, poor girls, been flattered by their thralldom?

25 Yes, it was always us, the rejected feminine
From whom temptation came. It was our flesh
e sh With its deadly sweetness that led them on.

Yet how could we not treasure Augustine,

“Stuck fast in the bird-lime of pleasure”?

30 That roomful of adolescent poets manque 0 unsuccessful Assuaged, bemused by music, let the meaning go.

Swept by those psalmic cadences, we were seduced!

Some of us tried for a while to be well-trained souls And pious seekers, enmeshed in the Saint’s dialectic: 35 Responsible for our actions, yet utterly helpless.

A sensible girl would have barked like a dog before God.

1. A five-part poem, dealing variously with the he sets out two ways of life, the ethical and the lives of women, written over several decades.

aesthetic. In the aesthetic, the lowest and most

2. St. Augustine (354-430), author of works such purely sensory figure is the legendary libertine Don as the Confessions.

Juan, also known as Don Giovanni in the opera by

3. Soren Kierkegaard (1813 - 1855), Danish phi-the Austrian composer Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart losopher. His works include Fear and Trembling (1756—1791) discussed later in Kizer’s poem.

and Either/Or (both 1843), in the latter of which

THE EROTIC PHILOSOPHERS / 1689

We students, children still, were shocked to learn

The children these men desired were younger than we!

Augustine fancied a girl about eleven,

40 The age of Adeodatus, Augustine’s son.

Soren, like Poe,⁴ eyed his girl before she was sixteen,
To impose his will on a malleable child, when
She was not equipped to withstand or understand him.
Ah, the Pygmalion⁵ instinct! Mold the clay!
45 Create the compliant doll that can only obey,
Expecting to be abandoned, minute by minute.
It was then I abandoned philosophy,
A minor loss, although I majored in it.
But we were a group of sunny innocents.
50 I don't believe we knew what evil meant.
Now I live with a well-trained soul who deals with evil,
Including error, material or spiritual,
Easily, like changing a lock on the kitchen door.
He prays at set times and in chosen places
55 (At meals, in church), while I Pray without thinking how or when to pray,
In a low mumble, several times a day,
Like running a continuous low fever;
The sexual impulse for the most part being over.
60 Believing I believe. Not banking on it ever.
It's afternoon. I sit here drinking kir^o cocktail
And reading Kierkegaard: "All sin begins with fear."
(True. We lie first from terror of our parents.)
In, I believe, an oblique crack at Augustine,
65 Soren said by denying the erotic
It was brought to the attention of the world.
The rainbow curtain rises on the sensual:
Christians must admit it before they can deny it.

He reflected on his father's fierce repression
70 Of the sexual, which had bent him out of shape;
Yet he had to pay obeisance to that power:
He chose his father when he broke with his Regina.⁶

Soren said by denying the erotic

It is brought to the attention of the world.

75 You must admit it before you can deny it.

So much for "Repetition"—another theory⁷
Which some assume evolved from his belief
He could replay his courtship of Regina
With a happy ending. Meanwhile she'd wait for him,

4. Edgar Allan Poe (1809-1849; see pp. 975-81). unhappiness without her than with her." Kierke-American writer.

gaard's obsession with sacrificing Regine is in the 5. In Greek mythology, a sculptor who fell in love with his own creation, the beautiful Galatea.

cusses the faith of Abraham in offering to sacrifice

6. Regine Olsen (1822-1904), to whom Kierkegaard's son Isaac to God.

gaard became engaged in 1840, though he later

7. The theory appears in Kierkegaard's book Repetition (1843). decided that he could "become happier in my

1690 / CAROLYN KIZER

Eternally faithful, eternally seventeen.

Instead, within two years, the bitch got married.

In truth, he couldn't wait till he got rid of her,
To create from recollection, not from living;
To use the material, not the material girl.
I sip my kir, thinking of Either / Or,
Especially Either, starring poor Elvira.⁸
He must have seen Giovanni a score of times,
And Soren knew the score.
He took Regina to the opera only once,
And as soon as Mozart's overture was over,
Kierkegaard stood up and said, "Now we are leaving.
You have heard the best: the expectation of pleasure."
In his interminable aria on the subject
S.K. insisted the performance was the play.
Was the overture then the foreplay? Poor Regina
Should have known she'd be left waiting in the lurch.
Though he chose a disguise in which to rhapsodize,
It was his voice too: Elvira's beauty
Would perish soon; the deflowered quickly fade:
A night-blooming cereus⁰ after Juan's one-night stand. cactus Soren, eyes clouded by romantic mist,
Portrayed Elvira always sweet sixteen.
S.K.'s interpretation seems naive.
He didn't seem to realize that innocent sopranos
Who are ready to sing Elvira, don't exist.
His diva may have had it off with Leporello⁹
Just before curtain time, believing it freed her voice
(So backstage legend has it), and weakened his.
I saw La Stupenda¹ sing Elvira once.

Her cloak was larger than an army tent.
Would Giovanni be engulfed when she inhaled?
Would the boards shiver when she stamped her foot?
Her voice of course was great. Innocent it was not.
Soren, long since, would have fallen in a faint.
When he, or his doppelganger,⁰ wrote double
That best-seller, “The Diary of a Seducer,”²
He showed how little he knew of true Don Juans:
Those turgid letters, machinations, and excursions,
Those tedious conversations with dull aunts,
Those convoluted efforts to get the girl!
Think of the worldly European readers
Who took Soren seriously, did not see
His was the cynicism of the timid virgin.

8. Donna Elvira in Don Giovanni, one of the Australian soprano Joan Sutherland (b. 1926).

women the dissolute seducer has betrayed.

2. A famous section of Either/Or, it presents one

9. Don Giovanni’s servant.

man’s romantic exploits as “an attempt to realize

1. The stupendous one (Italian); nickname for the the task of living poetically.”

P E R M A N E N T L Y / 1 6 9 1

Once in my youth I knew a real Don Juan

125 Or he knew me. He didn’t need to try,

The characteristic of a true seducer.

He seems vulnerable, shy; he hardly speaks.

Somehow, you know he will never speak of you.

You trust him—and you thrust yourself at him.
130 He responds with an almost absentminded grace.
Even before the consummation he's looking past you
For the next bright yearning pretty face.
Relieved at last of anxieties and tensions
When your terrible efforts to capture him are over, 135 You overflow with happy/unhappy languor.
But S.K.'s alter-ego believes the truly terrible
Is for you to be consoled by the love of another.
We women, deserted to a woman, have a duty
To rapidly lose our looks, decline, and die,
HO Our only chance of achieving romantic beauty.
So Augustine was sure, when Monica, his mother,³
Made him put aside his nameless concubine
She'd get her to a nunnery, and pine.⁴
He chose his mother when he broke with his beloved.
145 In Soren's long replay of his wrecked romance,
"Guilty/Not Guilty,"⁵ he says he must tear himself away
From earthly love, and suffer to love God.
Augustine thought better: love, human therefore flawed,
Is the way to the love of God. To deny this truth 150 Is to be "left outside, breathing into the dust, Filling the eyes with earth." We women,
Outside, breathing dust, are still the Other.
The evening sun goes down; time to fix dinner.
"You women have no major philosophers." We know.
155 But we remain philosophic, and say with the Saint,
"Let me enter my chamber and sing my songs of love."

2001

K E N N E T H K O C H

1925-2002

Permanently

One day the Nouns were clustered in the street.

An Adjective walked by, with her dark beauty.

3. St. Monica (322—387), credited with helping rejects Ophelia: “Get thee to a nunnery.”

convert her son from a wayward life. 5. A section of his book Stages on Life's Way 4. Allusion to Hamlet 3.1.122, in which Hamlet (1845).

6 9 2 / K E N N E T H K O C H

The Nouns were struck, moved, changed.

The next day a Verb drove up, and created the Sentence.

Each Sentence says one thing—for example. “Although it was a dark

rainy day when the Adjective walked by, I shall remember the pure and sweet expression on her face until the day I perish
from

the green, effective earth.”

Or, “Will you please close the window, Andrew?”

Or, for example, “Thank you, the pink pot of flowers on the window

sill has changed color recently to a light yellow, due to the heat from the boiler factory which exists nearby.”

In the springtime the Sentences and the Nouns lay silently on
the grass.

A lonely Conjunction here and there would call, “And! But!”

But the Adjective did not emerge.

As the adjective is lost in the sentence,
So I am lost in your eyes, ears, nose, and throat—
You have enchanted me with a single kiss
Which can never be undone
Until the destruction of language.

1 9 6 2

You Were Wearing

You were wearing your Edgar Allan Poe printed cotton blouse.
In each divided up square of the blouse was a picture of Edgar Allan
Poe.

Your hair was blonde and you were cute. You asked me, “Do most

boys think that most girls are bad?”

I smelled the mould of your seaside resort hotel bedroom on your hair

held in place by a John Greenleaf Whittier clip.

“No,” I said, “it’s girls who think that boys are bad.” Then we read Snowbound together.

And ran around in an attic, so that a little of the blue enamel was

scraped off my George Washington, Father of His Country, shoes.

Mother was walking in the living room, her Strauss Waltzes comb in her hair.

We waited for a time and then joined her, only to be served tea
in

cups painted with pictures of Herman Melville

As well as with illustrations from his book Moby Dick and from his novella, Benito Cereno.

Father came in wearing his Dick Tracy necktie: "How about a drink,

everyone?"

I said, "Let's go outside a while." Then we went onto the porch and sat on the Abraham Lincoln swing.

ENERGY IN SWEDEN / 1 6 9 3

You sat on the eyes, mouth, and beard part, and I sat on the knees.

In the yard across the street we saw a snowman holding a garbage can lid smashed into a likeness of the mad English king, George

the Third.

1 9 6 2

Variations on a Theme by William Carlos Williams¹

i

I chopped down the house that you had been saving to live in next summer.

I am sorry, but it was morning, and I had nothing to do and its wooden beams were so inviting.

2

We laughed at the hollyhocks together

5 and then I sprayed them with lye.

Forgive me. I simply do not know what I am doing.

3

I gave away the money that you had been saving to live on for
the

next ten years.

The man who asked for it was shabby and the firm March wind on the porch was so juicy and cold.

4

io Last evening we went dancing and I broke your leg.

Forgive me. I was clumsy, and

I wanted you here in the wards, where I am the doctor!

1 9 6 2

Energy in Sweden

Those were the days

When there was so much energy in and around me

I could take it off and put it back on, like clothes

That one has bought only for a ski trip

5 But then finds that one is using every day

Because every day is like a ski trip—

I think that's how I was at twenty-three.

Seeing those six young women in a boat I was on a ski trip.

They said, We are all from Minneapolis. This was in Stockholm.

1. American poet (1883—1963; see pp. 1272—83) and physician (see line 12). This poem parodies Williams's "This Is Just to Say" (p. 1274).

1 6 9 4 / K E N N E T H K O C H

10 The melding of American and Swedish-American female looks was a ski trip

Although I had no particular reason at that time to put all my energy

on

Yet there it was, I had it, the way a giant has the hegemony of his nerves

In case he needs it, or the way a fisherman has all his poles and lines and lures, and a scholar all his books

The way a water heater has all its gas

15 Whether it is being used or not, I had all that energy.

Really, are you all from Minneapolis? I said, almost bursting with force.

And yes, one of them, about the second prettiest, replied. We are here for several days.

I thought about this moment from time to time

For eight or ten years. It seemed to me I should have done something at the time,

20 To have used all that energy. Lovemaking is one way to use it and writing is another.

Both maybe are overestimated, because the relation is so clear.

But that is probably human destiny and I'm not going to go against it here.

Sometimes there are the persons and not the energy, sometimes the energy and not the persons.

When the gods give both, a man shouldn't complain.

1 9 9 4

To My Twenties

How lucky that I ran into you

When everything was possible

For my legs and arms, and with hope in my heart

And so happy to see any woman—

O woman! O my twentieth year!

Basking in you, you

Oasis from both growing and decay

Fantastic unheard of nine- or ten-year oasis

A palm tree, hey! And then another io And another—and water!

I'm still very impressed by you. Whither,

Midst falling decades, have you gone? Oh in what lucky fellow,

Unsure of himself, upset, and unemployable

For the moment in any case, do you live now?

15 From my window I drop a nickel

By mistake. With

You I race down to get it

But I find there on

The street instead, a good friend,

C O R S O N S I N L E T / 1 6 9 5

20 X N , who says to me

Kenneth do you have a minute?

And I say yes! I am in my twenties!

I have plenty of time! In you I marry,

In you I first go to France; I make my best friends

25 In you, and a few enemies. I Write a lot and am living all the time
And thinking about living. I loved to frequent you After my teens and before my thirties.
You three together in a bar
30 I always preferred you because you were midmost
Most lustrous apparently strongest
Although now that I look back on you
What part have you played?
You never, ever, were stingy.
35 What you gave me you gave whole
But as for telling Me how best to use it
You weren't a genius at that.
Twenties, my soul
40 Is yours for the asking
You know that, if you ever come back.

2000

A. R. A M M O N S

1926-2001

Corsons Inlet1

I went for a walk over the dunes again this morning
to the sea,
then turned right along the surf
5 rounded a naked headland and returned along the inlet shore:

it was muggy sunny, the wind from the sea steady and high,
crisp in the running sand, io some breakthroughs of sun

but after a bit

continuous overcast:

the walk liberating, I was released from forms,
from the perpendiculars,

I. Located on the southern New Jersey shore.

1 6 9 6 / A . R . A M M O N S

15 straight lines, blocks, boxes, binds of thought

into the hues, shadings, rises, flowing bends and blends

of sight:

I allow myself eddies of meaning:

20 yield to a direction of significance running

like a stream through the geography of my work:

you can find

in my sayings

25 swerves of action

like the inlet's cutting edge:

there are dunes of motion,

organizations of grass, white sandy paths of remembrance

in the overall wandering of mirroring mind:

30 but Overall is beyond me: is the sum of these events

I cannot draw, the ledger I cannot keep, the accounting

beyond the account:

in nature there are few sharp lines: there are areas of primrose

35 more or less dispersed;

disorderly orders of bayberry; between the rows
of dunes,

irregular swamps of reeds,

though not reeds alone, but grass, bayberry, yarrow, all ...

40 predominantly reeds:

I have reached no conclusions, have erected no boundaries, shutting out and shutting in, separating inside

from outside: I have drawn no lines:

45 as

manifold events of sand

change the dune's shape that will not be the same shape
tomorrow,

so I am willing to go along, to accept

50 the becoming thought, to stake off no beginnings or ends, establish no walls:

by transitions the land falls from grassy dunes to creek to undercreek: but there are no lines, though

55 change in that transition is clear as any sharpness: but "sharpness" spread out,

allowed to occur over a wider range

than mental lines can keep:

C O R S O N S I N L E T / 1 6 9 7

the moon was full last night: today, low tide was low:

black shoals of mussels exposed to the risk of air

and, earlier, of sun,
waved in and out with the waterline, waterline inexact,
caught always in the event of change:
a young mottled gull stood free on the shoals and ate to vomiting: another gull, squawking possession, cracked a crab,
picked out the entrails, swallowed the soft-shelled legs, a ruddy turnstone⁰ running in to snatch leftover bits: a shorebird risk is full: every living thing in siege: the demand is life, to keep life: the small white blacklegged egret, how beautiful, quietly stalks and spears
the shallows, darts to shore to stab—what? I couldn't see against the black mudflats—a frightened fiddler crab?
the news to my left over the dunes and reeds and bayberry clumps was fall: thousands of tree swallows gathering for flight:
an order held
in constant change: a congregation rich with entropy: nevertheless, separable, noticeable as one event,
not chaos: preparations for flight from winter,

cheet, cheet, cheet, cheet, wings rifling the green clumps, beaks
at the bayberries
a perception full of wind, flight, curve, sound:
the possibility of rule as the sum of rulelessness:
the “field” of action
with moving, incalculable center:
in the smaller view, order tight with shape:
blue tiny flowers on a leafless weed: carapace of crab:
snail shell:
pulsations of order
in the bellies of minnows: orders swallowed, broken down, transferred through membranes to strengthen larger orders: but in the large view, no lines or changeless shapes: the working in and out, together and against, of millions of events: this, so that I make no form
formlessness:
1 6 9 8 / A . R . A M M O N S
orders as summaries, as outcomes of actions override or in some way result, not predictably (seeing me gain
the top of a dune, 110 the swallows could take flight—some other fields of bayberry could enter fall
berryless) and there is serenity:

no arranged terror: no forcing of image, plan, 115 or thought:

no propaganda, no humbling of reality to precept:
terror pervades but is not arranged, all possibilities of escape open: no route shut, except in the sudden loss of all routes:

120 I see narrow orders, limited tightness, but will not run to that easy victory:

still around the looser, wider forces work:

I will try to fasten into order enlarging grasps of disorder, widening

125 scope, but enjoying the freedom that

Scope eludes my grasp, that there is no finality of vision, that I have perceived nothing completely,

that tomorrow a new walk is a new walk.

1 9 6 5

The City Limits

When you consider the radiance, that it does not withhold itself but pours its abundance without selection into every nook and cranny not overhung or hidden; when you consider that birds' bones make no awful noise against the light but 5 lie low in the light as in a high testimony; when you consider the radiance, that it will look into the guiltiest swervings of the weaving heart and bear itself upon them, not flinching into disguise or darkening; when you consider the abundance of such resource as illuminates the glow-blue io bodies and gold-skeined wings of flies swarming the dumped

guts of a natural slaughter or the coil of shit and in no way winces from its storms of generosity; when you consider that air or vacuum, snow or shale, squid or wolf, rose or lichen,

each is accepted into as much light as it will take, then 15 the heart moves roomier, the man stands and looks about,

the

THE ARC INSIDE AND OUT / 1 6 9 9

leaf does not increase itself above the grass, and the dark work of the deepest cells is of a tune with May bushes and fear lit by the breadth of such calmly turns to praise.

1 9 7 1

The Arc Inside and Out

For Harold Bloom

If, whittier and dumper, gross carver into the shadiest curvings, I took branch and meat from the stalk of life, threw away the monies of the treasured, 5 treasurable mind, cleaved memory free of the instant, if I got right down shucking off periphery after periphery to the glassy vague gray parabolas and swoops of unailable perception,
io would I begin to improve the purity,
would I essentialize out the distilled form, the glitter-stone that whether the world comes or goes clicks gleams and chinks of truth self-making, never 15 to be shuttered, the face-brilliant core stone: or if I, amasser, heap shoveler, depth pumper, took in all springs and oceans, paramoecia and moons, massive buttes and summit slants, rooted trunks 20 and leafages, anthologies of wise words, schemata, all grasses (including the tidal Spartinas,² marginal, salty broadsweps) would I finally come on a suasion, large, fully-informed, restful 25 scape, turning back in on itself, its periphery enclosing our system with its bright dot and allowing in nonparlant quantities at the edge void, void, and void, would I then feel plenitude 30 brought to center and extent, a sweet

2. Genus of various swamp grasses.

1 7 0 0 / A . R . A M M O N S

easing away of all edge, evil, and surprise:
these two ways to dream! dreaming them's
the bumfuzzlement—the impoverished diamond, the heterogeneous abundance 35 starved into oneness: ultimately, either way, which is our peace, the little arc-line appears, inside which is nothing, outside which is nothing—however big,
nothing beyond: however small, nothing 40 within: neither way to go's to stay, stay here, the apple an apple with its own hue

or streak, the drink of water, the drink, the falling into sleep, restfully ever the falling into sleep, dream, dream, and 45 every morning the sun comes, the sun.

1 9 7 2

Pet Panther

My attention is a wild animal: it will if idle make trouble where there was no harm: it will 5 sniff and scratch at the breath's sills:
it will wind itself tight around the pulse or, undistracted by io verbal toys, pommel the heart frantic: it will pounce on a stalled riddle and wrestle the mind numb:
attention, fierce animal 15 I cry, as it coughs in my face, dislodges boulders in my belly, lie down, be still, have mercy, here is song, coils of song, play 20 it out, run with it.

1 9 8 3

W I L D B E E S / 1 7 0 1

All's All

A construed entity too

lessened to syllabify;

a mite or more

dimpling

5 domy^o generalization; domelike

a vague locus

(the flow of air through prisons)

a puff of 10 the whiff of a snail falling asleep;

stringy recollections of fruitflies cruising rosy bowlsful of 15 mangoes ripening mild:

ghostly leavings leaving ghosts leave: retinal worms empurpling

light scars

20 behind today's views:

bits of retrenched nothings:

so much so,

little and all

25 alternately disappear:

the tiniest kiss

at the world's end

ends the world.

1 9 9 6

J A M E S K. B A X T E R

1926-1972

Wild Bees

Often in summer, on a tarred bridge plank standing,
Or downstream between willows, a safe Ophelia drifting¹
In a rented boat—I had seen them come and go,
Those wild bees swift as tigers, their gauze wings a-glitter

1. Ophelia, the young heroine of Shakespeare's Hamlet, goes mad, then drowns while drifting down a river (Hamlet 4.7.137-55).

1 7 0 2 / J A M E S K . B A X T E R

5 In passionless industry, clustering black at the crevice
Of a rotten cabbage tree, where their hive was hidden low.
But never strolled too near. Till one half-cloudy evening
Of ripe January, my friends and I

Came, gloved and masked to the eyes like plundering desperadoes,

10 To smoke them out. Quiet beside the stagnant river
We trod wet grasses down, hearing the crickets chitter
And waiting for light to drain from the wounded sky.

Before we reached the hive their sentries saw us
And sprang invisible through the darkening air,

15 Stabbed, and died in stinging. The hive woke. Poisonous fuming

Of sulphur filled the hollow trunk, and crawling

Blue flame sputtered—yet still their suicidal

Live raiders dived and clung to our hands and hair.

O it was Carthage under the Roman torches,
20 Or loud with flames and falling timber, Troy!²
A job well botched. Half of the honey melted
And half the rest young grubs. Through earth-black smoldering ashes
And maimed bees groaning, we drew out our plunder.
Little enough their gold, and slight our joy.
25 Fallen then the city of instinctive wisdom.
Tragedy is written distinct and small:
A hive burned on a cool night in summer.
But loss is a precious stone to me, a nectar
Distilled in time, preaching the truth of winter
30 To the fallen heart that does not cease to fall.

1 9 5 3

East Coast Journey

About twilight we came to the whitewashed pub
On a knuckle of land above the bay
Where a log was riding and the slow
Bird-winged breakers cast up spray.

5 One of the drinkers round packing cases had
The worn face of a kumara³ god,

2. References to the destruction by fire of two the end of the Trojan War.

great cities of classical times—Carthage by the

3. Sweet potato (Maori); a staple food of the Romans in 146 B.C.E. and Troy by the Greeks at Maori, the Polynesian natives of New Zealand.

NEW ZEALAND / 1703

Or so it struck me. Later on

Lying awake in the veranda bedroom

In great dryness of mind I heard the voice of the sea

10 Reverberating, and thought: As a man

Grows older he does not want beer, bread, or the prancing flesh,

But the arms of the eater of life, Hine-nui-te-po,⁴

With teeth of obsidian and hair like kelp

Flashing and glimmering at the edge of the horizon.

1966

New Zealand

(For Monte Holcroft)

These unshaped islands, on the sawyer's⁵ bench,

Wait for the chisel of the mind,

Green canyons to the south, immense and passive,

Penetrated rarely, seeded only

s By the deer-culler's⁶ shot, or else in the north

Tribes of the shark and the octopus,

Mangroves, black hair on a boxer's hand.

The founding fathers with their guns and bibles,

Botanist, whaler, added bones and names

io To the land, to us a bridle

As if the id were a horse: the swampy towns

Like dreamers that struggle to wake,

Longing for the poet's truth

And the lover's pride. Something new and old

15 Explores its own pain, hearing

The rain's choir on curtains of gray moss
Or fingers of the Tasman⁷ pressing
On breasts of hardening sand, as actors
Find their own solitude in mirrors,
20 As one who has buried his dead,
Able at last to give with an open hand.

1 9 6 9

4. Maori goddess of death.

ment who controls the herds of deer.

5. One who saws.

7. The Tasman Sea, to the west of New Zealand.

6. A kind of game warden, an agent of the govern-

1 1 7 0 4

R O B E R T B L Y

b. 1926

Waking from Sleep

Inside the veins there are navies setting forth,

Tiny explosions at the water lines,

And seagulls weaving in the wind of the salty blood.

It is the morning. The country has slept the whole winter.

5 Window seats were covered with fur skins, the yard was full

Of stiff dogs, and hands that clumsily held heavy books.

Now we wake, and rise from bed, and eat breakfast!—

Shouts rise from the harbor of the blood,

Mist, and masts rising, the knock of wooden tackle in the sunlight.

io Now we sing, and do tiny dances on the kitchen floor.

Our whole body is like a harbor at dawn;

We know that our master has left us for the day.

1 9 6 2

Johnson's Cabinet¹ Watched by Ants

i

It is a clearing deep in a forest: overhanging boughs

Make a low place. Here the citizens we know during the day,

The ministers, the department heads,

Appear changed: the stockholders of large steel companies

5 In small wooden shoes: here are the generals dressed as gamboling

lambs.

2

Tonight they burn the rice-supplies; tomorrow

They lecture on Thoreau;² tonight they move around the trees,

Tomorrow they pick the twigs from their clothes;

Tonight they throw the fire-bombs, tomorrow

io They read the Declaration of Independence; tomorrow they are in church.

3

Ants are gathered around an old tree.

In a choir they sing, in harsh and gravelly voices,

Old Etruscan³ songs on tyranny.

1. Advisors of U.S. President Lyndon B. Johnson
pp. 1045-46), American Transcendentalistphilos-(1908—1973), whose term was dominated by the opher, essayist, and poet.

Vietnam War and by protests against it.

3. An early Italian people and culture, originating

2. Henry David Thoreau (1817-1862; see in Etruria; one of its city-states became Rome.

I K N O W A M A N / 1 7 0 5

Toads nearby clap their small hands, and join

15 The fiery songs, their five long toes trembling in the soaked earth.

1 9 6 7

R O B E R T C R E E L E Y

b. 1926

Heroes

In all those stories the hero

is beyond himself into the next thing, be it those labors of Hercules, or Aeneas¹ going into death.

5 I thought the instant of the one humanness

in Virgil's plan of it was that it was of course human enough to die,

yet to come back, as he said, *hoc opus, hic labor est.*²

That was the Cumaean Sibyl speaking,

io This is Robert Creeley, and Virgil

is dead now two thousand years, yet Hercules

and the Aeneid, yet all that industrious wisdom lives in the way the mountains and the desert are waiting

15 for the heroes, and death also can still propose the old labors.

1 9 5 9

I Know a Man

As I sd to my friend, because I am always talking,—John, I sd, which was not his 5 name, the darkness surrounds us, what

1. Trojan hero whose adventures and travails are priestess and prophet, how he might visit his dead recorded in Virgil's epic poem, the Aeneid. Her-father in the underworld, she answers that the cules: legendary Greek hero of superhuman descent is easy, but to return—"That is the task, strength, best-known for his twelve labors.
that is the labor."

2. Aeneid 6.129. When Aeneas asks the Sibyl, a

1 7 0 6 / R O B E R T C R E E L E Y

can we do against it, or else, shall we &
why not, buy a goddamn big car, 10 drive, he sd, for christ's sake, look out where yr going.

1 9 6 2

The World

I wanted so ably
to reassure you, I wanted
the man you took to be me,
to comfort you, and got

5 up, and went to the window, pushed back, as you asked me to,
the curtain, to see
the outline of the trees
in the night outside.
io The light, love,
the light we felt then,
grayly, was it, that came in, on us, not merely my hands or yours, 15 or a wetness so comfortable, but in the dark then as you slept, the gray figure came so close and leaned over, 20 between us, as you slept, restless, and my own face had to see it, and be seen by it,
the man it was, your 25 gray lost tired bewildered brother, unused, untaken—
hated by love, and dead, but not dead, for an instant, saw me, myself
BO the intruder, as he was not.
B R E S S O N ‘ S M O V I E S / 1 7 0 7
I tried to say, it is all right, she is happy, you are no longer needed. I said, 35 he is dead, and he went as you shifted and woke, at first afraid, then knew by my own knowing what had happened—40 and the light then of the sun coming for another morning

in the world.

1 9 6 9

Bresson's 3 Movies

A movie of Robert

Bresson's showed a yacht,
at evening on the Seine,⁴
all its lights on, watched 5 by two young, seemingly poor people, on a bridge adjacent,
the classic boy and girl
of the story, any one one cares to tell. So 10 years pass, of course, but I identified with the young,
embittered Frenchman, knew his almost complacent anguish and the distance

15 he felt from his girl.

Yet another film

of Bresson's has the aging Lancelot⁵ with his awkward armor standing

20 in a woods, of small trees,

3. Robert Bresson (1907-1999), French director Nuits d'Un Reveur {Four Nights of a Dreamer}, and screenwriter, known for his austere style. 1971.

4. River in northern France. The movie is Quatre 5. Lancelot du Lac (Lancelot of the Lake), 1974.

1 7 0 8 / A L L E N G I N S B E R G

dazed, bleeding, both he and his horse are,

trying to get back to the castle, itself of 25 no great size. It moved me, that life was after all like that. You are in love. You stand

30 in the woods, with a horse, bleeding.

The story is true.

1 9 8 2

A L L E N G I N S B E R G

1926-1997

From Howl

F o r C a r l S o l o m o n 1

I

I saw the best minds of my generation destroyed by madness, starving
hysterical naked,
dragging themselves through the negro streets at dawn looking for an angry fix,
angelheaded hipsters burning for the ancient heavenly connection to the starry dynamo in the machinery of night, who poverty and tatters and hollow-eyed and high sat up smoking in the supernatural darkness of cold-water flats floating across
the
tops of cities contemplating jazz,
5 who bared their brains to Heaven under the El² and saw Mohammedan
angels staggering on tenement roofs illuminated who passed through universities with radiant cool eyes hallucinating
Arkansas and Blake-light³ tragedy among the scholars of war, who were expelled from the academies for crazy & publishing obscene
odes on the windows of the skull, who cowered in unshaven rooms in underwear, burning their money
in wastebaskets and listening to the Terror through the wall, who got busted in their pubic beards returning through Laredo⁴ with a belt of marijuana for New York,
1. Ginsberg met Solomon (b. 1928) while both

2. Elevated railway in New York City; also, were patients in the Columbia Psychiatric Institute Hebrew for God.

in 1949. Many details in Howl come from the

3. In 1948, Ginsberg had a vision/hallucination of “apocryphal history” that Solomon then told him, the English poet and artist William Blake (1757—while other details refer to experiences of Ginsberg 1827; see pp. 732-47).

and his fellow Beat writers of the 1950s.

4. City in Texas, on the Mexican border.

H O W L / 1 7 0 9

10 who ate fire in paint hotels or drank turpentine in Paradise Alley,⁵

death, or purgatoried their torsos night after night with dreams, with drugs, with waking nightmares, alcohol and cock

and endless balls,

incomparable blind streets of shuddering cloud and lightning
in the mind leaping toward poles of Canada & Paterson,⁶ illuminating

all the motionless world of Time between,

Peyote solidities of halls, backyard green tree cemetery dawns, wine

drunkenness over the rooftops, storefront boroughs of teahead

joyride neon blinking traffic light, sun and moon and tree vibrations in the roaring winter dusks of Brooklyn, ashcan rantings and kind king light of mind,

who chained themselves to subways for the endless ride from Battery

to holy Bronx⁷ on benzedrine until the noise of wheels and children brought them down shuddering mouth-wracked and battered bleak of brain all drained of brilliance in the drear light

of Zoo,

15 who sank all night in submarine light of Bickford's floated out and sat

through the stale beer afternoon in desolate Fugazzi's,⁸ listening to the crack of doom on the hydrogen jukebox, who talked continuously seventy hours from park to pad to bar

to

Bellevue⁹ to museum to the Brooklyn Bridge,

a lost battalion of platonic conversationalists jumping down
the stoops

off fire escapes off windowsills off Empire State out of the moon,

yacketayakking screaming vomiting whispering facts and memories

and anecdotes and eyeball kicks and shocks of hospitals and jails

and wars,

whole intellects disgorged in total recall for seven days and nights with brilliant eyes, meat for the Synagogue cast on the pavement,

20 who vanished into nowhere Zen New Jersey leaving a trail
of

ambiguous picture postcards of Atlantic City Hall, suffering Eastern sweats and Tangerian bone-grindings and migraines

of China under junk-withdrawal in Newark's bleak furnished room,
who wandered around and around at midnight in the railroad yard
wondering where to go, and went, leaving no broken hearts, who lit cigarettes in boxcars boxcars boxcars racketing through snow
toward lonesome farms in grandfather night, who studied Plotinus Poe St. John of the Cross¹ telepathy and bop
kaballa² because the cosmos instinctively vibrated at their feet
in Kansas,
25 who loned it through the streets of Idaho seeking visionary indian
angels, who were visionary indian angels,
5. Then a tenement courtyard in New York's receiving center for mental patients.
Lower East Side; the setting of The Subterraneans, 1. Spanish poet and mystic (1542—1591), who a 1958 novel by the American writer Jack Kerouac wrote The Dark Night of the Soul. Plotinus (2 0 5 - (1922-1969).
270), Roman mystic philosopher. Edgar Allan Poe
6. City in New Jersey where Ginsberg was born.
(1809-1894; see pp. 9 7 5 - 8 1) , American poet and
7. The south and north extremes of one set of New author of supernatural tales as well as the cosmo-York subway lines; the zoo is in the Bronx.
logical Eureka.

8. A bar near Greenwich Village, then New York's
2. A tradition of mystical interpretation of the bohemian center. Bickford's: one of a chain of caf-Hebrew Scriptures. Bop: jazz style especially influeterias open twenty-four hours a day.
ential in the 1940s and 1950s.

9. A public hospital in New York serving as a

1 7 1 0 / A L L E N G I N S B E R G

who thought they were only mad when Baltimore gleamed in supernatural ecstasy, who jumped in limousines with the Chinaman of Oklahoma on
the
impulse of winter midnight streetlight smalltown rain, who lounged hungry and lonesome through Houston seeking jazz or sex or soup, and followed the brilliant Spaniard to converse about America and Eternity, a hopeless task, and so took ship to Africa,
who disappeared into the volcanoes of Mexico leaving behind
nothing
but the shadow of dungarees and the lava and ash of poetry scattered in fireplace Chicago, 30 who reappeared on the West Coast investigating the F.B.I,
in beards
and shorts with big pacifist eyes sexy in their dark skin passing out incomprehensible leaflets, who burned cigarette holes in their arms protesting the narcotic
tobacco haze of Capitalism,

who distributed Supercommunist pamphlets in Union Square weeping
and undressing while the sirens of Los Alamos³ wailed them down, and wailed down Wall,⁴ and the Staten Island ferry also wailed,
who broke down crying in white gymnasiums naked and trembling
before the machinery of other skeletons, who bit detectives in the neck and shrieked with delight in policecars
for committing no crime but their own wild cooking pederasty and intoxication,
35 who howled on their knees in the subway and were dragged off the roof waving genitals and manuscripts, who let themselves be fucked in the ass by saintly motorcyclists, and screamed with joy, who blew and were blown by those human seraphim,⁵ the sailors,
caresses of Atlantic and Caribbean love, who balled in the morning in the evenings in rosegardens and
the grass of public parks and cemeteries scattering their semen freely
to whomever come who may, who hiccupped endlessly trying to giggle but wound up with a sob
behind a partition in a Turkish Bath when the blonde & naked angel came to pierce them with a sword,⁶

40 who lost their loveboys to the three old shrews of fate⁷ the one eyed

shrew of the heterosexual dollar the one eyed shrew that winks out of the womb and the one eyed shrew that does nothing but sit on her ass and snip the intellectual golden threads of the craftsman's loom,

who copulated ecstatic and insatiate with a bottle of beer a sweetheart

a package of cigarettes a candle and fell off the bed, and continued

along the floor and down the hall and ended fainting on the wall

with a vision of ultimate cunt and come eluding the last gyzym
of

consciousness,

3. Laboratory in New Mexico where the develop-

5. The highest order of angels.

ment of the atomic bomb was completed. Union

6. An allusion to The Ecstasy of St. Teresa, a sculp-Square: site of radical demonstrations in New York
ture by Lorenzo Bernini (1598-1680) based on St.
in the 1930s.

Teresa's (1515-1582) distinctly erotic description

4. Wall Street, the center of New York's financial of a religious vision.

district; but also, Jerusalem's Wailing Wall, a place

7. In Greek mythology, the three Fates spun, of prayer and lamentation.

wove, and finally cut the thread of every mortal life.

H O W L / 1 7 1 1

who sweetened the snatches of a million girls trembling in the sunset, and were red eyed in the morning but prepared to sweeten the snatch of the sunrise, flashing buttocks under barns and naked in the lake,

who went out whoring through Colorado in myriad stolen night-cars,

N.C.,⁸ secret hero of these poems, cocksman and Adonis of Denver—joy to the memory of his innumerable lays of girls in empty lots & diner backyards, moviehouses' rickety rows, on mountaintops in caves or with gaunt waitresses in familiar roadside lonely petticoat upliftings & especially secret gas-station

solipsisms of johns, & hometown alleys too, who faded out in vast sordid movies, were shifted in dreams, woke on a sudden Manhattan, and picked themselves up out of basements

hangover with heartless Tokay and horrors of Third Avenue⁹ iron dreams & stumbled to unemployment offices,

⁴⁵ who walked all night with their shoes full of blood on the snowbank docks waiting for a door in the East River to open to a room full of steamheat and opium, who created great suicidal dramas on the apartment cliff-banks of the Hudson under the wartime blue floodlight of the moon & their heads shall be crowned with laurel¹¹ in oblivion, who ate the lamb stew of the imagination or digested the crab at the muddy bottom of the rivers of Bowery,² who wept at the romance of the streets with their pushcarts full

of

onions and bad music,

who sat in boxes breathing in the darkness under the bridge,
and rose

up to build harpsichords in their lofts,

50 who coughed on the sixth floor of Harlem crowned with flame under the tubercular sky surrounded by orange crates of theology, who scribbled all night rocking and rolling over lofty incantations

which in the yellow morning were stanzas of gibberish, who cooked rotten animals lung heart feet tail borsht & tortillas

dreaming of the pure vegetable kingdom,

who plunged themselves under meat trucks looking for an egg,

who threw their watches off the roof to cast their ballot for Eternity

outside of Time, & alarm clocks fell on their heads every day
for the next decade,

55 who cut their wrists three times successively unsuccessfully, gave up and were forced to open antique stores where they thought they were growing old and cried,

who were burned alive in their innocent flannel suits on Madison

Avenue³ amid blasts of leaden verse & the tanked-up clatter of the iron regiments of fashion & the nitroglycerine shrieks of
the fairies of advertising & the mustard gas of sinister intelligent editors, or were run down by the drunken taxicabs of Absolute Reality,

8. Neal Cassady (1926-1968), a friend and lover sey.

of Ginsberg. Also a friend of Jack Kerouac, he is
2. Lower end of Third Avenue; traditional haunt the hero of Kerouac's novel On the Road (1957).
of alcoholics and derelicts.

9. In Manhattan. Tokay: a Hungarian wine.

3. The center of New York's advertising industry.

1. In classical Greece, victors in the Pythian
Cf. The Man in the Gray Flannel Suit, a best-games were crowned with laurel. Hudson: the selling 1955 novel by the American writer Sloan Hudson River, between Manhattan and New Jer-
Wilson (b. 1920).

1 7 1 2 / A L L E N G I N S B E R G

who jumped off the Brooklyn Bridge this actually happened
and

walked away unknown and forgotten into the ghostly daze of Chinatown soup alleyways & firetrucks, not even one free beer,

who sang out of their windows in despair, fell out of the subway

window, jumped in the filthy Passaic,⁴ leaped on negroes, cried

all over the street, danced on broken wineglasses barefoot smashed phonograph records of nostalgic European 1930's German jazz finished the whiskey and threw up groaning into
the bloody toilet, moans in their ears and the blast of colossal steamwhistles,
who barreled down the highways of the past journeying to each other's hotrod-Golgotha jail-solitude watch or Birmingham5 jazz incarnation,
60 who drove crosscountry seventytwo hours to find out if I had a vision
or you had a vision or he had a vision to find out Eternity, who journeyed to Denver, who died in Denver, who came back
to Denver & waited in vain, who watched over Denver & brooded &
lone in Denver and finally went away to find out the Time, &
now Denver is lonesome for her heroes, who fell on their knees in hopeless cathedrals praying for each other's salvation and light and breasts, until the soul illuminated its hair
for a second,
who crashed through their minds in jail waiting for impossible criminals with golden heads and the charm of reality in their hearts who sang sweet blues to Alcatraz, who retired to Mexico to cultivate a habit, or Rocky Mount to tender
Buddha or Tangiers to boys or Southern Pacific to the black locomotive or Harvard to Narcissus to Woodlawn⁶ to the daisychain or grave, 65 who demanded sanity trials accusing the radio of hypnotism & were left with their insanity & their hands & a hung jury, who threw potato salad at CCNY lecturers on Dadaism⁷ and subsequently presented themselves on the granite steps of the madhouse with shaven heads and harlequin speech of suicide, demanding instantaneous lobotomy,

and who were given instead the concrete void of insulin metrasol
electricity hydrotherapy psychotherapy occupational therapy pingpong & amnesia,
who in humorless protest overturned only one symbolic pingpong
table, resting briefly in catatonia, returning years later truly bald except for a wig of blood, and tears and fingers, to the visible madman doom of the wards of the madtowns of the East, 70 Pilgrim State's Rockland's and Greystone's⁸ foetid halls, bickering with the echoes of the soul, rocking and rolling in the midnight solitude-bench dolmen-realms⁹ of love, dream of life a nightmare,
bodies turned to stone as heavy as the moon,
4. The river that flows through Paterson.
7. An artistic movement based on absurdity and
5. In Alabama. Golgotha: hill near Jerusalem accident; it flourished during World War I. CCNY:

where Jesus was crucified.

City College of New York.

6. Cemetery in the Bronx. Kerouac was then living

8. Three mental hospitals near New York. Carl in Rocky Mount, North Carolina. Ginsberg and

Solomon was an inmate at Pilgrim State and Rock-

the American writer William Burroughs (1914—

land, and Ginsberg's mother was institutionalized

1997) had lived in Tangiers. Cassady worked as a at Greystone.

brakeman for the Southern Pacific Railroad.

9. Dolmens are prehistoric monuments of hori-

A S U P E R M A R K E T I N C A L I F O R N I A / 1 7 1 3

with mother finally * * * * * a n d the last fantastic book flung out of the tenement window, and the last door closed at 4 AM and the last telephone slammed at the wall in reply and the last furnished

room emptied down to the last piece of mental furniture, a yellow

paper rose twisted on a wire hanger in the closet, and even that imaginary, nothing but a hopeful little bit of hallucination—

ah, Carl, while you are not safe I am not safe, and now you're really in the total animal soup of time—and who therefore ran through the icy streets obsessed with a sudden flash of the alchemy of the use of the ellipse the catalog the meter & the vibrating plane,

who dreamt and made incarnate gaps in Time & Space through images juxtaposed, and trapped the archangel of the soul between

2 visual images and joined the elemental verbs and set the noun

and dash of consciousness together jumping with sensation of Pater Omnipotens Aeterna Deus¹

75 to recreate the syntax and measure of poor human prose and stand

before you speechless and intelligent and shaking with shame, rejected yet confessing out the soul to conform to the rhythm
of

thought in his naked and endless head,

the madman bum and angel beat in Time, unknown, yet putting down

here what might be left to say in time come after death, and rose reincarnate in the ghostly clothes of jazz in the goldhorn

shadow of the band and blew the suffering of America's naked mind for love into an eli eli lamma lamma sabacthani² saxophone

cry that shivered the cities down to the last radio with the absolute heart of the poem of life butchered out of their own

bodies good to eat a thousand years.

San Francisco 1955 1956

A Supermarket in California

What thoughts I have of you tonight, Walt Whitman,³ for I walked down the sidestreets under the trees with a headache self-

conscious looking at the full moon.

In my hungry fatigue, and shopping for images, I went into the neon fruit supermarket, dreaming of your enumerations!

What peaches and what penumbras!0 Whole families shadows shopping at night! Aisles full of husbands! Wives in the avocados, babies in the tomatoes!—and you, Garcia Lorca,4 what were you doing
down by the watermelons?

zontal stone slabs supported by upright stones,
2. My God, my God, why have you forsaken me?
found in Britain and France and believed to be (Hebrew). These are Jesus' last words from the tombs.

cross (Matthew 27.46, Mark 15.34, Psalm 22.1).

1. All-powerful Father, Eternal God (Latin;
3. American poet (1819-1892; see pp. 1060-86), “Aeterna” is feminine, the nouns are masculine).
of great influence on Ginsberg.

Paul Cezanne (1839-1906), the French Impres-

4. Federico Garcia Lorca (1898—1936), Spanish sionist painter, used this phrase to describe the poet and dramatist.

effects of nature on him.

1 7 1 4 / A L L E N G I N S B E R G

I saw you, Walt Whitman, childless, lonely old grubber, poking

among the meats in the refrigerator and eyeing the grocery boys.

5 I heard you asking questions of each: Who killed the pork chops? What price bananas? Are you my Angel?

I wandered in and out of the brilliant stacks of cans following you, and followed in my imagination by the store detective.

We strode down the open corridors together in our solitary fancy

tasting artichokes, possessing every frozen delicacy, and never passing the cashier.

Where are we going, Walt Whitman? The doors close in an hour. Which way does your beard point tonight?

(I touch your book and dream of our odyssey in the supermarket

and feel absurd.)

10 Will we walk all night through solitary streets? The trees add

shade to shade, lights out in the houses, we'll both be lonely.

Will we stroll dreaming of the lost America of love past blue automobiles in driveways, home to our silent cottage?

Ah, dear father, graybeard, lonely old courage-teacher, what America did you have when Charon quit poling his ferry and you got out on a smoking bank and stood watching the boat disappear

on the black waters of Lethe?5

1 9 5 6

To Aunt Rose

Aunt Rose—now—might I see you

with your thin face and buck tooth smile and pain

of rheumatism—and a long black heavy shoe

for your bony left leg

5 limping down the long hall in Newark on the running carpet

past the black grand piano in the day room where the parties were and I sang Spanish loyalist songs⁶
in a high squeaky voice (hysterical) the committee listening while you limped around the room collected the money—
Aunt Honey, Uncle Sam, a stranger with a cloth arm 15 in his pocket and huge young bald head of Abraham Lincoln Brigade⁷

5. In Greek mythology, a river of Hades, signifying Francisco Franco (1892-1975). Ginsberg's rela-forgetfulness; Charon ferried the dead across it.

tives in Newark, New Jersey, were among the many

6. During the Spanish Civil War (1936-39), left-wing Americans who supported the loyalists.
Spanish loyalists fought against the Fascists,

7. A group of American volunteers in the Spanish whose eventual triumph led to the dictatorship of Civil War.

T o A U N T R O S E / 1 7 1 5

— y o u r l o n g s a d f a c e

y o u r t e a r s o f s e x u a l f r u s t r a t i o n

20 (w h a t s m o t h e r e d s o b s a n d b o n y h i p s u n d e r t h e p i l l o w s o f O s b o r n e T e r r a c e)

— t h e t i m e I s t o o d o n t h e t o i l e t s e a t n a k e d and you powdered my thighs with Calomine against the poison ivy — my tender

25 and shamed first black curled hairs

what were you thinking in secret heart then knowing me a man already — and I an ignorant girl of family silence on the thin pedestal of my legs in the bathroom — M useum of Newark.

30 Aunt Rose

Hitler is dead, Hitler is in Eternity; Hitler is wi th Tamburlane and Emily Bronte 8

Though I see you walking still, a ghost on Osb orne Terracedown the long dark hall to the front door

35 limping a little with a pinched smile

in what must have been a silken

flower dress

welcoming my father, the Poet, on his visit to Ne wark

— see you arriving in the living room

40 dancing on your crippled leg

and clapping hands his book

had been accepted by Liveright 9

Hitler is dead and Liveright's gone out of busine ss The Attic of the Past and Everlasting Minute are out of print 45 Uncle Harry sold his last silk stocking

Claire quit interpretive dancing school

Buba 1 sits a wrinkled monument in Old

Ladies Home blinking at new babies

last time I saw you was the hospital

50 pale skull protruding under a shen skin

blueveinedunconsciousgirl in an oxygen tent
the war in Spain has ended long ago
Aunt Rose
Paris 1958 1961

8. English poet and novelist (1818-1848), whose that published The Everlasting Minute, a 1937 novel Wuthering Heights is in part a ghost story.
book of poems by Ginsberg's father, Louis, whose Tamburlane: E. Timur (1336—1405), Turkic con-first book, The Attic of the Past, was published in queror; the bloodthirsty hero of Christopher 1920.

Marlowe's tragedy Tambulaine the Great (1587).

1. Grandmother (Yiddish).

9. Company (now a subsidiary of W. W. Norton)

11716

JAMES MERRILL

1926-1995

The Broken Home¹

Crossing the street,

I saw the parents and the child

At their window, gleaming like fruit

With evening's mild gold leaf.

5 In a room on the floor below,

Sunless, cooler—a brimming

Saucer of wax, marbly and dim—

I have lit what's left of my life.

I have thrown out yesterday's milk
io And opened a book of maxims.
The flame quickens. The word stirs.
Tell me, tongue of fire,
That you and I are as real
At least as the people upstairs.
15 My father, who had flown in World War I,
Might have continued to invest his life
In cloud banks well above Wall Street and wife.²
But the race was run below, and the point was to win.
Too late now, I make out in his blue gaze
20 (Through the smoked glass of being thirty-six)
The soul eclipsed by twin black pupils, sex
And business; time was money in those days.
Each thirteenth year he married. When he died
There were already several chilled wives
25 In sable orbit—rings, cars, permanent waves.
We'd felt him warming up for a green bride.
He could afford it. He was "in his prime"
At three score ten. But money was not time.
When my parents were younger this was a popular act:
30 A veiled woman would leap from an electric, wine-dark car
1. This poem is composed of sonnets, some "bro-founder of the investment firm Merrill Lynch.
ken" into unconventional proportions and rhyme Wall Street is the hub of the financial industry in schemes.
New York City.

2. Charles Merrill, the poet's father, was a co-

THE BROKEN HOME / 1717

To the steps of no matter what — the Senate or the Ritz Bar —

And bodily, at news reels speed, attack

No matter whom — Al Smith or Jose Maria
Sert

Or Clemenceau³ — veins standing out on her throat³⁵ As she yelled War mongerer! Pig! Give us the vote!,

And would have to be hauled away in her hob-ble skirt.⁴

What had they done? Oh, made history.

Her business (he had implied) was giving birth, Tending the house, mending the socks

.

40 Always that same old story —

Father Time and Mother Earth,⁵

A marriage on the rocks.

One afternoon, red, satyr-thighed⁶

Michael, the Irish setter, head

45 Passionately lowered, led

The child I was to a shut door. Inside,

Blinds beat sun from the bed.

The green-gold room throbbed like a bruise.

Under a sheet, clad in taboos

50 Lay whom we sought, her hair undone, out-spread, And of a blackness found, if ever now, in old

Engravings where the acid bit.

I must have needed to touch it

O r t h e w h i t e n e s s — w a s s h e d e a d ?

55 H e r e y e s f l e w o p e n , s t a r t l e d s t r a n g e a n d c o l d .

T h e d o g s l u m p e d t o t h e f l o o r . S h e r e a c h e d f o r m e . I f l e d .

T o n i g h t t h e y h a v e s t e p p e d o u t o n t o t h e g r a v e l .

T h e p a r t y i s o v e r . I t ' s t h e f a l l

O f 1 9 3 1 . T h e y l o v e e a c h o t h e r s t i l l .

60 S h e : C h a r l i e , I c a n ' t s t a n d t h e p a c e .

H e : C o m e o n , h o n e y — w h y , y o u ' l l b u r y u s a l l !

A l e a d s o l d i e r g u a r d s m y w i n d o w s i l l :

K h a k i r i f l e , u n i f o r m , a n d f a c e .

S o m e t h i n g i n m e g r o w s h e a v y , s i l v e r y , p l i a b l e .

3. Georges Clemenceau (1841-1929), premier of

5. A reference to the Greek mythological figures

France during World War I, visitor to the United Cronus (ruler of the Titans; his name means

States in 1922. Alfred Smith (1873-1944), gov-

“Time”) and Rhea (his wife; an Earth deity known

ernor of New York and 1928 candidate for the U.S.

as Mother of the Gods).

presidency. Jose Maria Sert y Badia (1876—1945),

6. In Greek mythology, the satyrs were minor

Spanish painter and muralist, who decorated New nature deities, their upper halves resembling men,

York’s Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in 1930.

their lower halves resembling goats or horses.

4. Long, straight skirt.

1 7 1 8 / J A M E S M E R R I L L

65 How intensely people used to feel!

Like metal poured at the close of a proletarian novel,7

Refined and glowing from the crucible,
I see those two hearts, I'm afraid,
Still. Cool here in the graveyard of good and evil, 70 They are even so to be honored and obeyed.
... Obeyed, at least, inversely. Thus
I rarely buy a newspaper, or vote.
To do so, I have learned, is to invite
The tread of a stone guest⁸ within my house.
75 Shooting this rusted bolt, though, against him,
I trust I am no less time's child than some Who on the heath impersonate Poor Tom⁹
Or on the barricades risk life and limb.
Nor do I try to keep a garden, only so An avocado in a glass of water—
Roots pallid, gemmed with air. And later,
When the small gilt leaves have grown
Fleshy and green, I let them die, yes, yes,
And start another. I am earth's no less.
85 A child, a red dog roam the corridors,
Still, of the broken home. No sound. The brilliant Rag runners halt before wide-open doors.
My old room! Its wallpaper—cream, medallioned
With pink and brown—brings back the first nightmares, 90 Long summer colds, and Emma, sepia-faced,
Perspiring over broth carried upstairs
Aswim with golden fats I could not taste.
The real house became a boarding school.
Under the ballroom ceiling's allegory

95 Someone at last may actually be allowed
To learn something; or, from my window, cool
With the unstiflement of the entire story,
Watch a red setter stretch and sink in cloud.

1 9 6 6

7. Type of socialist novel that romanticized work- Austrian composer Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart ers and sometimes, as here, industry. (1756—1791).

8. In the play The Stone Feast, by the French 9. The nickname that Edgar, the disowned son of dramatist Jean-Baptiste Moliere (1622—1673), a Gloucester in Shakespeare's King Lear, gives to stone statue of the commander of Seville drags his himself when he wanders the heath in disguise as murderer, Don Juan, down to hell. A version of this a disheveled madman.

story appears in the opera Don Giovanni, by the

THE V I C T O R D O G / 1 7 1 9

The Victor Dog¹

For Elizabeth Bishop

Bix to Buxtehude to Boulez,

The little white dog on the Victor label

Listens long and hard as he is able.

It's all in a day's work, whatever plays.

5 From judgment, it would seem, he has refrained.

He even listens earnestly to Bloch,

Then builds a church upon our acid rock.²

He's man's—no—he's the Leiermann's best friend,³

Or would be if hearing and listening were the same.

10 Does he hear? I fancy he rather smells

Those lemon-gold arpeggios in Ravel's

“Les jets d’eau du palais de ceux qui s’aiment.”⁴
 He ponders the Schumann Concerto’s tall willow hit
 By lightning, and stays put. When he surmises
 15 Through one of Bach’s eternal boxwood mazes⁵
 The oboe pungent as a bitch in heat,
 Or when the calypso decants its raw bay rum
 Or the moon in Wozzeck ⁶ reddens ripe for murder,
 He doesn’t sneeze or howl; just listens harder.
 20 Adamant⁰ needles bear down on him from diamond
 Whirling of outer space, too black, too near—
 But he was taught as a puppy not to flinch,
 Much less to imitate his bete noire Blanche
 Who barked, fat foolish creature, at King Lear.⁷
 25 Still others fought in the road’s filth over Jezebel,⁸ Slavered⁰ on hearths of horned and pelted barons. drooled
 His forebears lacked, to say the least, forbearance.
 Can nature change in him? Nothing’s impossible.
 1. Long a trademark of RCA, the dog “Nipper”— dogs.
 here, called “Victor” (line 38)—was on the label of
 4. The palace fountains of those who are in love
 RCA Victor records, listening intently to a gramophone, with each other (French).
 phone, with the caption “His master’s voice.” In
 5. The composer’s works are compared to labyrinths the poem, passing reference is made to the jazz rинths executed in living boxwood plants, popular trumpeter Bix Beiderbecke (1903-1931), to the

in eighteenth-century formal gardens.

classical composers Dietrich Buxtehude (1637—

6. An opera by Berg in which the protagonist mur-

1707), Johann Sebastian Bach (1685-1750), ders his unfaithful wife beneath a rising moon.

George Frederick Handel (1685-1759), Franz

7. In King Lear, the mad king says, “The little dogs

Schubert (1797-1828), and Robert Schumann and all. / Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they (1810-1856), and to the modernists Pierre Boulez

bark at me” (3.6.57—58). Bete noire: a person or

(b. 1925), Ernest Bloch (1880-1959), Maurice thing detested or avoided; in French, its literal

Ravel (1875-1937), and Alban Berg (1885-1935).

meaning is “black beast,” whereas blanche means

2. Cf. Matthew 16.18: “... upon this rock I will build my church ...”

“white.”

8. The proverbial wicked woman, she was killed in

3. In Schubert’s song “Der Leiermann” (“The

the street; when the body was recovered for burial,

Organ-Grinder”), an old man cranks his barrel-

dogs had eaten most of it, as had been prophesied

organ in the winter cold to an audience of snarling

earlier by Elijah (1 Kings 21, 2 Kings 9.30-37).

1 7 2 0 / J A M E S M E R R I L L

The last chord fades. The night is cold and fine.

30 His master’s voice rasps through the grooves’ bare groves.

Obediently, in silence like the grave's
He sleeps there on the still-warm gramophone
Only to dream he is at the premiere of a Handel
Opera long thought lost— II Cane Minore.⁹
35 Its allegorical subject is his story!
A little dog revolving round a spindle
Gives rise to harmonies beyond belief,
A cast of stars. . . . Is there in Victor's heart
No honey for the vanquished? Art is art.
40 The life it asks of us is a dog's life.

1 9 7 2

Lost in Translation

for Richard Howard

*Diese Tage, die leer dir scheinen und wertlos für das All,
haben Wurzeln zwischen den Steinen
und trinken dort überall.*¹

A card table in the library stands ready
To receive the puzzle which keeps never coming.
Daylight shines in or lamplight down
Upon the tense oasis of green felt.
5 Full of unfulfillment, life goes on,
Mirage arisen from time's trickling sands
Or fallen piecemeal into place:
German lesson, picnic, see-saw, walk
With the collie who "did everything but talk"— io Sour windfalls of the orchard back of us.
A summer without parents is the puzzle,

Or should be. But the boy, day after day,
Writes in his Line-a-Day^o No puzzle. diary
He's in love, at least. His French Mademoiselle,
15 In real life a widow since Verdun,²
Is stout, plain, carrot-haired, devout.
She prays for him, as does a cure in Alsace,³
9. The little dog (Italian).

Merrill may have meant to refer also to Robert

1. These days which seem empty and entirely Frost's definition of poetry as that which is lost in fruitless to you have roots between the stones and translation. The American poet Richard Howard drink from everywhere (German). From the trans-(b. 1929; see pp. 1778-83) is also well known as lation by the Austrian poet Rainer Maria Rilke
a translator.

(1 8 7 5 - 1 9 2 6) of "Palme," by the French poet Paul

2. His French-speaking governess, called Made-Valery (1871 — 1945). Ironically, the epigraph promoiselle, widowed since the battle of Verdun in vides the very translation Merrill claims, within the World War I.

poem, to be "lost"—or difficult to find. Though the

3. Region of France on the border of Germany.
expression lost in translation is in common use, Cure: priest (French).

LOST IN TRANSLATION / 1721

Sews costumes for his marionettes,

Helps him to keep behind the scene
20 Whose sidelit goosegirl, speaking with his voice,
Plays Guinevere as well as Gunmoll Jean.⁴
Or else at bedtime in his tight embrace
Tells him her own French hopes, her German fears,
Her—but what more is there to tell?
25 Having known grief and hardship, Mademoiselle
Knows little more. Her languages. Her place.
Noon coffee. Mail. The watch that also waited Pinned to her heart, poor gold, throws up its hands—
No puzzle! Steaming bitterness
30 Her sugars draw pops back into his mouth, translated:
“Patience, cheri. Geduld, mein Shatz.”⁵
(Thus, reading Valery the other evening
And seeming to recall a Rilke version of “Palme,”
That sunlit paradigm⁰ whereby the tree pattern
35 Taps a sweet wellspring of authority,
The hour came back. Patience dans l’azur.
Geduld im ... Himmelblau? Mademoiselle.)
Out of the blue, as promised, of a New York Puzzle-rental shop the puzzle comes—40 A superior one, containing a thousand hand-sawn, Sandal^o-scented pieces. Many take sandalwood
Shapes known already—the craftsman’s repertoire
Nice in its limitation—from other puzzles:
Witch on broomstick, ostrich, hourglass,
45 Even (surely not just in retrospect)
An inchling, innocently branching palm.

These can be put aside, made stories of
While Mademoiselle spreads out the rest face-up,
Herself excited as a child; or questioned
50 Like incoherent faces in a crowd,
Each with its scrap of highly colored
Evidence the Law must piece together.
Sky-blue ostrich? Likely story.
Mauve of the witch's cloak white, severed fingers
55 Pluck? Detain her. The plot thickens
As all at once two pieces interlock.
Mademoiselle does borders—(Not so fast.
A London dusk, December last.
Chatter silenced in the library
60 This grown man reenters, wearing grey.
A medium. All except him have seen Panel slid back, recess explored,
An object at once unique and common
4. Term for a gangster's female accomplice. Goose- rill is reminded, in the lines to follow, of Valfrý's girl: as in the fairy tale "The Goosegirl"; i.e., an
"Palme" and Rilke's translation, "Patience in the impersonating voice. Guinevere: in English legend, Blue," which refers to the palm tree's patience in wife of King Arthur.
growth. The "blue" of the German "Himmelblau"
5. Patience, my dear (French and German). Mer-provides Merrill with his own "Out of the blue."

Displayed, planted in a plain tole0 coated-metal 65 Casket the subject now considers Through shut eyes, saying in effect:
“Even as voices reach me vaguely
A dry saw-shriek drowns them out,
Some loud machinery—a lumber mill?
70 Far uphill in the fir forest
Trees tower, tense with shock,
Groaning and cracking as they crash groundward.
But hidden here is a freak fragment
Of a pattern complex in appearance only.
75 What it seems to show is superficial
Next to that long-term lamination
Of hazard and craft, the karma that has Made it matter in the first place.
Plywood, Piece of a puzzle.” Applause
so Acknowledged by an opening of lids
Upon the thing itself. A sudden dread—
But to go back. All this lay years ahead.)
Mademoiselle does borders. Straight-edge pieces Align themselves with earth or sky
85 In twos and threes, naive cosmogonists6 Whose views clash. Nomad inlanders meanwhile Begin to cluster where the totem
Of a certain vibrant egg-yolk yellow
Or pelt of what emerging animal 90 Acts on the straggler like a trumpet call
To form a more sophisticated unit.

By supertime two ragged wooden clouds
Have formed. In one, a Sheik with beard
And flashing sword hilt (he is all but finished)
95 Steps forward on a tiger skin. A piece Snaps shut, and fangs gnash out at us!
In the second cloud—they gaze from cloud to cloud
With marked if undecipherable feeling—
Most of a dark-eyed woman veiled in mauve
100 Is being helped down from her camel (kneeling)
By a small backward-looking slave or page-boy
(Her son, thinks Mademoiselle mistakenly) Whose feet have not been found. But lucky finds
In the last minutes before bed
105 Anchor both factions to the scene's limits
And, by so doing, orient
Them eye to eye across the green abyss.
The yellow promises, oh bliss,
To be in time a sumptuous tent.
no Puzzle begun I write in the day's space,
Then, while she bathes, peek at Mademoiselle's Page to the cure: "... cette innocente mere,
6. Theorists about the universe's origin.
L O S T I N T R A N S L A T I O N / 1 7 2 3
Ce pauvre enfant, que deviendront-ils?"⁷
Her azure script is curlicued like pieces
115 Of the puzzle she will be telling him about.
(Fearful incuriosity of childhood!
"Tu as Taccent allemand,"⁸ said Dominique.

Indeed. Mademoiselle was only F r e n c h by marriage.
Child of an English mother, a remote 120 Descendant of the great explorer Speke,⁹
And Prussian father. No one knew. I heard it Long afterwards from her nephew, a UN Interpreter. His matter-of-fact account Touched old strings. My poor Mademoiselle, 125 With 19391 about to shake
This world where “each was the enemy, each the friend”
To its foundations, kept, though signed in blood,
Her peace a shameful secret to the end.)
“Schlaf wohl, cheri.”² Her kiss. Her t h u m b
130 Crossing my brow against the dreams to come.
This World that shifts like sand, its unforeseen Consolidations and elate routine,
W h o s e Potentate had lacked a retinue?
Lo! it assembles on the shrinking Green.
135 Gunmetal-skinned or pale, all plumes and scars,
Of Vassalage the noblest avatars—³
T h e very coffee-bearer in his vair⁰ fur-trimmed
Vest is a swart Highness, next to ours.
Kef⁴ easing Boredom, and iced syrups, thirst,
HO In guessed-at glooms old wives who know the worst Outsweat that virile fiction of the New:
“Insh’ Allah,⁵ he will tire—” “—or kill her first!”
(Hardly a proper subject for the Home,
Work o f — d e a r Richard, I shall let you comb
145 Archives and learned journals for his n a m e —

A minor lion attending on Gerome.⁶)

While, thick as Thebes⁷ whose presently complete

Gates close behind them, Houri and Afreet⁸

Both claim the Page.⁹ He wonders w h o m to serve,

150 And what his duties are, and where his feet,

7. This innocent mother, this poor child, what will painter; also, an allusion to Saint Jerome, who, the become of them? (French).

legend goes, pulled a thorn from the paw of a lion,

8. You have a German accent (French).

which then befriended him.

9. John Hanning Speke (1827-1864), English

7. Capital of ancient Upper Egypt; pun on thick explorer; possible pun on speak.

as thieves.

1. W h e n World War II began.

8. Evil demon in Arabian mythology. Houri: one

2. Sleep well, darling (German, French).

of the beautiful virgins who live with the blessed

3. The noblest incarnations of slavery.

in the Islamic paradise.

4. Narcotic made from hemp.

9. The servant, with a suggestion too of the

5. As Allah wills (Arabic).

printed page.

6. Jean Leon Gerome (1824-1940), French

1 7 2 4 / J A M E S M E R R I L L

And if we 'll find, as some before us did, That a piece of Distance deep in which lies hid
Your tiny apex sugary with sun,

Eternal Triangle, Great Pyramid!

155 Then Sky alone is left, a hundred blue Fragments in revolution, with no clue
To where a Niche will open. Quite a task,
Putting together Heaven, yet we do.

It's done. Here under the table all along i60 Were those missing feet. It's done.

The dog 'stail thumping. Mademoiselle sketching Costumes for a coming harem drama

To star the goose girl. All too soon the swift Dismantling. Lifted by two corners,

165 The puzzle hung together — and did not
.

Irresistibly a populace

Unstitched of its attachments, rattled down.

Power went to pieces as the witch

Slithered easily from Virtue 's gown.

170 The blue held out for time, but crumbled,
too.

The city had long fallen, and the tent,

A separating sauce mousseline, 1

Been swept away. Remained the green

On which the grown-up gambled. A green dusk.

175 First lightning bugs. Last glow of west Green in the false eyes of (coincidence) *Our

m a n g y t i g e r s a f e o n h i s b a r e d h e a r t h .

B e f o r e t h e p u z z l e w a s b o x e d a n d r e a d d r e s s e d T o t h e p u z z l e s h o p i n t h e m i d - S i x t i e s , 2
i s o S o m e t h i n g t e l l s m e t h a t o n e p i e c e c o n t r i v e d T o s t a y i n t h e b o y ' s p o c k e t . H o w d o I k n o w ?

I k n o w b e c a u s e s o m a n y l a t e r p u z z l e s

H a d m i s s i n g p i e c e s — M a g g i e T e y t e ' s 3 h i g
h n o t e s G o n e a t t h e w a r ' s e n d , e n d o f t h e v o g u e f o r c o l l i e s , 1 8 5 A h o u s e t o r n d o w n ; a n d h a d n ' t M a d e m o i s e l l e K e p t b a c k h e r p i t i f u l b i t o f t r u t h a s w e l l ?

I ' v e s p e n t t h e l a s t d a y s , f u r t h e r m o r e ,

R a n s a c k i n g A t h e n s f o r t h a t t r a n s l a t i o n o f
" P a l m e . "

N e i t h e r t h e G o e t h e h a u s 4 n o r t h e N a t i o n a l L i b r a r y 1 9 0 S e e m s a b l e t o u n e a r t h i t . Y e t I c a n ' t

J u s t b e i m a g i n i n g . I ' v e s e e n i t . K n o w

H o w m u c h o f t h e s u n - r i p e o r i g i n a l

F e l i c i t y R i l k e m a d e h i m s e l f f o r e g o

(W h o l o v e d F r e n c h w o r d s — v e r g e r , m u r , p a r f u m e r 5) 1 9 5 I n o r d e r t o r e n d e r i t s u n d e r l y i n g s e n s e .

K n o w a l r e a d y i n t h a t t o n g u e o f h i s

1. A white, creamy sauce. repertoire in French.

2. The streets numbered in the mid-Sixties in 4. A German library.

Manhattan. 5. Orchard, ripe, to scent (French).

3. English soprano (1888—1976), known for her

T H E B O O K O F E P H R A I M / 1 7 2 5

What Pains, what monolithic Truths

Shadow stanza to stanza's symmetrical Rhyme-rutted pavement. Know that ground plan left 200 Sublime and barren, where the warm Romance
Stone by stone faded, cooled; the fluted nouns
Made taller, lonelier than life
By leaf-carved capitals in the afterglow.
The owlet umlaut⁶ peeps and hoots
205 Above the open vowel. And after rain
A deep reverberation fills with stars.
Lost, is it, buried? One more missing piece?
But nothing's lost. Or else: all is translation
And every bit of us is lost in it 210 (Or found—I wander through the ruin of S⁷
Now and then, wondering at the peacefulness)
And in that loss a self-effacing tree,
Color of context, imperceptibly
Rustling with its angel,⁸ turns the waste
215 To shade and fiber, milk and memory.
1 9 7 6

*From The Book of Ephraim*⁹

correct but cautious, that first night, we asked
Our visitor's name, era, habitat.
E P H R A I M came the answer. A Greek Jew Born AD 8 at XANTHOS Where was that?
5 In Greece WHEN WOLVES & RAVENS WERE IN ROME
(Next day the classical dictionary yielded
A Xanthos on the Asia Minor Coast.)
N O W W H O ARE u W e told him. ARE U XTIANs

We guessed so. WHAT A COZY CATACOMB
IO Christ had W R O U G H T HAVOC in his family,
E N T I C E D MY FATHER F R O M MY M O T H E R S B
E D

(I too had issued from a broken home¹—

The first of several facts to coincide.)

Later a favorite of TIBERIUS² Died

6. German accent mark (“”), the two high dots of have with spirits from the other world, who illuwhich resemble an owl’s eyes.

minate a system of reincarnation and purification

7. Initial of a former lover.

as well as suggest theories about the creation and

8. Pun on wrestling with its angel. Jacob wrestled future of the universe. Merrill models the structure with an angel, saying, “I will not let thee go, except of each part of the trilogy on the design of the thou bless me” (Genesis 32.26).

Ouija board; thus Ephraim is in twenty-six parts,

9. The first part of an epic trilogy, The Changing one for each letter of the alphabet. In “C” (iden-Light at Sandover, which also includes Mirahell:

tified by the large initial letter), the spirit guide

Books of Number and Scripts for the Pageant. The

Ephraim introduces himself; uppercase letters

Book of Ephraim originally appeared in the volume indicate the “speech” of the Ouija board.

Divine Comedies, which made explicit Merrill’s

1. Cf. Merrill's poem "The Broken Home" debt to Dante's tripartite Divine Comedy. Merrill
(p. 1716).

(JM) records encounters through the Ouija board

2. Roman emperor (42 B.C.E-37 C.E.)

that he and his companion, David Jackson (DJ),

1 7 2 6 / J A M E S M E R R I L L

15 AD 36 on CAPRI throttled

By the imperial guard for having LOVED

T H E M O N S T E R S N E P H E W (s i c) C A L I G U L
A 3

Rapidly he went on—changing the subject?

A long incriminating manuscript

20 Boxed in bronze lay U N D E R P O R P H Y R Y 0 rock

Beneath the deepest excavations. He

Would help us find it, but we must please make haste

Because Tiberius wanted it destroyed.

Oh? And where, we wondered of the void,

25 Was Tiberius these days? STAGE T H R E E

Why was he telling us? He'd overheard us

Talking to S I M P S O N Simpson? His LINK W I T H
EARTH

His REPRESENTATIVE A feeble nature

All but bestial, given to violent

30 Short lives—one ending lately among flames

In an Army warehouse. Slated for rebirth

But not in time, said Ephraim, to prevent

The brat from wasting, just now at our cup,⁴

Precious long distance minutes—don't hang up!

35 So much facetiousness—well, we were young
And these were matters of life and death—dismayed us.
Was he a devil? His reply MY POOR
INNOCENTS left the issue hanging fire.
As it flowed on, his stream-of-consciousness
40 Deepened. There was a buried room, a BED WROUGHT IN SILVER I CAN LEAD U THERE
IF If? U GIVE ME What? HA HA YR SOULS
(Another time he'll say that he misread
Our innocence for insolence that night, 45 And meant to scare us.) Our eyes met. What if ...
The blood's least vessel hoisted jet-black sails.
Five whole minutes we were frightened stiff
—But after all, we weren't that innocent.
The Rover Boyss at thirty, still red-blooded
50 Enough not to pass up an armchair revel
And pure enough at heart to beat the devil,
Entered into the spirit, so to speak,
And said they'd leave for Capri⁶ that same week.
Pause. Then, as though we'd passed a test,
55 Ephraim's whole manner changed. He brushed aside
Tiberius and settled to the task
Of answering, like an experienced guide,
Those questions we had lacked the wit to ask.
Here on Earth—huge tracts of information
60 Have gone into these capsules flavorless
3. Roman emperor (12 - 41 c.E.).
5. Heroes of a popular series of children's books.

4. JM and DJ place hands on a teacup to “read”

6. Italian island, in the Bay of Naples.

the Ouija board.

A R A B I A N N I G H T / 1 7 2 7

And rhymed for easy swallowing—on Earth

We’re each the REPRESENTATIVE of a PATRON

—Are there that many patrons? YES o YES

These secular guardian angels fume and fuss

65 For what must seem eternity over us.

It is forbidden them to INTERVENE

Save, as it were, in the entr’acte⁰ between intermission

One incarnation and another. Back

To school from the disastrously long vac⁰ summer vacation

70 Goes the soul its patron crams yet once

Again with savoir vivre.⁷ Will the dunce

Never—by rote, the hundredth time round—learn

What ropes make fast that point of no return,

A footing on the lowest of NINE STAGES

75 Among the curates and the minor mages?⁰ priests,
magicians

Patrons at last ourselves, an upward notch

Our old ones move THEY’VE BORNE IT ALL FOR THIS

And take delivery from the Abyss

Of brand-new little savage souls to watch,

so One difference: with every rise in station

Comes a degree of PEACE FROM REPRESENTATION

—Odd phrase, more like a motto for abstract

Art—or for Autocracy—In fact

Our heads are spinning—From the East a light—

85 RUT U A R E T I R E D M E S C H E R S 8 S W E E T D R
E A M S T O M O R R O W N I G H T

1 9 7 6

Arabian Night⁹

Features unseen embers and tongs once worried bright as brass, cool, trim, of a depth to light his way at least who, trusting mirages, finds in them the oasis,

5 what went wrong? You there in the mirror, did our freshest page get sent to the Hall of Cobwebs?

Or had Rime's Emir¹ all along been merely after your body?

No reply. Then ("there" of course, also) insight's io dazzle snaps at gloom, like a wick when first lit.

Look! on one quick heartstring glissando,² stranger
kindles to father

7. Knowledge of how to live (French).

zade preserves her life by telling tales.

8. My dears (French).

1. An Arab prince, provincial governor, or military

9. The Arabian Nights, also known as One Thou- commander. Also, the word is a mirror image of sand and One Nights, is a collection of tales of rime, rare spelling for rhyme, which here is syn-unknown date (but referred to by the tenth cenonymous with poetry. The "page" of the previous tury) and of mixed origins, including Indian, Per-line thus connotes not only the emir's servant but sian, and Arabic. Compiled in its "original" form in a page of poetry.

Egypt by the fifteenth century, it is united by a

2. Italian term for a rapid series of consecutive framework in which the newly married Schehera-notes played by sliding fingers over keys or a string.

1 7 2 8 / F R A N K O ' H A R A

thirty years a shade, yet whose traits (plus others not so staring—loyalty, cynicism,

15 neophyte's pure heart in erotic mufti³

straight out of Baghdad)

solve the lifelong riddle: a face no longer sought in dreams but worn as my own. Aladdin⁴ rubs his lamp—youth? age?—and the rival two beam

20 forth in one likeness.

1 9 8 8

F R A N K O ' H A R A

1926-1966

The Day Lady¹ Died

It is 12:20 in New York a Friday

three days after Bastille day,² yes

it is 1959 and I go get a shoeshine

because I will get off the 4:19 in Easthampton³

5 npat 7:15 and then go straight to dinner and I don't know the people who will feed me

I walk up the muggy street beginning to sun

and have a hamburger and a malted and buy an ugly N E W W O R L D WRITING to see what the poets

io in Ghana are doing these days

I go on to the bank

and Miss Stillwagon (first name Linda I once heard) doesn't even look up my balance for once in her life and in the G O L D E N GRIFFIN⁴ I get a little Verlaine

15 for Patsy with drawings by Bonnard although I do think of Hesiod, trans. Richmond Lattimore or

Brendan Behan's new play or Le Balcon or Les Negres

of Genet, but I don't, I stick with Verlaine

after practically going to sleep with quandariness

20 and for Mike I just stroll into the PARK LANE

Liquor Store and ask for a bottle of Strega and then I go back where I came from to 6th Avenue and the tobacconist in the Ziegfeld Theatre and casually ask for a carton of Gauloises and a carton

25 of Picayunes, and a N E W Y O R K P O S T with her face on it

3. Civilian clothes worn by someone usually in blues singer, called Lady Day.

military uniform.

2. July 14, the French national holiday that cele-

4. Boy in "The Story of Aladdin and the Magic brates the storming of the Bastille prison in 1789.

Lamp," popularly believed to be collected in the

3. One of "the Hamptons," towns on eastern Long original Arabian Nights but actually an eighteenth-Island, popular, especially in the summer, with century addition. In it, Aladdin has a magic lamp

New York City artists and writers.

whose genie promises to grant any wish.

4. An avant-garde bookshop near the Museum of

1. Billie Holiday (1915-1959), American jazz and Modern Art, where O'Hara was a curator.

H o w T O G E T T H E R E / 1 7 2 9

and I am sweating a lot by now and thinking of leaning on the john door in the 5 SPOT

while she whispered a song along the keyboard to Mal Waldron⁵ and everyone and I stopped breathing 1959 1964

How to Get There

White the October air, no snow, easy to breathe
beneath the sky, lies, lies everywhere writhing and gasping clutching and tangling, it is not easy to breathe lies building their tendrils into dim figures

5 who disappear down corridors in west-side⁶ apartments into childhood's proof of being wanted, not abandoned, kidnaped

betrayal staving off loneliness, I see the fog lunge in and hide it

where are you?

io here I am on the sidewalk

under the moonlike lamplight thinking how precious moss is so unique and greenly crushable if you can find it on the north side of the tree where the fog binds you and then, tearing apart into soft white lies, spreads its disease

15 through the primal night of an everlasting winter which nevertheless has heat in tubes, west-side and east-side and its intricate individual pathways of white accompanied by the ringing of telephone bells beside which someone sits in silence denying their own number, never given out! nameless 20 like the sound of troika⁷ bells rushing past suffering in the first storm, it is snowing now, it is already too late the snow will go away, but nobody will be there police cordons for lying political dignitaries ringing too
the world becomes a jangle 25 from the index finger to the vast empty houses filled with people, their echoes of lies and the tendrils of fog trailing softly around their throats
now the phone can be answered, nobody calling, only an echo all can confess to be home and waiting, all is the same 30 and we drift into the clear sky enthralled by our disappointment never to be alone again never to be loved sailing through space: didn't I have you once for my self?
West Side?
for a couple of hours, but I am not that person

1 9 6 0 1 9 6 4

5. Billie Holiday's accompanist (1926—2002). 7. A Russian vehicle drawn by three horses 6. "West-side" and "east-side" in the poem refer to abreast, areas in Manhattan (west or east of Fifth Avenue).

1 7 3 0 / F R A N K O ' H A R A

Ave Maria⁸

Mothers of America

let your kids go to the movies!

get t h e m out of the house so they won't know what you're up to

it's true that fresh air is good for the body

5 but what about the soul

that grows in darkness, embossed by silvery images and when you grow old as grow old you must

they won't hate you

they won't criticize you they won't know

10 they'll be in some glamorous country

they first saw on a Saturday afternoon or playing hookey

they may even be grateful to you for their first sexual experience

which only cost you a quarter

15 and didn't upset the peaceful h o m e

they will know where candy bars come from and gratuitous bags of popcorn

as gratuitous as leaving the movie before it's over with a pleasant stranger whose apartment is in the Heaven on Earth

Bldg

20 near the Williamsburg Bridge⁹

oh mothers you will have made the little tykes

so happy because if nobody does pick them up in the movies

they won't know the difference

and if somebody does it'll be sheer gravy

25 and they'll have been truly entertained either way

instead of hanging around the yard

or up in their room hating you
prematurely since you won't have done anything horribly mean yet
30 except keeping them from the darker joys it's unforgivable the latter so don't blame me if you won't take this advice and the family breaks up and your children grow old and blind in front of a TV set 35 seeing movies you wouldn't let them see when they were young 19 6 0 1 9 6 4

Why I Am Not a Painter

I am not a painter, I am a poet.

Why? I think I would rather be a painter, but I am not. Well,

8. Hail Mary (Latin); the Catholic prayer ad- 9. Bridge connecting lower Manhattan with the dressed to the Virgin Mary, mother of Jesus. Williamsburg section of Brooklyn.

H E A R T ' S N E E D L E / 1 7 3 1

for instance, Mike Goldberg 1 is starting a painting. I drop in.
"Sit down and have a drink" he says. I drink; we drink. I look up. "You have SARDINES in it."
"Yes, it needed something there." 10 "Oh." I go and the days go by and I drop in again. The painting is going on, and I go, and the days go by. I drop in. The painting is finished. "Where's SARDINES?" 15 All that's left is just letters, "It was too much," Mike says.

But me? O n e day I am thinking of a color: orange. I write a line about orange. Pretty soon it is a 20 whole page of words, not lines.
Then another page. There should be so much more, not of orange, of words, of how terrible orange is and life. Days go by. It is even in 25 prose, I am a real poet. My poem is finished and I haven't mentioned orange yet. It's twelve poems, I call i t ORANGES. A n d o n e d a y i n a g a l l e r y
I see Mike's painting, called SARDINES.

1 9 7 1

W . D . S N O D G R A S S

b. 1926

From Heart's Needle

For Cynthia

" 'Your f a t h e r is dead.' 'That grieves me,' said he. 'Your m o t h e r is dead,' said t h e lad. ' N o w all pity for me is at an end,' said he. 'Your b r o t h e r is dead,' said Loingsechan. 'I am sorely w o u n d e d by that,'

said Suibne. 'Your d a u g h t e r is dead,' said Loingsechan.
'And an only d a u g h t e r is t h e needle of t h e heart,' said Suibne. 'Dear is your son w h o used to call you "Father," ' ' said Loingsechan. 'Indeed,' said he,

‘that is the drop that brings a man to the ground.’ ”

FROM AN OLD IRISH STORY,

The Frenzy of Suibne,

A STRANSLATED BY MYLES DILLON

1. New York painter (b. 1924), whose silk-screen 1.
Snodgrass's long poem for his daughter, after a prints appear in O'Hara's Odes (1960). divorce, is written in ten sections.

1732 / W. D. SNODGRASS

2

Late April and you are three; today

We dug your garden in the yard.

To curb the damage of your play,

Strange dogs at night and the mole stunnel
ing, 5 Four slender sticks of lath stand guard
wood Uplifting their thin string.

So you were the first to tramp it down.

And after the earth was sifted close

You brought your watering can to drown

io All earth and us. But these mixed seeds are pre s sed With light loam in their steadfast rows.

Child, we've done our best.

Someone will have to weed and spread

The young sprouts. Sprinkle them in the hour

15 When shadow falls across their bed.

You should try to look at them every day

Because when they come to full flower

I will be away.

3

The child between them on the street

Comes to a puddle, lifts his feet

A n d h a n g s o n t h e i r h a n d s . T h e y s t a r t
A t t h e l i v e w e i g h t a n d l u r c h t o g e t h e r ,
5 R e c o i l t o s w i n g h i m t h r o u g h t h e w e a t h e r ,
S t i f f e n a n d p u l l a p a r t .

W e r e a d o f c o l d w a r 2 s o l d i e r s t h a t
N e v e r g a i n e d g r o u n d , g a v e n o n e , b u t s a t
T i g h t i n t h e i r c h i l l t r e n c h e s , i o P a i n s e e p s u p f r o m s o m e c a v i t y
T h r o u g h t h e r a n k e d t e e t h i n s y m p a t h y ;
T h e w h o l e j a w g r i n d s a n d c l e n c h e s
T i l l s o m e t h i n g s o m e w h e r e h a s t o g i v e .
I t ' s b e t t e r t h e p o o r s o l d i e r s l i v e

15 I n s o m e o n e e l s e ' s h a n d s
T h a n d r o p w h e r e h e l p l e s s p o w e r s f a l l
O n c r o p s a n d b a r n s , o n t o w n s w h e r e a l l
W i l l b u r n . A n d n o m a n s t a n d s .

2. The post—World War II rivalry between the Soviet Union and the United States.

H E A R T ' S N E E D L E / 1 7 3 3

Here in the scuffled dust
is our ground of play.
I lift you on your swing and must shove you away,
5 see you return again,
drive you off again, then stand quiet till you come.
You, though you climb higher, farther from me, longer, 10 will fall back to me stronger.

Bad penny, p e n d u l u m ,
you keep my constant time to bob in blue July where fat goldfinches fly 15 over the glittering, f e c u n d reach of our growing lands.
O n c e more now, this second,
I hold you in my hands.

10

T h e vicious winter finally yields
the green winter wheat;
the farmer, tired in the tired fields
he dare not leave will eat.
5 O n c e more the runs come fresh; prevailing piglets, stout as jugs,
harry their old sow to the railing
to ease her swollen dugs
and game colts trail the herded mares io that circle the pasture courses;
our seasons bring us back once more like merry-go-round horses.
With crocus mouths, perennial hungers,
into the park Spring comes;
15 we roast hot dogs on old coat hangers and feed the swan bread crumbs, pay our respects to the peacocks, rabbits,
and leathery Canada goose
who took, last Fall, our tame white habits

20 and now will not turn loose.

In full regalia, the pheasant cocks

march past their dubious hens;

1 7 3 4 / W . D . S N O D G R A S S

the p o r c u p i n e and the lean, red fox

trot a r o u n d b a c h e l o r p e n s

25 and t h e miniature painted train

wails on its oval track:

y o u said, I'm going to Pennsylvania!

and waved. A n d you've c o m e back.

If I loved you, they said, I'd leave

30 a n d find my o w n affairs.

W e l l , o n c e again this April, we've

c o m e around to the bears;

p u n i s h e d and cared for, b e h i n d bars,

the c o o n s 0 on bread and water raccoons

35 stretch thin black fingers after ours.

A n d you are still my daughter.

1 9 5 9

Mementos, 1

Sorting o u t letters and piles of my old

C a n c e l e d c h e c k s , old clippings, and y e l l o w n o t e cards T h a t m e a n t s o m e t h i n g o n c e , I h a p p e n e d to find Your picture. That picture. I stopped there cold,

5 Like a m a n raking piles of dead leaves in his yard

W h o h a s turned up a severed hand.

Still, that first s e c o n d , I was glad: y o u stand

Just as y o u s t o o d — s h y , delicate, slender,

In that l o n g g o w n of green lace netting and daisies io That you wore to our first dance. T h e sight of you s t u n n e d
Us all. W e l l , our n e e d s were different, t h e n ,
A n d our ideals c a m e easy.
T h e n t h r o u g h t h e war³ and t h o s e t w o l o n g years
Overseas, the J a p a n e s e dead in their shacks
15 A m o n g dishes, dolls, and lost shoes; I carried
This g l i m p s e of you, there, to c h o k e d o w n my fear,
Prove it h a d b e e n , that it m i g h t c o m e back.
T h a t was b e f o r e we got married.
— B e f o r e we drained o u t o n e another's force
20 W i t h lies, self-denial, u n s p o k e n regret
A n d the sick eyes that blame; before the divorce
A n d the treachery. Say it: before we m e t . Still,
I put back your picture. S o m e d a y , in d u e course,
I will find that it's still there.

1 9 6 8

3. World War II.

1 7 3 5

ELIZABETH JENNINGS

1926-2001

My Grandmother

S h e kept a n a n t i q u e s h o p — o r i t kept h e r .

A m o n g A p o s t l e s p o o n s a n d B r i s t o l g l a s s ,¹

T h e f a d e d s i l k s , t h e h e a v y f u r n i t u r e ,

S h e w a t c h e d h e r o w n r e f l e c t i o n i n t h e b r a s s⁵

S a l v e r s⁰ a n d s i l v e r b o w l s , a s i t t o p r o v e r o u n d trays P o l i s h w a s a l l , t h e r e w a s n o n e e d o f l o v e .

And I remember how I once refused
To go out with her, since I was afraid.
It was perhaps a wish not to be used io Like antique objects. Though she never said
That she was hurt, I still could feel the guilt
Of that refusal, guessing how she felt.
Later, too frail to keep a shop, she put
All her best things in one long narrow room.
15 The places melt old, of things too long kept hut, The smell of absences where shadows come
me
That can't be polished. There was nothing then
To give her own reflection back again.
And when she died I felt no grief at all,
20 Only the guilt of what I once refused.
I walked into her room among the tall Sideboards and cupboards — things she never used But needed: and no finger-marks were there, Only the new dust falling through the air.

1961

One Flesh

Lying apart now, each in a separate bed,
He with a book, keeping the light on late,
She like a girl dreaming of childhood,
All men elsewhere — it is as if they wait
5 Some new event: the book he holds unread,
Her eyes fixed on the shadow overhead.
Tossed up like flotsam from a former passion,
How cool they lie. They hardly ever touch,
Or if they do it is like a confession

1. Prized glassware of a deep blue color. Apostle spoons: set of teaspoons, the handles of which are in the form of male figures, supposedly the Apostles.

1736 / JOHN ASHBERRY

IO Of having little feeling — or too much .

Chastity faces them , a destination

For which their whole lives were a preparation .

Strangely apart, yet strangely close together,

Silence between them like a thread to hold

15 And not wind in. And time itself's a feather

Touching them gently. Do they know they're old,

These two who are my father and my mother

Whose fire from which I came , has now grown cold?

1966

JOHN ASHBERRY

b. 1927

The Painter

Sitting between the sea and the buildings

He enjoyed painting the sea's portrait.

But just as children imagine a prayer

Is merely silence, he expected his subject

5 To rush up the sand , and , seizing a brush ,

Plaster its own portrait on the canvas.

So there was never any paint on his canvas

Until the people who lived in the buildings

Put him to work: "Try using the brush

io As a means to an end . Select, for a portrait,

Something less angry and large, and more subject
To a painter 's moods, or, perhaps, to a prayer.”

How could he explain to them his prayer

That nature, not art, might usurp the canvas?

15 He chose his wife for a new subject,

Making her vast, like ruined buildings,

As if, forgetting itself, the portrait

Had expressed itself without a brush.

Slightly encouraged, he dipped his brush

20 In the sea, murmuring a heartfelt prayer:

“My soul, when I paint this next portrait

Let it be you who wreck the canvas.”

The news spread like wildfire through the buildings:

He had gone back to the sea for his subject.

25 I imagine a painter crucified by his subject!

Too exhausted even to lift his brush,

He provoked some artists leaning from the buildings SOONEST MENDED / 1737

To malicious mirth:” We haven't a prayer

Now, of putting ourselves on canvas,

30 Or getting the sea to sit for a portrait!”

Others declared it a self-portrait.

Finally all indications of a subject

Began to fade, leaving the canvas

Perfectly white. He put down the brush.

35 At once a howl, that was also a prayer,

Arose from the overcrowded buildings.

They tossed him, the portrait, from the tallest of the buildings; And the sea devoured the canvas and the brush

As though his subject had decided to remain a prayer.

1956

Soonest Mended¹

Barely tolerated, living on the margin

In our technological society, we were always having to be rescued On the brink of destruction, like heroin es in *Orlando Furioso*²

Before it was time to start all over again.

5 There would be thunder in the bushes, a rustling of coils, And Angelica, in the Ingres painting,³ was considering

The colorful but small monster near her toe, as though wondering whether forgetting

The whole thing might not, in the end, be the only solution.

And then there always came a time when

io Happy Hooligan⁴ in his rusted green automobile Came plowing down the course, just to make sure everything was O.K.,

Only by that time we were in another chapter and confused About how to receive this latest piece of information.

Was it information? Weren't we rather acting this out¹⁵ For someone else's benefit, thoughts in a mind With room enough and to spare for our little problems (so they began to seem),

Our daily quandary about food and the rent and bills to be paid?

To reduce all this to a small variant,

To step free at last, minuscule on the gigantic plateau —

20 This was our ambition: to be small and clear and free.

Alas, the summer's energy wanes quickly,

A moment and it is gone. And no longer

May we make the necessary arrangements, simple as they are.

Our star was brighter perhaps when it had water in it.

1. Allusion to the expression Least said, soonest

3. Roger Delivering Angelica (1819), painting mended.

depicting Ariosto's heroine by the French artist

2. Epic by the Italian poet Ludovico Ariosto

Jean-Auguste-Dominique Ingres (1780-1867).

(1474—1533); his much-rescued heroine is Angel-

4. Character in a comic strip of the 1920s and ica.

1930s.

1738 / JOHN ASHBURY

25 Now there is no question even of that, but only

Of holding on to the hard earth so as not to get thrown off,

With an occasional dream, a vision: a robin flies across

The upper corner of the window, you brush your hair away

And cannot quite see, or a wound will flash

30 Against the sweet faces of the others, something like:

This is what you wanted to hear, so why

Did you think of listening to something else? We are all talkers

It is true, but underneath the talk lies
The moving and not wanting to be moved, the loose
35 Meaning, untidy and simple like a threshing floor.
These then were some hazards of the course,
Yet though we knew the course was hazards and nothing else
It was still a shock when, almost a quarter of a century later,
The clarity of the rules dawned on you for the first time.
40 They were the players, and we who had struggled at the game
Were merely spectators, though subject to its vicissitudes
And moving with it out of the tearful stadium, borne on shoulders, at last.
Night after night this message returns, repeated
In the flickering bulbs of the sky, raised past us, taken away
from us,
45 Yet ours over and over until the end that is past truth,
The being of our sentences, in the climate that fostered them,
Not ours to own, like a book, but to be with, and sometimes
To be without, alone and desperate.
But the fantasy makes it ours, a kind of fence-sitting 50 Raised to the level of an esthetic ideal. These were moments, years,
Solid with reality, faces, namable events, kisses, heroic acts,
But like the friendly beginning of a geometrical progression
Not too reassuring, as though meaning could be cast aside some day
When it had been outgrown. Better, you said, to stay cowering 55 Like this in the early lessons, since the promise of learning
Is a delusion, and I agreed, adding that

Tomorrow would alter the sense of what had already been learned,
That the learning process is extended in this way, so that from this standpoint
None of us ever graduates from college,
60 For time is an emulsion, and probably thinking not to grow up
Is the brightest kind of maturity for us, right now at any rate.
And you see, both of us were right, though nothing
Has somehow come to nothing; the avatars⁰ incarnations
Of our conforming to the rules and living 65 Around the home have made—well, in a sense, “good citizens” of us, Brushing the teeth and all that, and learning to accept
The charity of the hard moments as they are doled out,
For this is action, this not being sure, this careless Preparing, sowing the seeds crooked in the furrow,
70 Making ready to forget, and always coming back
To the mooring of starting out, that day so long ago.

1 9 7 0

5. On which, at harvest time, wheat is separated from chaff (debris).

P A R A D O X E S A N D O X Y M O R O N S / 1 7 3 9

Ode to Bill

S o m e t h i n g s w e d o t a k e u p a l o t m o r e t i m e
And are considered a fruitful, natural thing to do.

I a m c o m i n g o u t o f o n e w a y t o b e h a v e

I n t o a p l o w e d c o r n f i e l d . O n m y l e f t , g u l l s ,

5 On an inland vacation. They seem to mind the way I write.

Or, to take another example: last month

I vowed to write more. What is writing?

Well, in my case, it's getting down on paper

Not thoughts, exactly, but ideas, maybe:

10 Ideas about thoughts. Thoughts is too grand a word.

Ideas is better, though not precisely what I mean.

Someday I'll explain. Not today though.

I feel as though someone had made me a vest

Which I was wearing out of doors into the countryside 15 Out of loyalty to the person, although

There is no one to see, except me

With my inner vision of what I look like.

The wearing is both a duty and a pleasure

Because it absorbs me, absorbs me too much.

20 One horse stands out irregularly against

The land over there. And am I receiving

This vision? Is it mine, or do I already owe it

For other visions, unnoticed and unrecorded

On the great, relaxed curve of time,

25 All the forgotten springs, dropped pebbles,

Songs once heard that then passed out of light

Into everyday oblivion? He moves away slowly,

Looks up and pumps the sky, a lingering

Question. Him too we can sacrifice

30 To the end progress, for we must, we must be moving on.

1975

Paradoxes and Oxymorons

This poem is concerned with language on a very plain level.

Look at it talking to you. You look out a window
Or pretend to fidget. You have it but you don't have it.
You miss it, it misses you. You miss each other.

5 The poem is sad because it wants to be yours, and cannot.

What's a plain level? It is that and other things,

Bringing a system of them into play. Play?

Well, actually, yes, but I consider play to be

1740 / GALWAY KINNEL

A deeper outside thing, a dreamed role-pattern,

10 As in the division of grace these long August days

Without proof. Open-ended. And before you know

It gets lost in the steam and chatter of typewriters.

It has been played once more. I think you exist only

To tease me into doing it, on your level, and then you aren't there

15 Or have adopted a different attitude. And the poem

Has set me softly down beside you. The poem is you.

1981

Brute Image

It's a question of altitude, or latitude,

Probably. I see them leaving their offices.

By seven they are turning smartly into the drive

To spend the evening with small patterns and odd,

5 Oblique fixtures. Authentic what? Did I say,

Or more likely did you ask is there any Deliverance from any of this? W h y yes,
O n e boy says, one can step for a m o m e n t
Out into the hall. Spells bring some relief
io And antique shrieking into the night
That was not here before, not like this.
This is only a stand-in for the more formal,
More serious side of it. There is partial symmetry here.
Later one protests: H o w did we get here
15 This way, unable to stop communicating?
And is it all right for the children to listen,
For the weeds slanting inward, for the cold mice
Until dawn? N o w every yard has its tree, Every heart its valentine, and only we 20 Don't know h o w to occupy the tent of night
So that what must c o m e to pass shall pass.

1 9 9 2

GALWAY K I N N E L L

b. 1927

First Song

T h e n it was dusk in Illinois, the small boy

After an afternoon of carting dung

H u n g on the rail fence, a sapped thing

Weary to crying. Dark was growing tall

T H E C O R R E S P O N D E N C E S C H O O L I N S T
R U C T O R S A Y S G O O D B Y E / 1 7 4 1

5 And he began to hear the pond frogs all

Calling on his ear with what s e e m e d their joy.

S o o n their sound was pleasant for a boy
Listening in the smoky dusk and the nightfall
Of Illinois, and from the fields two small 10 Boys came bearing cornstalk violins
And they rubbed the cornstalk bows with resins
And the three sat there scraping of their joy.
It was n o w fine music the frogs and the boys
Did in the towering Illinois twilight make 15 And into dark in spite of a shoulder's ache
A boy's h u n c h e d body loved out of a stalk
The first song of his happiness, and the song woke
His heart to the darkness and into the sadness of joy.
1 9 6 0

The Correspondence School Instructor Says Goodbye to His Poetry Students

Goodbye, lady in Bangor, w h o sent me
snapshots of yourself, after definitely hinting
you were beautiful; goodbye,
Miami Beach urologist, w h o enclosed plain 5 brown envelopes for the return of your very “Clinical Sonnets”; goodbye, manufacturer of brassieres on the Coast, whose eclogues give the fullest treatment in literature yet to the sagging breast motif; goodbye, you in San Quentin,1 io w h o wrote, “Being German my hero is Hitler,” instead of “Sincerely yours,” at the end of long, neat-scripted letters demolishing
the pre-Raphaelites:2

I swear to you, it was just my way
15 of cheering myself up, as I licked
the stamped, self-addressed envelopes, the game I had
of trying to guess which one of you, this time, had p o i s o n e d his glue. I did care.

20 I did read each p o e m entire.

1. Prison in California. spirit of the arts before the Italian painter Raphael 2. A group of nineteenth-century English painters (1483—1520).

and poets, who wished to restore the methods and

7 4 2 / G A L W A Y K I N N E L L

I did say what I thought was the truth in the mildest words I knew. And now, in this poem, or c h o p p e d prose, not any better,
I realize, than those troubled lines

25 I kept sending back to you,

I have to say I am relieved it is over:

at the end I could feel only pity

for that urge toward more life

your p o e m s kept smothering in words, the smell

30 of which, days later, w o u l d tingle

in your nostrils as new, God-given impulses to write.

Goodbye,

you w h o are, for me, the postmarks again

35 of shattered towns—Xenia, Burnt Cabins, Hornell—

their loneliness

given away in poems, only their solitude kept.

1 9 6 8

After Making Love We Hear Footsteps

For I can snore like a bullhorn

or play loud music

or sit up talking with any reasonably sober Irishman and Fergus will only sink deeper into his dreamless sleep, which goes by all in one flash,

but let there be that heavy breathing

or a stifled come-cry anywhere in the house and he will wrench himself awake

and make for it on the run—as now, we lie together,

after making love, quiet, touching along the length of our bodies,

familiar touch of the long-married,

and he appears—in his baseball pajamas, it happens,

the neck opening so small he has to screw t h e m o n —

and flops down between us and hugs us and snuggles himself to sleep,

his face gleaming with satisfaction at being this very child.

In the half darkness we look at each other and smile

and touch arms across this little, startlingly muscled body

—

this one w h o m habit of memory propels to the ground of his making,

sleeper only the mortal sounds can sing awake,

this blessing love gives again into our arms.

1 9 8 0 , 1 9 9 3

1 7 4 3

W . S . M E R W I N

b. 1927

The Drunk in the Furnace

For a good decade

The furnace stood in the naked gully, fireless

And vacant as any hat. Then when it was

No more to them than a hulking black fossil

5 To erode unnoticed with the rest of the junk-hill

By the poisonous creek, and rapidly to be added

To their ignorance.

They were afterwards astonished

To confirm, one morning, a twist of smoke like a pale

io Resurrection, staggering out of its chewed hole,

And to remark then other tokens that someone,

Cozily bolted behind the eye-holed iron

Door of the drafty burner, had there established

His bad castle.

15 Where he gets his spirits

It's a mystery. But the stuff keeps him musical:

Hammer-and-anvil^{ing} with poker and bottle

To his juggled bellowings, till the last groaning clang

As he collapses onto the rioting

20 Springs of a litter of car-seats ranged on the grates,

To sleep like an iron pig.¹

In their tar-paper church

On a text about stoke-holes² that are sated never

Their Reverend lingers. They nod and hate trespassers.

25 When the furnace wakes, though, all afternoon

Their witless offspring flock like piped rats³ to its siren
Crescendo, and agape on the crumbling ridge
Stand in a row and learn.

1 9 6 0

Odysseus⁴

For George Kirstein

Always the setting forth was the same,
Same sea, same dangers waiting for him
As though he had got nowhere but older.

1. A crude block poured from a smelting furnace.
then the children out of town.

2. Furnace mouths.

4. Hero of Homer's Odyssey, in which, after the

3. As in the German folktale about the Pied Piper Trojan War, he wanders for ten years, attempting of Hamelin, whose playing lured first the rats and to return to his home island, Ithaca.

1 7 4 4 / W . S . M E R W I N

B e h i n d h i m o n t h e r e c e d i n g s h o r e

5 T h e i d e n t i c a l r e p r o a c h e s , a n d s o m e w h e r e
O u t b e f o r e h i m , t h e u n r a v e l i n g p a t i e n c e

H e w a s w e d d e d t o . T h e r e w e r e t h e i s l a n d s

E a c h w i t h i t s w o m a n a n d t w i n i n g w e l c o m e

T o b e n a v i g a t e d , a n d o n e t o c a l l " h o m e . " ⁵

10 T h e k n o w l e d g e o f a l l t h a t h e b e t r a y e d

G r e w t i l l i t w a s t h e s a m e w h e t h e r h e s t a y e d

O r w e n t . T h e r e f o r e h e w e n t . A n d w h a t w o n d e r
I f s o m e t i m e s h e c o u l d n o t r e m e m b e r

Which was the one who wished on his departure

15 Perils that he could never sail through,
And which, improbable, remote, and true,
Was the one he kept sailing home to?

1960

Separation

Your absence has gone through me
Like thread through a needle.
Everything I do is stitched with its color.

1973

Losing a Language

A breath leaves the sentences and does not come back yet the old still remembers something that they could say but they know now that such things are no longer believed and they young have fewer words

5 many of the things the words were about no longer exist

the noun for standing in mist by a haunted tree the verb for I

the children will not repeat in the phrases their parents speak somebody has persuaded them

that it is better to say everything differently
so that they can be admired somewhere farther and farther away

5. Alluding to Odysseus's encounters with the sorceress Circe and the nymph Calypso, and to his wife, Penelope, waiting for him on Ithaca.

WHOEVER YOU ARE / 1745

15 where nothing that is here is known we have little to say to each other we are wrong and dark in the eyes of the new owners
the radio is incomprehensible 20 the day is glass
when there is a voice at the door it is foreign everywhere instead of a name there is a lie nobody has seen it happening
nobody remembers
25 this is what the words were made to prophesy
here are the extinct feathers
here is the rain we saw 1988

Whoever You Are

By now when you say *I stop somewhere waiting for you*⁶ who is the I and who come to that is you there are those words that were written a long time ago by someone I have read about who they as sure me is you⁵ the handwriting is still running over the pages
but the one who has disappeared from the script is you I wonder what age you were when tho se words came to you though I think it is not any age at all that is you stopping and waiting under the soles of my feet
in this morning this waking this looking up is you but nothing has stopped in fact and I do not know what is waiting and surely that also is you every time you say it you seem to be speaking through me to some men not yet there who I suppose is you 15 you said you were stopping and waiting before I was here maybe the one I heard say it then is you

1999

6. Final line of Walt Whitman's "Song of Myself" (see p.
1066).

1746

CHARLESTOMLINSON

b. 1927

Farewell to Van Gogh1

The quiet deepens. You will not persuade
One leaf of the accomplished, steady, darkening
Chestnut-tower to displace itself

With more of violence than the air supplies

5 When, gathering dusk, the pond brims evenly

And we must be content with stillness.

Unhastening, daylight withdraws from us its shapes
Into their central calm. Stone by stone

Your rhetoric is dispersed until the earth

10 Becomes once more the earth, the leaves

A sharp partition against cooling blue.

Farewell, and for your instructive frenzy

Gratitude. The world does not end tonight

And the fruit that we shall pick tomorrow

15 Await us, weighing the unstripped bough.

1960

The Picture of J.T. in a Prospect of Stone²

What should one

wish a child

and that, one's own emerging

5 from between the stone lips

of a sheep-stile³

that divides

village graves

io and village green?

— Wish her

the constancy of stone.

— But stone

is hard.

15 — Say, rather it resists

the slow corrosives

and the flight

1. Vincent Van Gogh (1853-1890), Dutch Post-
T. C. in a Prospect of Flowers” (p. 481).

impressionist painter, who suffered bouts of insan-

3. Steps that enable a person to climb over a fence ity and finally killed himself.

or wall.

2. Cf. Andrew Marvell, “The Picture of Little

MR. BRODSKY / 1747

of time

20 and yet it takes the play, the fluency
from light.

— H o w would you know
the gift you'd give 25 was the gift
she'd wish to have?

— G i f t is giving,
gift is meaning:

first

30 I'd give then let her live with it to prove its quality the better and 35 thus learn to love what (to begin with)
she might spurn.

—You'd
40 moralize a gift?

—I'd have her understand the gift I gave her.

— A n d so she shall 45 but let her play her i n n o c e n c e away emerging

as she does

between

50 her d o o m (unknown),

her u n m o w n green.

1 9 6 3

Mr. Brodsky

I had heard

before, of an American w h o would have preferred

to be an Indian;

5 bu t no t

until Mr. Brodsky, of o n e w h o s e professed and long pondered-on passion

was to b e c o m e a Scot,

io w h o even sent for haggis⁴ and oatcakes

4. Traditional Scottish dish, consisting of minced heart, lungs, and liver of a sheep or calf, boiled in an artificial bag (or the animal's stomach) with oatmeal.

1 7 4 8 / C H A R L E S T O M L I N S O N

across continent.

Having read him

in Cambridge English

a verse or two

15 from MacDiarmid,⁵

I was invited

to repeat the reading

before a Burns Night Gathering⁶

where the Balmoral Pipers

20 of Albuquerque would play in the haggis
out of its New York tin.
Of course, I said
No. No. I could not go 25 and then half-regretted I had not been.
But to console
and cure the wish, came
Mr. Brodsky, bringing 30 his pipes and played until the immense, distended bladder of leather seemed it could barely contain its water—tears (idle 35 tears) for the bridal of Annie Laurie⁷ and Morton J. Brodsky.
A bagpipe in a dwelling is a resonant instrument and there he stood 40 lost in the gorse
the heather or whatever six thousand miles and more
from the infection's source, 45 in our neo—New Mexican parlour where I had heard
before of an

American who would have preferred
to be merely an Indian.

1 9 6 6

Ararat⁸

We shall sleep-out together through the dark

The earth's slow voyage across centuries

5. Hugh MacDiarmid, pen name of the Scottish

7. Subject of an anonymous Scottish folk song.

poet Christopher Murray Grieve (1892-1978; see

"Tears, idle tears" are the first words of a song in

pp. 1376-80).

Alfred, Lord Tennyson's narrative poem The Prin-

6. Meeting devoted to Scottish culture, on the cess (see p. 995).

evening of January 25, birthday of the Scottish

8. The mountain on which Noah's ark came to poet Robert Burns (1759-1796; see pp. 747-60).

rest (Genesis 6-10).

A N O T E L E F T I N J I M M Y L E O N A R D ' S S H
A C K / 1 7 4 9

Towards whatever Ararat its ark

Is steering for. Our atoms then will feel

5 The jarring and arrival of that keel

In timelessness, and rise through galaxies,

Motes starred by the first and final light to show

Whether those shores are habitable or no.

1 9 8 7

J A M E S W R I G H T

1927-1980

A Note Left in Jimmy Leonard's Shack

Near the dry river's water-mark we found

Your brother Minnegan,

Flopped like a fish against the muddy ground.

Beany, the kid whose yellow hair turns green,

5 Told me to find you, even in the rain,

And tell you he was drowned.

I hid behind the chassis on the bank,

The wreck of someone's Ford:

I was afraid to come and wake you drunk:

io You told me once the waking up was hard,

The daylight beating at you like a board.

Blood in my stomach sank.

Besides, you told him never to go out

Along the river-side

15 Drinking and singing, clattering about.

You might have thrown a rock at me and cried

I was to blame, I let him fall in the road

And pitch down on his side.

Well, I'll get hell enough when I get home

20 For coming up this far,

Leaving the note, and running as I came.

I'll go and tell my father where you are.

You'd better go find Minnegan before

Policemen hear and come.

25 Beany went home, and I got sick and ran,

You old son of a bitch.

You better hurry down to Minnegan;
He's drunk or dying now, I don't know which,
Rolled in the roots and garbage like a fish.

30 The poor old man.

1999

1 7 5 0 / J A M E S W R I G H T

A Blessing

Just off the highway to Rochester, Minnesota,
Twilight bounds softly forth on the grass.

And the eyes of those two Indian ponies
Darken with kindness.

5 They have come gladly out of the willows
To welcome my friend and me.

We step over the barbed wire into the pasture
Where they have been grazing all day, alone.

They ripple tensely, they can hardly contain their happiness
10 That we have come.

They bow shyly as wet swans. They love each other.
There is no loneliness like theirs.

At home once more,

They begin munching the young tufts of spring in the darkness.

15 I would like to hold the slenderer one in my arms,

For she has walked over to me

And nuzzled my left hand.

She is black and white,

Her mane falls wild on her forehead,

20 And the light breeze moves me to caress her long ear

That is delicate as the skin over a girl's wrist.
Suddenly I realize
That if I stepped out of my body I would break Into blossom.

1 9 6 3

Speak
To speak in a flat voice
Is all that I can do.
I have gone every place
Asking for you.
5 Wondering where to turn
And how the search would end
And the last streetlight spin
Above me blind.

Then I returned rebuffed
io And saw under the sun
The race not to the swift
Nor the battle won.¹

Liston² dives in the tank,
Lord, in Lewiston, Maine,

1. As in Ecclesiastes 9.11: "I returned, and saw
2. In a controversial bout for the heavyweight boxunder the sun, that the race is not to the swift, nor ing title in 1965, Cassius Clay knocked out Sonny the battle to the strong... ."

Liston in one minute.

E Q U I N O X 1 9 8 0 / 1 7 5 1

15 And Ernie Doty's drunk

In hell again.
And Jenny, oh my Jenny
Whom I love, rhyme be damned,
Has broken her spare beauty
20 In a whorehouse old.
She left her new baby
In a bus-station can,
And sprightly danced away
Through Jacksontown.³
25 Which is a place I know,
One where I got picked up
A few shrunk years ago
By a good cop.
Believe it, Lord, or not.
30 Don't ask me who he was.
I speak of flat defeat
In a flat voice.
I have gone forward with
Some, few lonely some.
35 They have fallen to death.
I die with them.
Lord, I have loved Thy cursed,
The beauty of Thy house:
Come down. Come down. Why dost
40 Thou hide thy face?⁴

1 9 6 8

P E T E R D A V I S O N

b. 1928

Equinox 1980

In the stillness after dawn we two paddled a noiseless boat before wakefall across a bay smooth as a mirror,
5 changeless as its glass.

Not a whisper of passage.

Hardly a single stir

inside the horizon

except for the rippling

io wrinkles pushed by our prow

3. Town in central Ohio.

4. As in Job 13.24: "Wherefore hidest thou thy face, and holdest me for thine enemy?"

1 7 5 2 / P E T E R D A V I S O N

and the faraway s w o o p and flurry of a squadron of terns.

T h e tide at its landward e d g e ignited a s m u d g e of c o m m o t i o n ,

15 skittering sandpipers

along t h e farther shore.

In all the days of our marriage

w e had never s e e n

so u n r u f f l e d a morning:

20 never h a d any event s h i m m e r e d w i t h so costly a light

a s w e a s c e n d e d t h e m e a n d e r i n g creek in our s w e e t boat, surprising n o o n e except 25 a bright-eyed otter.

P u s h e d b y m e r e hints
f r o m our paddles, we rode up the t h i c k e n i n g tide
a m o n g heavy w a n d s 30 of ripe m a r s h grass that w a g g e d s e e d - b u n d l e s h i g h above our heads.
N e i t h e r o n e speaking,
we rose to go ashore 35 and l u g g e d away
our featherweight kayak
to w i n t e r quarters, k n o w i n g as we s t o w e d it that this w o u l d be t h e last time, 40 that we w o u l d never set out to sea t o g e t h e r again.

1 9 8 9

Peaches

A m o u t h f u l of l a n g u a g e to swallow:
stretches o f b e a c h , s w e e t c l i n c h e s , b r e a c h e s in walls, p l e a c h e d 0 branches;
b r i t c h e s h a u l e d o v e r h a u n c h e s ;
5 h u n c h e d l e e c h e s , w r e n c h e d teachers.
W h a t E n g l i s h c a n d o: ransack
the w a r m t h that c h u c k l e s b e n e a t h fuzzed surfaces, s m o o t h velvet richness, plashy0 juices,

splashy

io I b e s e e c h you, p e a c h , c l e n c h m e into t h e s w e e t n e s s

of your r e a c h e s .

1 9 8 9

1 7 5 3

D O N A L D H A L L

b. 1928

Exile1

A boy who played and talked and read with me

Fell from a maple tree.

I loved her, but I told her I did not,

And wept, and then forgot.

5 I walked the streets where I was born and grew,

And all the streets were new.

1 9 5 1 - 5 5 1 9 6 9

*From The One Day*2

Prophecy

I will strike down wooden houses; I will burn aluminum clapboard skin; I will strike down garages

where crimson Toyotas sleep side by side; I will explode

palaces of gold, silver, and alabaster: — the summer

5 great house and its folly together. Where shopping malls spread plywood and plaster out, and roadhouses

serve steak and potatoskins beside Alaska king crab;

where triangular flags proclaim tribes of identical campers;

where airplanes nose to tail exhale kerosene,

io weeds and ashes will drowse in continual twilight.
I reject the old house and the new car; I reject
Tory and Whig³ together; I reject the argument that modesty of ambition is sensible because the bigger they are the harder they fall; I reject Waterford;⁴ 15 I reject the five and dime; I reject Romulus and Remus;⁵
I reject Martha's Vineyard and the slamdunk contest;
I reject leaded panes; I reject the appointment made

1. Many versions of this poem exist; cf. a much sions" [Hall's note]. The tone of "Prophecy" longer one, written earlier but published later (in suggests particularly an indebtedness to Heraclitus Hall's 1990 Old and New Poems).

(ca. 540-ca. 480 B.C.E.), the Greek philosopher
2. A three-part, book-length poem written over who argued that the essential stuff of the universe several decades. "Prophecy" is the first of the "Four is pure fire, and to the first part of the book of Classic Texts" within the poem's central section, Isaiah, who in a vision saw the vain and the wicked which is introduced with two epigraphs: "Of the destroyed by fire. Nadezhda Mandelstam (1899-opposites that which tends to birth or creation is 1980), memoirist, was married to the Russian poet called war or strife. That which tends to destruc-Osip Mandelstam (1891-1938).

tion by fire is called concord or peace" (Heraclitus)
3. Historically, opposing parties in British politics.

and “Poetry is preparation for death” (Nadezhda

4. Brand of crystal made in Waterford, Ireland.

Mandelstam). The two principal voices of the

5. In Roman mythology, twin sons of the god Mars poem, a female sculptor and the author, are set and the mortal Rhea Silvia; descendants of the aside here for a “general consciousness that narhero Aeneas; founders of the city of Rome.

rates... . There are many borrowings and allu-

1 7 5 4 / D O N A L D H A L L

at the tennis net or on the seventeenth green; I reject

the Professional Bowlers Tour; I reject matchboxes;

20 I reject purple bathrooms with purple soap in them.

Men who lie awake worrying about taxes, vomiting

at dawn, whose hands shake as they administer Valium, —

skin will peel from the meat of their thighs.

Armies that march all day with elephants past pyramids

25 and roll pulling missiles past generals weary of saluting and past president-emperors splendid in cloth-of-gold, — soft rumps of armies will dissipate in rain. Where square miles of corn waver in Minnesota, where tobacco ripens

in Carolina and apples in New Hampshire, where wheat

30 turns Kansas green, where pulpmills stink in Oregon, —

dust will blow in the darkness and cactus die

before it flowers. Where skiers wait for chairlifts, wearing money, low raspberries will part rib bones.

Where the drive-in church raises a chromium cross,

35 dandelions and milkweed will straggle through blacktop.

I will strike from the ocean with waves afire;
I will strike from the hill with rainclouds of lava;
I will strike from darkened air
with melanoma in the shape of decorative hexagonals.
40 I will strike down embezzlers and eaters of snails.
I reject Japanese smoked oysters, potted chrysanthemums allowed to die, Tupperware parties, Ronald McDonald, Kaposi's sarcoma, the Taj Mahal, Holsteins wearing electronic necklaces, the Algonquin, Tunisian aqueducts, 45 Phi Beta Kappa keys, the Hyatt Embarcadero, carpenters jogging on the median, and betrayal that engorges
the corrupt heart longing for criminal surrender.
I reject shadows in the corner of the atrium
where Phyllis or Phoebe speaks with Billy or Marc 50 who says that afternoons are best although not reliable.
Your children will wander looting the shopping malls
for forty years, suffering for your idleness,
until the last dwarf body rots in a parking lot.
I will strike down lobbies and restaurants in motels
55 carpeted with shaggy petrochemicals from Maine to Hilton Head, from the Skagit6 to Tucson.
I will strike down hang gliders, wiry adventurous boys;
6. A bay and county in Washington State. Hilton Head: resort in South Carolina.

THE ONE DAY / 1755

their thigh bones will snap, their brains slide from their skulls. I will strike down 60 families cooking wildboar in New Mexico backyards.

Then landscape will clutter with incapable machinery, acres of vacant airplanes and schoolbuses, ploughs with seedlings sprouting and turning brown through colters.⁷

Unlettered dwarves will burrow for warmth and shelter
65 in the caves of dynamos and Plymouths, dying of old age at seventeen. Tribes wandering in the wilderness of their ignorant desolation, who suffer from your idleness, will burn your illuminated missals to warm their rickety bodies.

70 Terrorists assemble plutonium because you are idle and industrious. The whip-poor-will shrivels and the pickerel chokes under the government of self-love.

Vacancy burns air so that you strangle without oxygen like rats in a biologist's bell jar. The living god sharpens 75 the scythe of my prophecy to strike down red poppies and blue cornflowers. When priests and policemen strike my body's match, Jehovah will flame out;
Jehovah will suck air from the vents of bombshelters.

Therefore let the Buick swell until it explodes;
so therefore let anorexia starve and bulimia engorge.
When Elzira leaves the house wearing her tennis dress and drives her black Porsche to meet Abraham, quarrels, returns to husband and children, and sobs asleep, drunk, unable to choose among them, — 85 lawns and carpets will turn into tar together with lovers, husbands, and children.

Fat will boil in the sacs of children's clear skin.

I will strike down the nations astronauts and judges;

I will strike down Babylon,⁸ I will strike acrobats, 90 I will strike algae and the white birches.
Because professors of law teach ethics in dumbshow, let the colonel become president; because chief executive officers and commissars collect down for pillows,
let the injustice of cities burn city and suburb;
95 let the countryside burn; let the pineforests of Maine explode like a kitchenmatch and the Book of Kells⁹ turn
7. Cutting tools attached to plows. epitomizing sinfulness (Revelation 18).

8. The city to which the Jews were carried in cap- 9. An ornately illustrated manuscript of the Gos-tivity (2 Kings 24-25); also, a great but fallen city, pels of the Christian Scriptures, produced by Scot-1 7 5 6

/DONALD HALL

ash in a microsecond; let oxen and athletes
flash into grease:—I return to Appalachian rocks;
I shall eat bread; I shall prophesy through millennia
100 of Jehovah's day until the sky reddens over cities:
Then houses will burn, even houses of alabaster;
the sky will disappear like a scroll rolled up and hidden in a cave from the industries of idleness.
Mountains will erupt and vanish, becoming deserts, 105 and the sea wash over the sea's lost islands and the earth split open like a corpse's gassy stomach and the sun turn as black as a widow's skirt and the full moon grow red with blood swollen inside it and stars fall from the sky like wind-blown apples, —
110 while Babylon's managers burn in the rage of the Lamb.¹

1988

Independence Day Letter

Five A.M., the Fourth of July.

I walk by Eagle Pond² with the dog,

wearing my leather coat

against the clear early chill,

5 looking at water lilies that clutch

cool yellow fists together,

as I undertake another day

twelve weeks after the Tuesday

we learned that you would die.

io This afternoon I'll pay bills and write a friend about her book and watch Red Sox baseball.

I'll walk Gussie again.

I'll microwave some Stouffer's.³

15 A woman will drive from Bristol to examine your mother's Ford

parked beside your Saab

in the dead women's used car lot.

Tonight the Andover fireworks

20 will have to go on without me

as I go to bed early, reading

*The Man Without Qualities*⁴

with insufficient attention

tish and Irish monks and completed in Kells,

2. Pond near Hall's home in New Hampshire.

Ireland, in the ninth century.

Bristol and Andover are nearby towns.

1. The Lamb of God; i.e., Jesus. This stanza is a

3. Brand of frozen meals.

freely reconceived paraphrase of Revelation 6.12—

4. Unfinished, massive novel by the Austrian author Robert Musil (1880-1942).

16.

A N C E S T O R / 1 7 5 7

because I keep watching you die.

25 Tomorrow I will wake at five to the tenth Wednesday

after the Wednesday we buried you.

1 9 9 8

T H O M A S K I N S E L L A

b. 1928

Another September

Dreams fled away, this country bedroom, raw

With the touch of the dawn, wrapped in a minor peace,

Hears through an open window the garden draw

Long pitch black breaths, lay bare its apple trees,

5 Ripe pear trees, brambles, windfall-sweetened soil,

Exhale rough sweetness against the starry slates.

Nearer the river sleeps St. John's,¹ all toil

Locked fast inside a dream with iron gates.

Domestic Autumn, like an animal

io Long used to handling by those countrymen,

Rubs her kind hide against the bedroom wall

Sensing a fragrant child come back again

—Not this half-tolerated consciousness,
Its own cold season never done,
15 But that unspeaking daughter, growing less Familiar where we fell asleep as one.
Wakeful moth-wings blunder near a chair,
Toss their light shell at the glass, and go
To inhabit the living starlight. Stranded hair 20 Stirs on the still linen. It is as though
The black breathing that billows her sleep, her name,
Drugged under judgment, waned and—bearing daggers
And balances—down the lampless darkness they came,
Moving like women: Justice, Truth, such figures.

1 9 5 8

Ancestor

I was going up to say something,
and stopped. Her profile against the curtains was old, and dark like a hunting bird's.
1. Church dedicated to St. John the Evangelist.

1 7 5 8 / T H O M A S K I N S E L L A

It was the way she perched on the high stool,
5 staring into herself, with one fist gripping the side of the barrier around her desk
—or her head held by something, from inside.
And not caring for anything around her or anyone there by the shelves.
10 I caught a faint smell, musky and queer.
I may have made some sound—she stopped rocking and pressed her fist in her lap; then she stood up and shut down the lid of the desk, and turned the key.

She shoved a small bottle under her aprons
15 and came toward me, darkening the passageway.
Ancestor ... among sweet- and fruit-boxes.
Her black heart ...
Was that a sigh?
—brushing by me in the shadows,
20 with her heaped aprons, through the red hangings to the scullery, and down to the back room.

1 9 7 3

Tear
I was sent in to see her.
A fringe of jet drops
chattered at my ear
as I went in through the hangings.
5 I was swallowed in chambery dusk.
My heart shrank
at the smell of disused organs and sour kidney.
The black aprons I used to
to bury my face in were folded at the foot of the bed in the last watery light from the window (Go in and say goodbye to her) and I was carried off 15 to unfathomable depths.
I turned to look at her.
She stared at the ceiling and puffed her cheek, distracted, propped high in the bed

20 resting for the next attack.

T E A R / 1 7 5 9

The covers were gathered close up to her mouth,
that the lines of ill-temper still marked. Her grey hair 25 was loosened out like a young woman's all over the pillow, mixed with the shadows criss-crossing her forehead
and at her mouth and eyes, 30 like a web of strands tying down her head and tangling down toward the shadow eating away the floor at my feet.
I couldn't stir at first, nor wished to,
for fear she might turn and tempt me 35 (my own father's mother) with open mouth
—with some fierce wheedling whisper—to hide myself one last time against her, and bury my 40 self in her drying mud.
Was I to kiss her? As soon kiss the damp that crept in the flowered walls of this pit.

45 Yet I had to kiss.

I knelt by the bulk of the death bed and sank my face in the chill and smell of her black aprons.

Snuff and musk, the folds against my eyelids,
50 carried me into a derelict place smelling of ash: unseen walls and roofs rustled like breathing.

I found myself disturbing dead ashes for any trace 55 of warmth, when far off in the vaults a single drop splashed. And I found what I was looking for
—not heat nor fire,
60 not any comfort,

1 7 6 0 / T H O M A S K I N S E L L A

but her voice, soft, talking to someone about my father: “God help him, he cried big tears over there by the machine for the poor little thing.” Bright 65 drops on the wooden lid for my infant sister. My own wail of child-animal grief was soon done, with any early guess at sad dullness and tedious pain 70 and lives bitter with hard bondage.
How I tasted it now—

her heart beating in my mouth!
She drew an uncertain breath and pushed at the clothes
75 and shuddered tiredly.
I broke free
and left the room promising myself
when she was really dead
so I would really kiss.
My grandfather half looked up from the fireplace as I came out, and shrugged and turned back with a deaf stare to the heat.
85 I fidgeted beside him for a minute and went out to the shop.
It was still bright there and I felt better able to breathe.
Old age can digest
90 anything: the commotion at Heaven's gate—the struggle in store for you all your life.
How long and hard it is before you get to Heaven, 95 unless like little Agnes you vanish with early tears.

1 9 7 3

1 7 6 1

P H I L I P L E V I N E

b. 1928

They Feed They Lion

Out of burlap sacks, out of bearing butter,
Out of black bean and wet slate bread,
Out of the acids of rage, the candor of tar,
Out of creosote, gasoline, drive shafts, wooden dollies,
5 They Lion grow.

Out of the gray hills
Of industrial barns, out of rain, out of bus ride,
West Virginia to Kiss My Ass, out of buried aunties,
Mothers hardening like pounded stumps, out of stumps,
10 Out of the bones' need to sharpen and the muscles' to stretch,

They Lion grow.

Earth is eating trees, fence posts,
Gutted cars, earth is calling in her little ones,
"Come home, Come home!" From pig balls,
15 From the ferocity of pig driven to holiness,
From the furred ear and the full jowl come
The repose of the hung belly, from the purpose
They Lion grow.

From the sweet glues of the trotters¹
20 Come the sweet kinks of the fist, from the full flower
Of the hams the thorax² of caves,
From "Bow Down" come "Rise Up,"
Come they Lion from the reeds of shovels,
The grained arm that pulls the hands,
25 They Lion grow.

From my five arms and all my hands,
From all my white sins forgiven, they feed,
From my car passing under the stars,
They Lion, from my children inherit,
30 From the oak turned to a wall, they Lion,
From they sack and they belly opened
And all that was hidden burning on the oil-stained earth
They feed they Lion and he comes.

1 9 7 2

You Can Have It

My brother comes home from work
and climbs the stairs to our room.

I can hear the bed groan and his shoes drop one by one. You can have it, he says.

1. Cooked pigs' feet.
2. Chest cavity.

1 7 6 2 / P H I L I P L E V I N E

5 The moonlight streams in the window and his unshaven face is whitened like the face of the moon. He will sleep long after noon and waken to find me gone.

Thirty years will pass before I remember 10 that moment when suddenly I knew each man has one brother who dies when he sleeps and sleeps when he rises to face this life,
and that together they are only one man sharing a heart that always labors, hands 15 yellowed and cracked, a mouth that gasps

for breath and asks, Am I gonna make it?
All night at the ice plant he had fed the chute its silvery blocks, and then I stacked cases of orange soda for the children 20 of Kentucky, one gray boxcar at a time with always two more waiting. We were twenty for such a short time and always in the wrong clothes, crusted with dirt and sweat. I think now we were never twenty.
25 In 1948 in the city of Detroit, founded by de la Mothe Cadillac for the distant purposes of Henry Ford,³ no one wakened or died,
no one walked the streets or stoked a furnace,
for there was no such year, and now 30 that year has fallen off all the old newspapers, calendars, doctors' appointments, bonds,
wedding certificates, drivers licenses.
The city slept. The snow turned to ice.
The ice to standing pools or rivers
35 racing in the gutters. Then bright grass rose between the thousands of cracked squares, and that grass died. I give you back 1948.
I give you all the years from then to the coming one. Give me back the moon 40 with its frail light falling across a face.

3. American automobile manufacturer (1863— established a fur-trade post, later the city of 1947), associated with Detroit. Antoine Laumetde Detroit; Cadillac cars are named for him.

la Mothe Cadillac (1658-1730), born in France,

THE SIMPLE TRUTH / 1763

Give me back my young brother, hard and furious, with wide shoulders and a curse for God and burning eyes that look upon all creation and say, You can have it.

1979

The Simple Truth

I bought a dollar and a half's worth of small red potatoes, took them home, boiled them in their jackets and ate them for dinner with a little butter and salt.

Then I walked through the dried fields

5 on the edge of town. In middle June the light hung on in the dark furrows at my feet,

and in the mountain oaks overhead the birds

were gathering for the night, the jays and mockers

squawking back and forth, the finches still darting

io into the dusty light. The woman who sold me the potatoes was from Poland; she was someone out of my childhood in a pink spangled sweater and sunglasses praising the perfection of all her fruits and vegetables

at the road-side stand and urging me to taste

15 even the pale, raw sweet corn trucked all the way,

she swore, from New Jersey. "Eat, eat," she said,

"Even if you don't I'll say you did."

Some things

you know all your life. They are so simple and true

20 they must be said without elegance, meter and rhyme,

they must be laid on the table beside the salt shaker,

the glass of water, the absence of light gathering in the shadows of picture frames, they must be naked and alone, they must stand for themselves.

25 My friend Henri and I arrived at this together in 1965
before I went away, before he began to kill himself, and the two of us to betray our love. Can you taste what I'm saying? It is onions or potatoes, a pinch of simple salt, the wealth of melting butter, it is obvious, 30 it stays in the back of your throat like a truth
you never uttered because the time was always wrong,
it stays there for the rest of your life, unspoken,
made of that dirt we call earth, the metal we call salt,
in a form we have no words for, and you live on it.

1 9 9 4

1 7 6 4

A N N E S E X T O N

1928-1974

The Truth the Dead Know

F o r m y m o t h e r , b o r n M a r c h 1 9 0 2 , d i e d M a r c h
1 9 5 9 , a n d m y f a t h e r , b o r n F e b r u a r y 1 9 0 0 , d i e d J u n e 1 9 5 9

Gone, I say and walk from church,
refusing the stiff procession to the grave,
letting the dead ride alone in the hearse.

It is June. I am tired of being brave.

5 We drive to the Cape. I cultivate myself where the sun gutters from the sky, where the sea swings in like an iron gate and we touch. In another country people die.

My darling, the wind falls in like stones
io from the whitehearted water and when we touch
we enter touch entirely. No one's alone.
Men kill for this, or for as much.
And what of the dead? They lie without shoes in their stone boats. They are more like stone 15 than the sea would be if it stopped. They refuse to be blessed, throat, eye and knucklebone.

1 9 6 2

And One for My Dame¹

A born salesman,
my father made all his dough
by selling wool to Fieldcrest, Woolrich and Faribo.
A born talker,
5 he could sell one hundred wet-down bales of that white stuff. He could clock the miles and sales and make it pay.
At home each sentence he would utter had first pleased the buyer who'd paid him off in butter.
io Each word
had been tried over and over, at any rate, on the man who was sold by the man who filled my plate.

1. Allusion to the nursery rhyme "Baa Baa Black Sheep," which ends "One for the master / And one for the dame, / And one for the little boy / Who lives down the lane."

A N D O N E F O R M Y D A M E / 1 7 6 5

My father hovered
over the Yorkshire pudding and the beef:
15 a peddler, a hawker, a merchant and an Indian chief.

Roosevelt! Willkie! and war!²
How suddenly gauche I was with my old-maid heart and my funny teenage applause.
Each night at home
20 my father was in love with maps
while the radio fought its battles with Nazis and Japs.
Except when he hid
in his bedroom on a three-day drunk,
he typed out complex itineraries, packed his trunk, 25 his matched luggage
and pocketed a confirmed reservation, his heart already pushing over the red routes of the nation.
I sit at my desk
each night with no place to go,
30 opening the wrinkled maps of Milwaukee and Buffalo,
the whole U.S., its cemeteries, its arbitrary time zones,
through routes like small veins, capitals like small stones.
He died on the road,
35 his heart pushed from neck to back,
his white hanky signaling from the window of the Cadillac.
My husband,
as blue-eyed as a picture book, sells wool:
boxes of card waste, laps and rovings he can pull 40 to the thread
and say Leicester, Rambouillet, Merino,³
a half-blood, it's greasy and thick, yellow as old snow.
And when you drive off, my darling,

Yes, sir! Yes, sir! It's one for my dame, 45 your sample cases branded with my father's name,
your itinerary open,
its tolls ticking and greedy,
its highways built up like new loves, raw and speedy.

1 9 6 6

2. Franklin Delano Roosevelt (1882-1945), U.S. Wendell Lewis Willkie (1892-1944).

president during World War II, was opposed by 3. Types of wool.

1 7 6 6

L. E. S I S S M A N

1928-1976

*From Dying: An Introduction*¹

IV. Path. Report

Bruisingly cradled in a Harvard chair
Whose orange arms cramp my pink ones, and whose black Back stamps my back with splat marks, I receive
The brunt of the pathology report,
5 Bitingly couched in critical terms of my Tissue of fabrications, which is bad.
That Tyrian⁰ specimen on the limelit stage purplish
Surveyed by Dr. Cyclops,² magnified Countless diameters on its thick slide, io Turns out to end in -oma.³ “But be glad These things are treatable today,” I'm told.
“Why, fifteen years ago—” a dark and grave-Shaped pause. “But now, a course of radiation, and—”
Sun rays break through. “And if you want X-ray,

15 You've come to the right place." A history,
A half-life of the hospital. Marie Curie must have endowed it. Cyclotrons,⁴
Like missile silos, lurk within its walls.
It's reassuring, anyway. But bland 20 And middle-class as these environs are,
And sanguine as his measured words may be,
And soft his handshake, the webbed, inky hand
Locked on the sill, and the unshaven face
Biding outside the window still appall
25 Me as I leave the assignation place.

V. Outbound

Outside, although November by the clock,
Has a thick smell of spring,
And everything—
The low clouds lit
5 Fluorescent green by city lights;
The molten, hissing stream
Of white car lights, cooling
To red and vanishing;
The leaves,
io Still running from last summer, chattering
Across the pocked concrete;
The wind in trees;
The ones and twos,
1. A long poem in five parts.
4. Accelerators in which particles are propelled in
2. Title character of a 1940 science fiction/horror spiral paths. Half-life: time required for half the movie, a “mad scientist” who shrinks people;

atoms of a radioactive substance to disintegrate.
named for the one-eyed giants of Greek myth.
Marie Curie (1867-1934), Polish physicist in
3. I.e., a cancer.

France, codiscoverer of radium.

A D E A T H P L A C E / 1 7 6 7

The twos and threes
15 Of college girls,
Each shining in the dark,
Each carrying
A book or books,
Each laughing to her friend
20 At such a night in fall;
The two-and-twos
Of boys and girls who lean
Together in an A and softly walk
Slowly from lamp to lamp,
25 Alternatively lit
And nighted; Autumn Street,
Astonishingly named, a rivulet
Of asphalt twisting up and back
To some spring out of sight—and everything
30 Recalls one fall
Twenty-one years ago, when I,
A freshman, opening
A green door just across the river,

Found the source
35 Of spring in that warm night,
Surprised the force
That sent me on my way
And set me down
Today. Tonight. Through my 40 Invisible new veil
Of finity, I see
November's world—
Low scud, slick street, three giggling girls—
As, oddly, not as sombre
45 As December,
But as green
As anything:
As spring.
1968
A Deathplace
Very few people know where they will die,
But I do: in a brick-faced hospital,
Divided, not unlike Caesarean Gaul,^s
Into three parts: the Dean Memorial
5 Wing, in the classic cast of 1910,
Green-grated in unglazed, Aeolian Embrasures:⁶ the Maud Wiggin Building, which Commemorates a dog-jawed Boston bitch
Who fought the brass⁷ down to their whipcord knees
5. Roman emperor Julius Caesar (100—44 B.C.E.) an Aeolian harp.

conquered Gaul and divided it into three parts. 7. High-ranking military officers.

6. Recesses of doors or windows in the shape of

1 7 6 8 / T H O M G U N N

In World War I, and won enlisted men
Some decent hospitals, and, being rich,
Donated her own granite monument;
The Mandeville Pavilion, pink-brick tent
With marble piping, flying snapping flags
Above the entry where our bloody rags
Are rolled in to be sponged and sewn again.
Today is fair; tomorrow, scourging rain
(If only my own tears) will see me in Those jaundiced and distempered corridors
Off which the five-foot-wide doors slowly close.
White as my skimpy chiton,⁰ I will cringe gown
Before the pinpoint of the least syringe;
Before the buttered catheter goes in;
Before the I.V.'s lisp and drip begins
Inside my skin; before the rubber hand
Upon the lancet takes aim and descends
To lay me open, and upon its thumb
Retracts the trouble, a malignant plum;
And finally, I'll quail before the hour
When the authorities shut off the power
In that vast hospital, and in my bed
I'll feel my blood go thin, go white, the red,
The rose all leached away, and I'll go dead.

Then will the business of life resume:
The muffled trolley wheeled into my room,
The off-white blanket blanking off my face,
The stealing, secret, private, largo race slow
Down halls and elevators to the place
I'll be consigned to for transshipment, cased
In artificial air and light: the ward
That's underground; the terminal; the morgue.
Then one fine day when all the smart flags flap,
A booted man in black with a peaked cap
Will call for me and troll me down the hall
And slot me into his black car. That's all.

1 9 6 9

T H O M G U N N

1929-2004

On the Move

“Man, you gotta Go.”

The blue jay scuffling in the bushes follows
Some hidden purpose, and the gust of birds
That spurts across the field, the wheeling swallows,

A M A P O F T H E C I T Y / 1 7 6 9

Have nested in the trees and undergrowth.
5 Seeking their instinct, or their poise, or both,
One moves with an uncertain violence
Under the dust thrown by a baffled sense
Or the dull thunder of approximate words.
On motorcycles, up the road, they come:
10 Small, black, as flies hanging in heat, the Boys,

Until the distance throws them forth, their hum
Bulges to thunder held by calf and thigh.
In goggles, donned impersonality,
In gleaming jackets trophied with the dust,
15 They strap in doubt—by hiding it, robust—
And almost hear a meaning in their noise.
Exact conclusion of their hardiness
Has no shape yet, but from known whereabouts
They ride, direction where the tyres press.
20 They scare a flight of birds across the field:
Much that is natural, to the will must yield.
Men manufacture both machine and soul,
And use what they imperfectly control
To dare a future from the taken routes.
25 It is a part solution, after all.
One is not necessarily discord
On earth; or damned because, half animal,
One lacks direct instinct, because one wakes
Afloat on movement that divides and breaks.
BO One joins the movement in a valueless world,
Choosing it, till, both hurler and the hurled,
One moves as well, always toward, toward.
A minute holds them, who have come to go:
The self-defined, astride the created will 35 They burst away; the towns they travel through
Are home for neither bird nor holiness,
For birds and saints complete their purposes.
At worst, one is in motion; and at best,

Reaching no absolute, in which to rest,
40 One is always nearer by not keeping still.

California 1957

A Map of the City

I stand upon a hill and see
A luminous country under me,
Through which at two the drunk must weave;
The transient's pause, the sailor's leave.

1 7 7 0 / T H O M G U N N

5 I notice, looking down the hill,
Arms braced upon a window sill;
And on the web of fire escapes
Move the potential, the grey shapes.
I hold the city here, complete:
10 And every shape defined by light
Is mine, or corresponds to mine,
Some flickering or some steady shine.
This map is ground of my delight.
Between the limits, night by night,
15 I watch a malady's advance,
I recognize my love of chance.
By the recurrent lights I see Endless potentiality,
The crowded, broken, and unfinished!
20 I would not have the risk diminished.

1 9 6 1

Black Jackets

In the silence that prolongs the span

Rawly of music when the record ends,
The red-haired boy who drove a van
In weekday overalls but, like his friends,
5 Wore cycle boots and jacket here
To suit the Sunday hangout he was in,
Heard, as he stretched back from his beer,
Leather creak softly round his neck and chin.
Before him, on a coal-black sleeve
io Remote exertion had lined, scratched, and burned Insignia that could not revive
The heroic fall or climb where they were earned.
On the other drinkers bent together,
Concocting selves for their impervious kit,
15 He saw it as no more than leather
Which, taut across the shoulders grown to it,
Sent through the dimness of a bar
As sudden and anonymous hints of light
As those that shipping give, that are 20 Now flickers in the Bay,¹ now lost in night.
1. San Francisco Bay.

FROM THE WAVE / 1771

He stretched out like a cat, and rolled
The bitterish taste of beer upon his tongue,
And listened to a joke being told:
The present was the things he stayed among.
25 If it was only loss he wore,
He wore it to assert, with fierce devotion,
Complicity and nothing more.

He recollected his initiation,
And one especially of the rites.
BO For on his shoulders they had put tattoos:
The group's name on the left, The Knights,
And on the right the slogan Born To Lose.

1 9 6 1

My Sad Captains

One by one they appear in the darkness: a few friends, and a few with historical names. How late they start to shine!
5 but before they fade they stand perfectly embodied, all the past lapping them like a cloak of chaos. They were men who, I thought, lived only to io renew the wasteful force they spent with each hot convulsion.
They remind me, distant now.
True, they are not at rest yet,
but now that they are indeed 15 apart, winnowed0 from failures, separated
they withdraw to an orbit and turn with disinterested hard energy, like the stars.

1 9 6 1

From the Wave

It mounts at sea, a concave wall

Down-ribbed with shine,
And pushes forward, building tall
Its steep incline.

1 7 7 2 / T H O M G U N N

5 Then from their hiding rise to sight
Black shapes on boards
Bearing before the fringe of white
It mottles towards.
Their pale feet curl, they poise their weight
10 With a learn'd skill.

It is the wave they imitate Keeps them so still.

The marbling bodies have become Half wave, half men,
15 Grafted it seems by feet of foam
Some seconds, then,
Late as they can, they slice the face
In timed procession:

Balance is triumph in this place,
20 Triumph possession.

The mindless heave of which they rode
A fluid shelf
Breaks as they leave it, falls and, slowed,
Loses itself.

25 Clear, the sheathed bodies slick as seals
Loosen and tingle;
And by the board the bare foot feels
The suck of shingle.²

They paddle in the shallows still;
30 Two splash each other;
Then all swim out to wait until
The right waves gather.

1 9 7 1

“All Do Not All Things Well”³

Implies that some therefore
Do well, for its own sake,
One thing they undertake,
Because it has enthralled them.

5 I used to like the two

Auto freaks as I called them

Who laboured in their driveway,

2. Coarse, rounded pebbles and stones at the sea- 3. Thomas Campion, “Now Winter Nights shore. Enlarge,” line 17 (see p.
281).

” ALL D O N O T A L L T H I N G S W E L L ” / 1 7 7 3

Its concrete black with oil,

In the next block that year.

10 One, hurt in jungle war,

Had a false leg, the other

Raised a huge beard above

A huge Hell’s Angel belly.

They seemed to live on beer

15 And corn chips from the deli.

Always with friends, they sprawled

Beneath a ruined car

In that inert but live way

Of scrutinizing innards.

20 And one week they extracted
An engine to examine,
Transplant shining like tar
Fished out into the sun.
“It’s all that I enjoy,”
25 Said the stiff-legged boy.
That was when the officious
Realtor had threatened them
For brashly operating
A business on the street
30 —An outsider, that woman
Who wanted them evicted,
Wanted the neighbourhood neat
To sell it. That was when The boy from Vietnam told me
35 That he’d firebomb her car.
He didn’t of course, she won.
I am sorry that they went.
Quick with a friendly greeting,
They were gentle joky men
40 —Certainly not ambitious,
Perhaps not intelligent Unless about a car,
Their work one thing they knew
They could for certain do 45 With a disinterest
And passionate expertise
To which they gave their best

Desires and energies.

Such oily-handed zest

50 By-passed the self like love.

I thought that they were good
For any neighbourhood.

1 9 9 9

1 7 7 4 / T H O M G U N N

The Missing

Now as I watch the progress of the plague,⁴
The friends surrounding me fall sick, grow thin,
And drop away. Bared, is my shape less vague
—Sharply exposed and with a sculpted skin?

⁵ I do not like the statue's chill contour,
Not nowadays. The warmth investing me
Let outward through mind, limb, feeling, and more
In an involved increasing family.

Contact of friend led to another friend,
¹⁰ Supple entwinement through the living mass
Which for all that I knew might have no end,
Image of an unlimited embrace.

I did not just feel ease, though comfortable:
Aggressive as in some ideal of sport,
¹⁵ With ceaseless movement thrilling through the whole,
Their push kept me as firm as their support.

But death—Their deaths have left me less defined:
It was their pulsing presence made me clear.

I borrowed from it, I was unconfined,
²⁰ Who tonight balance unsupported here,
Eyes glaring from raw marble, in a pose
Languorously part-buried in the block,
Shins perfect and no calves, as if I froze

Between potential and a finished work.
25 —Abandoned incomplete, shape of a shape,
In which exact detail shows the more strange,
Trapped in unwholeness, I find no escape
Back to the play of constant give and change.

1 9 8 7 1 9 9 2

4. AIDS.

1 7 7 5

J O H N H O L L A N D E R

b. 1929

Swan and Shadow

Dusk

Above the water hang the loud

flies

Here

O so

gray

then

What A pale signal will appear

When Soon before its shadow fades

Where Here in this pool of opened eye

In us No Upon us As at the very edges of where we take shape in the dark air

this object bares its image awakening ripples of recognition that will brush darkness up into light

even after this bird this hour both drift by atop the perfect sad instant now already passing out of sight toward yet-untroubled reflection
this image bears its object darkening into memorial shades Scattered bits of light No of water Or something across water Breaking up No Being regathered soon Yet by then a swan will have gone Yes out of mind into what vast pale hush of a place past sudden dark as if a swan sang

1 9 6 9

1 7 7 6 / J O H N H O L L A N D E R

Adam's Task

” And Adam gave names to all cattle, and to the fowl of the air, and to every beast of the field ...”

—Gen. 2 : 2 0

Thou, paw-paw-paw; thou, glurd; thou, spotted Glurd; thou, whitestap, lurching through
The high-grown brush; thou, pliant-footed,
Implex; thou, awagabu.
5 Every burrower, each flier

Came for the name he had to give:
Gay, first work, ever to be prior,
Not yet sunk to primitive.
Thou, verdle; thou, McFleery's pomma;
io Thou; thou; thou—three types of grawl;
Thou, flisket; thou, kabasch; thou, comma-
Eared mashawk; thou, all; thou, all.
Were, in a fire of becoming,
Laboring to be burned away,
15 Then work, half-measuring, half-humming,
Would be as serious as play.
Thou, pambler; thou, rivarn; thou, greater Wherret, and thou, lesser one;
Thou, sproal; thou, zant; thou, lily-eater.
20 Naming's over. Day is done.

1 9 7 1

An Old-Fashioned Song

(Nous n'irons plus au bois) I

No more walks in the wood:
The trees have all been cut Down, and where once they stood
Not even a wagon rut
5 Appears along the path
Low brush is taking over.
No more walks in the wood;
This is the aftermath
Of afternoons in the clover
io Fields where we once made love

1 . ” ‘Nous n’irons plus au bois / Les lauriers sont coupes’ (We’ll go no more to the woods / The laurels have been cut down)—from a French children’s round dance” [Hollander’s
note].

V A R I A T I O N S O N A F R A G M E N T B Y T R U M
B U L L S T I C K N E Y / 1 7 7 7

Then wandered home together
Where the trees arched above,
Where we made our own weather
When branches were the sky.
15 Now they are gone for good,
And you, for ill, and I Am only a passer-by.

We and the trees and the way
Back from the fields of play 20 Lasted as long as we could.
No more walks in the wood.

1 9 9 3

Variations on a Fragment by Trumbull Stickney²

*I hear a river thro’ the valley wander
Whose water runs, the song alone remaining.
A rainbow stands and summer passes under,
Flowing like silence in the light of wonder.
5 In the near distances it is still raining
Where now the valley fills again with thunder,
Where now the river in her wide meander,
Losing at each loop what she had been gaining,
Moves into what one might as well call yonder.
io The way of the dark water is to ponder*

The way the light sings as of something waning.
The far-off waterfall can sound asunder
Stillness of distances, as if in blunder,
Tumbling over the rim of all explaining.
15 Water proves nothing, but can only maunder.³
Shadows show nothing, but can only launder
The lovely land that sunset had been staining,
Long fields of which the falling light grows fonder.
Here summer stands while all its songs pass under,
20 A riverbank still time runs by, remaining.
I will remember rainbows as I wander.

1 9 9 3

2. Cf. Stickney's "Fragments," IX (p. 1252). The 3. Move aimlessly; also, mutter, three-line poem provides Hollander's first stanza.

1 7 7 8

R I C H A R D H O W A R D

b. 1929

Nikolaus Mardruz to his Master Ferdinand,
Count of Tyrol, 15651

A tribute to Robert Browning and in celebration of the 65th birthday of

Harold Bloom,² who made such tribute only natural.

My Lord recalls Ferrara?³ H o w walls rise out of water yet appear to recede identically

into it, as if

5 built in both directions: soaring and sinking ...

S u c h mirroring was my first dismay—

my next, having crossed the moat, was making out that, for all its grandeur, the great pile, observed close to, is close to a ruin!
(Even My Lord's most unstinting dowry
may not restore these wasted precincts to what their deteriorating state demands.)

15 Queasy it made me, glancing first down there at swans in the moat apparently feeding on their own doubled image, then up at the citadel, 20 so high—or so deep,
and everywhere those carved effigies of m e n and w o m e n , monsters among them crowding the ramparts and seeming at h o m e
25 in the dingy water that s o m e h o w held them up as if for our surveillance—ours?
anyone's w h o looked!
All that pretension
of marble display, the whole improbable 30 menagerie with but o n e purpose:
having to be seen.
Such was the matter
of Ferrara, and such the manner,
w h e n at last we met, of the Duke in greeting

35 My Lordship's Envoy:

life in fallen stone!

1. This poem is in the voice of the envoy of the Count's niece closes the poem and provides Count of Tyrol, upon returning home to Austria the occasion for Howard's poem. Cf. footnote 4 to from the visit to the Duke of Ferrara portrayed in "My Last Duchess" (p. 1012) for Rrowning's "My Last Duchess," by the English poet Robert blending of fact and fiction.

Rrowning (1812-1899). Rrowning's poem implies

2. American literary critic (b. 1930).

that the Duke ordered his first wife's death; the

3. City in northern Italy.

possibility of marriage between himself and the

NIKOLAUS MARDRUZ TO HIS MASTER FERDINAND / 1779

Several hours were to elapse, in the keeping of his lackeys, before the Envoy of My Lord the Count

40 of Tyrol might see or even be seen to by His Grace

the Duke of Ferrara, though from such neglect no deliberate

slight need be inferred:

45 now that I have had an opportunity

—have had, indeed, the obligation—

to fix on His Grace

that per lustration 0 thorough inspection

or power of scrutiny for which so (I believe) My Lord holds his Envoy's service in some favor still,
I see that the Duke,
by his own lights or, perhaps, more properly said, by his own tenebrosity, 0 obscurity 55 could offer some excuse for such cunctation 0 ... tardiness
Appraising a set of cameos
just brought from Cairo by a Jew in his trust,
His Grace had been rapt 60 in connoisseurship, that study which alone can distract him from his wonted courtesy; he was affability itself, once his mind
65 could be deflected from mere objects.
At last I presented (with those documents which in some detail describe and define the duties of both signators) the portrait 70
of your daughter the Countess, observing the while his countenance. No fault was found with our contract, of which a charter had been so correctly framed 75 (if I may say so) as to ascertain

a pre-nuptial alliance which must persuade and please the most punctilious (and impecunious)
so of future husbands.

Principally, or (if I may be allowed the amendment) perhaps Ducally, His Grace acknowledged himself beguiled by

85 Cranach's 4 portrait of four young Countesses, praising the design, the hues, the glaze—the he frame!

4. Lucas Cranach the Younger (1515—1586), German painter and graphic artist.

1780 / RICHARD HOWARD

and appeared averse,
for a while, even
to letting the panel leave his hands!
90 Examining those same hands, I was convinced that no matter what the result of our
(at this point, promising) negotiations, your daughter's likeness must now remain 95 “for good,” as we say, among Ferrara's
treasures, already one more trophy in His Grace's multifarious holdings, like those marble busts
IOO lining the drawbridge,
like those weed-stained statues grinning up at us from the still moat, and—inside as well as out—those grotesque figures and faces 105 fastened to the walls. So be it!

Real bother (after all, one painting, for Cranach —and My Lord—need be no great forfeiture)
110 commenced only when the Duke himself led me out of the audience-chamber and laboriously (he is no longer
a young man) to a secret penthouse 115 high on the battlements where he can indulge those despotic tastes
he denominates,
half smiling over the heartless words,
“the relative consolations of semblance.”
120 “Sir, suppose you draw that curtain,” smiling
in earnest now, and so I sought—but what appeared a piece of drapery proved a painted deceit!
125 My embarrassment
afforded a cue for audible laughter, and only then His Grace, visibly relishing his trick,
turned the thing around,

130 whereupon appeared, on the reverse,
the late Duchess of Ferrara to the life!

Instantly the Duke praised the portrait
so readily provided by one Pandolf⁵—

135 a monk by some profane article attached to the court,

5. Fra (i.e., Brother) Pandolph, an artist invented by Browning.

NIKOLAUS MARDRUZ TO HIS MASTER FERDINAND / 1781

h e n c e answerable

for taking l i k e n e s s e s as required

in but a day's diligence, so it was c l a i m e d ...

140 Myself I find it but a m o u n t e b a n k ' s ⁰ charlatan's

p r o f i c i e n c y — a n o t h e r c h i c a n e , like that illusive curtain, a waxwork sort of nature called forth:

145 cold legerdemain!⁰ sleight of hand.

T h o u g h extranea s u c h as t h e hares

(copulating!), t h e doves, and a full-blown rose

w e r e showily l i m n e d ,

I c o u l d n o t discern

i s o ought to be loved in t h a t c o u n t e n a n c e itself,

likely to rival, m u c h less to excel

t h e life i l l u m i n e d

in Cranach's i m a g e of our C o u n t e s s , w h i c h H i s G r a c e had set 155 beside the dead w o m a n ' s p r e s e n t m e n t ... A n d took, so evident was the supremacy,

no further pains to assert Fra Pandolf's skill.
One last hard look, where upon the Duke
i60 resumed his discourse
in an altered tone,
now some unintelligible rant
of stooping—His Grace chooses “never to stoop”
when he makes reproof ...

165 My Lord will take this as but a figure: not only is the Duke no longer young, his body is so queerly misshapen
that even to speak

170 of “not stooping” seems absurdity:
the creature is stooped, whether by cruel or impartial cause — say

Time or the Tempter 0 — Devil

I shall not venture to hypothesize. Cause

175 or no cause, it would appear he marked some motive for his

“reproof,” a mortal chastisement in fact inflicted on his poor Duchess, put away (I take it so)

is for smiling — at whom?

Brother Pandolf? or some visitor to court during the sitting?

— too generally, if I construe

the Duke 's clue rightly, 185 to survive the terms of his ... severe protocol. My Lord, at the time it was delivered to me thus,
theadmonition

1782 / RICHARD HOWARD

if indeed it was

190 any such thing, seemed no more of a menace than the rest of his rodomontade;⁰ boasting

item, he pointed,

as we toiled downstairs,

to that bronze Neptune by our old Claus

195 (there must be at least six of them cluttering

the Summer Palace

at Innsbruck), claiming it was "cast in bronze for me."⁶ Nonsense, of course.

But upon reflection, I suppose

200 we had better take the old reprobate

at his unspeakable word ... Why, even assuming his boasts should be as plausible

as his avarice,

205 no "cause" for dismay:

once ensconced here as the Duchess, your daughter need no more apprehend the Duke's murderous temper

than his matchless taste.

210 For I have devised a means whereby the dowry so flagrantly pursued by our insolvent Duke (“no

just pretense of mine be disallowed”⁷ indeed!), instead of being 215 paid as he pleads in one globose⁰ sum, globe-shaped should drip into his coffers by degrees—
say, one fifth each year—then after five such years, the dowry itself to be doubled, 220 always assuming that Her Grace enjoys her usual smiling health. The years are her ally in such an arbitrament, and with confidence 225 My Lord can assure the new Duchess (assuming her Duke abides by these stipulations and his own propensity for accumulating 230 “semblances”) the long devotion (so long as he lasts) of her last Duke ... Or more likely, if I guess aright
your daughter’s intent, of that young lordling I might make so 235 bold as to designate her next Duke, as well ...

6. Cf. “My Last Duchess,” lines 54-56. Claus of 7. Cf. “My Last Duchess,” lines 50-51.

Innsbruck is also fictional.

LIKE DOLMENS ROUND MY CHILDHOOD,
THE OLD PEOPLE / 1783

Ever determined in My Lordship's service,
I remain his Envoy
to Ferrara as to the world.
Nikolaus Mardruz.

1995

JOHN MONTAGUE

b. 1929

Like Dolmens¹ Round My Childhood, the Old People
Like dolmens round my childhood, the old people.

Jamie Mac Crystals ang to himself,
A broken song without tune, without words;
He tipped me a penny every pension day.

5 Fed kindly crusts to winter birds.

When he died, his cottage was robbed,
Mattress and money box torn and searched.
Only the corpse they didn't disturb.

Maggie Owens was surrounded by animals,
io Amongrel bitch and shivering pups,
Even in her bedroom a she-goat cried.

She was a well of gossip defiled,²

Fanged chronicler of a whole countryside;

Reputed a witch, all I could find

15 Was her lonely need to deride.

The Nialls lived along a mountain lane

Where the bells bloomed, clumps of foxglove.

All were blind, with Blind Pension and Wireless,³
Dead eyes serpent-flicked as one entered 20 To shelter from a downpour of mountain
rain.

Crickets chirped under the rocking hearths
to the Until the muddy sun shone out again.

Mary Moore lived in a crumbling gatehouse,
Famous as Pisa⁴ for its leaning gable.

25 Bag-apron and boots, she tramped the fields
Driving lean cattle from a miry stable.

A by-word for fierceness, she fell asleep

Over love stories, Red Star and Red Circle,⁵

Dreamed of gypsy love rites, by firelight sealed.

1. Ancient standing stones.

3. Radio. Blind Pension: state-provided income for

2. Cf. Edmund Spenser, Faerie Queene 4.2.32:

sightless people.

“Dan [i.e., ‘Sir’] Chaucer,” well of English unde-

4. The Leaning Tower of Pisa.

filed.”

5. Cheap-magazine romances.

1784 / JOHN MONTAGUE

30 Wild Billy Eagleson married a Catholic servant girl

When all his Loyal⁶ family passed on:

We danced round him shouting “To Hell with King Billy”,⁷

And dodged from the arc of his flailing blackthorn.⁰ knobbed cane

Forsaken by both creeds, he showed little concern
35 Until the Orange⁰ drums banged past in the summer Protestant
And bowler and sash aggressively shone.
Curate and doctor trudged to attend them,
Through knee-deep snow, through summer heat,
From main road to lane to broken path,
40 Gulping the mountain air with painful breath.
Sometimes they were found by neighbours,
Silent keepers of a smokeless hearth,
Suddenly cast in the mould of death.
Ancient Ireland, indeed! I was reared by her bedside,
45 The rune and the chant, evil eye and averted head,
Fomorian⁸ fierceness of family and local feud.
Gaunt figures of fear and of friendliness,
For years they trespassed on my dreams,
Until once, in a standing circle of stones,⁹
50 I felt their shadows pass
Into that dark permanence of ancient forms.

1 9 5 9

Old Mythologies

And now, at last, all proud deeds done,
Mouths dust-stopped, dark they embrace
Suitably disposed, as urns, underground.
Cattle munching soft spring grass
5 —Epicures of shamrock and the four-leaved clover—
Hear a whimper of ancient weapons,
As a whole dormitory of heroes turn over,

Regretting their butchers' days.
This valley cradles their archaic madness
io As once, on an impossibly epic morning,
It upheld their savage stride:
To bagpiped battle marching,
Wolfhounds, lean as models,
At their urgent heels.

1 9 6 1

6. Loyalist, Protestant.
establishing the Protestant domination of Ireland.
7. A Roman Catholic taunt to Protestant corelig-
8. The Fomorians were demons or evil gods in ionists of King William III of England, who at the Irish pagan mythology.
Battle of the Royne (1690) defeated his predeces-
9. Prehistoric ring of large blocks of stone set sor, the Roman Catholic King James II, thereby upright in the ground.

A L L E G E N D A R Y O B S T A C L E S / 1 7 8 5

The Trout
Flat on the bank I parted
Rushes to ease my hands
In the water without a ripple
And tilt them slowly downstream
5 To where he lay, light as a leaf,
In his fluid sensual dream.
Bodiless lord of creation
I hung briefly above him

Savouring my own absence
10 Senses expanding in the slow Motion, the photographic calm
That grows before action.
As the curve of my hands
Swung under his body
15 He surged, with visible pleasure.
I was so preternaturally close
I could count every stipple
But still cast no shadow, until
The two palms crossed in a cage
20 Under the lightly pulsing gills.
Then (entering my own enlarged Shape, which rode on the water)
I gripped. To this day I can Taste his terror on my hands.

1 9 6 6

All Legendary Obstacles
All legendary obstacles lay between Us, the long imaginary plain,
The monstrous ruck of mountains
And, swinging across the night,
5 Flooding the Sacramento, San Joaquin, 1
The hissing drift of winter rain.
All day I waited, shifting Nervously from station to bar
As I saw another train sail io By, the San Francisco Chief or

Golden Gate, water dripping

From great flanged wheels. ribbed.

1. River in central California that flows northwest into the Sacramento River.

1 7 8 6 / P E T E R P O R T E R

At midnight you came, pale

Above the negro porter's lamp.

15 I was too blind with rain

And doubt to speak, but

Reached from the platform

Until our chilled hands met.

You had been travelling for days

20 With an old lady, who marked

A neat circle on the glass

With her glove, to watch us

Move into the wet darkness

Kissing, still unable to speak.

1 9 6 6

P E T E R P O R T E R

b. 1929

A Consumers Report

The name of the product I tested is Life,

I have completed the form you sent me and understand that my answers are confidential.

I had it as a gift,

5 I didn't feel much while using it,

in fact I think I'd have liked to be more excited.

It seemed gentle on the hands

but left an embarrassing deposit behind.
It was not economical
io and I have used much more than I thought (I suppose I have about half left but it's difficult to tell)— although the instructions are fairly large there are so many of them 15 I don't know which to follow, especially as they seem to contradict each other.
I'm not sure such a thing should be put in the way of children—
It's difficult to think of a purpose 20 for it. One of my friends says it's just to keep its maker in a job.
Also the price is much too high.
Things are piling up so fast,
after all, the world got by 25 for a thousand million years without this, do we need it now?
(Incidentally, please ask your man

A N A N G E L I N B L Y T H B U R G H C H U R C H / 1 7 8 7

to stop calling me “the respondent”,
I don't like the sound of it.) 30 There s e e m s to be a lot of different labels, sizes and colours should be uniform,
the shape is awkward, it's waterproof but not heat resistant, it doesn't keep

yet it's very difficult to get rid of:
35 whenever they make it cheaper they s e e m to put less in—if you say you don't want it, t h e n it's delivered anyway.
I'd agree it's a popular product,
it's got into the language; people 40 even say they're on the side of it.
Personally I think it's overdone,
a small thing people are ready to behave badly about. I think we should take it for granted. If its 45 experts are called philosophers or market researchers or historians, we shouldn't care. We are the consumers and the last law makers. So finally, I'd buy it.
But the question of a "best buy"
50 I'd like to leave until I get the competitive product you said you'd send.

1 9 7 0

An Angel in Blythburgh Church¹

Shot d o w n from its enskied formation,
This stern-faced p l u m m e t rests against the wall;
Cromwell's soldiers peppered it² and n o w the death-
watch beetle has it in thrall.³

5 If you make fortunes from wool, along
T h e w e e p i n g winter foreshores of the tide,
You build big churches with clerestories⁴
And place angels high inside.

Their painted faces guard and guide. Now or io Tomorrow or whenever is the promise—
The resurrection comes: fix your eyes halfway Between Heaven and Diss.5

1. Medieval statue in Blythburgh, a small village that they considered idolatrous.

in northeast Suffolk, England.

3. Cf. Keats, “La Belle Dame sans Merci,” lines

2. The English general and statesman Oliver

39-40 (p. 918). Death-watch beetle: a bug that eats

Cromwell (1599-1658) led the anti-Royalist
wood.

“Roundheads,” who defeated the “Cavaliers” loyal

4. Upper stories with their own windows.

to King Charles I in the English Civil War. Largely

5. A town in Norfolk, near Blythburgh; also, as

Puritan, they defaced many church decorations

Dis, the Roman god of the underworld.

1788 / P E T E R P O R T E R

The face is crudely carved, simplified by wind;

It looks straight at God and waits for orders,

15 B u f f e t e d by the organ militant, and blasted

By choristers and recorders.

F a i t h w o u l d have our eyes as wooden and as certain.

It might be worth it, to start the New Year's hymn

Allowing for death as a mere calculation,

20 A d e p r e c i a t i o n , e n t e r e d i n .

Or so I fancy looking at the roof beams
Where the dangerous beetle sails. What is it Turns an atheist's mind to prayer in almost Any church on a country visit?
25 Grieved for love or certainty or forgiveness?
High security rising with the sea birds?
A theology of self looking for precedents?
A chance to speak old words?
Rather, I think of a woman lying on her bed⁶ 30 Staring for hours up to the ceiling where Nothing is projected — death the only angel
To shield her from despair.

1978

An Exequy⁷

In wet May, in the months of change,
In a country you wouldn't visit, strange
Dreams pursue me in my sleep,
Black creatures of the upper deep —
5 Though you are five months dead, I see
You in guilt's iconography,
Dear Wife, lost beast, beleaguered child,
The stranded monster with the mild Appearance, whom small waves tease, io (Andromeda⁸ upon her knees
In orthodox deliverance)
And you alone of pure substance,
The unformed form of life, the earth
Which Piero's⁹ brushes brought to birth

15 For all to greet as myth, a thing
Out of the box of imagining.

6. Porter's wife, who committed suicide in 1974.
her homeland. An oracle demanded that Androm-7. Funeral rite. See note 6 above.

eda be sacrificed to the monster in expiation, but

8. In Greek mythology, an Ethiopian princess.

she was saved by Perseus. After her death, she was Her mother, Cassiopeia, claimed to be more beau-placed among the stars.

tiful than the Nereids, sea nymphs who then per-

9. Piero della Francesca (ca. 1420-1492), Italian sued the god Neptune to send a sea monster to painter.

A N E X E Q U Y / 1 7 8 9

This introduction serves to sing

Your mortal death as Bishop King¹

Once hymned in tetrametric rhyme

20 His young wife, lost before her time;

Though he lived on for many years

His poem each day fed new tears

To that unreachng spot, her grave,

His lines a baroque architrave²

25 The Sunday poor with bottled flowers

Would by-pass in their mourning hours,

Esteeming ragged natural life

("Most dearly loved, most gentle wife"),

Yet, looking back when at the gate

30 And seeing grief in formal state
Upon a sculpted angel group,
Were glad that men of god could stoop
To give the dead a public stance
And freeze them in their mortal dance.
35 The words and faces proper to My misery are private—you Would never share your heart with those Whose only talent's to suppose,
Nor from your final childish bed
40 Raise a remote confessing head—
The channels of our lives are blocked,
The hand is stopped upon the clock,
No one can say why hearts will break
And marriages are all opaque:
45 A map of loss, some posted cards,
The living house reduced to shards,
The abstract hell of memory,
The pointlessness of poetry—
These are the instances which tell 50 Of something which I know full well,
I owe a death to you—one day
The time will come for me to pay
W h e n your slim shape from photographs
Stands at my door and gently asks 55 If I have any work to do
Or will I come to bed with you.
O scala enigmatical

I'll climb up to that attic where
The curtain of your life was drawn 60 Some time between despair and dawn—
I'll never know with what halt steps
You mounted to this plain eclipse
But each stair now will station me
1. Bishop Henry King (1592-1669), English poet,
3. O enigmatic stairs (Latin); an allusion to the author of "An Exequy to His Matchless, Never-to-stairs leading to the attic in which Porter's wife Be-Forgotten Friend" (see p. 363).
died.

2. Lintel or other molding around a door.

1790 / P E T E R P O R T E R

A black responsibility

65 A n d p o i n t m e t o t h a t s h u t - d o w n r o o m ,
"This be your d u e a p p o i n t e d t o m b ."

I t h i n k o f u s i n I t a l y :

G i n - a n d - c h i a n t i - f u e l l e d , w e

M o v e i n a t r a n c e t h r o u g h P a r a d i s e ,

70 F e e d i n g a t l a s t o u r s t a r v i n g e y e s ,

T w o p e o p l e o f t h e E n g l i s h b l i n d n e s s

D o i n g e a c h m a s t e r p i e c e t h e k i n d n e s s

O f d i s c o v e r i n g i t — f r o m B a l d o v i n e t t i ⁴

T o V e n i c e ' s m o s t o b s c u r e j e t t y .

75 A t r u e u n f o r t u n a t e t r a v e l l e r , I

D e p e n d u p o n y o u r n u r s e ' s e y e

T o p i c k t h e a l t a r s w h e r e n o G r i n n e r ⁰ g r o t e s q u e f i e n d

Puts us off our tourists' dinner
And in hotels to bandy words
so With Geneva girls and talking birds,
To wear your feet out following me
To night's end and true amity,
And call my rational fear of flying
A paradigm of Holy Dying — 85 And, oh my love, I wish you were Once more with me, at night somewhere
In narrow streets applauding wines,
The moon above the Apennines 0 mountain chain
As large as logic and the stars,
90 Most middle-aged of avatars,
As bright as when they shone for truth
Upon untried and avid youth.
The rooms and days we wandered through Shrink in my mind to one — there you
95 Lie quite absorbed by peace — the calm
Which life could not provide is balm
In death. Unseen by me, you look Past bed and stairs and half-read book
Eternally upon your home,
100 The end of pain, the left alone.
I have no friend, or intercessor,
No psychopomp or true confessor
But only you who know my heart
In every cramped and devious part—105 Then take my hand and lead me out,

T h e sky is overcast by doubt,
T h e t i m e has c o m e , I listen for
Your words of c o m f o r t at the door,
O g u i d e me through the shoals of f e a r —
110 “Fürchte dich nicht, i c h b i n bei dir.“6
1 9 7 8

4. Alessio Baldovinetti (1425-1499), Italian a conductor of souls to the place of the dead, painter. 6. Fear not, I am with you (German); openinglyr-5. Someone who acts as a guide of the soul; also, ics of Bach's motet BMV 228.

1 7 9 1

A D R I E N N E R I C H

b. 1929

Aunt Jennifer's Tigers

Aunt Jennifer's tigers prance across a screen,

Bright topaz denizens of a world of green.

They do not fear the men beneath the tree;

They pace in sleek chivalric certainty.

5 Aunt Jennifer's fingers fluttering through her wool

Find even the ivory needle hard to pull.

The massive weight of Uncle's wedding band

Sits heavily upon Aunt Jennifer's hand.

When Aunt is dead, her terrified hands will lie

io Still ringed with ordeals she was mastered by.

The tigers in the panel that she made

Will go on prancing, proud and unafraid.

1 9 5 1

Snapshots of a Daughter-in-Law

I

You, once a belle in Shreveport,¹ with henna-colored hair, skin like a peachbud, still have your dresses copied from that time,
and play a Chopin prelude 5 called by Cortot: "Delicious recollections float like perfume through the memory."²
Your mind now, moldering like wedding-cake, heavy with useless experience, rich with suspicion, rumor, fantasy, is crumbling to pieces under the knife-edge of mere fact. In the prime of your life.
Nervy, glowering, your daughter wipes the teaspoons, grows another way.

2

Banging the coffee-pot into the sink
15 she hears the angels chiding, and looks out
1. City in Louisiana.

No. 7, Andantino, A Major, by Frederic Chopin

2. A remark made by the French pianist Alfred (1810—1849), Polish composer and piano virtuoso, Cortot (1877-1962) in his book Chopin: 24 Pre- who settled in Paris in 1831.

ludes (1930); he is referring specifically to Prelude

1 7 9 2 / A D R I E N N E R I C H

past the raked gardens to the sloppy sky.

Only a week since They said: Have no patience.

The next time it was: Be insatiable.

Then: Save yourself; others you cannot save.

20 Sometimes she's let the tapstream scald her arm,
a match burn to her thumbnail,
or held her hand above the kettle's snout right in the woolly steam. They are probably angels, since nothing hurts her anymore, except 25 each morning's grit blowing into her eyes.

3

A thinking woman sleeps with monsters.
The beak that grips her, she becomes.³ And Nature,
that sprung-lidded, still commodious steamer-trunk of tempora and *mores*⁴ 30 gets stuffed with it all: the mildewed orange-flowers, the female pills,⁵ the terrible breasts of Boadicea⁶ beneath flat foxes' heads and orchids.
Two handsome women, gripped in argument,
each proud, acute, subtle, I hear scream 35 across the cut glass and majolica like Furies⁷ cornered from their prey:
The argument ad feminam,⁸ all the old knives that have rusted in my back, I drive in yours,
*ma semhlahle, ma soeur!*⁹

4

40 Knowing themselves too well in one another:
their gifts no pure fruition, but a thorn,
the prick filed sharp against a hint of scorn ...
Reading while waiting for the iron to heat,
45 writing, My Life had stood—a Loaded Gun—I

in that Amherst pantry while the jellies boil and scum, or, more often,

3. A reference to W. R. Yeats's "Leda and the directed not to reason but to personal prejudices Swan" (p. 1200), in which Zeus in the shape of a and emotions.

swan rapes Leda and then lets her drop from "the
9. The last line of "Au lecteur" ("To the Reader"), indifferent beak."

by the French poet Charles Raudelaire (1821-

4. Literally, times and customs—from the ancient 1867), addresses "Hypocrite lecteur!—monsembla- Roman orator Cicero's famous phrase, "O tem-ble—mon fr&re!" ("Hypocrite reader!—my like-pora! O mores!")

ness!—my brother!"); Rich here instead addresses

5. Remedies for menstrual pain.

"ma soeur" (my sister). See also T. S. Eliot, The

6. British queen (d. 60 C.E.), who led her people Waste Land, line 76 (p. 1346).

in a large though ultimately unsuccessful revolt

1. "Emily Dickinson, Complete Poems, ed. T. H. against Roman rule.

Johnson, 1960, p. 369" [Rich's note]; see p. 1115.

7. Greek goddesses of vengeance. Majolica: a Amherst, referred to in the next line, is the town glazed earthenware.

in Massachusetts where Dickinson lived her entire

8. Feminine version of the Latin phrase ad homi- life (1830-1886).

nem (to the man), referring to an argument

SNAPSHOTS OF A DAUGHTER-IN-LAW / 1793

iron-eyed and beaked and purpose d as a bird, dusting everything on the what not every day of life.

5

50 *Dulce ridens, dulce loquens,*²

she shaves her legs until they gleam like petrified mammoth-tusk.

6

When to her lute Corinna sings³

neither words nor music are her own;

55 only the long hair dipping

over her cheek, only the song of silk against her knees and these adjusted in reflections of an eye.

60 Poised, trembling and unsatisfied, before an unblocked door, that cage of cages,

tell us, you bird, you tragical machine —

is this fertilisante douleur?⁴ Pinned down

by love, for you the only natural action,

65 are you edged more keen to prise the secrets of the vault? has Nature shown her household books to you, daughter-in-law,

that her sons never saw?

7

*“To have in this uncertain world some stay 70 which cannot be undermined, is of the utmost consequence.”*⁵

Thus wrote

a woman, partly brave and partly good,
who fought with what she partly understood.
75 Few men about her would or could do more,
hence she was labeled harpy, shrew and whore.

8

“You all die at fifteen,” said Diderot,⁶ and turn part legend, part convention.

Still, eyes inaccurately dream

2. Sweetly laughing, sweetly speaking (Latin);
feminist thinkers, is best-known for her Vindica- from Horace, Odes 22.23-24.

tion of the Rights of Woman (1792).

3. First line of a lyric by Thomas Campion (see
6. Denis Diderot (1713-1784), French philoso-
p. 280).

pher, encyclopedist, playwright, and critic.” “You

4. Fertilizing (i.e., life-giving) sorrow (French).

all die at fifteen’: ‘Vous mourez toutes a quinze

5. “From Mary Wollstonecraft, Thoughts on the ans,’ from the Lettres a Sophie Volland, quoted by Education of Daughters, London, 1787” [Rich’s Simone de Beauvoir in Le Deuxieme Sexe, Vol. II, note]. Wollstonecraft (1759-1797), one of the first

pp. 123-24” [Rich’s note].

1 7 9 4 / A D R I E N N E R I C H

so behind closed windows blankening with steam.

Deliciously, all that we might have been,

all that we were—fire, tears,

wit, taste, martyred ambition—

stirs like the memory of refused adultery

85 the drained and flagging bosom of our middle years.

9

Not that it is done well, hut

that it is done at all Yes, think of the odds! or shrug them off forever.

This luxury of the precocious child,

90 Time’s precious chronic invalid,— would we, darlings, resign it if we could?

Our blight has b e e n our sinecure:

mere talent was e n o u g h for u s — glitter in fragments and rough drafts.

95 Sigh no more, ladies.

Time is male

and in his cups⁸ drinks to the fair.

B e m u s e d by gallantry, we hear our mediocrities over-praised,

100 indolence read as abnegation,

slattern thought styled intuition,

every lapse forgiven, our crime

only to cast too bold a shadow

or smash the mold straight off.

105 For that, solitary confinement, tear gas, attrition shelling.

Few applicants for that honor.

10

Well,

she's long about her coming, who must be 110 more merciless to herself than history.

Her mind full to the wind, I see her plunge breasted and glancing through the currents,

taking the light upon her

at least as beautiful as any boy

115 or helicopter,⁹

7. "Sir, a woman's preaching is like a dog's walking she is also the totem set deep in the African jungle; on his hinder legs. It is not done well; but you are she is a helicopter and she is a bird; and there is surprised to find it done at all": the English writer this, the greatest wonder of all: under her tinted Samuel Johnson (1709—1784), to his friend and hair the forest murmur becomes a thought, and biographer, James Boswell (1740-1795).

words issue from her breasts" (Simone de Beau-

8. While drinking. "Sigh no more, ladies, sigh no voir, The Second Sex, trans. H. M. Parshley more, / Men were deceivers ever": Shakespeare,

[1953], p. 729). (A translation of the passage from

Much Ado About Nothing 2.3.56-57.

Le Deuxieme Sexe, Vol. II, p. 574, cited in French

9. "She comes down from the remoteness of ages, by Rich.)

from Thebes, from Crete, from Chichen-Itza; and

ORION / 1795

poised, still coming,
her fine blades making the air wince
but the cargo
no promise then:
120 delivered palpable ours.

1958-601963

Orion1

Far back when I went zig-zagging
through tamarack pastures
you were my genius, 0 you attendant spirit
my cast-iron Viking, my helmed
5 lion-heart king in prison. 2
Years later now you're young my fierce half-brother, staring down from that simplified west your breast open, your belt dragged down io by an old fashioned thing, a sword the last bravado you won't give over though it weighs you down as you stride and the stars in it are dim and may behave stopped burning.
15 But you burn, and I know it;

as I throw back my head to take you in an old transfusion happens again:
divine astronomy is nothing to it.
Indoors I bruise and blunder,
20 break faith, leave ill enough alone, a dead child born in the dark.
Night cracks up over the chimney, pieces of time, frozen geodes³
comes showering down in the grate.
25 A man reaches behind my eyes and finds them empty
a woman's head turns away
from my head in the mirror children are dying my death
30 and eating crumbs of my life.

1. Constellation of the winter sky that appears as Hearted (1157—1199), imprisoned in Austria on a warrior with belt and sword; named after a giant his return from the Crusades.

hunter in Greek mythology.

3. Small, spheroid stones, with a cavity often lined

2. Alluding to the English king Richard the Lion-with crystals.

1796 / ADRIENNERICH

Pity is not your forte.

Calmly you ache up there pinned aloft in your crow's nest,⁴

my speechless pirate!

35 You take it all for granted and when I look you back
it's with a starlike eye shooting its cold and egotistical⁵ spear
where it can do least damage.

40 Breathe deep! No hurt, no pardon out here in the cold with you you with your back to the wall.

1 9 6 5 1 9 6 9

A Valediction Forbidding Mourning⁶
My swirling wants. Your frozen lips.
The grammar turned and attacked me.
Themes, written under duress.
Emptiness of the notations.

5 They gave me a drug that slowed the healing of wounds.
I want you to see this before I leave:
the experience of repetition as death
the failure of criticism to locate the pain
the poster in the bus that said:
io my bleeding is under control.

A red plant in a cemetery of plastic wreaths.
A last attempt: the language is a dialect called metaphor.
These images go unglossed: hair, glacier, flashlight.
When I think of a landscape I am thinking of a time.

15 When I talk of taking a trip I mean forever.
I could say: those mountains have a meaning but further than that I could not say.
To do something very common, in my own way.

1 9 7 0 1 9 7 1

4. Lookout post on the masts of old ships.

With your back to the wall, careworn and weary,

5. “One of two phrases suggested by Gottfried in the gray light of the void, read Job and Jeremiah Benn’s essay, Artists and Old Age in Primal Vision, and keep going.”

edited by E. B. Ashton, New Directions” [Rich’s

6. The title of a poem by John Donne (see p. 306), note]. Renn (1886—1956), German poet and critic, in which he forbids his wife to lament his deparadvises the modern artist: “Don’t lose sight of the ture on a trip to the Continent.

cold and egotistical element in your mission. . . .

D I V I N G I N T O T H E W R E C K / 1 7 9 7

Diving into the Wreck

First having read the book of myths,

and loaded the camera,

and checked the edge of the knife-blade,

I put on

5 the body-armor of black rubber

the absurd flippers

the grave and awkward mask.

I am having to do this not like Cousteau⁷ with his

10 assiduous team

aboard the sun-flooded schooner

but here alone.

There is a ladder.

The ladder is always there 15 hanging innocently close to the side of the schooner.

We know what it is for,
we who have used it.

Otherwise
20 it is a piece of maritime floss
some sundry equipment.

I go down.

Rung after rung and still the oxygen immerses me

25 the blue light
the clear atoms
of our human air.

I go down.

My flippers cripple me,
30 I crawl like an insect down the ladder and there is no one to tell me when the ocean will begin.

First the air is blue and then 35 it is bluer and then green and then black I am blacking out and yet my mask is powerful it pumps my blood with power
the sea is another story

40 the sea is not a question of power

I have to learn alone to turn my body without force in the deep element.

7. Jacques-Yves Cousteau (1910—1997), French underwater explorer, photographer, and author.

1 7 9 8 / A D R I E N N E R I C H

And now: it is easy to forget

45 what I came for among so many who have always lived here

swaying their crenellated⁸ fans

between the reefs

50 and besides

you breathe differently down here.

I came to explore the wreck.

The words are purposes.

The words are maps.

55 I came to see the damage that was done and the treasures that prevail.

I stroke the beam of my lamp

slowly along the flank

of something more permanent

60 than fish or weed

the thing I came for:

the wreck and not the story of the wreck

the thing itself and not the myth

the drowned face⁹ always staring

65 toward the sun

the evidence of damage
worn by salt and sway into this threadbare beauty
the ribs of the disaster curving their assertion 70 among the tentative haunters.

This is the place.

And I am here, the mermaid whose dark hair streams black, the merman in his armored body

We circle silently

75 about the wreck

we dive into the hold.

I am she: I am he

whose drowned face sleeps with open eyes

whose breasts still bear the stress

so whose silver, copper, vermeil¹ cargo lies

obscurely inside barrels

half-wedged and left to rot

we are the half-destroyed instruments

that once held to a course

85 the water-eaten log

the fouled compass

We are, I am, you are

by cowardice or courage

the one who find our way

8. With repeated indentations. mented old sailing ships' bows.

9. I.e., one of the female figureheads that orna- 1. Gilded silver or bronze.

E A S T E R N W A R T I M E / 1 7 9 9

90 back to this scene carrying a knife, a camera
a book of myths in which our names do not appear.

1973

*From Eastern War Time*²

I

Memory lifts her smoky mirror: 1943, single isinglass window kerosene stove in the streetcar barn halfset moon
8:15 a.m. Eastern War Time dark 5 Number 29 clanging in and turning looseleaf notebook Latin for Americans
Breasted's History of the Ancient World
on the girl's lap
money for lunch and war-stamps in her pocket
io darkblue wool wet acrid on her hands three pools of light weak ceiling bulbs
a schoolgirl's hope-spilt terrified sensations wired to smells of kerosene wool and snow 15 and the sound of the dead language praised as key torchlight of the great dead
Grey spreading behind still-flying snow
the lean and sway of the streetcar she must ride
to become one of a hundred girls 20 rising white-cuffed and collared in a study hall to sing *For those in peril on the sea*³

under plaster casts of the classic frescoes chariots horses draperies certitudes.
A woman wired in memories
stands by a house collapsed in dust her son beaten in prison grandson shot in the stomach daughter 5 organizing the camps an aunt's unpublished poems grandparents' photographs a bridal veil
phased into smoke up the obliterate air
With whom shall she let down and tell her story
Who shall hear her to the end
io standing if need be for hours in wind

2. Rich's invented term conflating Eastern Stan-memories, as an American Jew, with facts of the dard Time, the time zone in which she grew up (in Holocaust, in Europe.

Baltimore), with the time of World War II. The

3. A hymn, also known as "Eternal Father, Strong poem, in ten parts, juxtaposes Rich's childhood to Save" and the "Navy Hymn."

1 8 0 0 /

A D R I E N N E R I C H

that swirls the levelled dust in sun that beats through their scarfed hair at the lost gate by the shattered prickly pear
Who must hear her to the end
15 but the woman forbidden to forget the blunt groats⁰ freezing in the wooden ladle hulled grain old winds dusting the ovens with light snow?

1 9 9 5

Modotti⁴

Your footprints of light on sensitive paper
that typewriter you made famous my footsteps following you up stairwells of scarred oak and shredded newsprint
5 these windowpanes smeared with stifled breaths corridors of tile and jaundiced plaster
if this is where I must look for you then this is where I'll find you
From a streetlamp's wet lozenge bent io on a curb plastered with newsprint
the headlines aiming straight at your eyes to a room's dark breath-smeared light these footsteps I'm following you with down tiles of a red corridor 15 if this is a way to find you of course this is how I'll find you Your negatives pegged to dry in a darkroom rigged up over a bathtub's lozenge
your footprints of light on sensitive paper
20 stacked curling under blackened panes the always upstairs of your hideout the stern exposure of your brows
—these footsteps I'm following you with aren't to arrest you

25 The bristling hairs of your eyeflash that typewriter you made famous your enormous will to arrest and frame what was, what is, still liquid, flowing your exposure of manifestos, your 30 lightbulb in a scarred ceiling well if this is how I find you Modotti so I find you

4. “Tina Modotti (1896-1942): photographer, Mella. Framed for his murder by the fascists in political activist, revolutionary. Her most signifi-1929, she was expelled from Mexico in 1930. After cant work was done in Mexico in the 1920s, some years of political activity in Berlin, she including a study of the typewriter belonging to her returned incognito to Mexico, where she died in lover, the Cuban revolutionary Julio Antonio 1942” [Rich’s note].

S N A K E S / 1 8 0 1

In the red wash of your darkroom from your neighborhood of volcanoes 35 to the geranium nailed in a can on the wall of your upstairs hideout in the rush of breath a window of revolution allowed you on this jaundiced stair in this huge lashed eye
these 40 footsteps I’m following you with

1 9 9 6 1 9 9 9

A. K. R A M A N U J A N

1929-1993

Snakes

No, it does not happen

when I walk through the woods.

But, walking in museums of quartz

or the aisles of books tacks,

5 looking at their geometry

without curves

and the layers of transparency

that make them opaque,

dwelling on the yellower vein

io in the yellow amber

or touching a book that has gold

on its spine,

I think of snakes.

The twirls of their hisses

15 rise like the tiny dust-cones on slow-noon roads

winding through the farmers' feet.

Black lorgnettes¹ are etched on their hoods, ridiculous, alien, like some terrible aunt,

a crest among tiles and scales

20 that moult with the darkening half of every moon.

A basketful of ritual cobras comes into the tame little house,

their brown-wheat glisten ringed with ripples.

25 They lick the room with their bodies, curves uncurling, writing a sibilant² alphabet of panic on my floor. Mother gives them milk in saucers. She watches them suck and bare the black-line design 30 etched on the brass of the saucer.

1. Eyeglasses or opera glasses with a handle. 2. Having or producing the sound of s or sh.

1 8 0 2 / A . K . R A M A N U J A N

The snakeman wreathes their writhing round his neck

for father's smiling money. But I scream.

Sister ties her braids
with a knot of tassel.

But the weave of her knee-long braid has scales,
their gleaming held by a score of clean new pins.

I look till I see her hair again.

40

My night full of ghosts from a sadness
in a play, my left foot listens to my right footfall, a clockwork clicking in the silence within my walking.

The clickshod heel suddenly strikes

45 and slushes on a snake: I see him turn,

the green white of his belly measured by bluish nodes, a water-bleached lotus stalk plucked by a landsman hand. Yet panic rushes my body to my feet, my spasms wring and drain his fear and mine. I leave him sealed, a flat-head whiteness on a stain.

Now

frogs can hop upon this sausage rope, flies in the sun will mob the look in his eyes,
55 and I can walk through the woods.

1 9 6 6

Breaded Fish

Specially for me, she had some breaded fish; even thrust a blunt-headed smelt into my mouth;
and looked hurt when I could 5 neither sit nor eat, as a hood of memory like a coil on a heath opened in my eyes: a dark half-naked length of woman, dead
on the beach in a yard of cloth, io dry, rolled by the ebb, breaded by the grained indifference of sand. I headed for the shore, my heart beating in my mouth.

1 9 6 6

NEW WORLD A - COMIN ' / 1 8 0 3

Self-Portrait

I resemble everyone
but myself, and sometimes see in shop-windows,

despite the well-known laws
5 of optics,
the portrait of a stranger,
date unknown,
often signed in a corner
by my father.

1 9 6 6

E D W A R D K A M A U B R A T H W A I T E

b. 1930

FROM THE ARRIVANTS: A NEW WORLD TRILOGY

New World A-Comin'

I

Helpless like this leader-
less like this,
heroless,
5 we met you: lover,
warrior, hater,
coming through the files
of the forest soft foot
io to soft soil
of silence:
we met in the soiled tunnel of leaves.
Click lock 15 your fire-lock forearm firearm flashed

fire and our firm

20 fleshed, flame warm, fly

bitten warriors fell.

1 8 0 4 / E D W A R D K A M A U B R A T H W A I T E

How long

25 how long

O Lord

O devil

O fire

O flame

30 have we walked

have we journeyed

to this place

to this meeting

this shock

35 and shame

in the soiled

silence.

How long have we travelled down

40 valleys down

slopes, silica

glinted, stones

dry as water,

to this flash
45 of flame in the forest.

O who now will help us, helpless, horse-

less, leader-

50 less, no

hope, no

Hawkins, no

Cortez¹ to come.

Prempeh imprisoned,

55 Tawiah dead,

Asantewa² bridled

and hung.

O who now can help us: Geronimo, Tackie,

60 Montezuma³ to come.

And the fire, our fire, fashioning locks,

rocks darker than iron;

1. Hernando Cortez (1485-1547), the Spanish Tackie Tawiah (1862—1902), king of Accra, Ghana.

conqueror of Mexico. Hawkins: Sir John Hawkins

3. Montezuma II (1480?-1520), the last Mexican (1532-1595), the first Englishman to traffic in emperor, was killed in the resistance against Cor-slaves.

tez's conquest of Mexico. Geronimo: a chief of the

2. Yaa Asantewaa (1850-1921), the queen Chiricahwa group of Apache Indians (ca. 1829-mother who, in Ghana, led Ashanti opposition 1909). His forces terrorized New Mexico and Ariagainst the British. Captured in 1901, she was zona from 1875 until 1885, but surrendered to exiled to the Seychelles. Prempeh: last king of the General George Cook in 1886. Tackie: Tacky, a Ashanti (1888-1931). He reigned from 1894 until Caribbean priest/leader. The 1760 Tacky Rebel-1896, when he was deposed by the British and lion in Jamaica was fomented and in places led by exiled to the Seychelles. Tawiah: probably Nii obeah men (spiritual leaders).

NEW WORLD A - COMIN ' / 1 8 0 5

fire betrayed us once 65 in our village; now in the forest, fire falls us like birds, hot pods in our belly. Fire falls walls, fashions 70 these fire-
locks darker than iron,
and we filed down the path linked in a new clinked silence of iron.

2

75 It will be a long long time before we see

this land again, these trees again, drifting inland with the sound of surf, smoke rising
It will be a long long time before we see so these farms again, soft wet slow green again: Aburi, Akwamu,⁴ mist rising
Watch now these hard men, cold clear eye'd like the water we ride, 85 skilful with sail and the rope and the tackle
Watch now these cold men, bold
as the water banging the bow in a sudden wild tide, indifferent, it seems, to the battle of wind in the water;
90 for our blood, mixed soon with their passion in sport,
in indifference, in anger,
will create new soils, new souls, new ancestors; will flow like this tide fixed 95 to the star by which this ship floats to new worlds, new waters, new harbours, the pride of our ancestors mixed with the wind and the water
the flesh and the flies, the whips and the fixed IOO fear of pain in this chained and welcoming port.

1 9 6 7

4. Towns in the Akan-speaking area of Ghana.

1 8 0 6 / E D W A R D K A M A U B R A T H W A I T E

Ancestors

I

Every Friday morning my grandfather left his farm of canefields, chickens, cows, and rattled in his trap down to the harbour town
to sell his meat. He was a butcher.

5 Six-foot-three and very neat: high collar, winged, a grey cravat,⁰ a waistcoat, watch- scarf chain just above the belt, thin narrow-bottomed trousers, and the shoes his wife would polish every night. He drove the trap io himself: slap of the leather reins along the horse's back and he'd be off with a top-hearted homburg⁵ on his head:
black English country gentleman.

Now he is dead. The meat shop burned, 15 his property divided. A doctor bought the horse. His mad alsatians killed it.

The wooden trap was chipped and chopped
by friends and neighbours and used to stopgap fences and for firewood. One yellow 20 wheel was rolled across the former cowpen gate.

Only his hat is left. I "borrowed" it.

I used to try it on and hear the night wind man go battering through the canes, cocks waking up and thinking

it was dawn throughout the clinking country night.

25 Great caterpillar tractors clatter down

the broken highway now; a diesel engine grunts where pigs once hunted garbage.

A thin asthmatic cow shares the untrashed garage.

2

All that I can remember of his wife,
30 my father's mother, is that she sang us songs
("Great Tom Is Cast"⁶ was one), that frightened me.

And she would go chug chugging with a jar of milk until its white pap turned to yellow butter. And in the basket underneath the stairs 35 she kept the polish for grandfather's shoes.

All that I have of her is voices:

laughing me out of fear because a crappaud⁰ toad jumped and splashed the dark where I was huddled in the galvanized tin bath; telling us stories

40 round her fat white lamp. It was her Queen
Victoria lamp, she said; although the stamp

5. Old-fashioned, tall, felt hat.

6. Song about the making (or "casting") of a bell.

MARRIAGE / 1807

read Ever Ready. And in the night, I listened to her singing in a Vicks and Vapour Rub-like voice what you would call the blues

3

Come-a look

45 come-a look

see wha' happen

come-a look

come-a look
see wha' happen
50 Sookey dead
Sookey dead
Sookey dead-o
Sookey dead
Sookey dead
55 Sookey dead-o.
Him a-wuk
him a-wuk
till 'e bleed-o
him a-wuk
60 him a-wuk
till 'e bleed-o
Sookey dead
Sookey dead
Sookey dead-o
65 Sookey dead
Sookey dead
Sookey dead-o ...

1 9 6 9

G R E G O R Y C O R S O

1930-2001

Marriage

Should I get married? Should I be good?

Astound the girl next door with my velvet suit and faustus
hood?1

Don't take her to movies but to cemeteries

1. The legendary Faust, a medieval alchemist, sold his soul to the Devil. He gained not only knowledge and power but renewed youth and attractiveness to young women.

1 8 0 8 / G R E G O R Y C O R S O

tell all about werewolf bathtubs and forked clarinets

5 then desire her and kiss her and all the preliminaries and she going just so far and I understanding why not getting angry saying You must feel! It's beautiful to feel!

Instead take her in my arms lean against an old crooked tombstone

and woo her the entire night the constellations in the sky—

io When she introduces me to her parents

back straightened, hair finally combed, strangled by a tie, should I sit knees together on their 3rd degree sofa

and not ask Where's the bathroom?

How else to feel other than I am,

is often thinking Flash Gordon² soap—

O how terrible it must be for a young man

seated before a family and the family thinking

We never saw him before! He wants our Mary Lou!

After tea and homemade cookies they ask What do you do for a living?

20 Should I tell them? Would they like me then?

Say All right get married, we're losing a daughter

but we're gaining a son—

And should I then ask Where's the bathroom?

O God, and the wedding! All her family and her friends

25 and only a handful of mine all scroungy and bearded

just wait to get at the drinks and food—

And the priest! he looking at me as if I masturbated asking me Do you take this woman for your lawful wedded wife?

And I trembling what to say say Pie Glue!

30 I kiss the bride all those corny men slapping me on the back
She's all yours, boy! Ha-ha-ha!

And in their eyes you could see some obscene honeymoon going on—

Then all that absurd rice and clanky cans and shoes

Niagara Falls! Hordes of us! Husbands! Wives! Flowers!
Chocolates!

35 All streaming into cozy hotels

All going to do the same thing tonight

The indifferent clerk he knowing what was going to happen

The lobby zombies they knowing what

The whistling elevator man he knowing

40 The winking bellboy knowing

Everybody knowing! I'd be almost inclined not to do anything!

Stay up all night! Stare that hotel clerk in the eye!

Screaming: I deny honeymoon! I deny honeymoon!

running rampant into those almost climactic suites

45 yelling Radio belly! Cat shovel!

O I d live in Niagara forever! in a dark cave beneath the Falls

I'd sit there the Mad Honeymooner devising ways to break marriages, a scourge of bigamy

a saint of divorce—

2. A 1930s science fiction “space opera” that first appeared as a comic strip, then as popular radio and movie serials.

M A R R I A G E / 1 8 0 9

50 But I should get married I should be good How nice it'd be to come home to her and sit by the fireplace and she in the kitchen aproned young and lovely wanting my baby and so happy about me she burns the roast beef 55 and comes crying to me and I get up from my big papa chair saying Christmas teeth! Radiant brains! Apple deaf!
God what a husband I'd make! Yes, I should get married!
So much to do! like sneaking into Mr Jones' house late at night
and cover his golf clubs with 1920 Norwegian books 60 Like hanging a picture of Rimbaud³ on the lawnmower like pasting Tannu Tuva postage stamps⁴ all over the picket fence
like when Mrs Kindhead comes to collect for the Community Chest
grab her and tell her There are unfavorable omens in the sky!
And when the mayor comes to get my vote tell him
65 When are you going to stop people killing whales!
And when the milkman comes leave him a note in the bottle
Penguin dust, bring me penguin dust, I want penguin dust—
Yet if I should get married and it's Connecticut and snow and she gives birth to a child and I am sleepless, worn, 70 up for nights, head bowed against a quiet window, the past behind
me,
finding myself in the most common of situations a trembling
man

knowledged with responsibility not twig-smear nor Roman coin soup—

O what would that be like!

Surely I'd give it for a nipple a rubber Tacitus⁵

75 For a rattle a bag of broken Bach records

Tack Della Francesca⁶ all over its crib

Sew the Greek alphabet on its bib

And build for its playpen a roofless Parthenon

No, I doubt I'd be that kind of father

so Not rural not snow no quiet window

but hot smelly tight New York City

seven flights up, roaches and rats in the walls

a fat Reichian⁷ wife screeching over potatoes Get a job!

And five nose running brats in love with Batman

85 And the neighbors all toothless and dry haired like those hag masses of the 18th century

all wanting to come in and watch TV

The landlord wants his rent

Grocery store Blue Cross Gas & Electric Knights of Columbus

90 Impossible to lie back and dream Telephone snow, ghost parking—

No! I should not get married I should never get married!

But—imagine If I were married to a beautiful sophisticated woman

3. Arthur Rimbaud (1854-1891), French Sym-

6. Piero della Francesca (ca. 1420—1492), Italian bolist poet.

painter. Johann Sebastian Bach (1685—1750),

4. Collector's items issued by this Siberian repub-

German composer.

lic located on the border between Russia and Mon-

7. Wilhelm Reich (1897-1957) founded a contro-golia.

versial school of psychiatry that emphasized love

5. Cornelius Tacitus (ca. 56—120), Roman histoand sexual pleasure as the basis of mental health.

rian; punning on tacitus, Latin for “silent.”

1 8 1 0 / T E D H U G H E S

tall a n d p a l e w e a r i n g a n e l e g a n t b l a c k d r e s s a n d l o n g b l a c k g l o v e s h o l d i n g a c i g a r e t t e h o l d e r i n o n e h a n d a n d a h i g h b a l l i n t h e o t h e r 9 5 a n d w e l i v e d h i g h u p i n a p e n t h o u s e w i t h a h u g e w i n d o w f r o m w h i c h w e c o u l d s e e a l l o f N e w Y o r k a n d e v e r f a r t h e r o n c l e a r e r d a y s

N o , c a n ’ t i m a g i n e m y s e l f m a r r i e d t o t h a t p l e a s a n t p r i s o n d r e a m —

0 b u t w h a t a b o u t l o v e ? I f o r g e t l o v e n o t t h a t I a m i n c a p a b l e o f l o v e

1 0 0 i t ’ s j u s t t h a t I s e e l o v e a s o d d a s w e a r i n g s h o e
s —

1 n e v e r w a n t e d t o m a r r y a g i r l w h o w a s l i k e m y m o t h e r A n d I n g r i d B e r g m a n 8 w a s a l w a y s i m p o s s i b l e

A n d t h e r e ’ s m a y b e a g i r l n o w b u t s h e ’ s a l r e a d y m a r r i e d

A n d I d o n ’ t l i k e m e n a n d —

1 0 5 b u t t h e r e ’ s g o t t o b e s o m e b o d y !

B e c a u s e w h a t i f I ’ m 6 0 y e a r s o l d a n d n o t m a r r i e d , a l l a l o n e i n a f u r n i s h e d r o o m w i t h p e e s t a i n s o n m y u n d e r w e a r a n d e v e r y b o d y e l s e i s m a r r i e d !
A l l t h e u n i v e r s e m a r r i e d b u t m e !

A h , yet we ll I k n o w t h a t w e r e a w o m a n p o s s i b l e e a s I a m p o s s i b l e 110 t h e n m a r r i a g e w o u l d b e p o s s i b l e —

L i k e S H E i n h e r l o n e l y a l i e n g a u d 9 w a i t i n g h e r E g y p t i a n l o v e r s o I w a i t — b e r e f t o f 2 , 0 0 0 y e a r s a n d t h e b a t h o f l i f e .

1 9 6 0

T E D H U G H E S

1930-1998

The Thought-Fox

I i m a g i n e t h i s m i d n i g h t m o m e n t ' s f o r e s t :

S o m e t h i n g e l s e i s a l i v e

B e s i d e t h e c l o c k ' s l o n e l i n e s s

A n d t h i s b l a n k p a g e w h e r e m y f i n g e r s m o v e .

5 T h r o u g h t h e w i n d o w I s e e n o s t a r :

S o m e t h i n g m o r e n e a r

T h o u g h d e e p e r w i t h i n d a r k n e s s

I s e n t e r i n g t h e l o n e l i n e s s :

C o l d , d e l i c a t e l y a s t h e d a r k s n o w , i o A f o x ' s n o s e t o u c h e s t w i g , l e a f ;

T w o e y e s s e r v e a m o v e m e n t , t h a t n o w

A n d a g a i n n o w , a n d n o w , a n d n o w

8. Swedish actor (1915—1982) in American films, novel of this title, “She” gains eternal youth by known for her beauty.

bathing in a pillar of flame and waits thousands of

9. Showy clothing. In H. Rider Haggard’s 1887 years for the return of her lover.

W I N D / 1 8 1 1

Sets neat prints into the snow
Between trees, and warily a lame
15 Shadow lags by stump and in hollow
Of a body that is bold to come Across clearings, an eye,
A widening deepening greenness,
Brilliantly, concentratedly,
20 Coming about its own business
Till, with a sudden sharp hot stink of fox
It enters the dark hole of the head.
The window is starless still; the clock ticks,
The page is printed.

1 9 5 7

Wind

This house has been far out at sea all night,
The woods crashing through darkness, the booming hills,
Winds stampeding the fields under the window
Floundering black astride and blinding wet
5 Till day rose; then under an orange sky
The hills had new places, and wind wielded
Blade-light, luminous and emerald,
Flexing like the lens of a mad eye.
At noon I scaled along the house-side as far as io The coal-house door. I dared once to look up—
Through the brunt wind that dented the balls of my eyes
The tent of the hills drummed and strained its guyrope,
The fields quivering, the skyline a grimace,
At any second to bang and vanish with a flap:

15 The wind flung a magpie away and a black-
Back gull bent like an iron bar slowly. The house
Rang like some fine green goblet in the note
That any second would shatter it. Now deep
In chairs, in front of the great fire, we grip
20 Our hearts and cannot entertain book, thought,
Or each other. We watch the fire blazing,
And feel the roots of the house move, but sit on,
Seeing the window tremble to come in,
Hearing the stones cry out under the horizons.

1 9 5 7

1 8 1 2 / T E D H U G H E S

Pike

Pike, three inches long, perfect
Pike in all parts, green tigering the gold.
Killers from the egg: the malevolent aged grin.
They dance on the surface among the flies.
Or move, stunned by their own grandeur,
Over a bed of emerald, silhouette
Of submarine delicacy and horror.
A hundred feet long in their world.
In ponds, under the heat-struck lily pads—
Gloom of their stillness:
Logged on last year's black leaves, watching upwards.
Or hung in an amber cavern of weeds
The jaws' hooked clamp and fangs
Not to be changed at this date;
A life subdued to its instrument;

The gills kneading quietly, and the pectorals.
Three we kept behind glass,
Jungled in weed: three inches, four,
And four and a half: fed fry^o to them— young fish
Suddenly there were two. Finally one
With a sag belly and the grin it was born with.
And indeed they spare nobody.
Two, six pounds each, over two feet long,
High and dry and dead in the willow-herb—
One jammed past its gills down the other's gullet:
The outside eye stared: as a vice locks—
The same iron in this eye
Though its film shrank in death.
A pond I fished, fifty yards across,
Whose lilies and muscular tench¹
Had outlasted every visible stone
Of the monastery that planted them—
Stilled legendary depth:
It was as deep as England. It held Pike too immense to stir, so immense and old
That past nightfall I dared not cast
1. Variety of freshwater fish.

EXAMINATION AT THE WOMB - DOOR / 18
13

But silently cast and fished
With the hair frozen on my head
For what might move, for what eye might move.
40 The still splashes on the dark pond,

Owls hushing the floating woods
Frail on my ear against the dream
Darkness beneath night's darkness had freed,
That rose slowly towards me, watching.

1 9 5 9 , 1 9 6 0

Theology

No, the serpent did not Seduce Eve to the apple.²

All that's simply Corruption of the facts.

5 Adam ate the apple.

Eve ate Adam.

The serpent ate Eve.

This is the dark intestine.

The serpent, meanwhile,
io Sleeps his meal off in Paradise—

Smiling to hear

God's querulous calling.

1 9 6 7

Examination at the Womb-Door³

Who owns these scrawny little feet? Death.

Who owns this bristly scorched-looking face? Death.

Who owns these still-working lungs? Death.

Who owns this utility coat of muscles? Death.

5 Who owns these unspeakable guts? Death.

Who owns these questionable brains? Death.

All this messy blood? Death.

These minimum-efficiency eyes? Death.

This wicked little tongue? Death.

io This occasional wakefulness? Death.

Given, stolen, or held pending trial?

Held.

2. Cf. Genesis 3.

3. The demonic hero of the Crow myth is interrogated by an unidentified questioner.

1 8 1 4 /

T E D H U G H E S

Who owns the whole rainy, stony earth? Death.

Who owns all of space? Death.

15 Who is stronger than hope? Death.

Who is stronger than the will? Death.

Stronger than love? Death.

Stronger than life? Death.

But who is stronger than death?

Me, evidently.

20 Pass, Crow.

1 9 7 0

Daffodils

Remember how we4 picked the daffodils?

Nobody else remembers, but I remember.

Your daughter came with her armfuls, eager and happy.

Helping the harvest. She has forgotten.

5 She cannot even remember you. And we sold them.

It sounds like sacrilege, but we sold them.

Were we so poor? Old Stoneman, the grocer,

Boss-eyed, his blood-pressure purpling to beetroot5

(It was his last chance, io He would die in the same great freeze as you),
He persuaded us. Every Spring
He always bought them, sevenpence a dozen,
“A custom of the house”.
Besides, we still weren’t sure we wanted to own
15 Anything. Mainly we were hungry
To convert everything to profit.
Still nomads—still strangers
To our whole possession. The daffodils
Were incidental gilding of the deeds.⁶ 20 Treasure trove. They simply came,
And they kept on coming.
As if not from the sod but falling from heaven.
Our lives were still a raid on our own good luck.
We knew we’d live for ever. We had not learned 25 What a fleeting glance of the everlasting Daffodils are. Never identified
The nuptial flight of the rarest ephemera⁷—
Our own days!
We thought they were a windfall.
30 Never guessed they were a last blessing.
So we sold them. We worked at selling them

4. Hughes is addressing his first wife, the American poet Sylvia Plath (1932-1963; see pp. 1836-45), who committed suicide during London’s house.

coldest winter in the twentieth century.

7. Insect that lives only a few days.

P L A T F O R M O N E / 1 8 1 5

As if employed on somebody else's

Flower-farm. You bent at it

In the rain of that April—your last April.

35 We bent there together, among the soft shrieks

Of their jostled stems, the wet shocks shaken

Of their girlish dance-frocks—

Fresh-opened dragonflies, wet and flimsy,

Opened too early.

40 We piled their frailty lights on a carpenter's bench,

Distributed leaves among the dozens—

Buckling blade-leaves, limber, groping for air, zinc-silvered—

Propped their raw butts in bucket water,

Their oval, meaty butts,

45 And sold them, sevenpence a bunch—

Wind-wounds, spasms from the dark earth,

With their odourless metals,

A flamy purification of the deep grave's stony cold

As if ice had a breath—

50 We sold them, to wither.

The crop thickened faster than we could thin it.

Finally, we were overwhelmed

And we lost our wedding-present scissors.

Every March since they have lifted again

55 Out of the same bulbs, the same

Baby-cries from the thaw,
Ballerinas too early for music, shiverers
In the draughty wings of the year.
On that same groundswell of memory, fluttering 60 They return to forget you stooping there
Behind the rainy curtains of a dark April,
Snipping their stems.
But somewhere your scissors remember. Wherever they are.
Here somewhere, blades wide open,
65 April by April
Sinking deeper
Through the sod—an anchor, a cross of rust.

1 9 9 8

Platform One⁸

Holiday squeals, as if all were scrambling for their lives,
Panting aboard the “Cornish Riviera”.⁹

8. On platform number one of London’s Paddingtheir Lives for King and Country” in the World ton Station, Charles Sargeant Jagger’s larger-than-Wars of 1914-18 and 1939-45.

life-size bronze statue of the soldier described in

9. Coastal resort of south Cornwall. Here, the this poem stands as a memorial to the “Men and name of a steam locomotive.

Women of the Great Western Railway who gave

1 8 1 6 / G A R Y S N Y D E R

Then overflow of relief and luggage and children,
Then ducking to smile out as the station moves.

5 Out there on the platform, under the rain,
Under his rain-cape, helmet and full pack,
Somebody, head bowed reading something,
Doesn't know he's missing his train.
He's completely buried in that book.
10 He's forgotten utterly where he is.
He's forgotten Paddington, forgotten
Timetables, forgotten the long, rocking
Cradle of a journey into the golden West,
The coach's soft wingbeat—as light is And straight as a dove's flight.
Like a graveyard statue sentry cast
In blackened old bronze. Is he reading poems?
A letter? The burial service? The raindrops
Beaded along his helmet rim are bronze.
20 The words on his page are bronze. Their meanings bronze.
Sunk in his bronze world he stands, enchanted.
His bronze mind is deep among the dead.
Sunk so deep among the dead that, much
As he would like to remember us all, he cannot.

1 9 9 6

GARY SNYDER

b. 1930

Above Pate Valley¹

We finished clearing the last

Section of trail by noon,

High on the ridge-side

Two thousand feet above the creek

5 Reached the pass, went on Beyond the white pine groves,
Granite shoulders, to a small
Green meadow watered by the snow, Edged with Aspen—sun
io Straight high and blazing
But the air was cool.

1. In Yosemite National Park.

FOUR POEMS FOR ROBIN / 1817

Ate a cold fried trout in the Trembling shadows. I spied
A glitter, and found a flake
15 Black volcanic glass-obsidian—
By a flower. Hands and knees Pushing the Bear grass, thousands
Of arrowhead leavings over a Hundred yards. Not one good 20 Head, just razor flakes
On a hill snowed all but summer,
A land of fat summer deer,
They came to camp. On their Own trails. I followed my own 25 Trail here. Picked up the cold-drill,
Pick, singlejack,² and sack
Of dynamite.

Ten thousand years.

1959

Four Poems for Robin

*Siwashing it out once in Siuslaw Forest*³

I slept under rhododendron
All night blossoms fell Shivering on a sheet of cardboard
Feet stuck in my pack
5 Hands deep in my pockets
Barely able to sleep.
I remembered when we were in school
Sleeping together in a big warm bed
We were the youngest lovers
io When we broke up we were still nineteen.
Now our friends are married
You teach school back east
I dont mind living this way
Green hills the long blue beach
15 But sometimes sleeping in the open
I think back when I had you.

*A spring night in Shokoku-ji*⁴

Eight years ago this May
We walked under cherry blossoms
At night in an orchard in Oregon.

2. Short-handled hammer used, with the other with light equipment, roughing it.

tools, to cut holes in solid rock for dynamite. 4. Fourteenth-century Zen monastery in Kyoto 3. West of Eugene, Oregon.
Siwashing: camping (once the capital of Japan).

1 8 1 8 / G A R Y S N Y D E R

20 All that I wanted then
Is forgotten now, but you.

Here in the night
In a garden of the old capital
I feel the trembling ghost of Yugao⁵
25 I remember your cool body
Naked under a summer cotton dress.

An autumn morning in Shokoku-ji

Last night watching the Pleiades,⁶ Breath smoking in the moonlight,
Bitter memory like vomit
30 Choked my throat.
I unrolled a sleeping bag
On mats on the porch
Under thick autumn stars.

In dream you appeared 35 (Three times in nine years)
Wild, cold, and accusing.
I woke shamed and angry:
The pointless wars of the heart.
Almost dawn. Venus and Jupiter.⁷

40 The first time I have Ever seen them close.

December at Yases

You said, that October,
In the tall dry grass by the orchard
When you chose to be free,
45 “Again someday, maybe ten years.”
After college I saw you
One time. You were strange.

And I was obsessed with a plan.

Now ten years and more have

50 Gone by: I've always known where you were—

I might have gone to you

Hoping to win your love back.

You still are single.

5. In the Japanese novel Genji monogatori (The

6. A cluster of stars in the constellation Taurus;

Tale of Genji), written between 1001 and 1006,

named after the seven daughters of Atlas, in Greek

Murasaki-no-Shikibu (Lady Murasaki) recounts mythology.

the amorous exploits of the young Prince Genji.

7. Snyder both names the plants and alludes to Genji has a brief liaison with a young woman, the Roman gods (Venus, goddess of love and Yugao, who dies suddenly and mysteriously. After beauty; Jupiter, ruler of all the gods).

happening upon a dress of hers, he writes a poem.

8. Near northeast Kyoto.

I N S T R U C T I O N S / 1 8 1 9

55 I didn't.

I thought I must make it alone. I

Have done that.

Only in dream, like this dawn,

Does the grave, awed intensity

60 Of our young love

Return to my mind, to my flesh.

We had what the others

All crave and seek for;

We left it behind at nineteen.

65 I feel ancient, as though I had Lived many lives.

And may never now know

If I am a fool

Or have done what my 70 karma demands.

1 9 6 8

Instructions

Fuel filler cap

—haven't I seen this before? The sunlight under the eaves, mottled shadow, on the knurled rim of milled

5 dull silver metal.

Oil filler cap

bright yellow,

horns like a snail

—the oil's down there—

io amber, clean, it falls back to its pit.

Oil drain plug

so short, from in to out. Best let it drain when it is hot.

15 Engine switch off, on. Off, on. Just two places. Forever, or, not even one.

1 9 9 6

1 8 2 0

D E R E K W A L C O T T

b. 1930

A Far Cry from Africa

A wind is ruffling the tawny pelt

Of Africa. Kikuyu,¹ quick as flies,

Batten upon the bloodstreams of the veldt.²

Corpses are scattered through a paradise.

5 Only the worm, colonel of carrion, cries:

“Waste no compassion on these separate dead!”

Statistics justify and scholars seize

The salients of colonial policy.

What is that to the white child hacked in bed?

io To savages, expendable as Jews?

Threshed out by beaters,³ the long rushes break

In a white dust of ibises whose cries

Have wheeled since civilization’s dawn

From the parched river or beast-teeming plain.

15

The violence of beast on beast is read

As natural law, but upright man

Seeks his divinity by inflicting pain.

Delirious as these worried beasts, his wars

Dance to the tightened carcass of a drum,

20

While he calls courage still that native dread
Of the white peace contracted by the dead.
Again brutish necessity wipes its hands
Upon the napkin of a dirty cause, again
A waste of our compassion, as with Spain,⁴ 25 The gorilla wrestles with the superman.
I who am poisoned with the blood of both,
Where shall I turn, divided to the vein?
I who have cursed
The drunken officer of British rule, how choose 30 Between this Africa and the English tongue I love?
Betray them both, or give back what they give?
How can I face such slaughter and be cool?
How can I turn from Africa and live?

1 9 6 2

1. An east African tribe whose members, as Mau Batten: feed gluttonously.

Mau fighters, conducted an eight-year campaign

3. In big-game hunting, people are hired to beat of violent resistance against British colonial set-the brush, driving birds—such as ibises (line 12)—
tlers in Kenya.

and other animals into the open.

2. Grassland, usually with some trees and shrubs.

4. The Spanish Civil War (1936-39).

THE GLORY TRUMPETER / 1 8 2 1

Nights in the Gardens of Port of Spain⁵

Night, the black summer, simplifies her smells into a village; she assumes the impenetrable musk of the negro, grows secret as sweat,

her alleys odorous with shucked oyster shells,
5 coals of gold oranges, braziers of melon.
Commerce and tambourines increase her heat.
Hellfire or the whorehouse: crossing Park Street,
a surf of sailors' faces crests, is gone
with the sea's phosphorescence; the boites-de-nuit⁶
10 tinkle like fireflies in her thick hair.
Blinded by headlamps, deaf to taxi klaxons,^{0 horns}
she lifts her face from the cheap, pitch oil flare towards white stars, like cities, flashing neon, burning to be the bitch she must become.
15 As daylight breaks the coolie turns his tumbri⁷ of hacked, beheaded coconuts towards home.

1 9 6 4

The Glory Trumpeter
Old Eddie's face, wrinkled with river lights,
Looked like a Mississippi man's. The eyes,
Derisive and avuncular at once,
Swivelling, fixed me. They'd seen
5 Too many wakes, too many cathouse nights.
The bony, idle fingers on the valves
Of his knee-cradled horn could tear
Through "Georgia on My Mind" or "Jesus Saves"
With the same fury of indifference,
io If what propelled such frenzy was despair.
Now, as the eyes sealed in the ashen flesh,

And Eddie, like a deacon at his prayer,
Rose, tilting the bright horn, I saw a flash
Of gulls and pigeons from the dunes of coal
5. Capital of Trinidad, British West Indies.
7. Open cart used during the French Revolution
6. Nightclubs (French).
to carry condemned people to the guillotine.

1 8 2 2 / D E R E K W A L C O T T

15 Near my grandmother's barracks on the wharves,
I saw the sallow faces of those men
Who sighed as if they spoke into their graves
About the Negro in America. That was when
The Sunday comics sprawled out on her floor,
20 Sent from the States, had a particular odour,
A smell of money mingled with man's sweat.
And yet, if Eddie's features held our fate,
Secure in childhood I did not know then
A jesus-ragtime or gut-bucket blues
25 To the bowed heads of lean, compliant men
Back from the States in their funereal serge,
Black, rusty Homburgs⁸ and limp waiters' ties
With honey accents and lard-coloured eyes
Was Joshua's ram's horn wailing for the Jews
30 Of patient bitterness or bitter siege.⁹
Now it was that as Eddie turned his back
On our young crowd out feteing, swilling liquor,
And blew, eyes closed, one foot up, out to sea,
His horn aimed at those cities of the Gulf,

35 Mobile and Galveston and sweetly meted
The horn of plenty through a bitter cup,
In lonely exaltation blaming me
For all whom race and exile have defeated,
For my own uncle in America,
40 That living there I never could look up.

1 9 6 4

The Gulf

[F O R J A C K A N D B A R B A R A H A R R I S O N]

I

The airport coffee tastes less of America.
Sour, unshaven, dreading the exertion of tightening, racked nerves fuelled with liquor,
some smoky, resinous Bourbon,
5 the body, buckling at its casket hole,
a roar like last night's blast racing its engines,
watches the fumes of the exhausted soul
as the trans-Texas jet, screeching, begins its flight and friends diminish. So, to be aware 8. Old-fashioned, felt hats. Funereal serge: cheap, 9. At the fall of the city of Jericho (Joshua 6.1 — dark suits. 21).

T H E G U L F / 1 8 2 3

10 of the divine union the soul detaches itself from created things.' "We're in the air,"
the Texan near me grins. All things: these matches from LBJ's2 campaign hotel, this rose given me at dawn in Austin by a child, is this book of fables by Borges,³ its prose

a stalking, moonlit tiger. What was willed on innocent, sun-streaked Dallas,⁴ the beast's claw curled round that hairspring rifle is revealed on every page as lunacy or feral law;
20 circling that wound we leave Love Field.⁵ Fondled, these objects conjure hotels, quarrels, new friendships, brown limbs nakedly moulded as these autumn hills memory penetrates as the jet climbs 25 the new clouds over Texas; their home means an island suburb, forest, mountain water;
they are the simple properties for scenes whose joy exhausts like grief, scenes where we learn, exchanging the least gifts, this rose, this napkin, 30 that those we love are objects we return,
that this lens on the desert's wrinkled skin has priced our flesh, all that we love in pawn to that brass ball, that the gifts, multiplying clutter and choke the heart, and that I shall 35 watch love reclaim its things as I lie dying.
My very flesh and blood! Each seems a petal shrivelling from its core. I watch them burn, by the nerves' flare I catch their skeletal candour! Best never to be born 40 the great dead cry.⁶ Their works shine on our shelves, by twilight tour their gilded gravestone spines,
and read until the lamplit page revolves

1. With reference to the Neoplatonic doctrine man of letters, best-known for his short stories.

that earthly relationships and attachments con-

4. With an allusion to the assassination there of tminate the striving for spiritual union with God;
President John F. Kennedy, November 22, 1963.

in contrast to the teaching that divine love is man-

5. The Dallas airport.

ifested in the created world and in human rela-

6. E.g., in Sophocles, Oedipus at Colonus: “Not to tionships.

be born surpasses thought and speech. / The sec-

2. Lyndon Baines Johnson (1906-1973), thirty-ond best is to have seen the light / And then to go sixth president of the United States.

back quickly whence we came.”

3. Jorge Luis Borges (1899-1986), Argentinian

1 8 2 4 / D E R E K W A L C O T T

to a white stasis⁰ whose detachment shines stillness
like a propeller’s rainbowed radiance.

45 Circling like us; no comfort for their loves!

II

The cold glass darkens. Elizabeth wrote once that we make glass the image of our pain;

I watch clouds boil past the cold, sweating pane above the Gulf. All styles yearn to be plain

50 as life. The face of the loved object under glass is plainer still. Yet, somehow, at this height, above this cauldron boiling with its wars,

our old earth, breaking to familiar light,
that cloud-bound mummy with self-healing scars 55 peeled of her cerements⁰ again looks new; grave clothes some cratered valley heals itself with sage, through that grey, fading massacre a blue light-hearted creek flutes of some seige to the amnesia of drumming water.

60 Their cause is crystalline: the divine union of these detached, divided States, whose slaughter darkens each summer now, as one by one,
the smoke of bursting ghettos clouds the glass down every coast where filling-station signs 65 proclaim the Gulf, an air, heavy with gas, sickens the state, from Newark to New Orleans.

III

Yet the South felt like home. Wrought balconies, the sluggish river with its tidal drawl,
the tropic air charged with the extremities 70 of patience, a heat heavy with oil, canebrakes, that legendary jazz. But fear thickened my voice, that strange, familiar soil prickled and barbed the texture of my hair,
my status as a secondary soul.

75 The Gulf, your gulf, is daily widening,
each blood-red rose warns of that coming night
when there's no rock cleft to go hidin' in⁷ and all the rocks catch fire, when that black might,

7. A reference to the hymn that begins “Rock of Ages, cleft for me, / Let me hide myself in thee.” The “rock” signifies Christ, “cleft” in his Crucifixion.

T H E S C H O O N E R FLIGHT / 1 8 2 5

their stalking, moonless panthers turn from Him

80 whose voice they can no more believe, when the black X’s8 mark their passover with slain seraphim.9

IV

The Gulf shines, dull as lead. The coast of Texas

glints like a metal rim. I have no home

as long as summer bubbling to its head

85 boils for that day when in the Lord God’s name

the coals of fire are heaped upon the head of all whose gospel is the whip and flame,

age after age, the uninstrucing dead.

1 9 6 9

From The Schooner Flight

I Adios, Carenage!

In idle August, while the sea soft,

and leaves of brown islands stick to the rim

of this Caribbean, I blow out the light

by the dreamless face of Maria Concepcion

5 to ship as a seaman on the schooner Flight.

Out in the yard turning grey in the dawn,

I stood like a stone and nothing else move

but the cold sea rippling like galvanize

and the nail holes of stars in the sky roof,

io till a wind start to interfere with the trees.

I pass me dry neighbour sweeping she yard
as I went downhill, and I nearly said:
“Sweep soft, you witch, ‘cause she don’t sleep hard,”
but the bitch look through me like I was dead.

15 A route taxi pull up, park-lights still on.

The driver size up my bags with a grin:

“This time, Shabine, like you really gone!”

I ain’t answer the ass, I simply pile in the back seat and watch the sky burn

20 above Laventille² pink as the gown

in which the woman I left was sleeping,

and I look in the rearview and see a man

exactly like me, and the man was weeping

for the houses, the streets, the whole fucking island.

25 Christ have mercy on all sleeping things!

From that dog rotting down Wrightson Road

8. Such as Malcolm X, the Black Muslim leader, onto land, especially for cleaning or repairing; the assassinated February 21, 1965, and the Black name of a port in Trinidad, west of Port of Spain.

Panthers, a militant black organization.

Adios: goodbye (Spanish).

9. Angels of the highest order.

2. Hilly, low-income suburb east of Port of Spain.

1. Careening (French), or the pulling of a ship

1 8 2 6 / D E R E K W A L C O T T

to when I was a dog on these streets;

if loving these islands must be my load,

out of corruption my soul takes wings,
But they had started to poison my soul with their big house, big car, big-time bohbohl,³ coolie, nigger, Syrian, and French Creole,
so I leave it for them and their carnival—
I taking a sea-bath, I gone down the road.
I know these islands from Monos to Nassau,
a rusty head sailor with sea-green eyes that they nickname Shabine, the patois⁰ for spoken dialect any red nigger, and I, Shabine, saw when these slums of empire was paradise.
I'm just a red nigger who love the sea,
I had a sound colonial education,
I have Dutch, nigger, and English in me,
and either I'm nobody, or I'm a nation.
But Maria Concepcion was all my thought watching the sea heaving up and down as the port side of dories, schooners, and yachts was painted afresh by the strokes of the sun signing her name with every reflection;
I knew when dark-haired evening put on her bright silk at sunset, and, folding the sea, sidled under the sheet with her starry laugh,
that there'd be no rest, there'd be no forgetting.
Is like telling mourners round the graveside about resurrection, they want the dead back, so I smile to myself as the bow rope untied and the Flight swing seaward: "Is no use repeating that the sea have more fish. I ain't want her dressed in the sexless light of a seraph,⁰ angel

I want those round brown eyes like a marmoset,⁴ and till the day when I can lean back and laugh,
those claws that tickled my back on sweating
Sunday afternoons, like a crab on wet sand.”
As I worked, watching the rotting waves come past the bow that scissor the sea like silk,
I swear to you all, by my mother's milk,
by the stars that shall fly from tonight's furnace,
that I loved them, my children, my wife, my home;
I loved them as poets love the poetry that kills them, as drowned sailors the sea.
You ever look up from some lonely beach and see a far schooner? Well, when I write this poem, each phrase go be soaked in salt;
I go draw and knot every line as tight
as ropes in this rigging; in simple speech

3. Or hohol: corruption by highly placed people 4. South American monkey.

(Eastern Caribbean English).

O M E R O S / 1 8 2 7

75 my common language go be the wind,
my pages the sails of the schooner Flight.

1 9 7 9

Midsummer

Certain things here⁵ are quietly American—that chain-link fence dividing the absent roars

of the beach from the empty ball park, its holes
muttering the word umpire instead of empire;
5 the gray, metal light where an early pelican coasts, with its engine off, over the pink fire of a sea whose surface is as cold as Maine's.
The light warms up the sides of white, eager Cessnas⁶ parked at the airstrip under the freckling hills
io of St. Thomas. The sheds, the brown, functional hangar, are like those of the Occupation in the last war.
The night left a rank smell under the casuarinas,⁷
the villas have fenced-off beaches where the natives walk, illegal immigrants from unlucky islands
15 who envy the smallest polyp its right to work.
Here the wetback crab and the mollusc are citizens, and the leaves have green cards. Bulldozers jerk and gouge out a hill, but we all know that the dust is industrial and must be suffered. Soon—20 the sea's corrugations are sheets of zinc soldered by the sun's steady acetylene. This drizzle that falls now is American rain, stitching stars in the sand. My own corpuscles are changing as fast. I fear what the migrant envies:
25 the starry pattern they make—the flag on the post office—
the quality of the dirt, the fealty changing under my foot.

1 9 8 4

*From Omeros*⁸

Chapter XXXVIII

HI

Who decrees a great epoch? The meridian of Greenwich.⁹

Who doles out our zeal, and in which way lies our hope? In the cobbles of sinister Shoreditch,¹

5. I.e., in Trinidad.

claims for the “great epoch” of their empire, bit-

6. Make of small aircraft.

terly juxtaposing “our” Caribbean experience of

7. Trees with jointed branches.

exploitation with the experience of the exploiting

8. Omeros (the Greek name for Homer) is a book-imperialists.

length epic poem that transposes elements of

9. The system of geographic longitude was worked

Homer’s Iliad and Odyssey from the Aegean to the out in London’s Royal Observatory, beside the river

Caribbean. Walcott’s principal subject—like

Thames at Greenwich. The prime meridian, or lon-

Homer’s—is the history of his people, and in this gitude 0°, passes through the Observatory.

chapter the poem’s narrator questions British

1. District, for many centuries a slum, in London’s

1828 / D E R E K W A L C O T T

in the widening rings of Big Ben’s iron flower,²

5 in the barges chained like our islands to the Thames.
Where is the alchemical corn and the light it yields?
Where, in which stones of the Abbey, are incised our names?3
Who defines our delight? St. Martin-in-the-Fields.4
After every Michaelmas,5 its piercing soprano steeple 10 defines our delight. Within whose palatable vault will echo the Saints' litany of our island people?
St. Paul's salt shaker,6 when we are worth their salt.
Stand by the tilted crosses of well-quiet Glen-da-Lough.7
Follow the rook's crook'd finger to the ivied grange.8 15 As black as the rook is, it comes from a higher stock.
Who screams out our price? The crows of the Corn Exchange.9
Where are the pleasant pastures? A green baize-table.1
Who invests in our happiness? The Chartered Tour.
Who will teach us a history of which we too are capable?
20 The red double-decker's view of the Bloody Tower.2
When are our brood, like the sparrows, a public nuisance?
When they screech at the sinuous swans on the Serpentine.3
The swans are royally protected,4 but in whose hands are the black crusts of our children? In the pointing sign 25 under the harps of the willows, to the litter of Margate
Sands.5
What has all this to do with the price of fish, our salary
tidally scanned with the bank-rate by waxworks tellers?6
Where is the light of the world?7 In the National Gallery.
In Palladian Wren. In the City8 that can buy and sell us 30 the packets of tea stirred with our crystals of sweat.
East End.

2. From the upper deck of a London bus one can

2. Famous bell in the Clock Tower of London's see the Bloody Tower (reputedly the site of the Houses of Parliament.

murder of the little princes, Edward V and Rich-

3. Many British poets are commemorated in the ard, duke of York) in the larger complex of the Poets' Corner of Westminster Abbey.

Tower of London.

4. Church, famous for its music, at the edge of

3. Lake in London's Hyde Park.

London's Trafalgar Square.

4. Swans in England are, by tradition, owned by

5. The feast of St. Michael, September 29.

the Crown.

6. The great dome of London's St. Paul's Cathe-

5. Popular seaside resort on the Thames Estuary, dral may be said to resemble a salt shaker (or an or lower end, where it meets the North Sea.

onion, as in line 32).

6. I.e, bank clerks working mechanically.

7. Celtic crosses of the monastic community,

7. Reference to the Pre-Raphaelite painter William Holman Hunt's famous picture of Christ, The Hills of southern Ireland.

Light of the World.

8. Country house with attached farm buildings.

8. London's financial district. Palladian Wren-. Sir
9. Handsome building in London's Mark Lane, Christopher Wren (1632-1723), architect of St.
erected in 1828 to be the center of the city's whole-Paul's Cathedral and many lesser London sale corn trade.

churches, was a leading exponent of the neoclas-
1. Imitation-felt-covered table for playing bridge, sical style inaugurated by the Italian architect craps, roulette, etc.

Andrea Palladio (1508-1580).

C O M M O N S E N S E / 1 8 2 9

W h e r e is our sublunar⁹ peace? In that sickle sovereign peeling the gilt from St. Paul's onion silhouette.

There is our lunar peace: in the glittering grain of the coined estuary, our moonlit, immortal wheat,¹ 35 its white sail cresting the gradual swell of the Downs,² startling the hare from the pillars on Salisbury Plain,³ sharpening the grimaces of thin-lipped market towns, whitewashing the walls of Brixton,⁴ darkening the grain
w h e n coal-shadows cross it. Dark future down darker street.

1 9 9 0

ALAN B R O W N J O H N

b. 1931

Common Sense¹

An agricultural labourer, w h o has

A wife and four children, receives 20s² a week.

3 A buy s food , an d th e member s of th e family

Have three meals a day.

5 H o w m u c h is that per person per meal?

—From Pitman's Common Sense Arithmetic, 1917

A gardener, paid 24s a week, is

Fin ed 1A if he c o m e s to work late.

At the end of 26 weeks, he receives

io £ 3 0 . 5 . 3 . H o w

O f t e n was he late?

—From Pitman's Common Sense Arithmetic, 1917

A milk dealer buys milk at 3d a quart. He

Dilutes it with 3% water and sells

15 124 gallons of the mixture at

4d per quart. H o w m u c h of his profit is made by Adulterating the milk?

—From Pitman's Common Sense Arithmetic, 1917

9. Of the terrestrial world.

“Versification,” p. 2050): “The book and its date

1. Cf. Thomas Treherne, Centuries of Meditations

are real, and so are the ‘sum’ stanzas, but I short-

3.3: “The corn was orient and immortal wheat.”

ened, adapted the phrasing to make manageable

2. The South Downs, an area of rolling upland on lines. Occasionally, the math doesn’t make sense the English south coast.

as a result of my adaptation.”

3. Stonehenge, prehistoric circle of gigantic

2. s: abbreviation of shilling, coin worth 12d—

standing stones set in the middle of Salisbury abbreviation of denarii (Latin), pennies—offormer Plain, on the Downs.

British currency. £30.5.3 (line 10) = 30 pounds,

4. District of south London.

5 shillings, and 3 pennies.

1. Brownjohn writes of this “found poem” (see

1 8 3 0 / J A Y M A C P H E R S O N

The table printed below gives the number

20 Of paupers in the United Kingdom, and

The total cost of poor relief.³

Find the average number

Of paupers per ten thousand people.

—From Pitman’s Common Sense Arithmetic, 1917

25 An army had to march to the relief of

A besieged town, 5 0 0 miles away, which

Had telegraphed that it could hold out for 18 days.

The army made forced marches at the rate of 18

Miles a day. Would it be there in time?

30 — From Pitman’s Common Sense Arithmetic, 1917

Out of an army of 2 8 , 0 0 0 men,

15% were Killed, 25% were Wounded. Calculate

35 H o w many men there were left to fight.

—From Pitman’s Common Sense Arithmetic, 1917

These sums are offered to

That host of young people in our Elementary Schools, who

Are so ardently desirous of setting 40 Foot upon the first rung of the Educational ladder ...

—From Pitman's Common Sense Arithmetic, 1917

1989

J A Y M A C P H E R S O N

b . 1 9 3 1

The Swan

White-habited, the mystic Swan

Walks her rank0 cloister as the night draws down,
*overgrown

In sweet c o m m u n i o n with her sister shade, Matchless and unassayed.

5 The tower of ivory sways,

Gaze bends to mirrored gaze:

This perfect arc embraces all her days.

And when she comes to die,

The treasures of her silence patent lie:

io “I am all that is and was and shall be,

My garment may no man put by.”

1957

3. Welfare payments.

T H E D I S T A N T F U R Y O F B A T T L E / 1 8 3 1

A Lost Soul

S o m e are plain lucky—we ourselves a m o n g them:

H o u s e s with books, with gardens, all we wanted,

Work we enjoy, with colleagues we feel close t o —

Love we have, even:

5 True love and candid, faithful, strong as gospel,
Patient, untiring, fond w h e n we are fretful.
Having so m u c h , h o w is it that we ache for Those darker others?

S o m e days for t h e m we could let slip the whole damn
10 Soft bed we've made ourselves, our friends in Heaven
Let slip away, buy back with blood our ancient Vampires and demons.

First loves and oldest, what names shall I call you?

Older to me than language, old as breathing,

15 Born with me, in this flesh: by n o w I know you're Greed, pride and envy.

T o o long I've shut you out, denied acquaintance,

Favoured less barefaced vices, hoped to pass for Reasonable, rate with those w h o more inclined to 20 Self-hurt than murder.

You were my soul: in arrogance I banned you.

N o w I recant—return, possess me, take my Hands, bind my eyes, infallibly restore my

Share in perdition.

1 9 8 1

G E O F F R E Y H I L L

b. 1932

The Distant Fury of Battle

Grass resurrects to mask, to strangle

Words glossed on stone, lopped stone-angel;

But the dead maintain their ground—

That there's no getting r o u n d —

5 W h o in places vitally rest,
Named, anonymous; w h o test
Alike the endurance of yews
Laurels, m o o n s h i n e , stone, all tissues;
1 8 3 2 / G E O F F R E Y H I L L

With w h o m , under licence and duress,
10 There are pacts made, if not peace.
Union with the stone-wearing dead
Claims the born leader, the prepared
Leader, the devourers and all lean men.
Some, finally, learn to begin.

15 S o m e keep to the arrangement of love
(Or similar trust) under w h o s e auspices move
Most subjects, toward the profits of this Combine of doves and witnesses.

Some, dug out of hot-beds, are brought bare,
20 N o t past conceiving but past care.

1 9 5 5 1 9 5 9

The Guardians

The young, having risen early, had gone,
S o m e with excursions beyond the bay-mouth,
S o m e toward lakes, a fragile reflected sun.
Thunder-heads drift, awkwardly, from the south;
5 T h e old watch them. They have watched the safe
Packed harbours topple under sudden gales,
Great tides irrupt, yachts burn at the wharf
That on clean seas pitched their effective sails.
There are silences. These, too, they endure:

io Soft comings-on; soft aftershocks of calm.
Quietly they wade the disturbed shore;
Gather the dead as the first dead scrape home.

1 9 5 6 1 9 5 9

September Song

Born 19.6.32—Deported 24.9.421

Undesirable you may have been, untouchable you were not. N o t forgotten or passed over at the proper time.

As estimated, you died. Things marched, io sufficient, to that end.

1. Hill was born on June 18, 1932, one day before the birthdate given here.

M E R C I A N H Y M N S / 1 8 3 3

Just so m u c h Zyklon² and leather, patented terror, so many routine cries.

(I have made an elegy for myself it 10 is true)

September fattens on vines. Roses flake from the wall. The smoke of harmless fires drifts to my eyes.

This is plenty. This is more than enough.

1 9 6 8

From Mercian Hymns³

V/

The princes of Mercia were badger and raven. Thrall⁴ to their freedom, I dug and hoarded. Orchards

fruited above clefts. I drank from honeycombs of chill sandstone.

5 “A boy at odds in the house, lonely among brothers.”

But I, w h o had none, fostered a strangeness; gave myself to unattainable toys.

Candles of gnarled resin, apple-branches, the tacky mistletoe. “Look” they said and again “look.” But io I ran slowly; the landscape flowed away, back to its source.

In the schoolyard, in the cloakrooms, the children boasted their scars of dried snot; wrists and knees garnished with impetigo.⁵

VII

Gasholders, russet a m o n g fields. Milldams, marlpools⁶ that lay unstirring. Eel-swarms. Coagulations of frogs; once, with branches and half-bricks, he battered a ditchful; then sidled away from the 5 stillness and silence.

2. Hydrocyanic acid, used in fumigation; also ing from the middle of the eighth century until the (Zyklon-B) used in the gas chambers of the Nazi middle of the twentieth (and possibly beyond). The concentration camps.

indication of such a timespan will, I trust, explain

3. “The historical Offa reigned over Mercia (and
and to some extent justify a number of anachro-the greater part of England south of the Humber) nisms” [Hill’s note], in the years A.D. 757—796. During early medieval

4. Slave.

times he was already becoming a creature of leg-

5. Skin disease.

end. The Offa who figures in this sequence might

6. Pools in deposits of crumbling clay and chalk.

perhaps most usefully be regarded as the presiding

Gasholders: or gasometers, large metal receptacles genius of the West Midlands, his dominion endur-

for gas.

1 8 3 4 / G E O F F R E Y H I L L

Ceolred7 w a s his friend and r e m a i n e d so, even after the day of the lost fighter: a biplane, already obsolete and irreplaceable, two i n c h e s of heavy

s n u b silver. C e o l r e d let it spin through a hole

10 in the classroom-floorboards, softly, into the rat droppings a n d coins.

After s c h o o l h e lured Ceolred, w h o w a s sniggering

with fright, d o w n to the old quarries, and flayed

him. T h e n , leaving Ceolred, he j o u r n e y e d for hours,

15 c a l m and alone, in his private derelict sandlorry

n a m e d Albion.8

VIII

T h e m a d are predators. T o o o f t e n lately they harbour

against us. A novel heresy exculpates all m a i m e d souls. Abjure it! I am the King of Mercia, and I know.

5 T h r e a t e n e d b y p h o n e - c a l l s a t m i d n i g h t, v e n o m o u s l e t t e r s, f o r e w a r n e d I h a v e t h w a r t e d t h e i r i m m i n e n t d e v i c e s.

T o d a y I n a m e t h e m ; t o m o r r o w I s h a l l e x p r e s s t h e n e w l a w. I d e d i c a t e m y a w a k e n i n g t o t h i s m a t t e r.

1 9 7 1

*From Lachrimae*⁹

O R

S E V E N T E A R S F I G U R E D I N S E V E N P A S S I O N A T E P A V A N S

Passions I allow, and loves I approve, onely

I would wish that men would alter their object and better their intent.

— S T . R O B E R T S O U T H W E L L,¹ Mary Magdalen's

Funeral Tears, 1591

1. Lachrimae Verae

Crucified Lord, y o u s w i m u p o n y o u r c r o s s a n d n e v e r m o v e. S o m e t i m e s i n d r e a m s o f h e l l t h e b o d y m o v e s b u t m o v e s t o n o a v a i l a n d i s a t o n e w i t h t h a t e t e r n a l l o s s.

7. A ninth-century bishop of Leicester, but the sixteenth-century composer John Dowland's piece name is here used as a characteristic Anglo-Saxon for viols and lutes. Dowland's "Lachrimae" is Mercian name.

divided into seven parts: "Antiquae," "Novae,"

8. An old Celtic name for England; also, the name "Genentes," "Tristes," "Coactae," "Amantis," and of a famous make of British truck. Sandlorry: sand

"Verae" ("true"). A pavan is a stately dance or the truck.

music for this.

9. Tears (Latin). Hill takes his title from the

1. English Jesuit priest and poet (1561—1595).

AN APOLOGY FOR THE REVIVAL OF CHRISTIAN ARCHITECTURE / 1835

5 You are the castaway of d r o w n e d remorse,

you are the world's a t o n e m e n t on the hill.

This is your body twisted by our skill

into a p a t i e n c e proper for redress.

I c a n n o t turn aside f r o m w h a t I do;

10 you c a n n o t turn away f r o m w h a t I am.

You do not dwell in me nor I in y o u h o w e v e r m u c h I p a n d e r to your n a m e

o r a n s w e r to your lords of revenue, surrendering the joys that they c o n d e m n .

1978

From An Apology for the Revival of Christian Architecture in England

the spiritual, Platonic old England ... 2

— S T C , Anima Poetae

“Your situation,” said Coningsby, looking up the green and silent valley, “is absolutely poetic.”

“I try sometimes to fancy,” said Mr. Millbank, with a rather fierce smile, “that I am in the New World.”

— B E N J A M I N D I S R A E L I , Coningsby

9. The Laurel Axe

A u t u m n r e s u m e s the land, ruffles the w o o d s with s m o k y wings, e n t a n g l e s t h e m . Trees s h i n e o u t f r o m their leaves, rocks m i l d e w t o m o s s - g r e e n ;

the a v e n u e s are spread w i t h brittle floods.

5 Platonic England, h o u s e of solitudes, rests in its laurels and its injured stone,
replete w i t h c o m p l e x f o r t u n e s that are g o n e ,
b e s e t by dynasties of m o o d s a n d clouds.

It stands, as t h o u g h at ease with its o w n world,
i o the mannerly extortions, languid praise,
all that devotion l o n g s i n c e b o u g h t and sold, the r o o m s of cedar and s o f t - t h u d d i n g baize,⁴ t r e m u l o u s boudoirs w h e r e the crystals kissed in c a b i n e t s of a m e t h y s t and frost.

1 9 7 8

2. I.e., an idealized orderly rural England. STC:

4. I.e., billiard rooms in great old British homes;
the English poet and philosopher Samuel Taylor
the “soft-thudding baize” refers to the soft green Coleridge (1772-1834; see pp. 805-31).

cloth covering billiard tables as well as to the

3. British novelist and statesman (1804-1881); “green-baize door” traditionally dividing the family
the “New World” referred to is that of an idealized quarters in a grand house from the servants’ quarrural America.

ters.

1 8 3 6 / S Y L V I A P L A T H

Veni Coronaberis⁵

*A Garland for Helen Waddell*⁶

The crocus armies from the dead
rise up; the realm of love renews the battle it was born to lose, though for a time the snows have fled 5 and old stones blossom in the south with sculpted vine and psaltery⁷ and half-effaced adultery
the bird-dung dribbling from its mouth;
and abstinence crowns all our care
10 with martyr-laurels⁸ for this day.

Towers and steeples rise away into the towering gulfs of air.

1 9 7 8

S Y L V I A P L A T H

1 9 3 2 - 1 9 6 3

The Colossus¹

I shall never get you put together entirely,
Pieced, glued, and properly jointed.
Mule-bray, pig-grunt and bawdy cackles
Proceed from your great lips.
5 It's worse than a barnyard.
Perhaps you consider yourself an oracle,
Mouthpiece of the dead, or of some god or other.
Thirty years now I have labored

To dredge the silt from your throat,

io I am none the wiser.

Scaling little ladders with gluepots and pails of lysol

I crawl like an ant in mourning

Over the weedy acres of your brow

To mend the immense skull plates and clear

15 The bald, white tumuli² of your eyes.

5. Come and you will be crowned (Latin).

achievement.

6. British scholar (1889-1965), who translated

1. Alluding to the gigantic statue of this name that several volumes of Latin poems, most notably stood at the entrance of the harbor to Rhodes,

Medieval Latin Lyrics.

Greece, in the third century B.C.E.

7. Ancient and medieval stringed instrument.

2. I.e., grave mounds.

8. Laurels were a classical symbol of victory,

M O R N I N G S O N G / 1 8 3 7

A blue sky out of the Oresteia³

Arches above us. O father, all by yourself

You are pithy and historical as the Roman Forum.

I o p e n my l u n c h on a hill of black cypress.

20 Your fluted b o n e s and acanthine⁴ hair are littered

In their old anarchy to the horizon-line.

It would take more than a lightning-stroke

To create s u c h a ruin.

Nights, I squat in the cornucopia

25 Of your left ear, out of the wind,
C o u n t i n g the red stars and those of plum-color.
T h e sun rises under the pillar of your tongue.
My hours are married to shadow.

No longer do I listen for the scrape of a keel
30 On the blank stones of the landing.

1 9 5 9

1 9 6 0

Morning Song

Love set you going like a fat gold watch.

T h e midwife slapped your footsoles, and your bald cry
Took its place among the elements.

Our voices echo, magnifying your arrival. N e w statue.

5 In a drafty m u s e u m , your nakedness

Shadows our safety. We stand round blankly as walls.

I'm no more your mother

Than the cloud that distills a mirror to reflect its own slow Effacement at the wind's hand.

io All night your moth-breath

Flickers among the flat pink roses. I wake to listen:

A far sea moves in my ear.

O n e cry, and I stumble from bed, cow-heavy and floral
In my Victorian nightgown.

15 Your m o u t h opens clean as a cat's. T h e window square

W h i t e n s and swallows its dull stars. And n o w you try
Your handful of notes;

T h e clear vowels rise like balloons.

1 9 6 1

1 9 6 5

3. Trilogy of plays by the Greek dramatist Aeschylus.

lus (525—456 B.C.E.) that recounts Orestes' and

4. I.e., curved like the acanthus leaves depicted

Electra's efforts to avenge the murder of their atop some Greek columns.

father, Agamemnon, by their mother, Clytemnes-

3 8 / S Y L V I A P L A T H

Tulips

The tulips are too excitable, it is winter here.

Look how white everything is, how quiet, how snowed-in.

I am learning peacefulness, lying by myself quietly

As the light lies on these white walls, this bed, these hands.

I am nobody; I have nothing to do with explosions.

I have given my name and my day-clothes up to the nurses

And my history to the anaesthetist and my body to surgeons.

They have propped my head between the pillow and the sheet-cuff

Like an eye between two white lids that will not shut.

Stupid pupil, it has to take everything in.

The nurses pass and pass, they are no trouble,

They pass the way gulls pass inland in their white caps,

Doing things with their hands, one just the same as another,

So it is impossible to tell how many there are.

My body is a pebble to them, they tend it as water

Tends to the pebbles it must run over, smoothing them gently.

They bring me numbness in their bright needles, they bring me sleep

Now I have lost myself I am sick of baggage—

My patent leather overnight case like a black pillbox,

My husband and child smiling out of the family photo;

Their smiles catch onto my skin, little smiling hooks.

I have let things slip, a thirty-year-old cargo boat

Stubbornly hanging on to my name and address.

They have swabbed me clear of my loving associations.

Scared and bare on the green plastic-pillowed trolley

I watched my tea-set, my bureaus of linen, my books

Sink out of sight, and the water went over my head.

I am a nun now, I have never been so pure.

I didn't want any flowers, I only wanted

To lie with my hands turned up and be utterly empty.

How free it is, you have no idea how free—

The peacefulness is so big it dazes you,

And it asks nothing, a name tag, a few trinkets.

It is what the dead close on, finally; I imagine them

Shutting their mouths on it, like a Communion tablet.

The tulips are too red in the first place, they hurt me.

Even through the gift paper I could hear them breathe

Lightly, through their white swaddlings, like an awful baby.

Their redness talks to my wound, it corresponds.

They are subtle: they seem to float, though they weigh me down,

Upsetting me with their sudden tongues and their color,

A dozen red lead sinkers round my neck.

Nobody watched me before, now I am watched.

The tulips turn to me, and the window behind me

E L M / 1 8 3 9

45 Where once a day the light slowly widens and slowly thins,

And I see myself, flat, ridiculous, a cut-paper shadow

Between the eye of the sun and the eyes of the tulips,

And I have no face, I have wanted to efface myself.

The vivid tulips eat my oxygen.

50 Before they came the air was calm enough,

Coming and going, breath by breath, without any fuss.

Then the tulips filled it up like a loud noise.

Now the air snags and eddies round them the way a river

Snags and eddies round a sunken rust-red engine.

55 They concentrate my attention, that was happy

Playing and resting without committing itself.

The walls, also, seem to be warming themselves.

The tulips should be behind bars like dangerous animals;

They are opening like the mouth of some great African cat,

60 And I am aware of my heart: it opens and closes

Its bowl of red blooms out of sheer love of me.

The water I taste is warm and salt, like the sea,

And comes from a country far away as health.

1 9 6 1 1 9 6 5

Elm

For Ruth Fainlight

I know the bottom, she says. I know it with my great tap root:

It is what you fear.

I do not fear it: I have been there.

Is it the sea you hear in me,

5 Its dissatisfactions?

Or the voice of nothing, that was your madness?

Love is a shadow.

How you lie and cry after it.

Listen: these are its hooves: it has gone off, like a horse.

io All night I shall gallop thus, impetuously,

Till your head is a stone, your pillow a little turf,

Echoing, echoing.

Or shall I bring you the sound of poisons?

This is rain now, this big hush.

15 And this is the fruit of it: tin-white, like arsenic.

I have suffered the atrocity of sunsets.

Scorched to the root

My red filaments burn and stand, a hand of wires.

1 8 4 0 / S Y L V I A P L A T H

Now I break up in pieces that fly about like clubs.

20 A wind of such violence

Will tolerate no bystanding: I must shriek.

The moon, also, is merciless: she would drag me

Cruelly, being barren.

Her radiance scathes me. Or perhaps I have caught her.

25 I let her go. I let her go

Diminished and flat, as after radical surgery.

How your bad dreams possess and endow me.

I am inhabited by a cry.

Nightly it flaps out

30 Looking, with its hooks, for something to love.

I am terrified by this dark thing

That sleeps in me;
All day I feel its soft, feathery turnings, its malignity.
Clouds pass and disperse.
35 Are those the faces of love, those pale irretrievables?
Is it for such I agitate my heart?
I am incapable of more knowledge.
What is this, this face
So murderous in its strangle of branches?
40 Its snaky acids kiss.
It petrifies the will. These are the isolate, slow faults
That kill, that kill, that kill.

1 9 6 2

Daddy

You do not do, you do not do
Any more, black shoe
In which I have lived like a foot
For thirty years, poor and white,
5 Barely daring to breathe or Achoo.
Daddy, I have had to kill you.
You died before I had time
Marble-heavy, a bag full of God, Ghastly statue with one grey toe5
io Big as a Frisco seal

5. Plath's father's toe turned black from gangrene.

D A D D Y / 1 8 4 1

And a head in the freakish Atlantic
Where it pours bean green over blue
In the waters off beautiful Nauset.

I used to pray to recover you.

15 Ach, du.6

In the German tongue, in the Polish town⁷

Scraped flat by the roller

Of wars, wars, wars.

But the name of the town is common.

20 My Polack friend

Says there are a dozen or two.

So I never could tell where you

Put your foot, your root,

I never could talk to you.

25 The tongue stuck in my jaw.

It stuck in a barb wire snare.

Ich, ich, ich, ich,⁸

I could hardly speak.

I thought every German was you.

30 And the language obscene

An engine, an engine

Chuffing me off like a Jew.

A Jew to Dachau, Auschwitz, Belsen.⁹

I began to talk like a Jew.

35 I think I may well be a Jew.

The snows of the Tyrol,¹ the clear beer of Vienna

Are not very pure or true.

With my gypsy ancestress and my weird luck

And my Taroc pack and my Taroc pack²

40 I may be a bit of a Jew.

I have always been scared of you,

With your Luftwaffe,³ your gobbledygoo.

And your neat moustache

And your Aryan eye, bright blue.

45 Panzer⁴-man, panzer-man, O You

Not God but a swastika

So black no sky could squeak through.

Every woman adores a Fascist,

The boot in the face, the brute

50 Brute heart of a brute like you.

. Ah, you (German).

1. Austrian Alpine region.

. Grabow, Poland, Otto Plath's birthplace.

2. Tarot cards, used for fortune-telling.

. I, I, I, I (German).

3. The German air force.

. German concentration camps, where millions

4. Armor (German), especially, during World War

f Jews were murdered during World War II.

II, referring to the German armored tank corps.

1 8 4 2 / S Y L V I A P L A T H

You stand at the blackboard, daddy,

In the picture I have of you,

A cleft in your chin instead of your foot

But no less a devil for that, no not

Any less the black man who

Bit my pretty red heart in two.

I was ten when they buried you.

At twenty I tried to die

And get back, back, back to you.
I thought even the bones would do.
But they pulled me out of the sack,
And they stuck me together with glue,⁵
And then I knew what to do.
I made a model of you,
A man in black with a Meinkampf⁶ look
And a love of the rack and the screw.
And I said I do, I do.
So daddy, I'm finally through.
The black telephone's off at the root,
The voices just can't worm through.
If I've killed one man, I've killed two
The vampire who said he was you
And drank my blood for a year,
Seven years, if you want to know.
75 Daddy, you can lie back now.
There's a stake in your fat black heart
And the villagers never liked you.
They are dancing and stamping on you.
They always knew it was you.
so Daddy, daddy, you bastard, I'm through.
1 9 6 2 1 9 6 5
Ariel⁷
Stasis in darkness.
Then the substanceless blue
Pour of tor^o and distances. craggy hill
God's lioness,

5 How one we grow,

Pivot of heels and knees!—The furrow

5. An allusion to Plath's first suicide attempt.

7. Lion of God (Hebrew); the name of a horse

6. Mein Kam-pf (My Struggle) is Hitler's political

Plath often rode; also, the airy spirit in Shake-autobiography and Nazi polemic, published before speare's Tempest.

his rise to power.

L A D Y L A Z A R U S / 1 8 4 3

Splits and passes, sister to

The brown arc

Of the neck I cannot catch,

10 Nigger-eye

Berries cast dark

Hooks—

Black sweet blood mouthfuls,

Shadows.

15 Something else

Hauls me through air—

Thighs, hair;

Flakes from my heels.

White

20 Godiva,8 I unpeel—

Dead hands, dead stringencies.

And now I

Foam to wheat, a glitter of seas.

The child's cry

25 Melts in the wall.

And I

Am the arrow,

The dew that flies

Suicidal, at one with the drive

30 Into the red

Eye, the cauldron of morning.

1 9 6 2 1 9 6 5

Lady Lazarus⁹

I have done it again.

One year in every ten

I manage it—

A sort of walking miracle, my skin

5 Bright as a Nazi lampshade,¹

My right foot

8. According to legend, Lady Godiva (ca. 1010—11.1-44).

1067) rode naked through the streets of Coventry,

1. In the Nazi death camps, the skins of victims

England, to persuade her husband, the local lord, were sometimes used to make lampshades and the

to lower taxes.

bodies to make soap.

9. Lazarus was raised from the dead by Jesus (John

1 8 4 4 / S Y L V I A P L A T H

A paperweight,

My face a featureless, fine

Jew linen.

10 Peel off the napkin
0 my enemy.
Do I terrify?—
The nose, the eye pits, the full set of teeth?
The sour breath
15 Will vanish in a day.
Soon, soon the flesh
The grave cave ate will be
At home on me
And I a smiling woman.
20 I am only thirty.
And like the cat I have nine times to die.
This is Number Three.
What a trash
To annihilate each decade.
25 What a million filaments.
The peanut-crunching crowd
Shoves in to see
Them unwrap me hand and foot—
The big strip tease.
30 Gentleman, ladies,
These are my hands,
My knees.
I may be skin and bone,
Nevertheless, I am the same, identical woman.
35 The first time it happened I was ten.
It was an accident.
The second time I meant

To last it out and not come back at all.
I rocked shut
40 As a seashell.
They had to call and call
And pick the worms off me like sticky pearls.
Dying
Is an art, like everything else.
45 I do it exceptionally well.
I do it so it feels like hell.
I do it so it feels real.
I guess you could say I've a call.
L A D Y L A Z A R U S / 1 8 4 5
It's easy enough to do it in a cell.
50 It's easy enough to do it and stay put.
It's the theatrical Comeback in broad day
To the same place, the same face, the same brute
Amused shout:
55 "A miracle!"
That knocks me out.
There is a charge
For the eyeing of my scars, there is a charge
For the hearing of my heart—
60 It really goes.
And there is a charge, very large charge,
For a word or a touch
Or a bit of blood
Or a piece of my hair or my clothes.

65 So, so, Herr Doktor.
So, Herr Enemy.
I am your opus,
I am your valuable,
The pure gold baby
70 That melts to a shriek.
I turn and burn.
Do not think I underestimate your great concern.
Ash, ash—
You poke and stir.
75 Flesh, bone, there is nothing there—
A cake of soap,
A wedding ring,
A gold filling.
Herr God, Herr Lucifer,
so Beware
Beware.
Out of the ash²
I rise with my red hair
And I eat men like air.

1 9 6 2 1 9 6 5

2. An allusion to the phoenix, the mythical bird that dies in flames and is reborn from its own ashes.

Beware / Beware: cf. Samuel Taylor Coleridge, "Kubla Khan," line 49 (p. 810).

1 8 4 6

J O H N U P D I K E

b. 1932

V. B. Nimble, V. B. Quick

Science, Pure and Applied, by V. B. Wigglesworth, F.R.S.,¹ Quick

Professor of Biology in the University of Cambridge.

—a talk listed in the B.B.C.'s Radio Times

V. B. Wigglesworth wakes at noon,

Washes, shaves, and very soon

Is at the lab; he reads his mail,

Tweaks a tadpole by the tail,

5 Undoes his coat, removes his hat,

Dips a spider in a vat

Of alkaline, phones the press,

Tells them he is F.R.S.,

Subdivides six protocells,

10 Kills a rat by ringing bells,

Writes a treatise, edits two

Symposia on "Will Man Do?,"

Gives a lecture, audits three,

Has the Sperm Club in for tea,

15 Pensions off an aging spore,

Cracks a test tube, takes some pure

Science and applies it, finds

His hat, adjusts it, pulls the blinds,

Instructs the jellyfish to spawn,

20 And, by one o'clock, is gone.

1 9 5 4

I Missed His Book, but I Read His Name

"The Silver Pilgrimage," by M. Anantanarayanan ... 160 pages.

Criterion. $3.95.

—The New York Times

Though authors are a dreadful clan

To be avoided if you can,

I'd like to meet the Indian,

M. Anantanarayanan.

5 I picture him as short and tan.

We'd meet, perhaps, in Hindustan.²

I'd say, with admirable elan,^o zest

“Ah, Anantanarayanan—

1. Fellow of the Royal Society.

2. Predominantly Hindu area of India.

TEMPORARILY IN OXFORD / 1847

I've heard of you. The Times once ran

10 A notice on your novel, an Unusual tale of God and Man.”

And Anantanarayanan

Would seat me on a lush divan

And read his name—that sumptuous span

15 Of “a”s and “n”s more lovely than

“In Xanadu did Kubla Khan”³—

Aloud to me all day. I plan

Henceforth to be an ardent fan

Of Anantanarayanan—

20 M. Anantanarayanan.

1963

ANN STEVENSON

b. 1933

Temporarily in Oxford

Where they will bury me

I don't know.

Many places might not be sorry to store me.

5 The Midwest has right of origin.

Already it has welcomed my mother to its flat sheets.

The English fens that bore me

have been close curiously often, io It seems I can't get away from dampness and learning.

If I stay where I am

I could sleep in this educated earth.

But if they are kind

15 they'll burn me and send me to Vermont.

I'd be an education for the trees and would relish, really,

flaring into maple each October—

20 my scarlet letter to you.

3. First line of Samuel Taylor Coleridge's "Kubla Khan" (p. 809).

1 8 4 8 / A N N E S T E V E N S O N

Your stormy north is possible.

You will be there, engrossed in its peat.

It would be handy not to have to cross the whole Atlantic

25 e a c h time I wanted to lift up the turf

and slip in beside you.

1 9 7 7

Arioso Dolente1

(for my grandchildren when they become grandparents)

Mother, w h o read and thought and poured herself into
me;

she was the jug and I was the two-eared cup.

H o w she w o u l d scorn today s “show-biz inanity, democracy twisted, its high ideals sold up!”

5 Cancer filched her voice, then cut her throat.

W h y is it

n o n e of the faces in this family snapshot looks upset?

Father, w h o ran downstairs as I practised the piano;

io barefooted, buttoning his shirt, he shouted “G,

D-natural, C-flat! Dolente, arioso.

Put all the griefs of the world in that change of key.”

W h o then could lay a finger on his sleeve to distress him with

15 “One day, Steve, two of your well-taught daughters will be deaf.”

Mother must be sitting, left, on the porch-set,

you can just see her. My sister’s on her lap.

And that’s Steve confiding to his cigarette

20 s o m e t h i n g my mother’s mother has to laugh at.

T h e screened door twangs, slamming

on its sprung hinge.

Paint blisters on the steps; iced tea, grasscuttings,
elm flowers, mock orange ...

25 A grand June evening, like this one, not too buggy, unselfquestioning midwestern, maybe 1951.

And, of course, there in my grandmother's memory lives just such another s u m m e r — 1 8 9 0 or 91.

T h o u g h it's not on her mind now/then.

30 No, she's thinking of the yeast-ring rising, in the oven. Or h o w any shoes irritate her bunion.

1. A sorrowful melodic passage (Italian); here, "from Beethoven's piano sonata, opus 110, third movement;
introduction to the fugue" [Stevenson's note].

THE EX - QUEEN AMONG THE ASTRONOM
ERS / 1 8 4 9

Paper gestures, pictures, newsprint laughter.

And after the camera winks and makes its catch,

35 the decibels drain away for ever and ever.

No need to say "Look!" to these smilers on the porch,

"Grandmother will have her stroke,

and you, mother, will nurse her."

Or to myself, this woman died paralysed-dumb, and that one 40 dumb from cancer.

Sufficient unto the day ... 2 Grandmother, poor and liturgical,

whose days were duties, stitches in the tea-brown blanket

she for years crocheted, its zigzag of yellow wool,

her grateful offering, her proof of goodness to present,

45 gift-wrapped, to Our Father in Heaven. "Accept,

O Lord, this best-I-can-make-it soul."

And He: "Thou good and faithful servant, lose thyself and be whole."

Consciousness walks on tiptoe through what happens.

50 So much is felt, so little of it said.

But ours is the breath on which the past depends.

"What happened" is what the living teach the dead,

who, smilingly lost to their lost concerns,

in grey on grey,

55 are all of them deaf, blind, unburdened

by today.

As if our recording selves, our mortal identities,

could be cupped in a concave universe or lens,

ageless at all ages, cleansed of memories,

60 not minding that meaningful genealogy extends no further than mind's flash images reach back.

As for what happens next,

let all the griefs of the world

find keys for that.

2000

F L E U R A D C O C K

b. 1934

The Ex-Queen Among the Astronomers

They serve revolving saucer eyes,

dishes of stars; they wait upon huge lenses hung aloft to frame

the slow procession of the skies.

2. Matthew 6.34: "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

1 8 5 0 / F L E U R A D C O C K

5 They calculate, adjust, record, watch transits, measure distances.
They carry pocket telescopes to spy through when they walk abroad.
Spectral possess their eyes; they face 10 upwards, alert for meteorites, cherishing little glassy worlds:
receptacles for outer space.
But she, exile, expelled, ex-queen,
swishes among the men of science 15 waiting for cloudy skies, for nights
when constellations can't be seen.
She wears the rings he let her keep;
she walks as she was taught to walk
for his approval, years ago.
20 His bitter features taunt her sleep.
And so when these have laid aside their telescopes, when lids are closed between machine and sky, she seeks terrestrial bodies to bestride.
25 She plucks this one or that among the astronomers, and is become his canopy, his occultation;²
she sucks at earlobe, penis, tongue
mouthing the tubes of flesh; her hair 30 crackles, her eyes are comet-sparks.
She brings the distant briefly close above his dreamy abstract stare.

1 9 7 9

Poem Ended by a Death

They will wash all my kisses and fingerprints off you and my tearstains—I was more inclined to weep
in those wild-garlicky days—and our happier stains, thin scales of papery silk ... Fuck that for a cheap 5 opener; and false too—any such traces you pumiced away yourself, those years ago when you sent my letters back, in the week I married that anecdotal ape. So start again. So:

1. Images retained for a time on the retina of the
2. Concealment of a heavenly body behind the eye when it is turned away after gazing fixedly at body of Earth.
bright objects.

THE SOHO HOSPITAL FOR WOMEN / 1 8 5 1

They will remove the tubes and drips and dressings 10 which I censor from my dreams. They will, it is true, wash you; and they will put you into a box.
After which whatever else they may do won't matter. This is my laconic⁰ style. terse
You praised it, as I praised your intricate pearled 15 embroideries; these links laced us together, plain and purl³ across the ribs of the world ...

1 9 7 9

The Soho Hospital for Women

I

Strange room, from this angle:

white door open before me,
strange bed, mechanical hum, white lights.

There will be stranger rooms to come.

5 As I almost slept I saw the deep flower opening and leaned over into it, gratefully.

It swimmingly closed in my face. I was not ready.

It was not death, it was acceptance.

Our thin patient cat died purring,
io her small triangular head tilted back,
the nurse's fingers caressing her throat,
my hand on her shrunken spine; the quick needle.

That was the second death by cancer.

The first is not for me to speak of.

15 It was telephone calls and brave letters and a friend's hand bleeding under the coffin.

Doctor, I am not afraid of a word.

But neither do I wish to embrace that visitor, to engulf it as Hine-Nui-te-Po

20 engulfed Maui;⁴ that would be the way of it.

And she was the winner there: her womb crushed him.

Goddesses can do these things.

But I have admitted the gloved hands and the speculum⁵
and must part my ordinary legs to the surgeon's knife.

3. Stitch in knitting with needle moved in opposite to depart through her mouth, but when his bird to normal (plain) direction.

companion laughed at the sight, Hine awoke and

4. Supernatural hero in Polynesian mythology, crushed Maui to death.

Maui the sun-snarer, fire-stealer, monster-slayer,

5. Surgical instrument for dilating orifices of the entered the womb of Hine, sleeping goddess of the body to facilitate examination or operation.

underworld, in search of immortality. He intended

1 8 5 2 / F L E U R A D C O C K

2

25 Nellie has only one breast

ample enough to make several.

Her quilted dressing-gown softens to semi-doubtful this imbalance and there's no starched vanity

30 in our abundant ward-mother:

her silvery hair's in braids, her slippers

loll, her weathered smile holds true.

When she dresses up in her black with her glittering marcasite brooch⁶ on

35 to go for the weekly radium treatment

she's the bright star of the taxi-party—

whatever may be growing under her ribs.

Doris hardly smokes in the ward—

and hardly eats more than a dreamy spoonful—

40 but the corridors and bathrooms reek of her Players Number 10,⁷

and the drug-trolley pauses

for long minutes by her bed.

Each week for the taxi-outing

45 she puts on her skirt again and has to pin the slack waistband more tightly over her scarlet sweater.
Her face, a white shadow through smoked glass,
lets Soho display itself unregarded.
50 Third in the car is Mrs Golding who never smiles. And why should she?

3

The senior consultant on his rounds murmurs in so subdued a voice to the students marshalled behind 55 that they gather in, forming a cell,
a cluster, a rosette around him
as he stands at the foot of my bed going through my notes with them,
half-audibly instructive, grave.

60 The slight ache as I strain forward to listen still seems imagined.

Then he turns his practised smile on me:

“How are you this morning?” “Fine,
very well, thank you.” I smile too.

6. Cheap brooch made of crystallized iron pyrites.

7. Brand and type of cigarette.

WHERE HAVE ALL THE FLOWERS GONE? /

1 8 5 3

65 And possibly all that murmurs within me is the slow dissolving of stitches.

4

I am out in the supermarket choosing—this very afternoon, this day—
picking up tomatoes, cheese, bread, 70 things I want and shall be using to make myself a meal, while they eat their stodgy suppers in bed:
Janet with her big freckled breasts,
her prim Scots voice, her one friend, 75 and never in hospital before,
who came in to have a few tests
and now can't see where they'll end;
and Coral in the bed by the door
who whimpered and gasped behind a screen
so with nurses to and fro all night and far too much of the day;
pallid, bewildered, nineteen.
And Mary, who will be all right but gradually. And Alice, who may.
85 Whereas I stand almost intact,
giddy with freedom, not with pain.
I lift my light basket, observing how little I needed in fact;
and move to the checkout, to the rain,
90 to the lights and the long street curving.

1 9 7 9

POPULAR BALLADS OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY

Pete Seeger (b. 1919) • Where Have All the Flowers Gone?1

Where have all the flowers gone?—long time passing

Where have all the flowers gone?—long time ago

1. With additional verse by Joe Hickerson. Cf. Jean Elliot, “The Flowers of the Forest” (p. 677).

54 / P O P U L A R BALLADS OF THE T W E N T I E T H C E N T U R Y

Where have all the flowers gone?—girls have picked them
every one

When will they ever learn? When will they ever learn?

Where have all the young girls gone?—long time passing

Where have all the young girls gone?—long time ago

Where have all the young girls gone?—they’ve taken husbands every one

When will they ever learn? When will they ever learn?

Where have all the young men gone?—long time passing

Where have all the young men gone?—long time ago

Where have all the young men gone?—gone for soldiers every one

When will they ever learn? When will they ever learn?

Where have all the soldiers gone?—long time passing

Where have all the soldiers gone?—long time ago

Where have all the soldiers gone?—gone to graveyards
everyone

When will they ever learn? When will they ever learn?

Where have all the graveyards gone?—long time passing

Where have all the graveyards gone?—long time ago

Where have all the graveyards gone?—gone to flowers
everyone

When will they ever learn? When will they ever learn?

1961

Bob Dylan (b. 1941) • Boots of Spanish Leather

Oh, I'm sailin' away my own true love,

I'm sailin' away in the morning.

Is there something I can send you from across the sea,

From the place that I'll be landing?

5 No, there's nothin' you can send me, my own true love,

There's nothin' I wish to be ownin'.

Just carry yourself back to me unspoiled,

From across that lonesome ocean.

Oh, but I just thought you might want something fine

io Made of silver or of golden,

Either from the mountains of Madrid

Or from the coast of Barcelona.

Oh, but if I had the stars from the darkest night

And the diamonds from the deepest ocean,

15 I'd forsake them all for your sweet kiss

For that's all I'm wishin' to be ownin'.

That I might be gone a long time

And it's only that I'm askin',

Is there something I can send you to remember me by,

20 To make your time more easy passin'.

B A L L A D O F B I R M I N G H A M / 1 8 5 5

Oh, how can, how can you ask me again,

It only brings me sorrow.

The same thing I want from you today,

I would want again tomorrow.

25 I got a letter on a lonesome day,

It was from her ship a-sailin',

Saying I don't know when I'll be comin' back again,
It depends on how I'm a-feelin'.
Well, if you, my love, must think that-a-way,
30 I'm sure your mind is roamin'.
I'm sure your heart is not with me,
But with the country to where you're goin'.
So take heed, take heed of the western wind,
Take heed of the stormy weather.
35 And yes, there's something you can send back to me,
Spanish boots of Spanish leather.

1 9 6 3

Dudley Randall (b. 1914) • Ballad of Birmingham

*(On the bombing of a church in Birmingham, Alabama, 1963)*²

“Mother dear, may I go downtown
Instead of out to play,
And march the streets of Birmingham
In a Freedom March today?”
5 “No, baby, no, you may not go,
For the dogs are fierce and wild,
And clubs and hoses, guns and jails
Aren't good for a little child.”
“But, mother, I won't be alone,
io Other children will go with me,
And march the streets of Birmingham
To make our country free.”
“No, baby, no, you may not go,
For I fear those guns will fire.

15 But you may go to church instead

And sing in the children's choir.”

2. Two weeks after Martin Luther King's August 23rd March on Washington; in Birmingham, King had led nonviolent civil rights demonstrations that were met with attack dogs, tear gas, cattle prods, and firehoses.

1 8 5 6 / A M I R I B A R A K A (L E R O I J O N E S)

She has combed and brushed her night-dark hair,

And bathed rose petal sweet,

And drawn white gloves on her small brown hands,

20 And white shoes on her feet.

The mother smiled to know her child

Was in the sacred place,

But that smile was the last smile

To come upon her face.

25 For when she heard the explosion,

Her eyes grew wet and wild.

She raced through the streets of Birmingham

Calling for her child.

She clawed through bits of glass and brick,

30 Then lifted out a shoe.

“O, here's the shoe my baby wore,

But, baby, where are you?”

1 9 6 9

A M I R I B A R A K A (L E R O I J O N E S)

b. 1934

In Memory of Radio

Who has ever stopped to think of the divinity of Lamont
Cranston?1

(Only Jack Kerouac,² that I know of: & me.

The rest of you probably had on WCBS and Kate Smith,
Or something equally unattractive.)

5 What can I say?

It is better to have loved and lost

Than to put linoleum in your living rooms?³

Am I a sage or something?

Mandrake's hypnotic gesture of the week?

io (Remember, I do not have the healing powers of Oral Roberts ...

I cannot, like F. J. Sheen, tell you how to get saved & rich!

I cannot even order you to gaschamber satori⁴ like Hitler or Goody

Knight

1. The hero's alter ego on the 1930—50s radio and television—as governor of California in the serial “The Shadow.” The poem refers to promi-1950s, he wanted University of California teachers nent characters (Mandrake) and personalities that to sign a loyalty oath as a condition of employment.

Jones would have heard on the radio as a boy: Kate

2. American writer (1922—1969), affiliated, as was Smith (1907—1986), a popular American singer, Baraka (loosely), with the Beat movement.

best-known for her frequent performances of “God

3. Cf. Alfred, Lord Tennyson, “In Memoriam

Bless America”; Oral Roberts (b. 1918), evangelist;

A. H. H.,” 28.15-16, 85.3-4: ” ‘Tis better to have

Fulton J. Sheen (1895-1979), Roman Catholic loved and lost / than never to have loved at all.”

popularizer of religion; Goodwin Knight (1896—
4. The state of spiritual enlightenment sought in 1970), one of the first politicians to exploit radio Zen Buddhism.

A N AGONY. A s N o w . / 1 8 5 7

& Love is an evil word.

Turn it backwards / see, what I mean?

An evil word. & besides

Who understands it?

I certainly wouldn't like to go out on that kind of limb.

Saturday mornings we listened to Red Lantern & his undersea folk.

At 11, Let's Pretend / & we did / & I, the poet, still do, Thank God!

What was it he used to say (after the transformation, when he was safe

& invisible & the unbelievers couldn't throw stones?) “Heh, heh, heh, Who knows what evil lurks in the hearts of men?
The Shadow knows.”

O, yes he does

O, yes he does.

An evil word it is,

This Love.

1961

An Agony. As Now.

I am inside someone who hates me. I look out from his eyes. Smell

what fouled tunes come in 5 to his breath. Love his wretched women.

Slits in the metal, for sun. Where my eyes sit turning, at the cool air
the glance of light, or hard flesh
io rubbed against me, a woman, a man, without shadow, or voice, or meaning.

This is the enclosure (flesh, where innocence is a weapon. An abstraction. Touch. (Not mine.

15 Or yours, if you are the soul I had and abandoned when I was blind and had my enemies carry me as a dead man
(if he is beautiful, or pitied.

It can be pain. (As now, as all his 20 flesh hurts me.) It can be that. Or pain. As when she ran from me into that forest.

Or pain, the mind
silver spiraled whirled against the 25 sun, higher than even old men thought

1 8 5 8 / A U D R E L O R D E

God would be. Or pain. And the other. The yes. (Inside his books, his fingers. They are withered yellow flowers and were never beautiful.) The yes. You will, lost soul, say 30 “beauty.” Beauty, practiced, as the tree. The slow river. A white sun in its wet sentences.

Or, the cold men in their gale. Ecstasy. Flesh or soul. The yes. (Their robes blown. Their bowls empty. They chant at my heels, not at yours.) Flesh 35 or soul, as corrupt. Where the answer moves too quickly.
W h e r e the God is a self, after all.) Cold air blown through narrow blind eyes. Flesh, white hot metal. Glows as the day with its sun.
It is a h u m a n love. I live inside. A bony skeleton 40 you recognize as words or simple feeling.
But it has no feeling. As the metal, is hot, it is not,
given to love.

It burns the thing
inside it. And that thing
45 screams.

1 9 6 4

A U D R E L O R D E

1 9 3 4 - 1 9 9 2

Coal

I

is the total black, being spoken
from the earth's inside.

There are many kinds of open 5 how a diamond comes into a knot of flame how sound comes into a word, colored by who pays what for speaking.
Some words are open like a diamond on glass windows

io singing out within the passing crash of sun
Then there are words like stapled wagers in a perforated book—buy and sign and tear apart—
and come whatever wills all chances the stub remains

15 an ill-pulled tooth with a ragged edge.

Some words live in my throat

FROM THE HOUSE OF YEMANJA / 1859

breeding like adders. Others know sun seeking like gypsies over my tongue

to explode through my lips

20 like young sparrows bursting from shell.

Some words

bedevil me.

Love is a word, another kind of open.

As the diamond comes into a knot of flame

25 I am Black because I come from the earth's inside

now take my word for jewel in the open light.

1968, 1976

From the House of Yemanja I

My mother had two faces and a frying pot

where she cooked up her daughters

into girls

before she fixed our dinner.

5 My mother had two faces and a broken pot

where she hid out a perfect daughter who was not me

I am the sun and moon and forever hungry
io for her eyes.

I bear two women upon my back one dark and rich and hidden in the ivory hungers of the other
mother

15 pale as a witch
yet steady and familiar brings me bread and terror
in my sleep
her breasts are huge exciting anchors 20 in the midnight storm.

All this has been before

in my mother's bed
time has no sense

25 I have no brothers and my sisters are cruel.

1. "Mother of the other Orisha [the goddesses and Yemanja's long breasts, and when she fled with her gods ... of the Yoruba peoples of Western Nige- pots he knocked her down. From her breasts ria], Yemanja is also the goddess of oceans. Rivers flowed the rivers, and from her body then sprang are said to flow from her breasts. One legend has forth all the other Orisha. River-smooth stones are it that a son tried to rape her. She fled until she Yemanja's symbol, and the sea is sacred to her fol-collapsed, and from her breasts, the rivers flowed.

lowers. Those who please her are blessed with Another legend says that a husband insulted

many children” [Lorde’s note].

1 8 6 0 / A U D R E L O R D E

Mother I need

mother I need

mother I need your blackness now

30 as the august earth needs rain.

I am

the sun and moon and forever hungry

the sharpened edge

where day and night shall meet

35 and not be one.

1 9 7 8

Echoes

There is a timbre of voice

that comes from not being heard and knowing you are not being heard noticed only

5 by others not heard

for the same reason.

The flavor of midnight fruit tongue

calling your body through dark light

piercing the allure of safety

io ripping the glitter of silence around you

dazzle me with color and perhaps I won't notice
till after you're gone 15 your hot grain smell tattooed into each new poem resonant beyond escape I am listening in that fine space between desire and always 20 the grave stillness before choice.
As my tongue unravels
in what pitch
will the scream hang unsung 25 or shiver like lace on the borders of never recording which dreams heal which dream can kill stabbing a man and burning his body 30 for cover being caught making love to a woman
I do not know.

1 9 9 3

1 8 6 1

N . S C O T T M O M A D A Y

b. 1934

Headwaters

Noon in the intermountain plain:

There is scant telling of the marsh—

A log, hollow and weather-stained.
An insect at the mouth, and moss—
5 Yet waters rise against the roots,
Stand brimming to the stalks. What moves?
What moves on this archaic force
Was wild and welling at the source.

1 9 7 6

The Eagle-Feather Fan

The eagle is my power,

And my fan is an eagle.

It is strong and beautiful

In my hand. And it is real.

5 My fingers hold upon it

As if the beaded handle

Were the twist of bristlecone.

The bones of my hand are fine

And hollow; the fan bears them,

io My hand veers in the thin air

Of the summits. All morning

It scuds on the cold currents;

All afternoon it circles

To the singing, to the drums.

1 9 7 6

The Gift

For Bobby Jack Nelson

Older, more generous,

We give each other hope.

The gift is ominous:

Enough praise, enough rope.

1 9 7 6

1 8 6 2 / W O L E S O Y I N K A

Two Figures

These figures moving in my rhyme,
Who are they? Death and Death's dog, Time.

1 9 7 6

W O L E S O Y I N K A

b. 1934

Telephone Conversation

The price seemed reasonable, location
Indifferent. The landlady swore she lived Off premises. Nothing remained
But self-confession. "Madam," I warned, 5 "I hate a wasted journey—I am African."
Silence. Silenced transmission of Pressurized good-breeding. Voice, when it came,
Lipstick coated, long gold-rolled Cigarette-holder pipped. Caught I was, foully, io "HOW DARK?" ... I had not misheard ... "ARE YOU LIGHT
OR VERY DARK?" Button B. Button A.1 Stench
Of rancid breath of public hide-and-speak.
Red booth. Red pillar-box.° Red double-tiered mailbox
Omnibus squelching tar. It was real! Shamed 15 By ill-mannered silence, surrender
Pushed dumbfoundment to beg simplification.
Considerate she was, varying the emphasis—

“ARE YOU DARK? OR VERY L I G H T ? ” Revelation came.

“You mean—like plain or milk chocolate?”

20 Her assent was clinical, crushing in its light

Impersonality. Rapidly, wave-length adjusted,

I chose. “West African sepia”²—and as afterthought,

“Down in my passport.” Silence for spectroscopic³

Flight of fancy, till truthfulness clangd her accent

25 Hard on the mouthpiece, “WHAT’S THAT?” conceding

” D O N ‘ T KNOW WHAT THAT is.” “Like brunette.”

“THAT’S DARK, ISN’T I T ? ” “Not altogether.

Facially, I am brunette, but, madam, you should see

The rest of me. Palm of my hand, soles of my feet

30 Are a peroxide blond. Friction, caused—

Foolishly, madam—by sitting down, has turned

My bottom raven black—One moment, madam!”—sensing

Her receiver rearing on the thunderclap

1. Buttons to be pressed by caller who has inserted 2. Reddish brown.

a coin into an old type of British public pay phone. 3. Related to study of the color spectrum.

A L W A Y S / 1 8 6 3

A b o u t m y e a r s — ” M a d a m , ” I p l e a d e d , “wouldn’t y o u r a t h e r 35 S e e f o r y o u r s e l f ? ”

1 9 6 2

MARK S T R A N D

b. 1934

The Prediction

T h a t n i g h t t h e m o o n d r i f t e d o v e r t h e p o n d , turning the water to milk, and under the boughs of the trees, the blue trees,

a young woman walked, and for an instant 5 the future came to her:

rain falling on her husband's grave, rain falling on the lawns of her children, her own mouth filling with cold air, strangers moving into her house, a man in her room writing a poem, the moon drifting into it, io a woman strolling under its trees, thinking of death, thinking of him thin king of her, and the wind rising and taking the m oon and leaving the paper dark.

1970

Always

for Charles Simic

Always so late in the day

In their rumpled clothes, sitting

Around a table lit by a single bulb,

The great forgetters were hard at work.

5 They tilted their heads to one side, closing their eyes.

Then a house disappeared, and a man in his yard With all his flowers in a row.

The great forgetters wrinkled their brows.

Then Florida went and San Francisco

io Where tugs and barges leave

Small gleaming scars across the Bay.

One of the great forgetters struck a match.

Gone were the harps of beaded lights

That vault the rivers of New York.

15 A n o t h e r filled his glass
A n d t h a t w a s i t f o r c r o w d s a t e v e n i n g
U n d e r s u l p h u r y e l l o w s t r e e t l a m p s c o m i n g o n .

1 8 6 4 / M A R K S T R A N D

A n d a f t e r w a r d s B u l g a r i a w a s g o n e , a n d t h e n J a p a n .

“Where will it stop?” o n e o f t h e m s a i d .

20 ” S u c h d i f f i c u l t w o r k , p u r s u i n g t h e f a t e

O f e v e r y t h i n g k n o w n , ” s a i d a n o t h e r .

” D o w n t o t h e l a s t s t o n e , ” s a i d a t h i r d ,

“And only the cold zero of p e r f e c t i o n

L e f t f o r t h e i m a g i n a t i o n . ” A n d g o n e

25 W e r e N o r t h a n d S o u t h A m e r i c a ,

A n d g o n e a s w e l l t h e m o o n .

A n o t h e r y a w n e d , a n o t h e r g a z e d a t t h e w i n d o
w :

No grass, no trees ...

T h e b l a z e o f p r o m i s e e v e r y w h e r e .

1 9 9 0

FROM DARK HARBOR 1

XVI

It is true, as s o m e o n e h a s s a i d , t h a t i n

A w o r l d w i t h o u t t h e a v e n a l l i s f a r e w e l l . 2

W h e t h e r y o u w a v e y o u r h a n d o r n o t ,

It is farewell, and if no tears c o m e t o y o u r e y e s

5 It is still farewell, and if y o u p r e t e n d n o t t o n o t i c e ,

H a t i n g w h a t p a s s e s , i t i s s t i l l f a r e w e l l .

Farewell no matter what. A n d t h e p a l m s a s t h e y l e a n

O v e r t h e g r e e n , b r i g h t l a g o o n , a n d t h e p e l i c a n s

Diving, and t h e glistening bodies of bathers resting, io Are stages in an ultimate stillness, and the m o v e m e n
t

Of sand, and of wind, and the secret m o v e s of the body
Are part of the s a m e , a simplicity that turns being

Into an o c c a s i o n for m o u r n i n g , or into an o c c a s i o n W o r t h celebrating, for w h a t else does o n e do,

15 F e e l i n g t h e w e i g h t of the pelicans' wings,

T h e density of the palms' s h a d o w s , the cells that darken

T h e backs of bathers? T h e s e are b e y o n d the distortions

O f c h a n c e , b e y o n d the evasions o f m u s i c . T h e e n d I s e n a c t e d again and again. A n d we feel it

20 In the t e m p t a t i o n s of sleep, in the m o o n ' s ripening,

In the w i n e as it waits in the glass.

1. A forty-five-section, book-length poem in which terza rima rhyme scheme) and William Words-Strand recounts a spiritual quest while paying worth (1770-1850; see pp. 763-805).

homage to several guiding influences in poetry.

2. Cf. Wallace Stevens, "Waving Adieu, Adieu, Among the most important are Dante (whose Adieu," lines 5-8 (p. 1266).

three-line stanzas he borrows, though not Dante's

H O M A G E T O C L A U D E L O R R A I N E / 1 8 6 5

XX

Is it y o u s t a n d i n g a m o n g t h e olive trees

B e y o n d t h e courtyard? Y o u i n t h e s u n l i g h t

Waving me closer with one hand while the other Shields your eyes from the brightness that turns 5 All that is not you dead white? Is it you

Around whom the leaves scatter like foam?

You in the murmuring night that is scented

With mint and lit by the distant wilderness
Of stars? Is it you? Is it really you

10 Rising from the script of waves, the length Of your body casting a sudden shadow over my hand So that I feel how cold it is as it moves

Over the page? You leaning down and putting Your mouth against mine so I should know

15 That a kiss is only the beginning

Of what until now we could only imagine?

Is it you or the long compassionate wind

That whispers in my ear: alas, alas?

1993

CHARLES WRIGHT

b. 1935

Homage to Claude Lorraine I

I had a picture by him — a print, I think — on my bedroom wall In Verona in 1959,

via Anzani n. 3.2

Or maybe a drawing, a rigged ship in a huge sea,

5 Storm waves like flames above my bed.

It's lost between there and here now,

and has been for years,

Trapped in the past's foliage, as so much else is

In spite of our constancy, or how

io We rattle the branches and keep our lights on the right place .

The room had a vaulted ceiling and faced east.

The living room was a tower with skylights on four sides.

1. Or Claude Lorrain, pseudonym of Claude Gel- 2. Address in Verona, Italy, lee (1600-1682), French painter.

1866 / CHARLES WRIGHT

A third room sloped with the roof

until it was two feet high at the far wall,

15 All of this part of a reconstructed attic, and washed white.

I lived there for two years,

one block from the Adige³

Where seagulls, like little loaves of fresh bread,

Drifted and turned on its grey coils.

20 Between the sea fires of Claude Lorraine and the curled sheets of the river,

I burned on my swivel stool

Night after night,

looking into the future, its charred edges

25 Holding my life like a frame

I'd hope to fit into one day, unsigned and rigged for the deeps.

1984

Chinese Journal

In 1935, the year I was born,

Giorgio Morandi⁴

Penciled these bottles in by leaving them out, letting

The presence of what surrounds them increase the presence
5 Of what is missing,
keeping its distance and measure.

The purple-and-white spike plants stand upright and spine-laced,
As though poised to fight by keeping still,
io Inside their bristly circle,
The dwarf boxwood
flashes its tiny shields at the sun.

Under the skylight, the Pothos⁰ plant climbing shrub
Dangles its fourteen arms
15 into the absence of its desire.
Like a medusa in the two-ply, celadon⁵ air,
Its longing is what it grows on,
heart-leaves in the nothingness.

3. River that runs through Verona.
ology, one of three snake-haired Gorgons who
4. Italian painter (1890-1964). turned those who looked at them into stone; also,
5. Grayish yellow-green. Medusa: in Greek myth-a kind of jellyfish.

Q U O T A T I O N S / 1 8 6 7

To shine but not to dazzle.
20 Falling leaves, falling water, everything comes to rest.

What can anyone know of the sure machine that makes all things work?

To find one word and use it correctly,
providing it is the right word,

25 Is more than enough:

An inch of music is an inch and a half of dust.

1 9 8 8

As Our Bodies Rise, Our Names Turn into Light

The sky unrolls like a rug,

unwelcoming, gun-grey,

Over the Blue Ridge.⁶

Mothers are calling their children in,

5 mellifluous syllables, floating sounds.

The traffic shimmies and settles back.

The doctor has filled his truck with leaves

Next door, and a pair of logs.

Salt stones litter the street,

io The snow falls and the wind drops.

How strange to have a name, any name, on this poor earth.

January hunkers down,

the icicle deep in her throat—

The days become longer, the nights ground bitter and cold,

15 Single grain by single grain

Everything flows toward structure,

last ache in the ache for God.

1 9 9 5

Quotations

Renoir,⁷ whose paintings I don't much like,

Says what survives of the artist is the feeling he gives by means of objects.

6. Eastern ridge of the Appalachian Mountains, 7. Pierre-Auguste Renoir (1841-1919), French ranging from Pennsylvania into Georgia. painter.

1 8 6 8 / D A R Y L H I N E

I do like that, however,

The feeling put in as much as the feeling received

5 To make a work distinctive,

Though I'm not sure it's true,

or even it's workable.

W h e n Chekhov⁸ died, he died at dawn,

a large moth circling the lamp,

io Beating its pressed wings.

Placed in a zinc casket, the corpse, labeled Fresh Oysters,

Was sent to Moscow in a freight car from Germany.

His last words were, Has the sailor left?

*I am dying, Ich sterhe.*⁹

15 My hreath is corrupt, my days are extinct, the graves are ready for me, Job¹ says. They change the night into day—

The light is short because of darkness ...

I have said to corruption,

thou art my father, to the worm,

20 Thou art my mother and my sister—

They shall go down to the bars of the pit,

when our rest together is in the dust.

That's all. There's nothing left after that.

As Meng Chiao² says,

25 For a while the dust weighs lightly on my cloak.

1 9 9 8

DARYL H I N E

b. 1936

Letting Go

I loved you first the time I saw you last,

I knew you best before I let you go.

All the misapprehensions of the past

Dissipated in an hour or so,

8. Anton Chekhov (1860-1904), Russian fiction tested by God with many forms of suffering. These writer and playwright.

quotations are taken from Job 17.

9. I am dying (German).

2. Chinese poet (751-814).

1. In the Hebrew Scriptures, a virtuous man

R E P R E S S I O N / 1 8 6 9

5 Naked to the h u m a n eye you lay

Candid as a cadaver on the couch

I could have slept on, but I went away

Ashamed to stay, afraid almost to touch.

Lost, you seemed the only vivid thing

10 In a world made moribund and flat

By worldliness. Renunciations bring

Their own reward, apparently, like that

Last look of yours, ironical or tender,

A valediction and a benediction,

15 W h i c h endless reruns will not soon surrender,

T h e indispensable, improper fiction

Of your unforgettable perfection.

1 9 9 0

Riddle

Invisible, chimerical

Revolution of the air,

Fickle, hyperactive, fair,

Impulsive, unpredictable

5 Flibbertigibbet capable

Of never settling anywhere;

Fortuitously musical

Condition of the atmosphere,

Zephyr, monsoon, hurricane,

io Tempest, typhoon, gust or gale—

W h e n will inspiration fail?—

Accomplice of the hail and rain,

Blind but palpable as braille

//^LUQ 9UIIJJ9FG8 FPG MG3FPGLA3UG*

1 9 9 0

C. K. W I L L I A M S

b. 1936

Repression

More and more lately, as, not even minding the slippages yet,
the

aches and sad softenings,

I settle into my other years, I notice how many of what I once thought

were evidences of repression,

1 8 7 0 / C . K . W I L L I A M S

sexual or otherwise, now seem, in other people anyway, to be varieties

of dignity, withholding, tact, and sometimes even in myself, certain patiences I would have once called lassitude, indifference, 5 now seem possibly to be if not the rewards then at least the unsuspected, undreamed-of conclusions to many of the even-then-preposterous self-evolved disciplines, rigors, almost mortifications
I inflicted on myself in my starting-out days, improvement days, days
when the idea alone of psychic peace, of intellectual, of emotional quiet, the merest hint, would have meant inconceivable capitulation.

1 9 8 7

Snow: II

It's very cold, Catherine is bundled in a coat, a poncho on top of that,
high boots, gloves,
a long scarf around her neck, and she's sauntering up the middle of the snowed-in street, eating, of all things, an apple, the blazing redness of which shocks against the world of white.
No traffic yet, the crisp crisp of her footsteps keeps reaching me until she turns the corner.
5 I write it down years later, and the picture still holds perfectly, precise, unwanting, and so too does the sense of being suddenly bereft as she passes

abruptly from my sight,
the quick wash of desolation, the release again into the memory of affection, and then affection, as the first trucks blundered past, chains pounding, the first delighted children rushed out with sleds.

1 9 8 7

The Question

The middle of the night, she's wide awake, carefully lying as far away
as she can from him.
He turns in his sleep and she can sense him realizing she's not
in the place she usually is, then his sleep begins to change, he pulls himself closer, his arm comes comfortably around her.

"Are you awake?" she says, then, afraid that he might think she's asking him for sex,

5 she hurries on, "I want to know something; last summer, in Cleveland, did you have someone else?"

THE QUESTION / 1 8 7 1

She'd almost said—she was going to say—"Did you have a lover?" but she'd caught herself;

she'd been frightened by the word, she realized; it was much
too

definite, at least for now.

Even so, it's only after pausing that he answers, "No," with what feeling she can't tell.

He moves his hand on her, then with a smile in his voice asks, "Did you have somebody in Cleveland?"

"That's not what I was asking you," she says crossly. "But that's what I asked you" he answers.

She's supposed to be content now, the old story, she knows that she's supposed to be relieved, but she's not relieved, her tension hasn't eased the slightest bit, which doesn't surprise her.

She's so confused that she can't really even say now if she wants to believe him or not.

Anyway, what about that pause? Was it because in the middle of the night and six months later

he wouldn't have even known what she was talking about, or was it because he needed that moment to frame an answer which would neutralize what might after all have been a shocking thrust

with a reasonable deflection, in this case, his humor: a laugh that's like a lie and is.

"When would I have found the time?" he might have said, or, "Who in Cleveland could I love?"

Or, in that so brief instant, might he have been finding a way to stay in the realm of truth, as she knew he'd surely want to, given how self-righteously he esteemed his ethical integrities?

It comes to her with a start that what she most deeply and painfully suspects him of is a renunciation.

She knows that he has no one now; she thinks she knows there's been no contact from Cleveland, but she still believes that there'd been something then, and if it was as important as she thinks, it wouldn't be so easily forgotten, it would still be with him somewhere
as a sad regret,
perhaps a precious memory, but with that word, renunciation, hooked
to it like a price tag.

Maybe that was what so rankled her, that she might have been
the object of his charity, his goodness.

That would be too much; that he would have wronged her,
then
sacrificed himself for her.

Yes, "Lover," she should have said it, "Lover, lover," should have made him try to disavow it.

She listens to his breathing; he's asleep again, or has he taught himself to feign that, too?

“No, last summer in Cleveland I didn’t have a lover, I have never been to Cleveland, I love you.

There is no Cleveland, I adore you, and, as you’ll remember, there was no last summer:

1 8 7 2 / T O N Y H A R R I S O N

the world last summer didn’t yet exist, last summer still was universal darkness, chaos, pain.”

1 9 9 2

T O N Y H A R R I S O N

b. 1937

On Not Being Milton

*for Sergio Vieira & Armando Guebuza (Frelimo)*¹

Read and committed to the flames, I call these sixteen lines that go back to my roots

my Cahier d’un retour au pays natal,²

my growing black enough to fit my boots.

5 The stutter of the scold out of the branks³ of condescension, class and counter-class

thickens with glottals to a lumpen⁴ mass of Ludding morphemes⁵ closing up their ranks.

Each swung cast-iron Enoch of Leeds stress⁶

io clangs a forged music on the frames of Art,

the looms of owned language smashed apart!

Three cheers for mute ingloriousness!⁷

Articulation is the tongue-tied’s fighting.

In the silence round all poetry we quote

15 Tidd the Cato Street conspirator⁸ who wrote:
Sir, I Ham a very Bad Hand at Righting.

1 9 7 8

1. Mozambique freedom-fighters.

pronounced as two syllables without an interven-

2. Notebook of a return to one's land of birth ing t.

(French). The title of a poem by the Martinican

5. Smallest meaningful language units. Ludding:
poet, historian, and politician Aime Cesaire (b.

Luddites were reactionary groups opposed to the 1913). Published in 1939, Cahier d'un retour au mechanization of mills and factories, a change that pays natal is a seminal work in the literature of led to unemployment and starvation.

negritude, describing the condition of colonized

6. Forceful or prominent syllable or sound. "An black (in Cesaire's case West Indian) people, and
'Enoch' is an iron sledge-hammer used by the Ludcharting a literal and physical journey back from dites to smash the frames which were also made exile to the homeland.

by the same Enoch Taylor of Marsden. The cry

3. "Bridles," or gagging devices put over the was: 'Enoch made them, Enoch shall break mouths of "scolds," people who habitually com-them!' " [Harrison's note],

plain and nag. As the old northern word for poet

7. A reference to Thomas Gray, “Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard,” line 59: “Some mute in defiance of the society that silences them, as inglorious Milton here may rest” (p. 671).

well as to political agitators and revolutionaries.

8. Participant in a failed early nineteenth-century

4. Lower-class. Glottals: sounds made by opening and closing the larynx. The Leeds dialect uses glottal stops, the sound made when the word hutter is London’s Edgware Road.

T H E M & [u z] / 1 8 7 3

Classics Society

(Leeds Grammar School 1 5 5 2 — J 9 5 2) 9

The grace of Tullies eloquence doth excell any Englishmans tongue ... my barbarous stile ... I

The tongue our leaders use to cast their spell was once denounced as “rude”, “gross”, “base” and “vile”.

5 How fortunate we are who’ve come so far!

We boys can take old Hansards² and translate the British Empire into SPQR³

but nothing demotic⁰ or too up-to-date, slangy
and not the English that I speak at home, io not Hansard standards, and if Antoninus⁴ spoke like delinquent Latin back in Rome he’d probably get gamma double minus.⁵

And so the lad who gets the alphas works
the hardest in his class at his translation 15 and finds good Ciceronian for Burke's:
*a dreadful schism in the British nation.*⁶

1 9 7 8

Them & [uz]

*for Professors Richard Hoggart & Leon Cortez*⁷

I

ai ai, ay, ay! ... stutterer Demosthenes⁸
gob^o full of pebbles outshouting seas—mouth

9. Harrison won a scholarship to Leeds Grammar often based on the Greek alphabet. Thus alpha School, a highly academic school for pupils aged would be A, beta B, and gamma double minus eleven to eighteen, otherwise for fee-paying stu-
C - - , or fail.
dents.

6. Edmund Burke (1729-1797), an Irishman,

1. A quotation from Robert Recorde's preface to became one of Britain's foremost political thinkers.
his Ground of Arts (1543), a textbook that His writings advocated a sound constitutional expresses the ethos of Leeds Grammar School in statesmanship in a time of misgovernment and cor-preferring the (now defunct) language of "Tully," ruption. Though he was against the concept of the Roman statesman, orator, and writer Marcus inalienable human rights, he supported the notion of Tullius Cicero (106-43 B.C.E.), to contemporary of the “social contract.” He warned that the English.

“dreadful schism” in British society could lead to 2. Printed reports of debates in the British Houses of Parliament, revolution and regicide as in France, and he called for the suppression of free opinions.

for the suppression of free opinions.

3. Senatus Populusque Romanus: the senate and people of Rome (Latin).
7. Richard Hoggart (b. 1918) is an academic and, like Tony Harrison, from a working-class, north-

4. A third-century Roman emperor. As Harrison’s of-England background. “Professor” Leon Cortez first name, Tony, has been wrongly taken to be a (1898—1970) was a music-hall comedian, whose act included recitations of Shakespeare’s Macbeth this could be a humorous reference to an imaginary self in ancient Rome.

8. Athenian orator (385?-322 B.C.E.)

5. Marking in British schools and universities is

1 8 7 4 / T O N Y H A R R I S O N

4 words only of *mi ‘art aches*9 and ... “Mine’s broken, you barbarian, T.W.!”¹ He was nicely spoken.

5 “Can’t have our glorious heritage done to death!”

I played the Drunken Porter in Macbeth.
“Poetry’s the speech of kings. You’re one of those Shakespeare gives the comic bits to: prose!
All poetry (even Cockney Keats?) you see io ‘s been dubbed by [vs]² into RP, Received Pronunciation, please believe [vs]
your speech is in the hands of the Receivers.”
“We say [vs] not [uz], T.W.!” That shut my trap.
I doffed my flat a’s (as in “flat cap”)
15 my mouth all stuffed with glottals,³ great lumps to hawk up and spit out ... E-nun-ci-ate!

II

So right, yer buggers, then! We’ll occupy your lousy leasehold Poetry.
I chewed up Littererchewer and spat the bones
20 into the lap of dozing Daniel Jones,⁴ dropped the initials I’d been harried as and used my name and own voice: [uz] [uz] [uz], ended sentences with by, with, from,
and spoke the language that I spoke at home.
25 RIP RP, RIP T.W.

I’m Tony Harrison no longer you!
You can tell the Receivers where to go
(and not aspirate it) once you know
Wordsworth’s matter / water are full rhymes,
30 [uz] can be loving as well as funny.
My first mention in the *Times*⁵ automatically made Tony Anthony!

1978

9. Cf. John Keats, "Ode to a Nightingale," line 1

3. Sounds made by opening and closing the lar-
(p. 935). To the despair of his teacher, the young
ynx. The Leeds dialect uses glottal stops, the sound Harrison, speaking the Leeds dialect, says "mi 'art" made when the word butter is pronounced as two instead of "my heart."

syllables without an intervening t.

1. Harrison's first names are Tony William. His

4. English phonetician (1881-1967), whose Out- first work was published under the name T. W.

line of English Phonetics (1918) is considered the Harrison.

first comprehensive description of Received Pro-

2. Phonetic transcription representing the nunciation.

Received Pronunciation form of us. The northern

5. A London "quality" newspaper.

dialect form is uz.

A K U M Q U A T F O R J O H N K E A T S / 1 8 7 5

A Kumquat for John Keats

Today I found the right fruit for my prime,
not orange, not tangelo, and not lime, nor moon-like globes of grapefruit that now hang outside our bedroom, nor tart lemon's tang 5 (though last year full of bile and self-defeat
I wanted to believe no life was sweet)

nor the tangible sunshine of the tangerine, and no incongruous citrus ever seen at greengrocers' in Newcastle or Leeds 10 mis-spelt by the spuds⁰ and mud-caked swedes,⁰ potatoes I
Swedish turnips a fruit an older poet might substitute for the grape John Keats thought fit to be Joy's fruit, when, two years before he died, he tried to write how Melancholy dwelled inside Delight,⁶ 15 and if he'd known the citrus that I mean
that's not orange, lemon, lime or tangerine,
I'm pretty sure that Keats, though he had heard
"of candied apple, quince and plum and gourd"⁷
instead of "grape against the palate fine"⁸ 20 would have, if he'd known it, plumped for mine, this Eastern citrus scarcely cherry size he'd bite just once and then apostrophize and pen one stanza how the fruit had all the qualities of fruit before the Fall,⁹ 25 but in the next few lines be forced to write how Eve's apple tasted at the second bite, and if John Keats had only lived to be,
because of extra years, in need like me, at 42 he'd help me celebrate 30 that Micanopy¹ kumquat that I ate whole, straight off the tree, sweet pulp and sour skin—
or was it sweet outside, and sour within?
For however many kumquats that I eat
I'm not sure if it's flesh or rind that's sweet,

35 and being a man of doubt at life's mid-way

I'd offer Keats some kumquats and I'd say:

You'll find that one part's sweet and one part's tart:

say where the sweetness or the sourness start.

I find I can't, as if one couldn't say

40 exactly where the night became the day,

which makes for me the kumquat taken whole

best fruit, and metaphor, to fit the soul of one in Florida at 42 with Keats

crunching kumquats, thinking, as he eats

6. Cf. John Keats, "Ode on Melancholy," lines 25—

8. Cf. Keats, "Ode on Melancholy," line 28

26 (p. 938).

(p. 938).

7. Cf. Keats, "The Eve of St. Agnes," line 265

9. Cf. Genesis 2—3.

(p. 913).

1. Place in southern Florida.

1 8 7 6 / T O N Y H A R R I S O N

45 the flesh, the juice, the pith, the pips,⁰ the peel, seeds that this is how a full life ought to feel,

its perishable relish prick the tongue,

when the man who savours life 's no longer young,

the fruits that were his futures far behind.

50 T h e n it's the k u m q u a t fruit expresses best

how days have darkness round them like a rind,

life has a skin of death that keeps its zest.

History, a life, the heart, the brain

flow to the taste buds and flow back again.
55 That decade or more past Keats's span makes me an older not a wiser man, who knows that it's too late for dying young,
but since youth leaves some sweetnesses unsung,
he's granted days and kumquats to express 60 Man's Being ripened by his Nothingness.
And it isn't just the gap of sixteen years,
a bigger crop of terrors, hopes and fears,
but a century of history on this earth between J o h n Keats's death and my own birth—65 years like an open crater, gory, grim, with bloody bubbles leering at the rim;²
a thing no bigger than an urn explodes and ravishes all silence, and all odes, Flora⁰ asphyxiated by foul air Roman goddess of flowers 70 u n k n o w n to either Keats or Lempriere,³ dehydrated Naiads, Dryad amputees⁴
dragging themselves through slagscapes with no trees, a shirt of Nessus fire that gnaws and eats⁵
children half the age of dying Keats ...
75 Now were you twenty five or six years old when that fevered brow at last grew cold?
I've got no books to hand to check the dates.
My grudging but glad spirit celebrates that all I've got to h a n d ' s the kumquats, John,
so the fruit I'd love to have your verdict on,
but dead m e n don't eat kumquats, or drink wine,

they shiver in the arms of Proserpine,⁶ not warm in bed beside their Fanny Brawne,⁷ nor watch her pick ripe grapefruit in the dawn 85 as I did, waking, when I saw her twist, with one deft movement of a sunburnt wrist,
the moon, that feebly lit our last night's walk past alligator swampland, off its stalk.

I thought of moon-juice juleps⁸ when I saw,
2. Cf. Keats, "Ode to a Nightingale," line 17 water nymphs.

(p. 935).

5. A magical shirt, named for the centaur Nessus

3. John Lempriere (ca. 1765—1824), English clasin Greek mythology, that once donned cannot be sical scholar and author of The Classical Dic- removed and that consumes the wearer in flames. ionary—for many years a standard work.

6. In Greek mythology, queen of the underworld.

4. Landscapes dominated by heaps of rubble,

7. A young woman loved by Keats.

refuse from mines. Dryad: wood nymph. Naiads:

8. Drinks made from spirits, sugar, ice, and mint.

THE HEARTLESS ART / 1877

90 as if I'd never seen the moon before,
the planet glow among the fruit, and its pale light make each citrus on the tree its satellite.

Each evening when I reach to draw the blind

stars seem the light zest squeezed through night's black rind;

95 the night's peeled fruit the sun, juiced of its rays,
first stains, then streaks, then floods the world with days,
days, when the very sunlight made me weep,
days, spent like the nights in deep, drugged sleep,
days in Newcastle by my daughter's bed, 100 wondering if she, or I, weren't better dead,
days in Leeds, grey days, my first dark suit,
my mother's wreaths stacked next to Christmas fruit,
and days, like this in Micanopy. Days!

As strong sun burns away the dawn's grey haze
105 I pick a kumquat and the branches spray cold dew in my face to start the day.

The dawn's molasses make the citrus gleam
still in the orchards of the groves of dream.
The limes, like Galway after weeks of rain,
no glow with a greenness that is close to pain,
the dew-cooled surfaces of fruit that spent all last night flaming in the firmament.

The new day dawns. O days! My spirit greets
the kumquat with the spirit of John Keats.

115 O kumquat, comfort for not dying young,
both sweet and bitter, bless the poet's tongue!
I burst the whole fruit chilled by morning dew against my palate. Fine, for 42!

I search for buzzards as the air grows clear 120 and see them ride fresh thermals overhead.
Their bleak cries were the first sound I could hear
when I stepped at the start of sunrise out of doors,

and a noise like last night's bedsprings on our bed
from Mr Fowler sharpening farmers' saws.

1 9 8 1

The Heartless Art

in memoriam S.T., died 4 April 1985

Death is in your house, but I'm out here
sackclothing kumquats against the forecast freeze, filling the hole you took two days to clear of briars, beercans, and bleached, barkless trees,
5 with hackberry leaves, pine needles, stuff like that.

1 8 7 8 / T O N Y H A R R I S O N

Next spring, when you're no longer here
we'll have the land grassed over and quite flat.
When the Southern sun starts setting it sets fast.
I've time to tip one more load if I run.

10 Because I know this light could be your last
I drain the day of every drop of sun.

The barrow wheel spins round with a clock's tick.

I hear, three fields away, a hunter's gun,
you, in the silence after, being sick.

15 I watched you, very weak, negotiate
the childproof pill jar, panting to draw breath, and when you managed it you poured your hate more on the poured-out contents than on death,
and, like Baptists uttering Beelzebub⁰ the Devil 20 syllable by syllable, spat Meth-
a-done,⁹ and there's also the poetic rub!

I've often heard my fellow poets (or those who write in metres something like my own with rhyme and rhythm, not in chopped-up prose 25 and brood on man's mortality) bemoan the insufficiency of rhymes for death—

hence my syllabifying Methadone
instead of just saying that you fought for breath.
Maybe the main but not the only cause;
30 a piece of engineering I'll explain.
Each syllable was followed by a pause
for breathlessness, and scorn of drugs for pain.
Another reason, though, was to delay
the use of one more rhyme stored in my brain
35 that, alas, I'll have a use for any day.
I'd stored away this rhyme when we first met.
Knowing you crawled on hands and knees to prime our water pump, I'll expiate one debt
by finally revealing that stored rhyme 40 that has the same relentlessness as death and comes to every one of us in time and comes to you this April full moon, SETH!
In return for all those oily working parts
you took the time and trouble to explain, 45 the pump that coughs, the saw that never starts,
I'll show you to distract you from the pain
you feel, except when napping, all the time because you won't take drugs that dull the brain,
a bit about my metre, line and rhyme.
9. Drug used as substitute for morphine or heroin.

READING THE BIBLE BACKWARDS / 1879

50 In Arthur Symons' St Teresa Nazareth is stressed on the last against its spoken flow to engineer the contrast Jesus/Death.

Do I endorse that contrast? I don't, no!
To have a life on Earth and then want Heaven
55 seems like that all-night bar sign down below that says that Happy Hour's from 4 to 7.

Package lounges² are like ambulances:
the Bourbon-bibber⁰ stares at us and glowers -drinker
at what he thinks are pained or pitying glances.

60 We don't see his face but he sees ours.
The non-dying don't see you but you see them passing by to other rooms with flowers
as you fill the shining kidney with red phlegm.

I've left some spaces ()³

65 benumbed by morphia⁰ and Methadone painkilling drug until the ()⁴ of April, ()^s

W h e n I began these lines could I have known that the nurse's registration of the time you let your spirit go with one last groan 70 would help complete the first and third line rhyme?

Those bits I added later. Them apart

I wrote this in memoriam for Seth, meant to show him something of my art,
almost a whole week before his death.

75 The last thing the dying want to read,
I thought, 's a poem, and didn't show it,

and you, not dying yet, why should you need to know the final failure of the poet?

1985

E L E A N O R W I L N E R

b. 1937

Reading the Bible Backwards¹

All around the altar, huge lianas

curled, unfurled the dark green of their leaves to complement the red

1. The poetry of the Spanish nun and mystic St.

5. “10.05” [Harrison’s note].

Teresa of Avila (1515-1582), translated by the

1. Or from the Apocalypse in Revelation, the final

English poet and critic Arthur Symons (1865—book of the Christian Scriptures, to the Creation 1945).

in Genesis, the first book of the Hebrew Scrip-

2. Bars (Floridian colloquialism).

tures. Wilner fuses details from both Christian and

3. “how you stayed alive” [Harrison’s note].

Hebrew Scriptures throughout the poem.

4. “4th” [Harrison’s note].

1 8 8 0 / E L E A N O R W I L N E R

o f b l o o d s p i l l e d t h e r e — a k i n d o f C h r i s t m a s d e c o r a t i o n , o v e r h u n g w i t h h e a v y v i n e s a n d o v e r t h e m , t h e s t a r s .

W h e n t h e a n g e l s c a m e , m e s s e n g e r s l i k e b i r d s b u t w i t h t h e o i l e d f l e s h o f m e n , t h e y h u n g o v e r t h e s c e n e w i t h s m o l d e r i n g s w o r d s , 2

splashing the world when they beat their rain-soaked wings against the turning sky.

The child was bright in his basket
as a lemon, with a bitter smell from his wet waddling clothes. His mother bent above him, singing a lullaby in the liquid tongue invented for the very young—short syllables liked dripping from a eave mixed with the first big drop of rain that fell, like tiny silver pearls, from the glistening fronds of palm. The three who gathered there—old kings uncrowned:
the cockroach, condor and the leopard, lord of the cracks below the ground, the mountain pass and the grass-grown plain, were not adorned, did not bear gifts, had not come to adore; they were simply drawn to gawk at this recurrent, awkward son whom the wind had said would spell
the end of fear that had been.

Somewhere north of this familiar scene the polar caps were melting, the water was advancing in its slow, relentless lines, swallowing the old 35 landmarks, swelling the sea that pulled down the flowers and the great steel cities
down.

The dolphins sport in the rising sea,
anemones wave their many arms like hair

on a drowned gorgon's head, her features 40 softened by these beyond all recogniti on.

On the desert's edge where the oasis dies in a wash of sand, the sphinx⁵ seems to shift to her haunches of stone, and the rain, as it r uns down, completes the ruin of her face. T he Nile

45 merges with the sea, the waters rise and drown the noise of earth. At the forest's

s 2. Suggests the flaming sword of the cherubim

4. The water imagery suggests both the flood from stationed east of the Garden of Eden (Genesis which Noah escaped in the ark (Genesis 7) and 3.24).

the end of the Ice Age. In Greek mythology, the

3. Moses' mother hid him in a covered wicker bas-

Gorgons were three sisters who had snakes for ket, which she set in reeds by the Nile, to protect hair.

him from Pharaoh's command to cast all sons into

5. Wilner's sphinx evokes not the Egyptian but the
the river (Exodus 2.2—3). The lines following Greek model, a winged creature with a woman's return to Christ's nativity and the gifts brought to head and lion's body.

him by the wise men (Matthew 2.1 — 12).

HIGHNOONATLOSALAMOS / 1881

edge, where the child sleeps, the waters ga ther —

as if a hand were reaching for the curtain to drop across the glowing, lit tableau.

50 When the waves closed over, completing the green sweep of ocean, there was no time for mourning.

No final trump, no thunder to announce the silent steal of waters; how soundlessly
it all went under: the little family

55 and the scene so easily mistaken for an adoration. Above, more clouds pour ed in and closed their ranks across the skies;

the angels, who had seemed so solid, turned quick silver in the rain.

60 Now, nothing but the wind moves on the rain-pocked face of the swollen waters, though far below

where giants squid lie hidden in shy tangles,
the whales, heavy-bodied as the angels,

65 their fins like vestiges of wings,

sings some mighty epic of their own —

a great day when the ships would all withdraw,
the harpoons fail of their aim, the land

dissolve into the waters, and they would swim 70 among the peaks of mountains, like eagles of the deep, while far below them, the old nightmares of fear would settle into silt among the broken cities, the empty basket of the child would float

75 abandoned in the seaweed until the work of water unraveled it in filaments of straw,
w,

till even that straw rotted

in the planetary thaw the whales prayed for, sending their jets of waters skyward
so in the clear conviction they 'd spill back to ocean with their will accomplished

in the miracle of rain: And the earth

was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And 85 the Spirit moved upon the face of the waters.7

1989

High Noon at Los Alamos⁸

T o t u r n a s t o n e

w i t h i t s w h i t e s q u i r m i n g

u n d e r n e a t h , t o p r y t h e d i s c

6. The final trumpet; image of the Last Judgment. Manhattan Project to develop an atomic bomb 7. As in Genesis 1.2. (1942-45).

8. Los Alamos, New Mexico; a major site of the

1882 / E L E A N O R W I L N E R

from the sun's eclipse—white heat

5 coiling in the blinded eye: to these malign necessities we come from the dim time of dinosaurs

who crawled like breathing lava

from the earth's cracked crust, and swung

io their tiny heads above the lumbering tons of flesh, brains no bigger than a fist

clenched to resist the white flash

in the sky the day the sun-flares

pared t h e m d o w n t o r e l i c s f o r m u s e u m s , is turned glaciers back, seared Sinai's meadows⁹ black—the ferns withered, the swamps were melted down to molten mud, the cells uncoupled, recombined, and madly multiplied, huge trees toppled to the ground, 20 the slow life there abandoned hope,

a caterpillar stiffened in the grass.

Two apes, caught in the act of coupling,
made a m u t a n t child who woke to sunlight wondering, his mother 25 torn by the huge new head that forced the narrow birth canal.¹

As if compelled to repetition and to unearth again
white fire at the heart of matter—fire
BO we sought and fire we spoke,
our thoughts, however elegant, were fire from first to last—like sentries set to watch at Argos for the signal fire passed peak to peak from Troy 35 to Nagasaki,² triumphant echo of the burning city walls and prologue to the murders yet to come—we scan the sky
for that bright flash,
our eyes stared white from watching 40 for the signal fire that ends
the epic—a cursed line
with its caesura, a pause

to signal peace, or a rehearsal for the silence.

1 9 8 9

9. In the Sinai Peninsula, a triangular region linking Africa with Asia.

B.C.E.). The play opens with a watchman in Argos—

1. The effects of extreme radiation can include a city on the lower peninsula of Greece, and the gene mutation.

home of Agamemnon—looking for “the light, the

2. Japanese city, site of the second atomic bomb signal-fire / breaking out of Troy” (i.e., signalling explosion in 1945. Lines 32—34 refer to the beginning of Agamemnon, the first play in the Oresteia).

1 8 8 3

1 8 8 3

DOMMORAES

b. 1938

Kanheri Caves

Over these blunted, these tormented hills,
Hawks hail and wheel, glissading⁰ down the sky: gliding

It seems this green ambiguous landscape tilts

And teeters the perspective of the eye.

5 Only two centuries after Christ, this cliff

Was colonized by a mild antique race,

Who left us, like a faded photograph,

Their memories that dry up in this place.
They left no ghosts. The rock alone endures, io Their drains and cisterns work: storms wrecked the stairs:
Blocks are fallen: sunlight cracks those floors
And fidgets in a courtyard where a pair
Of giant Buddhas smile and wait their crash;
Then temples, audience-halls, a lonely tomb.
15 I touch its side. The stone's worn smooth as flesh.
A stranger dangles peaceful in that womb.
Worm he will be, if born: blink in the sun.
I'll crawl into his dark: perhaps he'll climb
Beyond the trippers to the final stone
20 Flat of the hillock, there to grow in Time.
Dry pubic ferns prick the bitter sand.
Hawks in a hot concentric ecstasy
Of flight and shriek will wake his vision. And,
When the clouds lift, he'll glimpse the miles-off sea.

1957

Snow on a Mountain

That dream, her eyes like rocks studded the high
Mountain of her body that I was to climb.
One moment past my hands had swum
The chanting streams of her thighs:
5 Then I was lost, breathless among the pines.
Alone, alone with the nervous noise of water,
Climbing, I hoped to emerge on a path, but I knew
When the spurred trees were past
I should go on no farther

io But fall there, dazzled by the miles of snow.

My dream was broken by the knock of day.

Yet, within my mind, these pictures linger:

1 8 8 4 / D O M M O R A E S

I touch her with my clumsy words of love

And sense snow in her eye,

15 Mists, and the winds that warn, Stranger, O stranger!

1 9 5 7

From Two from Israel

Rendezvous

(F O R N A T H A N A L T E R M A N N) 1

Altermann, sipping wine, reads with a look

Of infinite patience and slight suffering.

W h e n I approach him, he puts down his book,

Waves to the chair beside him like a king,

5 Then claps his hands, and an awed waiter fetches

Bread, kosher sausage, cake, a chicken's wing,

More wine, some English cigarettes, and matches.

“Eat, eat,” Altermann says, “this is good food.”

Through the awning over us the sunlight catches

io His aquiline⁰ sad head, till it seems hewed eaglelike

From tombstone marble. I accept some bread.

I've lunched already, but would not seem rude.

W h e n I refuse more, he feeds me instead,

Heaping my plate, clapping for wine, his eyes

15 —Expressionless inside the marble head—

Appearing not to notice how the flies

Form a black, sticky icing on the cake.

Thinking of my health now, I visualise
The Aryan snow floating, flake upon flake,
20 Over the ghetto wall where only fleas
Fed well, and they and hunger kept awake
Under sharp stars, those waiting for release.
Birds had their nests, but Jews nowhere to hide
W h e n visited by vans and black police.
25 The shekinah⁰ rose where a people died, divine presence
A pillar of flame by night, of smoke by day.
From Europe then the starved and terrified
Flew. Now their mourner sits in this cafe, Telling me how to scan a Hebrew line.
BO Though my attention has moved far away

1. Israeli poet (1910-1970).

N O O N D A Y A X E M A N / 1 8 8 5

His features stay marble and aquiline.
But the eternal gesture of his race
Flowing through the h a n d s that offer bread and wine
Reveals the deep love sealed in the still face.

1 9 6 5

L E S M U R R A Y

b. 1938

Noonday Axeman

Axe-fall, echo and silence. Noonday silence.
Two miles from here, it is the twentieth century:
cars on the bitumen,¹ powerlines vaulting the farms.
Here, with my axe, I am chopping into the stillness.
5 Axe-fall, echo and silence. I pause, roll tobacco, twist a cigarette, lick it. All is still.

I lean on my axe. A cloud of fragrant leaves hangs over me moveless, pierced everywhere by sky.
Here, I remember all of a h u n d r e d years:
io candleflame, still night, frost and cattle bells,
the draywheels² silence final in our ears,
and the first red cattle spreading through the hills and my great-great-grandfather here with his first sons, who would grow old, still speaking with his Scots accent, 15 having never seen those highlands that they sang of.
A hundred years. I stand and smoke in the silence.
A h u n d r e d years of clearing, splitting, sawing,
a hundred years of timbermen, ringbarkers, fencers and women in kitchens, stoking loud iron stoves 20 year in, year out, and singing old songs to their children have made this silence h u m a n and familiar no farther than where the farms rise into foothills, and, in that time, how many have sought their graves
or fled to the cities, maddened by this stillness?
25 Things are so wordless. These two opposing scarves⁰ incisions

I have cut in my red-gum squeeze out jewels of sap

1. Name given to various inflammable mineral 2. Wheels of a long, heavy cart, substances, here probably asphalt.

1 8 8 6 / L E S M U R R A Y

and stare. And soon, with a few more axe-strokes, the tree will grow troubled, tremble, shift its crown and, leaning slowly, gather speed and colossally
BO crash down and lie between the standing trunks.

And then, I know, of the knowledge that led my forebears to drink and black rage and wordlessness, there will be silence.
After the tree falls, there will reign the same silence
as stuns and spurs us, enraptures and defeats us, 35 as seems to some a challenge, and seems to others to be waiting here for something beyond imagining.
Axe-fall, echo and silence. U n h u m a n silence.
A stone cracks in the heat. Through the still twigs, radiance stings at my eyes. I rub a damp brow with a handkerchief 40 and chop on into the stillness. Axe-fall and echo.
T h e great mast m u r m u r s now. The scarves in its trunk crackle and squeak now, crack and increase as the hushing weight of high branches heels outward, and commences tearing and falling, and the collapse is tremendous.
45 Twigs fly, leaves puff and subside. T h e severed trunk slips off its stump and drops along its shadow.
And then there is no more. T h e stillness is there as ever. And I fall to lopping branches.
Axe-fall, echo and silence. It will be centuries 50 before many m e n are truly at h o m e in this country, and yet, there have always been some, in each generation, there have always been some who could live in the presence of silence.
And some, I have known them, m e n with gentle broad hands,
who would die if removed from these unpeopled places, 55 some again I have seen, bemused and shy in the cities, you have built against silence, dumbly trudging through noise past the railway stations, looking up through the traffic

at the smoky halls, dreaming of journeys, of stepping down from the train at some upland stop to recover 60 the crush of dry grass underfoot, the silence of trees.

Axe-fall, echo and silence. Dreaming silence.

Though I myself run to the cities, I will forever be coming back here to walk, knee-deep in ferns,
up and away from this metropolitan century,

65 to remember my ancestors, axemen, dairymen, horse-
breakers,

now confined in silence, down with their beards and dreams,
who, unwilling or rapt, despairing or very patient,

made what amounts to a human breach in the silence,

ONCE IN A LIFETIME, SNOW / 1887

made of their lives the rough foundation of legends —

70 men must have legends, else they will die of strangeness —

then died in their turn, each, after his own fashion, resigned or agonized, from silence into great silence.

Axe-fall, echo and axe-fall. Noonday silence.

Though I go to the cities, turning my back on these hills, 75 for the talk and dazzle of cities, for the sake of belonging for months and years at a time to the twentieth century, the city will never quite hold me. I will be always coming back here on the up-train, peering, leaning out of the window to see, on far-off ridges, so the sky between the trees, and over the racket of the rails to hear the echo and the silence.

I shoulder my axe and set off home through the stillness.

1965

Once in a Lifetime, Snow

For Chris and Mary Sarah

Winters at home brought wind, black frost and raw
grey rain in barbed-wire fields, but never more

5 until the day my uncle rose at dawn
and stepped outside — to find his paddock gone,
his cattle to their hocks
in ghostly ground
and unaccustomed light
for miles around.

And he stopped short, and gazed lit from below, 15 and half his wrinkles vanished
murmuring Snow.

A man of farm and fact he started to see the facts of weather raised 20 to a mystery
white on the world he knew and all he owned.

1888 / LESMURRAY

Snow? Here? he mused. I see.
High time I learned.
25 Here, guessing what he meant had much to do with that black earth dread old men are given to,
he stooped to break the sheer 30 crust with delight at finding the cold unknown
so deeply bright,
at feeling it take his prints
so softly deep,
35 as if it thought he knew enough to sleep,
or else so little he might seek to shift
its weight of wintry light 40 by a single drift, perceiving this much, he scuffed
his slippered feet
and scooped a handful up to taste, and eat
45 in memory of the fact that even he might not have seen the end of reality ...
Then, turning, he tiptoed in 50 to a bedroom, smiled,

and wakened a murmuring child and another child.

1969

The Quality of Sprawl

Sprawl is the quality of the man who cut down his Rolls-Royce into a farm utility truck, and sprawl is what the company lacked when it made repeated efforts
5 to buy the vehicle back and repair its image.

Sprawl is doing your farming by aeroplane, roughly,
or driving a hitchhiker that extra hundred miles home.

THE QUALITY OF SPRAWL / 1889

It is the rococo of being your own still centre.

It is never lighting cigars with ten-dollar notes: 10 that 's idiot ostentation and murder of starving people.

Nor can it be bought with the ash of million-
-dollar deeds.

Sprawl lengthen the legs; it trains greyh-oundson liver and beer.

Sprawl almost never says Why not? with palms comically raised nor can it be dressed for, not even in running shoes worn 15 with mink and a no sering. That is Society. That
's Style.

Sprawl is more like the thirteenth banana
in a dozen or anyway the fourteenth.

Sprawl is Hank Stamper in Never Give an Inch bisecting an obstructive official's desk with a chainsaw.

20 Notharmingtheofficial. Sprawlisnever rbrutalthroughit'softenintransigent. Spr awlisneverSimondeMontfort5

atatown-storming: Killthemall! Godwill knowhisown.

Knowingtheman'snamethiswassaidtom ightbesprawl.

Sprawloccursinart. Thefifteenthtotwen ty-first25linesinasonnet, forexample. A ndincertainpaintings; IhaveSprawleno ughtohaveforgottenwhichpaintings.

Turner's glorious *Burning of the Houses of Parliament*6

comestomind, adoublingbanneredtrium phofsprawl—

except, hedidn'tfirethem.

30 Sprawlgetsupthenoseofmanykindsof people(everykindthatcomesinkinds)wh osefuturesdon'tincludeit.

Somedecryitascriminalpresumption, sil ken-robedPopeAlexander7

dividingthenewworldbetweenSpainand Portugal.

Ifhesmiled in pettos afterwards, perhaps ethingdidhaveSprawl.

35 Sprawlisreallyclassless, though. It'sJ ohnChristopherFrederickMurray

asleepinhisneighbours'bestbedinspurs andoilskinsbutnothavingthrownup:

sprawlisneverCalumwho, drunk, along thehallwaysofourhouse, reinventedtheF estoon.9 Rather

40 it'sBeatriceMilesgoingtwelvehundred
dittoinataxi, 1

3. Style of architecture, decoration, and furniture
7. Eight popes took the name Alexander. Possibly prevalent in Louis XV's France. Characteristically Alexander VI, Rodrigo Borgia (1431-1503), father asymmetrical, overornamented, and florid.

of Caesar, Lucretia, and other children. He
4. U.K. title of Paul Newman's movie Sometimes secured the papal throne through blatant bribery.

a Great Notion (1971), an adaptation of the Ken
8. To himself (Italian).

Kesey novel about Oregon logger Hank Stamper

9. Chain of flowers, leaves, etc., hung in a curve and his family.

between two points.

5. Thirteenth-century earl of Leicester; leader of

1. The Australian bohemian Beatrice Miles

the barons in disaffection against Henry III, and (1902—1973) was famous for, among other things, so an archetypal "overmighty subject."

riding in taxis and taking public transport but

6. Famous landscape by the English artist Joseph refusing to pay the fares, for making a nineteen-

Mallord William Turner (1775-1851), whose day taxi journey from Sydney to Perth and paying painting, in watercolor and, later, oil, foreshad-

the fare, and for reciting Shakespeare (line 42)

owed Impressionism.

from memory. Ditto: i.e., miles.

1890 / LESMURRAY

No Lewd Advances, No Hitting Animals, No Speeding, on the proceeds of her two-bob-a-sonnet Shakespeare readings.

An image of my country. And would that it were more so.

No, sprawl is full-gloss murals on a council-house wall. town hall 45 Sprawl leans on things. It is loose-limbed in its mind.

Reprimanded and dismissed

it listens with a grin and one boot up on the rail of possibility. It may have to leave the Earth.

Being roughly Christian, it scratches the other cheek 50 and thinks it unlikely. Though people have been shot for sprawl.

1983

Morse

Tuckett. Bill Tuckett. Telegraph operator, Hall's Creek, which is way out back of the Outback, but he stuck it, quite likely liked it, despite heat, glare, dust and the lack of diversion or doctors. Come disaster you trusted to luck,

Singenuity and pluck. This was back when nice people said pluck, the sleeve-link and green eyes had epoch. 2

Faced, though, like Bill Tuckett

with a man needing surgery right on the spot, a lot would have done their dashes. It looked hopeless (dot dot dot) io Lift him up on the table, said Tuckett, running the key hot till H e a d O f f i c e turned up a doctor w h o coolly instructed

up a t h o u s a n d m i l e s of wire, as T u c k e t t advanced slit by slit w i t h a safety razor blade, p i o n e e r i n g on into the wet,

copper-wiring the rivers off, in the first operation c o n d u c t e d

15 along dotted lines, with r u m drinkers gripping the patient:

d - d - d a s h it, take care, Tuck!

A n d the vital spark stayed unshorted.

Yallah!³ breathed the c a m e l m e n . Tuckett, y o u did it, y o u did it!

cried the spattered la-de-dah jodhpur⁴-wearing Inspector of Stock.

20 We imagine, s o m e w e e k s later, a properly laconic
c o n v a l e s c e n t averring W i t h o u t you, I'd have kicked the b u c k e t ...

F r o m C h u n g k i n g to Burrenjuck,⁵ m o r s e keys have mostly g o n e silent and only old m e n m e e t n o w to c h i t - c h a t in their electric b y g o n e dialect. T h e last letter m a n y will forget

25 is dit-dit-dit-dah, V for Victory. T h e coders' h e r o had speed,

resource and a t o u c h . So ditditdit daah for Bill Tuckett.

1 9 8 3

2. I.e., the nineteenth century. Sleevelink: cuff knee to ankle.

link.

5. I.e., from southwest China to southeast Austra-

3. God be praised! (Arabic).

lia.

4. Long breeches for riding, close-fitting from

CHARLESSIMIC

b. 1938

Watch Repair

A small wheel

Incandescent,

Shivering like

A pinned butterfly.

Handsthrownup

Inalldirections:

Thecrossroads

Onearrivesat

Inanightmare.

Highertthanthat

Number12presides

Likeabeekeeper

Overtheswarminghoneycomb

Oftheopenwatch.

Otherwheels

Thatcouldfit

Insidearaindrop.

Tools

Thatmustbesplinters

Ofarcticstarlight.

Tinygoldenmills

Grindinginvisible

Coffeebeans.

Whenthecoffee'sboiling

C a u t i o u s l y ,
S o i t d o e s n ' t b u r n u s ,
W e r a i s e i t
T o t h e l i p s
O f t h e n e a r e s t
E a r .

1 8 9 2 / C H A R L E S W R I G H T

Prodigy1

I g r e w u p b e n t o v e r
a c h e s s b o a r d .

I l o v e d t h e w o r d endgame.

A l l m y c o u s i n s l o o k e d w o r r i e d .

5 I t w a s a s m a l l h o u s e n e a r a R o m a n g r a v e y a r d .

P l a n e s a n d t a n k s
s h o o k i t s w i n d o w p a n e s .

A r e t i r e d p r o f e s s o r o f a s t r o n o m y
10 t a u g h t m e h o w t o p l a y .

T h a t m u s t h a v e b e e n i n 1 9 4 4 .

I n t h e s e t w e w e r e u s i n g , t h e p a i n t h a d a l m o s t c h i p p e d o f f t h e b l a c k p i e c e s .

15 T h e w h i t e K i n g w a s m i s s i n g a n d h a d t o b e s u b s t i t u t e d f o r .

I ' m t o l d b u t d o n o t b e l i e v e t h a t t h a t s u m m e r I w i t n e s s e d
m e n h u n g f r o m t e l e p h o n e p o l e s .

20 I r e m e m b e r m y m o t h e r

bl i n d f o l d i n g m e a l o t .
S h e h a d a w a y o f t u c k i n g m y h e a d
s u d d e n l y u n d e r h e r o v e r c o a t .
I n c h e s s , t o o , t h e p r o f e s s o r t o l d m e , 25 t h e m a s t e r s p l a y b l i n d f o l d e d , t h e g r e a t o n e s o n s e v e r a l b o a r d s a t t h e s a m e t i m e .

1 9 8 0

A Book Full of Pictures

F a t h e r s t u d i e d t h e o l o g y t h r o u g h t h e m a i l

A n d t h i s w a s e x a m t i m e .

M o t h e r k n i t t e d . I s a t q u i e t l y w i t h a b o o k

F u l l o f p i c t u r e s . N i g h t f e l l .

1. This poem and “Cameo Appearance” (p. 1893) allude to the Nazi bombing of Belgrade, where Simic was born, in World War II.

C A M E O A P P E A R A N C E / 1 8 9 3

5 My hands grew cold touching the faces

Of dead kings and queens.

There was a black raincoat

in the upstairs bedroom

Swaying f r o m the ceiling,

10 But what was it doing there?

Mother’s long needles made quick crosses.

They were black

Like the inside of my head just then.

The pages I turned sounded like wings.

15 “The soul is a bird,” he once said.

In my book full of pictures

A battle raged: lances and swords
M a d e a kind of wintry forest
W i t h my heart spiked and bleeding in its branches.

1 9 9 2

Cameo Appearance

I had a small, nonspeaking part
In a bloody epic. I was one of the Bombed and fleeing humanity.
In the distance our great leader
5 Crowded like a rooster from a balcony,
Or was it a great actor
Impersonating our great leader?
That's me there, I said to the kiddies.
I'm squeezed between the m a n
io With two bandaged hands raised
And the old woman with her m o u t h open
As if she were showing us a tooth
That hurts badly. The hundred times
I rewound the tape, not once
15 Could they catch sight of me
In that huge gray crowd,
That was like any other gray crowd.
Trot off to bed, I said finally.
I know I was there. O n e take 20 Is all they had time for.
We ran, and the planes grazed our hair,
And then they were no more
As we stood dazed in the burning city,

But, of course, they didn't film that.

1 9 9 7

1 8 9 4

M A R G A R E T A T W O O D

b. 1939

This Is a Photograph of Me

It was taken some time ago.

At first it seems to be a smeared

print: blurred lines and gray flecks

5 blended with the paper;

then, as you scan

it, you see in the left-hand corner

a thing that is like a branch: part of a tree

(balsam or spruce) emerging

10 and, to the right, halfway up

what ought to be a gentle slope, a small frame house.

In the background there is a lake,

and beyond that, some low hills.

15 (The photograph was taken the day after I drowned.

I am in the lake, in the center of the picture, just under the surface.

It is difficult to say where

20 precisely, or to say how large or small I am:

the effect of water

on light is a distortion
but if you look long enough, 25 eventually you will be able to see me.)

1 9 6 6

At the Tourist Center in Boston
There is my country under glass,
a white relief-
map with red dots for the cities, reduced to the size of a wall

A T T H E T O U R I S T C E N T E R I N B O S T O N / 1 8 9 5

5 and beside it 10 blownup snapshots
one for each province,
in purple-browns and odd reds,
the green of the trees dulled;
all blues however
io of an assertive purity.

Mountains and lakes and more lakes (though Quebec is a restaurant and Ontario the empty interior of the parliament buildings), with nobody climbing the trails and hauling out 15 the fish and splashing in the water but arrangements of grinning tourists—
look here, Saskatchewan is a flat lake, some convenient rocks where two children pose with a father 20 and the mother is cooking something in immaculate slacks by a smokeless fire, her teeth white as detergent.

Whose dream is this, I would like to know:

is this a manufactured

25 hallucination, a cynical fiction, a lure for export only?

I seem to remember people,

at least in the cities, also slush, machines and assorted garbage. Perhaps 30 that was my private mirage

which will just evaporate

when I go back. Or the citizens will be gone, run off to the peculiarly-

green forests

35 to wait among the brownish mountains

for the platoons of tourists and plan their odd red massacres.

Unsuspecting

window lady, I ask you:

40 Do you see nothing

watching you from under the water?

Was the sky ever that blue?

Who really lives there?

1997

1 8 9 6 / M A R G A R E T A T W O O D

You Begin

You begin this way:

this is your hand,

this is your eye,
that is a fish, blue and flat 5 on the paper, almost the shape of an eye.

This is your mouth, this is an O or a moon, whichever you like. This is yellow.

10 Outside the window is the rain, green
because it is summer, and beyond that the trees and then the world, which is round and has only

15 the colors of these nine crayons.
This is the world, which is fuller
and more difficult to learn than I have said.

You are right to smudge it that way with the red and then

20 the orange: the world burns.

Once you have learned these words you will learn that there are more words than you can ever learn.

The word hand floats above your hand
25 like a small cloud over a lake.

The word hand anchors
your hand to this table,
your hand is a warm stone
I hold between two words.

30 This is your hand, these are my hands, this is the world, which is round but not flat and has more colors than we can see.

It begins, it has an end,

this is what you will

35 come back to, this is your hand.

1 9 7 8

Flowers

Right now I am the flower girl.

I bring fresh flowers,

F L O W E R S / 1 8 9 7

d u m p out the old ones, the greenish water that smells like dirty teeth

5 into the bathroom sink, snip off the stem ends with surgical scissors I borrowed from the nursing station,

put them into a j a r

I brought from home, because they don't have vases

10 in this hotel for the ill,

place them on the table beside my father

where he can't see them

because he won't open his eyes.

He lies flattened under the white sheet.

15 He says he is on a ship,

and I can see it—

the functional white walls, the minimal windows,

the little bells, the rubbery footsteps of strangers,

the whispering all around

20 of the air-conditioner, or else the ocean, and he is on a ship;

he's giving us up, giving up everything
but the breath going in and out of his diminished body;
25 minute by minute he's sailing slowly away, away from us and our waving hands that do not wave.

The women come in, two of them, in blue;
it's no use being kind, in here, 30 if you don't have hands like theirs—
large and capable, the hands of plump muscular angels,
the ones that blow trumpets and lift swords.

They shift him carefully, tuck in the corners.
35 It hurts, but as little as possible.

Pain is their lore. The rest of us are helpless amateurs.

A suffering you can neither cure nor enter—there are worse things, but not many.

40 After a while it makes us impatient.

Can't we do anything but feel sorry?

I sit there, watching the flowers in their pickle jar. He is asleep, or not.

I think: He looks like a turtle.

45 Or: He looks erased.

But somewhere in there, at the far end of the tunnel of pain and forgetting he's trapped in is the same father I knew before,

the one who carried the green canoe
50 over the portage, the painter trailing,
1 8 9 8 / M A R G A R E T A T W O O D myself with the fishing rods, slipping on the wet boulders and slapping flies.
That was the last time we went there.
There will be a last time for this also,
55 bringing cut flowers to this white room.
Sooner or later I too
will have to give everything up,
even the sorrow that comes with these flowers,
even the anger,
60 even the memory of how I brought them from a garden I will no longer have by then,
and put them beside my dying father,
hoping I could still save him.

1 9 9 5

Up
You wake up filled with dread.
There seems no reason for it.
Morning light sifts through the window,
there is birdsong,
5 you can't get out of bed.
It's something about the crumpled sheets hanging over the edge like jungle foliage, the terry slippers gaping their dark pink mouths for your feet, io the unseen breakfast—some of it in the refrigerator you do not dare to open—you will not dare to eat.

What prevents you? The future. The future tense, immense as outer space.

15 You could get lost there.

No. Nothing so simple. The past, its density and drowned events pressing you down, like sea water, like gelatin filling your lungs instead of air.

20 Forget all that and let's get up.

Try moving your arm.

Try moving your head.

Pretend the house is on fire and you must run or burn.

25 No, that one's useless.

It's never worked before.

Where is it coming from, this echo,
this huge No that surrounds you,

DIGGING / 1899

silent as the folds of the yellow 30 curtains, mute as the cheerful
Mexican bowl with its cargo of mummified flowers?

(You chose the colour of the sun,
not the dried neutrals of shadow.

35 God knows you've tried.)

Nowhere's a good one:

you're relying on your death bed.

You have one hour to live.

Who is it, exactly, you have needed

40 all these years to forgive?

1995

SEAMUS HEANEY

b. 1939

Digging

Between my finger and my thumb

The squat pen rests; snug as a gun.

Under my window, a clean raspingsound

When the spade sinks into gravelly ground
:5 My father, digging. I look down

Till his straining rump among the flower beds
Bends low, comes up twenty years away

Stooping in rhythm through potato drills 1

Where he was digging.

io The coarse boot nestled on the lug, the shaft
Against the inside knee was levered firmly.

He rooted out tall tops, buried the bright dged deep To scatter new potatoes that we picked

Loving their cool hardness in our hands.

15 By god, the old man could handle a spade
.

Just like his old man.

My grandfather cut more turf in a day

Than any other man on Toner's bog.

Once I carried him milk in a bottle

20 Corked sloppily with paper. He straight t e n e d u p 1. Small furrows in which seeds are sown.

2. Slabs of peat that, when dried, are a common domestic fuel in Ireland.

1900 / S E A M U S H E A N E Y

To drink it, then fell to right away

Nicking and slicing neatly, heaving sods

Over his shoulder, going down and down

For the good turf. Digging.

25 The cold smell of potato mould, the squelch and slap

Of soggy peat, the curt cuts of an edge

Through living roots awaken in my head.

But I've no spade to follow m e n like them.

Between my finger and my t h u m b

30 The squat pen rests.

I'll dig with it.

1966

The Forge

All I know is a door into the dark.

Outside, old axles and iron hoops rusting;

Inside, the h a m m e r e d anvil's short-pitched ring,

The unpredictable fantail of sparks

5 Or hiss w h e n a new shoe toughens in water.

The anvil must be somewhere in the centre,

Horned as a unicorn, at one end square,

Set there immovable: an altar

W h e r e he expends himself in shape and music,

io Sometimes, leather-aproned, hairs in his nose,

He leans out on the jamb, recalls a clatter

Of hoofs where traffic is flashing in rows;
Then grunts and goes in, with a slam and flick
To beat real iron out, to work the bellows.

1969

Punishment³

I can feel the tug
of the halter at the nape

3. In 1951, the peat-stained body of a young girl clearly seen [Glob reproduces a photograph of her who lived in the late first century was recovered brain], ... This girl of only fourteen had had an from a bog in Windeby, Germany. As P. V. Glob inadequate winter diet... . To keep the young describes her in The Bog People (1969), she “lay body under, some birch branches and a big stone naked in the hole in the peat, a bandage over the were laid upon her.” According to the Roman his- eyes and a collar round the neck. The band across torian Tacitus (ca. 56—ca. 120), the Germanic peo- the eyes was drawn tight and had cut into the neck ples punished adulterous women by shaving off and the base of the nose. We may feel sure that it their hair and then scourging them out of the vil- had been used to close her eyes to this world. There lage or killing them. In more recent times, her was no mark of strangulation on the neck, so that “betraying sisters” (line 38) have sometimes been it had not been used for that purpose.” Her hair shaved, stripped, tarred, and handcuffed by the “had been shaved off with a razor on the left side Irish Republican Army to the railings of Belfast in of the head... . When the brain was removed the punishment for keeping company with British sol-convolutions and folds of the surface could be diers.

P U N I S H M E N T / 1 9 0 1

of h e r neck, the wind on h e r naked front.

5 It blows h e r nipples to a m b e r beads, it shakes the frail rigging
of h e r ribs.

I can see h e r drowned
10 body in the bog,
the weighing stone,
the floating rods and boughs.

U n d e r which at first
she was a barked sapling 15 that is dug up oak-bone, b r a i n - f i r k i n - s m a l l c a s k
her shaved h e a d
like a stubble of black corn,
her blindfold a soiled bandage, 20 her noose a ring
to store
the memories of love.

Little adulteress,
before they p u n i s h e d you 25 you were flaxen-haired, undernourished, and your tar-black face was beautiful.

My poor scapegoat,
I almost love you
30 but would have cast, I know,
the stones of silence.

I am the artful voyeur
of your brain's exposed and darkened combs,⁴ 35 your muscles' webbing
a n d all your n u m b e r e d bones:

I w h o have stood d u m b
w h e n your betraying sisters,
cauled⁵ in tar,
40 wept by the railings,
w h o would connive
in civilized outrage

4. Cellular structure, as in honeycomb. membrane that at birth, when it is unruptured, 5. Wrapped or enclosed. A caul is the inner fetal sometimes covers the infant's head.

1 9 0 2 / S E A M U S H E A N E Y

yet understand the exact and tribal, intimate revenge.

1 9 7 5

The Skunk

Up, black, striped and damasked like the chasuble⁶

At a funeral mass, the s k u n k s tail
Paraded the skunk. Night after night
I expected her like a visitor.
5 The refrigerator whinnied into silence.
My desk light softened beyond the verandah.
Small oranges loomed in the orange tree.
I began to be tense as a voyeur.
After eleven years I was composing io Love-letters again, broaching the word “wife”
Like a stored cask, as if its slender vowel
Had mutated into the night earth and air
Of California. T h e beautiful, useless
Tang of eucalyptus spelt your absence.
15 The aftermath of a m o u t h f u l of wine
Was like inhaling you off a cold pillow.
And there she was, the intent and glamorous,
Ordinary, mysterious skunk,
Mythologized, demythologized,
20 Snuffing the boards five feet beyond me.
It all came back to me last night, stirred
By the sootfall of your things at bedtime,
Your head-down, tail-up h u n t in a bottom drawer
For the black plunge-line nightdress.

1 9 7 9

A Dream of Jealousy

Walking with you and another lady
In wooded parkland, the whispering grass
Ran its fingers through our guessing silence

And the trees opened into a shady
5 Unexpected clearing where we sat down.
I think the candour of the light dismayed us.
6. Sleeveless vestment worn by the priest celebrating Mass, its color regulated by the feast of the day.

S T A T I O N I S L A N D / 1 9 0 3

We talked about desire and being jealous,
O u r conversation a loose single gown
Or a white picnic tablecloth spread out
10 Like a book of m a n n e r s in the wilderness.
“Show me,” I said to our companion, “what I have m u c h coveted, your breast’s mauve star.”
And she consented. O neither these verses
Nor my prudence, love, can heal your wounded stare.

1 9 7 9

*From Station Island*⁷

12

Like a convalescent, I took the hand stretched down from the jetty, sensed again an alien comfort as I stepped on ground to find the helping hand still gripping mine, 5 fish-cold and bony, but whether to guide or to be guided I could not be certain for the tall m a n in step at my side seemed blind, though he walked straight as a rush upon his ash plant,⁸ his eyes fixed straight ahead.
io Then I knew him in the flesh out there on the tarmac among the cars,

wintered hard and sharp as a blackthorn bush.
His voice eddying with the vowels of all rivers⁹ came back to me, though he did not speak yet, 15 a voice like a prosecutor's or a singer's, cunning,¹ narcotic, mimic, definite
as a steel nib's downstroke, quick and clean, and suddenly he hit a litter basket
with his stick, saying, "Your obligation 20 is not discharged by any c o m m o n rite.

W h a t you must do must be done on your own
7. "Station Island is a sequence of dream encounters with familiar ghosts, set on Station Island on familiar ghost is that of the Irish novelist James Lough Derg in Co. Donegal. The island is also Joyce (1882-1941).

known as St. Patrick's Purgatory because of a tradition that Patrick was the first to establish the blind.

penitential vigil of fasting and praying which still
9. The Anna Livia Plurabelle episode of Joyce's constitutes the basis of the three-day pilgrimage.

Finnegans Wake (1939) resounds with the names
Each unit of the contemporary pilgrim's exercises of many rivers.

is called a 'station,' and a large part of each station
1. "The only arms I allow myself to use—silence, involves walking barefoot and praying round the exile, and cunning” (Joyce, Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man, 1916).

remains of early medieval monastic cells” [Hea-
1904 / SEAMUS HEANEY

so get back in harness. The main thing is to write for the joy of it. Cultivate a work-lust that imagines its haven like your hands at night

25 dreaming the sun in the sunspot of a breast.

You are fasted now, light-headed, dangerous.

Take off from here. And don’t be so earnest, let others wear the sackcloth and the ashes.²

Let go, let fly, forget.

30 You’ve listened long enough. Now strike your note.”

It was as if I had stepped free into space alone with nothing that I had not known already. Raindrops blew in my face

as I came to. “Old father, mother’s son,

35 there is a moment in Stephen’s³ diary

for April the thirteenth, a revelation

set among my stars—that one entry

has been a sort of password in my ears,

the collect of a new epiphany,⁴

40 the Feast of the Holy Tundish.⁵ “Who cares,”

he jeered, “any more? The English language belongs to us. You are raking at dead fires,

a waste of time for somebody your age.

That subject0 people stuff is a cod's0 game, colonized/fool's 45 infantile, like your peasant pilgrimage.

You lose more of yourself than you redeem doing the decent thing. Keep at a tangent.

When they make the circle wide, it's time to swim out on your own and fill the element

50 with signatures on your own frequency, echo soundings, searches, probes, allurements,
elver-gleams6 in the dark of the whole sea.”

The shower broke in a cloudburst, the tarmac
fumed and sizzled. As he moved off quickly 55 the downpour loosed its screens round his straight walk.

1 9 8 4

2. As worn by penitents in biblical times and later.

Artist as a Young Man” [Heaney's note]: “13 April:

3. Stephen Dedalus: protagonist in Portrait of the

That tundish [funnel] has been on my mind for a Artist, major character in Joyce's Ulysses (1922), long time. I looked it up and find it English and and Joyce's alter ego.

good old blunt English too. Damn the dean of stud-

4. Manifestation of a superhuman being, as of the ies and his funnel! What did he come here for to infant Jesus to the Magi (Matthew 2). In the Chris-teach us his own language or to learn it from us?

tian calendar, the Feast of the Epiphany is January

Damn him one way or the other!”

6. Collect: short prayer assigned to a particular day.

6. Gleams as of young eels.

5. “See the end of James Joyce’s Portrait of the

CLEARANCES / 1905

*From Clearances*⁷

IN MEMORIAM M.K.H.,⁸ 1911 - 1984

She taught me what her uncle once taught her:

How easily the biggest coal block split

If you got the grain and hammer angled right.

The sound of that relaxed alluring blow,

5 Its co-opted and obliterated echo,

Taught me to hit, taught me to loosen,

Taught me between the hammer and the block

To face the music. Teach me now to listen,

To strike it rich behind the linear black.

Ill

When all the others were away at Mass

I was all hers as we peeled potatoes.

They broke the silence, let fall one by one

Like solder weeping off the soldering iron:

5 Cold comforts set between us, things to share

Gleaming in a bucket of clean water.

And again let fall. Little pleasant splashes

From each other's work would bring us to our senses.

So while the parish priest at her bedside

io Went hammer and tongs at the prayers for the dying

And some were responding and some crying

I remembered her head bent towards my head,

Her breath in mine, our fluent dipping knives—

Never closer the whole rest of our lives.

VII

In the last minutes he said more to her

Almost than in all their life together.

“You’ll be in New Row on Monday night

And I’ll come up for you and you’ll be glad

5 W h e n I walk in the door ... Isn’t that right?”

His head was bent down to her propped-up head.

She could not hear but we were overjoyed.

He called her good and girl. Then she was dead,

The searching for a pulsebeat was abandoned

io And we all knew one thing by being there.

The space we stood around had been emptied

Into us to keep, it penetrated

Clearances that suddenly stood open.

High cries were felled and a pure change happened.

7. Enforced depopulation (as of the Scottish 8. Margaret Kathleen Heaney, the poet’s mother.

Highlands).

1 9 0 6 / S E A M U S H E A N E Y

VIII

I thought of walking round and round a space

Utterly empty, utterly a source

Where the decked chestnut tree had lost its place

In our front hedge above the wallflowers.

5 The white chips jumped and jumped and skited⁰ high. shot

I heard the hatchet’s differentiated

Accurate cut, the crack, the sigh

And collapse of what luxuriated
Through the shocked tips and wreckage of it all.
10 Deep-planted and long gone, my coeval0 equally old
Chestnut from a jam jar in a hole,
Its heft and hush become a bright nowhere,
A soul ramifying and forever
Silent, beyond silence listened for.

1 9 8 7

Casting and Gathering

F O R T E D H U G H E S 9

Years and years ago, these sounds took sides:
On the left bank, a green silk tapered cast
Went whispering through the air, saying hush
And lush, entirely free, no matter whether 5 It swished above the hayfield or the river.
On the right bank, like a speeded-up corncrake,1
A sharp ratcheting went on and on Cutting across the stillness as another Fisherman gathered line-lengths off his reel.
io I am still standing there, awake and dreamy,
I have grown older and can see them both
Moving their arms and rods, working away,
Each one absorbed, proofed by the sounds he's making.
One sound is saying. "You are not worth tuppence, 15 But neither is anybody. Watch it! Be severe."
The other says, "Go with it! Give and swerve.
You are everything you feel beside the river."
I love hushed air. I trust contrariness.

Years and years go past and I do not move

9. English poet (1930-1998; see pp. 1810-16). 1. Bird with a distinctive cry.

T H E S E T T L E B E D / 1 9 0 7

20 For I see that when one man casts, the other gathers
And then vice versa, without changing sides.

1991

The Settle Bed²

Willed down,³ waited for, in place at last and for good.

Trunk-hasped, cart-heavy, painted an ignorant brown.

And pew-strait, bin-deep, standing four-square as an ark.

If I lie in it, I am cribbed⁰ in seasoned deal⁰ confined / pine or fir wood ⁵ Dry as the unkindled boards of a funeral ship.

My measure has been taken, my ear shuttered up.

Yet I hear an old sombre tide awash in the headboard:

Unpathetic och ochs and och hohs,⁴ the long bedtime

Sigh-life of Ulster,⁵ unwilling, unbeaten,

io Protestant, Catholic, the Bible, the beads,⁰ rosary

Late talks at gables by moonlight, boots on the hearth,

The small hours chimed sweetly away so next thing it was

The cock on the ridge-tiles.⁶

And now this is “an inheritance”—

Upright, rudimentary, unshiftable planked

15 In the long long ago, yet willable forward

Again and again and again, cargoed with

Its own dumb, tongue-and-groove⁷ worthiness

And un-get-roundable weight. But to conquer that weight,

Imagine a dower⁸ of settle beds tumbled from heaven

20 Like some nonsensical vengeance come on the people,

Then learn from that harmless barrage that whatever is given
Can always be reimagined, however four-square,
Plank-thick, hull-stupid and out of its time
It happens to be. You are free as the lookout, 25 That far-seeing joker posted high over the fog,
W h o declared by the time that he had got himself down
The actual ship had stolen away from beneath him.

1991

2. A bed like a large wooden chest with a hinged

5. The northernmost of Ireland's four provinces.

("hasped," line 2) lid that, when closed, can be

6. I.e., the rooster crows on the roof.

used as a bench.

7. Carpenters' term for the interlocked joining of

3. Inherited.

parallel planks.

4. Expressions of mild regret (Irish).

8. Dowry, inheritance.

1908 / SEAMUS HEANEY

From Glanmore Revisited

6 Bedside Reading

T h e w h o l e p l a c e a i r i e r . B i g s u m m e r t r e e s

S t i r r i n g a t e y e l e v e l w h e n w e w a k e n

A n d l i t t l e s h o o t s o f i v y c r e e p i n g i n

U n l e s s t h e y ' v e b e e n t r a i n e d o u t — l i k e m e m o r i e s

5 Y o u ' v e t r a i n e d s o l o n g n o w t h e y c a n s h o w t h e i r f a c e

A n d k e e p t h e i r d i s t a n c e . W h i t e - m o u t h e d d e p r e s s i o n

S w i m s out f r o m its s h a d o w like a d o l p h i n
W i t h w e t , unreadable, unfurtive eyes.
I s w i m in H o m e r . 9 In B o o k T w e n t y - t h r e e , io At last O d y s s e u s and P e n e l o p e
W a k e n together. O n e b e d p o s t o f the b e d
I s the living trunk of an old olive tree
A n d is their secret. As ours c o u l d have b e e n ivy, Evergreen, atremble and unsaid.

7 The Skylight

You w e r e the o n e for skylights. I o p p o s e d
C u t t i n g into the s e a s o n e d tongue-and-groove1
O f p i t c h pine. I liked it low a n d closed,
I t s claustrophobic, n e s t - u p - i n - t b e - r o o f
5 Effect. I liked the snuff-dry feeling,
T h e perfect, trunk-lid fit of the old ceiling.
U n d e r there, it w a s all h u t c h and hatch.
T h e b l u e slates kept the heat like midnight thatch.2
B u t w h e n the slates c a m e off, extravagant
io Sky entered and held surprise wide open.
F o r days I felt like an inhabitant
O f that h o u s e w h e r e the m a n sick of the palsy
W a s l o w e r e d t h r o u g h the roof, had his sins forgiven,
W a s h e a l e d , took up his b e d and walked away.3

1991

Fosterling4

“That heavy greenness fostered by water”

John Montague5

At school I loved one picture's heavy greenness —
Horizons rigged with windmills' arms and sails.

The millhouses' still outlines. Their in-place-ness
9. Homer's epic poem the Odyssey.

3. See Christ's miraculous cure, in John 5.8.

1. See note 7 above.

4. Foster child.

2. The roof tiles kept the house as warm at night

5. Irish (American-born) poet (b. 1929).

as thatch famously does.

TWO LORRIES / 1909

Still more in place when mirrored in canals

5 I can't remember not ever having known

The imminent hydraulics of a land

Of glar^o and glif and floods at mud / oozing water

dailigone.^o

dusk

My silting hope. My lowlands of the mind.

Heaviness of being. And poetry

10 Sluggish in the doldrums of what happens.

Me waiting until I was nearly fifty

To credit marvels. Like the tree-clock of tin cans

The tinkers made. So long for air to brighten,

Time to be dazzled and the heart to lighten.

1991

From Squarings

Lightenings

VIII

The annals⁰ say: when the monks of Clonmacno
ise⁶ histories Were all at prayers inside the oratory

A ship appeared above them in the air.

The anchor dragged along behindsodeep

5 It hooked itself into the altar rails

And then, as the big hull rocked to a standstill,

A crewmanshinned and grappled down the rope

And struggled to release it. But in vain.

“This man can’t bear our life here and will drown,”

io The abbot said, “unless we help him.” So

They did, the freed ship sailed, and the man climbed back

Out of the marvellous as he had known it.

1991

Two Lorries⁷

It’s raining on black coal and warm wet ashes.

There are tyre-marks in the yard, Agnew’s old lorry

Has all its cribs⁸ down and Agnew the coalman

With his Belfast accent’s sweet-talking my mother.

5 Would she ever go to a film in Magherafelt?⁹

But it’s raining and he still has half the load

6. Famous monastic settlement beside the river 8. Hinged, wooden side-flaps.

Shannon, near Athlone, Ireland. 9. Small town in County
Tyrone, Northern Ire-7. Trucks. land.

1910 / MICHAEL LONGLEY

To deliver farther on. This time the lode

Our coal came from was silk-black, so the ashes

Will be the silkiest white. T h e M a g h e r a f e l t

10 (Via T o o m e b r i d g e) bus g o e s by. T h e half-stripped lorry W i t h its e m p t i e d , folded coal-bags m o
v e s my mother:

T h e tasty ways of a leather-aproned c o a l m a n !

A n d films no less! T h e c o n c e i t of a c o a l m a n ...

S h e g o e s b a c k in and gets out the black lead

15 A n d e m e r y paper,¹ this n i n e t e e n - f o r t i e s m o t h e r , All b u s i n e s s r o u n d her stove, half-wiping a s h e s

W i t h a b a c k h a n d f r o m her c h e e k as the bolted² lorry

G e t s revved and turned and h e a d s for M a g h e r a f e l t

A n d the last delivery. O h , Magherafelt!

20 O h , d r e a m of red p l u s h and a city c o a l m a n

A s t i m e fastforwards and a different lorry

G r o a n s i n t o s h o t , 0 up Broad Street, w i t h a payload view T h a t will b l o w the b u s station to dust and a s h e s ...

After that h a p p e n e d , I'd a vision of my mother,

25 A r e v e n a n t 0 on the b e n c h w h e r e I w o u l d m e e t her ghost In that cold-floored waiting-room in Magherafelt,

H e r s h o p p i n g bags full up w i t h shovelled ashes.

D e a t h walked out past her like a d u s t - f a c e d c o a l
m a n

R e f o l d i n g body-bags, plying his load

30 E m p t y u p o n empty, in a flurry

Of m o t e s 0 and engine-revs, but w h i c h lorry dust

Was it now? Young Agnew's or that other,
Heavier, deadlier one, set to explode
In a time beyond her time in Magherafelt ...
35 So tallybags and sweet-talk darkness, coalman keep a record of
Listen to the rain spit in new ashes
As you heft a load of dust that was Magherafelt,
Then reappear from your lorry as my mother's Dreamboat coalman filmed in silk-white ashes.

1996

MICHAEL LONGLEY

b. 1939

The Linen Industry

Pulling up flax¹ after the blue flowers have fallen

And laying our hands in the peaty water

1. Abrasive-coated paper, here used with a prep- 1. Blue-flowered plant grown for its textile fiber aration of "black lead" to polish the stove. and treated in water from the Irish peat bog.

2. With the sides folded up and locked in place.

G H E T T O / 1 9 1 1

To rot those grasses to the bone, or building stooks²

That recall the skirts of an invisible dancer,

5 We become a part of the linen industry

And follow its processes to the grubby town

Where fields are compacted into window-boxes

And there is little room among the big machines.

But even in our attic under the skylight

10 We make love on a bleach green, the whole meadow

Draped with material turning white in the sun
As though snow reluctant to melt were our attire.
What's passion but a battering of stubborn stalks,
T h e n a gentle combing out of fibres like hair
15 And a weaving of these into christening robes,
Into garments for a marriage or funeral?
Since it's like a bereavement once the labour's done
To find ourselves last workers in a dying trade,
Let flax be our matchmaker, our undertaker,
20 The provider of sheets for whatever the bed—
And be shy of your breasts in the presence of death,
Say that you look more beautiful in linen
Wearing white petticoats, the bow on your bodice
A butterfly attending the embroidered flowers.

1 9 7 9

Gorse Fires

Cattle out of their byres⁰ are dungy still, lambs cowsheds
Have stepped from last year as from an enclosure.
Five or six m e n stand gazing at a rusty tractor
Before carrying implements to separate fields.
5 I am travelling from one April to another.
It is the same train between the same embankments.
Gorse fires are smoking, but primroses burn
And celandines and white may and gorse flowers.

1 9 9 1

Ghetto

I

Because you will suffer soon and die, your choices

Are neither right nor wrong: a spoon will feed you,

2. Sheaves standing together.

1 9 1 2

/ M I C H A E L L O N G L E Y

A flannel keep you clean, a toothbrush bring you back
To your bathroom's view of chimney-pots and gardens.

5 With so little time for inventory or leavetaking,

You are packing now for the rest of your life

Photographs, medicines, a change of underwear, a book,

A candlestick, a loaf, sardines, needle and thread.

These are your heirlooms, perishables, worldly goods.

10 What you bring is the same as what you leave behind,

Your last belonging a list of your belongings.

II

As though it were against the law to sleep on pillows

They have filled a cathedral with confiscated feathers:

Silence irrefragible,⁰ no room for angels' wings, unbreakable

15 Tons of feathers suffocating cherubim and seraphim.³

III

The little girl without a mother behaves like a mother

W i t h her rag doll to w h o m she explains fear and anguish,

The meagreness of the bread ration, how to make it last,

How to get back to the doll's house and lift up the roof

20 And, before the flame-throwers and dynamiters destroy it,

How to rescue from their separate rooms love and sorrow,

Masterpieces the size of a postage stamp, small fortunes.

/ V

From among the h u n d r e d s of thousands I can imagine one

Behind the barbed-wire fences as my train crosses Poland.

25 I see him for long enough to catch the sprinkle of
snowflakes

On his hair and schoolbag, and then I am transported

Away from that world of broken hobby-horses and silent toys.

He turns into a little snowman and refuses to melt.

V

For street-singers in the marketplace, weavers, warp⁴-makers,

30 Those who suffer in sewing-machine repair shops, excrement-

Removal workers, there are not enough root vegetables,

Beetroots, turnips, swedes,⁵ nor for the leather-stitchers

W h o are boiling leather so that their children may eat;

W h o are turning like a thick slice of potato-bread

35 This page, which is everything I know about potatoes,

My delivery of Irish Peace, Beauty of Hebron, H o m e

Guard, Arran Banners, Kerr's Pinks,⁶ resistant to eelworm,

Resignation, c o m m o n scab, terror, frost, potato-blight.

3. Types of angels. 5. Rutabagas.

4. Thread stretched lengthwise in a weaver's loom. 6. Varieties of potatoes (lines 36—37).

ESSAY ON PSYCHIATRISTS / 1913

VI

There will be performances in the waiting room, and time

40 To jump over a skipping rope, and time to adjust

As though for a dancing class the ribbons in your hair.⁷

This string quartet is the most natural thing in the world.

VII

Fingers leave shadows on a violin, harmonics,⁸

A blackbird fluttering between electrified fences.

VIII

45 Lessons were forbidden in that terrible school.
Punishable by death were reading and writing
And arithmetic, so that even the junior infants Grew old and wise in lofts studying these subjects.
There were drawing lessons, and drawings of kitchens
50 And farms, farm animals, butterflies, mothers, fathers
Who survived in crayon until in pen and ink
They turned into guards at executions and funerals
Torturing and hanging even these stick figures.
There were drawings of barracks and latrines as well
55 And the only windows were the windows they drew.

1 9 9 1

R O B E R T P I N S K Y

b. 1940

From Essay on Psychiatrists

IV. A Lakeside Identification

Yes, crazy to suppose one could describe them—
And yet, there was this incident: at the local beach
Clouds of professors and the husbands of professors
Swam, dabbled or stood to talk with arms folded
5 Gazing at the lake ... and one of the few townsfolk there,
With no faculty status—a matter-of-fact, competent,
Catholic woman of twenty-seven with five children
And a first-rate body—pointed her finger
At the back of one certain man and asked me,

7. Cf. T. S. Eliot, "The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock" (p. 1340).

Prufrock" (p. 1340).

1914 / ROBERT PINSKY

10 "Is that guy a psychiatrist?" and by god he was! "Yes,"

She said, "He looks like a psychiatrist."

Grown quiet, I looked at his pink back, and thought.

V. Physical Comparison With Professors And Others

Pink and a bit soft-bodied, with a somewhat jazzy Middle-class bathingsuit and sand sideburns, to me he looked from the back like one more professor.

And from the front, too — the boyish, unformed carriage which foreigners always note in American men, combined as in a professor with that liberal, quizzical, articulate gaze so unlike the more focused, more tolerant expression worn by a manufacturer (surgeon, salesman, athlete). On close inspection was there, perhaps, a self-satisfied or benign air, a studied gentleness toward the child whose hand he held loosely?

Absurd to speculate; but then — the woman saw something.

1975

A Long Branch Song

Some days in May, little stars

Winked all over the ocean. The blue

Barely changed all morning and afternoon:
The chimes of the bank's bronze clock;

5 The hoarse voice of Cookie, hawking

The Daily Record for thirty-five years.

1984

The Street

Streaked and fretted with effort, the thick
kVine of the world, red nervelets

Coiled at its tips.

All roads lead from it. 2 All night

5 Wainwrights and upholsterers work finishing
The wheeled coffin

1. Long Branch, New Jersey, where Pinsky was 2. A twist on the expression All roads lead to Rome.

born.

THE STREET / 1915

Of the dead favorite of the Emperor,

The child's corpse propped seated

On brocade, with yellow

10 Oiled curls, kohlon the stiff lids.

Slave throw petals on the roadway

For the cortege, white

Languid flowers shooting from dark

Blisters on the vine, ramifying

15 Into streets. On mine,

Rockwell Avenue, it was embarrassing:

Trouble—fights, the police, sickness—

Seemed never to come

For anyone when they were fully dressed.

20 It was always underwear or dirty pyjamas, Unseemly stretches

O f s k i n s h o w i n g t h r o u g h a t o r n h o u s e c o a t .
O n c e a s t r a n g e r d r o v e o f f i n a c a r

W i t h s o m e b o d y ' s w i f e ,

2 5 A n d h e r a n a f t e r t h e m i n h i s u n d e r s h i r t
A n d t h r e w h i s s h o e a t t h e c a r . I t b o u n c e d I n t o t h e s t r e e t

H a r m l e s s l y , a n d w e c a r r i e d i t b a c k t o h i m ;
B u t t h e m a n h a d t o o m u c h d i g n i t y

3 0 T o p u t i t b a c k o n ,

S o h e h e l d i t a n d s t o o d c r y i n g i n t h e s t r e e t :

" H e ' s b r e a k i n g u p m y h o m e , " h e s a i d ,

" T h e s o n o f a b i t c h

B a s t a r d i s b r e a k i n g u p m y h o m e . " T h e s t r e e t 3 5 R o s e u n d u l a n t i n p a v e m e n t - b r e a k i n g c o i l s A n d t h e m a n r o d e i t ,

S t i l l h o l d i n g h i s s h o e a n d s t i f f l y u p r i g h t L i k e a t r i c k r i d e r i n t h e c i r c u s p a r a d e

T h a t c a m e d o w n t h e s t r e e t

4 0 E a c h A u g u s t . A s t h e p o w e r f u l d r a g o n l i k e H u m p s w e l l e d h e r o s e c u r s i n g a n d r e a d y

T o t h r o w h i s s h o e — w o v e n

A n g u l a r a s a t w i g i n t o t h e f a b u l o u s

R u g o r b r o c a d e w i t h c r o w n s a n d c a m e l s ,

4 5 L e o p a r d s a n d r o s e t t e s ,

1 9 1 6 / R O B E R T P I N S K Y

All riding the vegetable wave of the street

From the John Flock Mortuary Home

Down to the river.

It was a small place, and off the center,

5 0 B u t s o m u c h a p l a c e t o i t s e l f , I f e l t

Like a young prince
Or aspirant squire. I knew that *Ivanhoe*³
Was about race. The Saxons⁴ were Jews,
Or even Coloreds,
55 With their low-ceilinged, unbelievably
Sour-smelling houses down by the docks.
Everything was written
Or woven, ivory and pink and emerald—
Nothing was too ugly or petty or terrible
60 To be weighed in the immense
Silver scales of the dead: the looming
Balances set right onto the live, dangerous
Gray bark of the street.

1 9 8 4

ABC

Any body can die, evidently. Few
Go happily, irradiating joy, Knowledge, love. Many Need oblivion, painkillers,
5 Quickest respite.
Sweet time unafflicted,
Various world:
X = your zenith.

2000

3. Historical novel by the Scottish writer Sir Walter Scott (1771 — 1832), considered the inventor of the concept of the quest of England in 1066: “Four generations had the form.

not sufficed to blend the hostile blood of the Nor-

4. The Germanic peoples in ancient times, some mans and Anglo-Saxons, or to unite, by common of whom invaded Britain in the fifth and sixth cenlanguage and mutual interests, two hostile races.” turies; here, used to mean an English person or
The Saxons were dispossessed of both land and Anglo-Saxon. In the first pages of Ivanhoe, Scott status.

1 9 1 7

BILLY C O L L I N S

b. 1941

Japan

Today I pass the time reading
a favorite haiku,
saying the few words over and over.

It feels like eating
5 the same small, perfect grape again and again.

I walk through the house reciting it and leave its letters falling through the air of every room.
io I stand by the big silence of the piano and say it.
I say it in front of a painting of the sea.
I tap out its rhythm on an empty shelf.
I listen to myself saying it,
then I say it without listening,

15 then I hear it without saying it.
And when the dog looks up at me,
I kneel down on the floor
and whisper it into each of his long white ears.
It's the one about the one-ton 20 temple bell
with the moth sleeping on its surface,¹ and every time I say it, I feel the excruciating pressure of the m o t h on the surface of the iron bell.
25 W h e n I say it at the window,
the bell is the world
and I am the moth resting there.
W h e n I say it into the mirror,
I am the heavy bell
30 and the m o t h is life with its papery wings.
And later, when I say it to you in the dark,
you are the bell,
and I am the tongue of the bell, ringing you,

1. Haiku by the Japanese poet and painter Taniguchi Buson (1715—1783): “On the one-ton temple bell / a moon-moth, folded into sleep, / sits still” (trans. X. J. Kennedy).

1 9 1 8 / B I L L Y C O L L I N S

and the moth has flown 35 from its line
and moves like a hinge in the air above our bed.

1 9 9 8

Litany

You are the bread and the knife,
The crystal goblet and the wine.

JACQUES CRICKILLON²

You are the bread and the knife,
the crystal goblet and the wine.

You are the dew on the morning grass,
and the burning wheel of the sun.

5 You are the white apron of the baker and the marsh birds suddenly in flight.

However, you are not the wind in the orchard,
the plums on the counter,
or the house of cards,

10 And you are certainly not the pine-scented air.

There is no way you are the pine-scented air.

It is possible that you are the fish under the bridge,
maybe even the pigeon on the general's head,
but you are not even close

15 to being the field of cornflowers at dusk.

And a quick look in the mirror will show that you are neither the boots in the corner
nor the boat asleep in its boathouse.

It might interest you to know,

20 speaking of the plentiful imagery of the world,
that I am the sound of rain on the roof.

I also have a pen to be the shooting star,
the evening paper blowing down an alley,
and the basket of chestnuts on the kitchen table.

25 I am also the moon in the trees and the blind woman's teacup.

But don't worry, I am not the bread and the knife.

You are still the bread and the knife.

You will always be the bread and the knife,

So not to mention the crystal goblet and — somehow — the wine.

2002

2. Belgian poet (b. 1940).

1919

ROBERT HASS

b. 1941

Meditation at Lagunitas¹

All the new thinking is about loss.

In this it resembles all the old thinking.

The idea, for example, that each particular erases the luminous clarity of a general idea. That the clown-

5 faced woodpecker probing the dead sculpted trunk of that black birch is, by his presence, some tragic falling off from a first world of undivided light. Or the other notion that,

because there is in this world no one thing to which the bramble of blackberry corresponds,

a word is elegy to what it signifies.

We talked about it late last night and in the voice of my friend, there was a thin wire of grief, a tone almost querulous. After a while I understood that, talking this way, everything dissolves: justice, pine, hair, woman, you and I. There was a woman

I made love to and I remembered how, holding her small shoulders in my hands sometimes,
1 I felt a violent wonder at her presence 20 like a thirst for salt, for my childhood river with its island willows, silly music from the pleasure boat, muddy places where we caught the little orange-silver fish called pumpkinseed. It hardly had to do with her.
Longing, we say, because desire is full 25 of endless distances. I must have been the same to her.
But I remember so much, the way her hands dismantled bread, the thing her father said that hurt her, what she dreamed. There are moments when the body is as numinous²
as words, days that are the good flesh continuing.
30 Such tenderness, those afternoons and evenings, saying blackberry, blackberry, blackberry.

1 9 7 9

Tahoe³ in August

W h a t summer proposes is simply happiness:

heat early in the morning, jays raucous in the pines. Frank and Ellen have a tennis game

at nine, Bill and Cheryl sleep on the deck

1. Little lake (Spanish); a small town in Califor-

3. A lake in the Sierra Nevada Mountains, in both nia, near San Francisco.

eastern California and western Nevada.

2. Filled with a sense of divinity.

1 9 2 0 / R O B E R T P I N S K Y

5 to watch a shower of summer stars. Nick and Sharon stayed in, sat and talked the dark on, drinking tea, and Jeanne walked into the meadow in a white smock to write in her journal
by a grazing horse who seemed to want the company.
10 Some of them will swim in the afternoon.
Someone will drive to the hardware store to fetch new latches for the kitchen door. Four o'clock;
the joggers jogging—it is one of them who sees down the flowering slope the woman with her notebook 15 in her hand beside the white horse, gesturing, her hair from a distance the copper color of the hummingbirds
the slant light catches on the slope; the hikers switchback down the canyon from the waterfall;
the readers are reading, Anna is about to meet Vronsky,⁴ 20 that nice M. Swann is dining in Combray.
with the aunts, and Carrie has come to Chicago.⁵
What they want is happiness: someone to love them, children, a summer by the lake. The woman who sets aside her book blinks against the fuzzy dark, 25 re-entering the house. Her daughter drifts downstairs;
out late the night before, she has been napping, and she's cross. Her mother tells her David telephoned.
"He's such a dear," the mother says, "I think
I made him nervous." The girl tosses her head as the horse 30 had done in the meadow while Jeanne read it her dream.
"You can call him now, if you want," the mother says,
"I've got to get the chicken started,

I won't listen." "Did I say you would?"
the girl says quickly. The mother who has been slapped 35 this way before and done the same herself another summer on a different lake says, "Ouch." The girl shrugs sulkily. "I'm sorry." Looking down: "Something about the way you said that pissed me off."
"Hannibal has wandered off," the mother says, 40 wryness in her voice, she is thinking it is August,
"why don't you see if he's at the Finleys' house again." The girl says, "God." The mother: "He loves small children. It's livelier for him there."
The daughter, awake now, flounces out the door,
45 which slams. It is for all of them the sound of summer.
The mother she looks like stands at the counter snapping beans.

1 9 8 9

4. The lover of Anna Karenina, in the novel of the Swann, a protagonist of Swann's Way, the first same name by the Russian novelist Leo Tolstoy book in the seven-volume A la recherche du temps (1828-1910).

perdu (In Search of Lost Time), by the French nov-

5. In Sister Carrie, by the American novelist Theo-elst Marcel Proust (1871-1922). Swann visits the dore Dreiser (1871—1945), the heroine, Carrie aunts of the narrator, Marcel, at Combray, a town Meeber, moves to Chicago. M. Swann-. Charles based on Illiers, near Chartres.

1 9 2 1

D E R E K M A H O N

b. 1941

In Carrowdore Churchyard

*(at the grave of Louis MacNeice)*1

Your ashes will not stir, even on this high ground,

However the wind tugs, the headstones shake.

This plot is consecrated, for your sake,

To what lies in the future tense. You lie

5 Past tension now, and spring is coming round

Igniting flowers on the peninsula.

Your ashes will not fly, however the rough winds burst

Through the wild brambles and the reticent trees.

All we may ask of you we have; the rest

10 Is not for publication, will not be heard.

Maguire, I believe, suggested a blackbird

And over your grave a phrase from Euripides.2

Which suits you down to the ground, like this churchyard

With its play of shadow, its humane perspective.

15 Locked in the winter's fist, these hills are hard

As nails, yet soft and feminine in their turn

When fingers open and the hedges burn.

This, you implied, is how we ought to live—

The ironical, loving crush of roses against snow,

20 Each fragile, solving ambiguity. So

From the pneumonia of the ditch, from the ague0 fever

Of the blind poet and the bombed-out town you bring

The all-clear to the empty holes of spring,

Rinsing the choked mud, keeping the colours new.

1 9 6 8

A Disused Shed in Co. Wexford³

Let them not forget us, the weak souls among the asphodels.

—SEFERIS,⁴ Mythistorema, tr. Keeley and Sherrard

(for J. G. Farrell)

Even now there are places where a thought might grow—

Peruvian mines, worked out and abandoned

1. Irish poet (1907-1963; see pp. 1485-91), bur-ides (ca. 484-406 B.C.E.) was not carved on Macied in Carrowdore Churchyard, County Down, Neice's gravestone.

Northern Ireland.

3. County in southeast Ireland.

2. Maguire is the name MacNeice gives his old

4. George Seferis (1900-1971), Greek poet.

friend the Belfast artist George McCann in his Below, James Gordon Farrell (1935-1979), Anglo-book-length poem Autumn Sequel (1954). The Irish novelist.

suggested phrase from the Greek dramatist Eurip-

1 9 2 2 / D E R E K M A H O N

To a slow clock of condensation,

An echo trapped for ever, and a flutter

Of wild-flowers in the lift-shaft,

Indian compounds where the wind dances

And a door bangs with diminished confidence,

Lime crevices behind rippling rain-barrels,

Dog corners for bone burials;
And in a disused shed in Co. Wexford,
Deep in the grounds of a burnt-out hotel,
Among the bathtubs and the washbasins
A thousand mushrooms crowd to a keyhole.
This is the one star in their firmament
Or frames a star within a star.
What should they do there but desire?
So many days beyond the rhododendrons
With the world waltzing in its bowl of cloud,
They have learnt patience and silence
Listening to the rooks querulous in the high wood.
They have been waiting for us in a foetor⁰ fetid aura
Of vegetable sweat since civil war days,
Since the gravel-crunching, interminable departure
Of the expropriated mycologist.⁵
He never came back, and light since then
Is a keyhole rusting gently after rain.
Spiders have spun, flies dusted to mildew
And once a day, perhaps, they have heard something—
A trickle of masonry, a shout from the blue
Or a lorry⁰ changing gear at the end of the lane. truck
There have been deaths, the pale flesh flaking
Into the earth that nourished it;
And nightmares, born of these and the grim
Dominion of stale air and rank moisture.
Those nearest the door grow strong—“Elbow room! Elbow room!”

The rest, dim in a twilight of crumbling
Utensils and broken pitchers, groaning
For their deliverance, have been so long Expectant that there is left only the posture.
A half century, without visitors, in the dark—
Poor preparation for the cracking lock
And creak of hinges. Magi,⁰ moonmen, wise men
Powdery prisoners of the old regime,
Web-throated, stalked like triffids,⁶ racked by drought
And insomnia, only the ghost of a scream

5. Someone who studies mushrooms. science fiction novel The Day of the Triffids (1951) 6. Mobile, flesh-eating plants in John Wyndham's and the 1962 movie based on it.

THE WINDOW / 1923

At the flash-bulb firing-squad we wake them with Shows there is life yet in their feverish forms.
Grown beyond nature now, soft food for worms,
50 They lift frail heads in gravity and good faith.
They are begging us, you see, in their wordless way,
To do something, to speak on their behalf
Or at least not to close the door again.
Lost people of Treblinka and Pompeii!⁷
55 "Save us, save us," they seem to say,
"Let the god not abandon us
Who have come so far in darkness and in pain.
We too had our lives to live.
You with your light meter and relaxed itinerary,
60 Let not our naive labours have been in vain!"

1975

The Window

woodwoodwoodwoodwoodwoodwood

IO

oo

n o

o w

d d w i

o w

o n

w o

o d

i o

d o n d w w

d w

o i

o o

o n

w o

d d

i d

w o n w wind

o w

d o

o i

o o

d n w d

w d i w

o o

n d

w w

d o

o i

oo

on

woodwoodwoodwoodwoodwoodwood

dwoodwoodwoodwoodwoodwoodwoodw

odwoodwoodwoodwoodwoodwoodwoodwo

1 9 7 9

7. Roman city preserved under ash and lava after a volcanic eruption that killed most of its inhabitants.

Treblinka: site, in northern Poland, of a principal Nazi concentration camp.

1 9 2 4 / D E R E K M A H O N

Girls on the Bridge

—Pykene na Brukken, Munch, 19008

Audible trout,

Notional0 midges.0 Beds, imaginary / tiny flies

Lamplight and crisp linen wait

In the house there for the sedate

5 Limbs and averted heads

Of the girls out
Late on the bridge.
The dusty road that slopes
Past is perhaps the high road south,
10 A symbol of world-wondering youth,
Of adolescent hopes
And privileges;
But stops to find
The girls content to gaze
15 At the unplumbed, reflective lake,
Their plangent⁰ conversational quack plaintive
Expressive of calm days
And peace of mind.
Grave daughters
20 Of time, you lightly toss
Your hair as the long shadows grow
And night begins to fall. Although Your laughter calls across
The dark waters,
25 A ghastly sun
Watches in pale dismay.
Oh, you may laugh, being as you are Fair sisters of the evening star,
But wait—if not today
30 A day will dawn
When the bad dreams
You scarcely know will scatter
The punctual increment of your lives.

The road resumes, and where it curves,
35 A mile from where you chatter,
Somebody screams.

8. Girls on a Bridge, title of a painting in Expressionist style
by the Norwegian artist Edvard Munch (1863—1944), whose best-known painting is The Scream (lines 36 and 40).

STARFISH / 1 9 2 5

The girls are dead,
The house and pond have gone.
Steel bridge and concrete highway gleam
40 And sing in the arctic dark; the scream
We started at is grown
The serenade
Of an insane
And monstrous age. We live
45 These days as on a different planet,
One without trout or midges on it,
Under the arc-lights of
A mineral heaven;
And we have come,
50 Despite ourselves, to no
True notion of our proper work,
But wander in the dazzling dark
Amid the drifting snow
Dreaming of some 55 Lost evening when
Our grandmothers, if grand Mothers we had, stood at the edge

Of womanhood on a country bridge

And gazed at a still pond

60 And knew no pain.

1 9 8 2

E R I C O R M S B Y

b. 1941

Starfish

The stellar sea crawler, maw

Concealed beneath, with offerings of Prismed crimson now darkened, now like

The smile of slag,⁰ a thing made rosy volcanic rock

5 As poured ingots, or suddenly dimmed—

I appreciate the studious labour

Of your rednesses, the scholarly fragrance

Of your sex. To mirror tidal drifts

The light ripples across or to enhance darkness

io With palpable tinctures, dense as salt.

1 9 2 6 / E R I C O R M S B Y

You crumple like a puppet's fist

Or erect, bristling, your tender luring barbs.

Casual abandon, like a dropped fawn glove.

Tensile symmetries, like a hawk's claw.

15 You clutch the seafloor.

You taste what has fallen.

1 9 9 0

Skunk Cabbage

The skunk cabbage with its smug and opulent smell

Opens in plump magnificence near the edge

Of garbage-strewn canals, or you see its shape
Arise near the wet roots of the marsh.
5 How vigilant it looks with its glossy leaves
Parted to disclose its bruised insides,
That troubled purple of its blossom!
It always seemed so squat, dumpy and rank,
A noxious efflorescence of the swamp,
io Until I got down low and looked at it.
Now I search out its blunt totemic shape
And bow when I see its outer stalks
Drawn aside, like the frilly curtains of the ark,
For the foul magenta of its gorgeous heart.

1 9 9 0

Origins

I wanted to go down to where the roots begin,
to find words nested in their almond-skin,
the seed-curls of their birth, their sprigs of origin.
At night the dead set words upon my tongue,
5 drew back their coverings, laid bare the long sheaths of their roots where the earth still clung.
I wanted to draw their words from the mouths of the dead,
I wanted to strip the coins from their heavy eyes,
I wanted the rosy breath to gladden their skins.
io At night the dead remembered their origins,
at night they nested in the curve of my eyes,
and I tasted the savour of their seed-bed.

1 9 9 3

1 9 9 7

1 9 2 7

D O U G L A S D U N N

b. 1942

A Removal from Terry Street¹

On a squeaking cart, they push the usual stuff,
A mattress, bed ends, cups, carpets, chairs,
Four paperback westerns. Two whistling youths
In surplus U.S. Army battle-jackets
5 Remove their sister's goods. Her husband Follows, carrying on his shoulders the son Whose mischief we are glad to see removed,
And pushing, of all things, a lawnmower.
There is no grass in Terry Street. The worms
io Come up cracks in concrete yards in moonlight.
That man, I wish him well. I wish him grass.

1 9 6 9

In the Grounds

Yorkshire, 1975

Barbarians in a garden, softness does Approve of who we are as it does those Who when we speak proclaim us barbarous
And say we have no business with the rose.
5 Gently the grass waves, and its green applauds
The justice, not of progress, but of growth.
We walk as people on the paths of gods
And in our minds we harmonize them both.
Disclosures of these grounds—a river view,
io Two Irish wolfhounds watching on a lawn;

A spinster with her sewing stares at you,
And begs you leave her pretty world alone.
More books than prejudice in our young minds ...
We could not harm her, would not, would prefer 15 A noise less military and more kind
Than our boots make across her wide parterre.²
We are intransigent, at odds with them.
They see our rabble-dreams as new contempt
For England's art of house and leaf. Condemn 20 Our clumsiness—you do not know, how, unkempt

1. In Hull, England.

2. French landscaping term for an arrangement of flower beds.

1 9 2 8 / D O U G L A S D U N N

And coarse, we hurt a truth with truth, still true
To who we are: barbarians, whose chins
Drool with ale-stinking hair, whose horses chew
Turf owned by watching, frightened mandarins,⁰ bureaucrats
25 Their surly nephews lounging at each gate,
Afraid we'll steal their family's treasured things,
Then hawk them—pictures, furniture and plate—
Round the encampments of our saddle-kings.

1 9 7 9

From Elegies

Thirteen Steps and the Thirteenth of March

She sat up on her pillows, receiving guests.
I brought them tea or sherry like a butler,
Up and down the thirteen steps from my pantry.
I was running out of vases.

5 More than one visitor came down, and said,
“Her room’s so cheerful. She isn’t afraid.”
Even the cyclamen and lilies were listening,
Their trusty tributes holding off the real.
Doorbells, shopping, laundry, post and callers,
10 And twenty-six steps up the stairs
From door to bed, two times thirteen’s
Unlucky numeral in my high house.
And visitors, three, four, five times a day;
My wept exhaustions over plates and cups
15 Drained my self-pity in these days of grief
Before the grief. Flowers, and no vases left.
Tea, sherry, biscuits, cake, and whisky for the weak ...
She fought death with an understated mischief—
“I suppose I’ll have to make an effort”—
20 Turning down painkillers for lucidity.
Some sat downstairs with a hankie
Nursing a little cry before going up to her.
They came back with their fears of dying amended.
“Her room’s so cheerful. She isn’t afraid.”
25 Each day was duty round the clock.
Our kissing conversations kept me going,
Those times together with the phone switched off,
Remembering our lives by candlelight.
NAVIDAD, S T . N I C H O L A S A V E . / 1 9 2 9
John and Stuart brought their pictures round,
30 A travelling exhibition. Dying,
She thumbed down some, nodded at others,

An artist and curator to the last,
Honesty at all costs. She drew up lists,
Bequests, gave things away. It tore my heart out.
35 Her friends assisted at this tidying
In a conspiracy of women.
At night, I lay beside her in the unique hours.
There were mysteries in candle-shadows,
Birds, aeroplanes, the rabbits of our fingers,
40 The lovely, erotic flame of the candlelight.
Sad? Yes. But it was beautiful also.
There was a stillness in the world. Time was out Walking his dog by the low walls and privet.0 hedge
There was anonymity in words and music.
45 She wanted me to wear her wedding ring.
It wouldn't fit even my little finger.
It jammed on the knuckle. I knew why.
Her fingers dwindled and her rings slipped off.
After the funeral, I had them to tea and sherry
50 At the Newland Park. They said it was thoughtful.
I thought it was ironic—one last time—
A mad reprisal for their loyalty.

1 9 8 5

A L F R E D C O R N

b. 1943

Navidad, St. Nicholas Ave.1

An infant quirk of a pine
with aerosol frosting, spangles, and bulbs that blink red-blue-gold.

Manolito, three days home, they've put 5 in his picket-fence crib, paper diaper cinched tight,
eyes squinted in a mask
that looks Chinese or in pain.

1. Street in the Harlem section of Manhattan; here, the name alludes to St. Nick, or Santa Claus. Navidad: nativity (Spanish).

1 9 3 0 / A L F R E D C O R N

Asleep. Trailing sighs and smiles
10 they tiptoe out to where the Magnavox screen extolls some *producto*²
whose logo's a crystal star.

She glances up at the window brimming with sodium light.

15 And, mira, snow begins to fall like manna³ in the warming air as from down the avenue a taxi beeps a brass triad. Then an offended wail summons mother, father, 20 *todo el mundo*⁴ back to his side.

1 9 8 8

A Conch from Sicily⁵

The

Attic⁶ once

My nursery is like

An early language no longer

5 Spoken, a babble too small ever

Again to house adults. Yet the spiral

Stair remains, Maestro Fibonacci⁷ the builder,
Who made it pirouette downward like a clockwork
Calla.⁰ In the Southern Hemisphere it would run lily
io Counterclockwise, yet I as well as the conchs
Down under have a silhouette like South America, and we all smooth the path
That clothes our foot with orange Coral enamel paneling and floor,
15 As far down as this loosely
Furled calyx, one concave Rondo's⁸ calm finale—or,
If not the last, then
The next-to-last 20 Summing up, a Single word:
*Il tempo*⁹—Weather,
Speed,
25 Time.

1 9 9 7

2. Product (Spanish). Magnavox: brand of television.
the upper floor of a house.
sion.

7. Leonardo Pisano Fibonacci (1170—1250), Ital-

3. The food that miraculously fell to the Israelites ian mathematician, known for discovering a in the wilderness (Exodus 16.14—36). Mira: look sequence of numbers that can be used in describ-(Spanish).

ing many forms in nature, including the spiral of a

4. All the world, everybody (Spanish).

seashell.

5. Island off the southern coast of Italy.

8. Musical form with a recurring theme.

6. Dialect of ancient Athens, or Attica, as well as

9. Weather, speed, time (Italian).

1 9 3 1

L O U I S E G L U C K

b. 1943

Gretel in Darkness

This is the world we wanted.

All who would have seen us dead are dead. I hear the witch's cry break in the moonlight through a sheet

5 of sugar: God rewards.

Her tongue shrivels into gas... .

Now, far from women's arms and memory of women, in our father's hut

we sleep, are never hungry,

io Why do I not forget?

My father bars the door, bars harm

from this house, and it is years.

No one remembers. Even you, my brother,

summer afternoons you look at me as though

15 you meant to leave,

as though it never happened.

But I killed for you. I see armed firs,
the spires of that gleaming kiln—
Nights I turn to you to hold me 20 but you are not there.
Am I alone? Spies
hiss in the stillness, Hansel,
we are there still and it is real, real,
that black forest and the fire in earnest.

1 9 7 5

The Garden

I couldn't do it again,
I can hardly bear to look at it—
in the garden, in light rain
the young couple planting 5 a row of peas, as though no one has ever done this before, the great difficulties have never as yet been faced and solved—
They cannot see themselves,
io in fresh dirt, starting up
1. As in the fairy tale of Hansel and Gretel.

1 9 3 2 / L O U I S E G L C C K

without perspective,
the hills behind them pale green, clouded with flowers—
She wants to stop;
he wants to get to the end,
15 to stay with the thing—
Look at her, touching his cheek

to make a truce, her fingers
cool with spring rain;
in thin grass, bursts of purple crocus—20 even here, even at the beginning of love, her hand leaving his face makes an image of departure and they think they are free to overlook
25 this sadness.

1 9 9 2

Vita Nova²

You saved me, you should remember me.

The spring of the year; young men buying tickets for the ferryboats.

Laughter, because the air is full of apple blossoms.

When I woke up, I realized I was capable of the same feeling.

5 I remember sounds like that from my childhood,
laughter for no cause, simply because the world is beautiful, something like that.

Lugano.³ Tables under the apple trees.

Deckhands raising and lowering the colored flags, io And by the lake's edge, a young man throws his hat into the

water;

perhaps his sweetheart has accepted him.

Crucial

sounds or gestures like a track laid down before the larger themes

15 and then unused, buried.

Islands in the distance. My mother

holding out a plate of little cakes—

2. New life (Latin). Glick takes for her book Vita 3. Lake on the border between Switzerland and Nova, and for two poems within it, the title of Italy.

Dante's first major poem (ca. 1292).

LETTERS & OTHER WORLDS / 1933

as far as I remember, changed

in no detail, the moment

20 vivid, intact, having never been exposed to light, so that I woke elated, at my age hungry for life, utterly confident—

By the tables, patches of new grass, the pale green pieced into the dark existing ground.

25 Surely spring has been returned to me, this time

not as a lover but a messenger of death, yet

it is still spring, it is still meant tenderly.

1999

MICHAEL ONDAATJE

b. 1943

Letters & Other Worlds

“for there was no more darkness for him and, no doubt like Adam before the fall, he could see in the dark”

My father's body was a globe of fear

His body was a town we never knew

He hid that he had been where we were going

His letters were a room he seldom lived in

5 In them the logic of his love could grow

My father's body was a town of fear

He was the only witness to its fear dance
He hid where he had been that we might lose him
His letters were a room his body scared

10

He came to death with his mind drowning.

On the last day he enclosed himself in a room with two bottles of gin, later fell the length of his body
so that brain blood moved

15

to new compartments
that never knew the wash of fluid and he died in minutes of a new equilibrium.

His early life was a terrifying comedy and my mother divorced him again and again.

20 He would rush into tunnels magnetized
by the white eye of trains and once, gaining instant fame, managed to stop a Perahara¹ in Ceylon

1. Or Anuradhapura Perahera, an annual religious festival of Sri Lanka (formerly Ceylon) commemorated 1934 / MICHAEL LONDAATJE

—the whole procession of elephants dancers

25 local dignitaries—by falling dead drunk onto the street.

As a semi-official, and semi-white at that,
the act was seen as a crucial turning point in the Home Rule Movement
30 and led to Ceylon's independence in 1948.

(My mother had done her share too—her driving so bad
she was stoned by villagers
whenever her car was recognized) 35 For 14 years of marriage each of them claimed he or she was the injured party.
Once on the Colombo² docks saying goodbye to a recently married couple 40 my father, jealous
at my mother's articulate emotion, dove into the waters of the harbour
and swam after the ship waving farewell.
My mother pretending no affiliation
45 mingled with the crowd back to the hotel.
Once again he made the papers though this time my mother with a note to the editor corrected the report—saying he was drunk
50 rather than broken hearted at the parting of friends.
The married couple received both editions of The Ceylon Times when their ship reached Aden.³
And then in his last years
he was the silent drinker, 55 the man who once a week disappeared into his room with bottles and stayed there until he was drunk and until he was sober.

There speeches, head dreams, apologies,
60 the gentle letters, were composed.

With the clarity of architects
he would write of the row of blue flowers his new wife had planted,
the plans for electricity in the house,
65 how my half-sister fell near a snake and it had awakened and not touched her.

orating the birth of Vishnu, one of the three pri- shrines and relics,

mary Hindu gods. On its fifth and final day, the 2. Port city, capital of Sri Lanka, festival culminates in nocturnal processions such 3. City and port in South Yemen, as that described here, the elephants bearing

H O U S E O N A R E D C L I F F / 1 9 3 5

Letters in a clear hand of the most complete empathy his heart widening and widening and widening to all manner of change in his children and friends 70 while he himself edged into the terrible acute hatred of his own privacy
till he balanced and fell the length of his body 75 the blood entering the empty reservoir of bones
the blood searching in his head without metaphor.

1 9 7 9

Driving with Dominic in the Southern Province

We See Hints of the Circus

The tattered Hungarian tent

A man washing a trumpet

at a roadside tap

Children in the trees,

5 one falling

into the grip of another

2000

House on a Red Cliff

There is no mirror in Mirissa⁴

the sea is in the leaves

the waves are in the palms

old languages in the arms

5 of the casuarina pine⁵

parampara parampara,⁶ from generation to generation

The flamboyant⁷ a grandfather planted

io having lived through fire

lifts itself over the roof

4. Town on the southern coast of Sri Lanka. the Hindu method of transmitting knowledge 5. Indigenous tree of Sri Lanka with jointed, tree- through a guru's answering a disciple's questions, less branches. 7. Plant with flame-colored flowers.

6. One following the other, succession (Sanskrit);

1 9 3 6 / M I C H A E L P A L M E R

u n f r a m e d

the h o u s e an open net

where the night concentrates

15 on a breath

on a step a thing or gesture
we cannot be attached to
T h e long, the short, the difficult minutes 20 of night
where even in darkness
there is no horizon without a tree
j u s t a boat's light in the leaves
Last footstep before f o r m l e s s n e s s 2000

M I C H A E L P A L M E R

b. 1943

Of this cloth doll which¹

(Sarah's fourth)

Of this cloth doll which

says Oh yes

and then its f a c e c h a n g e s

to O n c e upon a time

5 to W o o d e n but alive to Like the real

to L a t e into the night to There lived an old

to R u n n i n g across ice

io (but shadow s followed)

to Finally it sneezed

to T h e boat tipped over to Flesh and blood

to O u t of the whale's m o u t h

1 9 8 4

1. The fractured sentence of this poem borrows phrases from fairy tales, and especially from the children's story The Adventures of Pinocchio, by the Italian writer Carlo Collodi (1826—1890).

I Do NOT / 1937

I Do Not

“Je ne sais pas l’anglais.”

GEORGESHUGNET 2

I do not know English

I do not know English, and therefore I can have nothing to say about this latest war, flowering through a night scope in the evening

sky.

I do not know English and therefore, when hungry, can do no more than point repeatedly to my mouth.

Yet such a gesture might be taken to mean any number of things.

5 I do not know English and therefore cannot seek the requisite permissions, as outlined in the recent protocol.

Such as: May I utter a term of endearment; may I now proceed to put my arm or arms around you and apply gentle pressure; may I now kiss you directly on the lips; now on the left tendon of the neck;

now on the nipple of each breast? And so on.

Would not in any case be able to decipher her response.

I do not know English. Therefore I have no way of communicating that I prefer this painting of nothing to that one of something.

No way to speak of my past or hopes for the future, of my glasses mysteriously shattered in Rotterdam,³ the statue of Eros and Psyche⁴ in the S u m m e r Garden, the sudden, shrill cries in the streets of Sao Paulo,⁵ a watch abruptly stopping in Paris.

10 No way to tell the joke about the rabbi and the parrot, the bartender and the duck, the Pope and the porte-cochere.⁶

You will understand why you have received no letters from me and

why yours have gone unread.

Those, that is, where you write so precisely of the confluence of the visible universe with the invisible, and of the lens of dark matter.⁷

No way to differentiate the hall of mirrors from the meadow of mullein, the beetlebung from the pinkletink, the kettlehole from the ventifact.

2. I do not know English (French). Hugnet love and beauty, sent Eros, the god of erotic love, (1906—1974), French poet, essayist, and pub- to make her fall in love with an ugly creature; lisher. instead, Eros became her lover.

3. Dutch city bombed by the Allies during World 5. Capital city of Brazil.

War II. 6. Gateway for carriages, leading into a courtyard.

4. Figures from Greek mythology: Psyche was so beautiful that even the envious Aphrodite, the goddess of love, believed it accounted for gravitational effects.

1938 / EAVANBOLAND

Nor can I utter the words science, seance, silence, language
and languish.

15 Nor can I tell of the arboreal shadows elongated and shifting along the wall as the sun's angle approaches maximum hibernal declination.

Cannot tell of the almond-eyed face that peered from the well,
the

ship of stone whose sail was a tongue.

And I cannot report that this rose has twenty-four petals, one slightly cancred.

Cannot tell how I dismantled it myself at this desk.

Cannot ask the name of this rose.⁸

20 I cannot repeat the words of the Recording Angel⁹ or those
of the

Angle of Erasure.

Can speak neither of things abounding¹ nor of things disappearing.

Still the games continue. A muscular man waves a stick at a ball. A woman in white, arms outstretched, carves a true circle in space.

A village turns to dust in the chalk hills.

Because I do not know English I have been variously called Mr.

Twisted, The One Undone, The Nonrespondent, The Truly
Lost

Boy, and Laughed-At-By-Horses.

The war is declared ended, almost before it has begun.

25 They have named it The Ultimate Combat between Nearness and Distance.

I do not know English.

2000

EAVAN B O L A N D

b. 1944

That the Science of Cartography¹ Is Limited

—and not simply by the fact that this shading of forest cannot show the fragrance of balsam,

8. Allusion to The Name of the Rose, by the Italian eousness has touched our souls, it will leave novelist Umberto Eco (b. 1932).

nothing frozen, nothing hard, nothing burning,

9. In Christian doctrine, the angel receiving the nothing unfruitful. It will bring out all things ripe, soul in heaven.

all things sweet, all things abounding with much

1. Cf. St. John Chrysostom, homily 4 on 1 Thes-pleasure.”

salonians 3.5—8: “If the fire of the Sun of Right-

1. Mapmaking.

T H E D O L L S M U S E U M I N D U B L I N / 1 9 3 9

the gloom of cypresses

is what I wish to prove.

5 When you and I were first in love we drove to the borders of Connacht²
and entered a wood there.
Look down you said: this was once a famine road.
I looked down at ivy and the scutch grass 10 rough-cast stone had disappeared into as you told me in the second winter of their ordeal, in 1847, when the crop³ had failed twice, Relief Committees gave 15 the starving Irish such roads to build.
Where they died, there the road ended and ends still and when I take down
the map of this island, it is never so I can say here is 20 the masterful, the apt rendering of the spherical as flat, nor an ingenious design which persuades a curve into a plane,
but to tell myself again that 25 the line which says woodland and cries hunger and gives out among sweet pine and cypress, and finds no horizon
will not be there.

1994

The Dolls Museum in Dublin

The wounds are terrible. The paint is old.

The cracks along the lips and on the cheeks cannot be fixed. The cotton lawn⁴ is soiled.

The arms are ivory dissolved to wax.

5 Recall the Quadrille. Hum the waltz.

Promenade on the yacht-club terraces.

Put back the lamps in their copper holders,
the carriage wheels on the cobbled quays.

2. Western province of Ireland. nineteenth century.

3. Of potatoes, staple diet of Irish peasants in the 4. Usually fine linen, but also, as here, fine cotton.

1940 / E A V A N B O L A N D

And recreate Easter in Dublin.⁵

10 Booted officers. Their mistresses.

Sunlight criss-crossing College Green.

Steam hissing from the flanks of horses.

Here they are. Cradled and cleaned, held close in the arms of their owners.

15 Their cold hands clasped by warm hands,
their faces memorized like perfect manners.

The altars are mannerly with linen.

The lilies are whiter than surplices.⁶

The candles are burning and warning:

20 Rejoice, they whisper. After sacrifice.

Horse-chestnuts hold up their candles.

The Green is vivid with parasols.

Sunlight is pastel and windless.

The bar of the Shelbourne⁷ is full.

Laughter and gossip on the terraces.

Rumour and alarm at the barracks.

The Empire is summoning its officers.
The carriages are turning: they are turning back.
Past children walking with governesses,
Looking down, cossetting⁰ their dolls, pampering
then looking up as the carriage passes,
the shadow chilling them. Twilight falls.
It is twilight in the dolls' museum. Shadows remain on the parchment-coloured waists, are bruises on the stitched cotton clothes,
are hidden in the dimples on the wrists.
The eyes are wide. They cannot address the helplessness which has lingered in the airless peace of each glass case:
to have survived. To have been stronger than a moment. To be the hostages ignorance takes from time and ornament from destiny. Both.
To be the present of the past. To infer the difference with a terrible stare. But not feel it. And not know it.

1 9 9 4

5. What became known as the "Easter Rising" General Post Office. See W. B. Yeats, "Easter began on Easter Monday, 1916, when fifteen hun-

1916" (p. 1194).

dred Irish Nationalists seized key points in Dublin

6. White linen vestments worn over cassocks.

and an Irish Republic was proclaimed from the 7. Large Dublin hotel.

THE POMEGRANATE / 1 9 4 1

The Pomegranate

The only legend I have ever loved is the story of a daughter lost in hell.

And found and rescued there.

Love and blackmail are the gist of it.

5 Ceres and Persephone the names.⁸

And the best thing about the legend is

I can enter it anywhere. And have.

As a child in exile in a city of fogs and strange consonants,

10 I read it first and at first I was an exiled child in the crackling dusk of the underworld, the stars blighted. Later

I walked out in a summer twilight

searching for my daughter at bed-time.

15 When she came running I was ready to make any bargain to keep her.

I carried her back past whitebeams⁰ trees and wasps and honey-scented buddleias.⁰ bushes

But I was Ceres then and I knew

20 winter was in store for every leaf

on every tree on that road.

Was it inescapable for each one we passed.

And for me.

It is winter

25 and the stars are hidden.

I climb the stairs and stand where I can see my child asleep beside her teen magazines,

her can of Coke, her plate of uncut fruit.
The pomegranate! How did I forget it?
BO She could have come home and been safe and ended the story and all our heart-broken searching but she reached out a hand and plucked a pomegranate.
She put out her hand and pulled down 35 the French sound for apple and the noise of stone and the proof that even in the place of death, at the heart of legend, in the midst of rocks full of unshed tears 40 ready to be diamonds by the time the story was told, a child can be hungry. I could warn her. There is still a chance.
The rain is cold. The road is flint-coloured.
The suburb has cars and cable television.
45 The veiled stars are above ground.

8. In Roman mythology, Ceres (Greek Demeter) was the goddess of agriculture. Her daughter, Proserpina (Greek Persephone), was carried off to the underworld (when Earth mourns) and six months of each year in the underworld (when Earth rejoices and fertility returns).

Ceres found her, but by then Proserpina had eaten

1942 / CRAIGRAINE

It is another world. But what else can a mother give her daughter but such beautiful rifts in time?
If I defer the grief I will diminish the gift.
50 The legend will be hers as well as mine.
S h e will enter it. As I have.
S h e will wake up. She will hold the papery flushed skin in her hand.
And to her lips. I will say nothing.

1 9 9 4

C R A I G R A I N E

b. 1944

The Onion, Memory

Divorced, but friends again at last,
we walk old ground together
in bright blue uncomplicated weather.
We laugh and pause
5 to hack to bits these tiny dinosaurs, prehistoric, crenellated,0 cast *having battlements

between the tractor ruts in mud.

On the green, a junior Douglas Fairbanks,¹ swinging on the chestnut's unlit chandelier,

io defies the corporation spears²—

a single rank⁰ around the bole,⁰ row / tree trunk

rusty with blood.

Green, tacky phalluses curve up, romance.

A gust—the old flag blazes on its pole.

15 In the village bakery

the pasty babies pass

from milky slump to crusty cadaver,

from crib to coffin—without palaver.⁰ idle talk

All's over in a flash,

20 too silently ...

Tonight the arum lilies fold

back napkins monogrammed in gold,

crisp and laundered fresh.

Those crustaceous gladioli, on the sly,

25 reveal the crimson flower-flesh

inside their emerald armour plate.

1. American actor (1883—1939) famous for his 2. I.e., spiked fence put up by the town corpora-swashbuckling daredevil exploits in movies of the tion.

1920s and 1930s.

A M A R T I A N S E N D S A P O S T C A R D H O M E / 1
9 4 3

T h e uncooked herrings blink a tearful eye.

T h e candles palpitate.

T h e Oistrakhs bow a n d scrape

BO in evening dress, on Emi-tape.³

Outside the trees are bending over backwards to please the wind : the shining sword grass flattens on its belly.

T h e white-thorn's frillies⁴ offer no resistance.

35 In the fridge, a heart-shaped jelly strives to keep a s e n s e of balance.

I slice up the onions. You sew up a dress.

This is the quiet e c h o — f l e s h —
white m u s c l e on white muscle, 40 intimately folded skin,
finished with a satin rustle.

O n e button only to undo, sewn up with shabby thread.

It is the onion, memory,
that makes me cry.

45 B e c a u s e there's everything and nothing to be said,
the clock with hands held up before its face, s t a m m e r s softly on, trying to complete a p h r a s e —
while we, together and apart,
repeat unfinished gestures got by heart.

50 And afterwards, I blunder with the washing on the line
—

headless torsos, faceless lovers, friends of mine.

1 9 7 8

A Martian Sends a Postcard Home

Caxtons⁵ are mechanical birds with m a n y wings
a n d s o m e are treasured for their m a r k i n g s —
they c a u s e the eyes to melt

or the body to shriek without pain.

5 I have never seen one fly, but sometimes they perch on the hand.

Mist is when the sky is tired of flight and rests its soft m a c h i n e on ground:

3. A popular British brand of audiotape. David 1491) was the first to print in English; in the next Oistrakh (1908-1974) and his son Igor (b. 1931), couplet, the Martian observes the effects of books celebrated Russian violinists.

on their readers, but does not know the words for
4. British colloquialism for frilled undergarments.
cry or laugh.

5. I.e., books, which William Caxton (ca. 1422-
1944 / C R A I G R A I N E

then the world is dim and bookish

10 like engravings under tissue paper.

Rain is when the earth is television.

It has the property of making colours darker.

Model T6 is a room with the lock inside—

a key is turned to free the world

15 for movement, so quick there is a film to watch for anything missed.

But time is tied to the wrist

or kept in a box, ticking with impatience.

In homes, a haunted apparatus sleeps,

20 that snores when you pick it up.

If the ghost cries, they carry it to their lips and soothe it to sleep with sounds. And yet, they wake it up deliberately, by tickling with a finger.

25 Only the young are allowed to suffer openly. Adults go to a punishment room with water but nothing to eat.
They lock the door and suffer the noises alone. No one is exempt
BO and everyone's pain has a different smell.
At night, when all the colours die,
they hide in pairs
and read about themselves—
in colour, with their eyelids shut.

1 9 7 9

For Hans Keller⁷

There will be more of this,
more of this than I had realised of finding our friends

6. I.e., automobiles; the "key" (next line) is the 7. English (Austrian-born) musicologist (1919—ignition key. 1985).

F O R H A N S K E L L E R / 1 9 4 5

irrevocably changed,
5 skewed like G u y F a w k e s 8 in a chair
b e c a u s e all the m u s c l e s have gone and talking as if nothing has h a p p e n e d when nothing has h a p p e n e d .
There will be m o r e of this,

10 more of c o m i n g to crematoria to learn that a life can c o m e to an end
like a Haydn quartet,⁹ without a repeat.
T h e r e will be too m u c h and then more of this,
of hearing instruments negotiate with silence, 15 S t a t i n g the c a s e with gravitas^o moral earnestness and anxious insect antennae.
We stand for the coffin at a word from the usher.
T h e speaker's hand feels for his pocket,
as his nerves die down
20 and the nerves take over.
That hand is alive and my feet are alive,
feeling the pinch of expensive new shoes,
and I am moved by being moved
as the coffin crawls to the fire.
25 H a n s , there is still more of this,
more of undertakers locking the hearse and seeing the plastic safety bolts slide, like suppositories, slowly away,
as we re-enter the sunshine alive
BO with eyes to see by C a m d e n Lock¹
a bedstead, sleeping rough,
like dead beloved bodies everywhere.

1 9 9 6

8. Conspirator (15 70-1606) in the so-called Gun-across the U.K.

powder Plot to blow up the British Parliament.

9. Composition for four instrumentalists by the

When this failed, in 1605, Fawkes was arrested, Austrian composer Joseph Haydn (1732—1809).
tortured, and executed. Annually on November 5 1. London market.

ever since, his effigy has been burnt on bonfires 1946

KIT WRIGHT

b. 1944

Mantles¹

White as the sacrament, in my grandmother's house the mantles

Were taught to flower in the dusk. On their soft weighbridge⁰ platform They balanced the light, on their milkmaid's yoke they carried it

Over mahogany mountains,

5 Till the room was breathing its secret to the ghost of the wind in the bay.

That radiant patience made a lake of the stern piano

Where she sang The Isle of Capri.² Such

Beauty in the frail old voice, so long a river of widowhood

The light went running with through the banks of shadow

...

io It caught the little pointed breasts of brass

Nubian goddesses on the mantelpiece. It put in the shade

A mysterious cavern under the table

Where African butterflies, in the pinned tomb of their wooden boxes,

Spread their gorgeous wings that reeked of camphor.

15 In my grandmother's house there existed a borrowed shrimping net

And a maiden aunt, your best friend ever.

A peacock feather. An ostrich egg. A time

When the breathing of time was audible in gas mantles,

Conspiratorial and benign.

2000

A Love Song of Tooting³

In Tooting, the tomato

Hangs heavy on the vine

The blackbird's *ohhligato*⁴

Fulfils its liquid line

5 On summertime allotments⁰ vegetable plots

By lenient design.

Nine beanrows will I have there,⁵

Not ten, not eight, but nine,

And I shall build a pav^o there, pavillion, hut

1. Incandescent cloth hoods of gaslight jets.

ally melodic line accompanying a solo.

2. Hit song written in 1934.

5. Cf. W. B. Yeats, "The Lake Isle of Innisfree,"

3. District of south London.

lines 2-3 (p. 1190).

4. In a musical composition, a necessary, gener-

BLOODY MEN / 1 9 4 7

10 Or shed of weathered pine,

And all shall be contentment

D o w n by the railway line.

My shed, beside a toolbox,
A coolbox⁰ shall confine cooler
15 And we from out the coolbox
Shall q u a f f the rare white wine.
T h e dove shall plight its truelove
And I shall sing to mine.

2000

My Version

I hear that since you left me
Things go from bad to worse,
T h a t the G o o d Lord, quite rightly,
H a s set a signal c u r s e
5 On you, your h o u s e and lover.
(I learn, moreover, he Proves twice as screwed-up, selfish
And sodden, dear, as me.)
They say your days are tasteless, io Flattened, disjointed, thinned.
Across the waste my absence,
Love's skeleton, has grinned.
Perfect. I trust my sources
Of information are sound?
15 Or is it just s o m e worthless r u m o u r
I've been spreading round?

2000

W E N D Y C O P E

b. 1945

Bloody Men

Bloody m e n are like bloody b u s e s —
You wait for about a year
And as soon as one approaches your stop
T w o or three others appear.

1 9 4 8 / WENDY COPE

5 You look at them flashing their indicators,
O f f e r i n g you a ride.

You're trying to read the destinations,
You haven't m u c h time to decide.

If you m a k e a mistake, there is no turning back.

10 J u m p off, and you'll stand there and gaze

While the cars and the taxis and lorries⁰ go by trucks

And the minutes, the hours, the days.

1 9 9 2

Flowers

S o m e m e n never think of it.

You did. You'd c o m e along

And say you'd nearly brought me flowers

But s o m e t h i n g had gone wrong.

5 T h e s h o p was closed. Or you had d o u b t s —

T h e sort that minds like ours

D r e a m up incessantly. You thought

I might not want your flowers.

It m a d e me smile and hug you then,

io N o w I can only smile.

But, look, the flowers you nearly brought

Have lasted all this while.

1 9 9 2

Valentine

My heart has m a d e its mind up

And I'm afraid it's you.

Whatever you've got lined up,

My heart has m a d e its mind up

5 And if you can't be signed up

This year, next year will do.

My heart has m a d e its mind up

And I'm afraid it's you.

1 9 9 2

F A C I N G I T / 1 9 4 9

Serious Concerns

“She is witty and unpretentious, which is both her strength and her limitation.”

(ROBERT O'BRIEN in the Spectator, ' 25.10.86)

I'm going to try a n d overcome my limitation—

Away with sloth!

N o w should I work at being less witty? Or m o r e pretentious?

Or both?

“They (Roger M c G o u g h and Brian Patten)² have something in common with her, in that they all write to amuse.”

(IBID.)

Write to a m u s e ? W h a t an appalling suggestion!

I write to m a k e people anxious and miserable and to worsen their indigestion.

1 9 9 2

Y U S E F K O M U N Y A K A A

b. 1947

Facing It

My black face fades,
hiding inside the black granite.

I said I wouldn't dammit: No tears.

5 I'm stone. I'm flesh.

My clouded reflection eyes me like a bird of prey, the profile of night slanted against morning. I turn this way — the stone lets me go.

io I turn that way—I'm inside
the Vietnam Veterans Memorial¹ again, depending on the light to make a difference.

I go down the 58,022 names, 15 half-expecting to find my own in letters like smoke.

I touch the name Andrew Johnson;

I see the booby trap's white flash.

Names shimmer on a woman's blouse

20 but when she walks away

1. English magazine, in which O'Brien was writing the late 1960s and early 1970s, about Cope. 1. In Washington, D.C.

2. Two of the so-called Liverpool poets, popular in the names stay on the wall.

1950 / Y U S E F K O M U N Y A K A A

Brushstrokes flash, a red bird's wings cutting across my stare.

The sky. A plane in the sky.

25 A white vet's image floats closer to me, then his pale eyes look through mine. I'm a window.

He's lost his right arm
inside the stone. In the black mirror 30 a woman's trying to erase names:

No, she's brushing a boy's hair.

1 9 8 8

Banking Potatoes

Daddy would drop purple-veined vines

Along rows of dark loam

& I'd march behind him

Like a peg-legged soldier,

5 Pushing down the stick

With a V cut into its tip.

Three weeks before the first frost

I'd follow his horse-drawn plow

That opened up the soil & left

io Sweet potatoes sticky with sap,

Like flesh-colored stones along a riverbed

Or diminished souls beside a mass grave.

They lay all day under the sun's

Invisible weight, & by twilight

15 We'd bury them under pine needles

& then shovel in two feet of dirt.

Nighthawks scalloped the sweaty air,
Their wings spread wide
As plowshares. But soon the wind
20 Knocked on doors & windows
Like a frightened stranger, & by mid-winter we had tunneled
Back into the tomb of straw,
Unable to divide love from hunger.

1 9 9 2

The Smokehouse

In the hickory scent
Among slabs of pork
SUNDAY AFTERNOONS / 1 9 5 1
Glistening with salt,
I played Indian
5 In a headdress of redbird feathers
& brass buttons
O f f my mother's winter coat.

S m o k e w o v e

A thread of fire through meat, into D e c e m b e r 10 & January. T h e dead weight
Of the place h u n g around me,
Strung up with sweetgrass.
T h e hog had been sectioned,
A m a p scored into skin;
15 O p e n e d like love,
F r o m snout to tail,
T h e goodness

No longer true to e a c h bone.

I was a wizard

20 In that hazy world,

& knew I could cut

Slivers of m e a t till my heart

G r e w m o r e h u m a n & flawed.

1 9 9 2

Sunday Afternoons

They'd latch the screendoors

& pull Venetian blinds,

Telling us not to leave the yard.

But we always got lost

5 A m o n g mayhaw0 & crabapple. berry tree

J u i c e spilled from our mouths,

& soon we were drunk & brave

As birds diving through saw" vines. saw palmetto

E a c h nest held three or four

io Speckle d eggs, blue as rage.

W h e r e did we learn to be unkind,

There in the power of holding each egg

While watching dogs in J u n e

D u s t & heat, or when we followed

15 T h e hawk's slow, deliberate arc?

In the yard, we heard cries

F u s e d with gospel on the radio,

L o u d as shattered glass

In a Saturday-night a r g u m e n t

20 About trust & money.

We were born between Oh Yeah
& G o d d a m m i t . I knew life

1 9 5 2 / J A N E S H O R E

Began where I stood in the dark,
Looking out into the light,
25 & that sometimes I could see Everything through nothing.
The backyard trees breathed
Like a man running from himself
As my brothers backed away
30 From the screendoor. I knew
If I held my right hand above my eyes
Like a gambler's visor, I could see How their bedroom door halved
The dresser mirror like a moon
35 Held prisoner in the house.

1 9 9 2

J A N E S H O R E

b. 1947

High Holy Days¹

It was hot. A size too large,
my wool winter suit scratched.
Indian summer flaring up through fall.
The shul's² broken window
5 bled sunlight on the congregation; the Red Sea of the scarlet carpet parted the women from the men.³ Mother next to daughter, father next to son flipped through prayerbooks in unison trying to keep the place. Across the aisle, io my father wore a borrowed prayershawl.

A black yarmulke⁴ covered his bald spot.
The rabbi unlocked the ark⁵ and slid the curtain open. Propped inside, two scrolls of the Torah⁶ dressed like matching dolls, 15 each, a king and a queen. Ribbons hung down from their alabaster satin jackets;

1. Also called Days of Awe, combining Rosh Ha-
4. Skullcap worn, like the “prayershawl” (a garshanah, the Jewish New Year, with Yom Kippur, ment), by Jewish men during services.

the Day of Atonement, ten days later; generally in
5. A large cabinet on the altar, in which the locked September and October.

Torahs are kept; the Jewish equivalent of the ark

2. Synagogue’s (Yiddish).

of the Covenant (Exodus 25.10—22).

3. Men and women are seated separately in

6. The five books of Moses (Genesis, Exodus, Orthodox Jewish congregations. Shore’s “Red Sea” Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy), written in of carpet, acting as a divider, reverses the image in Hebrew. The scrolls, on two wooden rollers, are Exodus 14.21—22, where Moses parts the Red Sea, decorated with sterling-silver crowns and wrapped allowing the nation of Israel to escape pursuit by in fabric; called the “king’s possessions” because of the Egyptians.

their centrality to Jewish religious life.

H I G H H O L Y D A Y S / 1 9 5 3

each one wore two silver crowns.

I wondered, could the ancient kings have been so small? So small,

20 and still have vanquished our enemies?

The cantor's voice rose

like smoke over a sacrificial altar, and lambs,⁷ we rose to echo the refrain.

Each time we sat down

25 my mother rearranged her skirt.

Each time we stood up

my head hurt from the heat, dizzy

from tripping over the alphabet's

black spikes and lyres,

30 stick-figure battalions marching to defend the Second Temple of Jerusalem.⁸

Rocking on their heels, boats anchored in the harbor of devotion,

the temple elders davened Kaddish,⁹ mourning the dead.

35 Our neighbor who owned the laundry down the street covered his left wrist out of habit—

numbers indelible as those

he inked on my father's shirt collars.¹

Once, I saw that whole arm disappear

40 into a tub of soapy shirts,

rainbowed, buoyant as the pastel clouds

in The Illustrated Children's Bible, where God's enormous hand reached down and stopped a heathen army in its tracks.²

45 But on the white-hot desert of the page
I was reading, it was noon,
the marching letters swam, the regiments
wavered in the heat,
a red rain falling on their ranks.

50 I watched it fall one drop at a time.
I felt faint. And breathed out sharply, my nose spattering blood across the page.³

I watched it fall, and thought,
*you are a Chosen One,*⁴

55 the child to lead your tribe.

I looked around the swaying room.

Why would God choose me

7. Under a system instituted by Moses, sins were atoned for by the sacrificing of a lamb (or ox, goat,

2. God's hand is commonly said to bring Israel or bird) as a burnt offering to God. Cantor: reli-deliverance from its enemies (e.g., 1 Samuel 7.13).

gious official who sings or chants prayers.

3. One of the three readings required on the

8. Temple built after the Jews returned from cap-morning of Yom Kippur (Leviticus 16.1—34) details

tivity in Babylon in the sixth century B . C . E . ;

how the priest is to consecrate the ark of the Covdestroyed by the Romans in 70 c.E.

enant by sprinkling the blood of a sacrificed bull

9. Recited prayers in memory of the dead.

and goat on the cover.

1. Reference to the Nazi practice of tattooing reg-

4. Moses underscored the special role of the istration numbers on the left arms of some prisdescendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob as God's oners before they were sent to concentration chosen people.

1 9 5 4 / R I C H A R D K E N N E Y

to lead this congregation of mostly strangers, defend them against the broken windows,

60 the spray-painted writing on the walls?5

Overhead, the red bulb of the everlasting light6

was burning. As if God held me in His fist,

I stumbled down the synagogue stairs

just in time to hear

65 a cyclone of breath twist through the shofar,7 a battle cry so powerful

it blasted city walls to rubble.

And I reeled home through the dazed traffic

of the business day—

70 past shoppers, past my school,

in session as usual,

spat like Jonah from the whale8

back into the Jew-hating world.

1 9 8 7

R I C H A R D K E N N E Y

b. 1948

Aubade

Cold snap. Five o'clock.

Outside, a heavy frost—dark footprints in the brittle

grass; a cat's. Q u i c k coffee,

5 jacket, watch-cap, keys.

Stars blaze across the black gap between horizons;

pickup somehow strikes

its own dim spark—an arc—

io starts. Inside, familiar metal cab, an icebox

full of lightless air, limns green with dash-light. Vinyl seat cracks, cold and brittle;

15 horn ring gleams, and chrome

cuts hard across the wrist

5. Reference to Kristallnacht (Night of the Broken gogues on the High Holy Days. In Joshua 6.20, Glass), November 9 and 10, 1938, when, in a
when the people hear the priests blow a shofar, pogrom throughout Germany and Austria, the they raise such a great shout that the walls of Jer-Nazis committed violent acts such as breaking the icho fall.

windows of Jewish stores.

8. After Jonah had been swallowed by a great fish,
6. A red electric light, symbolic of God's eternal God spoke to it and it spew Jonah out (Jonah 2.10).
presence, is kept burning continuously in the ceil-
The Book of Jonah is read in its entirety on Yom
ing of an Orthodox synagogue.

Kippur.

7. Trumpet made of ram's horn; blown in syna-

A P P L E S O N C H A M P L A I N / 1 9 5 5

where the sleeve falls off the glove, as moon-track curves its cool tiara
somewhere underneath your sleep

20 this very moment, love—

1 9 8 5

Apples on Champlain¹

Oil-slick, slack shocks, ancient engine
smoking like a burning tire,

Augustus' old truck yaws and slews,² its leaf-springs limp these centuries

5 suspending apples, somehow pulls the last hill past the bridge at Isle

La Motte.³ I hear the iron arches groaning. Why not? Whole orchards rattling, empty racks behind us,

io emptied into grain sacks, piled behind us—home ahead, we broach

the mile-long causeway cross from Grande Isle⁴ back. A blue heron's motionless

15 in marsh grass to my right, and pole and icepack at my left—one line,
two lanes, a roostertail of blue exhaust, we part the cooling waters of Champlain.

20 The moon's a pool of mercury. It's zero. Ice soon.
Steaming like a teacup, losing heat, the lake is tossing clouds up all around the truck; and tucked 25 so in its fragile ribcage creel, the cold heart thump accordions to keep alive, and fills, as apples interrupt this landscape's black-on-grey like heartbeats full of blood, 30 strung beads, a life of little suns gone rolling down the press and sump of memory and changing form as thump, horizon groans and ladles light, and the real sun comes up, 35 sudden, weightless, warm.

1 9 8 5

1. Lake Champlain, which divides New York State
3. Vermont town on one of the islands in Lake and Vermont near the Canadian border.
Champlain.
2. Pivots, skids. Yaws: moves side to side, like a
4. Group of four islands in Lake Champlain.

ship in a heavy sea.

1 9 5 6 / R O B Y N S A R A H

Sawmill

Snap tempered tooth chips

sawyer shouts steel in sawlog

lock engine off slack

line carriage back echo

5 like a gunshot ricochets off galvanized tin roof the great

blade ringing like a gong

and every man down low:

look, along the log's sheer face,

10 the bright metal shows itself:

a tap, a nail, a bit of buried wire, some wrong coordinate or undetected intercept exactly there—count the rings—

15 just forty years ago.

1 9 8 5

ROBYN SARAH

b. 1949

Courtney, Mentioned in Passing, Years After

“The most beautiful girl in the college, and she had to go move to Thailand!”

Then

he says her name, and it turns out

5 you knew her, years ago:

you remember her from when she was small,

decked out as Pharaoh's daughter in the Grade Two play, in an amazing dress her mother cut for her, designed io with the help of colour plates
from the school encyclopaedia, Volume E.
You remember how she,
who lived to ride horses, who drew (in ink) horses on every surface of her 15 fuchsia and mauve and turquoise and pink vinyl ring-binders, used to punish herself at recess
when her team lost
at m u r d e r - b a l l 0 — dodge ball

RELICS / 1957

20 h o w

(almost weeping in her fury)

she would cry, " O h —

I hate the horses now!"

For a m o m e n t , then, in Montreal,

25 in F e b r u a r y slush, shifting f r o m foot to foot in the bus-stop line, you think of C o u r t n e y in Thailand, hating the horses.

You see her there,

grown up, but still

30 in her Egyptian sleeves. Her s u d d e n wake of colours.

1998

Relics

Digging a new cellar a c c e s s you unearth
a cat's skull. T h e n 5 a metal stencil, rustencrusted. T h e n
the small bottle
in which ink has dried black io with the ca p rusted on. And other bottles—small vials, of coloured pharmacist's glass, 15 a n d — i n t a c t —
filled with packed dirt,
its s u r f a c e glazed with rainbow p a t i n a —
the wide-lipped, plain 20 round thick-glassed pint of childhood gone,
that h e l d — a g a i n
and a g a i n — f r e s h c r e a m (thick too)
1 9 5 8 / A G H A S H A H I D A L I
25 waiting, capped,
each morning
on the stoop.

1 9 9 8

A G H A S H A H I D A L I

1949-2001

The Dacca Gauzes¹

... for a whole year he sought to accumulate the most exquisite Dacca gauzes.

—OSCAR WILDE / The Picture of Dorian Gray

Those transparent Dacca gauzes

known as woven air, running water, evening dew:

a dead art now, dead over

5 a hundred years. “No one now knows,” my grandmother says,

“what it was to wear or touch that cloth.” She wore it once, an heirloom sari from io her mother’s dowry, proved genuine when it was pulled, all six yards, through a ring.

Years later when it tore,

many handkerchiefs embroidered

15 with gold-thread paisleys were distributed among the nieces and daughters-in-law.

Those too now lost.

In history we learned: the hands

20 of weavers were amputated,

the looms of Bengal silenced,

and the cotton shipped raw by the British to England.

History of little use to her,

1. Thin, finely woven muslins once made in the Bangladeshi city of Dacca.

LENOX HILL / 1959

25 my grandmother just says
how the muslins of today seem so coarse and that only in autumn, should one wake up at dawn to pray, can one 30 feel that same texture again.
One morning, she says, the air was dew-starched: she pulled it absently through her ring.

1987

Lenox Hill²

*(In Lenox Hill Hospital, after surgery, my mother said the sirens sounded like the elephants of Mihiragula when his men drove them off cliffs in the Pir Panjal Range.)

The Hun so loved the cry, one falling elephant's,
he wished to hear it again. At dawn, my mother heard, in her hospital-dream of elephants, sirens wail through Manhattan like elephants
5 forced off Pir Panjal's rock cliffs in Kashmir:
the soldiers, so ruled, had rushed the elephant,
The greatest of all footprints is the elephant's, said the Buddha.⁴ But not lifted from the universe,
those prints vanished forever into the universe,

io though nomads still break news of those elephants
as if it were just yesterday the air spread the dye (“War’s annals will fade into night / Ere their story die”),⁵
the punishing khaki whereby the world sees us die out, mourning you, O massacred elephants!

15 Months later, in Amherst,⁶ she dreamt: She was, with diamonds, being stoned to death. I prayed: If she must die, let it only be some dream. But there were times, Mother, while you slept, that I prayed, “Saints, let her die.”

Not, I swear by you, that I wished you to die

20 but to save you as you were, young, in song in Kashmir, and I, one festival, crowned Krishna⁷ by you, Kashmir listening to my flute. You never let gods die.

2. On the structure of this poem, which is a can-ordered a hundred more to be driven over.

zone, see “Versification,” p. 2046. Ali’s mother was

4. Sanskrit name, meaning Enlightened One, of treated for brain cancer at Lenox Hill Hospital, Siddhartha Gautama (ca. 563-483 B . C . E .) ,
New York City, but died in a hospital in North-founder of Buddhism.

ampton, Massachusetts, on April 27, 1997.

5. Cf. Thomas Hardy, “In Time of ‘The Breaking

3. Himalayan mountains. Mihiragula, the early of Nations,’ ” lines 11-12 (p. 1161).

sixth-century White Hun invader of Kashmir, is

6. Town in Massachusetts, near Northampton.

said to have been so entranced by the scream of

7. Widely revered Indian deity.

one of his elephants falling from a cliff that he

1 9 6 0 / A G H A S H A H I D A L I

Thus I swear, here and now, not to forgive the universe that would let me get used to a universe

25 without you. She, she alone, was the universe

as she earned, like a galaxy, her right not to die,

defying the Merciful of the Universe,

Master of Disease, “in the circle of her traverse”⁸ of drug-bound time. And where was the god of elephants,⁹

30 plump with Fate, when tusk to tusk, the universe, dyed green, became ivory? Then let the universe, like Paradise, be considered a tomb. Mother,

they asked me, So how's the writing? I answered My mother is my poem. What did they expect? For no verse

35 sufficed except the promise, fading, of Kashmir and the cries that reached you from the cliffs of Kashmir

(across fifteen centuries) in the hospital. Kashmir,

she's dying! How her breathing drowns out the universe

as she sleeps in Amherst. Windows open on Kashmir:

40 There, the fragile wood-shrines—so far away—of Kashmir!

0 Destroyer,¹ let her return there, if just to die.

Save the right she gave its earth to cover her, Kashmir has no rights. When the windows close on Kashmir,

1 see the blizzard-fall of ghost-elephants.

45 I hold back—she couldn't bear it—one elephant's story: his return (in a country far from Kashmir)

to the jungle where each year, on the day his mother died, he touches with his trunk the bones of his mother.
“As you sit here by me, you’re just like my mother,”
50 she tells me. I imagine her: a bride in Kashmir, she’s watching, at the Regal,² her first film with Father.
If only I could gather you in my arms, Mother,
I’d save you—now my daughter—from God. The universe opens its ledger. I write: How helpless was God’s mother!
55 Each page is turned to enter grief’s accounts. Mother,
I see a hand. Tell me it’s not God’s. Let it die.
I see it. It’s filling with diamonds. Please let it die.
Are you somewhere alive, somewhere alive, Mother?
Do you hear what I once held back: in one elephant’s 60 cry, by his mother’s bones, the cries of those elephants that stunned the abyss? Ivory blots out the elephants.
I enter this: The Beloved leaves one behind to die.
For compared to my grief for you, what are those of Kashmir, and what (I close the ledger) are the griefs of the universe 65 when I remember you—beyond all accounting—O my mother?

2002

8. Cf. Wallace Stevens, “The Paltry Nude Starts elephant, able to answer prayers and bring good on a Spring Voyage,” lines 15—16: “She touches fortune.

the clouds, where she goes / In the circle of her

1. I.e., Shiva, Hindu god of, among other things, traverse of the sea.”

destruction and the Himalayan mountains.

9. I.e., Ganesh, Hindu god with the head of an

2. Name of a movie theater.

1 9 6 1

J A M E S F E N T O N

b. 1949

Dead Soldiers

When His Excellency Prince Norodom Chantaraingsey¹

Invited me to lunch on the battlefield

I was glad of my white suit for the first time that day.

They lived well, the mad Norodoms, they had style.

5 The brandy and the soda arrived in crates.

Bricks of ice, tied around with raffia,⁰ palm fibers

Dripped from the orderlies' handlebars.

And I remember the dazzling tablecloth

As the A P C s ² fanned out along the road,

io Th e dishes piled high with frogs' legs,

Pregnant turtles, their eggs boiled in the carapace,⁰ shell

Marsh irises in fish sauce

And inflorescence³ of a banana salad.

On every bottle, Napoleon Bonaparte

15 Pleaded for the authenticity of the spirit.⁴

They called the empties Dead Soldiers

And rejoiced to see them pile up at our feet.

Each diner was attended by one of the other ranks⁵

Whirling a table-napkin to keep off the flies.

20 It was like eating between rows of morris dancers⁶—

Only they didn't kick.

On my left sat the prince;
On my right, his drunken aide.
The frogs' thighs leapt into the sad purple face
25 Like fish to the sound of a Chinese flute.
I wanted to talk to the prince. I wish now
I had collared his aide, who was Saloth Sar's brother.
We treated him as the club bore. He was always Boasting of his connections, boasting with a head-shake 30 Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase.
And well might he boast. Saloth Sar, for instance,
Was Pol Pot's⁷ real name. The A P C s
Fired into the sugar palms but met no resistance.

1. Military governor of Cambodia, uncle of King include the waving of scarves, handkerchiefs, and Norodom Sihanouk (b. 1922). Fenton was a war sometimes wooden staves.

correspondent in Cambodia and Vietnam.

7. Kampuchean politician (1925-1998). Part of

2. Armored personnel carriers: trucks for trans-the anti-French resistance in the 1940s, he porting troops.

became leader of the pro-French Communist

3. Arrangement of flowers on an axis; blossoming.

Party, and prime minister in 1976. His government

4. Napoleon brandy (i.e., of high quality).

was overthrown after the Vietnamese invasion of

5. General infantrymen.

1979.

6. Performers of British folk dances, which

1962 / JAMES FENTON

In a diary, I refer to Pol Pot's brother as the Jockey Cap.

35 A few weeks later, I find him "in good form

And very skeptical about Chantaraingsey."

"But one eats well there," I remark.

"So one should," says the Jockey Cap:

"The tiger always eats well,

40 It eats the raw flesh of the deer,

And Chantaraingsey was born in the year of the tiger.

So, did they show you the things they do

With the young refugee girls?"

And he tells me how he will one day give me the

gen . inside information

45 He will tell me how the prince financed the casino

And how the casino brought Lon Nol⁸ to power.

He will tell me this.

He will tell me all these things.

All I must do is drink and listen.

50 In those days, I thought that when the game was up

The prince would be far, far away—

In a limestone faubourg,⁰ on the promenade at Nice,⁹ suburb

Reduced in circumstances but well enough provided for.

In Paris, he would hardly require his private army.

55 The Jockey Cap might suffice for cafe warfare,

And matchboxes for APCs.

But we were always wrong in these predictions.

It was a family war. Whatever happened,

The principals were obliged to attend its issue.
60 A few were cajoled into leaving, a few were expelled,
And there were villains enough, but none of them
Slipped away with the swag.^o i00t
For the prince was fighting Sihanouk,¹ his nephew,
And the Jockey Cap was ranged against his brother
65 Of whom I remember nothing more Than an obscure reputation for virtue.
I have been told that the prince is still fighting
Somewhere in the Cardamoms or the Elephant Mountains.
But I doubt that the Jockey Cap would have survived his good connections.

70 I think the lunches would have done for him—
Either the lunches or the dead soldiers.

1 9 8 1

8. General (1913-1985) and right-wing politi-

9. Resort city on the French Riviera.

cian, who became president of Cambodia in 1970

1. Norodom Sihanouk was made king of Cambo-after his faction overthrew Sihanouk (see note 8

dia by the French in 1941. Overthrown by Lon below). He was overthrown by Pol Pot.

Nol, he was reinstated in 1993.

A G E R M A N R E Q U I E M / 1 9 6 3

A German Requiem²

(To T.J. G.-A.)

For as at a great distance of place, that which wee look at, appears

dimme, and without distinction of the smaller parts; and as Voyces
grow weak, and inarticulate: so also after great distance of
time,
our imagination of the Past is weak; and wee lose (for example) of Cities wee have seen, many particular Streets; and of Actions, many particular circumstances. This decaying sense, when wee would express the thing it self, (I mean fancy it selfe,) wee call Imagination, as I said before: But when we would express the decay, and signifie that the Sense is fading, old, and past, it is called Memory. So that Imagination and Memory are but one thing ...

—HOBBS,³ Leviathan

It is not what they built. It is what they knocked down.
It is not the houses. It is the spaces between the houses.
It is not the streets that exist. It is the streets that no longer exist.
It is not your memories which haunt you.
5 It is not what you have written down.
It is what you have forgotten, what you m u s t forget.
What you must go on forgetting all your life.
And with any luck oblivion should discover a ritual.
You will find out that you are not alone in the enterprise.
10 Yesterday the very furniture s e e m e d to reproach you.
Today you take your place in the Widow's Shuttle.⁴
T h e bus is waiting at the southern gate
To take you to the city of your ancestors

W h i c h stands on the hill opposite, with gleaming pediments,⁵

15 As vivid as this charming square, your home.

Are you shy? You should be. It is almost like a wedding,

T h e way you clasp your flowers and give a little tug at your veil. Oh,

T h e hideous bridesmaids, it is natural that you should resent them

J u s t a little, on this first day.

20 But that will pass, and the cemetery is not far.

H e r e c o m e s the driver, flicking a toothpick into the gutter,

His tongue still searching between his teeth.

See, he has not noticed you. No one has noticed you.

It will pass, young lady, it will pass.

25 H o w comforting it is, o n c e or twice a year,

To get together and forget the old times.

As on those special days, ladies and gentlemen,

W h e n the boiled shirts⁶ gather at the graveside

And a leering waistcoat a p p r o a c h e s the rostrum.

2. Mass or chant for the dead. Also, title of a piece

4. Popular name for bus going to the cemetery.

by the German composer Johannes Brahms

5. Triangular structures crowning the fronts of (1833-1897).

buildings.

3. Thomas Hobbes (1588-1679), English philos-

6. (Men wearing) dress shirts with starched fronts.

opher.

1964 / JAMES FENTON

30 It is like a solemn pact between the survivors.

The mayor has signed it on behalf of the freemasonry.⁷

The priest has sealed it on behalf of all the rest.

Nothing more need be said, and it is better that way—

The better for the widow, that she should not live in fear of surprise,

35 The better for the young man, that he should move at liberty between the armchairs,

The better that these bent figures who flutter among the graves

Tending the nightlights and replacing the chrysanthemums

Are not ghosts,

That they shall go home.

40 The bus is waiting, and on the upper terraces

The workmen are dismantling the houses of the dead.

But when so many had died, so many and at such speed,

There were no cities waiting for the victims.

They unscrewed the name-plates from the shattered doorways

45 And carried them away with the coffins.

So the squares and parks were filled with the eloquence of young cemeteries:

The smell of fresh earth, the improvised crosses

And all the impossible directions in brass and enamel.

“Doctor Gliedschirm, skin specialist, surgeries 14—16 hours or by appointment.”

50 Professor Sargnagel was buried with four degrees, two associate

memberships

And instructions to tradesmen to use the back entrance.

Your uncle’s grave informed you that he lived on the third floor, left.

You were asked please to ring, and he would come down in the lift⁸

To which one needed a key ...

55 Would come down, would ever come down

With a smile like thin gruel, and never too much to say.

How he shrank through the years.

How you towered over him in the narrow cage.⁹

How he shrinks now ...

60 But come. Grief must have its term? Guilt too, then.

And it seems there is no limit to the resourcefulness of recollection.

So that a man might say and think:

When the world was at its darkest,

7. Fraternity for mutual help, called “Free and 8. Elevator.

Accepted Masons” and having elaborate secret 9. Of the wire-screened elevator, rituals.

G O D , A P O E M / 1 9 6 5

W h e n the black wings p a s s e d over the rooftops¹

65 (And who can divine His purposes?) even then

T h e r e was always, always a fire in this hearth.

You see this c u p b o a r d ? A priest-hole!²

And in that lumber-room whole generations have been h o u s e d and fed.

Oh, if I were to begin, if I were to begin to tell you 70 T h e half, the quarter, a mere smattering of what we went through!

His wife nods, and a secret smile,
Like a breeze with e n o u g h strength to carry one dry leaf
Over two pavingstones, p a s s e s f r o m chair to chair.
Even the enquirer is c h a r m e d .

75 He forgets to p u r s u e the point.

It is not what he wants to know.

It is what he wants not to know.

It is not what they say.

It is what they do not say.

1 9 8 2

God, A Poem

A nasty surprise in a sandwich,
A drawing-pin caught in your sock,
T h e limpest of shakes from a hand which You'd thought would be firm as a rock,

5 A serious mistake in a nightie,

A grave disappointment all round

Is all that you'll get f r o m th'Almighty,

Is all that you'll get underground.

Oh he said: "If you lay off the crumpet⁰ women io I'll se e you alright in the end.

J u s t h a n g on until the last trumpet.

H a v e faith in me, c h u m — I ' m your friend."

But if you remind him, he'll tell you:

"I'm sorry, I m u s t have been p i s s e d 0 — drunk

15 T h o u g h your n a m e rings a sort of a bell. You

S h o u l d h a v e g u e s s e d t h a t I d o n o t e x i s t .

“I didn’t exist at Creation,

I didn’t exist at the Flood,

And I won’t be around for Salvation

20 To sort out the sheep f r o m t h e c u d —

1. Cf. Exodus 12.27: “It is the sacrifice of the

2. One of the hiding places, for Roman Catholic Lord’s passover, who passed over the houses of the priests, built in sixteenth-century England after the children of Israel in Egypt, when he smote the banning of Catholicism.

Egyptians, and delivered our houses.”

1 9 6 6 / J A M E S F E N T O N

“Or whatever the phrase is. The fact is

In soteriological⁰ terms salvational

I’m a crude existential malpractice

And you are a diet⁰ of^o worms. food/for 25 “You’re a nasty surprise in a sandwich.

You’re a drawing-pin caught in my sock.

You’re the limpest of shakes from a hand which

I’d have thought would be firm as a rock,

“You’re a serious mistake in a nightie,

30 You’re a grave disappointment all round—

That’s all that you are,” says th’Almighty,

“And that’s all that you’ll be underground.”

1 9 8 3

In Paris with You

Don’t talk to me of love. I’ve had an earful

And I get tearful when I've downed a drink or two.

I'm one of your talking wounded.

I'm a hostage. I'm marooned.

5 But I'm in Paris with you.

Yes I'm angry at the way I've been bamboozled

And resentful at the mess that I've been through.

I admit I'm on the rebound

And I don't care where are we bound,

io I'm in Paris with you.

Do you mind if we do not go to the Louvre,

If we say sod³ off to sodding Notre Dame,

If we skip the Champs Elysees

And remain here in this sleazy

15 Old hotel room

Doing this and that

To what and whom

Learning who you are,

Learning what I am.

20 Don't talk to me of love. Let's talk of Paris,

The little bit of Paris in our view.

There's that crack across the ceiling

And the hotel walls are peeling

And I'm in Paris with you.

25 Don't talk to me of love. Let's talk of Paris.

I'm in Paris with the slightest thing you do.

3. English slang, similar to but milder than bugger.

O F T I M E A N D T H E L I N E / 1 9 6 7

I'm in Paris with your eyes, your mouth,

I'm in Paris with ... all points south.

Am I embarrassing you?

30 I'm in Paris with you.

1 9 9 3

C H A R L E S B E R N S T E I N

b. 1950

Of Time and the Line

George Burns¹ likes to insist that he always takes the straight lines; the cigar in his mouth

is a way of leaving space between the lines for a laugh. He weaves lines together

5 by means of a picaresque narrative;

not so Hennie Youngman, whose lines are strictly paratactic.² My father pushed a line of ladies' dresses—not down the street

in a pushcart but upstairs in a fact'ry

io office. My mother has been more concerned with her hemline. Chairman Mao³ put forward

Maoist lines, but that's been abandoned (mostly) for the East-West line of malarkey

so popular in these parts. The prestige

15 of the iambic line has recently suffered decline, since it's no longer so clear who T" am, much less who you are. When making a line, better be double sure what you're lining in & what you're lining

20 out & which side of the line you're on; the world is made up so (Adam didn't so much name as delineate).⁴ Every poem's got a prosodic lining, some of which will metrical unzip for summer wear. The lines of an 25 imaginary are inscribed on the social flesh by the knife-point of history.

Nowadays, you can often spot a work of poetry by whether it's in lines or no; if it's in prose, there's a good chance 30 it's a poem. While there is no lesson in the line more useful than that of the picket line, the line that has caused the most adversity is the bloodline. In Russia

1. American comedian and actor (1896—1996),

3. Mao Tse-tung (1893-1976), Communist always seen with a cigar.

leader of the People's Republic of China.

2. Placed one after another without connectives,

4. Cf. Genesis 1.19-20: " ... a n d whatsoever as in "Take my wife. Please"—the most famous Adam called every living creature, that was the one-liner delivered by Henry "Henny" Youngman
name thereof."

(1906-1998), American comedian.

1 9 6 8 / CHARLES B E R N S T E I N

everyone is worried about long lines;

35 b a c k in the U S A , it's strictly soup-lines. " T a k e a chisel to write," but for an actor a line's got to be cued. Or, as they say in math, it takes two lines to make an angle but only one line to make 40 a Margarita.

1 9 9 1

frequently unasked questions

I've a pile of memories on my other drive, j u s t give me the word and I'll configure them for you. I've got the pearl blue organizer a n d the banquette 5 with double lacerators, but nothing floral like those diphthong transducers.

W a s a time I'd arrive decked to the,
well that's no way to establish contagious proximity. It poured several io days in a row so that whe n the blimp finally appeared we were f o c u s s e d elsewise. Later, m u c h later, got to cash in my gold for those new chits—look so shiny over there.

2001

why we ask you not to touch

H u m a n emotions and cognition
leave a projective film over the p o e m s making them difficult to perceive.

C a r e f u l readers maintain a m e a s u r e d 5 distance f r o m the works in order to allow distortion-free c o m p r e h e n s i o n
and to avoid d a m a g i n g the meaning.

2001

this poem intentionally left blank

2 0 0 1

1 9 6 9

A N N E C A R S O N

b. 1950

New Rule

A New Year's white morning of hard new ice.

High on the frozen branches I saw a squirrel j u m p and skid.

Is this scary? he seemed to say and glanced down at me, clutching his branch as it bobbed

5 in stiff recoil—or is it just that everything sounds wrong today?

The branches

clinked.

He wiped his small cold lips with one hand.

Do you fear the same things as io I fear? I countered, looking up.

His empire of branches slid against the air.

The night of hooks?

The man blade left open on the stair?

Not enough spin on it, said my true love

is when he left in our fifth year.

The squirrel bounced down a branch and caught a peg of tears.

The way to hold on is afterwords

20 SO

clear.

2000

Sumptuous Destitution¹

” S u m p t u o u s destitution”

Your opinion gives me a serious feeling: I would like to be what you

deem me.

(Emily Dickinson letter 319 to Thomas Higginson)²

is a phrase

5 You see my position is benighted.

(Emily Dickinson letter 268 to Thomas Higginson)

1. Phrase from poem (Franklin number 1404,
The mentor she addresses explicitly in many letters Johnson number 1382) by the American poet is the American literary critic Thomas Wentworth
Emily Dickinson (1830-1886; see pp. 1110-27),
Higginson (1823—1911). Carson makes evident in which she remarks that joy “leaves a sumptuous her belief that some of the letters here, whose Destitution- / Without a name.”

undisclosed recipient Dickinson called “Master,”

2. All of the italicized quotations, except the last were to Higginson. “Master” ‘s identity continues (line 23), are from letters written by Dickinson.

to be disputed by scholars.

1970 / ANNE CARSON

scholars use

She was much too enigmatical a heingfor me to solve in an hour’s

interview.

(Thomas Higginson letter 342a to Emily Dickinson)

10 of female

God made me [Sir] Master—I didn't he—myself.

(Emily Dickinson letter 233 to Thomas Higginson)

silence.

Rushing among my small heart—and pushing aside the blood

—

15 (Emily Dickinson letter 248 to Thomas Higginson)

Save what you can, Emily.

And when I try to organize—my little Force explodes—and leaves me

hare and charred.

(Emily Dickinson letter 271 to Thomas Higginson)

Save every bit of thread.

20 Have you a little chest to put the Alive in?

(Emily Dickinson letter 233 to Thomas Higginson)

One of them may be

By Cock, said Ophelia.³

(Emily Dickinson letter 268 to Thomas Higginson)

25 the way out of here.

2 0 0 0

The Beauty of the Husband

IV. HE SHE WE THEY YOU YOU YOU I HER SO PRONOUNS

BEGIN THE DANCE CALLED WASHING WHOSE NAME DERIVES

FROM AN ALCHEMICAL FACT THAT AFTER A SMALL STILLNESS THERE IS A SMALL STIR AFTER GREAT STILLNESS

*A GREAT STIR*⁴

Rotate the husband and expose a hidden side. A letter he wrote from

Rio de Janeiro.⁵

Why Rio de Janeiro? is not a question worth asking.

We had been separated three years but not yet divorced.

He turned up anywhere.

5 Could be counted upon to lie if asked why. Otherwise could not be counted upon.

When I say hidden

I mean funny.

A husband's tears are never hidden.

3. Allusion to Shakespeare, Hamlet 4.5.59-60,

4. Section of Carson's book-length poem The

where the mad Ophelia, spurned by Hamlet,

Beauty of the Husband: A Fictional Essay in 29

implies he has "tumbled" her: "Young men will do't

Tangos.

if they come to't, / By Cock, they are to blame."

5. Former capital city of Brazil.

THE BEAUTY OF THE HUSBAND / 1 9 7 1

Rio, April 23

10 I don't understand this business of linguistics.

Make me cry.

Don't make me cry.

I cry. You cry. We make ourselves cry.

Travelling foolish work spending money is what I make myself do.

15 Carioca.6

I'm in an apartment in Rio with some Brazilians arguing over how to make a washing machine work.

In half an hour they'll forget about it and go out for dinner leaving the machine on fire.

20 They will come back from dinner to find their clothes burned up, slap each other on the head and decide they in fact bought a dryer which they don't know how to operate.

I have just gone to look at this machine. It is indeed a washer on

fire.

25 So now what happens. You and I.

We have this deep sadness between us and its spells so habitual I can't tell it from love.

You want a clean life I live a dirty one old story. Well.

30 Not much use to you without you am I.

I still love you.

You make me cry.

There are three things to notice about this letter.

First

35 its symmetry:

Make me cry... . You make me cry.

S e c o n d

its casuistry:

cosmological⁷ motifs, fire and water, placed right before talk of love

40 to ground it in associations of primordial eros and strife.

Third no return address.

I cannot answer. He wants no answer. What does he want.

Four things.

But from the fourth I flee

45 chaste and craftily.

2001

6. Spanish term for resident of Rio de Janeiro. nature of the universe. Casistry: plausible but 7. Related to metaphysical speculation about the invalid reasoning.

1972

DANA GIOIA

b. 1950

Prayer

Echo of the clocktower, footstep

in the alleyway, sweep

of the wind sifting the leaves.

Jeweller of the spiderweb, connoisseur

5 of autumn's opulence, blade of lightning harvesting the sky.

Keeper of the small gate, choreographer of entrances and exits, midnight

whisper travelling the wires.

io Seducer, healer, deity or thief,

I will see you soon enough—

in the shadow of the rainfall,

in the brief violet darkening a sunset—

but until then I pray watch over him 15 as a mountain guards its covert ore and the harsh falcon its flightless young.

1 9 9 1

The Next Poem

How much better it seems now than when it is finally d o n e —
the unforgettable first line,
the cunning way the stanzas run.
5 The rhymes soft-spoken and suggestive are barely audible at first,
an appetite not yet acknowledged like the inkling of a thirst.

While gradually the form appears io as each line is coaxed aloud —
the architecture of a room seen from the middle of a crowd.
The music that of common speech
but slanted so that each detail 15 sounds unexpected as a sharp inserted in a simple scale.

T H E P A L M R E A D E R / 1 9 7 3

No jumble box of imagery dumped glumly in the reader's lap or elegantly packaged junk 20 the unsuspecting must unwrap.
But words that could direct a friend precisely to an unknown place,

those few unshakeable details that no confusion can erase.
25 And the real subject left unspoken but unmistakable to those who don't expect a jungle parrot in the black and white of prose.
How much better it seems now
30 than when it is finally written.
How hungrily one waits to feel the bright lure seized, the old hook bitten.

1 9 9 1

N I C H O L A S C H R I S T O P H E R

b. 1951

The Palm Reader

In her storefront living room—
overstuffed couch, oversized TV, a bowl of mints on the Plexiglas coffee table—
she watches Edge of Night and files her nails.

5 The paraphernalia pertaining to her trade crowd a shelf beneath the large green hand painted onto the window: a Tarot deck, coins and obelisks, a chalky bust with numbered phrenological divisions on the skull, io Through the beaded curtain in the rear
some clues emerge as to her life:
two children trading insults,
a man calling out, “Eggs!”
as a frying pan clatters into a sink,

15 a dog running by with a wig in his mouth.

She herself is plump, heavily made up, wearing a red dress and a shawl imprinted with the signs of the zodiac.

A gold pyramid hangs from her throat

1. A soap opera.

1 9 7 4 / NICHOLAS CHRISTOPHER

20 and she has combed glittering silver stars through her black hair.

From a plush rocker she beckons you,
at the window, to a straight-back chair
in which she will divine (according to the sign 25 on the door) “the roads into your future,
and helpful information from the Beyond.”

Though the latter, especially, tempts
you powerfully, you decline,
and she shrugs with a rueful smile.

30 And because it is close to noon,
and the sidewalk is empty, as you cross
the street she closes up for lunch.

Her living room in which matters of life and death—of human destiny laid bare—

35 suddenly reverts to its other function:
husband slumped on the couch clutching a beer,
children sopping bread across paper plates,
the dog sprawled under the table.

All of them watching Edge of Night now.

40 The fate of whose characters, which keeps a faithful public tuning in day after day, year after year, is presumably known to this woman, lighting a cigarette and surveying that room, open to all passersby 45 yet utterly remote, as inescapable as the future itself, that jumps out at her from every stranger's hand.

1 9 9 5

Far from Home

A broken-down hotel on an inhospitable sea, and behind it, a field of thorns in which a man wearing white gloves is digging a hole with the exact proportions of a grave.

5 Down the hall, the young chambermaid is staring into a basin full of red water.

Her hair is white and her hands are wrinkled.
A shark tooth dangles from her ear.

In the evening she leaves a tray by my door:
io a glass, a carafe of water, and a bottle containing liquor that swirls like mist.

Mornings she brings bitter tea and a map.
Always the same map—not of the island
we're on, but of one I left long ago.

T H E G E E S E / 1 9 7 5

15 (If it were this island, I wouldn't know, having never ventured from the hotel.)

There is a bowl of black seashells by my bed.
The maps—thirteen of them—are stacked between the lamp that flickers like a star 20 and the quartz lions veined with light.

The clerk at the front desk could be a statue.
His dark glasses reflect the bare lobby,
its leafless plants and shuttered windows.
At his fingertips is a tumbler filled with dust.
25 The day I check out, the other guests line
the balcony, wrapped in sheets, speaking a language I've never heard—sibilant as the sea, but with no two words sounding alike.
The man in white gloves appears, to carry 30 my suitcase, and pauses before a mirror in which I see, not his image, but towering iron waves, rising to mesh with an iron sky.

1 9 9 5

J O R I E G R A H A M

b. 1951

The Geese

Today as I hang out the wash I see them again, a code as urgent as elegant, tapering with goals.

For days they have been crossing. We live beneath these geese
5 as if beneath the passage of time, or a most perfect heading.

Sometimes I fear their relevance.

Closest at hand,

between the lines,

the spiders imitate the paths the geese won't stray from,

io imitate them endlessly to no avail:

things will not remain connected,
will not heal,
and the world thickens with texture instead of history, texture instead of place.

15 Yet the small fear of the spiders binds and binds

1 9 7 6 / J O R I E G R A H A M

the pins to the lines, the lines to the eaves, to the pincushion
bush,

as if, at any time, things could fall further apart¹
and nothing could help them

20 recover their meaning. And if these spiders had their way, chainlink over the visible world, would we be in or out? I turn to go back in.

There is a feeling the body gives the mind of having missed something, a bedrock poverty, like falling

25 without the sense that you are passing through one world, that you could reach another anytime. Instead the real is crossing you,

your body an arrival

30 you know is false but can't outrun. And somewhere in between these geese forever entering and

these spiders turning back,

this astonishing delay, the everyday, takes place.

1 9 8 0

At Luca Signorelli's² Resurrection of the Body

See how they hurry

to enter their bodies,
these spirits.
5 Is it better, flesh, that they should hurry so?
From above
the green-winged angels 10 blare down trumpets and light. But they don't care,
they hurry to congregate,
they hurry 15 into speech, until it's a marketplace, it is humanity. But still we wonder

1. Cf. W. B. Yeats, "The Second Coming," line 3:

2. Italian painter (ca. 1450—1523), whose series

"Things fall apart; the centre cannot hold"

on the Last Judgment is displayed in the gothic

(p. 1196).

cathedral of Orvieto, Italy.

AT LUCA SIGNORELLI'S RESURRECTION OF THE BODY / 1977

in the chancel³

20 of the dark cathedral,

is it better, back?

The artist

has tried to make it so: each tendon

they press

25

to re-enter

is perfect. But is it perfection

they're after,

pulling themselves up

30 through the soil

into the weightedness, the color,

into the eye of the painter? Outside it is 1500,

35 all round the cathedral

streets hurry to open

through the wild

silver grasses....

The men and women

40 on the cathedral wall

do not know how,

having come this far,

to stop their hurrying. They amble off

45 in groups, in couples. Soon

some are clothed, there is distance, there is perspective. Standing below them 50 in the church
in Orvieto, how can we tell them to be stern and brazen
and slow, 55 that there is no
entrance, only entering. They keep on arriving,
wanting names,
60 wanting happiness. In his studio
Luca Signorelli
3. Part of a church containing the altar.
1978 / J O R I E G R A H A M
in the name of God and Science 65 and the believable broke into the body
studying arrival.
But the wall
of the flesh 70 opens endlessly, its vanishing point so deep and receding

we have yet to find it,
to have it 75 stop us. So he cut deeper,
graduating slowly from the symbolic to the beautiful. How far so is true?
When his one son
died violently,
he had the body brought to him
and laid it 85 on the drawing-table, and stood at a certain distance awaiting the best possible light, the best depth 90 of day,
then with beauty and care
and technique
and judgment, cut into shadow, cut 95 into bone and sinew and every pocket
in which the cold light
pooled.
It took him days,
100 that deep

caress, cutting,
unfastening,
until his mind could climb into 105 the open flesh and mend itself.

1 9 9 3

W H Y B R O W N L E E L E F T / 1 9 7 9

The Surface

It has a hole in it. Not only where I concentrate.

The river still ribboning, twisting up,
into its re-

5 arrangements, chill enlightenments, tight-knotted quickenings

and loosening—whispered messages dissolving
the messengers—

the river still glinting-up into its handfuls, heapings, 10 glassy

forgettings under the river of my attention—

and the river of my attention laying itself down—
bending,

15 reassembling—over the quick leaving-offs and windy obstacles—

and the surface rippling under the wind's attention—

rippling over the accumulations, the slowed-down drifting permanences

20 of the cold

bed.

I say iridescent and I look down.

The leaves very still as they are carried.

1 9 9 3

P A U L M U L D O O N

b. 1951

Why Brownlee Left

Why Brownlee left, and where he went,

Is a mystery even now.

For if a man should have been content

It was him; two acres of barley,

5 One of potatoes, four bullocks,

A milker, a slated farmhouse.

He was last seen going out to plough

On a March morning, bright and early.

By noon Brownlee was famous;

io They had found all abandoned, with

The last rig¹ unbroken, his pair of black

1. Ridge between a pair of plow furrows.

1 9 8 0 / P A U L M U L D O O N

Horses, like man and wife,

Shifting their weight from foot to Foot, and gazing into the future.

1 9 8 0

Meeting the British²

We met the British in the dead of winter.

The sky was lavender and the snow lavender-blue.

I could hear, far below,
5 the sound of two streams coming together (both were frozen over) and, no less strange, myself calling out in French across that forest-10 clearing. Neither General Jeffrey Amherst
nor Colonel Henry Bouquet³ could stomach our willow-tobacco.
As for the unusual
scent when the Colonel shook out his hand-15 kerchief: C'est la lavande, une fleur mauve comme le del.*⁴
They gave us six fishhooks
and two blankets embroidered with smallpox.

1987

Milkweed and Monarch

As he knelt by the grave of his mother and father
the taste of dill, or tarragon—
he could barely tell one from the other—

2. I.e., the British forces, met by Native Americans and apparently executed a plan to spread smallpox among the Native Americans through infected French and Indian War (1754—63).
blankets.

3. British officer (1719-1766), who with the com-

4. It is lavender, a flower as mauve as the sky
mander-in-chief, Amherst (1717—1797), devised (French).

THIRDEPISTLETOTIMOTHY / 1981

filled his mouth. It seemed as if he might smother.

5 Why should he be stricken with grief, not for his mother and father,

but a woman slinking from the fur of a sea-otter

in Portland, Maine, or, yes, Portland, Oregon—

he could barely tell one from the other—

10 and why should he now savour

the tang of her, her little pickled gherkin,

as he knelt by the grave of his mother and father?

He looked about. He remembered her palaver⁰ idle talk on how both earth and sky would darken—

15 “You could barely tell one from the other—”

while the Monarch butterflies passed over in their milkweed-hunger: “A wing-beat, some reckon,

may trigger off the mother and father of all storms, striking your Irish Cliffs of Moher

20 with the force of a hurricane.”

Then: “Milkweed and Monarch ‘invented’ each other.”

He looked about. Cow’s-parsley in a samovar.⁵

He’d mistaken his mother’s name, “Regan”, for “Anger”:

as he knelt by the grave of his mother and father

25 he could barely tell one from the other.

1994

Third Epistle to Timothy⁶

You made some mistake when you intended to favor me with some of the new valuable grass seed ... for what you gave me ... proves mere timothy.

A letter from Benjamin Franklin to Jared Eliot,⁷

July 16th, 1747

I

Midnight. June, 1923. Not a stir except for the brough and brouhaha⁸

surrounding the taper or link⁹

5. Russian tea urn.

introduced during the eighteenth century into

6. St. Paul writes two epistles to Timothy (Christian Scriptures books 1 Timothy and 2 Timothy).
North America.

8. Commotion. Brough: luminous ring around the
With a poem that often quotes St. Paul, Muldoon moon.

provides a third.

9. A torch made of flax fiber and pitch (a resinous

7. Early American minister, physician, and sciensubstance).

tist (1685-1763). Timothy: a native British grass,

1 9 8 2 / P A U L M U L D O O N

in which a louse

flares up and a shadow, my da's,

5 clatters against a wall of the six-by-eight-by-six-foot room

he sleeps in, eleven years old, a servant-boy at Hardy's of Carnteel.¹

There's a boot-polish lid filled with turps or paraffin oil
under each cast-iron bed-leg, a little barrier 10 against bed-bugs under each bed-foot.

II

That knocking's the knocking against their stalls of a team of six black Clydesdales² mined in Coalisland
he's only just helped to unhitch from the cumbersome star of a hay-rake. Decently and in order³ 15 he brought each whitewashed nose to its nosebag of corn, to its galvanized bucket.
One of the six black Clydesdale mares
he helped all day to hitch and unhitch was showing, on the near hock, what might be a bud of farcy⁴
20 picked up, no doubt, while on loan to Wesley Cummins .

III

"Decently and in order," Cummins would proclaim, "let all Inniskillings⁵ be done." A week ago my da helped him limber⁰ up hook the team to a mowing machine as if to a gun carriage. "For no Drag⁰⁰On^o cavalry member can function without his measure of char."^o tea 25 He patted his belly-band. "A measure, that is, against dysentery."

This was my da's signal to rush into the deep shade of the hedge to fetch such little tea as might remain

in the tea urn. “Man does not live,” Cummins would snort, “only by scraps

of wheaten farls and tea dregs.⁶

30 You watch your step or I’ll see you’re shipped back to Killeter.”⁷

IV

“Kill eeshill,” my da says, “I’m from Killeeshill.” Along the cast-iron rainbow of his bed-end

comes a line

of chafers⁰ or cheeselips⁰ that have scaled beetles /
cockchafers, wood lice the bed-legs

1. Parish in County Tyrone, Northern Ireland, as

5. Named after the town in County Fermanagh is Coalisland (line 12).

that it was established to defend, the Royal Innis-

2. A breed of horse used on farms.

killing Fusiliers was a regiment of the British Army.

3. Cf. St. Paul’s First Epistle to the Corinthians

Cummins rephrases St. Paul’s “Let all things be

(1 Corinthians) 14.40: “Let all things be done done.”

decently and in order.”

6. Cf. Deuteronomy 8.3: “man doth not live by

4. A disease that causes small tumors known as bread only.” Farls: small Scottish cakes or biscuits.

farcy buds. Hock: the joint between the knee and

7. Village in County Tyrone, as is Killeeshill (line

the fetlock on a horse.

31).

THIRDEPISTLE TO TIMOTHY / 1983

35 despite the boot-polish lids. Eleven years of age. A servant-boy on the point of falling asleep. The reek of paraffin or the pinewoods reek

of turpentine

good against roundworm in horses. That knocking against their stalls

40 of six Clydesdales, each standing at sixteen hands.

V

Building hay even now, even now drawing level with the team's headbrass,⁸

buoyed up by nothing more than the ballast of hay—meadow cat's-tail, lucerne,⁹ the leaf upon trodden leaf

of white clover and red—

45 drawing level now with the taper-blooms of a horse chestnut.

Already light in the head.

“Though you speak, young Muldoon ...” Cummins calls up from trimming the skirt

of the haycock,⁰ “though you speak with the tongue small pile of hay of an angel,¹ I see you for what you are ... Malevolent.

50 Not only a member of the church malignant² but a malevolent spirit.”

V/

Even now borne aloft by bearing down on lap-cocks and shake-cocks³

from under one of which a ruddy face

suddenly twists and turns upwards as if itself carried on a pitchfork and, meeting its gaze,

55 he sees himself, a servant-boy still, still ten or eleven, breathing upon a Clydesdale's near hock and finding a farcybud

like a tiny glow in a strut⁰ of charcoal. stick

"I see you," Cummins points at him with the pitchfork, "you little by-blow,^o bastard

I see you casting your spells, your sorceries,

60 I see you coming as a thief in the night⁴ to stab us in the back."

VII

A year since they kidnapped Anketell Moutray from his home at

Favour Royal,⁵

dragging him, blindfolded, the length of his own gravel path, eighty years old, the Orange county grand master.⁶ Four A-Specials⁷

shot on a train

8. A team of horses pulling a plow, the head brass suffering (souls in purgatory), and the church mil-being the ornamental brass plaque attached to itant (faithful on Earth).

their bridle. Cf. Edward Thomas, "As the team's

3. Like lap-cocks, elaborate shapes made of hay.
head brass" (p. 1255).

4. Cf. St. Paul's First Epistle to the Thessalonians

9. Plant resembling clover and cultivated for food.
5.2: “For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night.”

Meadow cat's-tail: another name for timothy grass in Britain and Ireland.

5. Demesne (estate) in County Tyrone.

1. Cf. St. Paul's First Epistle to the Corinthians

6. The Orange order is a Protestant fraternity

13.1: “Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.”

often accused of sectarian bigotry, the order and its members have been the target of violent attacks.

2. Cummins attacks the servant boy's Roman

7. As a response to sectarian violence, the British Catholicism, thereby adding the “church malign-governments established the Ulster Special Constabulary in 1920. Overwhelmingly Protestant, this church triumphant (souls in heaven), the church new force was divided into three sections: the

1984 / PAUL MULDOON

in Clones. The Clogher valley⁸

65 a blaze of flax-mills and hay-sheds. Memories of the Land League.

Davitt and Biggar.⁹

Breaking the boycott at Lough Mask.¹

The Land Leaguers beaten
at the second battle of Saintfield.² It shall be revealed ... 3
A year since they cut out the clapper⁰ of a collabor ... a tongue
collabor ...
70 a collaborator from Maguiresbridge.⁴

VIII

That knocking's the team's near-distant knocking on wood while my da breathes upon the blue-yellow flame on a fetlock, on a deep-feathered pastern⁵
of one of six black Shires⁰ ... "Because it shall be large farm horses revealed by fire," 75 Cummins's last pitchfork is laden with thistles, "as the sparks fly upward man is born unto trouble.⁶ For the tongue may yet be cut from an angel." The line of cheeselips and chafers along the bed-end. "Just wait till you come back down and I get a hold so of you, young Muldoon ... We'll see what spells you'll cast."

IX

For an instant it seems no one else might scale such a parapet of meadow cat's-tail, lucerne, red and white clovers,
not even the line of chafers and cheeselips that overthrow as they undermine 85 when, light in the head, unsteady on his pegs as Anketell Moutray,

he squints through a blindfold of clegs⁰ horseflies
from his grass-capped, thistle-strewn vantage point,
the point where two hay-ropes cross,

A-Specials were full-time and paid as if regular poor treatment by Boycott they eventually sided policemen; the B-Specials were part-time and with the tenants.

unpaid; and the C-Specials were a reserve force,

2. Saintfield in County Down, Northern Ireland, also unpaid.

was the site of a battle in 1798 between the British

8. Rural area in County Tyrone, the scene of Army and a group of United Irishmen fighting for agrarian unrest. Clones: town in County Mon-independence. In 1880, Michael Davitt addressed aghan, Northern Ireland.

an audience at Saintfield on the subject of land

9. Michael Davitt (1846-1906) helped found the reform, calling for tenants to become proprietors.

Land League, an organization of Irish tenant farm-

3. Cf. St. Paul's First Epistle to the Corinthians

ers founded in 1879 to resist the cruelties of land-

3.13: "Every man's work shall be made manifest:

lords. Its campaign prompted the passing, in 1881, for the day shall declare it, because it shall be of a Land Act that provided a commission to fix fair revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's rents. Joseph Biggar (1828-1890) was the Land work what it is.”

League’s treasurer.

4. Parish in County Fermanagh, Northern Ire-

1. In 1880, at Lough Mask in County Mayo, now land. Collabor: Muldoon plays on the Irish clapart of the Irish Republic, Captain Charles Boycott, meaning an open-mouthed person.

cott, acting as agent for the landowner Lord Erne,

5. Part of a horse’s foot. Fetlock: part of a horse’s so angered the tenant farmers that he was ostracized by all his employees (hence the modern term

6. Cf. Job 5.7: “Yet man is born unto trouble, as boycott). English soldiers were sent in to perform the sparks fly upward.”

the household and agricultural tasks, but after

PARSLEY / 1985

w h e r e C u m m i n s a n d h i s c r e w h a v e l e f t h i m , i n a s t r a w h a t w i t h a f r a y i n g b r i m ,

9 0 w h i l e t h e y ‘ v e m o v e d o n t o m a r k o u t t h e n e x t h a y c o c k .

X

T h a t n e x t h a y c o c k a l r e a d y s u m m o n i n g i t s e l f f r o m w i n d r o w 7 a f t e r w i n d - w e a r y w i n d r o w

w h i l e y e t a n o t h e r b r i n g s i t s e l f t o m i n d i n t h e a c r i d s t i n k o f t u r p e n t i n e . T h e r e t h e i m a g e o f L i z z i e ,

H a r d y ‘ s l a s t s e r v a n t - g i r l , r e a c h e s o u t f r o m h e r d a i s 0 p l a t f o r m 9 5 o f s a l t h a y , s t r e t c h e s o u t a n u n s u n b u r n e d a r m h a l f i n b e s t o w a l , h a l

f b e s e e c h i n g l y , t h e n t u r n s a w a y t o a p p e a l t o a l l t h a t s p i r i t - t r o o p

o f h a y - t r e a d e r s a s f a r a s t h e e y e c a n s e e , t h e c o i l o n c o i l o f h a y f r o m w h i c h , i n t h e t a p e r ' s m i l d u p r o a r , I O O t h e y f l o a t o u t a c r o s s t h e d a r k f a c e o f t h e e a r t h , a n e a r t h w i t h o u t f o r m , a n d v o i d . 8

1 9 9 8

R I T A D O V E

b. 1952

Parsley¹

1. The Cane² Fields

T h e r e i s a p a r r o t i m i t a t i n g s p r i n g
i n t h e p a l a c e , i t s f e a t h e r s p a r s l e y g r e e n .
O u t o f t h e s w a m p t h e c a n e a p p e a r s t o h a u n t u s , a n d w e c u t i t d o w n . E l G e n e r a l 5 s e a r c h e s f o r a w o r d ; h e i s a l l t h e w o r l d
t h e r e i s . L i k e a p a r r o t i m i t a t i n g s p r i n g , w e l i e d o w n s c r e a m i n g a s r a i n p u n c h e s t h r o u g h a n d w e c o m e u p g r e e n . W e c a n n o t s p e a k a n R —

o u t o f t h e s w a m p , t h e c a n e a p p e a r s i o a n d t h e n t h e m o u n t a i n w e c a l l i n w h i s p e r s Katalina.³

T h e c h i l d r e n g n a w t h e i r t e e t h t o a r r o w h e a d s .

T h e r e i s a p a r r o t i m i t a t i n g s p r i n g .

7. A row in which mown grass or hay is laid, to be 1961), dictator of the Dominican Republic, dried by the wind before being made into heaps or ordered 20,000 blacks killed because they could cocks.

not pronounce the letter r in -perejil, the Spanish
8. Cf. Genesis 1.1—2: “In the beginning God creword for parsley” [Dove’s note].

ated the heaven and the earth. And the earth was
2. Sugar cane.

without form, and void; and darkness was upon the

3. I.e., Katarina (since the people “cannot speak face of the deep.”

an R”).

1. “On October 2, 1937, Rafael Trujillo (1891-1986 /

R I T A D O V E

El General has found his word: perejil.

Who says it, lives. He laughs, teeth shining 15 out of the swamp. The cane appears in our dreams, lashed by wind and streaming.
And we lie down. For every drop of blood
there is a parrot imitating spring.

Out of the swamp the cane appears.

2. The Palace

20 The word the general’s chosen is parsley.

It is fall, when thoughts turn to love and death; the general thinks of his mother, how she died in the fall and he planted her walking cane at the grave 25 and it flowered, each spring stolidly forming four-star blossoms. The general pulls on his boots, he stomps to her room in the palace, the one without curtains, the one with a parrot

30 in a brass ring. As he paces he wonders Who can I kill today. And for a moment the little knot of screams is still. The parrot, who has traveled all the way from Australia in an ivory 35 cage, is, coy as a widow, practising spring. Ever since the morning his mother collapsed in the kitchen while baking skull-shaped candies for the Day of the Dead,⁴ the general 40 has hated sweets. He orders pastries brought up for the bird; they arrive dusted with sugar on a bed of lace.
The knot in his throat starts to twitch;
he sees his boots the first day in battle 45 splashed with mud and urine as a soldier falls at his feet amazed—how stupid he looked!—at the sound of artillery. I never thought it would sing
the soldier said, and died. Now 50 the general sees the fields of sugar cane, lashed by rain and streaming.
He sees his mother's smile, the teeth

4. All Souls' Day, November 2. An Aztec festival

cemeteries, bearing candles, flowers, and food, all for the spirits of the dead that coincides with the of which may be shaped to resemble symbols of Catholic calendar. In Latin America and the Caribbean, death, such as skulls or coffins.

bean, friends and relatives of the dead process into

D U S T I N G / 1 9 8 7

g n a w e d t o a r r o w h e a d s . H e h e a r s t h e H a i t i a n s s i n g w i t h o u t R ' s

55 a s t h e y s w i n g t h e g r e a t m a c h e t e s :

Katalina, they sing, Katalina,

mi madre, mi amor en muerte. s God knows

h i s m o t h e r w a s n o s t u p i d w o m a n ; s h e

c o u l d r o l l a n R l i k e a q u e e n . E v e n

60 a p a r r o t c a n r o l l a n R ! I n t h e b a r e r o o m t h e b r i g h t f e a t h e r s a r c h i n a p a r o d y o f g r e e n e r y , a s t h e l a s t p a l e c r u m b s d i s a p p e a r u n d e r t h e b l a c k e n e d t o n g u e . S o

m e o n e c a l l s o u t h i s n a m e i n a v o i c e

65 s o l i k e h i s m o t h e r ' s , a s t a r t l e d t e a r s p l a s h e s t h e t i p o f h i s r i g h t b o o t .

My mother, my love in death.

T h e g e n e r a l r e m e m b e r s t h e t i n y g r e e n s p r i g s

m e n o f h i s v i l l a g e w o r e i n t h e i r c a p e s

70 t o h o n o r t h e b i r t h o f a s o n . H e w i l l

o r d e r m a n y , t h i s t i m e , t o b e k i l l e d

f o r a s i n g l e , b e a u t i f u l w o r d .

1 9 8 3

Dusting⁶

Every day a wilderness — - no shade in sight. Beulah patient among knicknacks,
the solarium a rage
5 of light, a grain storm
as her gray cloth brings dark wood to life.

Under her hand scrolls and crests gleam io darker still. What was his name, that silly boy at the fair with the rifle booth? And his kiss and the clear bowl with one bright 15 fish, rippling wound!

5. I.e., mi madre, mi amor en muerte: my mother, “These poems tell two sides of a story and are my love in death.

meant to be read in sequence.” The main charac-

6. Part of a book-length narrative, Thomas and ters are African Americans born at the beginning Beulah, about which Dove writes in introduction, of the twentieth century.

1988 / RITADOVE

Not Michael — something finer. Each dust stroke a deep breath and 20 the canary in bloom.

W a v e r y m e m o r y : h o m e
f r o m a d a n c e , t h e f r o n t d o o r
b l o w n o p e n a n d t h e p a r l o r i n s n o w , s h e r u s h e d 25 t h e b o w l t o t h e s t o v e , w a t c h e d a s t h e l o c k e t o f i c e d i s s o l v e d a n d h e s w a m f r e e .

T h a t w a s y e a r s b e f o r e 30 F a t h e r g a v e h e r u p w i t h h e r n a m e , y e a r s b e f o r e
h e r n a m e g r e w t o m e a n
P r o m i s e , t h e n
D e s e r t - i n - P e a c e . 7

35 L o n g b e f o r e t h e s h a d o w a n d
s u n ' s a c c o m p l i c e , t h e t r e e .
M a u r i c e .

1986

The Bistro Styx⁸

S h e w a s t h i n n e r , w i t h a m a n n e r e d g a u n t n e s s a s s h e p a u s e d j u s t i n s i d e t h e d o u b l e g l a s s d o o r s t o s u r v e y t h e r o o m , s i l v e r y c a p e b i l l o w i n g d r a m a t i c a l l y b e h i n d h e r . What's this, 5 I t h o u g h t , l i f t i n g a h a n d u n t i l s h e n o d d e d a n d s t a r t e d a c r o s s t h e p a r q u e t ;
t h a t ' s w h e n I s a w s h e w a s d r e s s e d a l l i n g r a y ,
f r o m a k i t t e n i s h c a s h m e r e s k i r t a n d c o w l

d o w n t o t h e g r a p h i t e s i g n a t u r e o f h e r s h o e s , i o “ S o r r y I ’ m l a t e , ” s h e p a n t e d , t h o u g h
s h e w a s n ’ t , s l i d i n g i n t o t h e c h a i r , h e r c a p e

7. Beulah means “married, possessed” in Hebrew.

realizing that anyone who partakes of the food of

In the Bible, it refers to the promised land.

the dead cannot be wholly restored to the living”

8. Part of a sonnet sequence in Mother Love, a [Dove’s note]. Persephone spends half of each year book-length modernization of the Greek myth of

with Hades thereafter, and her return to Earth her-

Persephone, the girl who is abducted to the under-alds spring. In Dove’s version, she resurfaces in world by Hades, and whose mother, Demeter, god-

modern Paris, in a restaurant named for the Styx, dess of agriculture, is so grief-stricken she allows the river in the underworld over which dead souls

the crops to wither. “Before returning to the sur-were ferried.

face, the girl eats a few pomegranate seeds, not

T H E B I S T R O S T Y X / 1 9 8 9

tossed off in a shudder of brushed steel.

We kissed. Then I leaned back to peruse my blighted child, this wary aristocratic mole.

15 “How’s business?” I asked, and hazarded

a motherly smile to keep from crying out:

Are you content to conduct your life

as a cliché and, what’s worse,

an anachronism, the brooding artist's demimonde?

20 Near the rue Princesse⁹ they had opened a gallery cum^o souvenir shop which featured with fuzzy off-color Monets¹ next to his acrylics, no doubt, plus bearded African drums and the occasional miniature gargoyle from Notre Dame² the Great Artist had 25 carved at breakfast with a pocket knife.

“Tourists love us. The Parisians, of course”— she blushed—“are amused, though not without a certain admiration ... ”

The Chateaubriand³

arrived on a bone-white plate, smug and absolute 30 in its fragrant crust, a black plug steaming like the heart plucked from the chest of a worthy enemy;
one touch with her fork sent pink juices streaming.

“Admiration for what?” Wine, a bloody Pinot Noir, brought color to her cheeks. “Why, 35 the aplomb with which we’ve managed to support our Art”—meaning he’d convinced her to pose nude for his appalling canvases, faintly futuristic landscapes strewn with car wrecks and bodies being chewed 40 by rabid cocker spaniels. “I’d like to come by the studio,” I ventured, “and see the new stuff.”

“Yes, if you wish ... ” A delicate rebuff before the warning: “He dresses all in black now. Me, he drapes in blues and carmine—45 and even though I think it’s kinda cute,

in company I tend toward more muted shades.”

She paused and had the grace to drop her eyes. She did look ravishing, spookily insubstantial, a lipstick ghost on tissue,

50 or as if one stood on a fifth-floor terrace

9. Street in Paris. 2. Notre Dame de Paris, the cathedral.

1. Reproductions of work by the French painter 3. Elegant beef dish.

Claude Monet (1840-1926).

1 9 9 0 / D A N I E L H A L L

peering through a fringe of rain at Paris’

dreaming chimney pots, each sooty issue

wobbling skyward in an ecstatic oracular spiral.

“And he never thinks of food. I wish

55 I didn’t have to plead with him to eat... .” Fruit and cheese appeared, arrayed on leaf-green dishes.

I stuck with cafe creme. “This Camembert’s

so ripe,” she joked, “it’s practically grown hair,”

mucking a golden glob complete with parsley sprig

60 onto a heel of bread. Nothing seemed to fill her up: She swallowed, sliced into a pear,

speared each tear-shaped lavalier⁴

and popped the dripping mess into her pretty mouth.

Nowhere the bright tufted fields, weighted

65 vines and sun poured down out of the south.

“But are you happy?” Fearing, I whispered it quickly. “What? You know, Mother”—

she bit into the starry rose of a fig—

“one really should try the fruit here.”

70 I've lost her, I thought, and called for the bill.

1995

DANIEL HALL

b. 1952

Love-Letter-Burning

The archivist in us shudders at such cold-blooded destruction of the word, but since we're only human, we commit our sins to the flames. Sauve qui peut;¹ fear makes us bold.

5 Tanka² was bolder: when the weather turned from fair to frigid, he saw his way clear to build a sacrificial fire in which a priceless temple Buddha burned.

4. Jeweled pendant necklace; here, the jewel him ... how he dared profane the sacred image of itself.

the Buddha, he replied that he was burning it to

1. Save (yourself) if you can (French); also, a obtain its sarira (an indestructible substance panic or stampede.

believed to reside in the ashes of holy men)” [M.

2. The Zen master Tan-hsai, or Tanka (738—824).

Conrad Hyers, Zen and the Comic Spirit]. Not

“It was so cold at the temple ... that he took one finding sarira in one wooden Buddha, Tanka proposed burning the other two as well.

for firewood. When the horrified chief monk asked

MANGOSTEENS / 1991

(The pretext? Simple: what he sought
10 was legendary Essence in the ash.
But if it shows up only in the flesh—?
He grinned and said, Let's burn the lot!) Believers in the afterlife perform this purifying rite. At last 15 a match is struck: it's done. The past will shed some light, but never keep us warm
.

1990

Mangosteens

These are the absolute top of the line,
I was telling him, they even surpass the Jiangsu peach and the McIntosh apple
for lusciousness and subtlety... (He frowned:
5 McIntosh. How spelling.) We were eating our way through another kilogram of mangosteens, for which we'd both fallen hard. I'd read that Queen Victoria ³

(no voluptuary) once offered a reward
10 for an edible mangosteen: I don't know how much, or whether it was ever claimed.

(But not enough, I'd guess, and no, I hope.) Each thick skin yields to a counter-twist, splits 15 like rotted leather. Inside, snug

15 as a brain in its cranium, half a dozen plump white segments, all but dry, part to the tip of the tongue like lips — they taste like elips, before they ‘re bitten, a saltiness was hedutterly away; crushed, they release 20 a lood of unfathomable sweetness, gone in a trice. He lay near sleep, sunk back against a slope of heaped-up bedding, stroked slantwise by fingers of a afternoon sun. Mcintosh, he said again, 25 still chewing. I ‘d also been reading

The Spoils of Poynton, 4 so slowly the plot seemed to unfold in real-time. ” Things ‘ were of course the sum of the world, ” James tosses out in that mock-assertive, contradiction-baf-fling 30 way he has, quotation marks gripped like a tweezers 3. Queen of Great Britain from 1837 to 1901.

son, who has inherited it. She attempts unsuc-

4. Novel by the British (American-born) writer

cessfully to make a match between him and an

Henry James (1843-1916). Mrs. Gereth, a intense young woman friend. When Poynton is recently widowed collector of beautiful things, is destroyed by fire, the cause is not given; here, Hall faced with giving up her house, Poynton, to her suspects Mrs. Gereth.

1992 / SEAN O ‘ BRIEN

lest he soil his hands on things,

as if the only things that mattered

were that homage be paid to English widowhood,

or whether another of his young virgins

35 would ever marry. (She wouldn't, but she would,
before the novel closed, endure one shattering embrace, a consummation.) I spent the day sleepwalking the halls of museums, a vessel trembling at the lip. Lunch was a packet 40 of rice cakes and an apple in a garden famed for its beauty, and deemed beautiful for what had been taken away. I can still hear it, still taste it, his quick gasp of astonishment caught in my own mouth. I can feel that house 45 going up with a shudder, a clockwise funnel howling to the heavens, while the things of her world explode or melt or shrivel to ash in the ecstatic emptying. The old woman set the fire herself, she must have, she had to. His letter, 50 tattooed with postmarks, was waiting for me back at the ryokan,5 had overtaken me at last, half in Chinese, half in hard-won English, purer than I will ever write—

Please don't give up me in tomorrow

55 The skin was bitter. It stained the tongue.

I want with you more time

1 9 9 3 1 9 9 6

SEAN O'BRIEN

b. 1952

Cousin Coat

You are my secret coat. You're never dry.

You wear the weight and stink of black canals.

Malodorous companion, we know why
It's taken me so long to see we're pals,
5 To learn why my acquaintance never sniff
Or send me notes to say I stink of stiff.0 the dead
But you don't talk, historical bespoke.0 made-to-order
You must be worn, be intimate as skin,
And though I never lived what you invoke,
5. Inn (Japanese).

W E L C O M E , MAJOR POET! / 1 9 9 3

10 At birth I was already buttoned in.
Your clammy itch became my atmosphere,
An air made half of anger, half of fear.
And what you are is what I tried to shed
In libraries with Donne and Henry James.1 15 You're here to bear a message from the dead
Whose history's dishonoured with their names.
You mean the North, the poor, and troopers sent
To shoot down those who showed their discontent.2
No comfort there for comfy meliorists3
20 Grown weepy over Jarrow4 photographs.
No comfort when the poor the state enlists
Parade before their fathers' cenotaphs.0 war memorials
No comfort when the strikers all go back
To see which twenty thousand get the sack.
25 Be with me when they cauterize0 the facts. deaden
Be with me to the bottom of the page,
Insisting on what history exacts.
Be memory, be conscience, will and rage,

And keep me cold and honest, cousin coat,
30 So if I lie, I'll know you're at my throat.

1987

Welcome, Major Poet!

We have sat here in too many poetry readings
Wearing the liberal rictus⁰ and cursing our folly, gaping mouth

Watching the lightbulbs die and the curtains rot

And the last flies departing for Scunthorpe.⁵

5 Forgive us. We know all about you.

Autumn gives way to midwinter once more,

As states collapse, as hemlines rise, as we miss both,

And just as our teeth fall discreetly into our handkerchiefs,

Slowly the bones of our co-tormentees will emerge

io Through their skins. QED and hie jacent.⁶

Except we are seated bolt upright on customized

“Chairs” of the torturers’ school. Here it comes,

Any century now, the dread declaration:

And next I shall read something longer. Please

15 Rip out our nails and accept your applause!

1. English (American-born) novelist (1843—
the economic depression and high unemployment 1916). John Donne (1572-1631; see pp. 293-of the 1930s, a famous series of “hunger marches” 322), English poet.

headed for London.

2. Possibly an allusion to the Peterloo Massacre

5. Industrial town in northeast England. Flies:
(1819); see note 8, p. 872.

stagecoach.

3. Those who believe the world may be made bet-

6. Here lies (Latin); first words of an epitaph.

ter by human effort.

QED: quod erat demonstrandum; as has been dem-

4. Seaport in southeast England, from which, in onstrated (Latin).

1 9 9 4 / VIKRAM S E T H

Stretch-limo back to the Ritz and ring home:

Bore the arse off your nearest and dearest instead,

Supposing they haven't divorced you already

Or selfishly put themselves under a train.

20 Please call them, at length and at public expense.

Send flunkies for cold Stolichnaya,⁰ an ox brand of vodka

Or an acre of coke and a thousand-quid⁰ costing a thousand pounds hooker.

Why not make it three, in a chariot

Flown to your penthouse by eunuchs⁰ on leopards? harem attendants ²⁵ Whatever you like, only spare us the details of when

You were struck by your kinship with Dante and Vergil.⁷

And don't feel obliged to remind us just now

What it was Robert Lowell⁸ appeared to be saying—

You'd read him the poem you mean to read us—

30 When the doors of the lift he was in and you weren't

Began closing. Just leave us the screams

You could hear as the vehicle descended: Poor Cal.

Up to then he'd been perfectly normal. Ah, well.

2001

VIKRAM S E T H

b. 1952

*From The Golden Gate*¹

5.1

A week ago, when I had finished

Writing the chapter you've just read

And with avidity undiminished

Was charting out the course ahead,

5 An editor—at a plush party

(Well-wined, -provisioned, speechy, hearty)

Hosted by (long live!) Thomas Cook

Where my Tibetan travel book²

Was honored—seized my arm: “Dear fellow,

io What's your next work?” “A novel ... ” “Great!

We hope that you, dear Mr. Seth—”

“... In verse,” I added. He turned yellow.

7. The greatest Roman poet (70-19 B.C.E.), as (see “Versification,” p. 2032) and stanza form of Dante (1265-1321) is the greatest Italian poet.

the Russian poet Alexander Pushkin's verse novel,

8. American poet (1917-1977; see pp. 1592-

Eugene Onegin (1833), which Seth read in the 1606), known to close friends as Cal (line 32).

English translation of Sir Charles Johnston (1977).

1. Strait in western California that connects San

2. Seth's From Heaven Lake: Travels through Sin-

Francisco Bay with the Pacific Ocean. Set in San

kiang and Tibet (1983) won the Thomas Cook

Francisco in the 1980s, this satirical romance con-Travel Book Award for 1983.

sists of 690 sonnets written in the tetrameter verse

i

T H E G O L D E N G A T E / 1 9 9 5

“How marvelously quaint,” he said,
And subsequently cut me dead.

5 . 2

Professor, publisher, and critic

Each voiced his doubts. I felt misplaced.

A writer is a mere arthritic

Among these muscular Gods of Taste.

5 As for that sad blancmange,⁰ a poet— opaque jelly

The world is hard; he ought to know it.

Driveling in rhyme’s all very well;

The question is, does spittle sell?

Since staggering home in deep depression,

io My will’s grown weak. My heart is sore.

My lyre is dumb. I have therefore

Convoked a morale-boosting session

With a few kind if doubtful friends

Who’ve asked me to explain my ends.

5 . 3

How do I justify this stanza?

These feminine rhymes? My wrinkled muse?^o source of inspiration

This whole passe extravaganza?

How can I (careless of time) use

5 The dusty bread molds of Onegin
In the brave bakery of Reagan?³
The loaves will surely fail to rise
Or else go stale before my eyes.
The truth is, I can't justify it.
io But as no shroud of critical terms
Can save my corpse from boring worms,
I may as well have fun and try it.
If it works, good; and if not, well,
A theory won't postpone its knell.

5 . 4

Why, asks a friend, attempt tetrameter?
Because it once was noble, yet
Capers before the proud pentameter, Tyrant of English. I regret
5 To see this marvelous swift meter
Demean its heritage, and peter
Into mere Hudibrastic tricks,⁴ Unapostolic⁵ knacks and knicks.

3. Ronald Reagan (1911-2004), governor of Cal- satirical poem, Hudibras (1663).

ifornia 1967-75, U.S. president 1981-89. 5. Unorthodox (literally, in a style of which 4. In the style of Samuel Butler's mock-heroic Christ's twelve apostles would have disapproved).

1 9 9 6 / G A R Y S O T O

B u t w h y take all this quite so badly?
10 I w o u l d not, had I world and time⁶
To wait for reason, rhythm, rhyme

To reassert themselves, but sadly
The time is not remote when I Will not be here to wait. That's why.

5.5

Reader, enough of this apology;
But spare me if I think it best,
Before I tether my monology, 0 monologue
To stake a stanza to suggest

5 You spend some unfilled day of leisure
By that original spring of pleasure:

Sweet-watered, fluent, clear, light, blithe
(This homage merely pays a tithe 0 small part Of what in joy and inspiration

io It gave me once and does not cease
To give me) — Pushkin's masterpiece
In Johnston's luminous translation:

Eugene Onegin—like champagne

Its effervescence stirs my brain.

1986

GARY SOTO

b. 1952

The Soup

The lights off, the clock glowing 2:10,

And Molina is at the table drawing what he thinks is soup And its carrots rising through a gray broth.

He adds meat and peppers it with pencil markings.

5 The onion has gathered the peas in its smile.

The surface is blurred with the cold oils squeezed from a lime.

H e adds h o m i n y and potato that bob
In a current of pork fat, f r o m o n e rim to t h e other,
C r a s h i n g into the celery that has c a n o e d s u c h a long way.

io Spoon handle that is a plank an ant climbs.

Saucer that is the slipped disk of a longhorn.

Napkin that is shredded into a cupful of snow.

1 9 7 8

6. Cf. Andrew Marvell, "To His Coy Mistress," line 1 (p. 478).

N O T K N O W I N G / 1 9 9 7

Not Knowing

B y t h e n , b y t h e t i m e m y b r o t h e r

W a s g e t t i n g m a r r i e d , w e e k s b e f o r e t h e o l d

A p a r t m e n t w a s p u l l e d d o w n ,

T h e e v e n i n g s w e r e w a r m a n d t h e s o u n d s o f

5 F r e i g h t t r a i n s a b s o r b e d b y t h r e e o l e a n d e r s , 0
*evergreen shrubs

W h i p p e d b y w i n d a n d i r o n c l a n g i n g .

By then, by the time I was nineteen
And the crickets were hauling their armor
Into the weeds and dusty bushes,
10 I was thinking that I would have to read more
e.

I had to put together the meaning of our neighbor
Fighting in bed, then loving in bed from 3:30 to 4:00.

I would have to read more. My other neighbor

Had painted his porch light blue, and the first 15 Black family on our college-poor street

Were so friendly that they disturbed my views
About trust and mistrust. And I was stymied

When my brother and I tried

To remove the refrigerator

20 Down a narrow flight of steps.

Now it was stuck, lodged between

The walls, an absurd physics for the wrecking crew To solve. The beast of machinery would start up And the old apartment would come down
w n

25 The weekend my brother would pin

A carnation to his lapel, the ruffle of petal

Perfuming the air as he walked down the aisle.

By then, by the time my brother was ready

And the refrigerator was leaking

30 Its gray liquids and gases,

I would sit my sorrow on a lawn,

Flattening the grass with the heel of my palm

.

The grass springing back from this kind of pressure,
Another physics I couldn't figure on paper

35 Or a blackboard of low math. The spin

Of light and wind

And the residue

Of an exhausted star told me nothing.

After my brother was gone

40 I sat with a book on the lawn,

The evening blood-red in the west

And my palm pressing the balance of solitary grass, The world of unknowable forces stirring

Every live and dead tree.

1995

1998

BRADLEITHAUSER

b. 1953

The Buried Graves

From the pier, at dusk, the dim

Billowing arms of kelp

Seem the tops of trees, as though

Not long ago

5 A summer woods stood here, before a dam

Was built, a valley flooded.

Such a forest would release

Its color only slowly,

And the leafy branches sway, as they'd

io More lightly swayed
Under a less distant sun and far less Even weather. Now, deeper down,
Those glimmers of coral might
Be the lots of some hard-luck
15 Town, or — depositing on the dead
A second bed —
A submerged cemetery. ... To this mute, Envisioned, birdless wood would Come a kind of autumn, at a time
20 Sea-season, with foliage tumbling
Through a weighty, trancelike fall;
And come, as well,
Soon in the emptying fullness of time,
A mild but an endless winter.

1985

In Minako Wada's House

In old Minako Wada's house
Everything has its place,
And mostly out of sight:
Bedding folded away
5 All day, brought down
From the shelf at night,
Tea things underneath
Low tea table and tablecloth —
And sliding screen doors,

io Landscape-painted, that hide

OLDBACHELOR BROTHER / 1999

Her clothes inside a wash
Of mountains. Here, the floors
Are a clean-fitting mosaic,
Mats of a texture like 15 A broom's; and in a niche
In the tea room wall
Is a shrine to all of her Ancestors, before which She sets each day
20 A doll-sized cup of tea,
A doll-sized bowl of rice.
She keeps a glass jar
Of crickets that are fed fish
Shavings, a eggplant slice,
25 And whose hushed chorus,
Like the drowsy toss
Of a baby's rattle, moves in
On so tranquil a song
It's soon no longer heard.
30 The walls are thin
In Minakowada's little house,
Open to every lifting voice
On the street — by day, the cries
Of the children, at night
35 Those excited, sweet,
Reiterated goodbyes
Of men full of beer who now Must hurry home. Just to Wake in the night inside this nest,

40 Late, the street asleep (day done, Day not yet begun), is what Perhaps she loves best.

1985

Old Bachelor Brother

Here from his prominent but thankfully uncentral position at the head of the church —

a flanking member of the groom's large party —

he stands and waits to watch the women march 5 up the wide aisle, just the way they did at last night's long and leaden-joked rehearsal.

2000 / GJERTRUDSCHNACKENBERG

Only this time, it's all changed. There's snow a crowd, of course, and walls of flit stained glass, and Purcell

ringing from the rented organist,

10 and yet the major difference, the one that hits his throat as a sort of smoky thirst, is how, so far away, the church's main doors are flung back, uncovering a square of sun that streams into the narthex, 0 so that t covered walkway 15 the women whom materialize

e there

do so in blinding silhouette,

and these are not the women he has hallowed and kissed, and who have bored, ignored, or r teased him, but girls — whose high, garla

nded hair goes haloed 20 by the noon-light...
The years have dropped from them.

One by one they 'rebodied forth, edged with h flame, as new as flame, destined to part the
sea

offaces one each side, and approaching him in all their passionate anonymity.

1990

GJERTRUDSCHNACKENBERG

b. 1953

Darwin1 in 1881

Sleepless as Prospero back in his bedroom
In Milan, with all his miracles

Reduced to sailors' tales, 2

He sits up in the dark. The islands loom.

5 His seasickness upwells,

Silence creeps by in memory as it crept

By him on water, 3 while the sailors slept, F rom broken eggs and vacant tortoise shells
s.

His voyage around the cape of middle age

io Comes, with a feat of insight, to a close, Th
esameway Prospero's

Ended before he left the stage

To be led home across the blue-white sea,
When he had spoken of the clouds and globe
, 15 Breaking his wand, and taking off his robe:
4

Knowledge increases unreality.

1. Henry Purcell (ca. 1659-1695), English com-

Prospero is the usurped and exiled duke of Milan;

poser.

at the play's end, he is restored to his dukedom.

1. The English naturalist Charles Darwin (1809-1882), who developed a theory of evolution. Cf. The Tempest 1.2.395: "This music crept by me upon the waters."

2. In Shakespeare's The Tempest, the magician

4. Allusion to Prospero's words: "the great globe

D A R W I N I N 1 8 8 1 / 2 0 0 1

He quickly dresses.

Form wavers like his shadow on the stair

As he descends, in need of air

20 To cure his dizziness,

Down past the ship-sunk emptiness

Of grownup children's rooms and hallways where

The family portraits stare,

All haunted by each other's likenesses.

25 Outside, the orchard and a piece of moon

Are islands, he an island as he walks,

Brushing against weed stalks.

By hook and plume

The seeds gathering on his trouser legs

30 Are archipelagoes, like nests he sees

Shadowed in branching, ramifying trees,

Each with unique expressions in its eggs.

Different islands conjure

Different beings; different beings call

35 From different isles. And after all

His scrutiny of Nature
All he can see
Is how it will grow small, fade, disappear,
A coastline fading from a traveler
40 Aboard a survey ship. Slowly,
As coasts depart,
Nature had left behind a naturalist
Bound for a place where species don't exist,
Where no emergence has a counterpart.
45 He's heard from friends
About the other night, the banquet hall
Ringing with bravos—like a curtain call,
He thinks, when the performance ends,
Failing to summon from the wings
50 An actor who had lost his taste for verse,
Having beheld, in larger theaters,
Much greater banquet vanishings
Without the quaint device and thunderclap Required in Act 3.s
55 He wrote, Let your indulgence set me free,⁶
To the Academy, and took a nap
Beneath a London Daily tent,
Then pattered on his hothouse walk
Watching his orchids beautifully stalk
60 Their unreturning paths, where each descendant
Is the last—
Their inner staircases itself, / Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolve; / makes it disappear with thunder and (as in the

And, like this insubstantial pageant faded, / Leave stage direction) “a quaint device” (3.3.52).

not a rack behind” (4.1.153-55) and “Rut this

6. Prospero’s final speech, the last line of the play rough magic / I here abjure... . I’ll break my staff” (Epilogue 20). Academy: The Royal Society for the (5.1.50-54).

Improving of Natural Knowledge.

5. Prospero conjures up a banquet and then

2002 / G J E R T R U D S C H N A C K E N B E R G

H a u n t e d b y v a n i s h e d i n s e c t f a c e s

S o t i n y , s o i n t o l e r a b l y v a s t .

65 A n d , w h i l e t h e y g a v e h i s p r o x y t h e a w a r d ,

H e d i n e d i n D o w n e 7 a n d s t a y e d u p r a t h e r l a t e

F o r b a c k g a m m o n w i t h h i s b e l o v e d m a t e ,

W h o r e a d s h i s b o o k s a n d i s , q u i t e f r a n k l y , b o r e d .

N o w , d o n e w i t h b e e t l e j a w s a n d b e a k s o f g u l l s 70 A n d b i v a l v e h i n g e s , n o w , u t t e r l y d o n e ,

O n e m i r a c l e r e m a i n s , a n d o n l y o n e .

A n o c e a n s w e l l o f s i c k n e s s r u s h e s , p u l l s , H e l e a n s a g a i n s t t h e f e n c e

A n d l i g h t s a c i g a r e t t e a n d d e e p l y d r a w s ,

75 D o n e w i t h f i x e d l a w s ,

D o n e w i t h e x p e r i m e n t s

W i t h i n h i s g r e e n h o u s e h e a v e n w h e r e

H i s o f f s p r i n g , F r a n k , f o r h a l f t h e a f t e r n o o n

P l a y e d , l i k e a n a w k w a r d a n g e l , h i s b a s s o o n

s o I n t o t h e h u m i d a i r

So he could tell
If sound would make a Venus's-flytrap close.
And, done for good with scientific prose,
That raging hell
85 Of tortured grammars writing on their stakes, He'd turned to his memoirs, chuckling to write About his boyhood in an upright
Home: a boy preferring gartersnakes
To schoolwork, a lazy, strutting liar
90 Who quite provoked her aggravated look, Shushed in the drawing room behind her book, His bossy sister itching with desire
To tattletale — yes, that was good.
But even then, much like the conjurer
95 Grown cranky with impatience to abjure
All his gigantic works and livelihood
In order to immerse
Himself in tales where he could be the man
In Once upon a time there was a man,
100 He'd quite by chance beheld the universe:
A disregarded game of chess
Between two love-dazed heirs
Who fiddle with the tiny pairs
Of statues in their hands, 8 while numberless
5 Abstract unseen
Combinations on the silent board remain
Unplayed forever when they leave the game
To turn, themselves, into a king and queen.
Now, like the coming day,

n o I n h a l e d s m o k e i l l u m i n a t e s h i s n e r v e s .

7. Darwin's home.

8. That is, playing chess, as in The Tempest 5.1.173 ff.

S U P E R N A T U R A L L O V E / 2 0 0 3

He turns, taking the sandwalk as it curves

Back to the yard, the house, the entrance way

Where, not to waken her,

He softly shuts the door,

115 And leans against it for a spell before

He climbs the stairs, holding the banister,

Up to their room: there

Emma sleeps, moored

In illusion, blown past the storm he conjured

120 With his book,⁹ into a harbor

Where it all comes clear,

Where island beings leap from shape to shape

As to escape

Their terrifying turns to disappear.

125 He lies down on the quilt,

He lies down like a fabulous-headed

Fossil in a vanished riverbed,

In ocean drifts, in canyon floors, in silt,

In lime, in deepening blue ice,

130 In cliffs obscured as clouds gather and float;

He lies down in his boots and overcoat,

And shuts his eyes.

1 9 8 2

Supernatural Love

My father at the dictionary-stand
Touches the page to fully understand
The lamplit answer, tilting in his hand
His slowly scanning magnifying lens,
5 A blurry, glistening circle he suspends
Above the word "Carnation." Then he bends
So near his eyes are magnified and blurred,
One finger on the miniature word,
As if he touched a single key and heard
io A distant, plucked, infinitesimal string,
"The obligation due to every thing That's smaller than the universe." I bring My sewing needle close enough that I
Can watch my father through the needle's eye,
15 As through a lens ground for a butterfly

9. Prospero's book of magic helped him conjure a tempest. Darwin's book On the Origin of Species by Means of Natural Selection (1859) was equally powerful, culturally and scientifically.

2 0 0 4 / G J E R T R U D S C H N A C K E N B E R G

Who peers down flower-hallways toward a room
Shadowed and fathomed as this study's gloom
Where, as a scholar bends above a tomb
To read what's buried there, he bends to pore 20 Over the Latin blossom. I am four,
I spill my pins and needles on the floor
Trying to stitch "Beloved" X by X.
My dangerous, bright needle's point connects Myself illiterate to this perfect text

25 I cannot read. My father puzzles why
It is my habit to identify Carnations as “Christ’s flowers,” knowing I Can give no explanation but “Because.”
Word-roots blossom in speechless messages
30 The way the thread behind my sampler does
Where following each X I awkward move
My needle through the word whose root is love.
He reads, “A pink variety of Clove, Carnatio, the Latin, meaning flesh.”
35 As if the bud’s essential oils brush
Christ’s fragrance through the room, the iron-fresh Odor carnations have floats up to me,
A drifted, secret, bitter ecstasy,
The stems squeak in my scissors, Child, it’s me,
40 He turns the page to “Clove” and reads aloud:
“The clove, a spice, dried from a flower-bud.”
Then twice, as if he hasn’t understood,
He reads, “From French, for clou, meaning a nail.”
He gazes, motionless. “Meaning a nail.”
45 The incarnation blossoms, flesh and nail,
I twist my threads like stems into a knot
And smooth “Beloved,” but my needle caught
Within the threads, Thy blood so dearly bought,
The needle strikes my finger to the bone.
50 I lift my hand, it is myself I’ve sewn,
The flesh laid bare, the threads of blood my own,
I lift my hand in startled agony

And call upon his name, “Daddy daddy”—

My father’s hand touches the injury

THE BUTCHER’S WIFE / 2005

55 As lightly as he touched the page before,

Where incarnation bloomed from roots that bore

The flowers I called Christ’s when I was four.

1985

LOUISE ERDRICH

b. 1954

The Butcher’s Wife

I

Once, my braids swung heavy as ropes.

Men feared them like the gallows.

Night fell

When I combed them out.

5 Noon could see me in the dark.

Then I stood still

Too long and the braids took root.

I wept, so helpless.

The braids tapped deep and flourished.

io A man came by with an ox on his shoulders.

He yoked it to my apron

And pulled me from the ground.

From that time on I wound the braids around my head So that my arms would be free to tend him.

15 He c o u l d l i f t a g r o w n m a n b y t h e b e l t w i t h h i s t e e t h .

I n a c o n t e s t , h e ' d p r e s s a w h o l e h o g , a s i d e o f b e e
f .

H e l o v e d h i s h i g h b a l l s , h i s h e r r i n g , a n d t h e a t t e n t i o n s o f w o m e n .

H e d i e d p o u n d i n g h i s c h e s t w i t h n o l a s t w o r d f o r a n y o n e .

T h e g i n v e s s e l s i n h i s f a c e b r o k e a n d d a r k e n e d
. I t r a c e d t h e m 20 F a r f r o m t h a t r o o m i n t o B r e m e n o n t h e S e a .¹

T h e n a r r o w s t r e e t s t w i s t e d d o w n t o t h e p i e r s .

A n d f a r o f f , i n t h e b l a c k , r o c k i n g w a t e r , t h e l i g h t s o f t r a w l e r s B e c k o n e d , l i k e t h e h e a r t ' s u n c e r t a i n s i g n a l s ,

F a i n t , a n d f i n a l .

1984

1. Germany's oldest seaport, today the second largest after Hamburg.

2006 / L O U I S E E R D R I C H

I Was Sleeping Where the Black Oaks Move

W e w a t c h e d f r o m t h e h o u s e

a s t h e r i v e r g r e w , h e l p l e s s

a n d t e r r i b l e i n i t s u n f a m i l i a r b o d y .

W r e s t l i n g e v e r y t h i n g i n t o i t ,

5 t h e w a t e r w r a p p e d a r o u n d t r e e s u n t i l t h e i r l i f e - h o l d w a s b r o k e n .

T h e y w e n t d o w n , o n e b y o n e ,

a n d t h e r i v e r d r a g g e d o f f t h e i r c o v e r i n g .

N e s t s o f t h e h e r o n s , r o o t s w a s h e d t o b o n e s ,

10 s n a g s o f s o a k e d b a r k o n t h e s h o r e l i n e :

a whole forest pulled through the teeth of the spillway. Trees surfacing singly, where the river poured off into arteries for fields below the reservation.
15 When at last it was over, the long removal,
they had all become the same dry wood.
We walked among them, the branches
whitening in the raw sun.

Above us drifted herons, 20 alone, hoarse-voiced, broken, settling their beaks among the hollows.
Grandpa said, These are the ghosts of the tree people,
moving above us, unable to take their rest.

Sometimes now, we dream our way back to the heron dance.

25 Their long wings are bending the air into circles through which they fall.

They rise again in shifting wheels.

How long must we live in the broken figures their necks make, narrowing the sky.

1984

Birth

When they were wild

When they were not yet human

When they could have been anything,

I was on the other side ready with milk to lure them,
5 And their father, too, each name a net in his hands.

1989

2007

CAROLANNDUFFY

b. 1955

Warming Her Pearls

Next to my own skin, her pearls. My mistress bids me wear them, warm them, until evening when I'll brush her hair. At six, I place them round her cool, white throat. All day I think of her, resting in the Yellow Room, contemplating silk or taffeta, which gown tonight? She fans herself whilst I work willingly, my slow heat entering each pearl. Slack on my neck, her rope.

She's beautiful. I dream about her in my attic bed; picture her dancing with tall men, puzzled by my faint, persistent scent beneath her French perfume, her milkstones.

I dust her shoulders with a rabbit's foot, watch the soft blush seep through her skin like an indolent sigh. In her looking-glass my red lips part as though I want to speak.

Full moon. Her carriage brings her home. I see her every movement in my head... Undressing, taking off her jewels, her slim hand reaching for the case, slipping naked into bed, the way she always does... And I lie here awake, knowing the pearls are cooling even now in the room where my mistress sleeps. All night I feel their absence and I burn.

1993

Prayer

S o m e d a y s , a l t h o u g h w e c a n n o t p r a y , a p r a y e r u t t e r s i t s e l f . S o , a w o m a n w i l l l i f t h e r h e a d f r o m t h e s i e v e o f h e r h a n d s a n d s t a r e a t t h e m i n i m s o s u n g b y a t r e e , a s u d d e n g i f t .

short notes 5 S o m e n i g h t s , a l t h o u g h w e a r e f a i t h l e s s , t h e t r u t h e n t e r s o u r h e a r t s , t h a t s m a l l f a m i l i a r p a i n ; t h e n a m a n w i l l s t a n d s t o c k - s t i l l , h e a r i n g h i s y o u t h i n t h e d i s t a n t L a t i n c h a n t i n g o f a t r a i n .

2 0 0 8 / C A R O L A N N D U F F Y

Pray for us now. Grade I piano scales¹

10 console the lodger looking out across a Midlands² town. Then dusk, and someone calls

a child's name as though they named their loss.

Darkness outside. Inside, the radio's prayer—

Rockall. Malin. Dogger. Finisterre.³

1 9 9 3

Anne Hathaway⁴

” I t e m I g y v e u n t o m y w i e f m y s e c o n d b e s t b e d . . .
”

(f r o m S h a k e s p e a r e ' s w i l l)

The bed we loved in was a spinning world

of forests, castles, torchlight, clifftops, seas

where he would dive for pearls. My lover's words were shooting stars which fell to earth as kisses

5 on these lips; my body now a softer rhyme

to his, now echo, assonance; his touch

a verb dancing in the centre of a noun.

Some nights, I dreamed he'd written me, the bed

a page beneath his writer's hands. Romance io and drama played by touch, by scent, by taste.
In the other bed, the best, our guests dozed on, dribbling their prose. My living laughing love—
I hold him in the casket of my widow's head
as he held me upon that next best bed.

1 9 9 9

Little Red-Cap

At childhood's end, the houses petered out into playing fields, the factory, allotments⁰ vegetable plots kept, like mistresses, by kneeling married men,
the silent railway line, the hermit's caravan,
5 till you came at last to the edge of the woods.
It was there that I first clapped eyes on the wolf.
He stood in a clearing, reading his verse out loud
in his wolfy drawl, a paperback in his hairy paw, red wine staining his bearded jaw. What big ears
io he had! What big eyes he had! What teeth!
In the interval, I made quite sure he spotted me,
sweet sixteen, never been, babe, waif, and bought me a drink,

1. Musical exercises for beginners.

casts.

2. Central counties in England.

4. William Shakespeare's wife (1557?-1623).

3. Coastal regions named in British weather fore-

INADUPLXNEARTHESANANDREASF AULT / 2009

my first. You might ask why. Here's why. Poetry.

The wolf, I knew, would lead me deep into the woods,
15 away from home, to a dark tangled thorny place lit by the eyes of owls. I crawled in his wake, my stockings ripped to shreds, scraps of red from my blazer snagged on twig and branch, murder clues. I lost both shoes but got there, wolf's lair, better beware. Lesson one that night, 20 breath of the wolf in my ear, was the love poem.

I clung till dawn to his thrashing fur, for what little girl doesn't dearly love a wolf?5

Then I slid from between his heavy matted paws
and went in search of a living bird—white dove—25 which flew, straight, from my hands to his open mouth.

One bite, dead. How nice, breakfast in bed, he said, licking his chops. As soon as he slept, I crept to the back of the lair, where a whole wall was crimson, gold, aglow with books.

Words, words were truly alive on the tongue, in the head,
30 warm, beating, frantic, winged; music and blood.

But then I was young—and it took ten years in the woods to tell that a mushroom stoppers the mouth of a buried corpse, that birds are the uttered thought of trees, that a greying wolf 35 howls the same old song at the moon, year in, year out, season after season, same rhyme, same reason. I took an axe to a willow to see how it wept. I took an axe to a salmon to see how it leapt. I took an axe to the wolf as he slept, one chop, scrotum to throat, and saw 40 the glistening, virgin white of my grandmother's bones.

I filled his old belly with stones. I stitched him up.
Out of the forest I come with my flowers, singing, all alone.

1999

DIONISIOD . MARTINEZ

b. 1956

In a Duplex Near the San Andreas Fault¹

When she tells him about the lump in her breast,
he kisses her on the shoulder for the first time—a natural reflex twenty-some years in the making. Suddenly,

5. Cf. Sylvia Plath, “Daddy,” line 48 (p. 1841).

1. An active strike-slip fault extending from San Francisco to southern California.

2010 / DIONISIOD . MARTINEZ

their entire vocabulary revolves around benign

5 and malignant—words reserved for these occasions—though they will say very little now, then nothing for a long time. His hands are just as pale and nearly as fragile as rice paper,

but she’s not familiar with rice paper

10 and what she wants most desperately now is a point of reference. Calla lilies bloom like some glorious, abandoned music out on the lawn.

She takes one of his hands and thinks of the spathe, which has the responsibility

15 of being leaf and petal, content and shape: without it there would be no calla lily to remember,

nothing to see when she closes

her eyes and places his hand on her breast.

1 9 9 5

From What the Men Talk About When the Women Leave the Room

*Stieglitz*²

The room itself. The women. The absence of women in the room. What the absence of women does to a room. The sound of all those women getting up and leaving; all of them at once, like wild 5 birds or hunger. How the world can be conquered if only ... Just don't tell the women.

What the absence of women will do to men eventually. Fears. Men talk about fears, bad dreams, women leaving, the room swelling with io the absence of women. Bad dreams have a way of walking in the room when the women leave.
Each dream is an afterimage of a woman leaving.

1 9 9 5

2. Alfred Stieglitz (1864—1946), American photographer; husband of the artist Georgia O'Keeffe.

L I - Y O U N G L E E

b. 1957

Persimmons

In sixth grade Mrs. Walker slapped the back of my head and made me stand in the corner for not knowing the difference between persimmon and precision.

How to choose

persimmons. This is precision.
Ripe ones are soft and brown-spotted.
Sniff the bottoms. The sweet one will be fragrant. How to eat:
put the knife away, lay down newspaper.
Peel the skin tenderly, not to tear the meat.
Chew the skin, suck it,
and swallow. Now, eat
the meat of the fruit,
so sweet,
all of it, to the heart.

Donna undresses, her stomach is white.

In the yard, dewy and shivering with crickets, we lie naked, face-up, face-down.

I teach her Chinese.

Crickets: chiu chiu. Dew: I've forgotten.

Naked: I've forgotten.

Ni, wo: you and me.

I part her legs,
remember to tell her
she is beautiful as the moon.

Other words

that got me into trouble were fight and fright, wren and yarn.

Fight was what I did when I was frightened, fright was what I felt when I was fighting.

Wrens are small, plain birds,

yarn is what one knits with.
Wrens are soft as yarn.
My mother made birds out of yarn.
I loved to watch her tie the stuff;
a bird, a rabbit, a wee man.
Mrs. Walker brought a persimmon to class and cut it up
so everyone could taste

2012 / LI - YOUNG LEE

a Chinese apple. Knowing it wasn't ripe or sweet, I didn't eat 45 but watched the other faces.
My mother said every persimmon has a sun inside, something golden, glowing,
warm as my face.
Once, in the cellar, I found two wrapped in newspaper,
50 forgotten and not yet ripe.
I took them and set both on my bedroom windowsill,
where each morning a cardinal sang, The sun, the sun.
Finally understanding 55 he was going blind,
my father sat up all one night
waiting for a song, a ghost.
I gave him the persimmons,
swelled, heavy as sadness,
60 and sweet as love.
This year, in the muddy lighting of my parents' cellar, I rummage, looking for something I lost.

My father sits on the tired, wooden stairs,
65 black cane between his knees,
hand over hand, gripping the handle.

He's so happy that I've come home.

I ask how his eyes are, a stupid question.

All gone, he answers.

70 Under some blankets, I find a box.

Inside the box I find three scrolls.

I sit beside him and untie

three paintings by my father:

Hibiscus leaf and a white flower.

75 Two cats preening.

Two persimmons, so full they want to drop from the cloth.

He raises both hands to touch the cloth,
asks, Which is this?

This is persimmons, Father.

so Oh, the feel of the wolftail on the silk,

the strength, the tense

precision in the wrist.

I painted them hundreds of times

eyes closed. These I painted blind.

85 Some things never leave a person:

scent of the hair of one you love,

THE ANTHILL / 2013

the texture of persimmons,

in your palm, the ripe weight.

1 9 8 6

Out of Hiding

Someone said my name in the garden,
while I grew smaller in the spreading shadow of the peonies, grew larger by my absence to another, 5 grew older among the ants, ancient under the opening heads of the flowers,
new to myself, and stranger.

When I heard my name again, it sounded far,
like the name of the child next door,
io or a favorite cousin visiting for the summer,
while the quiet seemed my true name,
a near and inaudible singing
born of hidden ground.

Quiet to quiet, I called back.

15 And the birds declared my whereabouts all morning.

2001

C Y N T H I A Z A R I N

b. 1959

The Ant Hill

Sand pyramid, size of a child, each September
it was moved thirty feet back from the veranda's longest shadow, which stopped in its daily violet slope near the withering yew. Moved gently, with a wide flat shovel. From the kitchen, the wrecked hill was a slag heap, its mussel
color germinating in rain to brown, to velvet, to mica,

so that after a time a reflection shone from it and scattered, and each June, Mother said aloud

2014 / CYNTHIA ZARIN

10 that it seemed the house moved closer to the hill, even though the hill was long moved back.

For the little girls who watched, who heard,
each tremble-leg was a signal in their own patois,
a wave good-bye, the whole a black bead curtain 15 like the one at Mrs. Hennessey's, where sometimes, of an afternoon, they were left—her doorway with its there, not there, its speechless partings, the dark italic hedge too small to read. A decade of exile: of school, of being sent to bed, of being

20 told to put the book down, as every year the ants were wrenched from their own tenacious fondness for the veranda pilings, for the black blossoms of old tires that clung to them like clematis until—a moving picture of transit—the ants crossed over again

25 for their mysterious attendance on the flagstones, the hill again grown pointed, night-colored, earth turned to mirror-water, a satellite by the fence post that was flattened, excavated, removed.

And then the white house was a flipped coin,

30 by and by deserted, its face showing not the sun but the moon, and the girls who drew with a stick

under the yew and learned their letters now stood under its cracked limbs to bicker, to divide the world between them to say what Mother

35 said, to speak too subtly, about the ant hill now taller than the pilings, the veranda turned violet as its shadow.

1 9 9 3

Song

My heart, my dove, my snail, my sail, my milktooth, shadow, sparrow, fingernail, flower-cat and blossom-hedge, mandrake
root now put to bed, moonshell, sea-swell, 5 manatee, emerald shining back at me,
nutmeg, quince, tea leaf and bone, zither,

WHAT 'S GOING ON / 2 0 1 5

cymbal, xylophone; paper, scissors, then there's stone—Who doesn't come through the door to get home?

1 9 9 3

LAVINIA GREENLAW

b. 1962

Skin Full

I laugh till my jaw unhinges,
we hold me in with ribboning fingers.
Moderation in moderation. Who said that?
It makes extraordinary sense to me.
5 You say that life is a three-legged race.
They show us the door and we have some difficulty,
bound like that from thigh to ankle.
The street is a blanket. We will sleep with you on your front, me on your back,

io The night will be endless and we will be endless,
layer on layer, infinitely warm.

I sing as we lie shoulder to shoulder and tell you there is no such thing as anything that is not a small circle. Now it is morning.

15 Can the bones we broke out of be mended?
My eyes ... The sun picks over their embers.

1 9 9 7

What's Going On

The demolition crew are petulant.
Swinging the ball, they could lay bets and lose.
We cannot help but stand in the street,
smile up at the light where half the roof
5 has fallen away and the sky comes at us from all three sides through a couple of windows, surprisingly large and somehow intact.

1 9 9 7

2 0 1 6 / G L Y N M A X W E L L

A World Where News Travelled Slowly
It could take from Monday to Thursday and three horses. The ink was unstable, the characters0 cramped, the paper tore where it creased.
letters

Stained with the leather and sweat of its journey,
5 the envelope absorbed each climatic shift,
as well as the salt and grease of the rider who handed it over with a four-day chance that by now things were different and while the head

had to listen, the heart could wait.

10 Semaphore¹ was invented at a time of revolution;
the judgement of swing in a vertical arm.

News travelled letter by letter, along a chain of towers,
each built within telescopic distance of the next.

The clattering mechanics of the six-shutter telegraph is still took three men with all their variables added to those of light and weather, to read, record and pass the message on.

Now words are faster, smaller, harder

... we're almost talking in one another's arms.

20 Coded and squeezed, what chance has my voice to reach your voice unaltered and to leave no trace?

Nets tighten across the sky and the sea bed.

When London made contact with New York,
there were such fireworks, City Hall caught light.

25 It could have burned to the ground.

1 9 9 7

GLYN M A X W E L L

b. 1962

From Letters to Edward Thomas¹

for Derek Walcott²

*

Poem to Mr Thomas and Mr Frost,

Created by a dandelion you passed

As you in talk about a stanza crossed

1. Signaling apparatus, consisting of an upright

pp. 1253—56), whose friendship with the Ameri-

post with a moveable arm or arms with lanterns can poet Robert Frost (1874-1963; see pp. 1227-attached, for use (especially on railways) by day or 45) was of central importance to the lives and work
night.

of both men.

1. (Philip) Edward Thomas (1878-1917; see

2. West Indian poet (b. 1930; see pp. 1820-29).

LETTERSTO EDWARD THOMAS / 2017

Half Herefordshire,³ till you sat at last

5 In silence. I'm the dandelion that saw

Two aspens shake and shed in a quick wind,

And tried to loose her own leaves to the floor

Like they did and did manage in the end,

When they were both long gone in the great storm.⁴

10 One to the west and one to the east, away

Towards the blood-commander in the dawn

And all his soldiers, pink becoming grey.

And you won't see this, if you live as long

As what you sent me: "As the team's head-brass"⁵

15 It starts but isn't titled. If I'm wrong

And your great hands one day are holding these

Dandelion hairs,

The storm would not have come, the trees have kept

Their ground, and through the hearts of all the shires

20 Would Mr Thomas and Mr Frost have stepped

And war like a rough sky

Been overlooked in talk, and blown on by.

Poem for Mr Edward Eastaway,⁶

Who lives here care of me, so no one knows

25 His name is Rumpelstiltskin⁷ and by day

He rips your verse to pieces in great prose.

By night he turns his prose to poetry

Because a poet told him to who saw

A mighty fine recruit for poverty

30 And wrote the line that opened his front door.

They have rejected Edward Eastaway

Again: the letter came this afternoon.

One knows precisely what a fool will say

Somehow. We've many stars to the one moon

35 In our night sky, but all that makes a face

Of that recurring rock is the one sun

It likes, without which it must find its place

To hide behind, or make believe it's gone.

Edward Eastaway,

40 Whose name that isn't and whose time it ain't,

Who's living here or was just yesterday,

Or in Wales, Wiltshire, Oxfordshire or Kent,⁸

The rumour's that you crossed

The Channel. Stanza-break, sighs Mr Frost.

3. English county on the Welsh border.

7. Malevolent dwarf in traditional fairy tale col-

4. World War I, also known as the Great War lected and transcribed from oral sources by the (1914-18).

brothers Jacob and Wilhelm Grimm.

5. The opening words of one of Thomas's poems

8. The latter three are English counties southeast

(see p. 1255).

of Herefordshire—stepping-stones toward the

6. Thomas published his first poems under the English channel (line 44).

pseudonym Edward Eastaway.

2018 / GLYN MAXWELL

D e a r F a t h e r T h o m a s , e v e r y C h r i s t m a s E v e

G o o d c h i l d r e n o f t h e w o r l d a r e q u i t e a s s h y
A s I a m t o w r i t e Dear a n d t h e n b e l i e v e F o r t w e n t y l i n e s o u r g o o d n e s s c o u l d b e w h y I t ' s w o r t h o u r t i m e . O u r f a i t h t u r n s t o t h i s t h r e a d
T h a t s h u t t l e s d o w n w a r d w h i l e t h e m i s c h i e v o u s N e e d n o t h i n g b u t a c o a l s a c k b y t h e b e d ,

A n d w a k e t o t h e s a m e c a r o l s . E a c h o f u s

I s w r i t i n g , E d w a r d , a s k i n g t h e g r e a t s p a c e
B e l o w u s w h a t i s m i s s i n g s t i l l , w h a t g i f t

W i l l m a k e u s w h o l e a g a i n . W e f o l d a n d p l a c e
O u r a n s w e r s i n t h e c h i m n e y a n d a r e l e f t

T h e s e p i n k e m b a r r a s s e d a u t h o r s b y t h e f i r e .

W e a l l t a l k t o m y - r o t ° w e u n d e r s t a n d .

nonsense* S o m e b o d y c o u g h s , p o l i t e l y t o e n q u i r e

D i d t h e y n o t k i c k a b a l l o n N o M a n ' s L a n d

T w o y e a r s a g o ? 9 " T h a t ' s s o , "

S m i l e s P e t e r , a d d i n g : " N o t t o n i g h t , I f e a r . "

A n d I h e a r G e o r g e ' s v o i c e s a y : " C r i c k e t , t h o u g h h , S o E d w a r d g e t s a k n o c k . " 0 B u t h e ' s n o t h e r e, opportunity to bat George, he's where you are,

 Restless tonight like all good children are.
 One dead was sent a Valentine, so both
 Were spared their lover's blushes. What I write
 Is on its way nowhere, is less than breath, Somight be anything, as nothing might.
 It's that there's nothing now that doesn't seem
 As if it's where it ended. All the paths
 Beyond this word or this become the same:
 Tickets, or a handing-down of deaths
 As by a school official, not a teacher,
 A visiting official by one gate.
 Now all the hope there is is in a picture
 Of P. E. Thomas gone, because my fate
 Is never to foresee, believed or no.
 I stobewrong. These words are packing up
 And going. Words I mean you not to know
 Don't see why they should move in any step
 I fix them with. So go,
 You English words, I while he's alive, and blow
 Through all of him so Englishmen will know
 You loved him and who cares how long ago,
 And hide him from the light
 He'll strike and hold until his clay's a light.
day pipe 9. Preparing the men of his company for their part platoon to reach the German trenches. No Man's in the Allied assault on July 1, 1916, the first day Land: unoccupied area between opposing armies.

 of the Battle of the Somme, Captain Neville of the

1. Edward Thomas, "Words," lines 10—11:

8th East Surrey Regiment gave each of his four

“Choose me / You English words?”

platoons a football and offered a prize for the first

LETTERSTOEDWARDTHOMAS/2019

Dear Edward, when the war was over, you 90 Were standing where a wood had been, a nd though Nothing was left for you to name or view

You waited till new trees had hidden you.

Then you came home and in a forest called
The Times your name was found, and not among 95 The officers but in a clearing filled

With verses, yours. Then your new name was assung With all the old. And children lea fi ng through And old men staring and their d aughters stilled With admiration: all this happened too,

100 Or had already by the time you pulled

The book I hidethis in from your top shelf A nd blew its dust away. The year is what,

1930? '40? Please yourself,

But do remember as you smile and sit

105 That everything's foreseen

By a good reader, as I think I am

On David's Day of 1917,

Reaching for blotting-paper. 2 Now's the time To fold the work away

no And find me on this bleak or brilliant day.

Choose me, Siedeutsche Worte. 3 This is the efirst Of all the letters you will never read,

Edward. I was shy in my own west

Always, so you never read a word

115 I sent, but this is written with a clear A mind as has been opened like a shell.

” Greatly loved in the battery,“0 writes this de ar artillery unit Major Lushington, who says yo u fell

In early morning with some battle won

120 And all the soldiers dancing. You were lo ved In the battery and in the morning sun

Brought out the blessed clay, when some thi ng moved Like cloud perhaps. The Major a sked us round To tell us you knew nothing. T hat your book 125 Of Shakespeare’s Sonnet sthat they knelt and found Was strangely c reased and the clay didn’t break 4

Which Helen 5 gave your son,

And Robert’s North of Boston 6 in your kit

They gave to me, not needing it. And when 130 They reached you you were not marked,

not hit, Breeze blowing in your hair,

Chosen. What had stopped your heart was air.

2. Spongy paper for absorbing ink when writing.

unmarked and his clay pipe unbroken, but the vac-

David’s Day: March 1, feast day of St. David, uum created by the blast creased the pages of his patron saint of Wales.

book and stopped the watch in his pocket.

3. You German words (German). See note 1

5. Thomas’s wife (1877-1967).

directly above.

6. Collection of Frost’s poems (1914), favorably

4. Thomas was killed by the blast of a German reviewed by Thomas.

shell on Easter Monday 1917. His body was

2 0 2 0 / G L Y N M A X W E L L

Dear Edward, now there's no one at the end
There's nothing I can't say. Some eight or nine
I have by heart. Your farmer-poet friend⁷
Is flying around the world on a fine line
That starts in you, or grows out from the days
You passed together. England is the same,
Cheering to order, set in its new ways
It thinks are immemorial. The Somme⁸
Has trees beside it but some shovelwork
Will bring the dead to light. There's so much more
I want to say, because the quiet is dark,
And when the writing ends I reach a shore
Beyond which it's so cold and that's what changed,
Edward, on that Easter Monday.⁹ You
Were land to me, where England unestranged, Were what I thought it had amounted to,
But look at the fields now,
Look eyelessly at them, like the dug men
Still nodding out of Flanders.¹ Tell them how
You walked and how you saw, and how your pen
Did nothing more than that,
And, when it stopped, what you were gazing at.
Dear Edward Thomas, Frost died, I was born.
I am a father and you'd like the names

We gave our girl. I'm writing this at dawn
Where Robert lived, in Amherst,² and your poems
I keep by his, his housebrick to your tile.
I teach you to my students, and aloud
I wonder what you would have come to. While
I wonder they look out at a white cloud
And so we pass the time. Perhaps I'll guess
Which one will ask me what they always ask:
Whom do I write for? Anybody? Yes,
You. And I'll walk home in the great dusk
Of Massachusetts that extends away
Far west and north, the ways you meant to go
To save your life. A good end to the day,
That's going to be. It's going to be cool, though,
I see out in the town,
And start to turn the trees to what the world
Comes flocking here to see: eight shades of brown
Men never saw, and ninety-nine of gold,
More shades than can have names,
Or names to bring them back when the snow comes.

1 9 9 8

7. Frost. coming "to light" (142) in the fields of Flanders.

8. French river, site of the major battle mentioned 2. From 1917 until 1938, Frost taught at Amherst in note 9 above. College (in Amherst, Massachusetts), where Max-9. See note 4, p. 2019. well teaches.

1. Perhaps, "the dead" of line 142 still (at present)

2 0 2 1

S I M O N A R M I T A G E

b. 1963

From Killing Time 1

M e a n w h i l e , s o m e w h e r e i n t h e s t a t e o f C o l o r a d o , a r m e d t o t h e t e e t h w i t h t h o u s a n d s o f f l o w e r s , t w o b o y s e n t e r e d t h e f r o n t d o o r o f t h e i r o w n h i g h s c h o o l a n d f o r a l m o s t f o u r h o u r s

5 g a v e f l o r a l t r i b u t e s t o f e l l o w s t u d e n t s a n d m e m b e r s o f s t a f f ,

b e g i n n i n g w i t h r e d r o s e s

s t r e w n a m o n g s t u n s u s p e c t i n g p u p i l s d u r i n g t h e i r l u n c h h o u r , f o l l o w e d b y p o s i e s o f p e a c e l i l i e s a n d w i l d o r c h i d s . M o s t t h o u g h t t h e w h o l e s h o w i o w a s o n e e l a b o r a t e h o a x u s i n g s i l k r e p l i c a s o f t h e r e a l t h i n g , p l a s t i c i m i t a t i o n s , e x q u i s i t e p r a c t i c a l j o k e s , b u t t h e f l o w e r s w e r e n o m o r e f a k e t h a n y o u o r I , a n d w e r e h a n d e d o u t

15 a s c o m p l i m e n t s r e t u r n e d , f a v o u r s r e p a i d , i n g o o d f a i t h , s t r a i g h t f r o m t h e h e a r t .

N o w o u l d n o t b e t a k e n f o r a n a n s w e r . T h e r e f o r e a d a f f o d i l w a s t u c k e d b e h i n d t h e e a r

o f a b o y i n a b a s e b a l l h a t , a n d m a r i g o l d s a n d p e o n i e s 20 t h r e a d e d t h r o u g h t h e h a i r

o f t h o s e c a u g h t o n t h e s t a i r s o r s p o t t e d a l o n g c o r r i d o r s , u n t i l e v e r y p u p i l

w h o l o o k e d u p f r o m b e h i n d a d e s k c o u l d e x p e c t t o b e m e t w i t h a t l e a s t a p e t a l

25 o r a d u s t i n g o f p o l l e n , i f n o t a n e n t i r e d a i s y - c h a i n , o r t h e c o l o u r - b u r s t o f a d o z e n f o x g l o v e s , f l o w e r i n g f o r a l l t h e i r w o r t h , o r a b u t t o n h o l e t o t h e b r e a s t .

Upstairs in the school library, individuals were singled out 30 for special attention:

some were showered with blossom, others wore their blooms like brooches or medallions;

even those who turned their backs or refused point-blank to accept such honours

35 were decorated with buds, unseasonable fruits and rosettes the same as the others.

By which time a crowd had gathered outside the school, drawn through suburbia

by the rumour of flowers in full bloom, drawn through the air 40 like butterflies to buddleia, 2 like honeybees to honeysuckle, like hummingbirds dipping their tongues in,

1. In what came to be known as the Columbine day, twelve students, one teacher, and the two Massacre, two seniors of Columbine High School, murderers were dead.

Colorado, went to school on April 20, 1999, armed

2. Also known as “butterfly bush.”

with guns, knives, and bombs. At the end of the

2022 / SIMON ARMITAGE

some to soak up such over-exuberance of thought, others to savour the goings-on.

45 Finally, overcome by their own munificence or hay fever, the flower-boys pinned

the last blooms on themselves, somewhat selfishly perhaps, but had also planned

further surprises for those who swept through the aftermath

50 of broom and buttercup:
garlands and bouquets were planted in lockers and cupboards, timed to erupt
like the first day of spring into the arms of those who, during the first bout, 55 either by fate or chance had somehow been overlooked and missed out.

Experts are now trying to say how two apparently quiet kids from an apple-pie town could get their hands on a veritable rain-forest of plants 60 and bring down
a whole botanical digest of one species or another onto the heads
of classmates and teachers,
and where such fascination began, and why it should lead to an outpouring of this nature.

65 And even though many believe that flowers should be kept in expert hands only, or left to specialists in the field such as florists, the law of the land dictates that God, guts and gardening made the country 70 what it is today and for as long as the flower industry can see to it things are staying that way.

What they reckon is this: deny a person the right to carry flowers of his own 75 and he's liable to wind up on the business end of a flower somebody else has grown.

As for the two boys, it's back to the same old debate:
is it something in the mind that grows from birth, like a seed, or is it society
so makes a person that kind?

1 9 9 9

The Shout

We went out
into the school yard together, me and the boy whose name and face
I don't remember. We were testing the range 5 of the human voice:
he had to shout for all he was worth,

OUTBOUND / 2 0 2 3

I had to raise an arm
from across the divide to signal back that the sound had carried.
10 He called from over the park—I lifted an arm.
Out of bounds,
he yelled from the end of the road,
from the foot of the hill,
from beyond the look-out post of Fretwell's Farm—15 I lifted an arm.
He left town, went on to be twenty years dead with a gunshot hole
in the roof of his mouth, in Western Australia.
Boy with the name and face I don't remember,
20 you can stop shouting now, I can still hear you.
2002

G R E G W I L L I A M S O N

b. 1964

Outbound

We live life forwards and think about it backwards

Howard Nemerov¹

We passengers ride backward on the train

And train our eyes on what has passed us by.

A cobalt blur composes

Into a woman picking roses,

5 Who is already fading in the pane

As in the failing hindsight of the eye.

A line of oaks comes into focus, fades,

Supplanted by the double-dagger poles

Of power companies,

io Footnotes that redefine the trees.

An asterisk in glass, then window shades,

Graffiti, billboards, tattered banderoles⁰ long scrolls

Of southbound birds... . Whatever comes to view

Corrects the view, but never will explain

15 The random next event

1. American poet (1920-1991; see pp. 1623-27).

2 0 2 4 / G R E G W I L L I A M S O N

O r a n y t h i n g b u t w h e r e w e w e n t ,

W h e r e l o n g a g o a w o m a n w e a r i n g b l u e

B e g a n f o r g e t t i n g s o m e o n e o n a t r a i n .

1 9 9 5

*From Double Exposures*²

III. Visiting Couple Kissing and Halved Onion

Unjustly I've imposed upon my friends
This? It's an onion that's been cut in half
When they're (how shall I say?) making me
nds Right in the middle of the photograph, 5 After a night of words, and here they stand
d Less like those pure, textbook transparencies
cies Wrapped up in one another, hand in hand,
Than layered and opaque identities,
An arm around a shoulder, face to face,
io Developed in the dark to this full kit
And captured in this rapturous embrace.
Which has so many tears inside of it.

XXV. Group Photo with Winter Trees

These were my neighbors. It's a big group se: On mist-gray skies, the stark, black branches setch Horizon, lawn, in loose haphazard rows.

As if in tin, or as in some old sketch,

5 That's The Great Bob. And that's our good d Queen Paul whose lines, whose every nuance ce was precise, With Champagne Anne and Rick the dog. They're all But faded now.
I've seen the trees in ice,

Decked out (Liz, too, who helped me do the plumbing), io But I'll be gone when their spring blooms and scatter s Even the children. And,
God, they're all becoming.

Shades, as the new leaves turn to other matters.

2001

New Year's: A Short Pantoum³

The sunlight was falling. A part

Pl a y e d o u t i n t h e d e e p s n o w .

W e w e r e a l l t h e r e . A t t h e s t a r t

W e k n e w h o w t h e y e a r w o u l d g o ,

2. The title refers to a form invented by William- bold type, the standard type, and the combination, son, in which three poems can be read in one: the 3. On this verse form, see “Versification,” p. 2046.

N E W Y E A R ‘ S : A S H O R T P A N T O U M / 2 0 2 5

5 P l a y e d o u t i n t h e d e e p s n o w .

T h e s u n l i g h t w a s f a l l i n g a p a r t .

W e k n e w h o w t h e y e a r w o u l d g o .

W e w e r e a l l t h e r e a t t h e s t a r t .

2001

Versification

A p o e m i s a c o m p o s i t i o n w r i t t e n f o r p e r f o r m a n c e b y t h e h u m a n v o i c e . W h a t y o u r e y e s e e s o n t h e p a g e i s t h e c o m p o s e r ‘ s v e r b a l s c o r e , w a i t i n g f o r y o u r v o i c e t o b r i n g i t a l i v e a s y o u r e a d i t a l o u d o r h e a r i t i n y o u r m i n d ‘ s e a r . U n l i k e y o u r r e a d i n g o f a n e w s p a p e r , t h e b e s t r e a d i n g — t h a t i s t o s a y , t h e m o s t s a t i s f y i n g r e a d i n g — o f a p o e m i n v o l v e s a s i m u l t a n e o u s e n g a g e m e n t o f e y e a n d e a r : t h e e y e a t t e n t i v e n o t o n l y t o t h e m e a n i n g o f w o r d s , b u t t o t h e i r g r o u p i n g a n d s p a c i n g a s l i n e s o n a p a g e ; t h e e a r a t t u n e d t o t h e g r o u p i n g a n d s p a c i n g o f s o u n d s . T h e m o r e y o u u n d e r s t a n d o f m u s i c a l n o t a t i o n a n d t h e p r i n c i p l e s o f m u s i c a l c o m p o s i t i o n , t h e m o r e y o u w i l l u n d e r s t a n d a n d a p p r e c i a t e a c o m - poser’s s c o r e . S i m i l a r l y , t h e m o r e y o u u n d e r s t a n d o f v e r s i f i c a t i o n (t h e p r i n c i p l e s a n d p r a c t i c e o f w r i t i n g v e r s e) , t h e m o r e y o u a r e l i k e l y t o u n d e r s t a n d a n d a p p r e c i a t e p o e t r y a n d , i n p a r t i c u l a r , t h e i n t i m a t e r e l a t i o n s h i p b e t w e e n its form and its content. What a poem says or means is the result of how it is said, a fact that poets are often at pains to emphasize. “All my life,” said W. H. Auden, “I have been more interested in technique than anything else.”

And T. S. Eliot claimed that “the conscious problems with which one is concerned in the actual writing are more those of a quasi-musical nature, in the arrangement of metric and pattern, than of a conscious exposition of ideas.” Fortunately, the principles of versification are easier to explain than those of musical composition.

The oldest classification of poetry into three broad categories still holds:

1. Epic: a long narrative poem, frequently extending to several “books” (sections of several hundred lines), on a great and serious subject. See, for example, Spenser’s The Faerie Queene (p. 165), Milton’s Paradise Lost (p. 420), Wordsworth’s The Prelude (p. 781), and Barrett Browning’s Aurora Leigh (p. 948). With one notable exception, Merrill’s The Changing Light at Sandover (p. 1725), the few poems of comparable length to have been written in the twentieth century — for example, Williams’s Paterson and Pound’s Cantos (p. 1306) — have a freer, less formal structure.

2. Dramatic: poetry, monologue or dialogue, written in the voice of a character assumed by the poet. Space does not permit the inclusion in this anthology of speeches from the many great verse dramas of English literature, but sees such dramatic monologues as Tennyson’s “Ulysses” (p. 992), Browning’s “My Last Duchess” (p. 1012), and Howard’s response to that poem, “Nikolaus Mardruz to his Master Ferdinand, Count of Tyrol, 1565”

(p. 1778).

2027

2028 / VERSIFICATION

3. Lyric: originally, a song performed in ancient Greece to the accompaniment of a small harp-like instrument called a lyre. The term is now used for any fairly short poem in the voice of a single speaker, although that speaker may sometimes quote others. The reader should be wary of identifying the lyric speaker with the poet, since the “I” of a poem will frequently be that of a fictional character invented by the poet. The majority of poems in this book are lyrics, and the principal types of lyric will be found set out under “Forms”

(p. 2039).

Rhythm

Poetry is the most compressed form of language, and rhythm is an essential component of language. When we speak, we hear a sequence of syllables.

These, the basic units of pronunciation, can consist of a vowel sound alone or a vowel with attendant consonants: oh; syl-la-ble. Sometimes m, n, and l are counted as vowel sounds, as in riddle (rid-dl) and prism (pri-zm). In words of two or more syllables, one is almost always given more emphasis, as we say, is more heavily stressed than the others, so that what we hear in ordinary speech is a sequence of such units, variously stressed and unstressed as, for example:

A poem is a composition written for performance by the human voice.

We call such an analysis of stressed and unstressed syllables scansion (the action or art of scanning a line to determine its division into metrical feet); and a simple system of signs has been evolved to denote stressed and unstressed syllables and any significant pause between them. Adding such scansion marks will produce the following:

A poem is a composition || written for performance by the human voice.

The double bar, known as a caesura (from the Latin word for “cut”), indicates a natural pause in the speaking voice, which may be short (as here) or long (as between sentences); the “˘” sign indicates an unstressed syllable, and the “ˆ” sign indicates one that is stressed.

The pattern of emphasis, stress, or accent can vary from speaker to speaker and situation to situation. If someone were to contradict my definition of a poem, I might reply:

A poem is a composition ...

with a heavier stress on it than on any other syllable in the sentence. The signs “˘” and “ˆ” make no distinction between varying levels of stress and unstress — it being left to the reader to supply such variations — but some METER / 2029 analysts use the sign “ˆ” to indicate a stress falling between heavy and light.

Most people pay little or no attention to the sequence of stressed and unstressed syllables in their speaking and writing, but to a poet there may be no more important element of a poem.

Meter

If a poem's rhythm is structured into a recurrence of regular — that is, approximately equal — units, we call it meter (from the Greek word for “measure”). For many centuries after its origins were lost in the mists of antiquity, meter was the principal feature distinguishing poetry from prose. There are four metrical systems in English poetry: the accentual, the accentual-syllabic, the syllabic, and the quantitative. Of these, the second accounts for more poems in the English language — and in this anthology — than do the other three together.

Accentual meter, sometimes called strong-stress meter, is the oldest. The earliest recorded poem in the language — that is, the oldest of Old English or Anglo-Saxon poems, Caedmon's seventh-century “Hymn” (p. 1) — employs a line divided in two by a heavy caesura, each half dominated by the two strongly stressed syllables:

H e a e r e s t s c e o p | | a e l d a b e a r n u m

[H e f i r s t c r e a t e d f o r m e n ' s s o n s]

h e o f o n t o h r o f e | | h a l i g S c y p p e n d

[h e a v e n a s a r o o f h o l y c r e a t o r]

Here, as in most Old English poetry, each line is organized by stress and by alliteration (the repetition of speech sounds — vowels or, more usually, consonants — in a sequence of nearby words). In a line structured by accentual meter, one and generally both of the stressed syllables in the first half-line alliterate with the first stressed syllable in the second half-line.

Accentual meter continued to be used into the late fourteenth century, as in Langland's Piers Plowman (p. 71), which begins: In a somer seson,
|| whan soft was the sonne,

[In a summer season when mild was the sun,
]

I shop me in shrouds, || as I a shepe were ...

[I clad myself in clothes as if I'd become a she ep ...]

However, following the Saxons' conquest by the Normans in 1066, Saxon native meter was increasingly supplanted by the metrical patterns of Old French poetry brought to England in the wake of William the Conqueror, although the non-alliterative four-stress line would have a long and lively continuing life — structuring, for example, section 2 of Eliot's "The Dry Salvages." The Old English metrical system has been occasionally revived in more recent times, as for Heaney's translation of Beowulf (p. 2), or the four-2030 stress lines of Coleridge's "Christabel" and Wilbur's "Junk" (p. 1638); and many English poets from Spenser onward have used alliteration in ways that recall the character of Old and Middle English verse.

/VERSIFICATION

Accentual-syllabic meter provided the metrical structure of the new poetry to emerge in the fourteenth century, and its basic unit was the foot, a combination of two or three stressed and/or unstressed syllables. The four most common metrical feet in English poetry are: 1. Iambic (the noun is iamb): an unstressed followed by a stressed syllable, as in "New York." Between the Renaissance and the rise of free verse (p. 2048) in the last century, iambic meter was the dominant rhythm of English poetry, considered by many writers in English as well as classical Latin the meter closest to that of ordinary speech. For this reason, iambic meter is also to be found occasionally in the work of prose writers. Dickens' novel A Tale of Two Cities, for example, begins: It was | the best | of times, || it was | the worst | of times ...

2. Trochaic (the noun is trochee): a stressed followed by an unstressed syllable, as in the word London or the line from the nursery rhyme, London | bridge is | falling | down ...

Here, as in many other trochaic lines, the final unstressed syllable has been dropped. This shortening, which gives prominence to the stressed syllable necessary for rhyme (p. 2036), is called a catalectic line end.

The word London may be a trochee, but it does not have to appear in a trochaic line. Provided its natural stress is preserved, it can take its place comfortably in an iambic line, like that from Eliot's The Waste Land: A crowd | flowed ov | er Lon | don bridge ...

Whereas iambic meter has a certain gravity, making it a natural choice for poems on solemn subjects, the trochaic foot has a lighter, quicker, more buoyant movement. Hence, for example, its use in Milton's "L'Allegro" (lines 25—29, for example, on p. 403) and Blake's "Introduction" to Songs of Innocence (p. 733).

3. Anapestic (the noun is anapest): two unstressed syllables followed by a stressed syllable, as in Tennessee or the opening of Byron's "The Destruction of Sennacherib" (p. 834).

The Assyr | ian came down | like the wolf | on the fold ...

The last three letters of the word Assyrian should be heard as one syllable, a form of contraction known as elision.

4. Dactylic (the noun is dactyl): a stressed syllable followed by two unstressed syllables, as in

Leningrad. This, like the previous “triple” (three-METRE / 2031 syllable) foot, the anapest, has a naturally energetic movement, making it suitable for poems with vigorous subjects, though not these only. See Hardy’s

“The Voice” (p. 1160), which begins:

Woman much | missed, how you | call to me, | call to me ...

Iamb and anapests, which have a strong stress on the last syllable, are said to constitute a rising meter, whereas trochees and dactyls, ending with an unstressed syllable, constitute a falling meter. In addition to these four standard metrical units, there are two other (two-syllable) feet that occur only as occasional variants of the others:

5. Spondaic (the noun is spondee): two successive syllables with approximately equal strong stresses, as on the words “draw back” in the second of these lines from Arnold’s “Dover Beach” (p. 1101): Listen! | you hear | the grat | ing roar

Of peb | bles which | the waves [draw back, | and fling ...

6. Pyrrhic (the noun is also pyrrhic): two successive unstressed or lightly stressed syllables, as in the second foot of the second line above, where the succession of light syllables seem to mimic the rattle of light pebbles that the heavy wave slowly draws back.

Poets, who consciously or instinctively will select a meter to suit their subject, have also a variety of line lengths from which to choose: 1. Monometer (one foot): see the fifth and sixth lines of each stanza of Herbert’s “Easter Wings” (p. 368), which reflect, in turn, the poverty and thinness of the speaker. Herrick’s “Upon His Departure Hence” is a rare example of a complete poem miniambicmonometer. The fact that each line is a solitary foot suggests to the eye the narrow inscription of a gravestone, and to the ear the brevity and loneliness of life.

Thus I

Pass by

And die,

As one,

Unknown,

And gone:

I'm made

A shade,

And laid

I'th grave,

There have

My cave.

Where tell

I dwell,

Farewell.

2032 / VERSIFICATION

2. Dimeter (two feet): iambic dimeter alternates with iambic pentameter in Donne's "A Valediction of Weeping" (p. 300); and dactylic dimeter w w|

^ w w) gives Tennyson's "The Charge of the Light Brigade" (p. 1005) its galloping momentum:

Cannon to right of them,

Cannon to left of them,

Cannon in front of them

Volleyed and thundered;
Stormed at with shot and shell,
Boldly they rode and well,
Into the jaws of Death,
Into the mouth of hell
Rode the six hundred.

Lines 4 and 9, each lacking a final unstressed syllable, are catalectic, a common feature of dactylic as of trochaic poems.

3. Trimeter (three feet): Raleigh's "The Lie" (p. 154) and Roethke's "My Papa's Waltz" (p. 1494) are written in iambic trimeter; and all but the last line of each stanza of Shelley's "To a Skylark" (p. 876) in trochaic trimeter.

4. Tetrameter (four feet): Marvell's "To His Coy Mistress" (p. 478) is written in iambic tetrameter; and Shakespeare's "Fear No More the Heat of the Sun" (p. 276) in trochaic tetrameter.

5. Pentameter (five feet): the most popular metrical line in English poetry, the iambic pentameter provides the basic rhythmic framework, or base rhythm, of countless poems from the fourteenth century to the twenty-first, from Chaucer's "General Prologue" to The Canterbury Tales (p. 19) and Shakespeare's sonnets (p. 257) to Hill's "Lachrimae" (p. 1834) and Schackenberg's "Supernatural Love" (p. 2003). It even contributes to the stately prose of the Declaration of Independence: We hold | these truths | to be | self-ev | ident...

Anapestic pentameter is to be found in Browning's "Saul": As thy love | is discov | ered a l m

ight|y,almight|y,beprovedThypower,|th
atexists|withandfor|Tt,ofKe|ingbeloved
!

A missing syllable in the first foot of the second line gives emphasis to the important word “power,” which Browning (like many nineteenth-century Englishmen, but unlike most twenty-first-century Americans) probably pronounced as a single syllable.

6. Hexameter (six feet): The openings on neto f Sidney’s “Astrophil and Stella” (p. 213) and Dowson’s “Non sum qualis eram bonaesubregno Cynarae” (p. 1211) are written in iambic hexameter, a line sometimes known as an alexandrine (probably after a twelfth-century French poem, the Roman METER / 2033 d’Alexandre). A single alexandrine is often used to provide a resonant termination to a stanza of shorter lines, as, for example, the Spenserian stanza (p. 2042) or Hardy’s “The Convergence of the Twain” (p. 1156), in which the shape of the stanza suggests the iceberg that is the poem’s subject. Swin-

burne’s “The Last Oracle” is written in trochaic hexameter: Day by | day thy | shadow | shines in | heaven be | holden ...

7. Heptameter (seven feet): Kipling’s “Tommy” (p. 1181) is written in iambic heptameter (or fourteeners, as they are often called, from the number of their syllables), with an added initial syllable in three of the four lines that make up the second half of each stanza.

8. Octameter (eight feet): Browning’s “A Toccata of Galuppi’s” (p. 1017) is the most famous example of the rare trochaic octameter.

Poets who write in strict conformity to a single metrical pattern will achieve the music of a metronome and so on drive their listeners away. Variation, surprise, is the very essence of every artist's trade; and one of the most important sources of metrical power and pleasure is the perpetual tension between the regular and the irregular, between the expected and the unpected, the base rhythm and the variation.

John Hollander has spoken of the "metrical contract" that poets enter into with their readers from the first few words of a poem. When Frost begins

"The Gift Outright" —

The land | was ours | before | we were | the land's

— we expect what follows to have an iambic base meter, but the irregularity or variation in the fourth foot tells us that we are hearing not robot speech but human speech. The stress on "we" makes it, appropriately, one of the two most important words in the line, "we" being the most important presence in the "land."

Frost's poem will serve as an example of ways in which skillful poets will vary their base meter:

1. The land | was ours | before | we were | the land's.
2. She was | our land || more than | a hun | dred years
3. Before | we were | her peo | pie. J She | was ours
4. In M a s s | a c h u | setts, || in | V i r g i n | ia,
5. B u t we | w e r e E n g | land's, || sfill | c o l o n | Tals,
6. Possess | ing what | we still | were un | possessed | by.
7. Possessed | by what | we now | no more | possessed.
8. S o m e t h i n g | w e w e r e | w i t h h o l d | i n g m a d e | us w e a k 9. Until | we found | out that | it was | ourselves

10. We were | with hold | ing from | our land | of liv | ing, 11. And forth | with found | salva | tion
in | surren | der.

12. Such as | we were | we gave | ourselves | outright

2034 / VERSIFICATION

13. (The deed | of gift | was man | y deeds | of war
r) 14. To the land | vaguely | real | izing | west war d, 15. But still | unstor | ied, || art | less, || un | en h
anced, 16. Such as | she was, || such as | she wou ld | become.

The iambic pentameter gives the poem a stately movement appropriate to the unfolding history of the United States. In the trochaic “reversed feet” at the start of lines 2, 10, 12, and 16, the stress is advanced to lend emphasis to a key word or, in the case of line 8, an important syllable. Spondees in lines 2 (“our land”) and 3 (“her people”) bring into equal balance the two partners whose union is the theme of the poem. Such additional heavy stresses are counterbalanced by the light pyrrhic feet at the end of lines 4 and 5, in the middle of line 10, and toward the end of line 14. The multiple irregularities of that line give a wonderful impression of the land stretching westward into space, just as the variations of line 16 give a sense of the nation surging toward its destiny in time.

Frost’s reading of this poem at President Kennedy’s inauguration differed at a number of points from the above scansion, in that it was more colloquial, less emphatic, but a author cannot control others’ reading of their work as they control its writing. Scansion is to some extent a matter of interpretation, in which the rhetorical emphasis a particular reader prefers alters t h e stress p a t t e r n . O t h e r r e a d e r s o f “T h e G i f t O u t r i g h t ” m i g h t — n o l e s s c o r r e c t l y —

p r e f e r t h e f o l l o w i n g r h e t o r i c a l v a r i a t i o n s o f t h e b a s e m e t e r : 7 . . . w e n o w . . .

9. U n t i l | w e f o u n d . . .

A n i m p o r t a n t f a c t o r i n v a r y i n g t h e p a t t e r n o f a p o e m i s t h e p l a c i n g o f i t s p a u s e s , o r c a e s u r a e
. O n e f a l l i n g i n t h e m i d d l e o f a l i n e — a s i n l i n e 4 a b o v e —

i s k n o w n a s a m e d i a l c a e s u r a ; o n e f a l l i n g n e a r t h e s t a r t o f a l i n e , a n i n i t i a l c a e s u r a ; a n d o n e f a l l i n g n e a r o r a t t h e e n d o f a l i n e , a t e r m i n a l c a e s u r a .

W h e n a c a e s u r a o c c u r s a s i n l i n e s 13 a n d 14 a b o v e , t h o s e l i n e s a r e s a i d t o b e e n d - s t o p p e d . L i n e s 3 a n d 9 , h o w e v e r , a r e c a l l e d r u n - o n l i n e s (o r , t o u s e a F r e n c h t e r m , t h e y e x h i b i t e n j a m b m e n t — ” a s t r i d i n g o v e r ”) , b e c a u s e t h e t h r u s t o f t h e i n c o m p l e t e d s e n t e n c e c a r r i e s o n o v e r t h e e n d o f t h e v e r s e l i n e .

S u c h t r a n s i t i o n s t e n d t o i n c r e a s e t h e p a c e o f t h e p o e m , a s t h e e n d - s t o p p i n g o f l i n e s 10 t h r o u g h 16 s l o w s i t d o w n .

A s t r i k i n g l y o r i g i n a l a n d i n f l u e n t i a l b l e n d i n g o f t h e O l d E n g l i s h a c c e n t u a l a n d m o r e m o d e r n a c c e n t u a l - s y l l a b i c m e t r i c a l s y s t e m s w a s s p r u n g r h y t h m , c o n c e i v e d a n d p i o n e e r e d b y G e r a r d M a n l e y H o p k i n s .

Finding the cadences of his Victorian contemporaries — what he called their “common rhythm” — too measured and mellifluous for his liking, he sought a stronger, more muscular verse movement. Strength he equated with stress, arguing that “even one stressed syllable may make a foot, and consequently two or more stresses may come running [one after the other], which in common rhythm can, regularly speaking, never happen.” In his system of sprung rhythm, each foot began with a stress and could consist of a single stressed syllable a trochee (^ w), a dactyl (^ w w), or what he METE called a first paeon w w w). His lines will, on occasion, admit to the unstressed syllables, as in the sonnet “Felix Randal” (p. 1168): Felix | Randal, || the | farrier, || O is he | dead then? || my |
R / 2035

duty all | ended,

Who have | watched his [mould of man, || big- | boned and | hardy-1 handsome

Pining, || pining, || till | time when | reason | ramble d in it | and some

Fatal | four dis | orders, || fleshed there, || all con | tended?

A poetry structured on the principle that strength is stress is particularly well suited to stressful subjects, and the sprung rhythm of what Hopkins called his “terrible sonnets” (pp. 1167—72), for example, gives them a dramatic urgency, a sense of anguished struggle that few poets have equalled in accentual-syllabic meter.

A number of other poets have experimented with two other metrical systems.

Syllabic meter measures only the number of syllables in a line, without regard to their stress. Being an inescapable feature of the English language, stress will of course appear in lines composed on syllabic principles, but will fall variously, and usually for rhetorical emphasis, rather than in any formal metrical pattern. When Marianne Moore wished to attack the pretentious-ness of much formal "Poetry" (p. 1329), she shrewdly chose to do so in syllabics, as lines in syllabic meter are called. The effect is carefully informal and prosaic, and few unalerted readers will notice that there are 19 syllables in the first line of each stanza; 22 in the second; 11 in the third (except for the third line of the third stanza, which has 7); 5 in the fourth; 8 in the fifth; and 13 in the sixth. That the poem succeeds in deflating Poetry (with a capital P) while at once celebrating poetry and creating it is not to be explained by Moore's talent for arithmetics so much as by her unobtrusive skill in modulating the stresses and pauses of colloquial speech. The result is a music like that of good free verse (p. 2048).

Because stress plays virtually no role in Romance languages such as French and Italian and in Japanese, their poetry tends to be syllabic in construction.

One Japanese form that has taken root in English poetry on both sides of the Atlantic and beyond is the haiku, a three-line poem of seventeen syllables (divided 5, 7, 5). The haiku traditionally offers an image from the natural world — a flower, a branch of cherry blossom — and this convention Paul Muldoon adopts and adapts in his series of 110 "Hopewell Haiku":
Good Friday. At three,

a swarm of bees sets its heart

o n a n a p p l e t r e e .

Brilliantly, t h e I r i s h R o m a n C a t h o l i c g r a f t s o n t o a f o r m i n e x t r i c a b l y l i n k e d w i t h t h e J a p a n e s e S h i n t o r e l i g i o n a n i m a g e o f C h r i s t d y i n g o n t h e c r o s s a t t h r e e i n t h e a f t e r n o o n o n t h e f i r s t G o o d F r i d a y . E z r a P o u n d a d a p t e d t h e J a p a n e s e f o r m i n a p o e m w h o s e t i t l e i s a n i n t e g r a l p a r t o f t h e w h o l e : 2 0 3 6 / V E R S I F I C A T I O N

In a Station of the M e t r o

T h e a p p a r i t i o n o f t h e s e f a c e s i n t h e c r o w d ;

P e t a l s o n a w e t , b l a c k b o u g h .

T h e s y l l a b l e c o u n t h e r e (8 , 1 2 , 7) b e a r s o n l y a t o k e n r e l a t i o n t o t h a t o f t h e s t r i c t J a p a n e s e p a t t e r n , b u t t h e p o e m s u c c e e d s l a r g e l y b e c a u s e i t s i n t e r n a l r h y m e s (p . 2 0 3 7) — S t a t i o n / a p p a r i t i o n ; M e t r o / p e t a l s / w e t ; c r o w d / b o u g h— p o i n t u p a s e r i e s o f d i s t i n c t s t r e s s e d s y l l a b l e s t h a t s u g g e s t , i n a n i m p r e s s i o n i s t f a s h i o n , a s e r i e s o f d i s t i n c t w h i t e f a c e s . O t h e r A m e r i c a n m a s t e r s o f t h i s f o r m a r e R i c h a r d W r i g h t (p . 1 5 0 2) a n d R i c h a r d W i l b u r (p . 1 6 3 2) , w h o s e p o e m “Zea” (p . 1 6 4 0) i s c o m p o s e d o f s t a n z a s o f r h y m e d h a i k u l i k e M u l d o o n ‘ s .

A n u m b e r o f m o d e r n p o e t s — a m o n g t h e m A u d e n , D y l a n T h o m a s , a n d G u n n — h a v e w r i t t e n n o t a b l e p o e m s i n s y l l a b i c s ; t h e i r e f f o r t s t o c a p t u r e t h e s p i r i t — i f n o t t h e l e t t e r — o f a f o r e i g n l i n g u i s t i c a n d p o e t i c t r a d i t i o n m a y b e c o m p a r e d w i t h t h o s e o f m a n y p o e t s s i n c e t h e R e n a i s s a n c e w h o h a v e a t t e m p t e d t o r e n d e r G r e e k a n d L a t i n m e t e r s i n t o E n g l i s h v e r s e , u s i n g t h e f o u r t h m e t r i c a l s y s t e m t o b e c o n s i d e r e d h e r e .

Q u a n t i t a t i v e m e t e r , w h i c h s t r u c t u r e s m o s t G r e e k , S a n s k r i t , a n d l a t e r L a t i n p o e t r y , i s b a s e d o n n o t i o n s o f a s y l l a b l e ‘ s “ q u a n t i t y , ” i t s d u r a t i o n i n t i m e (o r i t s l e n g t h) . T h i s i s d e t e r m i n e d b y v a r i o u s c o n v e n t i ons of spelling as well as by the type of vowel sound it contains. Complexities arise because Latin has more word-stress than does ancient Greek, and hence there is often an alignment of stress and quantity in foot-patterns of later Latin verse. This is ironic in light of the efforts, on the part of some Renaissance English poets, to “ennoble” the vernacular English tradition by following classical metrical models. Although poets like Spenser and Sidney devised elaborate rules for determining the “length” of English syllables according to ancient rules, the theoretical prescriptions often generated poems in which “long” syllables are in fact stressed syllables. Indeed, one defender of quantitative meter in English, Thomas Campion, explicitly recommended a metrical system aligning stress with quantity; he illustrated his theory with some highly successful poems such as “Rose-cheeked Laura” (p. 280). Although some Renaissance experiments in quantitative meter produced poems distinctly less pleasing to the ear than to the (highly educated) eye, others, such as those in Sidney’s Arcadia, work well and remind us that experiments in cultural translation — some more successful than others — have been an enduring part of the English poetic tradition from the Anglo-Saxon era to the present.

Rhyme

Ever since the poetry of Chaucer sprang from the fortunate marriage of Old French and Old English, rhyme (the concurrence, in two or more lines, of the last stressed vowel and of all speech sounds following that vowel) has been closely associated with rhythm in English poetry. It is to be found in the early poems and songs of many languages. Most English speakers meet it first in nursery rhymes, many of which involve numbers (“One, two, /

RHYME / 2037

Buckle my shoe”), a fact supporting the theory that rhyme may have had its origin in primitive religious rites and magical spells. From such beginnings, poetry has been inextricably linked with music — Caedmon’s “Hymn” (p. 1) and the earliest popular ballads (p. 97) were all composed to be sung — and rhyme has been a crucial element in the music of poetry. More than any other factor it has been responsible for making poetry memorable. Its function is a good deal more complicated than may at first appear, in that by associating one rhyme-word with another, poets may introduce a remote constellation of associations that may confirm, question, or on occasion deny the literal meaning of their words. Consider, for example, the opening eight lines, or octave (p. 2042), of Hopkins’s sonnet “God’s Grandeur” (p. 1166):

1. The world is charged with the grandeur of God.
2. It will flame out, like shining from shook foil;
3. It gathers to a greatness, like the ooze of oil
4. Crushed. Why do men then now not reckon his rod?
5. Generations have trod, have trod, have trod;
6. And all is seared with trade; bleared, smeared with toil;
7. And wears man’s smudged and shares man’s smell: the soil
8. Is bare now, nor can a foot feel, being shod.

The grand statement of the first line is illustrated not by the grand examples that the opening of lines 2 and 3 seem to promise, but by the surprising similes of shaken tin foil and olive oil oozing from its press. The down-to-earthiness that these objects have in common is stressed by the foil / oil rhyme that will be confirmed by the toil / soil of lines 6 and 7. At the other end of the cosmic scale, “The grandeur of God” no less appropriately rhymes with “his rod.” But what of the implicit couplet

ing of grand God and industrial humanity in the ending trod / shod rhymes of lines 5 and 8? These rhymes remind Hopkins's reader that Christ, too, was a worker, a walker of hard roads, and that "the grandeur of God" is manifest in the world through which the weary generations tread.

Rhymes appearing like these at the end of a line are known as end rhymes, but poets frequently make use of internal rhymes such as the then / men of Hopkins's line 4, the seared / hleared / smeared of line 6, or the wears / shares of line 7. Assonance (the repetition of identical or similar vowel sounds) is present in the not/rod of line 4. This sonnet also contains two examples of a related sound effect, onomatopoeia, sometimes called echoism, a combination of words whose sounds seem to resemble the sound it denotes. So, in lines 3 and 4, the long, slow, alliterative vowels — "ooze of oil" — seem squeezed out by the crushing pressure of the heavily stressed verb that follows. So, too, the triple repetition of "have trod" in line 5 seems to echo the thudding boots of the laboring generations.

All the rhymes so far discussed have been what is known as masculine rhymes in that they consist of a single stressed syllable. Rhyme words in which a stressed syllable is followed by an unstressed syllable — chiming / rhyming—are known as feminine rhymes. Single (one-syllable) and double (two-syllable) rhymes are the most common, but triple and even quadruple rhymes are also to be found, usually in a comic context like that of Gilbert's 2038 / VERSIFICATION

"I Am the Very Model of a Modern Major-General"
(p. 1144) or Byron's Don Juan (p. 837):

But — Oh! ye lords of ladies intellectual,

Inform us truly, have they not been -pecked you all?

If the correspondence of rhyming sounds is exact, it is called perfect rhyme or else full or true rhyme. For many centuries, almost all English writers of serious poems confined themselves to rhymes of this sort, except for an occasional poetic license (or violation of the rules of versification) such as *eye rhyme*s, words whose endings are spelled alike, and in most instances were pronounced alike, but have in the course of time acquired a different pronunciation: prove/love; daughter /laughter. Since the nineteenth century, however, an increasing number of poets have felt the confident claims of perfect rhymes inappropriate for poems of doubt, frustration, and grief, and have used various forms of imperfect rhyme, including:

Off-rhyme (also known as half rhyme, near rhyme, or slant rhyme) differs from perfect rhyme in changing the vowel sound and/or the concluding consonants expected of perfect rhyme. See Byron's gone /alone rhyme in the second stanza of "On This Day I Complete My Thirty-sixth Year" (p. 862), or Dickinson's rhyming of Room / Storm; firm / Room; and he / Fly in "I heard a Fly buzz - when I died -" (p. 1121).

Vowel rhyme goes beyond off-rhyme to the point at which rhyme words have only their vowel sound in common. See, for example, the muted but musically effective rhymes of Dylan Thomas's "Fern Hill" (p. 1571): houghs / towns; green / leaves; starry / barley; climb / eyes / light.

Pararhyme, in which the stressed vowel sounds differ but are flanked by identical or similar consonants, is a term coined by Edmund Blunden to describe Wilfred Owen's pioneering use of such rhymes. Although they had occurred on occasion before — see trod / trade in lines 5 and 6 of "God's Grandeur" — Owen was the first to employ pararhyme consistently. In a poem such as "Strange Meeting" (p. 1389), the second rhyme is usually lower in pitch (has a deeper vowel sound) than the first, producing effects of dissonance, failure, and unfulfillment that subtly reinforce Owen's theme. The last stanza of his "Miners" shows a further refinement:

The centuries will burn rich loads
With which we groaned,
Whose warmth shall lull their dreaming lids,
While songs are crooned.
But they will not dream of us poor lads,
Left in the ground.

Here, the pitch of the pararhyme rises to reflect the dream of a happier future — loads / lids—before plunging to the desolate reality of lads, a rise and fall repeated in groaned / crooned / ground.

The effect of rhyming — whether the chime is loud or muted — is to a large extent dictated by one rhyme's distance from another, a factor frequently dictated by the rhyme scheme of the poet's chosen stanza form. At one FORMS / 2039 extremes stands the monorhyme, a poem of no predetermined meter, line-length, or number of lines; the sole requirement being its one rhyme. The greater the length of a monorhyme, the greater the difficulty of achieving the conversational fluency and ease of Dick Davis's "Monorhyme for the Shower":

Lifting her arms to soap her hair
Her pretty breasts respond — and there
The movement of that buoyant pair
Is like a spell to make me swear
Twenty odd years have turned to air;
Now she's the girl I didn't dare

Approach, ask out, much less declare
My love to, mirrored in young despair.
Childbearing, rows, domestic care —
All the prosaic wear and tear
That constitute the life we share —
Slip from her beautiful and bare Bright body as, made half aware
Of my quick surreptitious stare,
Shewrings the water from her hair
And turnings smile to see me there.

At the other end of the spectrum of rhyme stands Paul Muldoon's use of the same (or virtually the same) rhymes of the ninety-line poem, "Third Epistle to Timothy" (p. 1981), in the same order, in four other ninety-line poems: "Yarrow," "Incantata," "The Mud Room," and "The Bangle (Slight Return)."

Only marginally less remarkable is Dylan Thomas's "Author's Prologue," a poem of 102 lines, in which line 1 rhymes with line 102, line 2 with 101, and so on, down to the central couplet of lines 51—52. Rhyme schemes, however, are seldom so taxing for poets (or their readers) and, as with their choice of meter, are likely to be determined consciously or subconsciously by their knowledge of earlier poems written in this or that form.

Forms

Basic Forms

Having looked at—and listened to—the ways in which metrical feet combine in a poetic line, one can move on to see—and hear—how such lines combine in the larger patterns of the dance, what are known as the forms of poetry.

1. Blank verse, at one end of the scale, consists of unrhymed (hence "blank") iambic pentameters. Introduced to England by Surrey in his translations from the Aeneid (1554), it soon became the standard meter for Elizabethan poetic drama. No verse form is closer to the natural rhythms of spoken English or more adaptive to different levels of speech. Following the example of Shakespeare, whose kings, clowns, and country folk have each their own voice when speaking blank verse, it has been used by dramatists from Marlowe to Eliot. Milton chose it for his religious epic Paradise Lost (p. 420), Wordsworth for his autobiographical epic The Prelude (p. 781), and Coleridge for his meditative lyric "Frost at Midnight" (p. 810). During the nineteenth century, it became a favorite form of dramatic monologue such as Tennyson's "Ulysses" (p. 992) and Browning's "Fra Lippo Lippi" (p. 1026), in which a single speaker (who is not the poet) addresses a dramatically defined listener in a specific situation and at a critical moment. All of these poems are divided into verse paragraphs of varying length, as distinct from the stanza of equal length that make up Tennyson's "Tears, Idle Tears"

(p. 995) or Stevens's "Sunday Morning" (p. 1257).

2. The couplet, two lines of verse, usually coupled by rhyme, has been a principal unit of English poetry since rhyme entered the language. The first of the anonymous thirteenth- and fourteenth-century lyrics in this anthology (p. 15) is in couplets, but the first poet to use the form consistently was Chaucer, whose "General Prologue" to The Canterbury Tales (p. 19) exhibits great flexibility. His narrative momentum tends to overrun line endings, and his pentameter couplets are seldom the self-contained syntactic units one finds in Jonson's "On My First Son" (p. 323). The sustained use of such closed couplets attained its ultimate sophistication in what came to be known as heroic couplets ("heroic" because of their use in epic poems or plays), pioneered by Denham in the seventeenth century and perfected by Dryden and Pope in the eighteenth. The Chaucerian energies of the iambic pentameter were reined in, and each couplet made a balanced whole within the greater balanced whole of its poem, "Mac Flecknoe" (p. 517), for example -

ple, or "The Rape of the Lock" (p. 604). As if in reaction against the elevated ("heroic" or "mock heroic") diction and syntactic formality of the heroic couplet, more-recent users of the couplet have tended to veer toward the other extreme of informality. Colloquialisms, frequent enjambement, and variable placing of the caesura mask the formal rhyming of Browning's "My Last Duchess" (p. 1012), as the speaker of that dramatic monologue seeks to mask its diabolical organization. Owen, with the pararrhymes of "Strange Meeting" (p. 1389), and Yeats, with the off-rhymed tetrameters of "Under Ben Bulbin" (p. 1208), achieve similarly informal effects.

3. The tercet is a stanza of three lines traditionally linked with a single rhyme, although the tercets of Williams's "Poem" (p. 1275) and those of some other modern poets are unrhymed. It may also be a three-line section of a larger poetic structure, as, for example, the set of a sonnet (p. 2042). Tercets can be composed of lines of equal length — iambic tetrameter in Herrick's

"Upon Julia's Clothes" (p. 359), trochaic octameter in Browning's "A Toccata of Galuppi's" (p. 1017) — or of different length, as in Hardy's "The Convergence of the Twain" (p. 1156). An important variant of this form is the linked tercet, or terza rima, in which the second line of each stanza rhymes with the first and third lines of the next. A group of such stanzas is commonly concluded with a final line supplying the missing rhyme, as in Wilbur's "First Snow in Alsace" (p. 1632), although Shelley expanded the conclusion to a couplet in his "Ode to the West Wind" (p. 872).

No verse form in English FORMS / 2041

poetry is more closely identified with its inventor than is terza rima with Dante, whose use of it for his Divine Comedy. Shelley invokes the inspiration of his great predecessor in choosing the form for his "Ode" written on the outskirts of Dante's Florence, and T. S. Eliot similarly calls the Divine Comedy to mind with the tercets — unrhymed, but aligned on the page like Dante's — of a passage in part 2 of "Little Gidding" that ends:

"From wrong to wrong the exasperated spirit
Proceeds, unless restored by that refining fire
Where you must move in measure, like a dancer."

The day was breaking. In the disfigured street
He left me, with a kind of valediction,
And faded on the blowing of the horn.

4. The quatrain, a stanza of four lines, rhymed or unrhymed, is the most common of all English stanzaic forms. And the most common type of quatrain is the ballad stanza, in which lines of iambic tetrameter alternate with iambic trimeter, rhyming abcb (lines 1 and 3 being unrhymed) or, less commonly, abab. This, the stanza of popular ballads such as “Sir Patrick Spens”

(p. 103), Coleridge’s literary ballad “The Rime of the Ancient Mariner”

(p. 812), and Dickinson’s “I felt a Funeral, in my Brain” (p. 1115), also occurs in many hymns and is the recalled common meter. The expansion of lines 2 and 4 to tetrameters produces a quatrain known (particularly in hymn books) as long meter, the form of Hardy’s “Channel Firing” (p. 1157).

When, on the other hand, the first line is shortened to a trimeter, matching lines 2 and 4, the stanza is called short meter. Gascoigne uses it for “And If I Did, What Then?” (p. 144) and Hardy uses it for “I Look into My Glass” (p. 1153).

Stanzas of iambic pentameter rhyming abab, as in Gray’s

“Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard” (p. 669), are known as heroic quatrains. The pentameter stanzas of FitzGerald’s “Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam of Naisapur” (p. 961) are rhymed aaba, a rhyme scheme that Frost elaborates in “Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening” (p. 1237), where the third line (unrhymed in the “Rubaiyat”) rhymes with lines 1, 2, and 4 of the following stanza, producing an effect like that of terza rima. Quatrains can also be in monorhyme, as in Rossetti’s “The Woodspurge” (p. 1105); composed of two couplets, as in "Now Go 't the Sun under Wood" (p. 15); or rhymed abba, as in Tennyson's "In Memoriam A. H. H." (p. 996).

5. Rhymeroyal, a seven-line iambic-pentameter stanza rhyming ababbcc, was introduced by Chaucer in Troilus and Criseide (p. 67), but its name is thought to come from its later use by King James I of Scotland in "The Kingis Quair." Later examples include Wyatt's "They Fleefrom Me"
(p. 127) and those somberstanza in Auden's
"The Shield of Achilles" (p. 1479) that describe the twentieth century, as a contrast to the eight-line stanza with a ballad rhythm that describe a mythic past.

6. Ottavarima is an eight-line stanza, as its Italian name indicates, and it rhymes abababcc.
Like terza rima and the sonnet (below), it was introduced to English literature by Sir Thomas Wyatt. Byron put it to brilliant use in Don Juan (p. 83 7), frequently undercutting with a comic couplet these em-

2042 / VERSIFICATION

ing seriousness of the six preceding lines.
Yeats used ottava rima more gravely in "Sailing to Byzantium" (p. 1199) and "Among School Children" (p. 1200).

7. The Spenserian stanza has nine lines, the first eight being iambic pen-

tameter and the last an iambic hexameter (an alexandrine), rhyming ababbcbcc. Chaucer had used two such quatrains, linked by three rhymes, as the stanza form of "The Monk's Tale," but Spenser's addition of a concluding alexandrine gave the stanza he devised for The Faerie Queene (p. 165) an inequality in its final couplet, a variation reducing the risk of monotony that can overtake a long series of iambi pentameters. Keats and Hopkins wrote their earliest known poems in this form, and Keats went on to achieve perhaps the fullest expression of its intricate harmonies in "The Eve of St. Agnes" (p. 907). Partly, no doubt, in tribute to that poem, Shelley used the Spenserian stanza in his great elegy for Keats, "Adonais" (p. 879); later, the form was a natural choice for the narrative of Tennyson's

"The Lotus-Eaters" (p. 988).

Ottavari and the Spenserian stanza each open with a quatrain and close with a couplet. These and other of the shorter stanzaic units similarly recur as component parts of certain lyrics with a fixed form.

8. The sonnet, traditionally a poem of fourteen iambic pentameters linked by an intricate rhyme scheme, is one of the oldest verse forms in English.

Used by almost every notable poet in the language, it is the best example of how rhyme and meter can provide the imagination not with a prison but with a theater. The sonnet originated in Italy and, since being introduced to England by Sir Thomas Wyatt (see his "Whoso List to Hunt," p. 126) in the early sixteenth century, has been the stage for the soliloquies of countless lovers and for dramatic action ranging from a dinner party (p. 1108) to the rape of Leda and the fall of Troy (p. 1200). There are two basic types of sonnet—the Italian, or Petrarchan (named after the fourteenth-century Italian poet Petrarch), and the English, or Shakespearean—and a number of variant types, of which the most important is the Spenserian. They differ in their rhyme schemes, and consequently their structure, as shown on p. 2043.

.

The Italian sonnet, with its distinctive division into octave (an eight-line unit) and sestet (a six-line unit), is structurally suited to a statement followed by a counterstatement, as in Milton's "When I Consider How My Light Is Spent" (p. 418). The blind poet's questioning of divine justice is checked by the voice of Patience, whose haste "to prevent That murmur" is conveyed by the accelerated turn (change in direction of argument or narrative) on the word "but" in the last line of the octave, rather than the first of the sestet.

Shelley's "Ozymandias" (p. 870) follows the same pattern of statement and counterstatement, except that its turn comes in the traditional position.

Another pattern common to the Italian sonnet—observation (octave) and amplifying conclusion (sestet)—underlies Keats's "On First Looking into Chapman's Homer" (p. 905) and Hill's "The Laurel Axe" (p. 1835). Of these, only Milton's has a sestet conforming to the conventional rhyme scheme:

$$\left. \begin{array}{c} a \\ b \\ b \\ a \end{array} \right\}$$

$$\left. \begin{array}{c} a \\ b \\ b \\ a \end{array} \right\}$$

The Italian Sonnet

The English Sonnet

a

First

First

b

quatrain

quatrain

a

b

Octave

c

Second

Second

d

quatrain

quatrain

c

d

e

Third

f

quatrain

e

Turn

f

First

tercet

Sestet

Turn

Second

Couplet

tercet

The Spenserian Sonnet

First

quatrain

Second

quatrain

Third

quatrain

Couplet

i :

2044 / VERSIFICATION

others, such as Donne's "Holy Sonnets" (p. 318), end with a couplet, sometimes causing them to be mistaken for sonnets of the other type.

The English sonnet falls into three quatrains, with a turn at the end of line 12 and a concluding couplet often of a summary or epigrammatic character. M. H. Abrams has well described the unfolding of Drayton's "Since there's no help, come let us kiss and part" (p. 238): "The lover brusquely declares in the first two quatrains that he is glad the affair is cleanly broken off, pauses in the third quatrain as though at the threshold, and in the last two rhymed lines suddenly drops his swagger to make one last plea."

Spenser, in the variant form that bears his name, reintroduced to the English sonnet the couplets characteristic of the Italian sonnet. This interweaving of the quatrains, as in sonnet 75 of his "Amoretti" (p. 194), makes possible a more musical and closely developed argument, and tends to reduce the sometimes excessive assertiveness of the final couplet. That last feature of the English sonnet is satirized by Brooke in his "Sonnet Reversed," which turns romantic convention upside down by beginning with the couplet:

Hand trembling towards hand; the amazing lights

Of heart and eye. They stood on supreme heights.

The three quatrains that follow record the ensuing anticlimax of suburban married life. Meredith in "Modern Love" (p. 1107) stretched the sonnet to sixteen lines; Hopkins cut it short in what he termed his curtal (a curtailed form of "curtailed") sonnet "Pied Beauty" (p. 1167); while Shakespeare concealed a sonnet in Romeo and Juliet (1.5.90—103). Shakespeare's 154 better-known sonnets form a carefully organized progression, or sonnet sequence, following the precedent of earlier sonneteers such as Sidney with his "Astrophil and Stella"

(p. 213) and Spenser with his “Amoretti” (p. 190). In the nineteenth century, Elizabeth Barrett Browning’s “Sonnets from the Portuguese” (p. 947) continued a tradition in which the author of “Berryman’s Sonnets” has since, with that title, audaciously challenged the author of Shakespeare’s sonnets.

The twentieth century saw the introduction to English poetry of a Russian sonnet, the stanza form of Alexander Pushkin’s verse novel, Eugene Onegin (1823—31). This was successfully translated—preserving its original form—by Sir Charles Johnston in 1977; but it was not until 1986 that the Pushkinian stanza first entered English poetry, in its own right, in Vikram Seth’s verse novel, The Golden Gate (p. 1994). Arguably the most technically demanding of all English poetic forms, the Pushkinian stanza is composed of fourteen tetrameter (not pentameter) lines rhyming as follows:

a f e m i n i n e rhyme (p. 2037)

b masculine rhyme (p. 2037)

a feminine

b masculine

c feminine

c feminine

d masculine

F O R M S / 2 0 4 5

D

masculine

e feminine

f masculine

f masculine

e feminine

g masculine

g

masculine

9. The villanelle, a French verse form derived from an earlier Italian folk song, retains the circular pattern of a peasant dance. It consists of five tercets rhyming aha followed by a quatrain rhyming ahaa, with the first line of the initial tercet recurring as the last line of the second and fourth tercets and the third line of the initial tercet recurring as the last line of the third and fifth tercets, these two refrains (lines of regular recurrence) being again repeated as the last two lines of the poem. If A1 and A2 may be said to represent the first and third lines of the initial tercet, the rhyme scheme of the villanelle will look like this:

tercet 1: A1 B A2

2: A B A1

3: A B A2

4: A B A1

5: A B A2

quatrain: A B A1 A2

The art of writing complicated forms like the villanelle and sestina (see below) is to give them the graceful momentum of good dancing, and the vitality of the dance informs triumphant examples such as Roethke's "The Waking" (p. 1500), Bishop's "One Art" (p. 1527), and Thomas's "Do Not Go Gentle into That Good Night" (p. 1572).

10. T h e s e s t i n a , the most complicated of the verse forms initiated by the twelfth-century wandering singers known as troubadours, is c o m p o s e d of six stanzas of six lines each, followed by an envoy, or concluding stanza, that incorporates lines or words used before: in this case the words (instead of rhymes) end each line in the following pattern:

stanza 1: A B C D E F

2: F A E B D C

3: C F D A B E

4: E C B F A D

5: D E A C F B

6: B D F E C A

envoy: E C A or A C E [these lines should contain the remaining three end words]

T h e earliest example in this anthology is, in fact a double sestina: Sidney's

“Ye Goatherd Gods” (p. 208). Perhaps daunted by the intricate brilliance of this, f e w poets attempted the form for the next three centuries. It was reintroduced by Swinburne and Pound, w h o prepared the way for notable contemporary examples such as Bishop's “Sestina” (p. 1520), Hecht's “The Book of Yolek” (p. 1566), and Ashbery's “The Painter” (p. 1736).

2046 / V E R S I F I C A T I O N

11. T h e c a n z o n e , another verse form initiated by the twelfth-century troubadours, has a history of varying lengths and patterns. It often consists of five twelve-line stanzas and a five-line envoy, all employing the same five line-end words. A c o m m o n pattern of repetition is that followed (with minor variations) by Agha Shahid Ali's “Lenox Hill” (p. 1959): abaacaadae /

eaebeeccedd / deddaddbbcc / cdceccaacbb / bcbdbbbeebaa / abcde.

12. The pantoum, a Malayan form in origin, entered English poetry by way of nineteenth-century French poetry. It may consist of any number of quatrains, lines 2 and 4 of which are repeated as lines 1 and 3 of the next quatrain.

The poem rhymes abab / bcbc, and so on, and generally ends with a quatrain whose repetitions (repeated lines) are lines 1 and 3 of the first stanza in reversed order, or in a repetition couplet consisting of lines 1 and 3 of the first stanza in reversed order. See Donald Justice's "Pantoum of the Great Depression" (p. 1687) and Greg Williamson's "New Year's: A Short Pantoum" (p. 2024).

13. The limerick (to end this section on the first of two lighter notes) is a five-line stanza thought to take its name from an old custom at convivial parties whereby each person was required to sing an extemporized "nonsense verse," which was followed by a chorus containing the words "Will you come up to Limerick?" The acknowledged Old Master of the limerick is Edward Lear (p. 1041), who required that the first and fifth lines end with the same word (usually a place-name), a restriction abandoned by many Modern Masters, though triumphantly retained by the anonymous author of this:

There once was a man from Nantucket

Who kept all his cash in a bucket;

But his daughter named Nan

Ran away with a man,

And as for the bucket, Nantucket.

14. The clerihew, named after its inventor, Edmund Clerihew Bentley (1875—1956), is a short comic or nonsensical poem about a famous person, consisting of two rhymed couplets with lines of unequal length. Some of the best are to be found in W. H. Auden's "Academic Graffiti"—this, for example:

John Milton

Never stayed in a Hilton Hotel,

W h i c h was just as well.

Composite Forms

Just as good poets have always varied their base rhythm, there have always b e e n those ready to bend, stretch, or in some way modify a fixed form to suit F O R M S / 2 0 4 7

the demands of a particular subject. The earliest systematic and successful pioneer of such variation was John Skelton, who gave his name to what has come to be called S k e l t o n i c verse. His poems typically—see, for example, the extract from “Colin Clout” (p. 92)—have short lines of anything from three to seven syllables containing two or three stresses (though more of both are common), and exploit a single rhyme until inspiration and the resources of the language run out. The breathless urgency of this form has intrigued and influenced modern poets such as Graves and Auden.

Another early composite form employed longer lines: iambic hexameter

(twelve syllables) alternating with iambic heptameter (fourteen syllables).

This form, known as “poulter’s measure”—from the poultryman’s practice of giving twelve eggs for the first dozen and fourteen for the second—was used by sixteenth-century poets such as Wyatt (p. 126), Queen Elizabeth I (p. 142), and Sidney (p. 208), but has not proved popular since.

The element of the unexpected often accounts for much of the success of poems in a composite form such as Donne’s “The Sun Rising” (p. 295). His stanza might be described as a combination of two quatrains (the first rhyming abba, the second cdcd), and a couplet (ee). That description would be accurate but inadequate in that it takes no account of the variation in line length, which is a crucial feature of the poem's structure. It opens explosively with the outrage of the interrupted lover:

Busy old fool, unruly sun,

Why dost thou thus

Through windows and through curtains call on us?

Short lines, tetrameter followed by dimeter, suggest the speaker's initial shock and give place, as he begins to recover his composure, to the steadier pentameters that complete the first quatrain. Continuing irritation propels the brisk tetrameters that form the first half of the second quatrain. This, again, is completed by calmer pentameters, and the stanza rounded off like an English sonnet, with a summary pentameter couplet:

Love, all alike, no season knows nor clime

Nor hours, days, months, which are the rags of time.

This variation in line length achieves a different effect in the third stanza, where the brief trimeter suggests an absence contrasting with the royal presences in the preceding tetrameter:

She's all states, and all princes, I,

Nothing else is.

And these lines prepare, both rhetorically and visually, for the contraction and expansion so brilliantly developed in the poem's triumphant close. Similar structural considerations account for the composite stanza forms of Arnold's "The Scholar-Gypsy" (p. 1089) and Lowell's "Skunk Hour" (p. 1601), though variations of line length and rhyme scheme between the six-line stanzas of Lowell's poem bring it close to the line that divides composite form from the next category.

Irregular Forms

A poet writing in irregular form will use rhyme and meter but follow no fixed pattern. A classic example is Milton's "Lycidas" (p. 410), which is written in iambic pentameters interspersed with an occasional trimeter, probably modeled on the occasional half-lines that intersperse the hexameters of Virgil's Aeneid. Milton's rhyming in this elegy (a formal lament for a dead person) is similarly varied, and a few lines are unrhymed. The most extensive use of irregular form is to be found in one of the three types of ode.

Long lyric poems of elevated style and elaborate stanzaic structure, the original odes of the Greek poet Pindar were modeled on songs sung by the chorus in Greek drama. The three-part structure of the regular Pindaric ode has been attempted once or twice in English, but more common and more successful has been the irregular Pindaric ode, which has no three-part structure but sections of varying length, varying line length, and varying rhyme scheme. Each of Pindar's odes was written to celebrate someone, and celebration has been the theme of many English Pindaric odes, among them Dryden's "A Song for St. Cecilia's Day" (p. 524), Tate's "Ode to the Confederate Dead" (p. 1417), and Lowell's "The Quaker Graveyard in Nantucket"

(p. 1592). The desire to celebrate someone or something has also prompted most English odes of the third type, those modeled on the subject matter, tone, and form of the Roman poet Horace. More meditative and restrained than the boldly irregular Pindaric ode, the Horatian ode is usually written in a repeated stanza form—Marvell's "An Horatian Ode (Upon Cromwell's Return from Ireland)" (p. 486) in quatrains, for example, and Keats's "To Autumn" (p. 939) in a composite eleven-line stanza.

Open Forms or Free Verse

At the opposite end of the formal scale from the fixed forms (or, as they are sometimes called, closed forms) of sonnet, villanelle, and sestina, we come to what was long known as free verse, poetry that makes little or no use of traditional rhyme and meter. The term is misleading, however, suggesting to some less thoughtful champions of open forms (as free-verse structures are now increasingly called) a false analogy with political freedom as opposed to slavery, and suggesting to traditionalist opponents the disorder or anarchy implied by Frost's in/famous remark that "writing free verse is like playing tennis with the net down." There was much unprofitable debate in the last century over the relative merits and "relevance" of closed and open forms, unprofitable because, as will be clear to any reader of this anthology, good poems continue to be written in both. It would be foolish to wish that Larkin wrote like Whitman, or Atwood like Dickinson. Poets must find forms and rhythms appropriate to their voices. When, around 1760, Smart chose an open form for "Jubilate Agno" (p. 678), that incantatory catalog of the attributes of his cat Jeffery proclaimed its descent from the King James translation of the Hebrew Scriptures and, specifically, such parallel cadences as those of Psalm 150:

Praise ye the Lord. Praise God in his sanctuary:

praise him in the firmament of his power.

F O R M S / 2 0 4 9

Praise him for his mighty acts: praise him

according to his excellent greatness.

Praise him with the sound of the trumpet: praise him with the psaltery and harp.

These rhythms and rhetorical repetitions, audible also in Blake's prophetic books, resurfaced in the work of the nineteenth-century founder of American poetry, as we know it today. Whitman's elegy for an unknown soldier,

“Vigil Strange I Kept on the Field O n e Night” (p. 1071), may end with a traditional image of the rising sun, like Milton’s “Lycidas” (p. 410), but its cadences are those of the Hebrew Scriptures he read as a boy:

And there and then and bathed by the rising sun, my son in his grave, in his rude-dug grave I deposited,

Ending my vigil strange with that, vigil of night and battlefield dim,

Vigil for boy of responding kisses, (never again on earth responding,)

Vigil for comrade swiftly slain, vigil I never forget, h o w as
day

brighten’d,

I rose from the chill ground and folded my soldier well in
his blanket,

And buried him where he fell.

Whitman’s breakaway from the prevailing poetic forms of his time was truly revolutionary, but certain traditional techniques he would use for special effect: the concealed well/fell rhyme that gives his elegy its closing chord, for example, or the bounding anapests of an earlier line:

O n e l o o k | I but gave | which your d e a r | eyes return’d
|

with a l o o k | I shall n e v | er forget ...

The poetic revolution that W h i t m a n initiated was continued by Pound, w h o wrote of his predecessor:

It was you that broke the n e w wood,

N o w is a time for carving.

Pound, the carver, unlike Whitman, the pioneer, came to open forms b y w a y of closed forms, a progression reflected in the first four sections of Pound’s partly autobiographical portrait of the artist, “Hugh Selwyn Mauberley”

(p. 1298). Each section is less “literary,” less formal than the last, quatrains with two rhymes yielding to quatrains with one rhyme and, in section 4, to Whitmanian free verse. A similar progression from the mastery of closed forms to the mastery of open forms can be seen in the development of poets such as Lawrence, Eliot, Auden, Lowell, Rich, and Plath (pp. 1284, 1340, 1465, 1592, 1791, 1836, respectively).

Pound may have called himself a carver, but he, too, proved a pioneer, opening up terrain that has been more profitably mined by his successors than the highlands, the rolling cadences explored by Smart, Blake, and Whitman. Pound recovered for poets territory then inhabited only by novelists, the low ground of everyday speech, a private rather than a public language.

He was aided by Williams, who, in a poem such as “The Red Wheelbarrow,”

2 0 5 0 / V E R S I F I C A T I O N

used the simplest cadences of c o m m o n speech to reveal the extraordinary nature of “ordinary” things:

so m u c h depends

upon

a red wheel

barrow

glazed with rain

water

beside the white

chickens.

Each line depends upon the next to complete it, indicating the interdependence of things in the poem and, by extension, in the world. “The Red Wheel-barrow” bears out the truth of Auden’s statement that in free verse “you need an infallible ear to determine where the lines should end.”

Other Forms of Poetry

Probably no century of the sixty since people began writing saw more experimentation in the arts generally, and in poetry particularly, than the last. The twentieth-century pioneers of what came to be known as the Confessional, Imagist, L = A = N = G = U = A = G = E, and Objectivist “schools” of poetry defined these modes by aesthetic or philosophic criteria, rather than by any distinct formal characteristics (that would qualify them for inclusion in this essay).

By contrast, the twentieth century witnessed the development of at least five other categories of experimental poetry that can be defined by their formal characteristics:

1. P r o s e p o e t r y originated in nineteenth-century France, reaching perhaps its highest point in the work of Charles Baudelaire and Arthur Rimbaud. A prose poem may have any or all of the features of the lyric, except that it is set out on the page for the eye — t h o u g h not the ear—as prose. Hill’s “Mercian Hymns” may look like prose, but the poet insists that his lines are to be printed exactly as they appear on pp. 1833—34; and the reader’s ear will detect musical cadences no less linked and flowing than in good free verse, with which prose poetry has much in common.

2. F o u n d poetry, a twentieth-century offshoot of prose poetry, converts a passage or passages of someone else’s prose—from a novel, a newspaper, even an advertisement—into a poem. This may involve some modification, like that described, for example, in Brownjohn's footnote to his poem "Common Sense" (p. 1829).

3. Shaped poetry has a distinguished lineage, extending from ancient Greece to modern England and America. Eye and ear together are never more dramatically engaged than in the reading of shaped poems such as Herbert's "Easter Wings" (p. 368), Hollander's "Swan and Shadow"

SUGGESTIONS FOR FURTHER READING / 2051

(p. 1775), and Corn's "A Conch from Sicily" (p. 1930).

4. Concrete poetry is an exception to the generalization at the start of this essay: "A poem is a composition written for performance by the human voice." (All generalizations are false, as the French say, including this one.) The term concrete poetry was coined by a group of Brazilian poets in 1952 to cover a loose category of verbal explorations by avant-garde artists and poets around the world. These range from ingenious typographic structures that, unlike the shaped poems mentioned above, cannot be "voiced"—

Mahon's "The Window" (p. 1923), for example—to Jonathan Williams's

"Three ripples in Tuckasegee River," which can:

TSI KSI TSI

KSI TSI KSI

TSI KSI TSI

The poet's note to this says: "Tsiksitsi is a Cherokee onomatopoeia for the sound of running water."

5. Sound poetry, extending the latter, more abstract form of concrete poetry into a kind of music, has been called "the ultimate performance poetry." Its performative nature is engagingly demonstrated by Edwin Morgan's poem

“Interview,” which begins:

— W h e n did you start writing sound-poetry:1

—Vindaberry am hookshma tintol ensa ar’er.

Vindashton hama haz temmi-bloozma tontek.

—I see. So you were really quite precocious.

And did your parents encourage you?

— Z i w a mimtod enna parahashtom ganna,

spod z i w a didtod quershpot quindast volla!

Mindetta brooshch quarva tonch bot.

Spolva harabashtat su!

Suggestions for Further Reading

Poets have been making p o e m s for as long as composers have been making m u s i c or carpenters furniture, and just as it would be unreasonable to expect to find the lore and language of music or carpentry distilled into one short essay, so there is more to be said about the making and appreciating of p o e m s than is said here. The fullest treatment of the subject is to be found in A History of English Prosody from the Twelfth Century to the Present Day, by George Saintsbury (3 vols., N e w York, 1906—10), and the Princeton Ency-2 0 5 2 / V E R S I F I C A T I O N

lopedia of Poetry and Poetics, edited by Alex Preminger, Frank J. Warnke, and O. B. Hardison, Jr. (Princeton, 1965; enl. ed., 1974). More suitable for students are The Making of a Poem: A Norton Anthology of Poetic Forms, edited by Mark Strand and Eavan Boland (N e w York, 2 0 0 0), The Poem’s Heartbeat, by Alfred Corn (Ashland, Ore., 1997), An Introduction to English Poetry, by James Fenton (London and N e w York, 2 0 0 2), Poetic Meter and Poetic Form, by Paul Fussell (N e w York, 1965; rev. ed., 1979), The Structure of Verse, edited by Harvey Gross (N e w York, 1966; rev. ed., 1979), Rhyme’s Reason: A Guide to English Verse, by John Hollander (New Haven, 1981; enl. ed., 1989), The Poetry Handbook: A Guide to Reading Poetry for Pleasure and Practical Criticism, by John Lennard

(Oxford and New York, 1996), and the appropriate entries in A Glossary of Literary Terms, by M. H. Abrams (New York, 1957; 6th ed., 1990), and The Oxford Companion to Twentieth-Century Poetry, edited by Ian Hamilton (Oxford and New York, 1994). Each of these has its own more detailed suggestions for further reading.

J O N S T A L L W O R T H Y

Poetic Syntax

In Alexander Pope's "The Rape of the Lock" (5.47; p. 619), there is a line few native speakers of English can grasp on first reading: " 'Gainst Pallas, Mars; Latona, Hermes arms." What do we make of such a line, which is punctuated as a self-contained unit of thought:1 And why does it occur in the work of a poet renowned for his elegance and clarity of expression? The answer, or at least one answer, is that Pope is using poetic syntax to mimic the hurried confusion that soldiers experience in battle.

Describing a moment when two pairs of Greek gods are arming themselves to fight each other, as related in Homer's Iliad, Pope adapts a classic syntactic pattern with a Greek name — zeugma — for his own poetic purposes. Zeugma occurs when a single verb governs several parallel words or clauses (verbal units, discussed below on p. 2056). Using a pattern that some but not all of his English-speaking readers would have recognized, Pope makes a densely compressed line that slows any reader down, impeding easy comprehension. But perhaps that is part of Pope's aim, as he constructs a linguistic analogue for certain aspects of the imagined battle scene. In so doing, Pope uses syntax not only to communicate ideas but also to create certain dramatic and meaningful effects by the very structure of his lines.

What Is Syntax?

Syntax has been defined in many ways; we can begin our own inquiry into the theory and various historical practices of poetic syntax by saying that it concerns transactions between poets and their audiences—readers and listeners—about the meanings of certain sequences of words. The meanings emerge as words unroll in time and also—if we are reading the poem—in space. But meaning is also a function of how words and groups of words

hark back to earlier ones, sometimes with the effect of suspending or even contesting time's forward motion.

The word syntax, from the Greek words syn (together) and tax (to arrange), denotes the “orderly or systematic arrangements of parts or elements.” At the most general level, these elements involve symbols, including mathematical ones, that are arranged to create propositions or statements. The symbols that matter most for poetic syntax are words and groups of words; but punctuation marks, line shapes, stanza forms, metrical schemes, and rhyme patterns are also important for understanding poetic syntax as an arrangement of words that generates meaningful statements.

2053

2054 / POETICSyntax

When we are discussing poetry, syntax may refer either to actual arrangements of words or to the rules of grammar and conventions of word order that are reflected—but also sometimes challenged—in such arrangements.

We usually think of rules as governing behavior, and syntactic rules do govern the behavior of statements in various languages. In the domain of poetry, however, notions about governance, obedience, and order often exist in counterpoint to notions about the aesthetic as well as the social values of certain kinds of unruliness—those traditionally discussed under the rubric poetic license. Poetic syntax, therefore, is a slippery and even in some ways a contradictory topic, for while we are thinking about syntax as an orderly arrangement of verbal elements according to the conventions of a particular language, we also need to be thinking about poetic syntax as the making of significant disorder within a language—and often with allusions to other languages and their rules or practices of syntax. We can highlight a paradox inherent in any attempt to define poetic syntax by comparing poetic syntax to a game with complex rules that include—under certain circumstances the option to break the rules.

—

Poets have played the syntactic game for a long time, often in competition with each other as well as with real and imagined audiences. In this game, some syntactic rules have changed; but many retain signs of the close historical links between English and Latin, two very different languages that nonetheless share many words as well as many ways of defining what constitutes syntactical “correctness.” For students of poetic syntax, the most important difference between English and Latin is that in English, meaning depends on certain words being neighbors to one another, whereas in Latin, proximity and distance between words matters little for understanding most written statements. In Latin, a highly inflected language, endings of words (suffixes) tell us a great deal about which words in a given statement go with which other words; the endings of nouns, adjectives, and verbs change (are “inflected”) according to their function in a given statement. English is a much less inflected language, although certain words need to “agree” with each other, as is true in Latin and many other languages too: singular nouns take singular verbs, for instance. In English, however, the most important determinant of meaning is the order of words, individually or in groups. The contrast can be summed up this way: in Latin you can tell your friend that she has hit the nail on the head by saying “rem acu tetigisti” or “tetigisti acu rem.” But in English, you cannot perform the same linguistic operation without severe semantic consequences: there is a considerable difference between saying that you hit the nail and saying that the nail hit you.

Poets in English play incessantly with normal patterns of word order, thus creating a multitude of interesting, witty, logically subtle, and often surprising effects requiring us to ponder parallels between words and groups of words sometimes more widely separated from each other than they would be in an ordinary prose statement. Some poets in English use syntactic arrangements in ways that challenge the reader’s expectations about word order; alternatively or additionally, some poets build sentences with multiple parts more complexly related to each other than they would be in most modern English speech or writing. To participate in the syntactic games poets typically play, we need some shared terms for describing the elements that poets arrange in orderly—but also apparently disorderly—fashion.

PARTS OF SYNTAX / 2055

Parts of Syntax

Sentences and Words

The first rule of the poetic game of syntax as it is represented in an anthology like this one, which includes a wide range of poems written at many times in many forms of English, is that most poets use the grammatical unit called the sentence as a major unit of meaning, along with—but often in counterpoint to—the unit of the poetic line or the unit of the stanza (see “Versification,” p. 2040). The sentence is the largest meaning-bearing unit of syntax, while the word is the smallest. Neither unit can be easily defined.

This is so because both sentences and words can be compounded and divided in various ways that become more complex the more closely we look at them across the arc of history. (Because English has changed so much over time, in other words, we can't safely assume that modern rules apply in centuries-old texts; as best we can, we need to bring history into our readings.)

Sentences are sometimes defined as units that have subjects and predicates—in the simplest cases, a noun-subject and a predicate consisting only of a verb (Jill runs). In the most c o m m o n type of English sentence, a noun working as a subject is followed by a verb, which leads to (and conceptually affects, acts on) a noun, which may or may not be modified and which is called a direct object: the bird eats the worm or, more elaborately, Edwin Muir's "The grasses threw straight shadows far away" ("Childhood"; p. 1337).

In a second very c o m m o n sentence type, the subject is followed by a predicate that c o m p l e m e n t s (refers back to) the subject. In this kind of sentence, the verb is usually a form of to be (or to seem) and there is no direct object; instead, a predicate complement tells us something about the subject, as in the first line of Dryden's "Mac Flecknoe" (p. 517): "All human beings are subject to decay"; another example is T. S. Eliot's line "I am not Prince Hamlet, nor was meant to be" ("The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock"; p. 1343); yet another is A. R. Ammons's wonderful opening to "Pet Panther"

(p. 1700): "My attention is a wild / animal." This type of sentence lends itself to reflections about identity and to metaphor-making.

In yet a third type of sentence, the subject is followed by a verb that takes neither a direct object nor a predicate complement. Because they neither act on a direct object nor reflect back on the subject, such verbs are called intransitive: Money talks, for example, or Jill faints. A more elaborate example comes again from Eliot: “The winter evening settles down / With smell of steaks in passageways” (“Preludes”). Some verbs are always intransitive, while others can be either intransitive or transitive. If a duck flies overhead, the verb is intransitive; if I fly my plane to Reno, the verb is transitive. (When in doubt, check the dictionary.)

Some modern poets and philosophers prefer sentences with transitive verbs to all others. Indeed, early in the last century, a philosopher named Ernest Fenellosa, who was a student of Chinese poetry and a major influence on Ezra Pound, urged poets writing in English to strive for concreteness by avoiding the verb to be and intransitive verbs. Arguing that the “transfer of power” is a basic truth of nature, Fenellosa maintained that the proper work of poetic syntax is to show an agent (subject) performing an act (transitive verb) on an object, as in Farmer pounds rice (Davie, Articulate Energy, 36).

2056 / POETICSyntax

Fenellosa’s theory can be contested on many counts, but it has the virtue of helping us understand why even those modern English-language poets whose em to wage war on the rules of grammar and punctuation nonetheless rely on the traditional subject/verb/direct object sentences as a basic building block of their poems. This is so, paradoxically, even in cases where the poem does not seem to include full sentences (see “Nominal Syntax” below, p. 2060).

Because poets know that competent readers of English expect sentences, poets can assume that readers will work to create a sentence even when none seem to exist at first glance. Such work (which can also be seen as play) occurs when we reread the line by Pope quoted at the beginning of this essay: ” ‘Gainst Pallas, Mars; Latona, Hermes arms.” Why do we eventually decide that “arms” is a verb and not a noun in this poetic sentence, which is chock-full of inert proper names and which doesn’t give us a verb where we would normally expect it to be:1 The answer, or one answer, is that Pope expects us to resolve the “confusion” of his fighting gods into a kind of peace: the sense offered by the sentence. Aided by a knowledge of syntax, we can see not only that “arms” in this line functions as a verb, but also that it functions retroactively, as it were, serving as the intransitive verb for both parts of the statement. We can translate it into prose as Mars [arms] against Pallas; Hermes arms against Latona. Armed with a knowledge of syntax, and willing to expend time on translating or paraphrasing Pope’s impacted statement, we can win meaning from his odd arrangement of words.

Although some poets (and English teachers) share Fenellosa’s preference for sentences with a subject, an active verb, and a direct object, many poets vary their sentence structures to capture different shades of thought about action and passion — and to create subtly varied rhythms. Consider, for example, the opening stanza of Kenneth Koch’s “Permanently” (p. 1691), which illustrates all three basic types of English sentence structure and concludes with special praise for one of them. Can you identify each type?

One day the Nouns were clustered in the street.

An Adjective walked by, with her dark beauty.

The Nouns were struck, moved, changed.

The next day a Verb drove up, and created the Sentence.*

As Koch’s lines remind us, many sentences are little narratives; in them, something happens, a story is told, time passes in a consequential way. At the end, we pause, and that pause has been signaled, in writing since the late Middle Ages, with a period. This mark is the graphic equivalent of a drop in the voice or a time for breathing between thoughts. The word period has many historical meanings. One denotes the sentence itself; another denotes a particular kind of sentence, in which several subordinate clauses build toward a main clause.

Clauses

A clause is a verbal unit that may look like, may even be, a sentence because both contain subjects and predicates. Jill runs home is both a clause

*Line 1: subject + predicate complement (Nouns were struck, moved, changed).
/ were clustered).

Line 4: subject + intransitive verb (Verb / drove Line 2: subject + intransitive verb (Adjective / up) and subject + transitive verb + direct object walked by).

(Verb ... / created / the Sentence).

Line 3: subject + predicate complement (Nouns /

PARTS OF SYNTAX / 2057

and a sentence. But we understand the sentence to be the larger or “containing” unit and a clause to be the smaller or “component” unit. This is because a sentence may contain more than one clause. The “periodic” sentence, mentioned above, has one main (or independent) clause and any number of subordinate clauses (When she remembered the time, which she did when the bell rang, Jill ran home). Some sentences have two (or more) main clauses, although in such cases, the term main (again, or independent) loses some of its conventional meaning. Clauses in such sentences are coordinate and therefore, in truth, only semi-independent. They are sometimes connected by certain punctuation marks other than the period; today, independent clauses are usually yoked by the semicolon, but in older writing, the colon often connects clauses that are independent but nonetheless closely related. Alternatively, such clauses may be connected by coordinating conjunctions such as and, but, so, for. An example of such a conjunction occurs in Denise Levertov’s poem “The Closed World”:

The house-snake dwells here still under the threshold

but for months I have not seen it... .

A subordinate clause has a subject and a predicate, but cannot stand alone in (or as) a sentence. Such clauses appear in various positions in complex sentences—some precede, others follow, a main clause, and some are embedded in main clauses in ways that blur the grammatical and conceptual distinction between independence and dependence. Subordinate clauses often elaborate, qualify, or even undermine an idea or image in the main clause. In many English poems, clauses are building blocks of thought that invite the reader to look back at the beginning of the sentence, to do a mental double take, in order to grasp the logical relations among a sentence's multiple parts.

Subordinate clauses play syntactic roles similar to those played by three parts of speech: the noun, the adverb, and the adjective. Modern handbooks of grammar will give you full lists of the “joining words” that typically introduce the different kinds of subordinate clauses; adverbial clauses, for instance, usually follow subordinating conjunctions such as after, although, as, as if, because, whether, while.

Shakespeare's Sonnet 106 (p. 265) begins with such an adverbial clause: “When in the chronicle of wasted time / I see descriptions of the fairest wights... .” Adjectival clauses, modifying a noun or pronoun, are typically introduced by relative pronouns (that, which, who, whom, whose) or by relative adverbs (when, where, why).

Shakespeare's Sonnet 116 (“Let me not to the marriage of true minds”; p. 266) uses an adjectival clause in its second main clause: “Love is not love,” Shakespeare writes,

“which alters when it alteration finds.” Here, the subordinate clause follows and explains the contradictory proposition of the main clause (a good example, by the way, of the kind of predicate complement clause that Fenellosa thought poets should avoid).

The lines illustrate not only an adjectival clause at work but also the complex relation that can exist between main and subordinate clauses. W h e n we read Shakespeare's lines carefully, we mentally reorder the syntactic elements to place the subordinate, or "dependent" (from the Latin pendere, hanging), clause between, rather than after, the subject and its predicate complement, which is of course also "love": the same word but different in 2 0 5 8 / P O E T I C S Y N T A X syntactic function. If we visualize this main clause and its dependent one (only part of a m u c h longer s e n t e n c e in the sonnet), we could diagram the relationship this way:

Love is not love

\ which alters when it alteration finds

S u c h diagramming, w h i c h reminds us that in Latin, sub means "beneath,"

can often be a useful tool for sorting out relations among syntactic parts of poems. (For a fine example of s u c h diagramming, see James Winn's rendering of the opening s e n t e n c e of Milton's Paradise Lost, which Linda Gregerson reproduces and trenchantly discusses in "Anatomizing Death," 105.) Adjectival and adverbial clauses are fairly easy to discern because they modify a noun, pronoun, or verb in the main clause and can be diagrammed

as hanging from (depending on) a word in the main clause. N o u n clauses are harder to spot. T h e y can be introduced by relative pronouns and also by other pronouns such as whoever, whomever, what, whatever, whichever.

Moreover, n o u n clauses can follow many of the same subordinating conjunctions that signal adverbial clauses. The key to identifying noun clauses is to understand their syntactic functions in the poetic sentences with which we are working. Noun clauses may be subjects, direct objects, objects of prepositions, or predicate complements; but they always appear in statements that cannot stand alone. Sometimes, however, we have to excavate these clauses because the poet has omitted the joining or articulating words that would help us see the poem's syntactic skeleton clearly. If we know how the clauses are working syntactically, however, we can catch them; there are many rewards to doing so.

Let's consider Shakespeare's Sonnet 106 (p. 265) as an illustration of how a poet uses interplay among clauses to make meaning. In the version below, to clarify the poem's structure, we have put the beginnings of main clauses (introductory words followed by subjects and verbs) in bold; we have put the beginnings of subordinate clauses in italic.

When in the chronicle of wasted time
I see descriptions of the fairest wights,
And beauty making beautiful old rhyme
In praise of ladies dead and lovely knights,
5 T h e n , in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,
Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow,
I see their antique pen would have expressed
Even such a beauty as you master now.
So all their p r a i s e s are but prophecies
io Of this our time, all you prefiguring;
And, for they looked but with divining eyes,
T h e y h a d n o t skill e n o u g h your worth to sing:
For we, which now behold these present days,
H a v e eyes to wonder, b u t l a c k tongues to praise.

Finding the main clause or clauses is the first step in analyzing this or any poem. Having found the poem's head and torso, as it were, we can proceed to finding the subordinate clauses, which can be compared to the poem's limbs. Whether the body arises into (new) life depends in part on who is reading it, how. In this sonnet, we have to wait patiently for a main clause to appear ("I see," in line 7); and when it does, we may not recognize it, for its thought as well as its syntax seem, paradoxically, to depend on those of the initial dependent clause. Although the "when ... then" structure embodies a careful balance of ideas (each clause gets exactly four lines), the second clause is the main clause: "When" sets up expectations for the thought to be completed, and it is completed, albeit in a way that the rest of the sonnet elaborates and qualifies.

PARTS OF SYNTAX / 2059

We've found the main subject and verb, and we may well expect to find a direct object too. We do, momentarily, in the phrase "their antique pen."

But the syntax soon asks us to correct that idea, for the image of the pen is followed by a verb phrase that makes the pen the subject of a new little story:

"I see [that] their antique pen would have expressed / Even such a beauty ..." Experienced readers will add that (the missing relative pronoun) automatically, but even they will have to engage in some subliminal revision, reversing the usual forward motion of reading (left to right, on the page of a text in English).

What advantage is there to recognizing the first main clause's direct object as a subordinate (noun) clause: Doing so helps us see that the "object" the poet finally sees in his main clause is not really an object, a thing, at all;

instead, what the Shakespearean speaker sees (here and elsewhere in his sonnets) is an amazing blending of past and present, of certainty and supposition: a constructed object rather than a natural one. The main clause and its exfoliating direct object thus work to tell us something about the speaker's way of seeing as well as about what he sees. This may interest us as readers, because what the speaker is seeing arises from his interpretation of meanings located in old books (they are to him as he is to us) considered in relation to his present and, by implication, his future.

In line 8, we need to excavate or cocreate another subordinate clause to make sense of the sonnet. As we needed to supply that to see the noun clause serving as the direct object of "I see," so we also need to supply missing words to line 8 to make it work: "Even such a beauty as [the one that] you master now." This subordinate clause, functioning both to rename and to describe the "beauty" that is the direct object of the noun clause functioning as a direct object of "I see," blurs the traditional distinction between adjectival and noun clause. Thus the syntax, particularly the interplay of main and subordinate clauses, contributes to the poem's larger meditation on themes of mastery, competition, and relations of interdependence between past and present, lover and beloved, writer and reader, subject and object of seeing.

In the last six lines, we have more main clauses than in the first eight, and they come more rapidly (and briefly) in the final couplet. They are introduced by coordinating conjunctions that, when singled out, help us see the logical skeleton of the poet's thought: "So," "And," "For." Note, finally, that the embedded subordinate clause in line 11 may fool us into thinking it a main clause ("for," after all, introduces a main clause just two lines later). Upon close analysis, however, we see that the group of words introduced by the first “for” works adverbially, to modify the verb phrase that comes in the next 2060 / P O E T I C S Y N T A X line. “For” is therefore glossed (translated as) “because” by this anthology’s editors, not because they have access to some mysterious dictionary un-available to readers but rather because they have decoded the poem’s syntax and come to the conclusion — as you can too—that line 11, after “And,” both interrupts and helps explain the poet’s claim that his predecessors lacked the skill to praise the speaker’s beloved because they could see him or her only by “divining,” or imagining, him or her.

Distinguishing between main and subordinate clauses is not always easy;

but it is an important skill for players of the syntax game. Equipped with terms for describing syntactic elements precisely, we turn now to other moves poets make with sentences — and with readers’ expectations about them.

Moves in the Game

Syntax operates as a kind of promise or contract of expectation between poet and reader, so the use of subordinate clauses to delay a main verb can function as a kind of tease. Milton, for instance, at the opening of Paradise Lost (p. 421), and William Collins, at the opening of “Ode to Evening”

(p. 675), give us many lines of complexly interrelated subordinate clauses to ponder — and remember— before we reach the main verb of the first poetic sentence. In Milton’s epic, the imperative verb “sing” arrives after five lines; in Collins’s ode, the imperative verb phrase “now teach me” arrives only in line 15, after a many-stranded subordinate clause (beginning “If aught ...”) in which the poet seems to attempt to prove to his addressee —the “Evening”

personified as “Eve”—that his own “pastoral song” has the power “to soothe thy modest ear.”

Poets' relations to their readers are often figured in terms of pleas and commands addressed to a muse, a source of inspiration traditionally gendered female and often addressed as thou. In both Milton's and Collins's poems, the exquisitely delayed arrival of the main verb challenges the reader to participate in the poet's game of call-and-response over a space of time epitomized by the sentence's prolonged unfolding. Milton's opening sentence points back to Genesis and forward to Christ's Second Coming; Collins's opening sentence points back to Milton while also mimicking the gradual coming of evening in a northern, English latitude. The Romantic poet Hannah More, meanwhile, provides an interesting variant on the syntactic pattern of the Miltonic invocation (the poem's opening address to a muse) by addressing an ungendered and plural set of muses ("Airy spirits") in line 1 of her "Inscription in a Beautiful Retreat Called Fairy Bower" (p. 707) while delaying her main verb ("come") to line 7. In other poems, the verb doesn't come at all.

Nominal Syntax

Consider, for example, this very short poem by Ezra Pound:

In a Station of the Metro

The apparition of these faces in the crowd;

Petals on a wet, black bough.

MOVES IN THE GAME / 2061

Giving us two noun phrases but no verb, Pound's poem illustrates what some critics have called nominal syntax: the use of noun phrases in a way that asks the reader to make a conceptual or emotional connection between the poem's syntactic parts (Cureton, 322). "In a Station of the Metro" derives from Pound's appropriation of the ancient Japanese haiku for the modern

Imagist movement. But if we read these three lines carefully, and with some knowledge of syntactic traditions in English-language poetry, we see that Pound not only provides us with striking images but also plays creatively with the poetic tradition of the delayed opening verb, which is itself related to the oratorical tradition of periodic sentences aimed at keeping the audience in a state of suspense. Pound's poem figuratively has us wait—in a French subway station—for a verb that never arrives. If, however, we play the poet's syntactic game by supplying some conceptual or emotional link between the poems' two major images, which seem to come from two very different worlds—on the one hand that of the bustling city, on the other hand that of nature, or (perhaps) of nature as represented in Japanese art—we will have played a role traditionally ascribed to the poet's muse: that of setting the poet's train of thoughts in motion.

As Pound's poem suggests, even modern poets who use various techniques of sentence fragmentation to challenge poetic tradition as well as conventions of ordinary language-use presuppose that the reader knows sentence rules well enough to appreciate meanings created when expectations are not fulfilled. Such poets dramatize the notion mentioned above: of syntax as a kind of contract between poet and reader. Their shared knowledge of rules, like soccer players' knowledge of the moves of their game, is often barely conscious until it is analyzed (as in a slow-speed replay). And for readers as for athletes, new knowledge often comes when we feel that rules have been bent or broken, and we stop to ask what's wrong.

In the opening stanza of “since feeling is first” (p. 1394), E. E. Cummings seems to justify the breaking of syntactic and other language-use rules:

since feeling is first

who pays any attention
to the syntax of things
will never wholly kiss you;

But what is Cummings really saying here about paying (or not paying) attention to “the syntax of things”? He is using an old and important poetic technique—what the critic William Empson calls d o u b l e syntax—to make two quite different statements in this four-line unit ending with a semicolon, a punctuation mark that, as we’ve seen, typically signals the end of a main clause.

Double Syntax

This occurs when a phrase, line, or group of lines can be read in two different ways in relation to the syntax that precedes and/or follows the unit. In many examples of double syntax, the poet gives us an apparently complete thought—in a syntactic unit that appears to be an independent clause—but then goes on to revise the thought, often in a witty or paradoxical way, by showing us that the unit we thought was complete is part of a larger

2 0 6 2 / P O E T I
C S Y N T A X

(and usually more conceptually challenging) syntactic structure, often a sentence.

In Cummings’s “since feeling is first,” the first three lines can be interpreted as a complex sentence, with a subordinate adverbial clause followed by a main one. The statement emphasizes with a r h e t o r i c a l q u e s t i o n a c o n s e q u e n c e of an apparently logical opening premise. We can make sense of the first three lines by adding a question mark after line 3 and paraphrasing them thus:
Because feeling comes first, that is, is most important in a scale of values, who in her or his right mind would pay any attention to the syntax (orderly or logical arrangement) of things? The question is rhetorical because it assumes a simple answer that everyone agrees on; such questions are often used to imply that everyone consents to an idea that might well merit questioning and even dissent.

Cummins undermines his own poem's rhetorical question (and also the coercive logic of its initial clause) when, in line 4, he offers a phrase that seems, at first, a sentence fragment jarringly unrelated to the first three lines.

If, however, we pay attention to Cummings's syntax, we will go back and reread the first three lines in the light of the new thought given in line 4.

We can then paraphrase the unit as a whole this way: Since feeling comes first (logically and, in this poem, temporally too), he or she who pays attention to the syntax of things will never kiss you fully or totally. The second, fuller reading requires us to supply a pronoun subject before the word "who"; that word thus becomes a relative pronoun as the opening lines change from asking a simple (and arguably simplistic) rhetorical question into making a more syntactically complex statement.

Word Order Inversions

Many poetic ambiguities, including many of those in examples of double syntax, arise from inversions of the basic transitive sentence, subject/verb/object. The most common of these changes places the direct object before the subject and verb: "A curious knot God made in paradise," Edward Taylor writes, for example, at the beginning of his "Upon Wedlock, and Death of Children" (p. 537). Had Taylor used normal word order for this opening clause—"God made a curious knot in paradise"—he would have lost the opportunity to establish a meaningful and visually striking parallel between his title's first noun, "wedlock," and the word "knot" in his opening line. By putting "wedding" and "knot" into parallel positions, Taylor sets the stage for the conceptual definition of “knot” as “marriage”; but by inverting normal word order to achieve the parallelism, he also subtly introduces another meaning of “knot” developed in the poem: knot as a puzzle, as something that challenges reason and even faith in God’s providential plan (note the pun on “knot” and “not”). Here, as in many poems, word order inversion allows the poet to emphasize a certain idea or image by giving it pride of place. The inversion, often accompanied by interesting rhythms and rhymes, works to provoke thought.

In many of the older poems in this anthology, lines that may seem completely obscure at first become clear, even witty, when we unscramble a word order inversion. John Donne’s famous poem commanding his mistress to undress and make love to him begins, for instance, with the following inde-M O V E S I N T H E G A M E / 2 0 6 3 pendent clause: “Come, Madam, come, all rest my powers defy ...” If we try to read this as a sentence that uses the most common English pattern, subject/verb/direct object, we will be perplexed, for how can one’s “rest”

“defy” one’s “powers”? If we work at the syntax, however, we will see that the verb form offers a clue that an “inversion” is occurring here. “Defy” goes (“agrees”) with a plural subject, not a singular one (you wouldn’t say, “My cat defy my dog”). Mentally rearranging Donne’s word order, we arrive at a clause that is both grammatically correct and a brilliant introduction to the poem’s bawdy, boasting humor: my powers defy all rest. “Rest,” we see, turns out to be the direct object, not the subject, of the statement. The subject (in terms of grammar but also of theme) is the speaker’s “powers,” which, he says, “defy” or resist “rest,” either as “sleep” or as masculine “slackness.” The poem goes on to develop an intricate association (a curious knot?) between a man’s sexual powers and his verbal powers of persuasion.

Edmund Spenser also uses word order inversion to create witty effects that have serious metaphysical implications. Early in his epic poem The Faerie Queene (1.1.8—9; p. 167), he describes his young, inexperienced hero this way:

Full jolly knight he seemd, and faire did sitt,

As one for knightly giusts and fierce encounters fit.

The first clause, we see, is a sentence of the type we've classified as a predicate complement; using normal English word order to make the same point, we could say that he seemed a very jolly [i.e., gallant or cheerful] knight.

Putting the sentence this way—performing the operation known as “paraphrasing”—is critical to understanding not only Spenser's syntax but also some of the larger themes of his Protestant epic. Indeed, syntax—which in this case requires us to think twice about our first impression of how the hero looks as a soldier—is one of Spenser's main tools for warning the reader not to take appearances as the truth.

In Spenser's Protestant poem, syntax often works to dramatize the value of faith in an “invisible” reality; such faith is accompanied by, indeed grows from, a distrust of sensory impressions in general and of visual images in particular. Advancing his lesson in iconoclasm or distrust of images, Spenser crafts a sentence in which we first see (the words for) “jolly knight”; then we get the sentence's grammatical subject, “he”; and then we get a verb that creates irony at the hero's expense by retroactively questioning the “fit” between the hero's appearance and his inward state of readiness for religious battle. In the narrative that follows, the hero will repeatedly fall into error by believing first impressions.

In Spenser's poem as in many others in this anthology, syntactic inversion acquires resonance when considered along with historical, philosophical, religious, and other determinants of meaning. In his elegy “Adonais” (31—34; p. 880), for example, Percy Bysshe Shelley uses word order inversion in the course of raising some broad questions about theology, history, and politics—questions that require us to move from text to context to interpret syntactically difficult lines. In them, Shelley describes the poet John Milton as

2064 / POETICSyntax

Blind, old, and lonely, w h e n his country’s pride,

T h e priest, the slave, and the liberticide,

Trampled and mocked with many a loathed rite ...

W h i c h of the n o u n s preceding the transitive verbs is the subject of the subordinate clause beginning with “when,” and which is the object? Two patterns of poetic inversion—subject/object/verb or object/subject/verb—are most c o m m o n in metrical English poetry. Is the pride of the country performing the actions of trampling and mocking the priest, the slave, and the “liberticide,” that is, the killer of liberty? Or are the three figures mentioned in the passage’s second line trampling and mocking the kind of pride in his country that Milton felt?

We can’t solve this puzzle unless we go beyond the syntax just of these lines to learn something about Milton and about Shelley’s views of his precursor, w h o was finally on the losing side of the English Civil War and w h o was d e n o u n c e d as a regicide (king killer) by some of his enemies. O n c e we know that Shelley shared Milton’s love of liberty and his scorn for the “rites” of the established English Church and state, we can see that the second paraphrase given above is distinctly preferable to the first: the priest, slave, and liberticide trampled and mocked Milton's pride in his country. We can also now see another possible reading of the lines: the phrase "when his country's pride" can describe Milton, a meaning that shifts our understanding of what is a subordinate, what a main clause here. We can, that is, also paraphrase these lines as saying that the priest, the slave, and the liberticide trampled and mocked Milton when [he was] his country's pride, and they did so with many a loathed rite.

Shelley's syntax is famously fluid. Indeed, some have denounced it as incoherent. Others have defended it by arguing that Shelley's poetry creates "the vocabulary and syntax" of a new vision of reality (Simpson, 82). For both philosophical and political reasons, Shelley wanted to blur traditional distinctions between subjects and objects; his syntax reflects that interest. In the case we have just examined, the syntactic obstacles to (immediate) comprehension dramatize the ongoing competition between different political views of liberty in England and challenge the reader to resolve the competition in a way that rejects one possible reading to respect others more consonant with what we can glean from many sources about Shelley's—and Milton's—views of liberty.

Because the significant ambiguities in a poem's syntax may be historically motivated, they often send us to other poems by the same author, other poems by authors we know or suspect that our poet read, and even to the larger texts of history, which include ongoing political, theological, and literary debates. Ambiguities of poetic syntax also invite us to consider other meaningful aspects of poems such as rhythm, stanza forms, line breaks, and punctuation. These phenomena are no less important to poems we hear read aloud, or sung, than they are to poems we encounter primarily through the eye. But when we read poems on the page, we necessarily confront the myriad ways in which printers and editors, in tandem with the poems' original authors, shape what we see. Our very perception of some poetic ambiguities depends on the presence or absence of judgments by other readers about, for instance, punctuation marks and spelling. With older poems in particular, THE GAME OF INTERPRETATION / 2065

punctuation marks may represent a printer's or an editor's interpretation of a line. Conventions of punctuation have changed over time, and the meaning of punctuation is always open to interpretation whether or not we possess a material text thought to represent an author's intent—which, in any case, may have changed in his or her own lifetime as a reader of his or her own poems. In any case, it is appropriate to end this introduction to poetic syntax with some brief examples of syntactic analysis linked to questions about punctuation, about the poem's mode of being as a (reproducible) material object, and about acts of interpretation—including those of editors and other readers—as moves in a game without closure.

The Game of Interpretation

Emily Dickinson

When poems exist in multiple manuscript versions, editors necessarily make interpretive decisions about syntax simply by deciding which version to print. This is strikingly the case for editors of Emily Dickinson, since Dickinson published few of her poems during her life and left almost two thousand poems—in various groupings (including more than forty hand-bound booklets called “fascicles”) and in various kinds of drafts (including scrawls on the backs of envelopes)—at her death. Many poems exist in several different forms (available at www.emilydickinson.org and in the variorum edition by R. H. Franklin). In some Dickinson poems, the presence or absence of a certain punctuation mark contributes to rich opportunities for interpretive debate. Compare, for example, two versions of her poem “A Bird, c a m e down the Walk” (no. 3 5 9 [328]; p. 1116). In o n e version, printed in R. H. Franklin’s reading edition of Dickinson’s p o e m s and in this anthology, the complex relation between the bird and the poem’s speaker—an “I”/eye looking at the bird as the bird is looking at the speaker—is rendered as follows in the third stanza and the beginning of the fourth:

He glanced with rapid eyes,

That hurried all abroad -

T h e y looked like frightened Beads, I thought,

He stirred his Velvet Head. -

Like o n e in danger, Cautious,

I offered him a Crumb ...

In another version of this poem, however—a version printed in many modern anthologies—the transition between the third and fourth stanzas occurs without any punctuation. This editorial c h o i c e changes the poem’s syntax and, in so doing, invites debate about h o w we perceive the relation between two creatures, the bird and the h u m a n speaker, caught in the act of looking at e a c h other:

He stirred his Velvet Head

Like o n e in danger, Cautious,

I offered him a Crumb

2 0 6 6 / P O E T I C S Y N T A X

T h e a b s e n c e of punctuation between the stanzas in this version of the p o e m allows us initially to read the new stanza as part of the preceding clause, in which the subject is “he,” the bird. Reading on, however, we see that the new stanza’s opening line can also be understood as belonging to a new clause, one with “I,” the speaker, as its subject. This ambiguity creates an unsettling effect, making the reader go back and forth between syntactic alternatives in a conceptual movement subtly likened—through the poet’s craft—to the bird’s head movements or to the dizzying exchanges of gazes, and of fears, between human and bird. Like the earlier example from Cummings’s “since feeling is first,” this version of Dickinson’s poem gives us two readings that are equally plausible in syntactic terms; the second reading, however, which necessarily encompasses our consideration of the first, is more complex, in part because the idea of a human in danger when offering a crumb to a bird is less commonsensical than the idea of a bird feeling in danger when approaching a human. This bird, however, has been described earlier in the poem as biting a worm “in halves” and as eating “the fellow, raw,” while not knowing he is being watched by the speaker. The poem as a whole creates a coolly terrifying atmosphere in which the possibility arises that the speaker is in no less danger from an unknown “watcher” than the bird is. Double syntax works to slow us down and make us aware of an unfamiliar world where some “hidden purpose,” as the poet Thomas Gunn calls it, causes such creatures as birds to look, by the poem’s end, like butterflies leaping “off Banks of Noon” and landing without splashes in an alien element where they may live or die “as they swim.”

In another poem by Dickinson, “On a Columnar Self” (no. 740 [789]; p. 1121), we have to intervene more actively to make the double syntax work; here, as is often the case in poetic interpretation, we must supply either a missing word or a punctuation mark to make sense of the lines:

On a Columnar S e l f —

H o w ample to rely

In Tumult—or Extremity—

H o w good the Certainty

That Lever cannot pry—

And W e d g e cannot divide

Conviction—That Granitic B a s e —

Though none be on our side—

We can read the first stanza as an independent syntactic unit if we mentally supply a period after “Certainty”; then we take “That Lever” as the subject of a new sentence.

Alternatively (and, as is typical for double syntax, in addition), we may take the absence of a period after “Certainty” as license to interpret “That Lever” as a relative clause modifying “Certainty”: in this case, we supply the word which after “Certainty,” conceptually bridging the stanza break and thus making the poem’s first two stanzas into building blocks, it seems, for a “columnar” self that consists of yoked pieces. Read as a whole, however, the poem resists giving us a simple answer to the implied question of whether the self is divided or undivided, singular or plural. (Read o n — s e e what you can make of the syntactic options created by the absence of a question of what kind of “column” the “self” is? As you reread, note that the poem’s variable metrical pattern of trimeter and tetrameter lines contributes to its questions about the shape and nature of a “columnar self.”) John Keats

punctuation mark after “divide.” D o e s the poem’s third stanza resolve the T H E G A M E O F I N T E R P R E T A T I O N / 2 0 6 7

Consider the famous opening line of John Keats’s “Ode on a Grecian Urn”

(p. 938): “Thou still unravished bride of quietness... .” Does the word “still” function as an adjective or an adverb? In other words, is the urn, here addressed as “thou” and thus given qualities of personhood, “still” in the sense of unmoving (the adjectival meaning), or is the urn “still unravished,” with “still” in the adverbial sense of as yet, which, in connection with “unmoving,” shades into not yet ravished?

To appreciate Keats’s use of “still,” we will need not only to recognize that ambiguous part of speech in the ode’s first line but also to ponder it in relation to the rest of this ode, which goes on to explore the idea of “ravished”

in two different senses: as ecstatically delighted; and as violated, raped. The poem is about an apparently timeless and inanimate painted object, which is personified as a bride and hence likened to the “maidens loath,” struggling to escape pursuers, in one of the scenes painted on the urn; the urn is also likened to the heifer painted on the urn and described as “lowing,” though the poet cannot hear her voice and cannot be sure whether or not she is being led to death as a victim of sacrifice. Keats’s ode, like Shakespeare’s Sonnet 106, uses syntactic ambiguity to slow us down as we ponder a poem about time’s passing and the art that succeeds—but only partially and paradoxically—in escaping death.

Thomas Gray

Thomas Gray, who died some twenty years before Keats was born, also wrote an ode about a painted vase; and his poem too uses syntactic ambiguity to enrich a meditation on the relation between visual (unmoving) artifacts and poetry, an inherently temporal mode of art. In some versions, the “Ode (On the Death of a Favorite Cat, Drowned in a Tub of Goldfishes)” (p. 668) begins with the following lines:

‘Twas on a lofty vase’s side,
Where China’s gayest art had dyed
The azure flowers that blow;
Demurest of the tabby kind,
The pensive Selima reclined,
Gazed on the lake below.

Upon first reading these lines, we probably take “reclined” as an intransitive verb telling us what the cat did. As we go on to read line 6, however, we encounter a fine instance of double syntax enabled by punctuation, for we must revise our understanding of the initial five lines to comprehend the syntax of line 6. Either we mentally supply and taking “reclined” and “gazed”

as a compound verb phrase; or we retroactively interpret “reclined” as a past participle—a verb used as an adjective—describing the cat’s position and thus creating a witty but melancholy joke: the cat that will, we know from the title, fall into that “lofty” painted vase and drown is here caught, through the two possible interpretations of “reclined,” between life and death. A cat that can recline is alive; a cat “reclined” is perhaps already dead. In yet a third alternative, suggested by poem as a whole, the cat may exist in that strange state of suspension between life and death that is created by art. This paradoxical state, implied by the pun on “dyed” and died, is neatly captured in the name of a certain genre of paintings: still life.

2068 / POETICSYNTAX

The ambiguity of “reclined” adds further shades of meaning to the poem’s opening description of the cat on the side of a vase. What does that preposition mean? We might read it as suggesting that the cat is painted on the vase. We may firmly reject that possibility when we get to “gazed,” in line 6, and stanza 2’s description of the cat’s tail “declaring” her “conscious joy”; this is (or was) evidently a real, moving cat, not a painted one—and hence her reclining can be pictured as a lively, comic, even wildly acrobat act of being at rest. And yet this poem is an ode that the title declares is “on the death” of a favorite cat; how does that “on” relate to the “on” of the opening line? The poem as a whole re-creates, reanimates, something long dead and still, exploring paradoxes of stillness and incipient movement similar to those in Keats’s “Ode on a Grecian Urn.” There, as we’ve seen, a scene painted on an old vase prompts the poet to reflect on the ways in which an artwork arrests time’s passage while also testifying to time’s power. Gray’s ode also invites us to ponder the relations between artistic representations (verbal and visual), and (what counts) as reality, or life.

The tiny bit of double syntax at the end of Gray’s opening stanza, which invites us to do a double take, to revise our understanding of the relation between verbs and adjectives, terms of motion and of stasis, disappears when modern editors add a comma to line 5, as many have done when reprinting

Gray’s poem for busy twentieth- and twenty-first-century readers. Consider the difference:

Demurest of the tabby kind,

The pensive Selima[,] reclined,

Gazed on the lake below.

Does this difference matter? Many readers have chosen not to pause on this comma, or its absence, because interpretations based on the presence or absence of one mark of punctuation lead into territories where it's famously hard to be sure one is right. In many historical examples of double syntax, including, notoriously, Shakespeare's sonnets, we can never be certain whether a given punctuation mark—or the absence thereof—reflects the writer's original intention or a printer's interpretation (or error). Uncertainty about authorial intention need not bother us if we accept the idea that meanings are culturally conditioned and the game of interpretation often requires us to make informed guesses.

John Dryden

Like Gray, John Dryden exploits the syntactic ambiguities lurking in past participles. Verbs arrested to modify nouns, participles often help poets explore the relations between ideas of stillness and ideas of motion; when participles are used in such a way that they may also be interpreted as verbs THE GAME OF INTERPRETATION / 2069

in the past tense, they can help raise questions about bondage, freedom, and human agency. In lines 939—41 of his long poem Absalom and Achitophel, Dryden's character King David breaks a long silence with the following lines about how he plans to punish his rebellious son Absalom:

Thus long have I by native mercy swayed

My wrongs dissembled, my revenge delayed;

So willing to forgive the offending age,
So much the father did the king assuage, (my emphasis)
Modern editors—including those of this anthology (see p. 515) —often simplify this statement by adding explanatory commas around the phrase “by native mercy swayed,” which makes it definitively into an adjectival modifier; the punctuation erases the possibility that David is saying that he has ruled for a long time in a merciful way while at the same time pretending not
to see the wrongs done to him—or, in another reading allowed by the syntax,
ruling in an apparently merciful way while dissembling the wrong he does to others. In the form in which they were originally printed in 1681, the lines allow for several very different interpretations
(the critic William Empson counts seven!), depending on whether the reader takes “swayed,” “dissembled,” or “delayed” as the main verb of the first clause. If we reread the clause aloud, trying out each possible main verb with the other two then becoming past participles, we see how subtly our perceptions of David’s
character
change, along with our estimates of the harshness with which he is likely
now to undertake the punishment of the rebel. Since Dryden’s poem uses
the biblical story to figure a contemporary drama of political power (David represents King Charles II of England, Absalom his illegitimate son Monmouth), syntactic ambiguity is a potentially important protective shield for the poet attempting to analyze the relations between what a ruler “shows”

and what he “dissembles” as he contemplates “revenge.” In removing syntactic ambiguities in some political poems of the past such as Dryden’s, modern editors may, ironically, be blunting one of the weapons poets have traditionally used to avoid censorship.

William Blake

For a final example of interpretation enriched by attention to syntax and to punctuation, let’s look at William Blake’s “The Lamb.” One of a series called Songs of Innocence, which Blake eventually combined with the Songs of Experience, this poem was originally published in an illuminated book, a form Blake devised; writing in 1793, he described his illuminated books as the result of a “method of Printing which combines the Painter and the Poet”

(Prospectus, cited in Viscomi). Much has been written about Blake’s beautiful books, which exist in multiple copies made during his lifetime from his etchings. For our purposes, one of these books’ most interesting features is what they show about the interplay of punctuation and syntax in creating ambiguities of meaning. An illustrated poem like the one reproduced on

p. 2071 allows us some access to Blake’s thoughts about punctuation. The access is only partial, however, because eighteenth-century understandings of punctuation differ from modern ones and because Blake, as his great editor David Erdman observes, often uses punctuation for “rhetorical” purposes rather than to clarify syntax (787). In addition, different marks appear slightly differently in different copies of the

pur-2 0 7 0 / P O E T I C S Y N T A X

illustrated poems; indeed, as Erdman also remarks, it is “impossible to copy Blake exactly” in print because the marks in the illuminated books sometimes “grade into each other” so that, for instance, a comma will be compounded with a question mark, or the difference between a comma and a period will be impossible to determine. Even trained scholars may therefore disagree about how to transcribe (rewrite, copy) a given Blake poem. Moreover, recognizing the gaps between eighteenth-century conventions of punctuation and modern ones, many modern editors feel that an attempt to follow Blake’s punctuation exactly will distract readers rather than helping them appreciate the poems. One practical solution to this conundrum is to compare a “modernized” version of a poem by Blake (or by Dickinson or Shakespeare or other poets in this anthology) with a reproduction of a manuscript or early printed version of the text. Such a comparative practice, now much easier than it used to be because old versions of poems are readily viewable on the Web, allows us to see that editing, and even translating a text among different media, generates interpretations we can play with, and against which we can test our own understanding of a poem. A fascinating historical set of transcriptions and illustrations of Blake’s poems is available for study at the innovative Web site of the Blake Archives (www.blakearchive.org).

In the case of “The Lamb,” there are some interesting differences in punctuation among the more than twenty copies of the combined Songs made before Blake’s death; the poem’s penultimate line in Blake’s version, for instance—“Little Lamb God bless thee”—is followed by a period in some transcriptions, a comma in others, and nothing—perhaps because the illustration’s colors extended farther into the text—in still others. All of the illuminated copies, however, are very lightly punctuated, at least by today’s standards and in striking contrast to most modern teaching editions of the poem, including the one in this anthology (p. 734). The difference is underscored by the absence of punctuation marks in the poem’s opening lines as Blake printed them: “Little Lamb who made thee / Dost thou know who made thee” (see etching). Why is this significant? The presence or absence of punctuation marks in this poem gives us a glimpse into the ongoing history of reading as a process of trying to make sense of challenging poetic statements. The effort of making sense of syntax is, as we’ve seen, a key move in the game of interpretation. But so is the move of resisting premature submission to common sense. Blake invites us to tolerate, even relish, an experience of syntactic ambiguity abetted by the absence of punctuation and not unlike what John Keats called “negative capability,” or “being in uncertainties, mysteries, doubts, without any irritable reaching after fact and reason.”

When modern editors add question marks and commas to the opening of Blake’s poem, they make sense of it by making it fit the type of English

guise of lamb. In this reading, the referent for “thou” in the second line would be Christ, and the question the speaker is posing would shift back and forth from one about w h o made God’s h u m a n and animal creatures to one about w h o made the Son of God. Thus the apparently “elementary” little p o e m opens toward sophisticated theological debates about the relation among God’s different “persons”: the Christian trinity, like the three pronouns in the p o e m (“thee,” “He,” and “I”), is three-in-one, one-in-three.

Our willingness to grant theological complexity to the p o e m goes hand in hand with a willingness to see its multiple syntactic possibilities as mutually illuminating rather than in competition with e a c h other. The poem’s final lines, w h i c h ring an echoing change on the opening ones, leave the theological and h u m a n questions of identity and origin teasingly open even as Blake c h o o s e s (for the first time) to end two lines with periods: one after “name,” the other after the final “thee.” If we join in this process of cocreating poetic meaning, we could imaginatively punctuate many lines in the p o e m in several different ways, none of which would conflict with the light punctuation Blake left for us. The p o e m quietly suggests that the reader is always cocreating the poem: our choices about syntax are choices about meaning. Fortunately, with this poem, making one syntactic choice at one time does not prevent us from making another later—and from attempting to hold all the possibilities in mind at once. The p o e m remains circular, fluid, teasing, and the final lines continue to solicit different interpretations, signaled here by the added commas:

Little lamb[,] God bless thee,

Little lamb God[,] bless thee.

Scorn Not Syntax

In the nineteenth century, one meaning of syntax was “a class in certain English R o m a n Catholic schools ...

below that called poetry” and often just above a class devoted to the subject of “grammar” (Oxford English Dictionary 2.C.). For modern students and their teachers, the relations among grammar, syntax, and poetry are rarely so orderly as such a curricular sequence suggests. Indeed, for many of us, the words syntax and grammar, like versification, conjure up associations with dryness and discipline: with the acts of scientific analysis that William Wordsworth, in “The Tables Turned”

(p. 764), denounced as the work of a “meddling intellect” that “murder[s] to dissect.” In this famous poem, part of a dialogue in which Wordsworth adopts different attitudes toward the old question of the relation between reason and emotion in poetry, the speaker seems to praise nature and the mind that is open to nature’s gifts as superior to all things that the mind actively produces through science or through art. By allying mental labor with some kind of dissection practiced on the corpses of naturally lovely things, Wordsworth’s speaker articulates a feeling many have had at the moment when the SUGGESTIONS FOR FURTHER READING / 2073 work of analyzing a poem (or a picture or a feeling of love) seems to destroy something simple, vital, and whole.

But there is another way to see the work of analyzing poems and, in particular, their syntactic bones. Playing on Wordsworth’s title for another poem—“Scorn Not the Sonnet” (p. 804) — and harking back to Edward Taylor’s phrase “the curious knot,” we could argue for the value of untying syntactic knots as an intellectual exercise that teaches us something about our own relation to language. Analyzing poems, we need not think of ourselves as murderers, or even as surgeons performing an autopsy. Instead, we can think of ourselves as readers with the power to animate poetic meanings and test our cocreations in conversations with other readers. That group includes, of course, poets themselves, both the dead and the living.

MARGARET F E R G U S O N

Suggestions for Further Reading

Austin, Timothy R. Language Crafted: A Linguistic Theory of Poetic Syntax.

Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1984.

Borck, Jim S. "Blake's 'The Lamb': The Punctuation of Innocence." Tennessee Studies in Literature 19 (1974): 163—75.

Boroff, Marie. The Language and the Poet: Verbal Artistry in Frost, Stevens, and Moore. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1979.

Brooke Rose, Christine. A Grammar of Metaphor. London: Martin, Seeker, and Warburg, 1958.

Collins, Martha. "On Syntax in Poetry." Field (Spring 1999): 74 - 84.

Cureton, Richard. "Poetic Syntax and Aesthetic Form." Style 14 (Fall 1980): 318 - 409.

Davie, Donald. Articulate Energy. 1955. London, Boston: Routledge and Kegan Paul, 1976.

Dillon, George L. "Inversions and Deletions in English Poetry." Language and Style 8.3 (1975): 220 - 37.

Easthope, Anthony. Poetry as Discourse. London: Methuen, 1983.

Empson, William. Seven Types of Ambiguity. New York: New Directions, 1947.

Erdman, David, ed. "The Punctuation." In The Poetry and Prose of William Blake, rev. ed., 786 - 87. New York: Doubleday, 1982.

Fairley, Gene E. E. E. Cummings and Ungrammar. Searingtown, N.Y.: Water-mill Publishers, 1975.

- Francis, W. Nelson. “Syntax and Literary Interpretation.” In S. Chatman and S. Levin, Essays in the Language of Literature, 209—16. Boston: Houghton Mifflin, 1967.
- Franklin, R. H., ed. The Poems of Emily Dickinson, variorum ed. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press (Belknap), 1998.
- . The Poems of Emily Dickinson, reading ed. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press (Belknap), 1999.
- Gregerson, Linda. “Anatomizing Death.” In Imagining Death in Spenser and 2074 / POETICSyntax Milton, 95—115. Ed. Elizabeth Jane Bellamy, Patrick Cheney, and Michael Schoenfeldt. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2003.
- Huddleston, Rodney and Geoffrey K. Pullum, et al. Cambridge Grammar of the English Language. Cambridge, U.K., and New York: Cambridge University Press, 2002.
- Kintgen, Eugene R. “Perceiving Poetic Syntax.” College English 40.1 (Sept. 1978): 17 - 27.
- Lanham, Richard. A Handlist of Rhetorical Terms. Berkeley: University of California Press, 1991.
- Miller, Cristanne. Emily Dickinson: A Poet’s Grammar. Cambridge, Mass.: Harvard University Press, 1987.
- Nowotny, Winifred. The Language Poets Use. London: Athlon Press, 1962.
- Oberhaus, Dorothy Huff. Emily Dickinson’s Fascicles: Method and Meaning. University Park, Pa.: Pennsylvania State University Press, 1995.
- Simpson, David. Irony and Authority in Romantic Poetry. New Jersey: Rowan and Littlefield, 1979.

Viscomi, Joseph. "Illuminated Printing." In "About Blake" at The Blake Archive www.blakearchive.org.

Wasserman, Earl R. The Subtler Language: Critical Readings of Neoclassic and Romantic Poems. 1959.

Westport, Conn.: Greenwood Press, 1979.

Biographical Sketches

Fleur Adcock (b. 1934), pp. 1849-53

from an Islamic background to write poetry in

Fleur Adcock was born in New Zealand, but

English, he identified a "triple heritage" of lived in England until 1947. She was educated

Hindu, Muslim, and Western culture that at Victoria University, New Zealand, and taught informs his poems.

Classics there and at Otago University. In 1963,

she moved to London to become a librarian at

A. R. Ammons (1926-2001), pp. 1695-

the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. Since 1701

1979, she has been a freelance writer based in

A(rchie) R(andolph) Ammons was born and

London, though she has spent time at univer-grew up on a small tobacco farm near White-

sities in the north of England, as a Northern Arts

ville, North Carolina, and started writing poetry

Fellow. She has translated works from Roma-while on a U.S. Navy destroyer escort in the nian and from medieval Latin, and edited the South Pacific. After World War II, he earned a Faber Book of Twentieth-Century Women's B.A. from Wake Forest University and worked Poetry. She was awarded an OBE in 1996, and variously as an elementary school teacher, a real estate salesman, an editor, and a sales executive at his father's glassmaking firm. Although he Conrad Aiken (1889-1973), pp. 1370-71

published his first volume, Ommateum (1955), at his own expense, he became over a career that Conrad Aiken was born in Savannah, Georgia, included some thirty volumes of poetry one of
and raised there until age eleven, when his
the most influential and respected American father shot Aiken's mother and himself to death.
poets, and one of the few to embark on book-Aiken was sent to live with relatives in Cam-length poems, such as Glare and Garbage. He bridge, Massachusetts. He was educated at Harvard University, where he and his classmate
T. S. Eliot began a lifelong, troubled friendship.
Simon Armitage (b. 1963), pp. 2021-23
After traveling extensively in Europe, he settled
Simon Armitage was born in Huddersfield, into a career as a writer. During the 1920s and England. He studied geography at Portsmouth 1930s, he lived in New York, but he spent much

Polytechnic and took a postgraduate degree in time abroad, mostly in England. In his later social work at Manchester University. He years, he lived in Savannah and on Cape Cod, worked as a probation officer before becoming Massachusetts. An exceptionally prolific writer, a full-time writer. His first volume of poems, Aiken published some thirty volumes of poetry, Zoom!, was published in 1989, and his popular-five novels, dozens of short stories, a multitude ity has grown steadily ever since. A prolific writer of essays and reviews, and an autobiography. His and presenter for television, radio, and film, he Senlin (1918) employs what he called the “symphony” form, where each section of the poem and The White Stuff; published a collection of functions like a musical movement.

essays about the north of England, All Points North; and coedited The Penguin Anthology of Agha Shahid Ali (1949-2001), pp. 1958-60 published Selected Poems in 2001 and The Universal Home Doctor, a new collection, in 2002. and raised in Kashmir. He was educated at the He has taught at the Universities of Leeds and University of Kashmir, Srinagar; the University of Iowa and currently teaches at Manchester Metropolitan University; Pennsylvania State University; and the University of Arizona, Tucson. He held teaching posts at various institutions, including Princeton and the University of Massachusetts, 1101

Amherst. In addition to his own poetry, Ali wrote Matthew Arnold (1822-1888), pp. 1087-1101

Amherst. In addition to his own poetry, Ali wrote

Matthew Arnold was born in Laleham-on-

Thames, England, the son of Dr. Thomas

Ahmed Faiz from Urdu. One of the few Indians

Arnold, headmaster of Rugby School, and was 2075

2076 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

educated at Balliol College, Oxford, where he (1563) published two accounts of her examination and death, in 1546 and 1547. John Foxe's

Acts and Monuments (1563) contains a descrip-

(1866). In 1851, Arnold became an inspector of schools, a position he held for thirty-five years.

ballads about her were written in the seven-

His writing on education advocated the study of teenth century.

the Bible and the humanities as the remedy for what he saw as the philistinism and insularity of

Margaret Atwood (b. 1939), pp. 1894-99

the times, and he worked indefatigably to

Margaret Atwood was born in Ottawa, Canada, improve standards and introduce rigor into the and raised there and in Toronto. As a child, she school curriculum. After writing most of his spent much time in the woods of northern Quebec, where her father conducted entomological turned away from poetry, believing himself research. Ed educated at the University of Toronto, unable to convey “Joy.” Although he was elected

Radcliffe College, and Harvard University,

professor of poetry at Oxford University in 1858,

Atwood has taught at a number of Canadian other than New Poems (1867) he subsequently universities and has worked as an editor for the published only prose, including Essays in Criti-

Anansi publishing house. Though known pricism (1865, 1888) and Culture and Anarchy marily as one of Canada's premier novelists, she (1869).

has also published poetry, short stories, children's books, critical essays, and a study of

John Ashbery (b. 1927), pp. 1736-40

Canadian literature, and she has edited several

John Ashbery was born in Rochester, New York, collections of verse. She is an active supporter and raised on a farm near Lake Ontario. He was of Amnesty International and other human education at Harvard University, where he wrote rights organizations. The subjects of her some- his thesis on W. H. Auden, who selected his first times futuristic work include the social roles of book, Some Trees (1956), for the Yale Series of women, the power dynamics between men and Younger Poets. He received his M.A. from women, and the conflicts between nation and Columbia University and attended New York nation.

University before working as a copywriter in

New York City. Beginning in 1955, he worked

W. H. Auden (1907-1973), pp. 1465-81 for a decade as an art reviewer in Paris. He has

W(ystan) H(ugh) Auden was born in York,

since served as poetry editor of the Partisan England, and educated at Christ Church Col-Review and art critic for New York and News-

lege, Oxford, where he became a friend of the week magazines. He joined the faculty of Brook-

“Pylon” poets Stephen Spender and Cecil Day

lyn College in 1974. In addition to poetry,

Lewis. In the 1930s, Auden embarked on a Ashbery has written three plays and (with James series of formative travels: to Germany, where Schuyler) a collaborative novel. Loosely con-

he was introduced to Sigmund Freud’s work;

n e c t e d t o w h a t h a s b e e n c a l l e d t h e N e w Y o r k
Iceland, w h i c h h e v i s i t e d w i t h t h e p o e t L o u i s s c h o o l — a l o n g w i t h S c h u y l e r a n d f e l l o w p o e t s
M a c N e i c e ; S p a i n , a s a R e p u b l i c a n s y m p a t h i z e r
F r a n k O ' H a r a a n d K e n n e t h K o c h — h e f r e - d u r i n g t h e S p a n i s h C i v i l W a r ; C h i n a , w i t h q u e n t l y a d o p t s a n d a d a p t s t h e t e c h n i q u e s o f
C h r i s t o p h e r I s h e r w o o d d u r i n g t h e S i n o - m u s i c i a n s a s w e l l a s A b s t r a c t E x p r e s s i o n i s t a n d
J a p a n e s e W a r ; a n d t h e U n i t e d S t a t e s , t o w h i c h
S u r r e a l i s t p a i n t e r s . L i k e t h e w o r k o f G e r t r u d e h e e m i g r a t e d i n 1 9 3 9 , t a k i n g A m e r i c a n c i t i z e n - S t e i n , a b o u t w h o m h e h a s w r i t t e n , h i s p o e m s a r e s h i p i n 1 9 4 6 . H e w a s a w a r d e d t h e P u l i t z e r P r i z e c h a r a c t e r i z e d b y r a d i c a l d i s j u n c t i o n s . H e i s o n e i n 1 9 4 8 . W i t h t h e m o v e t o A m e r i c a , A u d e n o f t h e m o s t p r o l i f i c a n d i n f l u e n t i a l p o e t s o f t h e t h r e w o f f t h e c o n f l i c t b e t w e e n h i s p r i v i l e g e d l a s t h a l f - c e n t u r y .

b a c k g r o u n d a n d y o u t h f u l l e f t - w i n g s y m p a t h i e s t h a t c h a r a c t e r i z e d h i s e a r l y p o e t r y , a n d g r a d u a l l y

Anne Askew (1521-1546), pp. 140-41

r e t u r n e d t o t h e A n g l i c a n f a i t h o f h i s m o t h e r , a
A n n e A s k e w (o r A s c u e) w a s b o r n i n t o a n o l d c h a n g e t h a t l e f t a s t r o n g i m p r i n t o n h i s l a t e r
L i n c o l n s h i r e , E n g l a n d , f a m i l y t h a t e d u c a t e d h e r w o r k . H e a l s o p u b l i s h e d p r o s e , d r a m a , a n d (i n w e l l . A s a y o u n g w o m a n , s h e d e v o t e d h e r s e l f t o c o l l a b o r a t i o n w i t h C h e s t e r K a l l m a n) l i b r e t t i . H e

Bible study and engaged the local clergy in dis-taught at a number of institutions, including putes about the interpretation of scripture.
Oxford, where he was professor of poetry from Forced into marriage and eventually turned out 1956 until 1961. For the next ten years, he of doors by her husband, Askew went to London, divided his time between New York and Europe, where she became a friend of Joan Bocher, a but in 1972 he returned to Oxford to live at Protestant of known heterodoxy. Examined in Christ Church. He diagnosed his century's 1545 for heretical views about the sacraments, banalities and horrors with relentless honesty
she was not found guilty but, in June 1546, was and incisive wit, but also with compassion.

condemned by a special commission that called no jury and no witnesses. The next day, she was Joanna Baillie (1762-1851), pp. 760-63

tortured; after four weeks, she was burned at the Joanna Baillie was born in Lanarkshire, Scotstake. The Protestant bishop John Bale (1495—land, the daughter of Dorothea Hunter and

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2077

James Baillie, a Presbyterian clergyman, later Palgrave, where they managed a school for professor of divinity at Glasgow University. At which she taught and wrote textbooks, one of age ten, she was sent to a boarding school in which, Hymns in Prose to Children (1781), went Glasgow. Her father died in 1778. Baillie, her through thirty editions and was translated into mother, and her sister lived in Lanarkshire until five languages. The Barbaulds left Palgrave in 1784, when they moved to London to keep 1785 and settled in London, where Anna house for her brother, who had inherited a small devoted herself to writing tracts in support of medical museum from his uncle, Dr. William causes such as dissenting politics, democratic Hunter. Baillie was introduced to London liter-governments, public education, and the French hary circles by her aunt, a minor poet, and was Revolution; and to literary work, such as editing friends with the poet Anna Laetitia Barbauld. the poetry of William Collins, collecting six volumes of the correspondence of Samuel Richardson with her sister (when not traveling in England and writing prefaces to the entries in all fifty and on the Continent) for the rest of her life. volumes of The British Novelists. In 1773, she Her Poems appeared in 1790, but during her published a volume of poems containing works lifetime she was best-known for her verse drama in a variety of genres: the ode, the hymn, the

mas, which were published in three volumes fable, and the satire. In 1808, her husband (1798-1812) under the title Series of Plays, in drowned, having become mentally ill and vio-which It Is Attempted to Delineate the Stranger lent. Barbauld published an anthology for girls, Passions of the Mind. One, De Montfort, was The Female Speaker, in 1811, and a poem, Eigh-staged at Drury Lane in 1800 and featured teen Hundred and Eleven, in 1812. The latter

Sarah Siddons. Edmund Keane took the title role was so badly reviewed that she published very

in an 1821 revival. A Philanthropic Woman, Bail-

little during the final thirteen years of her life.

lie gave much of her earnings to charity and

published A Collection of Poems, Chiefly Manu-

James K. Baxter (1926-1972), pp. 1701-script, and from Living Authors (1823) to raise 03 funds for needy acquaintances. Her last book of

James K. Baxter was born in Dunedin, New Zeapoems was published only weeks before her land, and educated at Quaker schools in New

death.

Zealand and England, the University of Otago, and the University of Victoria at Wellington. He

Amiri Baraka (LeRoi Jones) (b. 1934), worked as a laborer, journalist, and teacher, and

pp. 1856-58

from 1954 until 1960 edited the Wellington

Amiri Baraka was born LeRoi Jones in Newark, New Jersey. He earned a B.A. from Howard University against alcoholism, he became a Roman Catholic in 1958, and subsequently founded a religious community and became active in social welfare programs. An extraordinarily prolific writer, Baxter published more than thirty collections of poetry as well as plays and literary criticism. His work shows a deep understanding of ventures and radical political causes. He was complex political and social issues and often instrumental in the founding of several small attacks exploitation and materialism. Later magazines; the Black Arts Repertory Theatre, in Harlem; and Spirit House, in Newark. In the 1970s, when he became a Black Muslim and ended it. His final work, based on his experiences in a Moroccan village called Jerusalem, articulates a he later dropped Imam Amiri Baraka (although he later dropped Imam Amiri Baraka), he began to write fervent religious faith.

polemic poetry espousing black nationalism,

which he later denounced. In addition to poetry,

Aphra Behn (1640? - 1689), pp. 540-49

he has written a novel, a collection of short sto-

Different accounts and opinions exist about ries, an autobiography, several plays, and Aphra

Behn's date of birth, parentage, religion, numerous tracts on social issues. From 1979 to given name, and marital status. Most historians

1999, he taught at the State University of New agree, however, that she visited Surinam with

York at Stony Brook.

her family in her youth, returned to England

when the colony was handed over to the Dutch,

Anna Laetitia Barbauld (1743-1825),

and was briefly married to a merchant of Dutch

pp. 705-07

extraction. While spying for King Charles II in

Anna Laetitia Barbauld (nee Aikin) was born at

Antwerp in 1666, she seems to have uncovered

Kibworth Harcourt, Leicestershire, England, a Dutch plot to sail up the river Thames and to attack at home by her father, a schoolmaster in the British fleet;

letters survive in which

ter who became a classical tutor at the new War-

she complains of the king's failure to pay her for ington Academy for Dissenters, an intellectual her work, and she may have been briefly impriscenter where Barbauld spent fifteen years. She one died for debt in the late 1660s. Writing plays married in 1774 and followed her husband to became her main means of support, and she was

2078 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES
one of the most prolific playwrights of the Res-left without taking a degree. During World War tation era. Her first play, The Forced Marriage, II, he held several posts in the Ministry of Infor-was produced in 1670; she subsequently wrote mation. He later served as United Kingdom seventeen plays, including many comedies that press attaché in Dublin. Betjeman had a lifelong satirize the consequences of ill-suited marriages.
avidity for architecture and devoted considera-
Her one tragedy, Abdelazar (1676), draws on ble energy to the preservation of historic land-previous dramatic portraits, including Shake-marks and scenic views. After 1945, he worked speare's in Othello and Titus Andronicus, of as a freelance e writer and journalist and became black men who love white women. Her prose a celebrated television personality. His many romance, Oroonoko, or the Royal Slave (1688), honors included the Queen's Gold Medal for was based on her experiences in Surinam and Poetry (1960) and a knighthood (1969). In criticized the enslavement and subsequent tor-1972, he was a popular choice as poet laureate, ture and execution of a princely black hero

a post he held until his death .

whom the white female narrator greatly admires.

Behn also wrote occasional poems , elegies, pro-

Earle Birney (1904 - 1991) , pp. 1447-48

logues and epilogues for other dramatists, Earle Birney was born in Calgary, Alberta, and including John Dryden, and erotic pastoral raised on a farm in Erickson, British Columbia.

poems such as "The Disappointment ." Her tragic-He worked as a bank clerk, a farm laborer, and icomedie set in colonial Virginia, The Widow a park ranger before attending the University of Ranter, was performed and published the year British Columbia , the University of Toronto , after Behn died.

and the University of California at Berkeley, from which he earned a Ph. D. in Old and Mid-

Charles Bernstein (b. 1950) , pp. 1967-68

dle English. He then taught at the Universities

Charles Bernstein was born in New York City of Utah , Toronto , and British Columbia . During and educated at Harvard University, where he

World War II, Birney served with the Canadian studied philosophy and was an activist against

Army as a personnel-selection officer and as the Vietnam War . He worked as a commercial supervisor of the International Service of the writer and editor in health care for twenty

Canadian Broadcasting Corporation . In addiyears. With Bruce Andrews, he co-founded a foundation to poetry, he published novels, radio plays,

L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E magazine in 1978, and literary essays.

and since then has been a principal figure in the

L=A=N=G=U=A=G=E poetry movement Elizabeth Bishop (1911-1979), pp. 1515-and a prominent theorist of radical poetics. He has taught at the State University of New York

28

Elizabeth Bishop was born in Worcester, Massachusetts at Buffalo since 1990.

sachusetts. After her father's death in 1911 and her mother's permanent hospitalization for mental

John Berryman (1914-1972), pp. 1546-52

tal illness in 1917, Bishop lived with relatives in

John Berryman was born John Smith in McNova Scotia and Massachusetts. She was edu-

Alester, Oklahoma. When he was ten, his family cated at Vassar College, and while still a student moved to Tampa, Florida, where his father com-

met the poet Marianne Moore, who recognized

mitted suicide, shooting himself outside his her promise and became her mentor. Her liter-son's window. The family moved to Massachuary friendship with Robert Lowell was also a sussetts, then resettled in New York, where Mrs.

tenance for both. Bishop traveled extensively

Smith married a banker named John Berryman, and often addressed questions of travel in her who adopted her sons. The younger John Ber-work. In 1952, she settled in Rio de Janeiro with erryman was educated at Columbia University and Lota de Macedo Soares, a Brazilian architect Clare College, Cambridge University, where he and landscape designer; the relationship ended studied Shakespeare. A scholar, particularly of tragically with Soares's suicide, in 1967. Bishop Shakespeare, and celebrated teacher, whose returned to the United States to teach, first at students included the poets Donald Justice, the University of Washington in Seattle, then at Philip Levine, and W. D. Snodgrass, Berryman Harvard University. In addition to poetry, she taught at, among other schools, Harvard University, wrote short stories and essays; translated from Princeton University, and the University the French, Spanish, and Portuguese; and was of Minnesota. He also wrote a biography of Ste-a fine amateur painter. During her lifetime, she phen Crane. Dogged by alcoholism and a nervous on the respect of her peers, and since her vious temperament, he committed suicide in death she has come to be regarded as among the 1972. His major contribution was a series of major poets of the century.

hundreds of poems in an inventive, eighteen-line form he called "dream songs."

William Blake (1757-1827), pp. 732-47

William Blake was born in London. He attended

John Betjeman (1906-1984), pp. 1460-63

art schools, including the Royal Academy

John Betjeman was born in London and school, and at age fourteen was apprenticed to attend Madgalen College, Oxford, which he an engraver. In 1800, he secured a patron at

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2079

Felpham, in Sussex, but found the arrangement his life. He studied as an undergraduate at St.

stultifying. Determined to follow his "Divine

Olaf's College and Harvard University and as a

Visions," he returned to London. He published graduate student at the University of Iowa Writers' Workshop. From 1944 until 1946, he served of Innocence (1789) and Songs of Experience in the navy. Bly founded and edited an influ-

(1794), which were illustrated with his own fan-tial journal named for each decade — The Fif- tastic etchings. From the 1820s, he devoted ties, The Sixties, The Seventies, The Eighties, and himself exclusively to pictorial art. His early

The Nineties. He has translated into English the work reveals his dissatisfaction with the prevail-

work of many important poets, including Rilke,

ing literary styles of his day; he took as his

Goethe, Neruda, and Vallejo. He is associated models the Elizabethan and early seventeenthwith the mystical Deep Image school and, in century poets, the Ossianic poems, and the work recent years, has figured prominently in the

of William Collins, Thomas Chatterton, and men's movement.

others working outside the prevailing contemporary literary conventions. Between 1795 and Louise Bogan (1897-1970), pp. 1406-09

1820, Blake developed a complex mythology to Louise Bogan was born in Livermore Falls, explain human history and suffering and came Maine. She attended Boston University for one to see himself as a visionary, prophetic figure, or year, then left school to marry. In 1919, newly Bard. His writings in this vein center around the single, Bogan moved to New York City to pursue biblical stories of the Fall, the Redemption, and writing. She became the poetry critic for The there establishment of Eden, but Blake gave New Yorker in 1931 and held the post until she these materials his own spin. In his mythos, the retired, in 1969. Bogan taught at several uni-Fall is seen as a psychic disintegration that versities, including the University of Washing-results from the "original sin" of Selfhood, and ton, the University of Chicago, the University of the Redemption and return to Eden as a resti-Arkansas, and Brandeis University. She also tution of psychic wholeness, a "Resurrection to translated Jiinger, G o e t h e , a n d Jules R e n a r d a n d Unity.” His s c h e m a c e n t e r s a r o u n d a “Universal wrote two influential critical works. Despite h e r

M a n ” w h o i n c o r p o r a t e s G o d r a t h e r t h a n a r o u n d professional success, h e r s t a n d a r d s f o r h e r f o r a t r a n s c e n d e n t Being distinct f r o m h u m a n i t y .

mal, polished p o e m s were so exacting that she published only 105 in her lifetime. H e r reputa-

Edmund Blunden (1896-1974), pp. 1404-

tion as a poet has grown p o s t h u m o u s l y , t o m a t c h 06

that in h e r lifetime as a critic.

E d m u n d B l u n d e n was born in London, raised in

Yalding, Kent, a n d e d u c a t e d at Christ’s Hospital

Eavan Boland (b. 1944), pp. 1938-42

School, in Sussex. In 1915, he joined the army

Eavan Boland, the d a u g h t e r o f t h e Irish diploa n d was s e n t t o t h e front in France. U p o n his

m a t F. H. Boland a n d t h e Postexpressionist

r e t u r n t o E n g l a n d , he briefly a t t e n d e d T h e

p a i n t e r F r a n c e s Kelley, was b o r n in Dublin, b u t

Q u e e n ‘ s College, Oxford; t h e n moved to L o n d o n e d u c a t e d in L o n d o n , w h e r e h e r f a t h e r was Irish to work as an assistant to J. Middleton M u r r y at a m b a s s a d o r , a n d N e w York, w h e r e he was a rep-

t h e Athenaeum magazine. For the next thirty resentative to t h e U n i t e d Nations. After gradu-years, he led a peripatetic existence, t e a c h i n g at ating f r o m Trinity College, D u b l i n , she l e c t u r e d

the Imperial University of Tokyo, the University in English there but found herself “completely of Hong Kong, and Merton College, Oxford. unsuited to being an academic,” and subsequently taught on a short-term basis at institutions in Ireland and the United States in order to devote her energies to writing. She has written ten essays on contemporary Irish literature, not engage in antiwar invective. In his poetry translated Irish poetry and work by Horace, and in his prose memoir, Undertones of War (1928), he focused instead on the experience of the men in the trenches, recording the “agonized” lected Poems (1995) brought together seven etched into “each grey face” but also acknowlcollections published over twenty years. She is edging the moments of happiness amid the professor of English at Stanford University.

slaughter. He was one of the only poets to mourn the devastation of the European land-Anne Bradstreet (ca. 1612-1672), pp. 458-scape, and his poems about the English country-67 side are considered among his finest. He settled

Anne Bradstreet (nee Dudley) was born in finally in Suffolk in 1964 and was elected pro-

Northampton, England, daughter of a gentle-fessor of poetry at Oxford in 1966.

woman named Dorothy Yorke and of Thomas Dudley, a nonconformist minister whom she
ed

Robert Bly (b. 1926), pp. 1704-05

the business interests of the earl of Lincoln.

Robert Bly was born in the town of Madison, in educated by private tutors in the earl's house -

rural Minnesota, where he has lived nearly all holds, she married Simon Bradstreet, a future

2080 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, in Rupert Brooke (1887-1915), pp. 1324-27

1628; in 1630, Bradstreet emigrated to America

Rupert Brooke was born in Rugby, England, with her husband and parents. When she first where his father was a housemaster of the came to the colonies, she” found a new world famous public school, and educated there and

and new manners,” as she later remembered.
at King’s College, Cambridge. After graduation, “But after I was convinced it was the way of God
he established himself in the house immortal-
I submitted to it and joined to the church of ized in “The Old Vicarage, Grantchester.” Fol-Boston.” While caring for her growing family following a series of unhappy love affairs, he (she had eight children), she continued to write.
traveled in Europe, the United States, Canada,
A volume of poems was published in London in and the South Seas. When war broke out, he 1650. Entitled The Tenth Muse Lately Sprung returned to England and was commissioned into Up in America, the book was published by Brad-t he Royal Naval Division. He was at the siege of street’s brother-in-law without her knowledge
Antwerp in October 1914 and spent the follow-(or so he claimed). It sold very well; a second ing winter training in Dorset, where he com-edition, containing numerous corrections and posed his “war sonnets.” The following year, additions, appeared six years after her death.
while on a troop ship bound for Gallipoli, he died
She compiled but did not publish a collection of after contracting dysentery and blood poisoning.

prose meditations on life and death for her son
Much of his early work was published in Edward Simon when he was about to become minister Marsh's anthologies of Georgian verse and was
in 1664.

praised for its conversational diction, vivid descriptions, and delight in the commonplace.

Edward Kamau Brathwaite (b. 1930),

His war sonnets, published posthumously as
pp. 1803-07

1914 and Other Poems (1915), celebrate patri-

Edward Kamau Brathwaite was born in Bridge-

otism, peace, friendship, love, and the values

town, Barbados, and educated at Harrison Col-

th that galvanized the British public in the early

lege; Pembroke College, Cambridge; and Sussex

days of the conflict—values Brooke had once

University. After working for the Ministry of derided as "Nineteenth Century grandiose

Education in Ghana (Africa) from 1955 until thoughts, about the Destiny of Man, the Irresis-

1962, he returned to his homeland to become a tibility of Fate, the Doom of Nations, the fact professor of social and cultural history at the

that Death awaits us All."

University of the West Indies. Since the 1970s, he has taught at a variety of institutions in the

Gwendolyn Brooks (1917-2000), pp. 1586-

United States, publishing scholarly works on 89

West Indian history and culture and on dialect, Gwendolyn Brooks was born in Topeka, Kansas, and is now professor of comparative literature at and raised in Chicago, Illinois. She published
New York University.

her first poem at age thirteen and was giving poetry readings until just days before her death.

Emily Bronte (1818 - 1848), pp. 1046-50

A graduate of Wilson Junior College, she was Emily Bronte, sister of novelists Charlotte and active in the civil rights movement of the 1960s

Anne, was raised in the parsonage at Haworth, and after, and often wrote on political themes.

on the North Yorkshire moors of England. She

Her first book, Bronzeville (1945), takes its title was educated largely at home, leaving in 1838

from the phrase journalists used for Chicago's to work as a teacher at a girls' school in Halifax.

black ghetto. Brooks ran poetry workshops for

She remained there only six months. In 1842, underprivileged youths and taught at various

she went to Brussels with Charlotte to study lan-institutions, including City College of New York.

guage and music, and on her return began to

She published more than twenty volumes of write feverishly. For her first published work, the poetry and received more than fifty honorary joint collection Poems (1846) by Currier, Ellis doctorates.

and Acton Bell, she assumed a pseudonym to avoid being stereotyped as a "lady poet." The George Mackay Brown (1921-1996),

book was largely ignored, selling only two copies,
pp. 1627-28

and she is best remembered for the novel Wuth- George Mackay Brown was born in Stromness, ering Heights (1847). Many of her poems a small fishing and shipbuilding seaport in the (including "The Prisoner" and "Remembrance") Orkney Islands of Scotland. Apart from the time were originally written (with Anne) as part of the he spent at Newbattle Abbey College and the "Gondal" saga, a series of intricate and elaborate University of Edinburgh, he remained in the tales set in an imaginary kingdom. The meter Orkneys all his life. As sufferer from tuberculosis, and form of Emily Brontë's poems often derive he underwent several periods of extended treat-from the Wesleyan hymns she sang as a child.

ment and convalescence in local sanatoriums
.

Much of her imagery is Gothic, and her concern
He became a Roman Catholic in 1961. Whether with the transience of human life and beauty, as in poetry or in his lyrical short stories and plays,

well as her reliance on a p e r s o n a l i n n e r vision, Brown wrote almost invariably on t h e m e s con-links h e r to t h e R o m a n t i c s . S h e died at nected with his remote northern homeland. His H a w o r t h , of tuberculosis.

work was inspired by Norse saga, Catholic lit-

B I O G R A P H I C A L S K E T C H E S / 2 0 8 1

urgy a n d c e r e m o n y , e l e m e n t a l rituals, ballad, ciously in his father's eclectic library. In 1846, myth, legend, island folklore, a n d local history,

he eloped with t h e p o e t Elizabeth Barrett, a n d r e c o r d e d a n d imagined. In addition to publish-

he lived with h e r in Italy until h e r d e a t h , in

ing thirty-one books of poetry, twelve collections

1861. His early work, w h i c h i n c l u d e d d r a m a a n d of s h o r t stories, a n d five novels, including poetry, was poorly received by the public, b u t Greenvoe (1 9 7 2) , he collaborated with the c o m - b r o u g h t h i m the respect of influential literary poser P e t e r Maxwell Davies on an opera, The figures s u c h as J o h n Forster, T h o m a s Carlyle, Martyrdom of St. Magnus.

C h a r l e s Dickens, a n d Alfred, Lord T e n n y s o n .

W i t h the publication of Dramatis Personae in

S t e r l i n g A. B r o w n (1 9 0 1 - 1 9 8 9) , pp. 1426-

1864, followed by the p o p u l a r The Ring and the

29

Book, w h i c h a p p e a r e d in m o n t h l y i n s t a l l m e n t s Sterling A. Brown was b o r n in W a s h i n g t o n , b e t w e e n N o v e m b e r 1868 a n d F e b r u a r y 1869,

D.C., and educated at Williams College and at Browning's reputation grew prodigious. His collected poems were published in sixteen volumes, he embarked on a long and distinguished career, during which he taught at Virginia Seminary College and Lincoln, Fisk, and London for a funeral in Westminster Abbey and (for nearly fifty years) Howard Universities. buried in its Poets' Corner.

From 1936 until 1939, Brown worked with the Federal Writers' Project of the Works Progress

Administration (WPA). For a time, he edited

Alan Brownjohn (b. 1931), pp. 1829-30

Administration (WPA). For a time, he edited

Alan Brownjohn was born in London and educated at Negro Affairs magazine, and he later worked at

Merton College, Oxford. A school-

Opportunity. In addition to poetry, he published teacher from 1957 to 1965, he was also a several seminal works on African American literature.

Brown cited the regionalists and realists

South Bank Polytechnic before becoming a full-

E. A. Robinson and Robert Frost as important time writer in 1979. The first of his eleven col-influences. Like Jean Toomer, he set his work

lections of poems, The Railings, was published primarily in rural surroundings, and like Lang-in 1961; his most recent, The Cat without E- ston Hughes, to whom Brown is often com-mail, in 2001; and he was the chairman of the pared, he derived many of his forms from the Poetry Society from 1982 to 1988. He has been ballad, the work song, jazz, and the blues.

poetry critic for the New Statesman, Encounter, and, since 1990, the Sunday Times. He has also

Elizabeth Barrett Browning (1806-1861), written three novels, two books for children, and
pp. 947-51

a critical study of Philip Larkin. His Collected

Elizabeth Barrett was raised in Herefordshire, Poems 1952-1983 was reissued in 1988.

England. She received no formal education, but studied the classics at home and was extremely

William Cullen Bryant (1794-1878),
well educated for a woman of her day. Her two-
pp. 902-05

volume Poems (1844) attracted the attention of William Cullen Bryant was born in Cumming-

Robert Browning, and in 1846 they were in, Massachusetts, a descendant of early Puri-secretly married and eloped to Italy. In England, immigrants. He spent a year at Williams

she had lived the life of an invalid, but in Italy

College and, at his father's urging, three years

her strength and spirits revived. She developed reading law at Worthington and Bridgewater

a passion for Italian politics, supporting unifi-Colleges. Bryant's reputation as a poet was cation and writing energetically on behalf of the established in 1817 with the publication of cause. Her poetry was well received, and at the "Thanatopsis" (Greek for "a view of death"), the time of her death, her reputation outstripped her first version of which he wrote at age sixteen. In husband's. She is best known for Sonnets from 1825, he abandoned law for literature. He the Portuguese (1850), a sequence of forty-four served on the editorial board of several journals, Petrarchan sonnets that document her burge-
on - including the New York Review, and in 1829 he ing love for Browning, but she is most admired assumed the editorship of New York's Evening for Aurora Leigh (1857), a nine-book verse Post, a position he held for nearly fifty years. In novel. That work shocked many of its readers,
his later years, he devoted much energy to trans-
who took offense at her criticism of the stultilating the Iliad (1870) and the Odyssey (1871 - fying social forms imposed on women, but 72) into blank verse. He wrote essays and travel deeply impressed contemporary writers, includjournals, and also published his speeches and ing John Ruskin, who called it "the greatest orations.

poem written in English.”

Basil Bunting (1900-1985), pp. 1421-25

Robert Browning (1812-1889), pp. 1009-

Basil Bunting was born in Newcastle, North-41 umberland. He attended the London School of Robert Browning was born in a suburb of Lon-

Economics. After being imprisoned for six

don. He attended London University, but months as a conscientious objector during received most of his education by reading voraciously. World War I, he lived a bohémian existence that

2082 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

took him to France (where he met the poet Ezra

George Gordon, Lord Byron (1788-1824),

Pound), Greece, Italy, Germany, and the Canary pp. 833-63

Islands. He enlisted in the Royal Air Force on

George Gordon, Lord Byron was born near the outbreak of World War II, served in a num-

Aberdeen, Scotland, to dissolute aristocratic ber of posts across the globe, and after the war

parents who had fallen on hard times. Their dif-

was appointed to the British Embassy in Tehran.

difficulties were alleviated when Byron inherited

He returned to Northumberland in 1953 and his title at age ten. Upon graduation from Trinity went to work for a small newspaper. After the College, Cambridge, he embarked on a two-year publication of Briggflatts (1966), the collection to u r of Portugal, Spain, Malta, G r e e c e , a n d Asia

u p o n w h i c h h i s r e p u t a t i o n l a r g e l y r e s t s , h e w a s
M i n o r , d u r i n g w h i c h h e g a t h e r e d m u c h o f t h e m u c h i n d e m a n d o n t h e u n i v e r s i t y c i r c u i t a n d m a t e r i a l f o r h i s m o s t i m p o r t a n t p o e m s . H e t a u g h t a t s e v e r a l i n s t i t u t i o n s i n E n g l a n d a n d t h e
b e c a m e a c e l e b r i t y o v e r n i g h t i n 1812 w i t h t h e U n i t e d S t a t e s . L i k e P o u n d , B u n t i n g e x p l o i t e d p u b l i c a t i o n o f t h e f i r s t t w o c a n t o s o f Childe Har- t h e d e e p c o n n e c t i o n b e t w e e n p o e t r y a n d m u s i c , olde's Pilgrimage, b u t n o t o r i e t y s u p p l a n t e d f a m e a n d h i s m a j o r p o e m s a r e w r i t t e n i n f o r m s h e w h e n h i s a f f a i r w i t h h i s h a l f - s i s t e r , w h o m h e h a d i d e n t i f i e d a s t h e “ o d e ” a n d t h e “ s o n a t a . ” H i s Colme t as an adult, b e c a m e p u b l i c k n o w l e d g e . H i s lected Poems w a s p u b l i s h e d i n 1968, a n d Uncol-
m a r r i a g e c o l l a p s e d , a n d h e w a s f o r c e d t o l e a v e lected Poems a p p e a r e d p o s t h u m o u s l y i n 1991.
E n g l a n d i n 1816. H e f o l l o w e d t h e p o e t P e r c y
B y s s h e S h e l l e y t o G e n e v a a n d I t a l y , t h e n w e n t o n t o G r e e c e , w h e r e h e o r g a n i z e d a c o n t i n g e n t R o b e r t B u r n s (1759 - 1796), pp. 747-60
o f s o l d i e r s t o f i g h t f o r i n d e p e n d e n c e f r o m t h e
R o b e r t B u r n s w a s b o r n i n t o a f a r m i n g f a m i l y i n
T u r k s . A f t e r h e f e l l s i c k i n t h e w o o d s d u r i n g a A y r s h i r e , S c o t l a n d . H e r e c e i v e d a m o d e s t e d u - t r a i n i n g e x e r c i s e a n d d i e d , h e w a s m o u r n e d a s a cation at the "adventure" school established by national hero throughout Greece. His work was his father and his neighbors, but was largely self-widely known in Europe and was immensely taught. He spent a year and a half in Edinburgh influential on the major European writers of his following the publication of his immensely popular first book, Poems, Chiefly in the Scottish literature was the development of the Byronic Dialect (1786), but returned home the following year, a doomed but impassioned wanderer, year when he was awarded a sinecure in the office driven by guilt and alienated from his society. Burns farmed and performed his Excise Office. In Don Juan, his master-official duties until 1791, when he gave up his piece, he uses the narrator to attack institutions and moved to Dumfries. He devoted his last such as the government, the Church, and marriage; criticize vices such as hypocrisy, greed, a project to preserve Scottish culture and the and lust; and subtly extol virtues such as courage, loyalty, and candor. Although many critics in Scots, a form of English spoken by the Scottish considered the poem a wanton celebration of tish peasantry that incorporates many dialect them is adventures of a profligate, Byron called words, and his subject matter was frequently it “the most moral of poems.”

drawn from Scottish folk tales and legends,

Scottish landscapes, and local events. He has

Roy Campbell (1902-1957), pp. 1436-37

been compared to figures such as Robert Hen-

Roy Campbell was born in Natal, South Africa.

ryson, William Dunbar, and Gavin Douglas, After living briefly in England in his early twenties who wrote in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries,

he returned to South Africa and founded ries, the golden age of Scottish literature, and the literary magazine Voorslag (“Whiplash”), sponsored a revival of interest in Scottish culture.

which satirized the values of the Afrikaners.

Among the volumes of poetry he produced during the 1920s and 1930s were The Georgiad, an attack on the Bloomsbury group; Flowering

Witter Bynner (1881-1968), pp. 1269-70

Reeds, a return to his earlier lyricism; and Flow-

Witter Bynner was born in Brooklyn, New York,

ering Rifle, in which he eulogized the Spanish and raised in Norwalk, Connecticut, and Brook-dictator Francisco Franco. In 1935, Campbell

line, Massachusetts. He was educated at Har-became a Roman Catholic, and during World vard University. Until 1906, he worked as an

War II he served in the British army. He died in editor, then quit to devote himself to writing.

a c a r c r a s h in Portugal. In addition to poetry, he Bynner traveled extensively in t h e U n i t e d States
w r o t e two autobiographical works. His translaa n d in C h i n a . In addition to poetry, he p u b l i s h e d tions of S p a n i s h a n d P o r t u g u e s e fiction, a n d several verse d r a m a s a n d n u m e r o u s essays. W i t h particularly of Federico Garcia Lorca's poetry the assistance of Kiang Kang-hu, he u n d e r t o o k a n d C h a r l e s Baudelaire's Les Fleurs du Mai, are t h e t w e n t i e t h century's first significant transla-highly regarded.

tion of C h i n e s e poetry into English. B y n n e r gained f a m e , or infamy, for p e r p e t u a t i n g t h e
Thomas Campion (1567—1620), pp. 278-

“Spectricism” hoax, in w h i c h he a n d A r t h u r
82

Davidson F i n c k e p u b l i s h e d a well-received vol-
T h o m a s C a m p i o n was born in L o n d o n a n d edu-u m e of p o e m s i n t e n d e d as a spoof on Imagism.
c a t e d a t P e t e r h o u s e , C a m b r i d g e , w h i c h he left B I O G R A P H I C A L S K E T C H E S / 2 0 8 3
w i t h o u t taking a degree b u t with a taste for clas-g r o u n d s he was to live for t h e rest of his life. In sical literature, a n d at Gray's Inn, t h o u g h he was 1855, he b e c a m e a lecturer in m a t h e m a t i c s , a n d never called to t h e bar. A f t e r receiving an M . D .
t h e r e a f t e r he p u b l i s h e d several books on t h e from the University of Caen in 1605, he was subject, including a defense of Euclid. He was practicing medicine in London by 1606. He an inventor and a skilled photographer; considered himself to be first and foremost a although he became a clergyman in 1861, his classicist and a composer, however, his chief habitual shyness caused a bad stammer that aim being to “couple my words and notes loved kept him from preaching often. In addition to ingly together.” He fulfilled this ambition in a poems, puns, pastiche, conundrums, problems number of lyrics in four Books of Airs for lute of logic, and some adventurous linguistics, he and voice, and in his composition of court wrote children’s books (under the pseudonym masques including The Lord Hay’s Masque, performed Lewis Carroll, a Latinized form of Lutwidge formed in 1607, and the Somerset Masque and Charles). Alice’s Adventures under Ground the Lord’s Masque, both performed in 1613. Five (1865), now usually known as Alice’s Adventures poems by Crompton were published, anonymously in Wonderland, like its sequel, Through the mously, in 1591, and his Poemata, consisting of Looking-glass and What Alice Found There Latin panegyrics, elegies, and epigrams, (1871), began tales told during boating trips appeared in 1595. In his treatise Observations in on the river Thames to the three daughters (one the Art of English Poesy (1602), he advocated the of whom was Alice) of Henry Liddell, dean of classical or “quantitative” system of meter, Christ Church. The stories were an instant and prompting Samuel Daniel’s Defense of Rhyme enduring success, perhaps because of the (1602). Though Champion dismissed his own absence of the “improving” matter found in most early, mainly rhymed, verse as “superfluous blossoms of my deeper studies,” his unrhymed, experimental poems have a musical quality no Anne Carson (b. 1950), pp. 1969-71 less impressive than that of his rhyming poems.

Anne Carson was born and raised in Toronto, Canada. She did both her undergraduate and Thomas Carew (ca. 1595 - 1640), pp. 385 - graduate work at the University of Toronto. Her 90

Ph.D. is in classical studies, and she has a dis-

Thomas Carew (pronounced Carey) was born in distinguished reputation not only as a poet but also West Wickham, Kent, England. Son of Sir Mat- as a classical scholar, translator, and essayist. thew Carew, who worked in the court of law Her poetry collections also tend to transgress known as the Chancery, Carew was educated at

Ph.D. is in classical studies, and she has a dis-

Thomas Carew (pronounced Carey) was born in distinguished reputation not only as a poet but also West Wickham, Kent, England. Son of Sir Mat- as a classical scholar, translator, and essayist.

thew Carew, who worked in the court of law

Her poetry collections also tend to transgress known as the Chancery, Carew was educated at the boundaries of genre, as can be seen in titles Merton College, Oxford, and the law school of such as The Beauty of the Husband: A Fictional the Middle Temple. He was secretary to Sir Essay in 29 Tangos. She is a professor of classics Dudley Carleton, the ambassador to Venice and at McGill University, in Montreal.

later to The Hague, from 1613 to 1616, when he returned to England. He was next employed Charles Causley (1917-2003), pp. 1590-92
by Sir Edward Herbert, the ambassador to Charles Causley was born in Launceston, Cornwall, during which time he established his wall, and lived there all his life. His father, a reputation as a poet and found favor with King private soldier, returned from France after Charles I, whom he made him a gentleman of the World War I a hopeless invalid, and died seven privy chamber in 1628. Carew is the earliest of years later from the residual effects of nerve gas.

those authors who, like his friends Sir John Causley was educated at a local grammar Suckling and Richard Lovelace, are today school, then worked in a builder's office and known as "Cavalier" poets. They were Royalist

later for a small electrical supply company. His in politics, looked to the classical poets (through service in the Royal Navy from 1940 until 1946 Ben Jonson) for their models, and composed proved decisive to his literary career, drawing graceful, witty, elegantly crafted verse. Carew him from prose to poetry and providing him with saw his own work as “a mine of rich and pregnant subject. After the war, he became a teacher, and brought lucidity, directness, and his first book of poetry, Hands to Dance, was frank sexuality, and urban cynicism to a matter published in 1951. After retiring in 1965 to verse, but also wrote on other themes, most become a full-time writer, he accepted offers to notably in his “An Elegy upon the Death of the teacher in various colleges and universities in Australia, Canada, and the United States. He also masque, Coelum Britannicum, was performed published plays, short stories, and children’s before Charles I in 1634, and a collection, verse, and edited numerous collections of Poems, was published in 1640.

poetry. He won the Queen’s Gold Medal for Poetry and was made CBE in 1986.

Lewis Carroll (Charles Lutwidge Dodgson) (1832-1898), pp. 135-39

Margaret Cavendish (1623-1673), pp. 499-

Charles Lutwidge Dodgson was born in Dares-

500 bury, Cheshire, England, and educated at Rugby

M a r g a r e t C a v e n d i s h w a s b o r n i n E n g l a n d t o a n a n d a t C h r i s t C h u r c h , O x f o r d , o n w h o s e a r i s t o c r a t i c f a m i l y a n d b e c a m e a m a i d o f h o n o r 2 0 8 4 / B I O G R
A P H I C A L S K E T C H E S

to Q u e e n H e n r i e t t a M a r i a . A t t w e n t y - t w o , s h e i n b o t h t e c h n i q u e a n d l a n g u a g e ; a g r e a t n u m b e r

m a r r i e d t h e R o y a l i s t W i l l i a m C a v e n d i s h , t h e n o f w o r d s a n d p h r a s e s , m a n y o f F r e n c h o r i g i n , m a r q u i s o f N e w c a s t l e , l a t e r f i r s t d u k e . S h e m e t a p p e a r f o r t h e f i r s t t i m e i n h i s w r i t i n g s . H i s C a n - h i m i n P a r i s , w h e r e t h e y b o t h l i v e d i n e x i l e d u r - t e r b u r y T a l e s , b e g u n i n 1 3 8 6 , i s a n u n f i n i s h e d i n g t h e C o m m o n w e a l t h . I n 1 6 5 1 , h a v i n g g r o u p o f t a l e s t o l d b y m e m b e r s o f a c o m p a n y o f r e t u r n e d t o E n g l a n d t o t r y t o r e c o v e r p a r t o f h e r

p i l g r i m s . T h e t a l e s d r a w o n C h a u c e r ' s k n o w l -

h u s b a n d ' s e s t a t e , s h e w r o t e F a n c i e s (1 6 5 3) a n d e d g e o f m a n y d i f f e r e n t s o c i a l r o l e s a n d e v e n t s .

Philosophical Fancies (1 6 5 3 ; r e v i s e d a s p a r t o f H e l i v e d
t h r o u g h s e v e r a l p l a g u e s a n d t h e P e a s - P h i l o s o p h i c a l a n d
P h y s i c a l O p i n i o n s , 1 6 5 5) . H e r a n t ' s R e v o l t o f 1 3 8 1 ; h e s e r v e d a s c o n t r o l l e r o f w i d e - r a n g i n g i n t e l l e c t u a l i n t e r e s t s , a m o n g
t h e m

t h e e x p o r t t a x o n w o o l , s h e e p s k i n s , a n d l e a t h e r

c h e m i s t r y a n d n a t u r a l p h i l o s o p h y , i n f o r m t h e s e

f o r t h e p o r t o f L o n d o n ; h e w a s j u s t i c e o f t h e a n d s u b s e q u e n t w r i t i n g s i n a v a r i e t y o f g e n r e s , p e a c e a n d a m e m b e r o f P a r l i a m e n t f o r t h e

i n c l u d i n g t h e d e l i b e r a t e l y h y b r i d Worlds of Olio

c o u n t y o f K e n t ; a n d h e w a s a l s o a d e p u t y f o r -

o f 1 6 5 5 (t h e t e r m Olio r e f e r s t o a P o r t u g u e s e ester. Although he never completed his plan of stew with many ingredients). She explores the writing one hundred and ten Canterbury Tales question of women's "secondary" status from (two for each pilgrim to tell on the way to Can-many and sometimes contradictory perspectives terbury, two for the way back), the twenty-two in volumes of plays (1662 and 1668), in Natures

tales and two fragments that he did complete Pictures (with autobiography; 1656), in her contain, as Joh n Dryden said, "God's plenty."
Sociable Letters (1664), and in her Utopian narrative, The New Blazing World (1668). She vis-Nicholas Christopher (b. 1951), pp. 1973-ited the Royal Society, a newly instituted 75 scientific institution, in 1667 and was viewed as Nicholas Christopher was born and raised in an "eccentric" both in her own time and later.
New York City and has lived there most of his life. He was educated at Harvard University, Geoffrey Chaucer (ca. 1343-1400), where he studied with the poets Robert Lowell
pp. 19-70
and Anthony Hecht, and has taught at New York Geoffrey Chaucer was born into a middle-class and Columbia Universities. A prolific writer, he merchant family and at about age fifteen has published poetry and novels—as well as an became a page to the countess of Ulster. While amalgam of the two in his “novella in verse,” serving her husband, Lionel (the second son of Desperate Characters (1989)—and he has edited King Edward III), during the Hundred Years several collections of contemporary American War, Chaucer was captured at the siege of poetry. He is also the author of a prose work on Reims and eventually ransomed.

In 1365, he film noir.

married Philippa Roet, sister-in-law of the powerful peer John of Gaunt, who was the uncle and

Amy Clampitt (1920-1994), pp. 1609-15

advisor of King Richard II. In 1367, Chaucer Amy Clampitt was born and raised in New Prov—was granted an annuity in the royal household

idence, Iowa. She was educated at Grinnell Coland soon began traveling on diplomatic mislege and, briefly, at Columbia University. After sions: to Spain (1366), to France (1368), and to working as an editor at Oxford University Press

Italy (1372 and 1378). During his travels, he and E. P. Dutton and as a reference librarian at encountered works by French and Italian the National Audubon Society, she became a authors such as Jean Froissart, Guillaume freelance writer in 1982. Clampitt published her Machaut, Dante, Petrarch, and Boccaccio. first collection of poetry at age sixty-three; The
These authors influenced Chaucer in a variety

Kingfisher established her immediately as one of

of ways; his first important original work, The

the nation’s most acclaimed poets. Like John

Book of the Duchess, shows the influence of Keats, about whom she wrote a series of poems, French courtly poetry; and his later House of

she reveled in the sensuousness of the natural Fame parodies Dante's Divine Comedy by world and of language. A New Yorker most of depicting a poet's journey—in the talons of an her life, she died in Lenox, Massachusetts.
eagle—to the celestial palace of the goddess of Fame. And his Troilus and Criseide (1385) was John Clare
(1793-1864), pp. 983-96
deeply indebted to Boccaccio's Filostrato. Chau-John Clare was born in the small rural village of cer's work also shows the influence of two texts Helpstone, in Northamptonshire, England.
that he translated into English from French and After leaving school at age twelve, he worked on Latin, respectively: a thirteenth-century drama
the land, as gardener, hedge-settler, lime-vision entitled The Romance of the Rose and a burner, and field hand, and published his first fourth-century philosophical dialogue by Boe-collection, Poems Descriptive of Rural Life
and thus, The Consolation of Philosophy. At a time Scenery, in 1820. The book was a success, but when many of his contemporaries were writing as literary tastes changed, and the vogue for in French and Latin, Chaucer's use of English “ploughman poets” declined, subsequent vol-helped to establish the vernacular as a viable umes were not. Clare had a strong sense of place medium for serious poetry. He was an innovator and was deeply attached to his native country-

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2085

side. A move to a village four miles distant from but fell into a dissolute lifestyle. He fled to London and served in the 15th Light Dragoons until for chronic mental insecurity and, along with his his brothers secured his release some months parting from his first love, Mary Joyce, provided later. In 1794, he met Robert Southey, then an the theme of loss so prevalent in his writing. undergraduate at Balliol College, Oxford.

After manifesting signs of mental illness for Together they conceived the Utopian philosophy many years, he was sent to an asylum in 1837 of Pantisocracy and planned to start a commune and, having been declared insane, transferred to in New England. This never came to fruition, Northampton General Lunatic Asylum, where but Coleridge and Southey continued to lecture he remained until his death. Written in his own in Bristol on political issues. Coleridge married combination of dialect and idiosyncratic grammar Sara Fricker in 1794. The following year, he met mar, his descriptions of rural landscape and elements William Wordsworth and Wordsworth's sister, gies for a dying pastoral England are highly Dorothy, in Somerset. It was one of the most evocative. Clare's poetry remained in semi-creative periods of his life, inspiring the com- obscurity until the mid-twentieth century, when position of poems such as "Kubla Khan," "The his evident authenticity of feeling and complex Rime of the Ancient Mariner,” and “Christabel.” sensitivity were made available through new edi-

With Wordsworth, he published Lyrical Ballads
tions of his poems, autobiographical prose, and (1798), one of the most revolutionary collec-letters. A memorial to him in the Poets’ Corner tions of poetry in the history of English literaof Westminster Abbey was dedicated in 1989.
ture. From age thirty, Coleridge largely gave up poetry for philosophy and criticism. He is cred-Arthur Hugh Clough (1819-1861),
ited with introducing the works of the philosophers Immanuel Kant, Friedrich von Schlegel,
pp. 1051-53

Arthur Hugh Clough (rhymes with and Friedrich von Schelling to England. At the rough) was born in Liverpool, England, to a cotton mer-height of his powers, he became addicted to chant and the daughter of a banker. His family opium, which had been prescribed to relieve moved to South Carolina in 1822, but Clough physical pains that Wordsworth said were so returned to England in 1828 to attend first unbearable they drove Coleridge to “throw him-Rugby School, then Balliol College, Oxford. In self down and writhe like a worm upon the 1842, he earned a fellowship at Oriel College, ground.” He had also fallen in love with Sara Oxford, where he became friends with the poet Hutchinson, Wordsworth’s future sister-in-law, Matthew Arnold. Like Arnold, he struggled with but although his relationship with Sara Fricker his religious beliefs, and in 1848 he resigned was deteriorating, he would not end the marriage from his fellowship because he would not take marriage. His despair was later channeled into clerical orders without sincerely believing the “Dejection; An Ode,” published in 1802. He doctrines of the Church of England. That same spent his last years in the care of a London year, he published his first work, clergyman, writing and attempting to be reconciled with estranged family and friends alienated Toher-na-Vuolich, a verse novel about the romance between a student and a Scottish peasant by his addiction, depression, and extreme behavior. After traveling to Rome and writing more poetry, including Amours de Voyage, he took an administrative position at the University of London; in 1851, however, uncertainties about his lished in 1814, and editions of his Collected religious faith again led him to resign. During Poems, which appeared in 1817, 1828, and the next year, Clough returned to America with 1834. In an age dominated by skepticism and the thought of emigrating; he settled in Boston, empiricism, Coleridge held fast to his belief in where he tutored, wrote for magazines, and the powers of the imagination, which he saw as established a lasting friendship with Ralph capable of leading humanity to Truth—through Waldo Emerson. He returned to England in appeals not to reason but to the senses. In 1853, took an appointment in the Education Office, and married a cousin of Florence Nightingale. He died in Florence, Italy, while touring the Continent in the hope of improving his health, and Matthew Arnold wrote “Thyrsis” in poetic and may have been the progenitor of memory of his friend. Most of Clough’s work many twentieth-century experiments in free verse was published posthumously.

verse.

Samuel Taylor Coleridge (1772-1834),
Billy Collins (b. 1941), pp. 1917-18

pp. 805-31

Billy Collins was born in New York City. He

Samuel Taylor Coleridge was born in Ottery St.

attended parochial schools, graduated from

Mary, a rural village in Devon. He was educated

Holy Cross College, and earned his Ph.D. in at Christ's Hospital School, London, and Jesus
Romantic poetry from the University of Califor-College, Cambridge, where he studied Classics, nia at Riverside. Although he published his first
2086 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES book, Pokerface, in 1977, it was not until the
in a novel, Part of His Story, but also in nearly 1990s that he became one of the most popular book-length poems such as Notes from a Child poets and poetry readers in American literary of Paradise. The author of a much-used prosody history, prized for his accessibility and humor. A manual, The Poem's Heartbeat, Cornell shows an professor at Lehman College, City University of attention to formal concerns in his many vol-
New York, since the 1970s, he was the poet lau-umes of verse. Having taught at Columbia, Yale, reate of the United States in 2001—02. He lives and elsewhere, he now lives in Lenox, Mass - in Somers, New York.

chusetts.

William Collins (1721-1759), pp. 673-77

Gregory Corso (1930-2001), pp. 1807-10

William Collins was born in Chichester, Gregory Corso was born in New York City to England, where his father was twice mayor.

Italian immigrants. During his childhood, his Educated at Winchester School and Magdalen

mother died and his father returned for a time to College, Oxford, he published Persian Eclogues to Italy. Corso lived in an orphanage and, even as an undergraduate. Allegedly "too indolently, four foster homes; when he was twelve, even for the army," he went to London to earn his father returned, remarried, and took custody a living from writing. His finances were always of him. He first went to prison for stealing an insecure, and ruin was averted only by the action radio from a boys' home. During a later prison of friends such as Samuel Johnson. His Odes on sentence, he discovered literature through Several Descriptive and Allegoric Subjects books given to him by an elderly inmate. When (1747) was not esteemed at the time of publication in 1950 he left prison, he met Allen Ginsberg, cation, but a small inheritance enabled Collins who further guided his reading and education as to return to Chichester, where he could study a poet. In 1954, he spent time in Cambridge, and write. In 1750, he gave the Scottish play-Massachusetts, at the invitation of Harvard and wright John Home an unfinished draft of "Ode Radcliffe students, who gathered the money to on the Superstitions of the Highlands," in which publish his first book, The Vestal Lady on Brattle (as the poet Robert Lowell put it) "the whole (1955). His travels with Ginsberg to San Fran-teacher, the arts and reviews editor of the Inner as secretary of the queen. He was imprisoned London Education Authority's Contact magazine when he returned to England ten years later, zine, and television columnist for the Spectator. because he was working as a spy and partly She began writing while undergoing psycho- because he had published the satire The Puritan analysis for severe depression following her and the Papist (1643). A political epic, The Civil father's death. In addition to her verse for adults War, was not published until 1679, but the children, she has edited a collection of ebrated the king's return to power with an "Ode, poetry by women. Cope's acerbic, witty, epi- Upon the Blessed Restoration" (1660). In his grammatic poems invite comparison with the "Pindaric Odes," included in Poems (1656), work of Dorothy Parker and Stevie Smith. Like he introduced the irregular ode form that would them, she has serious aims and proves, as she influence John Dryden, among others. says, "a humorous poem can also be ... deeply felt and saying something that matters."

William Cowper (1731-1800), pp. 695-705

Alfred Corn (b. 1943), pp. 1929-30

William Cowper (pronounced Cooper) was born

Alfred Corn was born and brought up in Great Berkhamstead, Hertfordshire, England, via. He was educated at Emory and Columbia and was educated at a private school and West-Universities; his graduate studies were in minster; his experience of bullying at the former French literature. A reviewer, an essayist, and lead to the attack on private schools in his "Tir-

an art critic, he has also edited an anthology of ocinium" (1785). He studied law at the Inner writings on the Christian Scriptures. His nar-

Temple and was called up to the bar, but never rative impulse has demonstrated itself not only practiced. From his early years, he suffered from

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2087

depression, which was accelerated into mental feature historical figures, including Pocahontas instability both by his father's forbidding his and Rip Van Winkle; and celebrate natural as marriage to his cousin,

Theodora, and by an well as technological wonders, including the uncle's attempt to get him a sinecure in the Brooklyn Bridge.

House of Lords, the prospect of examination for which brought on a suicide attempt. Treated at

Stephen Crane (1871-1900), pp. 1220-22

St. Albans asylum, Cowper turned to the con-

Stephen Crane was born in Newark, New Jersey, solutions of evangelical Christianity, and on his

and was raised in upstate New York. He release became “a sort of adopted son” in the household of the Reverend Morley Unwin. After attending Lafayette College and Syracuse University before moving to New York City, where Unwin’s death, Cowper, Mary Unwin, and her children set up house together in Olney, Buckinghamshire. His first novel, a naturalistic account of urban poverty called Maggie: A Girl of the Streets (1893), was poorly received, but his next book, The Red Badge of Courage (1894-95), earned him international fame. Although Crane had never fully recovered his physical and mental health. After which he written this Civil War narrative without seeing combat, he received commissions to report on conflicts across the globe, including the Cuban Insurrection, the Turkish War, and the Spanish-American War. He died in Germany, where he had gone in search of a cure for his tuberculosis.

George Crabbe (1754 - 1832), pp. 723-31

George Crabbe was born into poverty in Aldeburgh, Suffolk, England. Although he attended grammar schools between ages ten and fourteen. Although he became famous for his prose, teen, he was educated largely at home by his father. He was parish doctor of Aldeburgh and considered pioneering examples of free verse. The before leaving for London and a literary career poet John Berryman, his biographer, revived in 1780. With the help of his friend and admirer Edmund Burke, he published The Library (1781), was introduced to contemporary literary circles, and was encouraged to join the clergy to Richard Crashaw's mother and stepmother both relieve his financial distress. In 1781, he became curate of Aldeburgh, and from 1782 until 1785 most of his life rebelling against the austere religion of his father, a Puritan preacher. Crashaw Samuel Johnson helped him revise The Village was educated at Charterhouse and Pembroke (1783), a grimly realist portrait of rural poverty.

Hall, Cambridge, where he was influenced by After a period when he published little, in 1807 the Anglican Nicholas Ferrar, founder of the he produced a collection of earlier and new religious community at Little Gidding. After his works including "The Parish Register," which ing his fellowship at Peterhouse with the Royal established him as a narrative poet. He pub-alists' defeat, Crashaw spent two years in exile, lished several more collections during his life- converting to Catholicism in 1645 and fleeing time and left a quantity of unpublished work on to Paris, where another friend, the writer Abra- his death. Known for his use of the heroic cou- ham Cowley, persuaded Q u e e n Henrietta Maria plet characteristic of the departing Augustan to get Crashaw a position as an attendant to an Age, he was, according to Lord Byron, "Nature's Italian cardinal and, subsequently, as a sub- sternest painter yet the best."

canon at the Cathedral of Loretto. In 1634,

Crashaw published a book of Latin poems, Epi- Hart Crane (1899-1932), pp. 1410-16

grammatum Sacrorum Liber. His Steps to the

Hart (Harold) Crane was born in Garrettsville,

Temple, Sacred Poems with Other Delights of the Ohio, and raised in Cleveland. He left high Muses (1646, revised and enlarged 1648) con-school in 1916 and moved to New York. From tains both religious and secular poems and indi-

1918 to 1923, he shuttled between New York cates its debt to George Herbert in its title. A and Cleveland and worked for advertising agen-

passionate admirer of the Spanish mystic Saint

cies (where he wrote copy), a munitions plant,

Teresa, Crashaw sought to represent the expe-

a local newspaper, and his father's candy com-rience of religious ecstasy in words and, perpany. In 1923, Crane settled in New York, but haps, in visual media. The manuscript as well as in 1931 he sailed to Mexico, where he planned

the printed volumes of his poetry contain elab-
to write an epic about the Spanish Conquest.
orate titles in different-sized letters; and the
On a return trip to the United States, he com-blematic engravings in his final (postmitted suicide by leaping into shark-infested humously published) volume, the Carmen Deo waters. Crane's long poem, The Bridge, which Nostrum (1652), may be by his own hand.

brought him fame, is his "mythical synthesis of America," following in the tradition of Walt
Robert Creeley (b. 1926), pp. 1705-08
Whitman. Its fifteen sections of varying length Robert Creeley was born in Arlington, Massamove westward, from New York to California;
chusetts, and educated at Harvard University.

2088 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

From 1944 to 1945, he interrupted his studies and Auckland and beginning studies for the to drive an ambulance for the American Field ministry (which he later abandoned) at St.

Service in the India-Burma theater, then later John's College.
He taught English at Auckland left Harvard during his last semester to take up

University from 1950 until 1976. In addition to subsistence farming. He traveled to France and serious poetry, Curnow published satirical verse

Mallorca, Spain (where he established the under the pseudonym Whim-Wham, as well as Divers Press), and returned to the United States plays and literary criticism. He edited two landmark anthologies, A Book of New Zealand Verse in 1956. As a member of the faculty at the experimental Black Mountain College, Creeley and The Penguin Book of New Zealand Verse. In 1966, he founded its Review. In 1966, he began teaching the 1930s, Curnow was involved with poets at the State University of New York at Buffalo. associated with the left-wing magazine Phoenix, Deeply influenced by Charles Olson, William and his early work reflects their shared belief in Carlos Williams, and the Beats, all of whom the importance of establishing a national literature for New Zealand. These poems characterized directly from feeling, he writes a spare and compositionally make detailed observation of the natural world. In 1972, after a fifteen-year silence, he pressed verse.

world. In 1972, after a fifteen-year silence, he began writing in a new mode, exploring the relationship between self and place, the mystery of Countee Cullen (1903-1946), pp. 1443-46 Countee Cullen was born in Louisville, Kentucky, nature, and death.

At age fifteen, he was adopted by an Episcopal minister from New York City. Educated at

S a m u e l Daniel (1 5 6 3 - 1 6 1 9) , pp. 230-35

New York University and Harvard University, he Samuel Daniel was born near Taunton, worked as an assistant editor at Opportunity England;

educated at Magdalen Hall, Oxford; magazine, a prominent periodical of the Harlem

and traveled widely throughout Europe, learning Renaissance, from 1926 until 1928, when a felseveral languages. He enjoyed the patronage of lowship enabled him to spend a year in Paris.

Mary Sidney, countess of Pembroke, to whose

From 1934 onward, he taught English and son he was tutor;
and his neoclassical tragedy French in New York City public schools. In Cleopatra (1594, revised 1607), was influenced addition to writing five collections of poetry,

by Mary Sidney's translation of a French play

Cullen translated Euripides, published a novel about Cleopatra and Antony (Antonie, 1592).

about life in Harlem, edited an influential Daniel wrote works in a variety of genres, from anthology of African American poetry, and wrote

a history of the War of the Roses to tragic and two children's books. Wanting to be known fore-pastoral dramas, to court masques. His Defense most "as a poet and not as a Negro poet," he of Rhyme (1602?), a response to Thoma s Cam-employed traditional forms while often exploring pion's treatise alleging the superiority of classithemes of African American life.

cal prosody, occupies an important place in the debate on the status of the vernacular as a literary language. In 1592, Daniel published his sonnet cycle to “Delia”; a romance, The Complaint of Rosamond, appeared in the same volume. Another collection, Certain Small Poems University. In the early 1920s, he lived in both (1605), caused Daniel to lose the favor of King New York City (where he was affiliated with the Dial magazine group, which included the poet protagonist, Philotas, was identified with Queen Marianne Moore) and Paris (where he met the Elizabeth I’s rebellious courtier, the earl of poets Ezra Pound, Hart Crane, and Archibald Essex. Daniel was nonetheless patronized by MacLeish). In his later years, he lived primarily James’s queen, Anne, and he continued to write in New York. At the time of his death, he was masques for the court, including Tethys’ Festival one of the best-known and best-loved American (1610) and Hymen’s Triumph (1615). Ben Jon-poets. Like his paintings, Cummings’s poems son, with whom Daniel was “at jealousies,” critreflect the influence of the Impressionist and icized his poetry, but others, including Samuel Cubist movements in the visual arts and Ima-Taylor Coleridge, have praised his poetic language. guage.

Through his radical experiments with syntax, typography, and line, he defamiliarized common Donald Davie (1 9 2 2 - 1 9 9 5) , pp. 1641-44
subjects, often with humor, whether light-Donald Davie was born in Barnsley, Yorkshire, hearted or satirical.

England, to Baptist parents, and brought up in “the industrially ravaged landscape” of the West
Allen Curnow (1 9 1 1 - 2 0 0 1) , pp. 1528-30
Riding. He was educated at Barnsley Hogate
Allen Curnow was born in Timaru, New Zea-Grammar School and at St. Catherine’s College, land, the son of an Anglican clergyman and Cambridge, where he was greatly influenced by author of light verse. He worked as a journalist the critic F. R. Leavis. His studies were inter-before attending the Universities of Canterbury rupted by service in the Royal Navy, but he then
B I O G R A P H I C A L S K E T C H E S / 2 0 8 9
returned to Cambridge and took his B.A., M.A., Carolina, then left to join the air force. After and Ph.D. He taught at Trinity College, Dublin; serving as a fighter-bomber pilot during World

the University of California at Santa Barbara; War II, he attended Vanderbilt University, and Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge. He where he began writing poetry. He received B.A.

joined the newly founded University of Essex,

and M.A. degrees from Vanderbilt and did fur-serving on its faculty from 1964 until 1968, then graduate work there and at Rice University, when he moved to Stanford University. In 1978,

in Texas. Following another two years in the air

he moved to Vanderbilt University, from which force (this time as a training officer during the

he retired in 1988 to live in Devon. Davie's first Korean War), he spent six years as a writer of collection of poetry, Brides of Reason, appeared advertising copy, then later taught at a number in 1955, to be followed by many others, includ-of universities. In 1960, he published his first ing his Collected Poems in 1990. He also pub-book of poetry, and from 1966 to 1968 he served lished a number of influential studies of English

as poetry consultant to the Library of Congress.

poetry, diction, and syntax, as well as criticism

In addition to poetry, he published fiction,

of the work of Hardy, Pound, and Pasternak; including the best-selling novel Deliverance translations of the work of Polish, Hungarian,

(1970)—which he adapted into a Hollywood and Russian writers; and a study of English hym-film—and nonfiction, including reviews and nology. His editorial work included several col-autobiographical works.

lections of poetry, including the New Oxford Book of Christian Verse (1981). Davie's Purity of Emily Dickinson (1830-1886), pp. 1110-Diction in English Verse (1952) was virtually a 27 manifesto for The Movement, a group of writers

Emily Dickinson was born in Amherst, Massa-

who eschewed the symbolism and syntactical chusetts, to a prominent family. For one year, disjunctions of Imagism and Symbolism in favor

she attended Mount Holyoke Female Seminary

of paraphrasable logic, plain diction, straight-

(now College), in nearby South Hadley, then forward syntax, and traditional forms.

withdrew and returned to Amherst. Dickinson lived at her family home in Amherst from 1848

Peter Davison (b. 1928), pp. 1751-52

on, rarely received visitors, and in her mature

Peter Davison was born in New York City and years never went out. Suffering from agorapho-raised in Colorado. He was educated at Harvard bia (the fear of public places) and perhaps from University and St. John's College, Cambridge, an eye disorder, she became known as "the

and spent two years in the United States Army.

Myth" and "the character of Amherst." Fewer

Davison has had a distinguished editorial career

than a dozen of her poems were published in her

at Harcourt, Brace; Harvard University Press; lifetime. Such a solitary life hardly dulled her Atlantic Monthly Press; and Houghton Mifflin.

sensibilities, however, for Dickinson's works

As the poetry editor of The Atlantic Monthly include nearly two thousand poems, plus volu-since 1972, he has notably influenced poets and minous correspondence. The poems reveal her poetry readers. His work shows an affinity with intimate knowledge of the Bible, classical myth, that of his father, the English poet Edward Dav-and the works of Shakespeare; in addition, she ison, and family friend and mentor Robert Frost.

admired the work of Transcendentalists Tho-
He lives in Boston and in Gloucester, Massa-reau and Emerson. In an era marked by its evanchusetts.

gical fervor, Dickinson adopted skepticism, irony, ambiguity, paradox, and sardonic wit. She Walter de la Mare (1873-1956), pp. 1225-often wrote in the meters of hymns and made 27 masterful use of the ballad stanza and of slant Walter de la Mare was born in Charlton, Kent, rhyme. Although her innovations initially baf-England. In 1890, he took a job as a bookkeeper fled critics, the public's fascination with her life

at the London offices of the Standard Oil Com-soon extended to her verse. She is, along with pany, a position he held for eighteen years, until Walt Whitman, the most revered and influential a government pension enabled him to devote of nineteenth-century American poets.

himself full-time to writing. In 1902, he published his first collection of poetry, Songs of Childhood, under the pseudonym Walter Ramal.

J o h n D o n n e (1 5 7 2 - 1 6 3 1) , pp. 2 9 3 - 3 2 2

Over the next forty-five years, he published volu-

John Donne was born in London, his father an minously, producing novels, short stories, and ironmonger and his mother, a devout Catholic, poetry, as well as editing several influential the daughter of the dramatist John Heywood as anthologies of literature, including Come Hither

well as a descendent of Sir Thomas More.

(1923) and Behold the Dreamer (1939). He was Donne studied at Oxford without taking a made a Companion of Honour in 1948 and degree, because to do so would have required awarded the Order of Merit in 1953.

him to swear an oath affirming that the English
monarch was head of the Church. After travel

James Dickey (1923-1997), pp. 1661-64

in Europe, he entered the legal institution of

James Dickey was born in Atlanta, Georgia. In

Lincoln's Inn in 1592. In 1595, Donne partici-

1942, he attended Clemson College, in South

pated in a naval expedition against Spain, and in

2 0 9 0 / B I O G R A P H I C A L S K E T C H E S

1596 he joined an expedition to the Azores. On his return, he became private secretary to Sir Thomas Egerton, lord keeper of the Great Seal, usually on the theme of courtly love. After payment of a huge ransom, he was dismissed when his secret marriage to Lady Egerton's seventeen-year-old niece, Ann More, was discovered. The marriage effectively blocked Donne's career as a courtier; and after many years of seeking offices and patrons, he took orders in the Church of England in 1615—

Keith Douglas (1920-1944), pp. 1620-23

Keith Douglas was born in Tunbridge Wells, Kent, England, and brought up near Cranleigh. King James I had been urging him to do since 1607. Two years later, his wife died. He became dean of St. Paul's Cathedral in 1621, and his childhood was difficult, as his father became a drifter and his mother was stricken with sermons were very well attended. His private "sleepy sickness." At Merton College, Oxford, devotions (in prose) were published in 1624, but his tutor was Edmund Blunden, the soldier-poet very few of the poems he had been writing since of World War I. In 1940, Douglas enlisted, and the 1590s were printed during his lifetime; a year later he was posted to Egypt; though instead, they circulated widely in manuscript, ordered to remain in reserve, he commandeered creating many textual variants and many quesa truck and joined his regiment at the front. He tions about dating for future editors and readers.

was badly injured when he stepped on a land

His poems were divided into nine generic groups

mine, but after convalescence in Palestine was in the second edition of his poetry (1635), sent to the European front, and was killed dur-including the Elegies, modeled on Ovid's erotic

ing the invasion of Normandy. Before his death, verse; the Songs and Sonnets, containing a vari-

Douglas had prepared a collection for publica-ety of secular love poems; and the Holy Sonnets.

tion, but it did not reach print until 1966. He also wrote a memoir, Alamein to Tjern Z em, based

H. D. (Hilda Doolittle) (1886-1961),

on his experiences in the Middle East. In this,

pp. 1311—16

as in his poems, he presents himself in dual

Hilda Doolittle was born in Bethlehem, Penn-roles: victim and killer, satirist and eulogist, dissylvania. In 1901, she met the poet Ezra Pound, interested spectator and committed participant.

who encouraged her writing. Doolittle attended

His Collected Poems appeared, posthumously, in

Bryn Mawr College, then moved to Greenwich

1951, and an edition of his letters was published

Village, where she established her reputation as in 2001.

a writer. She traveled to London in 1911, intending to visit Pound, but stayed in Europe for the rest of her life. In 1912, Pound submitted Rita Dove (b. 1952), pp. 1985-90

three of Doolittle's poems to Harriet Monroe,

Rita Dove was born in Akron, Ohio. She was editor of Poetry magazine, signing them "H. D.

educated at Miami University (Ohio), the University of Tubingen (Germany), and the University of Iowa, and has taught at Arizona State fairly early, her reputation has remained closely

University and the University of Virginia. Dove tied to that short-lived but momentous movement. In 1933, H. D. entered psychoanalysis in Berlin and Jerusalem. In 1993, she became poet laureate of the United States. In addition to poetry, she has written fiction and drama. Her own experience against the great storehouses of literature, myth, history, religion, and the own mixed European and African American her-occult, and her Trilogy included three long itage has been a source of inspiration, as have poems concerning World War II, most notably mythology and history.

The Walls Do Not Fall (1944). In addition to poetry, she published numerous volumes of Ernest Dowson (1876-1900), pp. 1211-12

prose, worked as a translator, and wrote verse

Ernest Dowson was born in Kent, England. He wrote dramas.

He went to The Queen's College, Oxford, but left without obtaining a degree. He studied Latin

Charles d'Orleans (1391-1465), pp. 77-78

poetry, and through extended stays on the Continental became familiar with French literature.

Charles VI of France), married his cousin Isa-bella (widow of Richard II of England) in 1406.

Arthur Symonds, William Butler Yeats, and others, Dowson formed the Rhymers' Club, an informal writers' group based in London, and their defeat by the English army under Henry V.

He spent the next twenty-five years in prison,

well as to The Yellow Book and the Savoy. In 1891, he met Adelaide Foltinowicz, "Missie," for English as well as French. He produced chan-whom he harbored a lifelong but unrequited sons, complaintes, and translations, as well as passion, and who became a symbol of love and

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2091

innocence in his poetry. He was received into political and literary satire, such as Absalom and the Roman Catholic Church about 1891. From Achitophel (1681) and the mock-heroic Mac Flecknoe (1682), affirmed the public role of the poet and established the basic forms of verse, and France, and supporting himself through most notably the heroic couplet, that dominated translation. His last years were marred by poverty, ill health, and depression. He died, of early nineteenth century. His introductions and tuberculosis, at the London home of a friend, essays, at once learned and commonsensical, R. H. Sherard, who had looked after him in the final six months of his life.

criticism” from his successor Samuel Johnson and helped shape English prose style for centuries. In his later years, after writing a poem Michael Drayton was a year older than Shakespeare and born in the same county, Warwickshire, England. Drayton was brought up as a his enemies to charge him with opportunism page in the house of Sir Henry Goodyere, whose

Michael Drayton (1563 - 1631) , pp. 235-38

(James II, a Catholic, had recently succeeded to daughter Anne (later Lady Rainsford) Drayton the throne), eventually resulted in Dryden's los- loved, perforce platonically, for many years. At ing his public offices and stipends, when the age ten, he dedicated himself to a poetic career, Protestant rulers William and Mary replaced and without benefit of a university education he J a m e s in 1688. Nearing sixty, Dryden supported became a learned and accomplished practitioner himself by writing plays and translating classical of most of the Renaissance poetic genres. He writers, Chaucer, and Boccaccio.

settled in London in 1590 and the next year published his first work, The Harmony of the Peter Kane Dufault (b. 1923), pp. 1665-Church. For reasons that remain obscure, this series of verse paraphrases of the Bible was sup-

67

Peter Kane Dufault was born in Newark, New pressed by public order, except for forty copies

Jersey, and attended Harvard University. During

(of which only one has survived) retained by the World War II, he served in the United States

bishop of Canterbury. In 1593, he published Army Air Force.

Since then, he has worked as a Idea: The Shepherd's Garland (1593), which news editor, a house painter, a tree surgeon, a shows the influence of Spenser's pastoral poetry.

folk singer, a fiddler, a country-dance caller, an

A collection of sonnets, Idea's Mirror, appeared actor, and a teacher of writing at Williams Colthe next year (it was frequently revised and lege and Berkshire Community College (Mas-expanded); in both works Drayton honored sachusetts). His work typically observes the Anne Goodyere under the name "Idea." He con-natural world closely and carefully, sometimes sidered Poly-Olhion his greatest poem, but this imbuing its subjects with mystical qualities. He thirty-thousand-line celebration of the topogra-lives in Hillsdale, New York.

phy of Britain (1612—22) proved less popular than most of Drayton's other works, among Carol Ann Duffy (b. 1955), pp. 2007-09

them England's Heroical Epistles (1597), mod-

Carol Ann Duffy was born in Glasgow, Scotland,

eled on Ovid's Heroides. Although Drayton brought up in Staffordshire, England, and stud-wrote a poem of fulsome praise when King ied philosophy at the University of Liverpool.

J a m e s I took the crown, he never found favor at

She has been a visiting professor and a writer-

the court after Elizabeth I's death; and his vision

in-residence at a number of institutions. A reg-

of the English nation as well as his most popular

ular reviewer and broadcaster, she now lectures

poetry suggest that he belonged to the Elizabe-

in poetry at Manchester Metropolitan Univer-

than Age even though he long outlived it.

sity. Her book Mean Time (1993) won both the

Whitbread Prize for Poetry and the Forward

J o h n Dryden (1 6 3 1 - 1 7 0 0) , pp. 5 0 0 - 2 6

Prize. The hallmarks of her poetry—her ability

John Dryden, the son of a country gentleman to invent plausible characters, to explore a range and his wife, was educated at Westminster of points of view, and to pace her poetry so as School and Trinity College, Cambridge. to surprise readers—derive in large part from Although he wrote his first poem, Heroic Stanzas her experience of writing for the stage. Like Robert Browning (1659), to commemorate Oliver Cromwell's death, she favors the dramatic-death, he celebrated the return of King Charles II in Astraea Redux (1660). A loyal Royalist for with complex emotions, questionable ethics, the rest of his life, he was made poet laureate in and rich fantasy lives.

1668. He wrote twenty-four plays for the newly reopened London theaters and numerous Paul Laurence Dunbar (1 8 7 2 - 1 9 0 6) , important songs, poems, and elegies. Many of

pp. 1 2 2 2 - 2 4

these were written for specific occasions such as

Paul Laurence Dunbar was born in Dayton, a coronation, a military victory, or a death. Ohio, the son of former slaves. His father had These poems, together with his long works of escaped to Canada via the Underground Rail-

2 0 9 2 / B I O G R A P H I C A L S K E T C H E S

road, but returned to the United States to enlist plays for radio and television, and translated in the second black regiment of the Union Army.

Racine's Andromache. He has edited a selection

Dunbar attended a white high school, where he read Delmore Schwartz's poems, a collection of which showed an early talent for writing. He was inspired by Hull poets, and The Faber Book of unable to fund further education, however, and

Twentieth-Century Scottish Poetry. He is a professor in the School of English at the University of St. Andrews. When his reputation as a writer grew, the abolitionist Frederick Douglass secured a job for him at the Columbian Exposition, in Chicago. From 1897 to 1898, he worked as an assistant in the reading room of the Library of Congress, and he later

Richard Eberhart (b. 1904), p. 1450

Richard Eberhart was born in Austin, Minnesota. He supported himself by writing and lecturing in the United States and England. In addition to his poetry, Dunbar published four novels and four volumes of short stories.

he made his way to England, where he undertook studies in English at St. John's College, Cambridge. Upon his return to the United States, Eberhart did graduate study at Harvard

William Dunbar (ca. 1460-ca. 1525),

States, Eberhart did graduate study at Harvard

pp. 86-90

University, then taught at St. Mark's School

William Dunbar was born to a noble Scottish (near Boston), where the poet Robert Lowell family and apparently took an M.A. from St. Andrews University (near Edinburgh) in 1479. Eberhart served as an aerial gunnery instructor.

He became a Franciscan friar and traveled in

In the mid-1940s, he joined his father-in-law's

England and France before leaving the order. floor-wax company, but in the 1950s he began Employed in various civil and diplomatic capacities an academic career and taught at, among other

ities abroad by James IV of Scotland, he went to schools, the University of Washington, Prince-

England with the ambassadorial mission to Dartmouth College. In addition arrange the king's marriage to Margaret Tudor, tion, he helped found the Poets' Theatre, in for which occasion (in 1503) he wrote The Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Thryssil and the Rois, a political allegory in which

James is the thistle, Margaret the rose. This was followed by poems allegorical, satirical, vision-

T. S. Eliot (1888 - 1965), pp. 1340-66

ary, and narrative, on both religious and secular

Thomas Stearns Eliot was born to a distin-themes. Influenced by Chaucer and the French guished New England family, raised in St.

poet Francois Villon, Dunbar wrote in a Scottish

Louis, Missouri, and educated at Harvard Uniform of English, describing, in The Flyting (i.e., versity, the Sorbonne, and Oxford University, quarrel) of Dunbar and

Kennedie, the antipathy where he wrote his Ph.D. dissertation on the between “Inglis”-speaking southern border-English logician and metaphysician F. H. Brad-landers and the Scots/Gaelic-speakers of the

ley. The critic Arthur Symons’s work on the highlands and west. He received a royal pension

French Symbolists was a seminal influence on in 1500, and some of his poems—“The Q u e e n i s

Eliot, as was the poet Ezra Pound, who encour-

Progress at Aberdeen,” for instance, and peraged him to stay in Europe and would eventually haps his “In Prais of Wemen”—suggest that edit his masterpiece The Waste Land (1922).

Q u e e n Margaret was his real or desired patron.

From 1917 until 1925, he worked in the International Department at Lloyd’s Bank, after

D o u g l a s D u n n (b. 1 9 4 2) , pp. 1927-29

which he joined the publishing house of Faber

Douglas Dunn was born in Inchinnan, Renfrew-and Faber, where he published the work of shire, Scotland, and was educated at the Scot-

W. H. Auden, Stephen Spender, Louis Mac-

tish School of Librarianship and the University

Neice, and other young poets. He also edited the of Hull. He worked as a librarian in a number

Egoist magazine and founded the influential Cri-

of places, including Akron, Ohio, and at the terion. In 1927,

Eliot took British citizenship University of Hull, where he worked under and joined the Church of England. In his later

Philip Larkin, whose influence can be seen in years, he wrote compelling critical studies on lit-

his early poems. Those contained in his first collection, Terry Street (1969), graphically describe generally considered the most important critic of the squalid living conditions and impoverished of the century. In addition, he wrote several successful verse dramas. He was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1948. Although he dis- fellow at the University of Dundee. In 1984, he missed The Waste Land, which he wrote largely settled in Tayport, Fife; in 1985, he won the while hospitalized for a breakdown in 1921, as Whitbread Book of the Year Award for his El- gies, poems written for his wife, an artist and a grouse against life,” his generation considered it curator, who died, of cancer, at thirty-seven. a definitive explanation of its distress. Eliot’s later Dunn has also published short stories, written work documents his conversion to Christianity and culminates in Four Quartets (1 9 3 5 - 4 3) , Ralph W a l d o E m e r s o n (1 8 0 3 - 1 8 8 2) , which he considered his greatest work.

B I O G R A P H I C A L S K E T C H E S / 2 0 9
3

pp. 941-46

Ralph Waldo Emerson was born and raised in Queen Elizabeth I (1533-1603), pp. 14 2-
Boston, the son of a Unitarian minister and his wife. He was educated at Harvard University

 The daughter of Henry VIII and his second wife, and Harvard Divinity School. Ordained as junior Anne Boleyn, Elizabeth was declared a bastard pastor of Boston's Second Church, he left the
 by her father, who executed her mother in 1534 church in 1832 because of deep doubts con-on probably spurious grounds of adultery. Q u e s - cerning organized religion. That same year, he tions about the legitimacy of Elizabeth's birth (at traveled to Europe, where he met the poets Wil-a time when Henry's first wife, Katharine of Ara-liam Wordsworth and Samuel Taylor Coleridge gon, was still living) fueled many later attacks on and the essayist and historian Thomas Carlyle, her, especially those by Catholics who sup-who became a close friend and great influence.
 ported the claims to the throne of Mary Tudor,
 He also was introduced to German idealism, and Elizabeth's elder half-sister, or later, those of this philosophy, along with the writings of Plato Mary Q u e e n of Scots, Elizabeth's cousin. Eliz-and Swedenborg and the sacred texts of Hinabeth replaced Mary Tudor on the throne of duism, largely determined Emerson's interpre-England in 1558, supported by many of the tation of Transcendentalism. Although he never Protestants who had welcomed her half-brother developed his beliefs into a full-fledged system,

Edward VI's brief reign (1547—53). Elizabeth Emerson preached self-reliance and optimism was, however, more adroit at religious compro- and promoted instinct over reason. The Tran-

mise than Edward or Mary had been; the years scendental circle that formed around him

of Elizabeth's long reign were relatively peace-included the writers Henry David Thoreau,

ful, despite the plots on her life and the criti-Jones Very, Margaret Fuller, and Nathaniel

cisms made by many of her male subjects of a Hawthorne. Although he used conventional woman's right to rule England. Well-educated meters and forms for his early poems, Emerson

in languages and rhetoric, the youthful Eliza-came to believe that "a thought so passionate beth translated works by Boethius, Petrarch, and alive ... has an architecture of its own,"

and Marguerite of Navarre, among others; as a
and this "organic" theory of composition queen, Elizabeth gave eloquent speeches that informed his later works.

were recorded by others, sometimes in several quite different versions. She wrote many letters

William E m p s o n (1 9 0 6 - 1 9 8 4) , pp. 146 3-

and some lyric poems. In her speeches and writ-64

ings, Elizabeth often sought to control, and William Empson was born at Yokefleet Hall, sometimes to counter, the many images of her near Howden, Yorkshire, and educated at Magdalene College, Cambridge. He took degrees in famous Elizabethans portrayed her as a “fairy mathematics and, under the tutelage of critic queen” (Spenser did so in his epic of that name,

I. A. Richards, English. After spending the as did Shakespeare in his play A Midsummer Night's Dream 1930s abroad, teaching at the Tokyo University, she preferred to portray herself of Literature and Science and for the Southwest as a woman who had the “heart and stomach of Associated Universities in China, Empson a king.”

returned to England when World War II broke out and worked for the B B C , where he edited Jean Elliot (1727 - 1805) , p. 677

scripts for foreign broadcast. In 1947, he Jean (or Jane) Elliot was born in Teviotdale, returned to China to teach at Peking National University, and there he witnessed the Chinese death, she, her mother, and her sister moved to Edinburgh, where Elliot remained until returning to Teviotdale shortly before her death. She was appointed professor of literature at Sheffield and was the author of probably the most popular ver-vation and the Minnesota border. She was edu-low J a m e s to France after the king was deposed cated at Dartmouth College—where she studied in 1688; following his release, he and his wife with the late Michael Dorris, who would become retired to their estate in Eastwell, Kent. Encourher husband and collaborator—and at Johns aged by her husband, Anne Finch began to write Hopkins University. She has worked at a variety in the 1680s, and her long poem “The Spleen” of jobs, including teaching poetry in prisons and was anthologized in 1701. In 1709, Jonathan editing a newspaper dedicated to Native Amer-Swift addressed a poem, “Apollo Outwitted,” to ican affairs (her mother was of French Chip-her, and she exchanged poems with Alexander pewa descent). Known primarily as a novelist Pope about the representation of “female wits” and short-story writer, Erdrich is a storyteller in in his The Rape of the Lock (1714). In 1713, she her poetry as well. Many of her poems are drapublished her Miscellany Poems on Several matic monologues spoken by the inhabitants of Occasions, which included a tragedy, Aristo-

a mythical small town in the early twentieth cen-menes, but many of her poem s remained in man-tury.
uscript at her death. William Wordsworth praised her nature poems, especially “A Noctur-

J a m e s F e n t o n (b . 1 9 4 9) , p p . 1 9 6 1 - 6 7

nal Reverie,” and included seventeen of her

J a m e s F e n t o n was born in Lincoln, England, poems in an anthology he compiled for Lady and educated at Magdalen College, Oxford, Mary Lowther in 1819. Only recently, however, where he studied politics, philosophy, and psychology. He has worked as a literary and political the problems of women writers achieved their journalist, and as a foreign correspondent in due recognition.

Germany, Cambodia, and Vietnam. His publications include collections of poetry, the-

E d w a r d F i t z G e r a l d (1 8 0 9 - 1 8 8 3) , p p . 9 6 1 - ater reviews, and accounts of his travels and 73 experiences as a war reporter. He has translated

Edward FitzGerald was born in Bredfield, Suf-

Verdi’s Rigoletto for the English National Opera

folk, England, and educated at Trinity College, and contributed to the musical version of Hugo’s

Cambridge, where he met the writers William

Les Miserables. He was professor of poetry at Thackeray and Alfred, Lord Tennyson. He never Oxford University from 1994 to 1999.

adopted a trade, but lived a retired and abstemious life occupied with study and translation.

L a w r e n c e F e r l i n g h e t t i (b . 1 9 1 9) , p p . 1 6 0 6 -

In the 1850s, he took up oriental studies, a prev-

07

alent interest of mid-nineteenth-century intel-

Lawrence Ferlinghetti was born in Yonkers, New York, and in 1856 he produced his first New York. Upon graduation from the University translation. The work for which he is best known of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, he joined the is his free translation of The Rubaiyat of Omar

navy and served during World War II. He Khayyam of Naishapur, which he published worked for Time magazine and later resumed his anonymously in 1859, expanded in 1868, and education at Columbia University and the Sorrevised further in 1872 and 1879. FitzGerald bonne. After moving to San Francisco, he maintained the structure of Omar Khayyam's started the City Lights Bookstore and the City epigrammatic ruba'i, or quatrains, including

Lights Press, which launched the careers of a

their aaba rhyme scheme and mounting tension, generation of American poets. He was associ-but deviated significantly from the twelfth-ated with the San Francisco Group, started by century Persian manuscript. Imposing unity on the poet Kenneth Rexroth, and with the Beats,

the work by introducing a time frame and dra-

whose prominent members included Jack Ker-matic situation, he stripped it to its essential ouac, William Burroughs, Gregory Corso, and themes, including the evanescence of life and

Allen Ginsberg, whose popular but controversial

the consequent necessity to "seize the day"

Howl and Other Poems he published and (carpe diem). Initially ignored, the work rapidly defended when it was charged in court as inde-gained in popularity when it was discovered by cent. His own A Coney Island of the Mind the painter and poet Dante Gabriel Rossetti and (1958), hip and satirical, was a huge success.

his Victorian coterie, the Pre-Raphaelites, who found its themes and tone strikingly contemporary.

Anne F i n c h , C o u n t e s s o f W i n c h i l s e a (1 6 6 1 - 1 7 2 0) , pp. 5 5 6 - 6 6

Anne Finch was born in Sydmonton, Berkshire,

R o b e r t F i t z g e r a l d (1 9 1 0 - 1 9 8 5) , pp. 1507-

England. After the deaths of her parents, Sir 08

William Kingsmill and Anne Haslewood, she Robert Fitzgerald was born in Geneva, New was raised and educated by an uncle. In 1683, York, and grew up in Springfield, Illinois. He with the poet Anne Killigrew, Finch became a was educated at Harvard University and also did maid of honor to Mary Modena, the duchess of informal studies at Trinity College, Cambridge.

York and future wife of King J a m e s II, and at

After working as a reporter for the New York

court met Colonel Heneage Finch, future earl

Herald Tribune and later for Time magazine, he of Winchilsea, who became her husband. Col-served in the navy during World War II. Beginning in 1949, Fitzgerald divided his time around the turn of the century, he worked as a between the United States and Italy.

B I O G R A P H I C A L S K E T C H E S / 2 0 9 5

He served farmer in New Hampshire. From 1912 until as poetry editor of The New Republic and taught 1915, he, his wife, and their four children lived at, among other schools, Sarah Lawrence Colin England, where he published his first book, lege and Princeton, Harvard, and Yale Univer-
A Boy's Will (1913), and met the poets Ezra sities. Renowned primarily for his translations of Pound and Edward Thomas, both of whose Homer and Virgil, he (with Dudley Fitts) also shrewd reviews helped establish his reputation.
translated Euripides and Sophocles.

Upon his return to America, Frost held a number of teaching appointments, his most enduring John Fletcher (1 5 7 9 - 1 6 2 5) , p. 345 association being with Amherst College. From John Fletcher was born in Rye, Sussex, England, the publication of his second book, North of Bos-

and was educated at Benet College, Cambridge.
ton (1914), onward, Frost became one of the

After the death of his father, bishop of London, best-known and most celebrated American

Fletcher was left to make his own way. In Lon-poets. In 1961, he read his poem "The Gift Out-don, he befriended Francis Beaumont, with right" at President John F. Kennedy's inaugu-whom he cowrote a number of plays for the fash-

ration, an honor indicating his unique status for ionable boys' companies. Along with Shakespeare, Fletcher and Beaumont became leading playwrights of the King's Men, the most prominent theatrical company of the day. Their joint works include Philaster (ca. 1609), The Maid's ody continue to mark the work of living poets.

Tragedy (ca. 1610), and A King and No King (1611). Following Beaumont's early retirement

George Gascoigne (ca. 1534—1577), and death, Fletcher collaborated with other pp. 144-46

playwrights, most notably Philip Massinger, George Gascoigne was probably educated at with whom he wrote Sir John van Olden Bar-Trinity College, Cambridge, and entered Gray's navelt (ca. 1619) and The Beggar's Bush (ca. 1555). Seeking a career as a courtier, he 1622), among other plays, and Shakespeare, sold his patrimony to cover his debts. In 1561, with whom he probably wrote Henry VIII (1613)

he wed the already married Elizabeth Boyes;

and The Two Nohle Kinsmen (1613). Fletcher is nine years later, he w^as imprisoned for debt.

credited with sole authorship of a number of Having served twice in Parliament in the late plays, including The Faithful Shepherdess (ca. 1550s, he was refused his seat in 1572 on the 1609), The Chances (ca. 1617), The Wild-Goose grounds of his bad reputation. From 1572 until Chase (ca. 1621), and Rule a Wife and Have a 1573, he served as a soldier in the Netherlands, Wife (1624). His success reflected his alertness during which time an unauthorized edition of to changing tastes as well as his deft handling of his play and poems, A Hundred Sundry Flowers tragicomedy and the comedy of manners. Like Bound Up in One Small Posy, appeared, which many dramatists of his day, he included lyrics

he corrected and extended as The Posies of and songs in his plays.

George Gascoigne. Acknowledging Chaucer as his poetic master, Gascoigne translated from the Philip Freneau (1752 - 1832), pp. 116-18

Italian Ariosto's The Supposes and wrote the first

Philip Freneau was born and raised in New York

original poem in English, The Steel Glass, a sat-

City. He was educated at the College of New

ire. His The Adventures of Master F. f. is a pio-

Jersey (now Princeton University). From 1776 neering work of novelistic prose. He divided his until nearly 1779, he worked as a secretary to a poems into three categories: "flowers," or "pleas-plantation owner in the West Indies. Upon a ant" poems written on "light occasions"; "herbs," second trip to the West Indies, in 1780, he was or "profitable" poems on moral subjects; and captured by the British and held as a prisoner of

"weeds," or poems "neither delightful nor yet

war. In 1790, he became a clerk of foreign lan-profitable" on his own follies. His Certain Notes

guages for the State Department, and he later of Instruction Concerning the Making of Verse or worked for a number of journals. He spent his Rhyme in English, the first important work on last years on his family's plantation in New Jer-English prosody, is a pithy and practical handsey, fell into poverty and obscurity, and died of book showing a wide knowledge of poetic forms.
exposure when he lost his way home during a snowstorm. Best known for his satires (many of David G a s c o y n e (1 9 1 6 - 2 0 0 1) , pp. 1580-83 which were anti-British), his polemics, and his David Gascoyne was born in Harrow, Middle-lyrics, Freneau was called "the poet of the Amersex, England, and educated at Regent Street ican Revolution," and many consider him the Polytechnic, London. He published his first col-first major American poet.

lection of poems at age sixteen. In 1933, he traveled to Paris to investigate the Surrealist

R o b e r t Frost (1 8 7 4 - 1 9 6 3) , pp. 1227-45 movement (and wrote the first English study of Robert Frost was born and raised (until age it when he was nineteen), and he lived in France eleven) in San Francisco. He attended Dart-from 1937 to 1939 and 1954 to 1965. He joined mouth and Harvard Colleges. For a decade, the Communist Party in 1936 and made a brief 2 0 9 6 / B I O G R A P H I C

A L S K E T C H E S

sojourn in Spain, but his support for the Party

knighting him only in 1907, twenty-five years proved ephemeral, though his interest in social after Sullivan was knighted.

and political issues endured. In the late years of World War II, he became an actor. Psychological problems following his war experiences cul-

Allen Ginsberg (1926-1997), pp. 1708-15

Allen Ginsberg was born in Newark, New Jersey, minated in several nervous breakdowns. In and was educated at Columbia University. After addition to his poems, he published a semi-spending much time in New York City with Wil-autobiographical novel and translated the work of several European poets, including Jean Jouve.

writers, he moved to San Francisco, where

He was made Chevalier dans l'Ordre des Arts et

Lawrence Ferlinghetti's City Lights Press pub-

Lettres by the French Ministry of Culture in lished Howl and Other Poems (1956). The title 1996.

p o e m — a condemnation of bourgeois culture, a celebration of sexuality, and a manifesto for the

Beat movement—has been published in many

J o h n Gay (1 6 8 5 - 1 7 3 2) , pp. 594-96

languages and remains the source of Ginsberg's

John Gay was born in Barnstaple, Devon, worldwide reputation. Before dropping out of England. Educated at a Devon school, he was the workaday world, Ginsberg had held a variety apprenticed to a London silk dealer, but was of jobs. He subsequently traveled across released from service due to poor health and England, the Far East, and the United States; began to haunt London literary society. He soon was active in radical politics; and taught at a gained the attention of Alexander Pope, Jonavariety of schools. He closely studied Tibetan than Swift, and John Arbuthnot, with whom he Buddhism and Western mystics such as William founded the "Scriblerus Club." With their help, Blake. Long before his death, in New York,

he obtained posts with influential figures,
his countercultural poetry had been widely including the duchess of Monmouth, widow of embraced by the literary establishment.

the duke figured in Dryden's Ahsalom and Ach-itophel; Lord Clarendon, whom he followed to the court of Hanover; and the duke and duchess D a n a Gioi a (b. 1 9 5 0) , pp. 197 2-73

of Queensberry, who housed him at their estate (Michael) Dana Gioia was born in Los Angeles. and managed his financial affairs. He was even-After receiving a B.A. at Stanford University, he tually awarded a modest sinecure as lottery com-studied at Harvard University and at the Stan-missioner. Gay achieved fame with The Beggar's
ford University Business School. From 1977 Opera (1728), a satire on Italian opera and until 1992, he worked as an executive at General English politics. This work's evocative lyrics and Foods, in New York City. He subsequently left pleasing tunes established Gay's reputation as the business world to devote himself to writing, the premiere lyricist of his day.

and settled in Santa Rosa, California. Author of controversial essays such as "Notes on the New Formalism" and "Can Poetry Matter?," he is also W. S. Gilbert (1836-1911), pp. 1144-46 known as a translator, a librettist, and an anthologist. In 2004, he became chairman of the don. Educated at King's College, University of National Endowment for the Arts.

London, he studied law at the Inner Temple, though his career as a barrister was unsatisfying Louise Gluck (b. 1943), pp. 1931-33 and, therefore, brief. In 1857, he joined the militia, in which he served for twenty years. He on Long Island, and educated at Sarah began writing comic verse and operatic bur-Lawrence College and Columbia University, lesques during the 1860s, and in 1869 met the where she studied with the poet Stanley Kunitz. eminent composer Arthur Sullivan, with whom She lives in Vermont and has taught at Williams he wrote a series of exceptionally popular operatic College since 1984. Her poems combine auto-rettas, including Trial by Jury, which satirizes biography and myth, strong feeling and cool the English legal system; H.M.S. Pinafore, abstraction, in spare language. In addition to which parodies the Royal Navy; Patience, a wry poetry, she has written one volume of criticism.

satire on aesthetes such as Oscar Wilde, Dante

She was poet laureate of the United States in

Gabriel Rossetti, and J a m e s McNeill Whistler;

2 0 0 3 - 0 4 .

The Pirates of Penzance; and The Mikado. Gilbert and Sullivan's collaboration ended in 1896

Oliver Goldsmith (ca. 1730-1774),

due to differences in temperament. The public

pp. 686-95

adored Gilbert's poems and libretti, but he Oliver Goldsmith was born at Pallas, County referred to himself disparagingly as "a doggerel

Longford, Ireland, the son of an Anglo-Irish bard." Satiric verse was his forte. His wit was so clergyman and his wife. He was brought up in biting and incisive that some thought he exhibritual parishes including Lissoy, which may be ited bad taste and others that he bordered on one source for his poem "The Deserted Village" the seditious. Q u e e n Victoria, for instance, (1770). After graduation from Trinity College, snubbed Gilbert by leaving his name off the pro-Dublin, his worldly career began with a series of gram at a public performance of his work and by misstarts: rejected for the ministry, he considered reading law, decided on medicine, and dinus and Claudius the God (both 1934) were enrolled at the University of Edinburgh, with-adapted for television in 1976. His reputation as drew to study in Leyden, wandered the Conti-

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2097

a poet reached its zenith in the 1950s and '60s

ment, and on his return failed the surgeon's as he embarked on lecture tours, published his exam. Through a series of essays, poems, plays,

Collected Poems (1959), and was accorded hon-histories, and biographies, he attracted the ors such as the Queen's Gold Medal for Poetry attention of Samuel Johnson and Sir Joshua (1968). He was professor of poetry at Oxford

Reynolds. The former saved him from prosecu-

from 1961 to 1966.

tion for debt by arranging the sale (for £60) of

The Vicar of Wakefield (1766), the novel for T h o m a s G r a y (1 7 1 6 - 1 7 7 1) , pp. 666-73

which Goldsmith is chiefly remembered. His Thomas Gray was born in Cornhill, London, the great comedy, She Stoops to Conquer (1773), son of a scrivener and his wife, and the only was an immediate success.

child of twelve to survive infancy. Educated at

Eton and Peterhouse College, Cambridge, he

Jorie Graham (b. 1951), pp. 19 75-79

divided his time between London and Stoke

Jorie Graham was born in Italy, to religious his-

Poges before settling into a fellowship at Camtorian Curtis B. Pepper and sculptor Beverly bridge, where he pursued his studies in Classics, Pepper, and raised in Italy and France. She early English poetry, and ancient Welsh and attended both the Sorbonne and New York Uni-Norse literatures. Other than brief stays in London and tours of the Lake District and Scotland before earning her M.F.A. at the University of Iowa. She was associated with Iowa and in search of the picturesque, Gray rarely left the several other universities before being appointed university. He embarked on a tour of France and Italy with the writer Horace Walpole in 1739, Boylston Professor of Rhetoric and Oratory at Harvard University. Greatly influential on a generation of poets, she writes allusive, far-ranging but after a quarrel returned alone. He began to write English poetry in about 1741. Little of his poems that often explore the nature of consciousness was published in his lifetime, but his poems circulated in manuscript among friends.

In Gray's "Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard," Samuel Johnson found "sentiments to which every bosom returns an echo" and

Robert Graves (1895-1985), pp. 1400-1404

"images which find a mirror in every mind."

Robert Graves was born in Wimbledon, England. The end of his school days coincided with the start of World War I, and in the sum-

Matthew Green (1696-1737), pp. 645-48

Little is known about Matthew Green's life, but in the summer of 1914 he took a commission with the Royal Welch Fusiliers. Sent to the front in France and employed at the London Customs House.

France, where he met the poet Siegfried Sassoon. He published nothing during his lifetime, but soon, he was gravely injured at the Battle of the Somme and left his manuscripts to his friend Richard Sassoon (1916) and sent home. After demobilization in 1919, he attended St. John's College, Oxford, and in 1926 he taught English at the University of Cairo, Egypt. That same year, he was to be known as "Spleen-Green."

began a relationship with the American poet Laura Riding, with whom he founded the Seizin Press (London). From 1929, he lived mainly in Majorca, Spain. He wrote prolifically in a number of genres, including poetry, fiction, biography, autobiography, criticism, and translation. She worked as a book editor and an arts administrator before becoming a freelance writer and tinct phases. When a young man, he was pub-broadcaster. Night Photograph, her first collection, was published in 1993. A recipient of Georgian poetry. As a result of the pressures of numerous awards, including the Forward Prize war, however, which shattered his faith in the for best poem of the year (1997), she has written values with which he had been raised, he began dramas and adaptations for B B C radio, and her writing bald transcriptions of life on the battle-first novel, Mary George of Allnorthover, was field, though he later suppressed this work, published in 2001.

She reviews regularly for believing it inferior to the war poetry of Sassoon
both U.K. and U.S. journals and teaches in the and Wilfred Owen. His memoir, Goodbye to All Creative Writing M.A. Programme at Gold-
That (1929), remains Graves's best-known con-smith's College, University of London.
tribution to the literature of World War I. Under Riding's influence, he experimented with mod-Fulke Greville, Lord Brooke (1554-1628), ernism. While doing research for a novel, he pp. 206-07 constructed the mythological system that lay Fulke Greville was born into a family of War-behind his late work, centering around a figure wickshire, England, landowners and was sent to he called the White Goddess. His novels J, Clau- Shrewsbury School in the same year as Sir

2098 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

Philip Sidney, who became his close friend. tion to writing poetry and essays, he edited col-After attending Jesus College, Cambridge, Gre-

lections of verse by Ben Jonson and Fulke ville went to court, where he was introduced to Greville.

the "Areopagus" club, an association of courtiers and poets named after the meeting place of the

Ivor G u r n e y (1 8 9 0 - 1 9 3 7) , pp. 1371-73

Athenian aristocratic council. Knighted in 1597,

Ivor Gurney was born in Gloucester, England.

he served as treasurer to the navy from 1589 to

He attended the Royal College of Music, Lon-

1604. Although he fell from favor in the early don, until 1915, when he enlisted in the army.

years of J a m e s I s reign, he served as chancellor

(He was initially rejected in 1914 because of

of the exchequer from 1614 to 1622 and was poor eyesight.) Sent to the front in France, he made first baron Brooke in 1621. Warwick Cas-was gassed at Ypres in 1917 and sent home;

tle, granted to him on his elevation to the peer-he suffered a breakdown the following year. He age, was the scene of his murder by a servant,

returned briefly to his studies at the Royal Col-who stabbed first Greville and then himself. lege, where the composer Ralph Vaughan Wil-Greville is perhaps best known for The Life of liams became his tutor. From 1919 to 1922, he the Renowned Sir Philip Sidney (1652), which lived restlessly, continuing to compose music expresses Greville's political disillusionment and to write but also working at a number of odd after Queen Elizabeth's death, and which jobs, ranging from organist to cinema pianist to helped to establish Sidney's reputation as the tax clerk. In 1922, suffering from schizophrenia, greatest of the Renaissance chivalric courtier-

he was committed to the City of London Mental poets. Greville also wrote Caelica, a sequence of Hospital, where he died fifteen years later. Two songs and sonnets; the neo-Stoic Letter to an volumes of poems appeared in his lifetime, Sev-Honorable Lady; a verse Treatise of Monarchy;

ern and Somme (1917) and War's Embers and two tragedies, Alaham and Mustapha, which (1919), and his songs were regularly published deal with political and religious themes.

during the 1920s. Critical appreciation of Gurney's artistry continued after his death with edi-

Barbara Guest (b. 1920), pp. 1616-17

tions of his songs, letters, and poetry.

Barbara Guest was born in Wilmington, North

Carolina, and raised in California and Florida.

Daniel Hall (b. 1952), pp. 1990-92

She was educated at the University of North

Daniel Hall was born in Pittsfield, Massachu-

Carolina, the University of California at Los setts. He has traveled extensively throughout the Angeles, and the University of California at British Isles and Asia. His first book, Hermit Berkeley. From 1951 to 1954, Guest served as with Landscape (1990), was selected for the Yale an associate editor at ARTnews. In addition Series of Younger Poets by James Merrill. He is to poetry, she has written plays, fiction, and a writer-in-residence and director of the Creative biography of H. D. Often associated with Writing Center at Amherst College.

the poets of the so-called New York school and the L = A = N = G = U = A = G = E poets who Donald Hall (b. 1928), pp. 17 53-57

descended from them, Guest has identified her

Donald Hall was born in New Haven, Connect-concerns as “what happens every day, ... mem-icut. Educated at Harvard and Oxford Univerory, ••• conscience, ... the brevity of ideas, ...

sities, he has served as poetry editor at The Paris

time, disorder, flux, etc.”

Review, as a member of the editorial board for poetry at Wesleyan University Press, and as a

T h o m G u n n (1 9 2 9 - 2 0 0 4) , pp. 1768-74

poetry consultant for Harper & Row. After

T h o m G u n n was born in Gravesend, Kent, teaching at Stanford University, Harvard, and England, but moved frequently as a child in the

the University of Michigan, he retired in 1975

wake of his father, a journalist. After school, and moved back to his family home in Danbury,

Gunn served in the army for two years, then New Hampshire, to work full-time as a writer.

went to Paris, where he worked on the Metro by

In addition to poetry, Hall has published literary day and attempted to write a novel by night, and criticism, personal reminiscences, and chil-

to Rome. He then went up to Trinity College, children's books, and has edited a number of widely

Cambridge, where he attended lectures by the used anthologies and textbooks. Among his most critic F. R. Leavis and published his first collecpraised works are his poems addressing the final tion of poems, Fighting Terms (1954). He did illness and death of his wife, the poet Jane Ken-graduate work at Stanford University under the yon (1947 - 1995).

poet Yvor Winters. Except for a year in San Antonio, Texas, Gunn lived in San Francisco for

Thomas Hardy (1840 - 1928), pp. 11 52-62

the rest of his life. He taught at the University Thomas Hardy was born in Dorset, England, the of California at Berkeley from 1958 until 1966,

area he made famous as "Wessex" in his novels.

but gave up full-time teaching to devote himself

He left school at age sixteen to work as an to writing. His collection The Man with Night apprentice to an architect in Dorchester who Sweats won the 1992 Forward

Prize, and his specialized in church restoration. He went to Collected Poems was published in 1993. In addi-

London in 1861 to continue work as an architect, but after several years returned to Dorset, raised by foster parents. He was educated at where he lived for the rest of his life. Though he Detroit City College (now Wayne State University) and the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, where he studied with W. H. Auden. In 1936, Hayden joined the Writers' Project of the Administration, and the Remedies, in 1871, but made his reputation as research he did on local folklore and the history a novelist with Far from the Madding Crowd, in of Michigan's Underground Railroad later made 1874. He published no poetry until 1897, after its way into many of his poems. Hayden taught the publication of his final novel, The Well-Beloved, but then dedicated the last thirty years 1946 until 1969, and at the University of Michigan from then until his death. He professed the more than prose. Hardy was a versatile poet, Baha'i faith and, beginning in 1967, served a writing lyrics, ballads, sonnets, dramatic mono-

long tenure as editor of its World Order journal. logues, and a series of moving love poems com- In addition, he wrote a play on Malcolm X, pub- posed upon the death of his wife, E m m a . Wessex lished a collection of prose, and edited several Poems (1898) brought together his poetry from anthologies.

over thirty years. It was followed in 1901 by Poems of the Past and Present, and in 1909 by Seamus Heaney (b. 1939), pp. 1899-1910

Time's Laughingstocks. His verse epic about the Seamus Heaney was born in Mossbawn, County Napoleonic Wars, The Dynasts, was published in Derry, Northern Ireland, to a Catholic farmer three parts between 1904 and 1908, and his Sat- and his wife. He was educated at Queen's Uni- ires of Circumstance in 1914. His reputation as versity, Belfast, where he later lectured in a poet has grown steadily ever since Philip Lar- English. His first volume of poetry, Digging, kin included more of Hardy's p o e m s than those established his reputation as the most gifted of Yeats and Eliot in his 1973 Oxford Book of poet of his generation, a reputation confirmed Twentieth-Century English Verse.

by the ten major collections that have followed. Robert Lowell dubbed him "the best Irish poet Tony Harrison (b. 1937) , pp. 1872-79

since W. B. Yeats.” Not wanting to be con-Tony Harrison was born in Leeds, England, and strained as a “political poet” in the north of Ire-was educated at Leeds University, where he read land, Heaney moved to the Irish Republic. He Classics and linguistics and published his first now lives in Dublin, having taught at the Uni-poems. He lectured in Nigeria from 1962 until versity of California at Berkeley, Harvard Uni-1966, and in Prague from 1966 until 1967. versity, and, from 1989 to 1994, as professor of Upon his return to England, he became the first poetry at Oxford University. A distinguished Northern Arts Fellow at the Universities of critic and accomplished translator, he won the Newcastle-upon-Tyne and Durham. In addition Whitbread Book of the Year Award for his ver-to a number of original verse plays, many of sion of Beowulf.
In 1995, he was awarded the which he also directed, he has written films and Nobel Prize for Literature. “Crediting Poetry,” adaptations of works by Moliere, Racine, and his acceptance speech, was published in Open others, including acclaimed versions of the Ores- Ground, which collected thirty years of his teia and the medieval Mystery plays. His volume poems.
The Gaze of the Gorgon won the 1992 Whitbread Prize for Poetry, and in 1995 he was com-Anthony H e c h t (1 9 2 3 - 2 0 0 4) , pp. 1667-74

missioned by The Guardian newspaper to write Anthony Hecht was born in New York City.

poems on the war in Bosnia.

After graduation from Bard College, he joined the army and was stationed in Europe and

Robert Hass (b. 1941), pp. 1919-20

Japan. He later taught at Kenyon College, where

Robert Hass was born in San Francisco, Cali-

he studied informally with fellow faculty member John Crowe Ransom, then returned to New York and at Stanford University, where he studied graduate work at Columbia University under the poet Yvor Winters.

He has taught at the State University of New York at Buffalo, St.

among other schools, Smith College, the Uni-

Mary's College, and the University of California at Berkeley. In addition to poetry, he has written essays and criticism and translated much European poetry, most notably that of Czeslaw Mil-undertook translation, most notably of Aeschy-

osz. He was poet laureate of the United States and Joseph Brodsky. He also collaborated

in 1995-96.

with artist Leonard Baskin on several sequences of poems. A gifted writer of light verse, he co-Robert Hayden (1913 - 1980), pp. 1533-37

invented (with John Hollander) the comic

Robert Hayden was born Asa Bundy Sheffey in “double dactyl,” and even his graver poems often a poor neighborhood of Detroit, Michigan, and register a dark humor. He lived in Washington,

2100 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

D.C., where in 1982—84 he served as consultant

did not preclude his harboring worldly ambition.

in poetry to the Library of Congress.

His fellowship at Trinity required him to join the clergy within seven years, but after being elected

Felicia Dorothea Hemans (1793 - 1835),

public orator (a springboard into higher positions at court), he left his university duties to

pp. 897-901

Felicia Dorothea Hemans was born in Liverpool, proxies while he pursued a secular career. Two

England, and raised in Wales. She was educated terms as a member of Parliament evidently dis-

at home by her mother, who recognized her writillusioned him. He was ordained deacon,

ing talent. Hemans was exceptionally prolific, installed as canon of Lincoln Cathedral, and, in publishing her first two volumes of poetry at age

1630, having been ordained priest, received a fifteen, and publishing a volume almost every living as rector of Bemerton, near Salisbury. In 1629, he married his stepfather's cousin, Jane Danvers, and they adopted his two orphaned nieces. In addition to a prose treatise, A Priest to the Temple: Or the Country Parson, his Character and Rule of Life (1652), he wrote many poems in both English and Latin. Shortly before his death, he sent his English poems to his friend the Anglican clergyman Nicholas Ferrar, asking him to publish them if he believed that they could "turn to the advantage of any many eminent writers of her day, and published dejected soul"; otherwise, Ferrar was to burn poems and articles in periodicals such as the Edinburgh Annual Register, Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine, and the New Monthly Magazine. The poems collected in The Temple (1633) represented, Herbert wrote, "a picture of the many spiritual conflicts that have passed betwixt God and my soul, before I could subject zine. Her most successful book was Records of mine to the will of Jesus my master.”

Woman: With Other Poems (1828). She was included in Oxford University Press’s Standard Authors series until 1914 but neglected in the Robert Herrick (1 5 9 1 - 1 6 7 4) , pp. 354-63 wake of modernism. The upsurge of Women’s Robert Herrick was born into a family of wealthy Studies in the 1980s rekindled an appreciation London goldsmiths. Apprenticed to his uncle at of her writing.

age sixteen, he did not go up to Cambridge until 1613. After taking his M.A. in 1620, Herrick returned to London, where he became an Edward H e r b e r t (1 5 8 2 - 1 6 4 8) , p. 346
admirer and friend of Ben Jonson. He joined the Edward Herbert was born at Eyton, in Shrop-clergy in 1623, acted as a chaplain on the duke shire, England. He was the eldest son of Richard of Buckingham’s disastrous expedition to the Herbert and the elder brother of the poet George Isle of Rhe, and as a reward was given the living Herbert. Educated at University College, of dean priory, in Devon, a position he took up Oxford, he lived in Oxford until moving to Lon-in 1630. The rural tranquility of the parish, don with his wife in 1600. He was knighted soon though at first alien to the urbane and social after the accession of King J a m e s I. From 1608

Herrick, made possible his prolific writing to 1618, he traveled widely on the Continent as career; he produced over twenty-five hundred a soldier of fortune; in 1619, he became ambassador to France. After his recall in 1624, James tresses, others about his maid, his dog, his cat, awarded him an Irish peerage and made him and rural customs and pleasures. He also wrote Lord Herbert of Cherbury. In that same year, he on religious themes. Dispossessed of his living published his most important work, De Veritate, by the Puritans, he returned to London and published a Latin philosophical treatise on knowledge, truth, and religion. His poems and poems, the Hesperides, and his religious poems, his autobiography were published posthumously. the Noble Numbers. Among the former were his imitations of the classical poets Catullus and Horace. After the restoration of the monarchy George Herbert (1593 - 1633), in 1660, Herrick returned to Devon and spent pp. 367-85

George Herbert was the fifth son of Richard his last years quietly, apparently without com-Herbert, who died when the poet was three, and posing further poems.

the younger brother of Edward, Lord Herbert of Cherbury, also a writer. He was educated at Geoffrey Hill (b. 1932), pp. 1831-36

Westminster School and King's Scholar of Trin-

Geoffrey Hill was born in Bromsgrove, Worcester-ity College, Cambridge. At age sixteen, he sent tershire, England. He was educated at Keble his mother, Magdalen, two accomplished and College, Oxford, and has since taught at the devout sonnets with a letter announcing his ded-

University of Leeds; Emmanuel and Trinity Col-ication of his poetic powers to God, though this leges, Cambridge; and, since 1988, Boston Uni-

B I O G R A P H I C A L S K E T C H E S / 2 1 0 1

versity; as well as being a visiting lecturer at

versity, underwent two years of medical training

several institutions in England, Nigeria, and the

in Europe, and returned to Harvard to complete

United States. His first collection of poems, For his M.D. A dedicated Unitarian, he served as the Unfallen, appeared in 1959. Distinctively professor of anatomy at Dartmouth College and resonant as is the voice of those early poems,

at Harvard, and later as dean of Harvard Medi-they remain consistently impersonal. Even when cal School. He established his reputation in the poet's boyhood self is conflated with that of medicine by discovering that puerperal fever,

Offa in Mercian Hymns (1971), subjectivity dis-commonly associated with childbirth and often solves in the objective projection of a historical fatal, was contagious; his work helped to stem imagination of great range and power. Where its spread. He began writing in earnest shortly that book had been concerned on one level with after earning his medical degree, and he was a “the matter of Britain,” a later collection, popular lecturer on the New England lyceum Canaan (1996), attempts to diagnose the matter circuit. The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table with Britain (identifying the U.K. with “Canaan, (1858), a series of witty essays first published in the land of the Philistines,” excoriated in the The Atlantic Monthly, is generally considered Bible). That and his more recent books, The Triumph of Love (1998) and Speech! Speech! is perhaps “Old Ironsides” (a stirring vers (2001), examine more searchingly and more sav-d’occasion that rescued the U . S . S . Constitution agely the themes that have long preoccupied from the salvage yard), “The Chambered Nautilus” was his favorite.

personal dimension. Hill’s critical writings include The Lords of Limit: Essays on Literature A. D. Hope (1 9 0 7 - 2 0 0 0) , pp. 1481-85 and Ideas and The Enemy’s Country: Words, A(lec) D(erwent) Hope was born in Cooma, Conjecture and Other Circumstances of Lan-New South Wales, Australia. He was educated guage. He has also produced a verse translation at Sydney University and University College, of Ibsen's Brand for the London stage. A winner Oxford. Upon graduation, he taught English in of the Whitbread and Hawthornden Prizes, he the New South Wales school system, and in is a fellow of the American Academy of the Arts 1937 became a lecturer in education at Sydney and Sciences.

Teachers' College. He taught English at the University of Melbourne from 1945 to 1965 and Daryl Hine (b. 1936), pp. 1868-69

at Canberra University College from 1965 to Daryl Hine was born in Vancouver, British Columbia, in 1936, when he retired to devote himself to writing. He was educated at McGill University in Montreal, Quebec, Canada.

ing. Although his work is rich in literary, biblical, and mythological allusions, he recrafted traditional myths to fit the times in which he lived. Chicago until 1968, when he became editor of Poetry magazine. After serving in this post for a decade, he returned to teaching, mostly in the Chicago area. In addition to poetry, he has published a novel, a travel book, and several plays.

Chicago until 1968, when he became editor of Poetry magazine. After serving in this post for a decade, he returned to teaching, mostly in the Chicago area. In addition to poetry, he has published a novel, a travel book, and several plays. general statement over local or particular detail

He also has coedited an anthology of verse and individual expression. In a voice ferociously has translated Homer and Theocritus.

witty and authoritative, often sardonic and satiric, he typically approached modern life with John Hollander (b. 1929), pp. 177 5-77

disdain, although he softened this stance in his John Hollander was born in New York City. He later work.

was educated at Columbia University and Indiana University at Bloomington, from which he Gerard Manley Hopkins (1844-1889), received a Ph.D. Upon graduation, he embarked pp. 1166—72 on an academic career, during which he has Gerard Manley Hopkins was born in Stratford, taught at Harvard University, Connecticut College, Essex, England, and was educated at Balliol College, Hunter College, and Yale University. In lege, Oxford. Under the influence of Cardinal addition to poetry, Hollander has written plays, John Henry Newman, he converted to Catholicism in 1866, became a novitiate of the Society Respected as much for his scholarship as for his of Jesuits two years later, and was ordained in poetry, he has edited numerous anthologies of 1877. Hopkins served as a parish priest and essays and poems, including a comprehensive teacher of Classics, his lengthiest appointment edition of nineteenth-century American verse.

being with University College, Dublin. He

He is also coinventor (with Anthony Hecht) of stopped writing poetry in 1868, believing it the “double dactyl” verse form.

interfered with his priestly vocation. Encouraged by Church authorities, he resumed writing Oliver Wendell Holmes (1809-1894), in 1875, with “The Wreck of the Deutschland,”

p. 974

a poem commemorating the death of several

Oliver Wendell Holmes was born in Cambridge,

Franciscan nuns, exiled from Germany by the Massachusetts. He studied law at Harvard Uni-

Falck Laws, in a shipwreck at the mouth of the

2102 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

river Thames. In his subsequent poems, Hop-

Richard Howard (b. 1929), pp. 1778-83

kings explored his relationship to God. Central to

Richard Howard was born in Cleveland, Ohio,

his complex theories on prosody are the terms and educated at Columbia University and the inscape, instress, and, most important to future

Sorbonne. In Cleveland and New York City, he poets, sprung rhythm. Little of his poetry was worked as a lexicographer for the World Pub-

published during his lifetime, but the poet Roblishing Company, then turned to translation and ert Bridges, Hopkins's friend since Oxford, has since brought into English more than 150 brought out an edition in 1918.

French texts, including works by Baudelaire, Barthes, de Beauvoir, Breton, Camus, and Gide.

In addition, he has worked as a poetry editor for

A. E. Housman (1859-1936),

journals such as

pp. 1173-80

The New Republic, The Paris

A. E. Housman was born in Fockbury, Worces-

Review, and Shenandoah, and has taught at,

tershire, England, and was educated at St. among other schools, Columbia University, John's College, Oxford. For a decade, he worked

Johns Hopkins University, and the universities

for the Patent Office in London, while contin-of Houston and Cincinnati. He lives in New

uing his studies and publishing scholarly essays

York City. A prolific writer in several modes, he in literary journals. He held appointments at is known especially for his mastery of the dra-University College, London, and Trinity Col-

matic monologue.

lege, Cambridge. While he published extensively on the classics (in particular Propertius, Juvenal, Lucan, and Manilius), he came to poetry Julia Ward Howe

(1819-1910), p. 1054

relatively late and had to publish his first collec-

Julia Ward was born in New York City, to a prominent family, and was educated at home. In 1843, she married Samuel Gridley Howe, the abolitionist and made Housman famous. His Shropshire Lad (1896), at his own expense. It gradually gained wide public recognition and depicts an English pastoral scene set in a world that was rapidly disappearing. He even had children. She devoted herself not only to motherhood and writing but also to the abolition and publishing Last Poems in 1922, but resolutely supported women's suffrage movements. In addition to declining honorary degrees and an Order of Merit, Howe published two plays and much poetry. In 1996, a plaque was dedicated to him in Westminster Abbey's Poets' Corner.

Margaret Fuller. She is best remembered for the apocalyptic "Battle-Hymn of the Republic" (1862).

Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey

(c. 1517 - 1547), pp. 137-40

Langston Hughes (1902-1967), pp. 1429-

Henry Howard, also known as "Surrey," was the 35 eldest son of an old aristocratic family. His father, who became third duke of Norfolk, had and raised in Missouri, Kansas, Illinois, and royal ancestors, as did his mother. Two of his Ohio. He attended Columbia University from nieces, Anne Boleyn and Catherine Howard, 1921 until 1922, then traveled extensively in were wives of Henry VIII, and the king's illegit-South America and Europe before moving to imate son, Henry Fitzroy, was a childhood Washington, D.C., in 1925. The next year, friend. Surrey fought ably in campaigns against

Hughes published his first collection of poems, the French and was imprisoned in 1537 on suspicion of sympathizing with the "Pilgrimage of Grace" rebellion against the dissolution of the monasteries. During his brief life (he was executed on a frivolous charge of treason), Surrey in the Harlem Renaissance. In addition to wrote courtly poems and circulated them in poetry, he wrote fiction, drama, screenplays, manuscript. He followed Wyatt in translating essays, and autobiography. Because of his jour-sonnets from Petrarch's Italian and wrote his nalistic work in support of the Republican side first English poem in blank verse, a translation

during the Spanish Civil War and his sympathies for the American Communists, in 1953 he this "strange meter," as the publisher called it, was called to testify before Senator Joseph appeared in print in 1554 (book 4) and 1557 McCarthy's committee on subversive activities, (book 2). Many of his lyrics were included, along and for many years following he worked to with Wyatt's, in Tottel's Songs and Sonnets restore his reputation. Always concerned (1557). His (probably fictional) love for "Gerald-

"largely ... with the depicting of Negro life in dine" is dramatized in Thomas Nashe's The America," Hughes documented it in poems that Unfortunate Traveller, where Surrey appears as drew meters and moods from street language, the traveler's "master."

jazz, and the blues.

B I O G R A P H I C A L S K E T C H E S / 2 1 0 3

T e d H u g h e s (1 9 3 0 - 1 9 9 8) , pp. 1810-16

don. In 1939, she stopped writing verse,

Ted Hughes was born in Mytholmroyd, South

returned to the United States, and with Schuyler

Yorkshire, England, and was raised in Mexbor-

Jackson, her second husband, embarked on a ough, a coal-mining town in South Yorkshire.

series of lexicographic and linguistic studies.

He won a scholarship to Pembroke College, In conformity with the late author's wish, Cambridge, but served two years in the Royal Air her Board of Literary Management asks us to Force before matriculating. He studied English, record that, in 1940, Laura (Riding) Jackson archaeology, and anthropology, specializing in renounced, on grounds of linguistic principle, mythological systems (an interest that informed the writing of poetry: she had come to hold that much of his poetry). He later worked as a gardener, night watchman, zookeeper, scriptwriter, and teacher. In 1956, he married the American poet Sylvia Plath, and the couple spent a year in the United States before moving to England. Josephine Jacobsen (1908-2003), pp. 1491-1492. Plath committed suicide in 1963. In

93

1970, Hughes settled on a farm in Devon. In Josephine Jacobsen was born in Cobourg, Ontario, to American parents. She was educated and books for children. He also edited numerous plays, short stories, Ontario, to American parents. She was educated and books for children. He also edited numerous by private tutors at Roland Park Country School, collections of verse and prose, and was a founding editor of Modern Poetry in Translation magazine, although she was an extensive traveler.

azine. He was poet laureate of England from 1984 until his death. His poems vividly describe author of numerous collections, she served as the beauty of the natural world, but celebrate its poetry consultant to the Library of Congress and raw, elemental energies. He often embodies the in other capacities for the Poetry Society of primal forces of nature as mythic animals such as the pike, the hawk, and “Crow,” a central character in a long cycle of poems. His translation and recasting of Tales from Ovid was published at age sixty. She also published literary and dramatic criticism.

a year later he broke his silence on his relationship with Plath with the publication of Birthday Letters. He received the Order of Merit from Randall Jarrell (1914-1965), pp. 1552-58

Letters. He received the Order of Merit from Randall Jarrell was born in Nashville, Tennessee Queen Elizabeth II only twelve days before his death, from cancer.

fornia. He was educated at Vanderbilt University, where he studied psychology and Richard Hugo (1923 - 1982), pp. 1674-76

English (with the poet John Crowe Ransom) and Richard Hugo was born in Seattle and educated at the University of Washington, where he studied with the poet Theodore Roethke. A bombardier, where he roomed with the novelist Peter dier in the United States Army Air Corps during Taylor and the poet Robert Lowell; the University of Texas at Austin; and Women's College, Boeing Corporation, then began an academic career, during which he taught at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. In World War II, he was stationed stateside, working with B-29 crews, and, based partly on their reports, wrote some of the most prized poems to come out of the war. He also earned a reputation as an astute, acerbic, and influential critic of Younger Poets, and he helped to launch the careers of many poets. His poems typically are set in desolate landscapes of the American West, as well as translations of Goethe, Chekhov, and several of Grimm's fairy tales. After being hospitalized for depression early in 1965, he died pp. 1425-26 some months later when struck by a car. Laura Riding was born in New York City and attended Cornell University. For a short time, Robinson Jeffers (1887-1962), pp. 1320-she was affiliated with the Fugitives, a prominent group of southern writers. In the 1930s, (John) Robinson Jeffers was born in Pittsburgh, Riding was associated with the poet and critic

24

Pennsylvania, to a Classics professor in a theo-

Robert Graves, with whom she wrote A Survey logical seminary and his wife. He was educated of Modernist Poetry (1927), an influential study at Occidental College. Before turning to writing, that advocated close textual reading. Riding
and

he studied medicine and forestry at the graduate

Graves also founded the Seizin Press, in Lon-

level. In 1914, he moved to Carmel, California,

2104 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

where he lived in relative isolation—in a home

Countries and after returning to England began overlooking the dramatic Pacific coastline that a career in the theater, first as an actor, then as figures prominently in his work. He also built a playwright. In 1598, he killed a fellow actor in with his own hands a structure he called Hawk

a duel but escaped hanging by claiming “benefit

Tower. Jeffers dubbed his philosophical stance of clergy,” that is, by demonstrating his ability to “inhumanism” and defined it as “a shifting read a verse from the Bible. His conversion to emphasis and significance from man to not-Catholicism in that same year no doubt contrib-

man.” He challenged humanity’s overreliance on the charges of “popery” and treason levied on the flawed social structures of its own making. He argued against him after he published his play and urged its return to a more primal relation to the neoclassical tragedy Sejanus (1606), which dealt with the natural world. He achieved his greatest fame with his 1946 translation of Euripides’ Medea, which was performed on Broadway.

by coauthoring The Isle of Dogs (1597) and Eastward Ho (1605); the former, considered a “lewd

Elizabeth Jennings (1926-2001), pp. 1735-36
play, containing very seditious and slanderous matter,” caused its authors to be briefly imprisoned. Elizabeth Jennings was born in Boston, Lincolnshire, England, and educated at St. Anne’s College, Oxford. Her poems were first published in Jonson’s imprisonment, contained a passage the 1948 edition of Oxford Poetry, edited by about the Scots that offended the court and the Kingsley Amis and James Michie. She worked at

Scottish king, James I. Jonson soon gained the various professions—including advertising, king’s favor, however, with the series of court librarianship, and publishing—before devoting himself exclusively to writing. In the 1960s, she Inigo Jones—in 1605; in 1616, after he had suffered recurrent mental breakdowns, which published his Works and had returned (in 1610) resulted in hospitalization. Her later work docto the Church of England, he received a subuments her illness and subsequent recovery. stantial pension from the king and effectively She also published critical essays, children’s occupied the position of poet laureate. Learned verse, and a translation of Michelangelo’s sonin the classics and skilled in a variety of poetic nets. Her last volume of poems, Timely Issues, and dramatic forms, Jonson first acquired fame appeared shortly before her death.

as the author of “comedies of humors” satirizing the eccentricities and “ruling passions” of his characters. In addition to his many successful plays— Volpone (1605), The Alchemist (1610), Samuel Johnson was born in Lichfield, England, and Bartholomew Fair (1614), for instance—to a bookseller and his wife. As a child, he con-

Samuel Johnson (1709-1784), pp. 655-65

Jonson wrote poetry in a variety of forms, includ-

tracted scrofula (tuberculosis of the lymphatic

ing witty epigrams, epitaphs, songs (both free-system) and smallpox, a combination that left standing and designed for plays and masques), him badly scarred, with impaired sight and hear-

and “occasional” poems celebrating events

ing, and prone to involuntary gesticulation. He and people. In contrast to his contemporary went to Pembroke College, Oxford, but financial

Shakespeare, whose plays were collected only difficulties forced him to leave after fourteen posthumously, Jonson was concerned with con-months. After a period spent teaching in Birstructing an imposing authorial persona. Mod-mingham, in 1737 he settled in London, where eling himself in part on classical writers such as he worked on The Gentleman's Magazine, and Martial and Horace, he was the first English the next year published
"London," an imitation

poet to inspire a “school”: the Sons, or Tribes, of Juvenal’s satires that was an immediate success, as was his second satire, “The Vanity of Herrick and Thomas Carew.

Human Wishes” (1749). Johnson’s contribution to literary scholarship, criticism, and lexicography is incalculable. In addition to his many Donald Justice (1925-2004), pp. 1684-87 reviews and essays, he published the ambitious Donald Justice was born and raised in Miami, Lives of the Poets (1779—81), founded and edited Florida. He earned a B.A. from the University of The Rambler magazine, collected the works of Miami, an M.A. from the University of North Shakespeare, and produced his monumental, if Carolina at Chapel Hill, and a Ph.D. from the idiosyncratic, A Dictionary of the English Language (1755).

the poets John Berryman, Robert Lowell, and Karl Shapiro. He also studied with the poet Yvor Ben Jonson (1572 - 1637), pp. 323-45 Winters at Stanford University. He taught at, Ben(jamin) Jonson was born in London after the among other schools, the University of Iowa death of his father, a clergyman. Educated at Writers’ Workshop and the University of Florida

Westminster School, he was working for his at Gainesville and counted among his students stepfather as a bricklayer by the early 1950s. He volunteered for military service in the Low ham. An accomplished painter as well, he BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2105 became known for understated, sometimes sity of Missouri before graduating from the Uni-darkly humorous poems.

Mark Strand, Charles Wright, and Jorie Gra-

versity of Nebraska. Initially a fiction writer,

Kees moved to New York City, where he painted,

Patrick Kavanagh (1904 - 1967), pp. 1450-wrote art criticism, and published his first book of poems, The Last Man (1943). In 1950, he Patrick Kavanagh was born in Inniskeen, moved to the West Coast and worked as a pho-County Monaghan, Ireland. He left school at tographer, film producer, radio broadcaster, and age thirteen to go to work. During the 1930s, he jazz pianist. When his car was found parked near became active on the Dublin literary scene, writ-the Golden Gate Bridge in July 1955, he was

54

ing reviews for local publications while support-presumed a suicide. His best-known work is a ing himself by farming. His first collection, series of wistful, ironic poems about an urban “Ploughman” and Other Poems, was published in everyman he called Robinson.

1936. In 1949, he sold his land and devoted himself entirely to literature. He made a precarious living over the next two decades; despite the critical success of The Great Hunger (1942), York. He attended Dartmouth College and sales were sluggish and he had difficulty finding a publisher for subsequent work. His difficulties teaching English at the University of Washington brought him close to despair, but his autobiographical novel, Tarry Flynn, was issued in seminars in creative writing, in Rome. The first 1948, and in 1955 he experienced a powerful spiritual rebirth and his work enjoyed a brief revival. Kavanagh has been credited with main-Merrill for the Yale Series of Younger Poets. He

Richard Kenney (b. 1948), pp. 1954-56

Richard Kenney was born in Glens Falls, New York. He attended Dartmouth College and sales were sluggish and he had difficulty finding a publisher for subsequent work. His difficulties teaching English at the University of Washington brought him close to despair, but his autobiographical novel, Tarry Flynn, was issued in seminars in creative writing, in Rome. The first 1948, and in 1955 he experienced a powerful spiritual rebirth and his work enjoyed a brief revival. Kavanagh has been credited with main-Merrill for the Yale Series of Younger Poets. He taining public interest in Irish peasant culture lives in Port Townsend, Washington.

in the period following the Celtic Twilight.

Sidney Keyes (1922 - 1943), pp. 1644-47

John Keats (1795 - 1821), pp. 905-41

Sidney Keyes was born in Dartford, England. He

John Keats was born in London, the son of a was educated at Tonbridge School, where he livery stableman and his wife. At age fifteen, he began to write poetry, and at The Queen's Col-was apprenticed to an apothecary-surgeon, and lege, Oxford, where he became friends with on completion of his apprenticeship did further John Heath-Stubbs and Michael Meyer, coeditraining at Guy's Hospital, London. Having tors of Eight Oxford Poets, which includes some qualified, Keats abandoned medicine for poetry.

of Keyes's work. His first collection, The Iron
In 1818, he fell in love with Fanny Brawne, but Laurel, appeared in 1942, shortly before he was was prevented from marrying her by financial commissioned into his father's regiment, the difficulties. In 1819, his annus mirabilis, he pro-Queen's Own Royal West Kent. After only two duced all of his great odes, a number of fine son-weeks of active service in Tunisia, he was killed nets, and several other masterpieces. The near Sidi Abdullah.
A second volume of poems, following year, he developed tuberculosis, the The Cruel Solstice, was posthumously published disease that had killed his mother and younger in 1943, and a collected poems appeared in brother, Tom. Hoping to prolong his life, he 1945. In his war poems, he portrays death as a traveled to Italy, but died in Rome—in lodgings real presence to which the good soldier must in the Piazza di Spagna (now a museum)—the submit courageously and with a measure of following spring. At the time of his death, he had detachment. Confronted with the reality of published only fifty-four poems, and it was not death, he changed his stance, advocating active until the publication of Richard Monkton resistance against the forces of extinction.

Milne's Life, Letters and Literary Remains of John Keats in 1848 that his reputation as a great Anne Killigrew (1660 - 1685), pp. 554-56 poet was established. In his poetry, he struggled Anne Killigrew was born in London; she died of to make sense of a world riddled with "misery, smallpox. Her father, an amateur dramatist and heartache and pain, sickness and oppression." chaplain to the duke of York, encouraged Anne's Rather than take solace in religious or philo-literary talents and oversaw the posthumous sophical creeds, as did Wordsworth and Cole-publication (in 1685—86) of her poems. In an ridge, he looked to sensation, passion, and ode composed for this memorial volume, John imagination to guide him. "I am certain of noth-Dryden praises her accomplishments in the "sis-

ing," he wrote to a friend, "but of the holiness ter arts" of poetry and painting (two of her of the Heart's affections and the truth of Imagpoems describe her own paintings), but also ination—What the imagination seizes as Beauty presents her as an entirely "artless" poet whose must be truth."

gifts were from "nature." Killigrew worked at her craft, however, by writing in a variety of poetic Weldon Kees (1914 - 1955), pp. 1559-60 genres—among her poems is a heroic tribute to Weldon Kees was born in Beatrice, Nebraska, Alexander the Great. Recognizing that a female and educated at Doane College and the University of Nebraska, Killigrew's desire to create "deathless numbers"

2106 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

might be viewed as overly ambitious by some but in 1882 returned to India to work as a journalist.

When he moved back to England, in near-contemporary Katherine Philips: "Nor did 1889, he enjoyed celebrity status for books such sex at all obstruct her fame," Killigrew wrote

as Plain Tales from the Hills (1888), The Jungles about Philips, in a poem addressed to those who

Book (1894), and Kim (1901). He was awarded impugned Killigrew's status as an author by saying the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1907, but by saying that her verses "Were Made by Another."

At the time of his death his reputation had declined, due largely to the jingoism that pervaded

Henry King (1592-1669), pp. 363-66

vaded his writings during the Boer War and

Henry King was the son of a bishop of London

World War I. Following the death of his only son and his wife. Educated at Westminster and at the Battle of Loos, Kipling became a prominent member of Christ Church, Oxford, he entered the Church and became a prominent member of the Imperial War Graves Commission of England and rose steadily through its ranks, mission and wrote a history of the Irish Guards becoming the bishop of Chichester in 1642. A (1923). The rousing rhythms that propel many staunch opponent of Puritanism, he was ejected of his poems are derived from music-hall songs from his position by Parliamentarians in 1643. and Protestant hymns, leading T. S. Eliot to call After seventeen years in retirement with friends, his work “the poetry of oratory.” Although, as he was reinstated as bishop in 1660, following child of empire, Kipling held in high regard what the return of the monarchy. He published a he considered the glories of civilization, in a verse translation of the Psalms in 1651 and moving series of monologues from the mouths composed both sacred and secular poems — of common soldiers he explores and acknowl-including elegies on his friend John Donne, Ben edges the cost of attaining values such as justice, Jonson, and Sir Walter Raleigh—that were patriotism, and sacrifice of self to a larger ideal. lished anonymously in an unauthorized edition called Poems, Elegies, Paradoxes and Sonnets Carolyn Kizer (b. 1925), pp. 1688-91 (1657). He was known as an impressive Carolyn Kizer was born in Spokane, Washing-preacher, and a number of his sermons have ton, and was educated at Sarah Lawrence Col-been published. His best-known work, however, lege, Columbia University, and the University of is “An Exequy to His Matchless, Never-to-Be-Washington. From 1959 to 1965, she was an Forgotten Friend,” a moving lament for his wife, editor of

Anne Berkeley, who died in 1624, at age twenty-

Poetry Northwest. She taught at a woman's college in Pakistan for the U.S. State four.

Department before resigning in protest against the Vietnam War; later, she served as director of Galway Kinnell (b. 1927), pp. 1740-42

literary programs for the National Endowment

Galway Kinnell was born in Providence, Rhode Island. He was educated at Princeton University in Paris and in Sonoma, California. Her best-and the University of Rochester. From 1945 known work is a career-spanning, five-part until 1946, he served in the navy, and he then poem, Pro Femina.

did field work for the Congress on Racial Equality. He has traveled widely in the Middle East and Europe and has taught at more than twenty

Kenneth Koch (1925-2002), pp. 1691-95

institutions, including the University of California at Irvine, the University of Pittsburgh, Sarah served as a rifleman in the Pacific during World

Lawrence College, and New York University. He

War II, before attending Harvard University and has edited several other poets and feels a partic-earning his Ph.D. from Columbia University.

ular affinity for Whitman. He lives in Vermont.

With the exception of brief periods abroad, especially in France and Italy, Koch lived in New

Thomas Kinsella (b. 1928), pp. 1757-60

York City from 1950 on, and was a key figure,

Thomas Kinsella was born in Dublin, Ireland. with his friends John Ashbery, Frank O'Hara, He studied science at University College, Dub-James Schuyler, and others, in what became lin, but left to work for the Irish Civil Service.

known as the New York school of poetry. Writ-

After retiring from the Department of Finance

ing poems closely linked with Abstract Expres-in 1965, he taught in the United States. In sionists and Surrealists, he sometimes exhibited 1972, in Dublin, he founded the Peppercanister his poems alongside these artists' works. Gifted

Press, which published much of his own work.

with an offbeat sense of humor, Koch was

He has translated Gaelic poetry, notably The known also for his fiction, his plays, and his work Tain (1969), and has edited the New Oxford in teaching children to write poetry. He was a Book of Irish Verse. His Collected Poems was professor at Columbia University until his published in 1996.

death.

Rudyard Kipling (1865-1936), pp. 1181-

Yusef Komunyakaa (b. 1947), pp. 1949-52

88

Yusef Komunyakaa was born in Bogalusa, Lou-

Rudyard Kipling was born in Bombay, India, to isiana. He served in Vietnam as a war corre-

British parents. He was educated in England, spondent and for a time edited the Southern

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2107

Cross. Decorated with a Bronze Star, he later ant of Lord Spenser in the county of Oxfordwrote poems deriving from his Vietnam experishire. The note concludes: “this aforesaid ence, first collected in Dien Cai Dau (1988). William made the book that is called Piers Plow-Following his years in the military, Komunyakaa

man.” Texts of the poem both support and elabstudied at the University of Colorado, Colorado

orate on the note’s information. In line 52 of State, and the University of California at Irvine.

Passus 15 of the B-text, the narrator seems to

He has also lived in Australia, Saint Thomas, offer a cryptogram of the name Langland: ” ‘I

Puerto Rico, and Japan. He teaches at Princeton have lyved in londe,’ quod I, ‘my name is Longe

University. Many of his poems harken back to Wille.’ ” At the beginning of the poem, the nar-

his childhood in a poor, rural, and largely black

rator depicts himself awakening from his dream

Southern community. They grapple with hard in the “Malvern Hills,” in the West Midland realities, including race and social class, and region of England; elsewhere, he presents him-take some of their rhythms and melodic effects

self as a man who has moved from the country from jazz and the blues.

to the city and is at the time of the poem's composition living in Cornhill, in London, making a Stanley Kunitz (b. 1905), pp. 1454-56

living as a cleric who chants prayers for the souls

Stanley Kunitz was born and raised in Worcester, of the dead. The poem further presents the narrator,

Massachusetts. After graduation from Harvard University, he worked as an editor in New York

City. During World War II, he served in the army, and during the academic career that the author had received a clerical education, but followed he taught at, among other schools, had never been ordained a priest. Passus 5 of Columbia University. He has been an influential

the C-text states that the narrator comes from teacher to many poets, including Louise Gluck

“franklins,” or free men, and from married parents.

This latter detail may serve to counter suspicions

about the legitimacy of the poet's birth.

Haycraft) biographical dictionaries of literary figures; edited a collection of William Blake's Sidney Lanier (

1842 - 1881), pp. 1162-65

work; and translated the work of Anna Sidney Lanier was born in Macon, Georgia, and Akhmatova and Andrei Voznesenksy from the educated at Oglethorpe College. In 1861, he Russian. He cofounded the Fine Arts Work enlisted in the Confederate Army, and in 1864

Center, in Provincetown, Massachusetts, and he was captured by Union forces and imprisoned at the Poet's House, in New York City. In 2000-01, he was imprisoned for four months at Point Lookout, Maryland, served as poet laureate of the United States.

land, where he probably contracted the tuberculosis from which he later died. After the war, Lanier played in the Peabody Symphony as a flutist and, in 1879, became lecturer in literature at Johns Hopkins University. In addition to poetry, he wrote novels—including Tiger-Lilies (1867), which documents his war experience with its interludes of domestic tranquility, prose— and critical studies, including The Science of English Verse (1880), in which he argued that the same laws govern music and poetry. He lived in Italy from 1815 until 1835 and from 1857 until his death. Fluent in French, Italian, and Greek and possessing a pro-

Warwick, England, and educated at Rugby School and at

Warwick, England, and educated at Rugby School and at

to poetry, he wrote novels—including Tiger-Trinity College, Oxford. A short-lived marriage, Lilies (1867), which documents his war experience with its interludes of domestic tranquility, prose—and critical studies, including The Science of English Verse (1880), in which he argued that the same laws govern music and poetry. He lived in Italy from 1815 until 1835 and from 1857 until his death. Fluent in French, Italian, and Greek and possessing a pro-

religious knowledge of history, Landor was Aemilia Lanyer (1569 - 1645) , pp. 284 - 92

steeped in classicism. His most enduring works,

Aemilia Lanyer was the daughter of Baptist Basin particular his Imaginary Conversations sano, an Italian court musician, and his wife, (1824), based on his studies, made him an Margaret Johnson. She was probably educated important figure to poets such as Robert Brownin the noble household of Susan Wingfield, ing and Ezra Pound. He died in Florence and countess of Kent. As the mistress of Henry Cary, was buried in the Protestant cemetery there.

Lord Hunsdun, a wealthy courtier forty-five years her senior, she enjoyed a luxurious and William L a n g l a n d (ca. 1330 - c a . 1400) , privileged life until she became pregnant; she

pp. 71—74

then married Captain Alfonso Lanyer, another

A note found in the margins of an early manucourt musician, in 1592. In 1617, she set up a script of Piers Plowman in a fifteenth-century school in the fashionable St. Giles in the Fields hand is the single piece of evidence that ascribes for the children of the nobility and gentlemen,

this poem to a man named William Langland.

but it failed in 1619. Lanyer was the first Eng-

The note, which many scholars accept as relia-lishwoman to publish a substantial collection of ble, states that William Langland was the son of original poems in her own name, as well as

Stacy de Rokayle, a man of gentle birth who actively to seek patronage from a host of noble lived in Shipton-under-Wychwood and was ten-ladies addressed in the prefatory poems affixed

2108 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

to her collection, Salve Deus Rex Judaeorum Irving Layton (b. 1912), pp. 1530-33 (1611).

Irving Layton was born in Romania to Jewish parents who emigrated to Montreal, Canada, the year after his birth. He was educated at Mac-Philip Larkin (1922 - 1985), pp. 1648-59 donald College, served briefly in the Canadian Philip Larkin was born in Coventry, England, Army, then attended McGill University. Layton and educated at King Henry VIII School and St.

taught English in secondary schools and col-

John's College, Oxford. He worked as a librarian

leges until 1970, when he joined the faculty of

for the rest of his life, starting in the small town

York University (Toronto). He retired from

of Wellington and moving through the univer-teaching in 1978. One of the most prolific poets sity libraries of Leicester and Belfast before set-of the twentieth century, he has published some tling at Hull. Although he tried to achieve fifty volumes of poetry. He also has written polit-recognition as a novelist, with Jill in 1946 and ical essays and a memoir and has edited numer-

A Girl in Winter in 1947, he made his reputation

ous collections of verse.

in poetry. Along with Donald Davie, Thom

Gunn, and his college friend Kingsley Amis, Larkin came to be known as a writer of The Move-

E m m a L a z a r u s (1 8 4 9 - 1 8 8 7) , pp. 1112-13

ment, a group of postwar poets anthologized in

E m m a Lazarus was born in New York City, to a

Robert Conquest's New Lines (1956). Although prominent Sephardic (Spanish Jewish) family.

he produced only four volumes of poetry in his

She was educated at home. In 1868, she met lifetime— The North Ship (1945), The Less the writer Ralph

Waldo Emerson, who became Deceived (1955), The Whitsun

Weddings her literary mentor. Lazarus developed a pas-

(1965), and High Windows (1974)—Larkin was sionate interest in Semitism. She translated a highly influential presence in the second half medieval Hebrew poets from the German and of the twentieth century, editing the Oxford wrote impassioned essays on behalf of the wave Book of Twentieth-Century

English Verse (1973) of Jewish immigrants seeking refuge from per-and serving on various arts councils and library

secution in Europe after the assassination of committees. He turned down the poet laureate-

Russian Czar Alexander II, in 1881. Lazarus was ship, which was offered to him on the death of appalled by the squalid conditions in which

John Betjeman. His Collected Poems was pub-

many of these refugees were forced to live and lished in 1988, followed by Selected Letters, sympathetic to their difficulty in finding employ-1940-1985 in 1992, the latter collection ment. The last five lines of “The New Colossus,” arousing controversy and even outrage at some the poem for which she is best-remembered, are of his racist and xenophobic opinions.

engraved on the pedestal of the Statue of Liberty, which was dedicated in 1886.

D. H. Lawrence (1885 - 1930) , pp. 1284-95 Edward Lear (1812 - 1888) , pp. 1041-44

D(avid) H(erbert) Lawrence was born in East-

Edward Lear was born in Holloway, London.

wood, Nottinghamshire, England, and attended

Educated mainly at home by his elder sisters, he

University College, Nottingham. His first pub-began to work as an illustrator at age fifteen. In lished work, a group of poems, appeared in 1846, he published A Book of Nonsense, which 1909; his first short story and his first novel, The

he had written and illustrated to amuse the White Peacock, the following year. From 1908 grandchildren of his patron, the earl of Derby.

to 1912, he taught in a London school, but he

It went through twenty-four editions in Lear’s gave this up after falling in love with the German lifetime. In the 1830s, he became a wanderer, wife of a professor at Nottingham. They went to supporting himself by painting landscapes

Germany together and married in 1914, after across Europe—he became known for his water-she had been divorced by her first husband. Livcolors—and writing travel journals. He popular-ing abroad, Lawrence finished Sons and Lovers, ized the limerick (see “Versification,” p. 2046), the autobiographical novel at which he had been and, following his example, poets as diverse as working off and on for years. The war brought

Dante Gabriel Rossetti, Algernon Swinburne,

the couple back to England, where his wife’s

Rudyard Kipling, and Alfred, Lord Tennyson, in German origins and Lawrence’s fierce objection

the nineteenth century, and Ogden Nash, in the

to the war gave him trouble with the authorities.

twentieth, employed the form.

More and more—especially after the banning of his next novel, The Rainbow, in 1915—he came

Li-Young Lee (b. 1957), pp. 2011^13

to feel that the forces of modern civilization Li-Young Lee was born in Jakarta, Indonesia, to were arrayed against him. As soon as he could

Chinese parents; his father had been a personal leave England after the war, he sought refuge in physician to Mao Zedong before becoming a

Italy, Australia, Mexico, then again Italy, and political prisoner. Upon fleeing Indonesia, the finally in the south of France, often desperately family lived in Hong Kong, Macau, and Japan ill, restlessly searching for an ideal, or at least a before settling in the United States. Some of the tolerable, community. He died in France, of family's story is recounted in Lee's memoir, The tuberculosis.

Winged Seed: A Remembrance, as well as in his

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2109

three volumes of poems. An American citizen his M.A. at Manchester University and returned with degrees from several U.S. universities, he to Aberystwyth for a teacher's training course.

has taught at Northwestern University and the

Although he wavered at the thought of partici-
State University of New York at Brockport. He participating in World War II, he enlisted in the army lives in Chicago.

in 1940. In 1941, he married Gweno Ellis. Both his collection of short stories, The Last Inspec-

Brad Leithauser (b. 1953), pp. 1998-2000

tion, and his first collection of poetry, Raider's

Brad Leithauser was born and grew up in Dawn, were published in 1942 and focused on Detroit, Michigan. He was educated at Harvard

the experiences of English soldiers. Lewis trav-

College and Harvard Law School. The author of eled with his battalion to India and finally to four volumes of poetry and five novels, he also

Burma to face the Japanese, but under the influ-edited The Norton Book of Ghost Stories and is ences of the war, a love affair, Eastern religions, a frequent reviewer and essayist. Among his and culture shock, he began to feel he was losing recent books are collaborations with his brother, his grasp on his own fate. He committed suicide

the artist Mark Leithauser, who illustrated his by shooting himself. A collection of the poems verse novel, Darlington's Fall, and an alphabet he had written while overseas, Ha! Ha! Among verse book, Lettered Creatures. He teaches at the Trumpets, was published posthumously in Mount Holyoke College and lives in Amherst,

1945, followed by In the Green Tree, a collection Massachusetts.

of short stories and letters, in 1948.

D e n i s e Levertov (1 9 2 3 - 1 9 9 7) , pp. 1677-81 C. D a y
Lewis (1 9 0 4 - 1 9 7 2) , pp. 1448-50

Denise Levertov was born in Ilford, Essex, C(ecil) Day Lewis was born in Ballintubber, Ire-England, and educated at home.
After working

land, and raised in England. He was educated as a nurse in London during World War II, she at Wadham College, Oxford, where he came to immigrated to the United States in 1948. She know the poets W. H. Auden, Louis MacNeice, became a U.S. citizen in 1955, but from 1956 and Stephen Spender. In the 1930s, Day Lewis to 1959 she lived in Mexico. She then taught at became active in left-wing politics and was a
a number of schools, including Stanford Uni-member of the Communist Party for three years, versity from 1981 on. In addition to poetry, she but grew disillusioned when the movement fell published two collections of prose. Her early short of its ideals. His Collected Poems was pub-work was written in a predominantly English

lished in 1954, and he also wrote a series of succinct, but as a result of her associations with the successful detective stories under the pseudonym Imagists William Carlos Williams, Ezra Pound, Nicholas Blake, and several novels under his own name. He translated Virgil, whose influence can be detected in his later poems. Like his fellow “Pylon” poets, as the Oxford group was called, Day Lewis introduced modern issues, such as the effects of the Vietnam War, into his poems and made broad reference to the issues of the day. He was poet laureate from 1968 until his death.

Philip Levine was born in Detroit, Michigan, to Russian Jewish immigrant parents. After graduation from Wayne State University, he worked for Thomas Lodge, the son of a lord mayor of London and his wife, was educated at Merchant Taylors’ School and Trinity College, Oxford. He earned an M.F.A. from the University of Iowa, where entered Lincoln's Inn to study law in 1578, but his teachers included John Berryman. From soon turned to writing; in 1580, he wrote a 1588 until his retirement, he taught at Califormia State University in Fresno. In addition to son's attack on the theater in The School of poetry, he has written criticism and autobiography, and he has translated from the Spanish.

another pamphlet, and in 1584 Lodge retorted Spanish and Latin American poets figure largely with a lively attack on the usurers; in this work, in his imagination. Levine also identifies he depicted the dangers that moneylenders pre-strongly with the working class and its struggles, sented for young spendthrifts. Short of funds, he setting many of his poems in the decimated joined several voyages to the New World. During industrial landscape of Detroit.

one, he wrote Rosalynde, Euphues Golden Legacy (1590), a prose romance with verse inter-

Alun Lewis (1915 - 1944) , pp. 1573-76 ludes that is the source for Shakespeare's As You Like It.

Lodge returned from a later voyage with mining town in South Wales. His parents were another prose romance interspersed with many both schoolteachers, and he excelled in his years lyrics, A Margarite of America. He translated

at Aberystwyth College, coming first in history many French love lyrics (for instance, from and writing for the college magazine. He earned Pierre Ronsard's Amours), and after his conver-

2110 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

sion to Catholicism in 1600 translated prose
Richard Lovelace (1618 - 1658), pp. 472-75

works by ancient authors such as Seneca and

Richard Lovelace was born in Kent, England, to the Jewish historian Josephus. Having turned a wealthy family and was educated at the Char-away from secular poetry after his conversion,

terhouse School and Gloucester Hall, Oxford.

Lodge became a noted physician in London.

He lived the life of a cultured courtier before taking arms for the king in the Scottish expedi-

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow
tions of 1639—40. He was imprisoned by Parlia-
(1807 - 1882), pp. 951-57

ment in 1642 for presenting a Royalist petition,

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was born in Port-and he was jailed again in 1648 after returning land, Maine (then part of Massachusetts). He to England from battles where he had fought was educated at Bowdoin College, where with the French against the Spanish. Although Nathaniel Hawthorne was a classmate and he was released from prison after the king's exe-where he delivered a commencement speech

cution in 1649, Lovelace spent his final years in calling for a national literature. He spent three poverty. One of the group of Royalist writers years in Europe studying foreign languages and, now known as “Cavalier” poets, he was strongly upon his return, was appointed professor of influenced by Ben Jonson. Lovelace is best-modern languages at his alma mater. In 1835, known for occasional poems and lyrics that were he accepted a similar position at Harvard Uni-written mostly during his periods of imprisonment, where he remained until 1854. He had ment; his “To Althea, from Prison” regained already attained fame before the publication of popularity after its inclusion in Percy’s Reliques his first book (1839), and later works such as of Ancient English Poetry (1765), as did his “To Evangeline (1847) and The Song of Hiawatha Lucasta, Going to the Wars.” The name Lucasta (1855) were hugely popular. In 1843, he (from Lux casta, Latin for “pure light”) probably became partially blind, and in 1861 he was badly refers to Lucy Sacheverell, Lovelace’s fiancée, injured as he tried to extinguish the flames that, who married another man after receiving a false when her dress caught fire, burned his second report of Lovelace’s death. She is honored in the wife to death. Longfellow translated Dante, as title of Lovelace’s one volume of poems published during his lifetime (Lucasta, 1649) and The Poets and Poetry of Europe (1845). He also again in the posthumous collection published by wrote fiction and verse drama. Greatly beloved Lovelace's brother (Lucasta Poems Posthume, in his day, though his reputation later declined, 1659).

Longfellow has been credited with popularizing American themes abroad and bringing European themes home.

Amy Lowell was born in Brookline, Massachusetts, into one of Boston's most prominent families; the poet James Russell Lowell was a distant

Michael Longley (b. 1939), pp. 1910-13
Michael Longley was born in Belfast, Northern Ireland, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and the poet Robert Lowell a distant uncle, and the poet Robert Lowell a distant nephew. She was educated at home and mainly in London, where he read Classics. He worked as a self-taught. From 1914 on, she lived with the schoolteacher until 1970, when he joined the actress Ada Dwyer Russell, who inspired many Arts Council of Northern Ireland as combined of her poems. In addition to poetry, Lowell wrote arts director, a post he held until 1991. He has a biography of John Keats and much influential written scripts for BBC radio and is a frequent criticism. Flamboyant and eccentric, a celebrity commentator on the arts in Northern Ireland. A on the lecture circuit, she generously supported fellow of the Royal Society of Literature, he was many struggling artists. Lowell is best-remem-

awarded the Queen's Gold Medal for Poetry in bered for her association with Imagism, of which 2001.

she edited three collections.

A u d r e L o r d e (1 9 3 4 - 1 9 9 2) , pp. 1858-60

Robert Lowell (1 9 1 7 - 1 9 7 7) , pp. 1592-

Audre Lorde was born in New York City to West 1606

Indian parents. She was educated at Hunter Robert Lowell was born in Boston, Massachu-College and Columbia University, where she setts, to a distinguished family; his ancestors earned a master's degree in library science. In include the poets J a m e s Russell Lowell and Amy addition to working as a librarian, she taught at Lowell. Following his family's expectations, he

Tougaloo College and throughout the City Uni-attended Harvard University, but under the versity of New York system. She published advice of the psychiatrist who treated him for numerous collections of poetry and two prose

the first of many breakdowns and manic epi-

memoirs, one about her struggle with cancer sodes, transferred to Kenyon College. There he and the other about her emergent lesbian iden-studied with the poets John Crowe Ransom and tity. Although she once described herself as a Allen Tate, and met lifelong friends and literary “black lesbian feminist warrior poet,” her con-mentors Peter Taylor and Randall Jarrell, in temporary Adrienne Rich added the appellations addition to his first wife, the fiction writer Jean “mother,” “daughter,” and “visionary.”

Stafford. After graduation from Kenyon, Lowell

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2111

moved to Louisiana State University, where he

Norman MacCaig (1910-1996), pp. 1508-

worked with the New Critics Robert Penn Warren and Cleanth Brooks. He was imprisoned as

10

Norman MacCaig was born in Edinburgh, Scot-

a conscientious objector during World War II, land. He was educated at the University of Edinand his fiercely held Catholicism was central in burgh, where he took a degree in Classics,

his early, densely patterned poetry. In the late

During World War II, he served time in prison

1950s, he began writing in an autobiographical

as a conscientious objector. M a c C a i g was a pristrain. The publication of Life Studies (1959) many school teacher until 1970, when he was heralded what would be called the Confessional appointed a lecturer in poetry at the University school of poetry. Later, Lowell wrote loose son-of Stirling. His early work was heavily influenced

net sequences in which he explored the events

by the New Apocalypse movement, in which he

of his first fifty years. Lowell also was a contro-

was a central figure, and which concerned itself

versially freehanded translator of poetry, a critwith the relationship between art and the ical essayist, and the adaptor of several classic unconscious. He later repudiated his work in works for the stage. He held teaching appoint-this mode and began what he called “the long ments at a number of universities, including haul back to lucidity.” He was awarded the Harvard, Oxford, and Essex. He is often consid-Queen’s Gold Medal for Poetry in 1986 and ered the most important American poet of the published his Collected Poems in 1990.

mid-twentieth century. At the time of his sudden death, he was returning to his second wife, the Hugh MacDiarmid (Christopher Murray writer Elizabeth Hardwick, after breaking with G r i e v e) (1 8 9 2 - 1 9 7 8) , pp. 1376-80
his third, Lady Caroline Blackwood.

Hugh MacDiarmid was born in Langholm, Dumfriesshire, in the Scottish Borders. He Malcolm Lowry (1909-1957), pp. 1503-05 worked on several local newspapers before join-Malcolm Lowry was born in Birkenhead, Cheshire, just outside of Liverpool, England. Before

After serving in the Balkans and France, he attending St. Catherine’s College, Cambridge resumed his career in journalism and became (from which he received a B.A.), he worked as a active in Communist and Scottish nationalist crew member on a freighter bound for China politics, involvement in each movement bring-and on a ship sailing to Oslo. He lived in London

ing him difficulty with the other. MacDiarmid and then Paris until 1935, when he moved to was a central figure of the Scottish Renaissance, Hollywood, and then to Cuernavaca, Mexico, a loose collection of artists, writers, and musi-which became the setting of his most famous cians dedicated to reinvigorating Scottish culnovel, Under the Volcano (1947). From 1940 ture and countering the sentimentality and until 1954, he lived in a primitive cabin in Dol-insipidity that had crept into the arts since the larton, British Columbia, and from 1954 until time of Robert Burns. His magazine Scottish his death he lived in Italy and then England.

Chapbook and his collections Sangschaw (1925)

Best-known as a novelist, he wrote plays, film and Penny Wheep (1926) were highly influential scripts, and hundreds of poems, only a handful contributions to the movement. A Drunk Man of which were published during his lifetime.

Looks at the Thistle (1926), an extended dramatic monologue in Scots, though not enthusi-

J o h n Lyly

astically received at the time, is now considered
(1 5 5 4 - 1 6 0 6) , pp. 2 0 7 - 0 8

John Lyly was born in Kent, England, the grand-MacDiarmid's masterpiece. He wrote many of son of William Lyly, the humanist author of a his early poems in “Lallans,” a synthesized lan- famous Latin grammar book. Educated at Mag- guage culled from the dialects of several regions dalen College, Oxford, and later at Cambridge, of Scotland. His linguistic experiments influ- Lyly was employed for a time by Q u e e n Eliza- enced those of, among others, J a m e s Joyce. In beth I’s treasurer, Lord Burghley, and was the 1930s, he wrote politically committed appointed vice-master of the St. Paul’s choris-poetry; from the 1940s on, he increasingly drew ters. He served several terms as a Member of on philosophy, linguistics, and science. Hugh Parliament and possibly hoped to obtain a place MacDiarmid: Complete Poems 1920—1976 was at court. He had gained fame as the author of a published in 1978 and revised in 1993. romance in two parts, Euphues, or the Anatomie of Wit (1578) and Euphues and His England Archibald MacLeish (1892-1982), (1580). Lyly also wrote several plays that com-pp. 1381-82

bined classical and traditional English dramatic Archibald MacLeish was born and raised in Illi- forms. The striking style of these works, which nois. He was educated at Yale University and has given us the term euphuism, entails an elab- Harvard Law School. During World War I, he orate sentence structure marked by balance, volunteered to serve at the front. In the early antithesis, and alliteration, among other rhetor-1920s, he lived in Paris, and throughout the ical effects, as well as fulsome use of imagery 1930s he served on the editorial board of For- drawn mainly from the works of the ancient nat-tune magazine. MacLeish was influential in the uralist Pliny.

upper echelons of American government under

2112 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

Franklin Delano Roosevelt and held the posts of Derek Mahon (b. 1941), pp. 1921-25

librarian of Congress and assistant secretary of

Derek Mahon was born in Belfast, Northern Ire-

state, among others. After leaving government, land, and read French at Trinity College, Dub-

he taught at Harvard University. In addition to

lin. After graduation, he traveled in France, poetry, he wrote prose; verse plays, most Canada, and the United States, supporting him-famously. B. (1957);

radio plays; and the Oscar-self through teaching and odd jobs. He has winning screenplay for The Eleanor Roosevelt worked as a scriptwriter for the BBC, a freelance Stor' (1965). In his later work, MacLeish writer and reviewer, drama critic of the Listener, attempted to reconcile the conflict between his features editor of Vogue, and poetry and fiction famous dictum "A poem should not mean / but editor of the New Statesman. His first collection, be" and his political commitment.

Twelve Poems, was published in 1965, while a collected edition spanning 1962 to 1975

Louis MacNeice (1907-1963), pp. 1485-appeared in 1979. A new edition of Selected Poems was published in 2000 . Mahon has also (Frederick) Louis MacNeice was born in Belfast, Ireland, and raised in Carrickfergus. Educated at Marlborough College and Merton College, Oxford, he became a lecturer in Classics at Birmingham University and, later, at Bedford College, London.

Following the breakup of his first marriage, he traveled to Iceland with his friend W. H. Auden, then to Spain on the eve of — a n d again during—the Spanish Civil War, where he was a successful shoemaker) and attended Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, on a fellowship designated for students preparing to become ministers.

Marlowe, however, spent his university years writing plays (his tragedy, Dido Queen of Carthage, perhaps written with Thomas Nashe, in Athens as director of the British Institute, he

After returning to England in 1940, he joined the B B C as a feature writer and producer, and, except for a year and a half spent in Athens as director of the British Institute, he apparently dates from the 1580s) and working remained with the B B C for the rest of his life. as a spy abroad; when university officials wanted He was a pioneer of radio drama, a notable play- to deny Marlowe his M.A. in 1587, the Privy wright, a translator (of Aeschylus's Agamemnon Council intervened, citing his service to the and Goethe's Faust), and a literary critic. Best- queen in "matters touching the benefit of his known as a poet, however, he was early and country." His contacts at court also seem to have somewhat carelessly identified with the other intervened on his behalf in 1589, when he was Oxford poets—Auden, Stephen Spender, and C.

involved in a murderous brawl but only briefly Day Lewis; but just as he never, as they did, sym- imprisoned; in 1592, when he was arrested for pathized with C o m m u n i s m , he never moved, as counterfeiting coins in the Netherlands but they did, to the political right. The consistency spared imprisonment; and again in 1593, when and integrity of the man characterizes his work. he was arrested on suspicion of dangerous reli- He delights in the surface of the world his senses gious views, having been denounced by his one- apprehend and celebrates "the drunkenness of time friend Thomas Kyd for atheism and things being various," often with wit and a wild treason. In the same year that he received his gaiety. An “unfinished autobiography” called Cambridge M.A., his enormously popular play The Strings Are False and his Collected Poems Tamhurlaine was produced on the London were published in 1965 and 1966.

stage; a sequel soon followed. His other plays include The few of Malta, Doctor Faustus, and the chronicle history Edward IF In addition,

J a y M a c P h e r s o n (b. 1 9 3 1) , pp. 1830-31

Jay

Marlowe translated from the Latin Ovid’s

(J e a n) MacPherso n was born in London.

When she was nine, her family emigrated to Amores and Lucan’s Pharsalia (about the Roman Canada and settled in Newfoundland. Mac-civil wars) and wrote the erotic mythological Pherson was educated at Carleton College, poem Hero and Leander, which was entered in McGill University, University College (London), the Stationers’ Register in September 1593, just and the University of Toronto, where she stud- a few months after the poet’s mysterious death, ied with the literary critic Northrop Frye. She from a knife wound in a barroom brawl.

taught at Toronto from 1957 until 1996.

MacPherson’s first collection of poems, issued

D i o n i s i o D. M a r t i n e z (b. 1 9 5 6) , pp. 2009-when she was twenty-one, was published by 10

Robert Graves’s Seizen Press; her next collec-

Dionisio D. Martinez was born in Cuba. Follow-

tion bore the imprint of her own press, Emblem
ing his family's exile from their homeland in Books. The Boatman (1957) won her national 1965, he lived in northern Spain and southern acclaim and established her reputation as a California. He settled in Tampa, Florida, in poet. She has also published literary criticism

1972 and has worked as a poet in the schools, and a textbook on mythology.

an affiliate writer at the University of Tampa,

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2113

and a collaborating artist with the Y M C A that traces the journey to Iceland taken by W. H.

National Writer's Voice Project. Author of three Auden and Louis MacNeice. Since 1996, he has volumes of poetry, he is also a reviewer and an lived in the U.S. and has taught at Amherst Col-essayist.

lege, Massachusetts; Columbia University; and New School University, New York City. He is Andrew Marvell (1621-1678), pp. 475-89
poetry editor of The New Republic and a Fellow Andrew Marvell was born in Yorkshire, England, of the Royal Society of Literature.

the son of a Calvinist minister and his wife;

moved to Hull on his father's appointment as J o h n M c C r a
e (1 8 7 2 - 1 9 1 8) , p. 1 2 2 5

lecturer at Holy Trinity Church; and was edu-

John M c C r a e was born in Guelph, Ontario, and cated at Hull Grammar School and Trinity Col-educated at the University of Toronto. An lege, Cambridge. He spent the civil war years accomplished physician and researcher, he touring Europe, finding “the C a u s e too good to practiced medicine at several hospitals in the have been fought for,” and on his return moved United States and Canada. M c C r a e served as a in London literary circles, befriending, among medical officer in the Canadian Army during the others, John Milton and Richard Lovelace. Boer War and World War I. In the latter, he was From 1650 until 1652, he tutored the daughter initially stationed at the front in France, then of the Parliamentarian general Fairfax; at Fair-transferred to a military hospital in Boulogne, fax’s house, N u n Appleton, in Yorkshire, Marvell where he contracted a fatal case of double pneu-wrote a number of poems about gardens and monia. He published only a handful of poems in rural life, including the famous “country house”

his lifetime and is best remembered for “In Flan-poem “Upon Appleton.” He became Oliver ders Field,” which he composed during the Sec-Cromwell’s unofficial laureate, and in 1657 ond Battle of Ypres.
replaced Milton as secretary to the Council of State. In 1659, he became a member of Parlia-Herman Melville (1819-1891), pp. 1054- ment for Hull and adroitly managed to retain that seat after the Restoration. He fought for tol-Herman Melvill (the e was added in the 1830s)

eration of religious dissenters in verse and prose was born and raised in New York City. The son satires, many published anonymously, and some of a well-connected merchant who lost his for-attacking the king's corrupt ministers and even tune, he was taken out of school at age twelve the king. Most of Marvell's poems were not pub-when his father died. In 1839, he sailed to Livlished until after his death, the lyrics in 1681, erpool, England, as a cabin boy, and this voyage the satires in 1689.

inculcated in him an enduring love for the sea.

In 1841, he sailed on a whaler, but jumped ship

The Massachusetts Bay Psalm Book

in the Marquesas Islands. Captured by canni-

(1 6 4 0) , pp. 391-93

balistic natives, he escaped and went to Tahiti,

The Bay Psalm Book, also known as The Whole where he worked as a field laborer, and to Hon-Book of Psalms Faithfully Translated into English olulu, where he enlisted as a seaman. In 1843, Metre, was the authoritative hymnal of the Mashe returned home and began writing romantic sachusetts Bay Colony and the first book pub-novels based on his exotic adventures. His early lished in America. Translated by Richard work sold well and won him a wide following, Mather, John Eliot, and Thomas Weld, this but he thought little of it. His masterpieces, work replaced a version produced in England including the novel Moby-Dick (1851), were that the Bay Puritans felt to be corrupted by the critical and commercial failures, and his poems translators' willingness to employ poetic license were largely ignored. His 1866 volume of poems, in their renderings. The Puritan translators, by Battle-Pieces, is now considered some of the contrast, took scrupulous pains to render the greatest verse inspired by the Civil War. An epic poems as they appeared in the original, devoid poem, Clarel, followed in 1876. Melville worked of added ornamentation. "God's Altar needs not from 1866 on as a customs inspector in New our Polishings," John Cotton declared in his York City, and he died in near obscurity and dire preface to the work. The book enjoyed a wide poverty. At his death, the novella Billy Budd, circulation for nearly a century and was Sailor was left not quite finished. reprinted numerous times.

George Meredith (1828-1909), pp. 1107-

Glyn Maxwell (b. 1962), pp. 2016-20 10

Glyn Maxwell was born in Welwyn Garden City,

George Meredith was born in Portsmouth,

England, and educated at Worcester College,

England. He received little education except for Oxford, and Boston University. Tale of the two years at a Moravian academy at Neuweid, Mayor's Son, his first volume of poems, was pub-in Germany. In 1845, he was apprenticed to a lished in 1990 and was followed by other well-lawyer, but found the work uncongenial. He received collections. He has also written plays published his first poem in 1849 and was the for radio and the stage, a novel, and, with Simon model for Henry Wallis's painting The Death of Armitage, Moon Country (1996), a travel book Thomas Chatterton (1851). Needing money, he 2 1 1 4 / B I O G R A P H I C A L S K E T C H E S turned to journalism, then to publishing; he was W. S. Merwin (b. 1927), pp. 1743-45

a reader for Chapman and Hall from 1860 until

William Stanley Merwin was born in New York City and raised in Union City, New Jersey, at Box Hill, Surrey. Like his admirer Thomas and Scranton, Pennsylvania. He was educated

Hardy, he was better-known for his novels— at Princeton University, where he studied with such as The Egoist (1879) and Diana of the the poets John Berryman and R. P. Blackmur.

Crossways (1885)—than for his poetry, but pre-

He later traveled through Europe, and in Mal-ferred the latter to the former. His most endurlorca, Spain, was a tutor to the poet Robert ing work of verse is Modern Love (1862), a cycle

Graves's son. For several years, he worked as a of fifty sonnets about the breakup of a marriage.

translator at the BBC in London, and from 1951

Its inception was autobiographical—Meredith's until 1953 he was poetry editor at The Nation.

marriage to the widowed daughter of Thomas
He has since lived in, among other places, Mex-Love Peacock collapsed in 1857 when she left ico and France, and currently resides in Hawaii.
him for Wallis—but he significantly changed
In addition to lyric poetry, Merwin has written real events and drafted protagonists distinct book-length poems and several plays, and has from himself and his wife for the work. In his translated Latin, Greek, French, Spanish, Ital-later years, he was a much-respected man of let-ian, Chinese, and Japanese poetry into English.
ters, and he was awarded the Order of Merit in
In addition to a version of Sir Gawain and the 1905.

Green Knight, he has published essays and memoirs. He continues to be one of America's most prolific poets.

W i l l i a m M e r e d i t h (b . 1 9 1 9) , p p . 1 6 0 8 - 0 9

William Meredith was born in New York City and was educated at Princeton University. After working as a reporter for

C h a r l o t t e M e w (1 8 6 9 - 1 9 2 8) , p p . 1 2 1 6 - 1 9

The New York Times in the early 1940s, he spent five years in the armed

Charlotte Mew was born in London and forces, mainly as a naval aviator in the Pacific attended Gower Street School. In her thirties, theater of World War II. He reenlisted to fly mis-she wrote short stories; in her forties, she turned sions in the Korean War. His academic career to poetry. Her first collection, The Farmer's included teaching posts at, among other Bride, was published in 1916. Her work was schools, Princeton, the University of Hawaii,

much admired by poets such as John Masefield, and Connecticut College. He has been an opera Walter de la Mare, and Thomas Hardy, who critic for the
became a close friend and once called her "far Hudson Review, poetry consultant to the Library of Congress, and a chancellor of and away the best living woman poet." Her life the Academy of American Poets. In addition to was punctuated by difficulty and sadness. She poetry, he has published criticism and a libretto;
watched two siblings succumb to insanity;
he has edited several collections of poetry; and looked after her demanding, widowed mother;
he has translated the poetry of Guillaume Apol-nursed her sister, who had developed inoperable linaire.
cancer; and suffered unrequited love for Ella D'Arcy, assistant editor of the Yellow Book, and for the novelist May Sinclair. She entered a James Merrill (1926-1995), pp. 1716-28 nursing home in 1927, but committed suicide a J a m e s Merrill was born and raised in New York

short time later.

City, a son of Charles Merrill, founding partner of the Merrill Lynch investment firm, and his wife. He was educated at Amherst College. Near Edna St. Vincent Millay (1892-1950), the end of World War II, he interrupted his pp. 1 382-86 studies to serve a year with the United States

Edna St. Vincent Millay was born in Rockland, Army. In 1954, he settled in Stonington, Con- Maine. In 1912, she gained national attention necticut, and eventually divided his time when her precocious poem "Renaissance" was between Connecticut and Florida, although he published in The Lyric Year, an anthology of spent long periods in Greece. In addition to contemporary poetry. After her graduation from poetry, he published novels, plays, a collection

Vassar College, Millay moved to Greenwich

of criticism, and a memoir. Widely admired from Village, where her literary reputation quickly the outset of his career, Merrill developed a flourished. She associated with many of the poetic that was autobiographical without being prominent artists, writers, and political radicals

"confessional." His elegant, witty, highly of her day, including the poets Hart Crane and wrought style reflected the influence of Marcel

Wallace Stevens, the playwright Eugene

Proust and Henry James. His epic, The Changing

O'Neill, the editor Max Eastman, and the critic

Light at Sandover (1977—1982), a seventeen-Edmund Wilson. In 1925, she settled with her thousand-line trilogy that draws from com-husband in Austerlitz, New York, where she munications he received on a Ouija board lived for the rest of her life. Witty, sometimes with his partner, David Jackson, is consid-cynical, always polished, she is unusual in ered one of the major achievements of having produced some of the most traditional as twentieth-century poetry.
well as most modern verse of her day.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2115

John Milton (1608-1674), pp. 394-451

N. Scott Momaday (b. 1934), pp. 1861-62

John Milton was born in London, the son of Sara

N. Scott Momaday was born in Lawton, and John Milton. The latter earned his living by Oklahoma, a member of the Kiowa Native composing music and working as a “scrivener,” American tribe. He was educated at the Univer-that is, drawing up contracts and performing sity of New Mexico and Stanford University.

other business tasks requiring writing. The Since then, he has taught at Stanford, the Uni-young Milton was educated at St.
Paul’s School

versity of California at Santa Barbara, the Uni-

and Christ’s College, Cambridge, where he versity of California at Berkeley, and the received his B.A. in 1629 and his M.A. in 1632,

University of Arizona at Tucson. Known primar-and where his “niceness of nature” and “honest

ily as a novelist, he is also a landscape artist.

haughtiness” (and, perhaps, his flowing locks), Although his work is rooted in the Native Amer-earned him the nickname “the lady of Christ’s.”
ican literary tradition, it reveals broader influ-According to his own testimony in the volume ences.

of the early poems he published (and carefully arranged) in 1645, his earliest poetic endeavors

Lady Mary Wortley Montagu (1689-were two paraphrases of Psalms done when he 1762), pp. 639-45

was fifteen. During his university years, Milton

Lady Mary Wortley Montagu was born Lady wrote various poems in both English and Latin,

Mary Pierrepont, daughter of a wealthy Whig and his 1645 book opens with “On the Morning peer who became duke of Kingston in 1715 and of Christ’s Nativity,” written in 1629, while he

of Lady Mary Fielding, who died when her was still at Cambridge. From 1632 until 1638, daughter was thirteen. Educated at home, Lady he lived at his parents’ house, studying and writ-

Mary taught herself Latin. In 1712, she eloped ing, supported by his father. During this period, with Edward Wortley Montagu, whom she fol-

he wrote his masque, Comus, in collaboration lowed to Turkey when he was appointed ambas-with the musician Henry Lawes; performed in sador to Constantinople in 1716. Her letters

1634, it was not published under Milton's name from her travels were witty and immensely popular until 1645. His first published poem was "On Shakespeare," an epitaph printed in the Second Folio (1632) of Shakespeare's plays. In November of 1637, the year his mother died, Milton largely to escape her by then loveless marriage, published his pastoral elegy "Lycidas" in a volume and lived in Europe, mostly Italy, for the rest of his life, returning home only to die. She was a student who had drowned. In 1638, Milton traveled to France and then to Italy, where he met, among others, the astronomer and physicist Galileo. Upon returning to England, he bitterly mocked her in The Dunciad and as the civil wars, he began the career as political writer that led him to advocate freedom of Richard Steele, founders of the Spectator; were divorce (in pamphlets published soon after Milton's first publishers, and the writers William ton's own hasty marriage, to Mary Powell, had Congreve and John Gay were acquaintances. In failed in 1642); freedom from censorship of the "Epistle from Mrs. Yonge to Her Husband," she press (Areopagitica, 1644); and freedom from critiques sexual inequality and advises women what he and others considered tyranny. An trapped in loveless marriages to take lovers, as ardent supporter of Oliver Cromwell's republishe had in her later years.

can regime, Milton supported the execution of King Charles in 1649 and became Cromwell's "secretary for foreign tongues" that same year. John Montague (b. 1929), pp. 1783-86

As an official defender of the new regime, Mil-

John Montague was born in Brooklyn, New ton wrote many prose tracts during the 1650s, York, where his Irish parents had fled in 1920

despite having become completely blind by to avoid prosecution for Republican activities 1652, the same year that Mary (who had (his father had reputedly burned the homes of returned to him in 1645, and with whom he had absentee landlords), and was brought up by his three daughters) died. He remarried in 1655, to aunts on a farm in Garvaghey, County Tyrone, Katherine Woodstock, but she died in childbirth

Northern Ireland. He was educated at Univerin 1658. With the restoration of the monarchy sity College, Dublin; Yale University; and the in 1660, Milton was in danger of execution;

Universities of Iowa and California at Berkeley.

friends, including the writer Andrew Marvell. He worked as a journalist before becoming a lecturer, and Milton was able to return to teaching poetry at University College, Cork, and writing poetry during his final years. In 1663, he

he has been a visiting lecturer at several institutions. He married a third time, in 1667 he published Paradise Lost, and in 1671 he published a volume of poetry. While literary director of Claddagh Records containing his "brief epic," Paradise Regained, (from 1962 until 1975), he organized recordings and his closet drama, Samson Agonistes.

of poets such as Robert Graves, Seamus Heaney, Thomas Kavanagh, Thomas Kinsella, and

2116 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

Hugh MacDiarmid. His own poetry is to be his first play. The Search after Happiness, a found in collections such as Forms of Exile drama for schoolgirls, at age eighteen. Originally (1958), A Chosen Light (1967), and New published in Bristol in 1762, it was republished Selected Poems (1990). He has also published in London in 1773 and became hugely popular.

short stories, a play, and a novella, and has his tragedy The Inflexible Captive was printed translated Gaelic writing and edited collections with a postscript by the famous actor David Garrick of Irish verse.

Garrick, who staged the play at Bath in 1775.

Another play, Percy, was performed at Covent Garden in 1777 to great acclaim. In addition to Marianne Moore (1887-1972), pp. 1328-

Garden in 1777 to great acclaim. In addition to 36

Garrick, More met Samuel Johnson; Johnson's

Marianne Moore was born in Kirkwood, Missouri, and was raised in Carlisle, Pennsylvania. She was also introduced to the "Bluestockings," a circle of women centered on Elizabeth Mon-lisle Commercial College; taught business skills and commercial law at the U.S. Industrial School, in Carlisle; and traveled to Europe. Moore lived all her adult life with her mother, first in New Jersey, then in Greenwich Village, then in Brooklyn. Her first collection of poor children in reading the Bible, but she was poetry, Poems (1921), was brought out by the against "overeducating" the lower classes. She wrote forty-nine pamphlets for the Cheap Mawr, and Bryher (Winifred Ellerman). Repository Tracts series and published her Strictures on the Modern System of Female Education in 1799. At her death, she was known as a teacher, a secretary, and a librarian, left £ 3 0 , 0 0 0 to more than seventy charities.

and she edited the influential magazine Dial from 1925 until 1929, when it ceased publica-

Edwin M o r g a n (b. 1 9 2 0) , pp. 1618-20

tion. In her poetry, sometimes written in syllab-

Edwin Morgan was born in Glasgow, Scotland,

les, she united precise observation, and and educated at the University of Glasgow, deliberately prosaic speech that was nonetheless interrupting his studies to serve in the Royal highly inventive, with ornate diction and elabo-

Army Medical Corps, but returning in 1947 as rate patterns. Her friend Elizabeth Bishop was a lecturer. His first collection, A Vision of Cath-

among the many poets on whom she had a pro-

kin Braes (1952), was followed by many others, found influence. She is considered one of the including Sonnets from Scotland (1985) and major modernists.

From the Video Box (1986). He is best-known for his ingenious experimental and “concrete”

D o m M o r a e s (b. 1 9 3 8) , pp. 1883 - 85

poems. He was a visiting professor at Strath-

Dom(inic) Moraes was born in Bombay, India.

clyde University from 1987 until 1990. He has

He moved to England in 1954 and matriculated translated Beowulf as well as the work of numer-

at J e s u s College, Oxford, then published his first

ous poets, including several Latin Americans collection of poetry at nineteen. With that book, whose magical-realist mode has influenced his

A Beginning (1957), he became the youngest own work. He has also published many essays poet to win the Hawthornden Prize. He has

and reviews and has edited several collections of since been a journalist, a scriptwriter, and an poetry, prose, and drama.

editor; has worked for the United Nations Fund for Populations; and has served as an honorary William Morris (1 8 3 4 - 1 8 9 6) , pp. 113,9-44

colonel with the United States Army, in Viet-

William Morris was born in Walthamstow, nam. He eventually returned to India, where he

England, and educated at Exeter College, married the actress Leela Naidu. In addition to Oxford, where he became lifelong friends with poetry, Moraes has published an acclaimed the painter and designer Edward Burne-Jones.

prose autobiography called My Father's Son Their circle was strongly influenced by the Pre-

(1968) and collections of essays on writing and Raphaelite school, which they encountered in on life in India and Pakistan.

about 1854. After graduation from Oxford, Morris joined an architectural firm, but left to paint

Hannah More (1745-1833), pp. 7 07-11

and to design the furnishings sold by his com-

Hannah More was born in Stapleton, Gloucespany Morris, Marshall, Faulkner and Co. (later tershire, England, the daughter of Jacob More, Morris and Co.). Producing his own furniture a master of a Free School, and his wife, Mary out of frustration at not being able to find any-Grace, a farmer's child. Sent to the boarding thing suitable for the striking Red House school opened in Bristol by her two older sisters, designed for him by Philip Webb, Morris started she there learned French, Italian, Spanish, and a revival of the decorative arts and a revolution Latin, and eventually joined the staff. She wrote in Victorian taste. He founded the Society for BIOGRAPHICALSKETCHES / 2117

the Preservation of Ancient Buildings, joined mus Heaney, Michael Longley, and other poets the Social Democratic Federation, on its dissoof the Belfast "Group." Muldoon worked for the lution assumed the leadership of the Socialist B B C in Belfast until the mid-1980s, when he League, and wrote and lectured for the cause of became a freelance writer and moved to the Socialism with unflagging enthusiasm. As a poet
United States, where he has taught at a number (and a translator), he drew on the traditions of of institutions. He was professor of poetry at Icelandic, Anglo-Saxon, and classical literature.
Oxford from 1999 to 2004, and is now professor He combined the two strands of his talent in of humanities and creative writing at Princeton.

1891, when he founded the Kelmscott Press,
He has written a children's book, translated producing books designed for beauty rather than Gaelic verse, and collaborated on the opera for economy.

Shining Brow.

Howard Moss (1922-1987), pp. 1659-61

Les Murray (b. 1938), pp. 1885-90

Howard Moss was born in New York City. He

Les Murray was born in the Nabiac, New South received his undergraduate education at the University of New South Wales, Australia, and raised on a dairy farm in University of Michigan and Wisconsin Univer-nearby Bunyah. After studying arts and modern society and did postgraduate work at Harvard and languages at the University of Sydney, he

Columbia Universities. During World War II, he worked as a translator of foreign scholarly and served in the War Information Office, and technical materials at the Australian National between 1945 and 1948 he was an editor at University before embarking on a career as a

Time magazine and the Junior Bazaar. In 1948, freelance writer. He has been writer-in-residence at the University of New York where he joined the staff of The New Yorker, where he residence at various institutions. In 1975, he served as poetry editor for nearly forty years and repurchased part of the family farm in Bunyah, helped establish the reputations of a wide range

and in 1985 he returned there to live. An excepof poets, from Theodore Roethke to Mark tionaly prolific writer, he has published, in addi-Strand. He published poetry, light verse, plays, tion to poetry, several collections of critical and criticism, and he edited several anthologies essays and an acclaimed verse novel. He has of poetry. He also taught at, among other been coeditor of Poetry Australia; poetry editor schools, Barnard College and Columbia Univer-at Angus & Robertson; and, since 1991, literary sity.

editor of Quadrant. He compiled The New

Oxford Book of Australian Verse and The Anthol-

Edwin Muir (1 8 8 7 - 1 9 5 9) , pp. 1 3 3 6 - 4 0

ogy of Australian Religious Verse. His Collected

Edwin Muir was born in the Orkney Islands. In Poems was published in 1999.

1901, his family moved to Glasgow in search of work, but within five years both of his parents

O g d e n N a s h (1 9 0 2 - 1 9 7 1) , pp. 1 4 3 7 - 3 8

and two of his brothers had died due to the harsh

Ogden Nash was born in Rye, New York. He conditions in the city's slums and sweatshops.

attended Harvard University for one year, then

Muir left school at age eleven and worked in a taught French, sold bonds, and wrote copy for beer-bottling factory, several law offices, and a streetcar advertisements, before embarking on a factory that burned bones to charcoal. In 1919, literary career. In 1929, he joined the staff of

he moved to London and began a literary career.

the fledgling New Yorker magazine. In addition

He was assistant to A. R. Orage on the New Age

to writing poetry, Nash wrote children's books, and reviewed for the Athenaeum and The Scots-

collaborated on several musicals, the most suc-

man. From 1921 until 1956, he and his wife, successful of which was the Broadway hit One

Willa, moved between Europe, England, and Touch of Venus

(1943), and lectured across the Scotland, eventually settling in Cambridgeshire,

country. He was one of America's funniest and England. Muir's First Poems was published in most popular poets.

1925. He was a prolific reviewer and critic, and collections of his writings include Latitudes Thomas Nashe

(1567-1601), pp. 282-84

(1924) and Essays on Literature and Society Thomas Nashe, the son of a poor curate and his (1949). He worked for the British Council from wife, became a fellowship student at St. John's

1942 to 1950 in Edinburgh, Prague, and Rome,

College, Cambridge, and was graduated in and he was Charles Eliot Norton Professor at 1886. After touring France and Italy, he joined Harvard University from 1955 to 1956. The the circle of

London writers that included Rob-Complete Poems of Edwin Muir was published ert Greene. His first published work, a preface in 1991.

to Greene's Menaphon (1589), was an indictment of contemporary drama and poetry; his

Paul Muldoon (b. 1951), pp. 1979- 85

second, The Anatomy of Absurdity (1589),

Paul Muldoon was born in Portadown, County

attacked the artificiality of recent romances.

Armagh, Northern Ireland, and was raised in When Richard Harvey accused Nashe of pre-The Moy, a small village featured prominently sumption in writing the preface to Menaphon, in many of his poems. He was educated at Nashe replied with a tract called Pierce Penni-Queen's University, Belfast, where he met Sea- less, His Supplication to the Devil (1592). When

2118 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

Gabriel Harvey wrote a contentious description

Sean O'Brien (b. 1952), pp. 1992-94

of the end of Robert Greene's life in Four Letters

Sean O'Brien was born in London and raised in (1592), Nashe replied in Four Letters Confuted Hull.

Educated at Selwyn College, Cambridge, (1593). The exchange was finally ended, in and the Universities of Birmingham, Hull, and 1599, by Episcopal decree and confiscation of

Leeds, he has taught at Sussex University and the adversaries' publications. Nashe's other Sheffield Hallam University. He was Northern works include The Unfortunate Traveler (1594), Arts Literary Fellow from 1992 to 1994 and was which has been called the first "picaresque" a visiting writer at the University of Odense, novel in English, and the plays Summer's Last Denmark, and at Hokudai University, Sapporo, Will (1592) and (with Ben Jonson) The Isle of Japan. His collection Ghost Train won the For-

Dogs (1597), which was suppressed for its allegward Prize for Poetry. He was cofounder and editor of the literary magazine The Printer's and was known for his scabrous and seditious content. Though his reputation was based on his stinging wit and his Devil and reviews regularly for The Times Lit-rhetorical skills (he coined many new words in erary Supplement and other periodicals. He has written his prose works), Nashe also wrote fine lyrics. He has been commissioned by the B B C to produce a radio dramatization of Yevgeny Zamayatin's novel We, and his verse version of Aristophanes' The Birds was staged at the National Theatre in 1977.

2002. His critical work, The Deregulated Muse,

Howard Nemerov was born and raised in New York City. He brings together his essays on contemporary British and Irish poetry. He was the brother of the photographer Diane Arbus. Upon graduation from Harvard University, he entered the Canadian Air Force to fight in World War II and later transferred to the United States Air Force. After the war, he returned to New York and worked as an editor at Furioso magazine for one year. During

Frank O'Hara (1926-1966), pp. 1728-31

Force to fight in World War II and later transferred to the United States Air Force. After the war, he returned to New York and worked as an editor at Furioso magazine for one year. During South Pacific. He was educated at Harvard University and the University of Michigan, and in among other schools, Hamilton College, Bennington College, Brandeis University, and (from 1951 he settled in New York. A fringe member of the Beats and a central figure in the so-called 1969 on) Washington University. From 1963 New York school of poets, whose practitioners until 1964, he served as consultant in poetry to included John Ashbery, Kenneth Koch, and the Library of Congress. Influenced by Yeats, James Schuyler, he enjoyed a long association with Eliot, and Auden, Nemerov was known for his wit, his use of irony and paradox, and his mas- served for a time as associate curator) and was tery of form. Both his serious and his more friends with Abstract Expressionist artists such humorous poems asked thorny questions. In as Willem De Kooning, Jackson Pollock, and addition to poetry, he wrote fiction. He was Franz Kline. He also edited Art News from 1953 named poet laureate of the United States in until 1955. Like the painters he admired, 1988.

O'Hara stressed the process of composition. His poems are filled with the bric-a-brac of contemporary life and pay tribute to popular figures Norman Nicholson (1914-1987), pp. 1561- such as Billie Holiday. His exuberant tone continues to make his work very popular.

Norman Nicholson was born in Millom, Cumberland, in the Lake District of England. Except

Charles Olson (1910-1970), pp. 1511-15

for the years 1930—32, which he spent in a Charles Olson was born in Worcester, Massachusetts, and educated at Wesleyan, Harvard, for tuberculosis, he lived in Millom all his life, and Yale Universities. In 1948, he began his in a small apartment above the tailor shop where association with the experimental Black Mounhis father had worked. His Collected Poems—tain College, which he directed from 1951 until incorporating seven volumes published between it closed, in 1956. During Olson's tenure, the 1944 and 1984 and some unpublished work—

composer John Cage, the choreographer Merce appeared in 1994. He also wrote an autobiog-

Cunningham, and the artist Franz Kline taught raphy and several prose works about the Lake

at the school; poets Robert Creeley, Robert

District. Nicholson identified his main theme as Duncan, and Denise Levertov studied there; and the “sense of community, of organic relationship

writers Allen Ginsberg, Jack Kerouac, and Louis

between man and his environment”; continuity

Zukofsky published early work in its influential and change are other important themes in his magazine, The Black Mountain Review. In work, the imagery of which is drawn predomi-

1957, Olson settled in Gloucester, Massachusetts, and began work on the “Maximus” poems, “reconverted” to Christianity—and the natural world.

1950 essay, Olson dubbed his poetry “Projective

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2119

Verse.” Believing that art “does not seek to describe but to enact,” he attempted to convey killed in action one week before the signing of the armistice. Only five of his poems were published in his lifetime, but his posthumous reputation as a “poet’s poet” grew with successive

Michael Ondaatje (b. 1943), pp. 1933-36

Michael Ondaatje was born in Colombo, Ceylon (now Sri Lanka), to parents of Sinhalese, Tamil, and Dutch origin, and was raised in England

editions of his work by four poets—Sassoon

(now Sri Lanka), to parents of Sinhalese, Tamil, (1920), Edmund Blunden (1931), Cecil Day Lewis (1963), and Jon Stallworthy (1983)—culminating with Benjamin Britten’s setting of where he studied at Bishop’s University, the some of his poems in the composer’s War Requiem—University of Toronto, and Queen’s University.

uiem (1962).

Ondaatje has taught at the University of Western Ontario and York University, has worked as

P. K. Page (b. 1916), pp. 1583-85

an editor at Coach House Press, and has P. K. Page was born in Swanage, Dorset, directed several films. In addition to poetry, he England. Her family emigrated to Canada when has written memoirs, plays, literary criticism,

she was three years old and settled in Red Deer, and highly acclaimed fiction, including the Alberta. After high school, Page worked as a novel The English Patient. He also has edited a shop assistant, a radio actress, a filing clerk, a collection of long poems and several volumes of researcher, and a scriptwriter. She then taught short stories. Much of his recent poetry is set in poetry at the Writers' Workshop in Toronto and his native Sri Lanka.

at the University of Victoria. From 1942 until 1945, she worked on the editorial board of John Ormond (1923-1990), pp. 1681-82

Preview magazine. From 1953 until 1964, she

John Ormond (Thomas) was born at Dunvant accompanied her husband, an ambassador, to near Swansea, Glamorgan, Wales. He was edu-

Australia, Brazil, and Mexico, and while living cated at the University College, Swansea, and abroad she resumed her earlier studies in paint-studied drawing at the Swansea School of Art.

ing. In addition to poetry, Page has written

After graduation, he worked as a journalist from essays, short stories, a romance, and a memoir 1945 until 1955, then joined the B B C as a television news assistant. He worked as a documentary filmmaker from 1957 until his retirement, Michael Palmer (b. 1943), pp. 1936-38

and is best-remembered for the series of films Michael Palmer was born and raised in New he produced on Welsh poets and writers. York City and educated at Harvard University.

Ormond was first published in 1943, but grew

He has taught at several schools, such as the increasingly dissatisfied with his poems and New College of California, and has lived most largely stopped writing until the 1960s, when

of his life in the San Francisco area. In addition new work showed that he had found a new voice.
to writing poetry, Palmer has translated French
He subsequently established himself as one of literature and literary theory and has collabo-the foremost Welsh poets of his generation.

rated on books with painters and dancers. Like the artists and theorists he admires—including

Eric Ormsby (b. 1941), pp. 19 25-26

Gertrude Stein, Louis Zukofsky, Robert Creeley,
Eric Ormsby was born in Atlanta, Georgia, and the Surrealists
—Palmer in his work fre-raised in Florida, and later moved to Canada.

quently examines the ways in which words sig-
Educated at Columbia, Rutgers, and Princeton

Eric Ormsby (b. 1941), pp. 19 25-26

Gertrude Stein, Louis Zukofsky, Robert Creeley,

Eric Ormsby was born in Atlanta, Georgia, and the Surrealists

—Palmer in his work fre-raised in Florida, and later moved to Canada.

quently examines the ways in which words sig-

Educated at Columbia, Rutgers, and Princeton

nify meaning. As a L = A = N = G = U = A = G = E Universities, as well as the University of Penn-poet, he regards the reader as a cocreator of the sylvania, he is a specialist in Islamic theology text.
and classical Arabic language and literature.

The author of scholarly works and five volumes

D o r o t h y Parke r (1 8 9 3 - 1 9 6 7) , pp. 1391-92

of poetry, among them Daybreak at the Straits Dorothy Parker was born and raised in New York (2004), he lives in Montreal, where he is a proCity. Early in her career, she worked for a num-

fessor at McGill University's Institute of Islamic ber of prominent magazines, including Vogue Studies.

and Vanity Fair, where she developed her reputation as an acerbic wit, and The New Yorker, Wilfred Owen (1893-1918), pp. 1386-91

for which she wrote the popular "Constant Wilfred Owen was born in Oswestry, Shrop-Reader" column and many short stories. In the shire, England. He left school in 1911, served 1930s, she and her second husband, Alan as assistant to a vicar in Oxfordshire, and taught Campbell, moved to Hollywood and wrote English in Bordeaux. In 1915, he returned to screenplays; with Lillian Hellman and Dashiell England to enlist in the army and was sent to Hammett, Parker helped found the Screen Writ-the front in France. Two years later, having been ers' Guild. In the 1920s and 1930s, she became invalided to the Craiglockhart War Hospital active in leftist politics, and she was blacklisted with shellshock, he met Siegfried Sassoon, who during the McCarthy era. Considered one of the encouraged his work. After returning to combat foremost wits of her day, she belonged to a

2 1 2 0 / B I O G R A P H I C A L S K E T C H E S

famous literary lunch group that called itself the page, Philips gained fame, eventually becoming Algonquin Club. Parker was as celebrated for the best-known female poet of her age. An unauher short stories as for her poetry, but she spent thorized edition of her poems (By the Incompa- her later years in isolation in New York.

rable Mrs. K. P.) appeared in 1664; suppressed four days later, it closely resembles the author-George Peele (1557-1596), p. 221
ized edition, published in 1667.

George Peele was the son of J a m e s Peele, a clerk of Christ's Hospital who wrote pageants as well Robert Pinsky (b. 1 9 4 0) , pp. 1913-16

as a book on accounting, and his wife. After tak-Robert Pinsky was born in Long Branch, New

ing a B.A. and an M.A. from Oxford, Peele Jersey. He was educated at Rutgers University moved to London and made a bare living from

and Stanford University, where he studied writing pageants, plays, and poems. He is por-under the poet Yvor Winters. He has taught at Wellesley College, the University of California anonymous book Merry Conceited Jest of at Berkeley, and Boston University, and served George Peele (1 6 0 7) , but the portrait seems to bear little relation to Peele's actual life. While as poetry editor of The New Republic and Slate. In addition to his own poetry, Pinsky has published volumes of criticism, a translation of Euripides' Iphigenia, and he later may have worked as an actor in London. His first play, The Arraignment of Hass of the writings of Polish poet Czeslaw Milosz. Poet laureate of the United States from 1997 to 2000, he had during his tenure an especially important role in popularizing the genre (including a historical one on Edward II that through his "Favorite Poems" project and other may predate Christopher Marlowe's play on the programs.

same tragic king), Peele uses blank-verse lines and lyric interludes in ways that anticipate Sylvia Plath (1932-1963), pp. 1836-45

Shakespeare. Peele also used blank verse effectively in nondramatic poems, many of them pub-

She was educated at Smith College and Newn-lished in Polyhymnia (1590) and The Honor of ham College, Cambridge, where she met her the Garter (1 5 9 3) .

husband, the poet Ted Hughes. In 1953, Plath suffered a bout of depression, attempted sui-Katherine Philips (1632-1664), pp. 526-cide, and was hospitalized for six months; these 30

events form the gist of her novel, The Bell far

Katherine Philips, the daughter of a London (1963). In 1958, she attended Robert Lowell's merchant and his wife, first attended school in verse-writing seminar at Boston University, Hackney, England, then moved to Pembroke-where the poet Anne Sexton was a fellow stu-shire when her widowed mother remarried, in dent. In 1963, following the dissolution of her 1646. Katherine was married to J a m e s Philips, marriage, she suffered another bout of depresthirty-eight years her senior, when she was six-sion and committed suicide. Like Lowell and teen, and spent twelve quiet years in Wales—

Sexton, Plath is generally considered a "Confes-the culture of which she celebrated in her sional" poet. As Robert Lowell writes in his pref-poems on the Welsh language
—while her hus-

ace to Ariel, the posthumously published band served as a member of Oliver Cromwell's collection that established her reputation, in her Parliament. Philips claimed that she “never writ poems “Sylvia Plath becomes ... one of those a line in my life with intention to have it super-real, hypnotic, great classical heroines.” printed,” but her poetry was being circulated before 1651, when Henry Vaughan eulogized Edgar Allan Poe (1809-1849), pp. 975-81 her in his Olor Iscanus (1651). In 1655, her son Edgar Poe was born in Boston to itinerant Hector was born; when he died two weeks later, actors, orphaned in 1811, and then raised by she lamented his death in an epitaph. Known as John Allan, a Richmond merchant. He attended “the matchless Orinda” in her circle of friends the University of Virginia for one year. When he and in the wider literary world, she named her ran up gambling debts, his adoptive father with-schoolmate Mary Aubrey “Rosania” in several drew support, and Poe enlisted in the army. poems and addressed her friend Anne Owen as Although he received an appointment to West “Lucasia” in others. Despite being born, and Point, he failed at military life. He then having married, a Puritan, Philips had Royalist embarked on a literary career, which took him sympathies and contributed panegyrics to the to Baltimore, Richmond, Philadelphia, and New returning monarchy, although her husband’s York. A brilliant storyteller whose 1839 collec-fortunes declined after the Restoration. On a tion

Tales of the Grotesque and Arabesque, a pub-visit to Ireland in 1662, Philips translated Pierre

lishing failure, gave way to internationally

Corneille's La Morte de Pompee, which was successful poems, especially "The Raven," in the staged and printed in Dublin the next year.

1840s, he won numerous prizes and published

Though only her initials appeared on the title

in respected journals, but earned too little

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2121

money to survive. He and his young wife nearly translations, After Martial (1972). A two-volume starved, and she died of tuberculosis in 1845. Collected Poems was published in 1999.

Poe, who had struggled long with mental instability, tried in 1849 to stop drinking, but his

Ezra P o u n d (1 8 8 5 - 1 9 7 2) , pp. 1295-1310

death was probably of alcohol poisoning. He Ezra Pound was born in Hailey, Idaho, and considered poems "written solely for the poem's raised in a suburb of Philadelphia. He was edu-sake" superior to those written to convey, for cated at Hamilton College and at the University instance, "the precepts of Duty." His poems of Pennsylvania, where he studied languages were greatly appreciated by the French Symbol-and became lifelong friends with the poet Wilists and other adherents of "pure poetry," such liam Carlos Williams. In 1908, Pound moved to

as Dante Gabriel Rossetti, Algernon Swinburne,

London, where he met prominent artists and

and Ernest Dowson.

writers, including W. B. Yeats, for whom he worked as secretary. He also championed the careers of promising writers such as Robert Alexander Pope (1688 - 1744), pp. 596 - 638

Frost, T. S. Eliot, and James Joyce. Pound Alexander Pope was born in London, to a Catholic linen-draper and his wife. Debarred from 1924. During World War II, he made a series of university by his religion, he learned Greek, pro-Fascist and anti-Semitic radio broadcasts Latin, Italian, and French with the help of a that culminated in an indictment for treason.

local priest. At age twelve, he contracted a form

He was adjudged mentally unfit and sentenced of tuberculosis, probably Pott's Disease, which to St. Elizabeth's Hospital for the Criminally left his spine weakened, his growth stunted, and Insane, in Washington, D.C., where he his health permanently damaged. His family remained until 1958. Upon his release, he moved to Binfield, in Windsor Forest, where at returned to Italy. In 1912, Pound, H. D., and age sixteen Pope composed his "Pastorals" (pub-

Richard Aldington had launched Imagism, and lished 1709). His friend the playwright William later, influenced by visual artists such as Wynd-

Wycherley introduced him to London literary ham Lewis, Pound moved on to Vorticism, society, and his Essay on

Criticism (1711) whose practitioners strove to depict dynamic attracted the attention of Joseph Addison, energies rather than represent static images. In though Pope was to leave Addison's circle for the 1920, Pound's attempts to modernize his work,

"Scriblerus Club," which included John Gay, to "make it new," while preserving the best his-Jonathan Swift, and other writers. The Rape of

tory had to offer, resulted in Hugh Selwyn

the Lock appeared in 1712, and the first volume

Mauberley, a work that anticipated Eliot's The

of his translation of the Iliad into heroic cou-

Waste Land (1922), which Pound edited mas-plets followed in 1715. This, together with his terfully. The crowning achievement of his career translation of the Odyssey (1 7 2 5 - 2 6) , brought is his epic,

The Cantos, which he began to write him financial security, and he moved to Twick-in earnest in 1924 but never finished to his sat-

enham, the Jacobite rebellion having made isfaction. It is one of the principal texts of mod-Catholics no longer welcome in the city center.

ernism.

There he wrote The Dunciad (1728—42, revised 1743), a satire on the alleged dullness of contemporary culture; the wittily and wickedly satir-

E . J . Pratt (1 8 8 3 - 1 9 6 4) , pp. 1270-72 ical "Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot" (1735); and the

E(dwin) J(ohn) Pratt was born in Western Bay,

Essay on Man, the first volume of a projected

Newfoundland, Canada. An ordained Methodist work in four books, reflecting Pope's interest in minister, he taught and preached in several philosophical and intellectual speculation. remote communities. Pratt held degrees in philosophy and theology from Victoria College, University of Toronto. He was a staff psychologist at the college until 1919, when he joined Peter Porter (b. 1929), pp. 1786-90

Peter Porter was born in Brisbane, Australia, the English Department, where he taught until and educated at local grammar schools. He his retirement, in 1953. In 1936, he helped worked as a journalist and in the clothing indus-found, and until 1942 was an editor of, the try before, in 1951, moving to London, where Canadian Poetry Magazine, which launched the he worked as a clerk, a bookseller, and an advertising copywriter; he later served as a visiting lecturer at several English and Australian Matthew Prior (1664-1721), pp. 566-68 universities. During the 1950s, he was associated with the Group, a circle of poets who critiqued one another's work with the aim of Through the patronage of Lord Dorset he was achieving accessible verse. A prolific reviewer educated at Westminster School, and with a and broadcaster, he has published many volumes of poetry, including The Last of England to St. John's College, Cambridge. He was secretary to the ambassador at The Hague, but

(1970), The Cost of Seriousness (1978), and The Automatic Oracle (1987), and a collection of turned Tory in Queen Anne's reign, acted as a 2 1 2 2 / BIOGRAPHIC ALSKETCHES

secret agent, and was instrumental in bringing prison until he was executed on the old charge about the Treaty of Utrecht (1713), for which of treason.

he was imprisoned for two years after the queen's death. He never held public office A. K. Ramanujan (1929-1993), pp. 1801-again, but Tory friends prevented his ruin by subscribing to a deluxe folio edition of Prior's A(ttipat) K(ishnaswami) Ramanujan was born work (1719). A gift of £ 4 , 0 0 0 from Lord Harley in Mysore, Karnataka, India, and educated at enabled him to buy Down Hall, in Essex. Prior Mysore University, Deccan College, and India-wrote in a variety of forms, including "Public ana University. From 1950 until 1958, he Panegyrics, Amorous Odes, Serious Reflections, taught English at various colleges and universi-[and] Idle Tales," and defended his enjoyment ties in India, and from 1962 until his death he of a range of verse forms thus: "He that writes taught at the University of Chicago. He was a in Rhimes, dances in Fetters: And as his Chain respected scholar of Dravidian languages, linguistics, culture, and folklore; a gifted translator steps.”

03

of works in classical Tamil and medieval and modern Kannada; and an engaging poet in both English and Kannada. In addition to poetry, he Craig Raine (b. 1944), pp. 1942-45 published plays, a novel, short stories, and an Craig Raine was born in Bishop Auckland, Durham, England, and was educated at Exeter College, Oxford, where he became a lecturer. He John Crowe Ransom (1888-1974), has worked for a number of journals and for ten years was poetry editor at Faber and Faber. A pp.1367-69 fellow of New College, Oxford, Raine has written the libretto for the opera

John Crowe Ransom was born in Pulaski, Tennessee. He was educated at Vanderbilt University and Christ Church College, Oxford. After of the Soviet Union, which was adapted from Boris Pasternak's novella

The Electrification

enlisting in the army during World War I, he The Last Summer, and has adapted Racine's served on the front in France. A member of the Andromaque for the stage.

His work is characterized by arresting, inventive

Vanderbilt faculty from 1914 until 1937, he metaphors that defamiliarize the commonplace, spearheaded the Agrarian movement, whose and the poet James Fenton has dubbed him and members included the poet and novelist Robert his followers “The Martian School,” because

Penn Warren and the poets Allen Tate and Don-poems such as “A Martian Sends a Postcard to Davidson. The group championed a vision of Home” have “taught us to become strangers in an agrarian economy based on old Southern val-

our familiar world, to release the faculty of perceptions—which they saw as a corrective for an ception.”

urban, Northern economy. Ransom later joined the faculty of Kenyon College, where he founded the influential Kenyon Review and

Sir Walter Raleigh (ca. 1552-1618), helped spur the New Criticism, a critical school

pp. 151-58

that emphasized close textual scrutiny and

Sir Walter Raleigh was born in Devonshire, would dominate the American literary scene for England, to a “gentle” but not wealthy family,

several decades.

and was educated at Oriel College, Oxford. He became a favorite of Queen Elizabeth I, whom

Henry Reed (1914-1986), pp. 1 563-66

he praised in many poems. He was renowned for

Henry Reed was born in Birmingham, England,

his courage as a sailor, soldier, and explorer as and educated at Birmingham University. From well as for his eloquence and courtly wit. 1937 to 1941, he worked as a teacher and as a Though he lost the queen's favor

when he journalist. During World War II, he served one seduced and married one of her maids of honor year in the Royal Army Ordnance Corps and in 1592, she nonetheless gave him a royal patent three as a cryptographer in the department of

to pursue an ill-fated search for gold in Guiana

Naval Intelligence. In 1945, he went to work as in 1595. Earlier, he had directed the colonizaa broadcaster, journalist, and playwright for the

tion of Virginia, which he had named after his

B B C , where his coworkers included the poets

queen; he introduced tobacco from the colony

W. H. Auden, Louis MacNeice, and Dylan

to England. After Elizabeth died, the new king,

Thomas. He later taught at the University of James, had Raleigh imprisoned in the Tower of Washington in Seattle. His reputation as a poet

London on a questionable charge of treason.

rests almost exclusively on the five-part "Lessons

There he began his history of the world—which of the War," which may be the most antholowas to have been dedicated to his supporter, gized poem of World War II. He also wrote some Henry, the prince of Wales. But Henry died in famously funny radio plays.

1612 and Raleigh never finished the History.

Although he was briefly released to pursue a sec-

Adrienne Rich (b. 1929), pp. 1791-1801

ond (and equally unsuccessful) search for gold

Adrienne Rich was born in Baltimore, Mary-in Guiana, he spent most of his later years in land, and educated at Radcliffe College. Her first book of poems, A Change of World (1951), Although he is considered a precursor of the was selected by W. H. Auden for the Yale Series

BIOGRAPHICALSKETCHES / 2 1 2 3

“Confessional” poets, his work is also visionary of Younger Poets. She has taught at, among and imbued with nature.

other schools, Rutgers University and Stanford

University, and now lives in California. A prolific

Isaac Rosenberg (1890-1918), pp. 1373-

writer, Rich has published numerous collections

76 of poetry (including Collected Early Poems Isaac Rosenberg was born in Bristol, England, 1950—1970, The Fact of a Doorframe: Selected and raised in the East End of London. He Poems 1950—2001, and The School among the attended elementary schools until age fourteen, Ruins: Poems 2000—2004), in which her work when he became apprenticed as an engraver in has evolved from closed forms to a poetics of a firm of art publishers and attended evening change, rooted in a radical imagination and pol-classes in the Art School of Birkbeck College.

itics. In prose works such as What Is Found His first ambition was to be a painter, and in There: Notebooks on Poetry and Politics (1993, 1911, when his apprenticeship ended, a group new edition 2 0 0 3) and Arts of the Possible: Essays of three Jewish women provided the means for and Conversations (2001), she combines auto-him to study at the Slade School of Art. His biography, history, and politics. In 2004, she interest in writing poetry developed steadily, and edited Muriel Rukeyser's Selected Poems for the

with the encouragement of his married sister he Library of America.

circulated copies of his poems among members of London's literary set and gained a certain rep-
Edwin Arlington Robinson (1869-1935), utation, though neither his poetry nor his paint-
pp. 1212-16

ing won him material success. In 1914,
Edwin Arlington Robinson was born in Head
Rosenberg went to South Africa for his health Tide, Maine, and raised in Gardiner, Maine, the and lived there with another of his sisters. He model for "Tilbury Town," the setting of many returned to England in 1915, enlisted in the
of his poems. He attended Harvard University, army, and was killed in action on April 1, 1918.
but was able to afford only two years. In 1896, Initially buried in an unmarked grave, his

Robinson moved to New York City, where he remains were discovered in 1926 and reinterred worked as a subway-construction inspector and in a Flanders cemetery.

in the Customs House. In 1910, despite financial difficulties, he devoted himself full-time to Christina Rossetti (1830-1894), pp. 1128- writing poetry. Robinson's early work received 34 little recognition; fame came to him late, with Christina Rossetti, sister of the poet and Pre- the publication of The Town Down the River Raphaelite painter Dante Gabriel Rossetti, was (1910) and The Man against the Sky (1916). By born in London. Except for two brief trips the time of his death, he was one of the most abroad, she lived with her mother (who edu- acclaimed poets in America, having won the cated her) all her life. A committed High Angli-Pulitzer Prize three times. Although he wrote can, she was deeply influenced by the lyric poems, dramatic monologues, and, later, Tractarian, or Oxford, movement. Her first long blank-verse narratives (such as his trilogy poems were published pseudonymously in the of verse novels based on Arthurian legend), he first issue of The Germ, in 1850, and her first is best-remembered for his wry poems on fic- major collection, Goblin Market and Other tional New England characters.

Poems, was published in 1866. The last collec- tion published during her lifetime was the

Theodore Roethke (1908-1963), pp. 1493-1502 devout The Face of the Deep: A Devotional Commentary on the Apocalypse (1892).

Theodore Roethke was born and raised in Saginaw, Michigan, where his German grandfather, Dante Gabriel Rossetti (1828-1882), his uncle, and his father operated greenhouses, pp. 1102-07 which would figure prominently in Roethke's work. Roethke was educated at the University of Michigan and, briefly, Harvard University. In 1935, he was hospitalized for the first of several mental breakdowns. From 1947 until his death, he taught at the University of Washington, where his students included the poets Richard man Hunt, he formed the short-lived but influential Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood. During the 1850s, Rossetti moved away from the naturalism of the Pre-Raphaelites toward aestheticism. He mentary on the Apocalypse (1892).

Theodore Roethke was born and raised in Saginaw, Michigan, where his German grandfather, Dante Gabriel Rossetti (1828-1882), his uncle, and his father operated greenhouses, pp. 1102-07 which would figure prominently in Roethke's work. Roethke was educated at the University of Michigan and, briefly, Harvard University. In 1935, he was hospitalized for the first of several mental breakdowns. From 1947 until his death, he taught at the University of Washington, where his students included the poets Richard man Hunt, he formed the short-lived but influential Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood. During the 1850s, Rossetti moved away from the naturalism of the Pre-Raphaelites toward aestheticism. He Lost Son and Other Poems (1948). According to joined a coterie of unconventional thinkers—

Roethke, these poems trace the spiritual and including the designer and poet William Morris, personal history “of a protagonist (not ‘I’ person- the painter and designer Edward Burne-Jones, ally but of all haunted and harried men).” and the poet Algernon Swinburne—whose work 2 1 2 4 / B I O G R A P H I C A L S K E T C H E S

set a new standard of taste and thinking and Siegfried Sassoon (1886-1967), pp. 1317- influenced the Aesthetes and Decadents of the 20

next generation, including the writers Walter Siegfried Sassoon was born in Kent, England, Pater and Oscar Wilde.

and attended Clare College, Cambridge. For several years, he divided his time between Lon- Muriel Rukeyser (1913-1980), pp. 1537- don, where he moved in fashionable literary circles, and his family’s country estate, where he 39

Muriel Rukeyser was born in New York City. lived as a leisured Edwardian gentleman. At the She attended Vassar College—where she, the outbreak of World War I, he enlisted and went poet Elizabeth Bishop, and the novelist Mary to the front with the Royal Welch Fusiliers.

McCarthy founded the

Known as ” M a d Jack” for his acts of reckless

Student Review—and

Columbia University. Her first book of poems, Theory of Flight (1935), used imagery from her studies at Roosevelt Aviation School. She taught being “deliberately prolonged by those who have writing at the California Labor School in Berkeley, California, and later at Sarah Lawrence College the Craiglockhart War Hospital (authorities claimed he was suffering from “shell shock”), biographies of the mathematicians Willard where he befriended the poet Wilfred Owen.

Gibbs and Thomas Harriot and Republican pres-

Although Edward Marsh included some of Sassendential candidate Wendell Willkie, collections soon’s early work in his anthologies of Georgian of literary criticism, and children’s books. She poetry, these poems bear little resemblance to also translated the work of Gunnar Ekelof, Ber-the fierce war poems of The Old Huntsman toolt Brecht, and Octavio Paz. Social and political (1917) and Counter Attack (1918). A prolific issues were her primary concern, and her phrase diarist, he wrote seven volumes of (sometimes “no more masks!” became a rallying cry for fictionalized) autobiography. He was received inists, including the poets Adrienne Rich and into the Roman Catholic Church in 1957 and Anne Sexton.

regarded himself at the end of his life as above all a religious poet.

Carl Sandburg (1878-1967), pp. 1252-53

Gjertrud Schnackenberg (b. 1953),

Carl Sandburg was born in Galesburg, Illinois. pp. 2000-2005

He left school after the eighth grade, but later

Gjertrud Schnackenberg was born in Tacoma, attended Lombard College. His first collection

Washington. She attended Mount Holyoke Col-

of poetry, Chicago Poems, was published in lege and earned early admiration for her writing.

1914 and was followed by several highly She has traveled extensively, has lived in Rome, acclaimed and immensely popular volumes, and currently resides in Boston. A highly allusive including Cornhuskers (1918), which docu-poet, Schnackenberg fuses her personal history ments Sandburg's war experience, Smoke and with that of Dante in her book A Gilded Lapse Steel (1920), and the book-length poem The of Time (1992) and revisits the myth of Oedipus People, Yes (1936). Sandburg was a leading fig-in her book-length poem The Throne of Labda-

ure in the Chicago Renaissance, along with the cus (2000).

architect Frank Lloyd Wright, the novelist Theodore Dreiser, and the poets Vachel Lindsay and

James Schuyler (1923-1991), pp. 1683-84

Edgar Lee Masters. In the 1930s, Sandburg became active in the Socialist movement. He James Schuyler was born in Chicago and raised devoted thirty years to the study of Abraham

in Washington, D.C., and western New York

Lincoln and traveled the country in search of State. He was educated at Bethany College.

folk songs and ballads, which he collected as

After living in Italy during the 1950s, he settled in New York City. Like the poet Frank O'Hara,

The American Songbag (1927). He also wrote novels and children's stories.

Schuyler worked at the Museum of Modern Art, served on the editorial board of Art News, and was deeply influenced by the practices of avant-

Robyn Sarah (b. 1949), pp. 1956-58

garde artists. In addition to poetry, he wrote

Robyn Sarah was born in New York City, to three novels, all of them comedies of manners.

Canadian parents, and grew up in Montreal.

She has a degree in music from the Conserva-

Vikram Seth (b. 1952), pp. 1994-96

toire de Musique et d'Art Dramatique du Que-

Vikram Seth was born in Calcutta, India, and bec and in philosophy from McGill University.

educated at Corpus Christi College, Oxford;

Cofounder, with Fred Louder, of the literary Stanford University; and Nanjing University.

press Villeneuve Publications, she has taught His first volume of poems, Mappings, appeared English at Champlain Regional College for over in 1980, and his 1985 collection, The Humble twenty years. An essayist and reviewer, she has Administrator's Garden, won the Commonwealth Poetry Prize (Asia). He published his first well as of poetry. She lives in Montreal.

novel, The Golden Gate, in 1986, but it was his epic, award-winning A Suitable Boy (1993) that around 1610, and during his later years he brought him international fame.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2125

That was fol-worked mainly in the genres of romance and

lowed by An Equal Music in 1999. A prolific tragicomedy. When he died, no collected edition reviewer, he has also written a travel book, From

of his works had been published; the First Folio,

Heaven Lake: Travels through Sinkiang and a collection of his plays (but not his narrative Tibet; a series of animal stories in verse for chil-poems or sonnets), appeared in 1623.

dren, Beastly Tales from Here and There; and an opera libretto, Arion and the Dolphin, which was

Percy Bysshe Shelley (1792-1822),

performed at the English National Opera in pp. 863 - 93

1994.

Percy Bysshe Shelley was born near Horsham,

Sussex, to a well-to-do, conservative family. In

Anne Sexton (1928-1974), pp. 1764-65

1810, he went to University College, Oxford, but

Anne Sexton was born in Newton, Massachu-

was expelled in his first year for refusing to setts, and attended Garland Junior College. Following the birth of her first child, in 1951, she with a classmate. He married a schoolgirl the suffered the first in a series of mental breakdowns, which culminated in her suicide, in where he worked for a number of social causes 1974. Sexton began writing poetry in earnest in 1957. She studied under Robert Lowell and social philosopher William Godwin. Shelley fell in love with Godwin's daughter, Mary Wollstonecraft Godwin (author of the novel Frankenstein), and eloped to Europe with her. Byron joined them in Switzerland in 1816 and followed high schools, at mental institutions, and at colleges and universities (including Harvard, Oberlin, and Boston), she coauthored three children's books with Kumin. Sexton is often considered a prime example of what came to be called the Confessional school of poetry, friends did not reflect public opinion at large, although she also wrote nonautobiographical poems, based on legend and fairy tale.

philosophical ideas and his unorthodox lifestyle, Shelley had few admirers in his lifetime. An avid William Shakespeare (1564-1616), student of H u m e and Plato, he was deeply influenced by skeptical empiricism and idealism; he pp. 257 - 77

We know less about Shakespeare's life than we know about that of almost any other major English writer. He was born the third of eight children in Stratford-on-Avon. His father, John, held fast to his faith in the redeeming powers of love and the imagination.

was a maker of gloves who became an alderman and a bailiff before suffering financial troubles. J a m e s Shirley (1 5 9 6 - 1 6 6 6) , pp. 390 - 91

Shakespeare's mother, Mary Arden, was the daughter of a rich farmer and brought land to cated at Merchant Taylors' School. He went on the marriage. Shakespeare probably attended to St. John's College, Oxford, and St. Catherine's Stratford grammar school, but received no education at Merchant Taylors' School. He went on to receive a university education and was referred to as an ecclesiastical clergy, he served in St. Alban's and taught

“upstart crow” by one of the better-educated at the town's grammar school from 1623 until

“university wits” when he arrived in London, in

1625, but lost his position there when he converted to Catholicism in 1624—25. Returning to London, he began a career as a dramatist with Anne Hathaway; they had a daughter in 1583 The School of Compliment (later, Love Tricks; and twins, Judith and Hamnet, in 1585. For 1625). This was the first of thirty-six plays he most of his career, he was an actor and share-wrote, many for the Cockpit Theatre, until 1640, when he succeeded Phillip Massinger as principal playwright of the most successful theatrical company of his time. He principle dramatist for the King's Men. Shirley's quickly gained a reputation as "the most excellent" English dramatist in both comedy and tragedy in the style of (Francis) Beaumont and (John) Fletcher, and dramatized patriotic debates such as The Contention of Ajax and Ulysses for the Armour of Achilles (1658), but Shirley also composed masques such as The Triumph of Peace, rapid succession his tragic masterpieces Hamlet, commissioned by the Inns of Court in 1634, and Othello, King Lear, Macbeth, and Antony and Cleopatra. He apparently retired to Stratford fortunate in finding employment as a schoolteacher during Oliver Cromwell's Commonwealth, but his luck did not long outlast it; he died of exposure during the Great Fire of London. Philip Sidney was born at Penshurst, in Kent, England, to an aristocratic family that included among its poets Sidney's brother Robert, his sister Mary, and his niece, Mary Wroth. His mother, also Mary, was the sister of Queen Elizabeth I's

2126 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

Jane Shore (b. 1947), pp. 1952-54

Jane Shore was born in Newark, New Jersey, sometime favorite, Robert Dudley, earl and educated at Goddard College and the University of Leicester, and his father, Sir Henry, had served the queen as lord deputy of Ireland. After Radcliffe Institute from 1971 until 1973. During attending Shrewsbury School with his friend in the mid-1970s, she taught at Harvard Uni-

(and later, biographer) Fulke Greville, Sidney

Spenser—where one of her colleagues was the spent time at Oxford and Cambridge. From poet Elizabeth Bishop, a clear influence on 1572 until 1575, he traveled in Europe, during Shore—and she now teaches at George Washington University, which time he established a firm friendship with

University of Cambridge. The author of four volumes

Hubert Langue, who encouraged his zealous of poetry, among them Happy Family (1999), Protestantism. When in 1580 Queen Elizabeth she lives in Washington, D.C., and in Vermont.

considered marrying a French Catholic, Sidney criticized the idea in a letter and was consequently banished from court. He spent his

Mary Sidney (1561-1621), pp. 225-30 enforced "idleness" composing poetry; his

Mary Sidney was the third of eleven children famous work of literary criticism, the Defense of born to Sir Henry Sidney and his wife, Mary. Poesy; and two versions of his pastoral romance, Well-educated at home,

Mary became proficient

the Arcadia, which was dedicated to his sister in Latin as well as in French and Italian; Mary and which she published after his death between 1575 and 1577, she acquired a courtly in a widely read version that conflates his first education by serving, as her mother had before text, the Old Arcadia, with his unfinished reviher, as a lady-in-waiting to Queen Elizabeth I.

sion, the New Arcadia. Legendary in life and

In 1577, she married Henry Herbert, the second death as the quintessential Elizabethan gentle-earl of Pembroke. As a patron of letters and man, Sidney was in reality more marked by the inspiration to poets ranging from Edmund Spen-

"great expectation" he mentions in one of his ser to Isabella Whitney, Mary Sidney Herbert sonnets than by political or romantic success.

made her country estate, Wilton, into an intellectual center. His Astrophil and Stella, the first great sonnet sequence in English—like his other poetic brother, Philip, probably wrote his Defense of Poesy there along with portions of his Arcadia, published until after his death—uses (and revises) the second version of which was unfinished Petrarchan conventions to record various experiences of unfulfilled desire. These include, but first version to his sister, and in 1590 she published a composite version of the two texts, an enormous work known as The Countess of Pembroke's Arcadia. Sharing with Although she was briefly engaged to Sidney, in her brother a hope that England would become 1581 she married Lord Robert Rich; Sidney was a defender of Protestantism in Europe, Mary married to Frances, daughter of the powerful worked after his death to complete a series of courtier Sir Francis Walsingham, in 1583, the verse translations of the Psalms that he had same year he was knighted. Sidney was granted begun; having revised the forty-three psalms

a chance to fight for Protestantism in the Low that he had finished, she composed another 107

Countries after being made governor of Flush-in a wide variety of meters and forms. Mary ing (an English possession in the Low Coun-articulated some of her own religious beliefs not tries) in 1586. He died of gangrene from a only in her versions of the Psalms but also in her wound in the leg.
translation of Du Plessis Mornay's Discourse of Life and Death and in her rendering, in terza
Charles Simic (b. 1938), pp. 1891-93 rima, of Petrarch's Triumph of Death. In 1591, she published her
Charles Simic was born in the former Yugoslavia
Antonie, a translation of a French play by Robert Gamier. Her original and raised there during the Nazi occupation. At verse often appears under the "handmaidenly" age eleven, he emigrated to the United States cloak of translation and even, perhaps, under with his family.
Simic was educated at the Uni-others' names: some critics have argued for her versity of Chicago and New York University.
authorship of the "Lay of Clorinda" long attrib-Besides serving in the United States Army, he uted to Spenser and published in has worked as a bookkeeper, an accountant, a Astrophil, the elegy for Philip Sidney that Spenser dedicated house painter, and a salesman. Since then, he to Mary.
has taught at California State College and the University of New Hampshire. In addition to

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2127

many volumes of poetry, he has published sev-

Christopher Smart (1722-1771), pp. 678-eral collections of essays and has translated a number of European poets into English. His Christopher Smart was born in Kent, England, poems' mystery and sense of danger derive in and educated in Durham and at Pembroke College, Cambridge, where he became a fellow. He from the tragic events of the past century, espe-

86

was a brilliant classical scholar, but began to cially World War II.

exhibit symptoms of obsessive behavior, including a compulsion to public prayer. After moving to London in 1749, he won prizes for poetry, but

L. E. S i s s m a n (1 9 2 8 - 1 9 7 6) , pp. 1766-68

his illness worsened, and he was several times

L(ouis) E(dward) Sissman was raised in Detroit, committed to the lunatics' ward at St. Luke's

Michigan. After graduation from Harvard Uni-

Hospital, where he divided his time between versity, he held a series of odd jobs: shelving writing, gardening, and his cat, Jeffry. In 1758, books in a library, editing copy in a New York

he was transferred to a private institution at publishing house, working on John F. Kennedy's Bethnal Green. Released in 1763, he declined first Senate campaign, and selling vacuum into poverty, and in 1770 was remanded to the cleaners and Fuller brushes. In 1956, he began King's Bench debtor's prison, where he died.

a successful career in advertising. In 1958, after William Butler Yeats regarded Smart's A Song to a ten-year hiatus, he began to write poetry in

David as the inaugural poem of the Romantic earnest, and he published prolifically from that period. Smart's other well-known work, Jubilate time until his death, from Hodgkins' disease. In Agno, which he referred to as his "Magnificat," addition, he wrote regularly for The Atlantic was, like A Song to David, composed during Monthly. He lived in Boston nearly all his adult Smart's confinement, but was unpublished until life. Although his illness was a primary subject, 1939.

Sissman treated personal material with irony, urbanity, wit, and grim cheer.

Charlotte Smith (1749-1806), pp. 711-15

Charlotte Smith (nee Turner) was born in London and brought up on her family's estates: Big-nor Park, Sussex, and Stoke Place, Surrey.

John Skelton (1460-1529), pp. 90-97

Raised by her maternal aunt after the death of Skelton often referred to himself as "poet laure mother in childbirth in 1753, she began reate,” a title conferred on him by the universi-writing poems at age six. Educated at schools in ties of Oxford and Cambridge in 1490 and 1493, Sussex and London, she married, at age fifteen, respectively. Trained in Latin and in rhetoric, he Benjamin Smith, the son of a wealthy merchant was ordained a priest and subsequently served in the West Indies trade. They had twelve chilas a tutor for the future king Henry VIII. After dren, one of whom died in infancy and two of writing a satire on court life, The Bowge of whom died in childhood. Benjamin was impris-Court, in 1498, he became rector of the parish

oned for debt in 1783, and Charlotte shared church of Diss, a town in Norfolk. While at Diss some of the eight-month sentence with him. On (from approximately 1502 until 1511), Skelton his release, the family fled to France to escape apparently kept a mistress and fathered chilcreditors. Charlotte’s first collection, Elegiac
dren; he also wrote his comic lament “Phillip Sonnets and Other Essays, was published in Sparow” and “Ware the Hawk,” which 1784, went through numerous editions, and was denounces the actions of a neighboring priest

translated into French and Italian. While in who pursued his quarry, a hawk, into the sanc-France, she translated Antoine-Fran[^]ois Pretified space of Skelton’s church. Both in its vost’s Manon Lescaut, which she published in (highly original) form and in some of its content, 1785 but subsequently withdrew over accusa-this poem anticipates Skelton's later attacks on tions of plagiarism. The Smiths separated when Henry VIII's chancellor, Cardinal Wolsey; Wolthey returned to England, and Charlotte become sey's desecration of monastic spaces are the a prolific writer, publishing three collections of object of Skelton's comic invective in long poetry, six children's books, and ten novels, poems such as Speak Parrot, Why Come Ye Not including The Old Manor House (1793), which to Court, and Colin Clout, all from the early was admired by Sir Walter Scott. Continual lit-1520s, when Skelton was living at the Abbey of igation over her father-in-law's estate as well as Westminster, protected by the laws of sanctuary family sorrow and misfortune plagued her all her from Wolsey's (and perhaps also the king's) life. Benjamin Smith predeceased Charlotte by anger. Skelton also wrote The Turning of eight months, dying in a Scottish debtors'

Eleanor Rummie, a satiric portrait of an ale-prison. A posthumous collection of her work, wife; a morality play, Magnificence; and a num-Beachy Head; with Other Poems, was published ber of short lyrics including the ironic song in 1807.
"Mannerly Margery Milk and Ale." The "Skel-tonic" style that he invented typically blends Stevie Smith (1902-1971), pp. 1439-43
high and low diction in short rhymed lines con-Stevie Smith was born Florence Margaret Smith

taining from two to five beats.

in Yorkshire, England. She was raised by an aunt

2128 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

in the north London suburb of Palmers Green

Irvine (from which he earned an M.F.A.), he and lived there for the rest of her life. A secretary taught at San Diego State University and the

in the magazine publishing house of Newnes,

University of Cincinnati before settling at the

Pearson, Ltd for thirty years, she retired in 1953

University of California at Berkeley from 1979

following a severe breakdown and devoted the to 1996. In addition to poetry, he has published rest of her life to writing. Her first volume of a memoir, books for children, and a collection

poetry, A Good Time Was Had by All, was pub-

of essays on poetry, and he has edited a book of lished in 1937 and was accompanied by her own recollections and stories about California.

comic illustrations. This was followed by six more collections and three novels. She was Robert Southwell

(ca. 1561-1595), awarded the Queen's Gold Medal for Poetry

in

pp. 223-24

1969.

Robert Southwell was born in Harsham, Norwich, England, to a Roman Catholic family, and

W. D. Snodgrass (b. 1926), pp. 1731-34

was educated at the Jesuit School in Douai,

W(illiam) D(eWitt) Snodgrass was born in Wil-France, accepted for the Jesuit novitiate in kinsburg, Pennsylvania, and raised in Beaver Rome, and ordained in 1585. Despite the law of Falls, Pennsylvania, where he began undergrad-1584 forbidding English-born subjects who had uate studies at Geneva College before entering taken Catholic orders since the queen's accesthe navy. He served in the Pacific during the last sion to remain in England longer than forty days, months of World War II. He later studied at the on pain of death, Southwell returned to England University of Iowa, where he attended Robert to minister to Catholics in 1586. In 1589, he Lowell's poetry workshops. Snodgrass has held became chaplain to Ann Howard, countess of teaching appointments at a number of univer-Arundel, whose husband had been imprisoned, sities, including Cornell, Rochester, Wayne and to whom Southwell addressed his Epistle of State, Syracuse, Old Dominion, and Delaware.

Comfort. In 1592, Southwell was arrested while In 1959, he published Heart's Needle, a revolusaying Mass, tortured, imprisoned in the Tower, tionary work credited, along with Robert Low-and finally executed. He was beatified as a mar-ell's Life Studies (published the same year), with tyr in 1929 and canonized in 1970. He wrote spawning the so-called Confessional school of religious prose and verse in both Latin and

at University College, Ibadan, and Leeds Uni-

Buddhism. Upon his return to the United States, he has taught at the Universities of States, he settled in a remote community in the Lagos, Ibadan, and Ife, and lectured all over the Sierra Nevadas. He taught at the University of world. In the late 1950s, he worked as a reporter California at Davis from 1966 until his retirement for the B B C . From August 1967 to October 1969, he was imprisoned as a political prisoner by the Federal Military Government of Nigeria.

like sharp blows on the mind,” he arranges An exceptionally prolific writer, Soyinka has “tough, simple, short words” into abbreviated published poetry, novels, autobiography, critical lines. He has translated from ancient and modern essays, an anthology of African poetry, and ern Japanese and wrote a memoir in the Japanese form of a poetry-and-prose travel journal. He was founding director of Masks Theatre, the Orison Theatre, and the Guerrilla

Gary Soto (b. 1952), pp. 1996-97

Theatre Unit of the University of Ife. He was awarded the 1986 Nobel Prize for Literature.

has worked as a field hand and in a tire factory, and he often writes about working-class Mexi-

Stephen Spender (1909-1995), pp. 1505-can Americans. Educated at California State 07

University, Fresno (where he studied with Philip

Stephen Spender was born in London and Levine), and the University of California at attended

University College, Oxford, where he B I O G R A P H I C A L S K E T C H E S / 2 1 2 9

became friends with the writers W. H. Auden, belief that the queen was mismanaging affairs

Christopher Isherwood, and Louis MacNeice, in Ireland may have contributed to the some-with whom he shared an interest in left-wing times critical ways in which he represented her politics. In 1937, he joined the British Comin The Faerie Queene. Elizabeth was the name munist Party and traveled to Spain to write prop-

not only of the queen whom he “shadowed,” but aganda for the Spanish Republicans’ fight

also of his wife; she is figured in his sonnet against Fascism, but soon grew to feel that Com-sequence Amoretti and also in his two marriage

munism was intolerant of individual vision and poems, Epithalamion and Prothalamion.

freedom of expression. In the 1930s, he, Auden,

MacNeice, and Cecil Day Lewis were dubbed

G e r t r u d e S t e i n (1 8 7 4 - 1 9 4 6) , pp. 1248-50

by critics the “Pylon” school, after Spender’s

Gertrude Stein was born in Allegheny, Pennsylpoem “The Pylons,” for their conspicuous use of vania, and raised in Oakland, California. She industrial imagery. During World War II, he was educated at Radcliffe College, where she served with the Fire Service and in the Foreign studied with the psychologist and philosopher

Office. From 1945 to 1947, he was literary William James (whose theories about conscious-counselor to U N E S C O , and for the next twenty-ness influenced her deeply) and at Johns Hop-five years he traveled and lectured in the United kings University, where she studied medicine. In States. He was coeditor of the journals Horizon

1902, she and her brother, Leo, moved to Paris and Encounter. In addition to writing his own and established a salon that attracted the most poetry, he translated from Spanish, German, prominent avant-garde artists of the day, includ-and Greek. He was knighted in 1983.

ing Pablo Picasso, Georges Braque, and Henri

Matisse. In 1907, she began a relationship with

Edmund Spenser (1552-1599), pp. 159-

Alice B. Toklas (which led to Stein's wryly titled and popular Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas), 205

and, apart from Stein's very successful lecture

Edmund Spenser was born in London, to a famtour of the United States in 1934, they resided ily of modest circumstances, and educated at the permanently in France. Stein's work—in prose,

Merchant Taylors' School. After studying as a poetry, drama, and autobiography—was highly “poor scholar” at Cambridge, Spenser served as experimental (she was called “the M a m a of secretary to several prominent men, including Dada”). Her reputation as a stylist and arbiter of the powerful earl of Leicester, uncle of Spenser, great in her day, has continued to grow. Spenser’s friend Sir Philip Sidney. In 1580, he was appointed secretary to the lord governor of Ireland, whose job it was to defend the English settlement there against the Irish “rebels” who Wallace Stevens was born and raised in Read-objection to English rule of their land. Spenser

Wallace Stevens (1879-1955), pp. 1256-69

ing, Pennsylvania. After attending Harvard University for three years, Stevens moved to New York City, where he went to law school, worked in a number of law firms, and associated with prominent artists, including the poets William Carlos Williams and Marianne Moore. In 1916, national poet of England, and he consciously he went to work for the Hartford Accident and modeled his career on that of Virgil, the great poet of imperial Rome. Like Virgil, Spenser remained in Ireland, as civil servant, settler, and landholder, for the rest of his life, and in 1596 York City, where he went to law school, worked in a number of law firms, and associated with prominent artists, including the poets William Carlos Williams and Marianne Moore. In 1916, national poet of England, and he consciously he went to work for the Hartford Accident and modeled his career on that of Virgil, the great poet of imperial Rome. Like Virgil, Spenser remained in Ireland, as civil servant, settler, and

landholder, for the rest of his life, and in 1596 York City, where he went to law school, worked in a number of law firms, and associated with prominent artists, including the poets William Carlos Williams and Marianne Moore. In 1916, national poet of England, and he consciously he went to work for the Hartford Accident and modeled his career on that of Virgil, the great poet of imperial Rome. Like Virgil, Spenser remained in Ireland, as civil servant, settler, and

landholder, for the rest of his life, and in 1596 York City, where he went to law school, worked in a number of law firms, and associated with prominent artists, including the poets William Carlos Williams and Marianne Moore. In 1916, national poet of England, and he consciously he went to work for the Hartford Accident and modeled his career on that of Virgil, the great poet of imperial Rome. Like Virgil, Spenser remained in Ireland, as civil servant, settler, and

landholder, for the rest of his life, and in 1596 York City, where he went to law school, worked in a number of law firms, and associated with prominent artists, including the poets William Carlos Williams and Marianne Moore. In 1916, national poet of England, and he consciously he went to work for the Hartford Accident and modeled his career on that of Virgil, the great poet of imperial Rome. Like Virgil, Spenser remained in Ireland, as civil servant, settler, and

landholder, for the rest of his life, and in 1596 York City, where he went to law school, worked in a number of law firms, and associated with prominent artists, including the poets William Carlos Williams and Marianne Moore. In 1916, national poet of England, and he consciously he went to work for the Hartford Accident and modeled his career on that of Virgil, the great poet of imperial Rome. Like Virgil, Spenser remained in Ireland, as civil servant, settler, and

landholder, for the rest of his life, and in 1596 York City, where he went to law school, worked in a number of law firms, and associated with prominent artists, including the poets William Carlos Williams and Marianne Moore. In 1916, national poet of England, and he consciously he went to work for the Hartford Accident and modeled his career on that of Virgil, the great poet of imperial Rome. Like Virgil, Spenser remained in Ireland, as civil servant, settler, and

landholder, for the rest of his life, and in 1596 York City, where he went to law school, worked in a number of law firms, and associated with prominent artists, including the poets William Carlos Williams and Marianne Moore. In 1916, national poet of England, and he consciously he went to work for the Hartford Accident and modeled his career on that of Virgil, the great poet of imperial Rome. Like Virgil, Spenser remained in Ireland, as civil servant, settler, and

landholder, for the rest of his life, and in 1596 York City, where he went to law school, worked in a number of law firms, and associated with prominent artists, including the poets William Carlos Williams and Marianne Moore. In 1916, national poet of England, and he consciously he went to work for the Hartford Accident and modeled his career on that of Virgil, the great poet of imperial Rome. Like Virgil, Spenser remained in Ireland, as civil servant, settler, and tially wrote in the mode of pastoral, publishing president in 1934. His quiet life, in an upper- in 1591 his Shepherd's Calendar. Chaucer was class neighborhood in Hartford, Connecticut, another of Spenser's main sources of inspiration seemed in sharp contrast with the cosmopolitanism and vitality of his poems. Both sensuous Ariosto and Torquato Tasso. Ariosto's Orlando and philosophical, Stevens's work continues to Furioso (1516) provided, in its blending of epic be hugely influential. His first book, Harmonium (1923), is considered one of the major important model for Spenser's The Faerie debuts in American poetry. His work of the Queene. That poem's first three books, published in 1590, were well received, and in 1596 abstract, included the long poem "Notes toward Spenser republished the poem with three additions: a Supreme Fiction." Poetry was the supreme fictional completed books and a portion of a section, as he also wrote in his important prose work The Necessary Angel (1951).

of the poem he described, in a prefatory letter to Walter Raleigh, as designed to fashion a gentleman by illustrating twelve moral virtues in Anne Stevenson (b. 1933), pp. 1841-49 was born in Cambridge, twelve books. He received a modest royal pen-England, to American parents, and raised in the sion after the first three books of The Faerie United States, primarily in Cambridge, Massa-Queene were published, but he never received a chusetts, and New Haven, Connecticut. She post at court nor the royal recognition he had was educated at the University of Michigan, hoped for. His disappointed expectations and his where she studied with the poet Donald Hall. In the early 1950s, she worked as a schoolteacher, committed suicide by drinking poison. Like and in 1956 settled in England, where she other “Cavalier” poets who supported the cause taught at a number of institutions and held sev-of Charles Stuart, Suckling embodied the eral fellowships. She was the founder of the courtly quality of sprezzatura, in which the most Poetry Bookshop at Hay-on-Wye, Wales. Her highly refined and polished style is disguised as publications include a study of Elizabeth effortless effusion. His literary reputation was Bishop, a biography of Sylvia Plath, and several established by 1637, when his satirical mock-radio plays. Her best-known collection, Correballad The Wits (or Sessions of the Poets) was spondences, is a sequence of epistolary poems sung before King Charles I. The next year, his interspersed with journal entries recounting her tragedy Aglaoura proved a theatrical success. family history.

2130 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

Poems such as “Song” (“Why so pale and wan, fond lover?”) and “A Ballad upon a Wedding” are

Trumbull Stickney (1874-1904), pp. 1250-collected in Fragmenta Aurea (1646).

52

Trumbull Stickney was born in Geneva, Swit-

May Swenson (1913 - 1989), pp. 1540-43

zerland, and spent his early years abroad. He May Swenson was born in Logan, Utah, to a was educated by his father, a Classics scholar,

Mormon family. After graduation from Utah until he entered Harvard University, and he later State University, she moved to New York and became the first American to earn a Ph.D. at the worked with the Writers' Project of the Works Sorbonne. He taught Greek at Harvard Univer-Progress Administration. From 1956 until 1966, sity for one year, then died suddenly, of a brain she was an editor at New Directions Press. In tumor. Although during his lifetime he pub-addition, she was a visiting professor at many lished only one book, Dramatic Verses (1902), colleges and universities. She translated from he left much work in manuscript, and the poet

the Swedish, most notably the poems of Tomas

William Vaughn Moody, a friend of Stickney Transtromer. Her high-spirited poetry, like that from Harvard, helped assemble a posthumous

of her friend Elizabeth Bishop, is marked by a collection.

keen interest in the natural world.

Mark Strand (b. 1934), pp. 1863-65

lections is his book-length poem Dark Harbor appointed dean of St. Patrick's Cathedral in (1993), which obliquely recounts a journey of 1713. Despite his staunch conservatism, he the mind through memory and into the afterlife.

became an ardent champion of Irish resistance

In 1990—91, he was poet laureate of the United to English oppression. Best-known for Gulliver's States.

Travels (1726), the only piece of writing for which he was paid, he was a prolific author of

Sir John Suckling (1609-1642), pp. 452-poetry, prose, pamphlets, letters, dialogues, and 58 satires.

John Suckling was born into an old Norfolk,

England, family, through which he inherited Algernon Charles Swinburne (1837-1909), great estates. Educated at Trinity College, Cam-pp. 1146-52

bridge, he traveled in Holland and was knighted

Algernon Charles Swinburne was born in Lon-

on his return in 1630. He was part of the 1631 don and attended Balliol College, Oxford, where embassy to Germany, returning the next year to he became a friend of the poet and Pre-court and a life of dissipation. In 1639, he Raphaelite painter Dante Gabriel Rossetti, the fought on the (losing) Royalist side against the painter and designer Edward Burne-Jones, and Scots, and in 1641 levied a force to free the

the designer and poet William Morris. Swin-imprisoned earl of Strafford. The conspiracy, burne introduced the phrase art for art's sake named the "Army Plot," was uncovered, and into the English aesthetic lexicon in an 1862 Suckling fled to France, where he might have review of the French poet Charles Baudelaire's

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2131

Les Fleurs du Mal. He became an adherent of Cambridge, where he met Arthur Henry Hal-

Baudelaire's aesthetic, until, in 1867, he met lam, whom he later immortalized in In Memo-Giuseppe Mazzini, whose fervor for Italian inde- riam (1850). Tennyson began to write when a pendence from Austrian rule caused Swinburne child, largely to escape the oppressiveness of his to repudiate art for art's sake and turn to politihome life, made miserable by his father's drinkcally motivated poetry. He wrote prolifically, and ing and violence. He published some of his best-his work, which characteristically explores the known poems, such as "Mariana" and "The relationship between pleasure and pain, love Kraken," when he was only twenty; in "Mari-and death, shows the influence of sources as

ana," he displays his early, and enduring, gift for diverse as the Marquis de Sade, the Bible, Greek using objects and landscapes to convey states of drama, and the Border Ballads.

mind and particular emotions. Between 1833, the date of Hallam's death, and 1843, when

Allen Tate (1899 - 1979), pp. 1417-21

Tennyson received an annual government pen-

Allen Tate was born in Winchester, Kentucky.

to support his writing, he was especially

He was educated at Vanderbilt University, hard-hit by the melancholia that would plague where he roomed with the poet Robert Penn him all his life and so dominate his poetry. In Warren and was affiliated with the Fugitive the wake of Hallam's death, his work assumed a movement. Along with Warren, and Vanderbilt decidedly darker note. He expressed his grief professors John Crowe Ransom and Donald abstrusely in poems such as "Ulysses" and Davidson, Tate later joined the Agrarians, who

"Break, Break, Break" and directly in In Memo-

called for an agriculturally based Southern riam, a series of 131 quatrain stanzas, which economy and championed traditional Southern

Tennyson began within days of Hallam's death values. In 1924, he moved to New York to and continued to write over a period of seven-embark on a literary career; the poet Hart Crane teen years. With the publication of this great lived in his household for a time. In 1928—29, elegy, he finally attained the public recognition Tate lived in England and France, and spent long denied him and earned sufficient money to time with fiction writers Ford Madox Ford, marry Emily Sellwood after a ten-year on-again, Ernest Hemingway, and F. Scott Fitzgerald. He off-again courtship. In 1850, he succeeded Wil-

later taught at, among other schools, Princeton

liam Wordsworth as poet laureate, and nine

University, New York University, and the University of Minnesota. In addition to poetry, he published biographies, a novel, and several collections of criticism.

lections of criticism.

Dylan Thomas (1914-1953), pp. 1566-73

Edward Taylor (ca. 1642-1729), pp. 536-

Dylan Thomas was born in the Welsh seaport of Swansea. Ignoring his father's advice to attend

Edward Taylor was born in Leicestershire, university, he left school in 1931 to embark on England, but migrated to Massachusetts in a literary career. After working at the local news-1668. After graduation from Harvard University paper, he headed for London in 1934. His first in 1671, he served as the minister of Westfield, volume, 18 Poems, appeared that year. He Massachusetts, then a frontier town. Taylor worked as a broadcaster, prose writer, poet, and published some poems in his lifetime, but most lecturer, and this varied career necessitated his

of his writings remained in manuscript when he traveling through the United Kingdom, Europe,

died; the poems were preserved by Ezra Stiles,

and the United States. He died in New York City

Taylor's grandson and the president of Yale.

during a reading tour, his excessive drinking and

Only in 1937 was a selection of Taylor's poems

generally riotous lifestyle hastening his early death but also responsible, in part, for the burning in 1960. A Puritan who believed in salvation by grace alone, Taylor adhered to tradition (specifically, the Old New England Way) in matters of church practice. In addition to occasional recorded in New York before his death and rere-pieces, he composed Preparatory Meditations, corded a year later in Britain by Richard Burton.

whose starting points are images from biblical texts, and the series God's Determinations was also greatly despised. The New Apocalypse Touching His Elect; and the Elect's Combat in writers took him as a model; the Movement writ-Their Conversion, and Coming up to God in ers, including Philip Larkin, were said to have Christ: Together with the Comfortable Effects formed in reaction to the excesses, personal and Thereof.

poetic, of Dylan Thomas and his admirers.

Alfred, Lord Tennyson (1809-1892),

Edward Thomas (1878-1917), pp. 1253-56

pp. 982-1009

Edward Thomas was born in the London suburb of Lambeth and educated at Lincoln College, England. He was educated at Trinity College, Oxford. His arduous biographical, critical, and review work often left him drained and Henry David Thoreau (1817-1862), depressed, but he was forced to be prolific in

2132 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

pp. 1045-46

order to support a growing family. He began to Henry David Thoreau was born and lived nearly write poetry in 1914 with the encouragement of all his life in Concord, Massachusetts. He was the poet Robert Frost, whom he greatly admired.

educated at Harvard University, where the poet

After joining the army in 1915, he was killed in Jones Very was his tutor. After graduation, he battle at Arras on Easter Monday 1917. Tho-worked briefly as a schoolteacher. He lived in mas's Poems (1917) was published under his the household of

Ralph Waldo Emerson, his pseudonym, Edward Eastaway. It was followed

chief literary champion, for a time and became

by Last Poems (1918) and Collected Poems active in Emerson's Transcendentalist club.

(1920), which appeared in his own name. His

From 1845 until 1847, Thoreau lived in a wife, Helen, published two evocative memoirs of wooden hut at Walden Pond, an experience he their life together.

documented in the celebrated prose work Wal- den (1854). A rugged individualist and observer of nature, he regarded moral law more highly

R. S. Thomas (1913 - 2000), pp. 1544-46

than civil law, as demonstrated in his refusal to pay poll and church taxes and in his early support for the as yet unpopular abolition movement. His most famous essay, "Resistance to Bangor, and theology at St. Michael's Theological College, in Llandaff. Ordained in the Anglican Church, he served at Chirk, Denbighshire, works published anonymously, and his full-length book Cape Cod was not published in its entirety until after his death. Most of his poetry

Welsh in college to communicate with his Welsh parishioners and to gain a deeper understanding

inence in The Atlantic Monthly and elsewhere of Welsh culture. Throughout a long life, he published a new volume of poetry every two or is especially prized today for his environmentalthree years and edited anthologies such as The

ist approach to nature.

Penguin Book of Religious Verse. He was awarded the Queen's Gold Medal for Poetry in 1964.

Chidiok Tichborne (d. 1586), p. 151

The Tichbornes were an old, probably pre-Conquest family of Hampshire, England, and

James Thomson (1700-1748), pp. 649-51

were pious Catholics. Chidiok Tichborne was James Thomson was born in Ednam Manse, interrogated on several occasions on suspicion Kelso, Scotland, and educated at Jedburgh of "popish practices" (i.e., attending Mass) and School and Edinburgh University, preparing for in 1586 was involved in a plot led by Anthony Babington against the life of Queen Elizabeth I.

After abandoning his studies, he tried to make a living as a writer in London, Tichborne was arrested and sentenced to be where he became friendly with the leading writ-hanged and disemboweled. Imprisoned in the ers of the day, including John Arbuthnot, Tho-

Tower of London, he is said to have written his mas Gay, and Alexander Pope. "Winter," a short, "Elegy" on the eve of his execution. Tichborne's blank-verse poem, appeared in 1726, and "Sum-speech from the scaffold and his poem of fare-mer" and "Spring" in 1727 and 1728, respectively. The Seasons, which collected all three and Jacobean periods.

with "Autumn," was published in 1730. In 1731,

Thomson accompanied Charles Talbot, son of Charles Tomlinson (b. 1927), pp. 1746-49

the solicitor-general, on the Grand Tour, which Charles Tomlinson was born in Stoke-on-Trent, provided the inspiration for his patriotic poem England, and educated at Queens' College, Cambridge, where he studied with the poet

Wales, who awarded him a pension. Further patronage came through the poem Britannia taught at a London school for a number of years (1729), together with sinecures such as the and worked as a private secretary in Italy before surveyor-generalship of the Leeward Islands. joining the faculty of the University of Bristol in Thomson's Alfred, a Masque (1740) includes the 1957. He has also taught at various institutions famous song "Rule Britannia," also attributed to in the United States. From the start, Tomlinson his friend David Mallet. His Seasons was one of identified more strongly with the American the most popular and influential poems of the poetic and artistic tradition (he is also an accomplished artist) than with the British. Some Americans (1981) offers a vivid personal record of his verse) to nature, and ushering in the period of debt to American modernism and of his efforts topographical poetry and the "cult of the picturesque." The translator (with the late Henry Gifford) of

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2133

Versions from, Fyodor Tyutchev (1960) and Cas- home in Greenfield, Massachusetts. Tucker-tilian Ilexes: Versions from Antonio Machado man's one published volume of poems was well (1963), Tomlinson has edited The Oxford Book

received by the best poets of his day, including of Verse in English Translation.

Emerson, Longfellow, and Tennyson, yet his name fell into obscurity until the twentieth cen-

J e a n T o o m e r (1 8 9 4 - 1 9 6 7) , pp. 1398-1400

tury, when his work was rediscovered by the poet

Jean Toomer was born in Washington, D.C. He

Witter Bynner. Among the poems not published was raised by his mother and maternal grand-

during Tuckerman's lifetime are three sonnet father, P. B. S. Pinchback, who had served as sequences.

acting governor of Louisiana during Reconstruction. Toomer attended several colleges, but John Updike (b.

1932), pp. 1846-47

never received a degree. He spent much of his

John Updike was born in Reading, Pennsylvaearly adulthood in New York City; his work was nia, and raised in nearby Shillington. He was both influenced by and influential on the Har-educated at Harvard University and studied lem Renaissance. In 1921, he taught in Sparta, drawing at the Ruskin School of Drawing and Georgia, where he gathered material for Cane Fine Arts, in Oxford, England. Upon his return (1923), a mosaic of poetry, prose, and drama on to the United States, he joined the staff of The black themes, and the work on which his reputation stands. In his later years, Toomer wrote fiction and reviews. In 1957, he and his family moved from New York City to Ipswich, Massachusetts, where he concentrated wholly on writing and had become a Quaker—but was unable to find a publisher for his work. He also left unpublished highly acclaimed contemporary American fiction, plays, and an autobiography.

ers, Updike has published many novels (most notably his series about the character Harry Thomas Traherne (1637—1674), pp. 5 31 — “Rabbit” Angstrom), short stories, plays, poems, essays, and reviews of both literature and art.

36

Thomas Traherne was the son of a Hereford, England, shoemaker and his wife—who, it is thought, died when Thomas and his brother Mona Van Duyn were young, leaving them to be brought up by

Mona Van Duyn (b. 1921), pp. 1629-32

thought, died when Thomas and his brother Mona Van Duyn were born in Waterloo, Iowa.

She was educated at the University of Northern Philip Traherne, a wealthy innkeeper who was Iowa and the University of Iowa at Iowa City.
twice mayor of the city. Thomas was educated She has taught at, among other schools, the
at Brasenose College, Oxford, and became rec-University of Iowa, the University of Louisville, tor of Credenhill, Herefordshire, in 1657. He and Washington University. From 1974 to was ordained in 1660, the year before taking his 1978, Van Duyn and her husband, Jarvis Thur-
M.A. In 1669, he was made B.D., probably in ston, edited Perspective: A Quarterly of Litera- recognition of his Roman Forgeries (which ture. Generally writing about ordinary people exposed ecclesiastical forgery of documents), and the realities of their lives, she also finds and appointed chaplain to Sir Orlando Bridge-inspiration in current events, literature, and phi-man, lord keeper of the Great Seal, after which losophy. She was poet laureate of the United he lived in London. His Christian Ethics States in 1992 - 93 appeared a year after his death, but his poems and prose meditations remained unknown until Henry Vaughan (1621-1695), pp. 490-98
.
the early twentieth century, when manuscript
Henry Vaughan was born in Newton-upon-Usk, volumes began to be discovered and published.
Breconshire, the son of a Welsh gentleman and His Centuries of Meditation was probably writ-his wife, and the twin of Thomas, who became ten during his time at Credenhill, when he was a natural physician, or alchemist. Henry part of a religious circle led by Susanna Hopton, attended J e s u s College, Oxford, and went on to a High Anglican who converted for a time to London to study law, but was deflected by the Catholicism and to whom Traherne dedicated civil war. He may have fought for the Royalists the Centuries.

before returning to Breconshire, where he seems to have taken up medicine, perhaps in the Frederick Goddard Tuckerman

1640s. A poem in his first collection (1646), (1 8 2 1 - 1 8 7 3) , pp. 1086-8 7

“Upon the Priory Grove,” records his courtship

Frederick Goddard Tuckerman was born in Boston of Catherine Wise, whom he was to marry and ton, Massachusetts, to a distinguished New whose younger sister, Elizabeth, became his sec-England family. He was educated at Harvard ond wife. The collection is almost entirely sec-University (where the poet Jones Very was one ular, as was his second, Olor Iscanus (1651), but of his tutors) and Harvard Law School. In the his third, Silex Scintillans (1655), and his sub-late 1840s, Tuckerman gave up the law to study

sequent work, is of religious and devotional his first loves: astronomy, botany, and poetry. He nature. An interest in Hermeticism appears in lived a retired and scholarly life at his family several poems, which allude to theories found in 2 1 3 4 / B I O G R A P H I C A L S K E T C H E S

his brother's treatises on the subject. Vaughan

University and M.A. and Ph.D. from the Uni-acknowledged George Herbert as a significant versivity of Iowa.

From 1936 until 1939, she was influence, writing that Herbert's "holy life and employed by the Writer's Project of the Works verse gained many pious Converts (of whom I

Progress Administration in Iowa, where she am the least)."

struck up a mutually beneficial association with her coworker the novelist and, later, poet Rich-

J o n e s V e r y (1 8 1 3 - 1 8 8 0) , pp. 1044-45

ard Wright. She subsequently worked as a social

Jones Very was born in Salem, Massachusetts.

worker, reporter, and magazine editor and

He was educated at Harvard College, then taught at Livingston

College, West Virginia became a tutor in Greek while he pursued a State College, and Jackson State College (now degree at the Divinity School. In 1838, after a University). In addition to poetry, she published conversion experience, Very repudiated Unitar-

a biography of Wright and a collection of auto-

ianism for a rigorous mysticism and felt com-biographical essays. Her poems, set in a South-pelled to surrender himself completely to the ern landscape, sometimes call upon African will of God. Remanded to an asylum for evalu-

Americans to take action against oppressive ation at the request of his colleagues, he was social conditions.

declared sane and released, after which he retired to his parental home, in Salem, where he E d m u n d Waller (1 6 0 6 - 1 6 8 7) , pp. 3 9 3 - 9 4

lived a scholarly and reclusive life. In the eigh-Edmund Waller was the eldest son of a wealthy teen months following his release, Very wrote landowner in Hertfordshire, England, and his some three hundred poems, including a mystical wife. Educated at Eton and King's College, sonnet sequence. His one published collection,
Cambridge, he became a Member of Parliament Essays and Poems (1839), was edited by Ralph at age sixteen and swiftly gained a reputation as Waldo Emerson. Very's work fell into obscurity a brilliant orator. In his thirties, he courted until the twentieth century, when it was redis-

Dorothy Sidney, granddaughter of Robert Sid-covered by the poet and critic Yvor Winters.
ney and grandniece of Philip and Mary Sidney;
he addressed her under the poetic name "Sac-D e r e k W a l c o t t (b . 1 9 3 0) , pp. 1820-29
charissa" (Sweetness). After participating in the Derek Walcott was born on the island of St.
philosophical circle around Lucius Cary at Lucia, in the British West Indies, and educated

Great Tew, Oxfordshire, he changed his political stance from Parliamentarian to Royalist. His part in a plot to secure London for the king was to Trinidad, where he has worked as a book discovered in 1643, but he avoided execution by reviewer, an art critic, a playwright, and the a confession and an eloquent plea for clemency.

artistic director of a theater workshop. He has

Exiled, he traveled in France, Italy, and Swit-

also been poet-in-residence at a number of zerland with his friend John Evelyn until 1651, American colleges and universities and has when he was allowed to return to England; received a MacArthur Award. At once flamboy-

although he wrote in praise of Oliver Cromwell,

ant and disciplined, poems such as his wittily

he regained a place in Parliament after the Res-titled A Far Cry from Africa proclaim his divided toration and advocated religious toleration. Wal-roots, as a black poet writing from within both ler's first known poem, commemorating Prince the English literary tradition and the history of Charles's escape from shipwreck (ca. 1625), is a subject people. He has since proved the truth

an early example of the use of heroic couplets of Yeats's statement that "out of the quarrel with in English. His Instructions to a Painter ourselves we make poetry." Isolation is Walcott's appeared in 1666. John Dryden was among his theme; and as with Yeats, the writing and producing of plays has increased the emotional and style.

dramatic range of his poetry. The movement of Another Life (1973) and Midsummer (1984) is Robert Penn Warren (1905 - 1989), freer, more flexible than that of earlier work, but

pp. 1456-60

Walcott's language still has the accuracy and

Robert Penn Warren was born in Guthrie, Kentucky. He was educated at Vanderbilt University.

American contemporaries—the natural heir of the University of California at Berkeley, his friend Robert Lowell. In 1992, following the Yale University, and Oxford University. At Van-publication of his verse epic Omeros, which is associated with the Fugitives, a transposes elements of Homeric epic from the literary group whose members included professors John Crowe Ransom and Donald Davidson the Nobel Prize for Literature.

and fellow student Allen Tate. He later became a member of the Agrarian movement. Warren

Margaret Walker (1915 - 1998), pp. 1516- taught at, among other schools, Vanderbilt;

Louisiana State University, where with Cleanth
Margaret Walker was born in Birmingham, Ala-Brooks he cofounded the influential Southern bama. She received her B.A. from Northwestern Review; the University of Minnesota; and Yale.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2135

In addition to poetry, he wrote Brother to Drag- lished a poem in a Boston newspaper in 1767.

ons (1953), a verse drama; fiction (his novel All

In 1773, they sent her to London with their son,
the King's Men won the Pulitzer Prize in 1946);

in the hope of strengthening her frail constitu-and criticism. A textbook he cowrote with tion. She published a collection of poems during Cleanth Brooks, Understanding Poetry, influ-her stay, but returned after a few months when enced generations of students. In 1986, he was her mistress fell ill. Freed on her return, she named the first poet laureate of the United married John Peters, a free black man, in 1778; States.

after bearing and burying three children, she died in poverty and obscurity. Influenced by

Isaac Watts (1674-1748), pp. 589-94

John Milton and Alexander Pope, she charac-

Isaac Watts was born in Southampton, England,

teristically wrote in rhymed iambic-pentameter and educated in the city's grammar school and couplets or the ballad form, often using highly

the Nonconformist academy at Stoke Newingartificial diction. Like other Puritan colonial ton. His father was a clothier who later became writers, however, she employed an emotionally a Nonconformist schoolmaster. Watts became restrained, highly accessible, “plain” style for minister of Mark Lane Chapel, London, in poems on religious subjects.

1702; when overwork led to illness in 1712, he moved into the household of Sir Thomas and Walt Whitman
(1819-1892), pp. 1060-86

Lady Abney, where he remained the rest of his

Walt Whitman was born on Long Island, New life. Although he wrote theological and educa-York, and raised in Brooklyn. He left school at tional works, Pindaric odes, blank verse, and age eleven and worked as an office boy, a experimental poems such as “The Day of Judg-printer’s apprentice, and a teacher before estabment,” which is in English Sapphics, he is lishing himself as a journalist affiliated with sev-chiefly remembered for his Divine Songs for eral prominent New York newspapers. In 1862, Children (1715) and four collections of hymns.

moved by the scenes he witnessed while staying

The volume The Psalms of David Imitated in the with his brother (a wounded Union soldier) in Language of the New Testament (1719) contains Washington, D.C., he spent several months vis-some of the most famous hymns in English. iting and nursing Civil War veterans. This work Watts wanted his poems to “elevate” readers “to found its way into his 1865 poetry volume,

the most delightful and divine Sensations” and

Drum-Taps. After the war, Whitman worked to provide models of appropriate Christian briefly at the Department of the Interior—he responses to trial and difficulty.

was fired for being the author of the “scandalous” Leaves of Grass (1855)—and for several years at the office of the attorney general. After Charles Wesley (1707-1788), pp. 652-55 Charles Wesley was born at Epworth Rectory, suffering a debilitating stroke in 1873, he moved to his brother’s home in Camden, New Jersey, Lincolnshire, England. Like his older brother John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, he was where he remained until his death. In Leaves of Grass, the masterpiece that he revised for several decades, Whitman assumed the mantle of the public poet; his preface to the 1855 edition calls Edward Oglethorpe, governor of the colony, but “the United States themselves” his subject.

returned to England the following year. When Poetry that celebrated the body and sexuality, the established Church charged him with “irregularity,” he became an itinerant minister. For His prosody proved as controversial and ultimately as influential as his subject matter. He is preaching and helping groups of believers to usually considered, along with Emily Dickinson, found churches. He retired in 1756 due to poor the most important of nineteenth-century Amer-health and lived out his last years in Bath and ican poets.

London. An accomplished poet who wrote on a variety of subjects—including love, marriage, Isabella Whitney (fl. 1567-1573), pp. 146-and family life—he is best- known as an extraor-

50 dinarily prolific hymn writer, publishing some Isabella Whitney was born into a middle-class, sixty-five hundred hymns in his lifetime, many Reformist family and apparently had two broth-

of which remain popular today.
ers (one of whom published a collection of poetry) and several sisters. Almost nothing is Phillis Wheatley (ca. 1753-1784), pp. 719- known of her personal life, although it is 23

thought that by 1600 she had married and Phillis Wheatley was born in Africa, sold into begun raising two children. Of the three books slavery, and in 1761 shipped to the slave market of poetry published by English women during in Boston. She was bought by John Wheatley, a the sixteenth century, two are hers. Copy of a prosperous tailor, for his wife, Susannah. The Letter Lately Written in Meter, by a Young Gen-

family gave Wheatley a good education and tlewoman: to Her Unconstant Lover. With an encouraged her writing talent, and she pub-Admonition to All Young Gentlewomen, and to

2136 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

All Other Maids in General to Beware of Men's and has a particular facility for depicting dra-

Flattery (1567) contains both the letter matic situations.

described and the gentleman's reply; A Sweet

Nosegay or Pleasant Posy, Containing a Hundred William Carlos Williams (1883-1963), and Ten Philosophical Flowers (1573) was the pp. J 2 7 2 - 8 3

first book of poems ever published by an En-

William Carlos Williams was born in Rutherglishwoman. The "flowers," which render folk ford, New Jersey. In 1906, he earned an M.D.

and Christian wisdom in ballad-stanza form, from the University of Pennsylvania, where he have not yet been republished in their entirety.

met the poets Ezra Pound and H. D. In 1910,

he opened a pediatrics practice in Rutherford,

John Greenleaf Whittier (1807-1892),

where, except for a year's "sabbatical" in Europe,

he lived and practiced medicine for the rest of

pp. 957-60

his life. Although strongly established in Ruth-

John Greenleaf Whittier was born into a Q u a k e r erford, Williams was hardly provincial. He family on a farm near Haverhill, Massachusetts.

moved in New York's avant-garde circles—along

Except for a year's study at Haverhill Academy, with the poets Marianne Moore and Wallace

he received little formal education. With the Stevens—and was affiliated with several short-help of literary-minded friends, Whittier found lived but influential journals. In addition to a number of jobs with small newspapers. In the poetry, he wrote fiction, drama, and essays. Williams was an early proponent of Imagism, a movement he valued for its stripping away of turned his full attention to writing, often on conventions. Later, he declared himself an Objectivist. Williams called on his contemporaries to create a distinctly American art, firmly recollective idyll on his childhood. Several of his poems were set to music and became popular hymns, but his reputation rests on the Paterson (1946—58), is a five-volume poem that recounts the history of poems that capture the essence of preindustrial Rutherford and nearby Paterson and transforms life in the villages of New England. it into the locus of modern humanity.

Richard Wilbur (b. 1921), pp. 1632-41

Greg Williamson (b. 1964), pp. 2023-25

Richard Wilbur was born in New York City and

Greg Williamson was born in Columbia, Ohio, educated at Amherst College and Harvard University and raised in Nashville, Tennessee. He holds degrees from Vanderbilt University and the University of Wisconsin at Madison, as well as from Johns Hopkins University, where he now teaches in the Writing Seminars. The author of The Beautiful Changes, published in 1947; since that early success, he has become known as one of America's major formalist poets. An acclaimed writer for children and literary essayist, he is also a translator, and his rhymed versions of Moliere, in particular, have won him international esteem. He was poet laureate of the United States in 1987—88 and has taught at many institutions, including Harvard, (1947-1980), pp. 549-53

John Wilmot was born at Ditchley, Oxfordshire, Wellesley College, Wesleyan University, and England, to a Cavalier hero and a devout Puritan mother. After attending Wadham College, Oxford, he toured Europe, returning in 1664. He quickly became a favorite of King

C. K. Williams (b. 1936), pp. 1869-72

Charles II and a leading member of the court

Charles (Charles) Kenneth Williams was born in New-

“wits.” At age eighteen, he abducted the heiress ark, New Jersey. He was educated at Bucknell

Elizabeth Malet and was consequently impris-

College and the University of Pennsylvania. He oned in the Tower of London. He married her established a poetry-therapy program for emo-eighteen months later, having regained his positionally disturbed adolescents, served as a condition by serving courageously in the second tributing editor to American Poetry Review, and Dutch War

(1665). His time was then divided ghostwrote articles on psychiatry and architec-between family life in the country and life in

ture, before beginning an academic career. Hav-

London with a number of mistresses, including

ing taught at a number of colleges and Elizabeth Barry, a popular actress. According to universities, he now teaches at Princeton Uni-Samuel Johnson, Rochester “blazed out his versity and lives part of each year in Paris. In youth and health in lavish voluptuousness” (he addition to poetry, he has published transla-claimed that he went five years without being tions, including Sophocles’ Women of Trachis sober); and by his early thirties, drink and vene-and Euripides’ The Bacchae.

Williams writes real disease were exacting a price. He consulted almost exclusively in long and discursive lines

a number of theologians, including the royal

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES / 2137

chaplain, Gilbert Burnet, who wrote a highly leger, he served in the Intelligence Corps of the popular pamphlet describing Rochester's renun-U.S. Army, in Italy. Having further studied at ciation of skepticism and conversion to Christ-the University of Iowa (under Donald Justice) tianity. A friend of many poets including John and in Rome, he published his first book, Six

Dryden and Aphra Behn, Rochester was Poems, in 1965. He has taught widely, at several renowned both as a satirist and as the author of institutions in Italy and at the University of Cal-erotic, sometimes pornographic, poetry, much ifornia at Irvine. He now lives in Charlottesville, of which was meant to be circulated in manu-Virginia, where he has been on the faculty of the script. He also wrote dramatic prologues and University of Virginia since 1983. He is known epilogues, imitations and adaptations of classi-both for his erudition (Italian and East Asian cal authors, and dramatic poems of self-analysis literature are among the influences in his both comic and grim.

poems) and for his attachment to rural life and landscape, especially that of Appalachia.

Eleanor Wilner (b. 1937), pp. 1879-82

Eleanor Wilner was born in Cleveland, Ohio. James Wright
(1927-1980), pp. 1749-51

She was educated at Goucher College and Johns

J a m e s Wright was born and raised in Martin's

Hopkins University, from which she received a Ferry, Ohio. Upon graduation from high school,
Ph.D. A lifelong civil rights and peace activist, he joined the army and was stationed in occu-
she worked as a newspaper reporter, as a feature pied Japan. After his military service, he writer at a radio station, and as a consultant to attended Kenyon College, where he studied with the Maryland State Commission on the Aging
the poet John Crowe Ransom, and the Univer-before beginning an academic career. She has sity of Washington, where he studied with the taught at many institutions, including the Uni-poet Theodore Roethke. He later taught at the versity of Chicago, Northwestern University, University of Minnesota and Hunter College.

and Smith College. She currently teaches at Influenced by the psychologist Carl Jung, the Warren Wilson College and lives in Philadel-Expressionist poet Georg Trakl, and South phia.

American Surrealists Pablo Neruda and Caesar
Vallejo, he developed a style of juxtaposing dis-William Wordsworth (1770-1850), pp. 763-parate images and relying on the subconscious 805 mind to intuit connections between them. He William Wordsworth was born in Cockermouth, was also a poet of social concerns, often writing

Cumberland, in the north of England's Lake of the working class.

District, and was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge. A walking tour of Europe in his early twenties brought him into contact with the Judith Wright (1915-2000), pp. 1577-80 first throes of the French Revolution, whose Judith Wright was born in Armidale, New South Wales. He supported until the onset of the Terror.

Wales, Australia, and was educated at the Uni-

Upon his return to England, he settled with his universities of Sydney and Queensland. Active in sister, Dorothy, in the Lake District, where, the antiwar movement of the 1960s, she later apart from some few brief travels, he remained became a conservationist, and she ascribed her for the rest of his life. In 1795, he met the poet

interest in the environment to working the land

Samuel Taylor Coleridge, with whom he pub-at her family's estate at Willamumbi during lished Lyrical Ballads (1798), one of the most World War II.

Wright made her home at Mount important and innovative works in the history of Tambourine, Queensland, for many years, but

English literature. In his later years, he grew moved to an animal preserve near Braidwood, increasingly conservative, and many former dev-New South Wales. She wrote prolifically in a otes accused him of apostasy, but his poetry number of genres, including poetry, criticism, remained both popular and influential—so fiction, and children's fiction. She was awarded influential and so formative of modern ideas the Queen's Gold Medal for Poetry in 1992, and about poetry that the scope of his achievement her Collected Poems, 1942—1985 was published is easily overlooked. In his preface to the second in 1994.

edition (1800) of the Lyrical Ballads, Wordsworth attacks the poetic diction and elaborate

Kit Wright (b. 1944), pp. 1946-47

figures of speech characteristic of eighteenth-

Kit Wright was born in Kent, England, and educated at New College, Oxford. He was a lecturer much pains to avoid it as others take to produce in Canada before becoming, in 1970, education it," and advocating the "language really used by officer at the Poetry Society in London, a post men." He succeeded Robert Southey as poet laureate in 1843 and completed a fully revised, was Fellow Commoner in Creative Art at Trinity six-volume edition of his work before his death.

College, Cambridge. His first volume of poems, The Bear Looked over the Mountain (1977) won Charles Wright (b. 1935), pp. 1865-68 the Geoffrey Faber Memorial Prize. His collection Hoping It Might Be So (2000) brings Tennessee. After his graduation from Davidson College together poems spanning nearly thirty years. He is also a prolific writer for children and a broad-eyn. Said to have been Wyatt's mistress, Boleyn caster.

2138 / BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES

is almost certainly an allegorical referent of Wyatt's poem "Whoso List to Hunt" and perhaps Richard Wright (1908-1960), pp. 1502-03

of other poems. Released soon after her execu-Richard Wright was born in Rucker's Plantation—which he witnessed through a grate from tion, Mississippi, the child of a sharecropper and his own cell in Bell Tower of the Tower of Lon-the grandchild of slaves. He was raised by varidon—Wyatt fell from royal favor again in 1541, ous relatives across the South before moving to when he was accused of treason; and in 1554, Chicago, where he wrote for the Federal Writ-during the reign of Q u e e n Mary, his son, Tho-ers' Project. He became a member of the Commas Wyatt "the younger," was hanged for treamunist Party and an editor of The Daily Worker.
son. It was probably to avoid any associations to Fame came to him on the publication of his Wyatt's son that Richard Tottel left Wyatt "the best-selling novel, Native Son (1940). In 1942, elder's" name off the title page of the famous he left the Communist Party and moved with his anthology of "songs and sonnets" that he pub-family to Paris, where he became active in Afri-

lished in 1557, the last year of Mary's reign.
can nationalism. Widely regarded for his novels Although Tottel praises the "weightiness of the but living in illness and poverty, he turned, in deepwitted Sir Thomas Wyatt the Elder's verse" his final year, to an early love, poetry, and wrote in the preface and includes ninety-seven of thousands of haiku.

Wyatt's poems in the first edition of the anthology, the title page mentions only Wyatt's
M a r y Wroth (1 5 8 7 - 1 6 5 1 ?) , pp. 347-53
younger poetic imitator, Henry Howard, "late Lady Mary Wroth was born into an aristocratic earl of Surrey." Tottel regularized the meter of family. Her mother, Barbara Gamage, a first many of Wyatt's poems and added titles to them, cousin of Sir Walter Raleigh, was praised by Ben
but most also survive in manuscript versions, Jonson for ensuring that her children were "well
some written and corrected in Wyatt's hand; taught." Wroth's father, Robert Sidney, her they exhibit a great variety of tones, forms, and uncle, Philip Sidney, and her aunt, Mary Sid-rhythms. As a translator of Petrarch, Wyatt ney, were all poets. Her arranged marriage to Sir introduced the sonnet form to English; he also Robert Wroth was unhappy; after his death in enriched English literature with satiric verse 1614, she had two children by her lover and epistles modeled on classical and Italian poems.

cousin, William Herbert, third earl of Pembroke and Montgomery. In 1621, she boldly published Elinor Wylie (1885 - 1928), pp. 1310-11

The Countess of Montgomery's Urania, addressed Elinor Wylie (nee Hoyt) was born in Somerville, to her lover's wife. Like Philip Sidney's Arcadia,

New Jersey, to a prominent family. Apart from a sonnet on which it is modeled, this long prose romance college preparatory course, she was educated at home, learning French, German, and drawing.

and meters. Appended to the romance is a sonnet sequence, Pamphilia to Amphilanthus, similar

A socialite who courted scandal when she left her husband and child, she lived at various times

similarly modeled on Sidney's sonnet sequence, in England, New York City, and Washington, Astrophil and Stella, but with a male love-object

D.C., and counted the writers Dorothy Parker, Ernest Hemingway, Edmund Wilson, and Edna

The Urania caused a scandal because it contained thinly veiled satire of well-known court

St. Vincent Millay among her friends. In addition, her work brought her the respect of prominent writers such as W. B. Yeats, who admired like her pastoral verse play, Love's Victory, was her poems, and William Faulkner, Max Beer-not published. Ben Jonson dedicated The Alche-

dedicated The Alche-

bohm, and Aldous Huxley, who praised her fiction to Wroth and, in a sonnet addressed to her, tion.

praised her poems for making him a “better lover, and much better poet.”

William Butler Yeats (1865-1939),

pp. 1188-1211

Thomas Wyatt (1503 - 1542) , pp. 126-36

W. B. Yeats was born in Sandymount, Dublin,

Thomas Wyatt was born at Allingham Castle, to a lawyer turned portrait-painter and his wife, Kent, England, and educated at St. John's Col-both of English Protestant stock, though both lege, Cambridge. He held various positions at families had lived in Ireland for several generacourt and served on diplomatic missions to tions. He studied painting at the Dublin Met-France, Spain, and Italy. Although he was ropolitan School of Art before turning his full knighted in 1535, his position as a courtier was attention to literature. Yeats's childhood and never secure. Imprisoned in 1534 for brawling early manhood were spent in Sligo, London, and

and perhaps for sexual misconduct (he had sep-

Dublin, and each contributed something to his arated from his wife), he was again imprisoned, development. In Sligo, he acquired a knowledge

after a quarrel with the duke of Suffolk, in 1536.

of the peasantry's life and vigorous folklore. In

Some have linked this imprisonment also with

London in the 1890s, he met the important the fall of Henry VIII's second wife, Anne Bol-poets of the day. In Dublin, he was influenced

B I O G R A P H I C A L S K E T C H E S / 2 1 3 9

by the currents of Irish nationalism and, Gonne (whose estranged husband had been exe-although often disagreeing with those who cuted as a leader of the Rising) that "tragic dig-wished to use literature for crude political ends, nity had returned to Ireland," Yeats returned. To nevertheless learned to see his poetry as con-

mark his new commitment, he refurbished and tributing to a rejuvenated Irish culture. His work occupied the Norman tower, on Lady Gregory's falls into three main periods. In the first, he land, that was to become one of the central symwrote dreamy poems and plays, laden with bols of his later poetry. In 1917, he married a poetic diction, many of them expressing his love

woman who, over the next twenty years, would for M a u d Gonne, a beautiful actress and violent prove so sympathetic to his imaginative needs nationalist, who persistently refused to marry that the automatic writing she produced for sev-him. His reading of the German philosopher eral years (believed by Yeats to have been dic-Friedrich Nietzsche in 1902 prompted him to tated by spirits) gave him the elements of a abandon the subservient posture of the courtly symbolic system that he later worked out in his lover, as his work in the theater was making his book A Vision (1925, 1937). This system writing less ornate and more colloquial. The sec-prompted the later and greater poems of his second period saw him involved—with Lady Greg-third period, those of The Tower (1928) and The ory and J. M. Synge—in the 1904 founding of Winding Stair (1933). In 1922, Yeats was the Abbey Theatre and its subsequent rise and appointed a senator of the recently established decline. He was becoming a national figure.

Irish Free State, and the following year he was Three public controversies moved him to anger awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature.
and to poetry: the first was over the hounding of “the uncrowned king of Ireland,” Charles Stewart Parnell; the second, over Synge’s play The Cynthia Zarin (b. 1959), pp. 207 3-7 5
Playboy of the Western World, in 1907; the third, Cynthia Zarin was born in New York City and over the Lane pictures, a collection of modern raised on Long Island. She was educated at Har-French paintings not housed in Dublin due to vard College and Columbia University. Artist-in-lack of funding, in 1913. In each, the cause for residence at the Cathedral of St. John the which he fought was defeated by representatives Divine, in New York City, she is a versatile writer of the Roman Catholic middle class; at last, bit-of nonfiction and has published several chil-terly turning his back on Ireland, Yeats moved dren's books as well as three volumes of poetry. to England. Then came the 1916 Easter Rising, She has taught at the Columbia School of Journalism by members of the class and religion nalism and Princeton University, and is a staff that had so long opposed him. Persuaded by writer for The New Yorker.

P E R M I S S I O N S A C K N O W L E D G M E N T S

Adcock, Fleur: "The Ex-Queen Among the Astronomers," "Poem Ended by a Death," and "The Soho Hospital for Women"

from POEMS 1960-2000. Copyright © 2000 by Fleur Adcock. Reprinted by permission of the publisher, Bloodaxe Books Ltd.

Ali, Agha Shahid: "The Dacca Gauzes" from THE HALF-INCH HIMALAYAS. Copyright © 1987 by Agha Shahid Ali.

Reprinted with permission of Wesleyan University Press. "Lenox Hill" from ROOMS ARE NEVER FINISHED by Agha Shahid Ali. Copyright © 2002 by Agha Shahid Ali. Used by permission of W. W. Norton & Co., Inc.

Ammons, A. R.: "The Arc Inside and Out," copyright © 1971 by A. R. Ammons. "The City Limits," copyright © 1971 by A. R. Ammons. "Corsons Inlet," copyright © 1963 by A. R. Ammons. From THE SELECTED POEMS: EXPANDED EDITION by A. R. Ammons. "Pet Panther," copyright © 1983 by A. R. Ammons. From LAKE EFFECT COUNTRY by A. R. Ammons. "All's All," copyright © 1996 by A. R. Ammons. From BRINK ROAD by A. R. Ammons. Used by permission of W. W. Norton & Co., Inc.

Armitage, Simon: "The Shout" from THE UNIVERSAL HOME DOCTOR. "The Two of Us" and excerpt from "Killing Time" from SELECTED POEMS. Reprinted by permission of David Godwin Associates for the author and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Ashbery, John: "Brute Image" from HOTEL LAUTREAMONT. Copyright © 1992 by John Ashbery. "Soonest Mended" from A DOUBLE DREAM OF SPRING. Copyright © 1970, 1969, 1968, 1967, 1966 by John Ashbery. "The Painter" from SOME TREES. Copyright © 1956 by John Ashbery. "Paradoxes and Oxymorons" from SHADOW TRAIN. Copyright ©

1980, 1981 by John Ashbery. Reprinted by permission of Georges Borchardt, Inc. for the author. "Ode to Bill" from SELF-PORTRAIT IN A CONVEX MIRROR by John Ashbery, copyright © 1974 by John Ashbery. Used by permission of Viking Penguin, a division of Penguin Group (USA), Inc. All poems published in Great Britain by Carcanet Press, Ltd. and reprinted by the publisher's permission.

Atwood, Margaret: "At the Tourist Center in Boston" from SELECTED POEMS 1966-1984 by Margaret Atwood. Copyright

© 1990 by Margaret Atwood. Reprinted by permission of Oxford University Press Canada. "You Begin" from SELECTED

POEMS II: POEMS SELECTED AND NEW, 1976-1986 by Margaret Atwood, copyright © 1987 by Margaret Atwood.

Also published in SELECTED POEMS 1966-1984, copyright © 1990 by Margaret Atwood. Reprinted by permission of Houghton Mifflin Co., Oxford University Press Canada, and Time Warner Books UK. All rights reserved. "Up" and "Flowers" from MORNING IN THE BURNED HOUSE by Margaret Atwood. Copyright © 1995 by Margaret Atwood. Reprinted by permission of Houghton Mifflin Co., McClelland & Stewart Ltd. The Canadian Publishers, and Curtis Brown Group Ltd., London on behalf of the author. All rights reserved. "This Is a Photograph of Me" from THE CIRCLE GAME by Margaret Atwood, copyright © 1968, 1998 by Margaret Atwood. Reprinted with the permission of House of Anansi Press, Toronto.

Auden, W. H.: "As I Walked Out One Evening," copyright © 1940 and renewed 1968 by W. H. Auden. "Twelve Songs, IX, Funeral Blues,” copyright © 1940 and renewed 1968 by W. H. Auden. “Twelve Songs XII, O Tell Me the Truth about Love,” copyright © 1940 and renewed 1968 by W. H. Auden. “Lullaby (Lay Your Sleeping Head, My Love),” copyright © 1972 by W. H. Auden. “Spain 1937,” copyright © 1940 and renewed 1968 by W. H. Auden. “Musee des Beaux Arts,” copyright © 1940 and renewed 1968 by W. H. Auden. “In Memory of W. B. Yeats,” copyright © 1940 and renewed 1968 by W. H. Auden. “In Praise of Limestone,” copyright © 1951 by W. H. Auden. “The Shield of Achilles,” copyright © 1952 by W. H. Auden. “September 1, 1939,” copyright © 1940 and renewed 1968 by W. H. Auden. “Their Lonely Betters,” copyright © 1951 by W. H. Auden. From COLLECTED POEMS by W. H. Auden. Used by permission of Random House, Inc. and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Baraka, Amiri: “An Agony, As Now” from THE DEAD LECTURER by Amiri Baraka. Copyright © by Amiri Baraka. “In Memory of Radio” from THE AMIRI BARAKA READER. Copyright © by Amiri Baraka. Reprinted by permission of SLL/

Sterling Lord Literistic, Inc.

Baxter, James K.: “Wild Bees,” “East Coast Journey,” and “New Zealand” published in COLLECTED POEMS OF JAMES

K. BAXTER, ed. J. R. Weir, Oxford University Press, Australia and New Zealand, 1979. Reproduced by permission of J. C.

Baxter.

Bernstein, Charles: “frequently unasked questions,” “why we ask you not to touch,” and “this poem intentionally left blank” from WITH STRINGS (Chicago: Univ. of Chicago Press, 2001). Used by permission of the author. “Of Time and the Line” from ROUGH TRADES (Los Angeles: Green Integer Books, 1991), pp. 42-43. Copyright © 1991 by Charles Bernstein. Reprinted with the permission of the publisher.

Berryman, John: From “Homage to Mistress Bradstreet” and “A Sympathy, A Welcome” from COLLECTED POEMS 1937-1971 by John Berryman. Copyright© 1989 by Kate Donahue Berryman. Dream Songs #1, #4, #14, #29, #40, #145, #324, #382 from THE DREAM SONGS by John Berryman. Copyright © 1969 by John Berryman. Copyright renewed 1997 by Kate Donahue Berryman. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus, & Giroux, LLC and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Betjeman, John: “Death in Leamington,” “The Arrest of Oscar Wilde at the Cadogan Hotel,” “East Anglian Bathe,” and “False Security” from COLLECTED POEMS by John Betjeman. Copyright © 1958, 1962, 1970, 1979 by John Betjeman.

Reproduced by permission of John Murray Publishers.

Birney, Earle: “Bushed” and “The Bear on the Delhi Road” from THE COLLECTED POEMS OF EARLE BIRNEY. Used by permission, McClelland & Stewart Ltd. The Canadian Publishers.

Bishop, Elizabeth: “The Armadillo,” “Casabianca,” “Filling Station,” “The Fish,” “In the Waiting Room,” “The Moose,” “One Art,” “Sandpiper,” and “Sestina” from THE COMPLETE POEMS 1927-1979 by Elizabeth Bishop. Copyright © 1979, 1983 by Alice Helen Methfessel. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus and Giroux, LLC.

Blunden, Edmund: “Forefathers” and “1916 seen from 1921” from SELECTED POEMS, ed. by Robyn Marsack (1982).

Reprinted by permission of Carcanet Press Ltd.

Bly, Robert: “Waking from Sleep” from SILENCE IN THE SNOWY FIELDS by Robert Bly, Wesleyan University Press, 2140

PERMISSIONSACKNOWLEDGMENTS / 2141

1962. Copyright © 1962 by Robert Bly. Reprinted with his permission. “Johnson’s Cabinet Watched by Ants” from THE LIGHT AROUND THE BODY by Robert Bly. Copyright © 1967 by Robert Bly. Copyright renewed 1995 by Robert Bly.

Reprinted by permission of HarperCollins Publishers Inc.

Bogan, Louise: “Juan’s Song,” “Man Alone,” “Medusa,” “Night,” “Roman Fountain,” and “Song for the Last Act” from THE BLUE ESTUARIES by Louise Bogan. Copyright © 1968 by Louise Bogan. Copyright renewed 1996 by Ruth Limmer.

Reprinted by permission of I ,irr.tr, Straus & Giroux, LLC.

Boland, Eavan: “That the Science of Cartography Is Limited,” “The Dolls Museum in Dublin,” and “The Pomegranate “from IN A TIME OF VIOLENCE, copyright © 1994 by Eavan Boland. Reprinted by permission of W. W. Norton & Co., Inc. and Carcanet Press Ltd.

Brathwaite, Edward Kamau: “New World A-Comin’, 1, 2” and “Ancestors 1, 2, 3” from ARRIVANTS: A NEW WORLD

TRILOGY (1973) by Edward Kamau Brathwaite. Reprinted by permission of Oxford University Press (UK).

Brooks, Gwendolyn: “kitchenette building,” “my dreams, my works, must wait till after hell,” “the birth in a narrow room,” “the rites for Cousin Vit,” “The Bean Eaters,” “We Real Cool,” “Medgar Evers,” and “Boy Breaking Glass” from BLACKS

(Chicago: Third World Press, 1987). Reprinted with permission of the author.

Brown, George MacKay: “The Old Women,” “Haddock Fisherman,” and “Shroud” from SELECTED POEMS 1954-1983

by George MacKay Brown. Copyright © 1959, 1965, 1971 by George MacKay Brown. Reproduced by permission of John Murray Publishers.

Brown, Sterling A.: “Slim in Atlanta,” copyright © 1932 by Harcourt Brace & Co. Copyright renewed 1960 by Sterling A.

Brown. “Chillen Get Shoes,” “Conjured,” and “Bitter Fruit of the Tree,” copyright © 1980 by Sterling A. Brown. From THE COLLECTED POEMS OF STERLING A. BROWN, ed. by Michael S. Harper. Reprinted by permission of HarperCollins Publishers, Inc.

Brownjohn, Alan: “Common Sense” from COLLECTED POEMS 1952-83 by Alan Brownjohn. Copyright © 1983 by Alan Brownjohn. Reprinted by permission of Rosica Colin Ltd.

Bunting, Basil: Excerpt from “Briggflatts: An Autobiography” from COMPLETE POEMS of Basil Bunting (2000). Reprinted by permission of Bloodaxe Books Ltd.

Bynner, Witter: “Chinese Drawings: A Philosopher,” “Haskell,” “More Lovely than Antiquity,” and “The Wintry Mind” from SELECTED POEMS by Witter Bynner. Copyright © 1978 by The Witter Bynner Foundation. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC.

Campbell, Roy: “The Zulu Girl” and “The Sisters” from THE COLLECTED POEMS OF ROY CAMPBELL. Reprinted by permission of Francisco Campbell Custodio and Jonathan Ball Publishers/A. D. Donker Publishers.

Carson, Anne: “IV” from THE BEAUTY OF THE HUSBAND by Anne Carson, copyright © 2001 by Anne Carson. “New Rule” and “Sumptuous Destitution” from MEN IN THE OFF HOURS by Anne Carson, copyright © 2000 by Anne Carson.

Used by permission of the publishers, Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc. and Jonathan Cape, a division of The Random House Group Limited.

Causley, Charles: “Armistice Day,” “At the British War Cemetery, Bayeux,” and “Eden Rock” from COLLECTED POEMS

1951—1975 (Macmillan). Reprinted by permission of David Higham Associates.

Christopher, Nicholas: “The Palm Reader” and “Far from Home” from 5° AND OTHER POEMS by Nicholas

Christopher.

Reprinted by permission of the author.

Clampitt, Amy: "Beach Glass," "Beethoven, Opus 111," "The Sun Underfoot among the Sundews," and "The Cormorant in Its Element" from THE KINGFISHER by Amy Clampitt, copyright © 1983 by Amy Clampitt. "Syrinx" from THE COLLECTED POEMS OF AMY CLAMPITT by Amy Clampitt, copyright © 1997 by the Estate of Amy Clampitt. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc. and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Collins, Billy: "Litany," copyright © 2002 by Billy Collins, from NINE HORSES by Billy Collins. Used by permission of Random House, Inc. and SLL/Sterling Lord Literistic, Inc. "Japan" from PICNIC, LIGHTNING by Billy Collins, copyright

© 1998. Reprinted by permission of the University of Pittsburgh Press.

Cope, Wendy: "Bloody Men," "Flowers," "Valentine," and "Serious Concerns" from SERIOUS CONCERNS. Copyright ©

1992 by Wendy Cope. Reprinted by permission of Faber & Faber Ltd.

Corn, Alfred: "Navidad, St. Nicholas Ave." from THE WEST DOOR by Alfred Corn. Copyright © 1988 by Alfred Corn.

Reprinted by permission of the author. "A Conch from Sicily" from PRESENT by Alfred Corn. Copyright © 1997 by Alfred Corn. Reprinted by permission of Counterpoint Press, a member of Perseus Books, LLC.

Corso, Gregory: "Marriage" from THE HAPPY BIRTHDAY OF DEATH, copyright © 1960 by New Directions Publishing Corp. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp.

Crane, Hart: "At Melville's Tomb," "My Grandmother's Love Letters," "Proem: To Brooklyn Bridge," "To Emily Dickinson,"

“Voyages I, II, III, IV, V, VI” from COMPLETE POEMS OF HART CRANE by Hart Crane, ed. by Marc Simon. Copyright © 1933, 1958, 1966 by Liveright Publishing Corp. Copyright © 1986 by Marc Simon. Used by permission of Liveright Publishing Corp.

Creeley, Robert: “Bresson’s Movies” from MIRRORS, copyright © 1983 by Robert Creeley. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp. and Marion Boyars Publishers. “I Know a Man,” “Heroes,” and “The World” from THE

COLLECTED POEMS OF ROBERT CREELEY, 1945-1975. Copyright © 1983 by The Regents of the University of California. Reprinted with the permission of the University of California Press.

Cullen, Countee: “Heritage,” “Incident,” and “Yet Do I Marvel” are from the Countee Cullen Collection, Amistad Research Center at Tulane University. Reprinted by permission.

Cummings, E. E.: “All in green went my love riding,” “the Cambridge ladies who live in furnished souls,” “Spring is like a perhaps hand,” “next to of course god america i,” “since feeling is first,” “somewhere i have never travelled, gladly beyond,”

“anyone lived in a pretty how town,” “may i feel said he,” “who are you, little i” from COMPLETE POEMS: 1904-1962

by E. E. Cummings, ed. by George J. Firmage. Copyright © 1923, 1925, 1926, 1931, 1935, 1938, 1939, 1940, 1944, 1945, 1946, 1947, 1948, 1949, 1950, 1951, 1952, 1953, 1954, © 1955, 1956, 1957, 1958, 1959, 1960, 1961, 1962, 1963, 1966, 1967, 1968, 1972, 1973, 1974, 1975, 1976, 1977, 1978, 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985, 1986, 1987, 1988, 1989, 1990, 1991 by the Trustees for the E. E. Cummings Trust. Copyright © 1973, 1976, 1978, 1979, 1981, 1983, 1985, 1991 by George James Firmage. Used by permission of Liveright Publishing Corp.

2142 / PERMISSIONS ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Curnow, Allen: “Landfall in Unknown Seas” from COLLECTED POEMS 1933-1973. Copyright © 1973 by Allen Cumow.

Reprinted by permission of Penguin Books (NZ) Ltd.

Davie, Donald: “Remembering the Thirties,” “The Fountain,” and “Time Passing, Beloved” from COLLECTED POEMS

(1983). Reprinted by permission of Carcanet Press Ltd.

Davison, Peter: “Equinox” and “Peaches” from THE POEMS OF PETER DAVISON by Peter Davison, copyright © 1995

by Peter Davison. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

De la Mare, Walter: From THE COMPLETE POEMS OF WALTER DE LA MARE (1969, 1970) by permission of The Literary Trustees of Walter de la Mare and the Society of Authors as their representatives.

Dickey, James: “The Lifeguard” from DROWNING WITH OTHERS. Copyright © 1961 by James Dickey. “Buckdancer’s Choice” and “Sled Burial, Dream Ceremony” from BUCKDANCER’S CHOICE. Copyright © 1965 by James Dickey.

Reprinted with permission of Wesleyan University Press.

Dickinson, Emily: Dickinson poems are reprinted by permission of the publishers and the Trustees of Amherst College from the following volumes: THE POEMS OF EMILY DICKINSON, Thomas H. Johnson, ed., Cambridge, Mass.: The Belknap Press of Harvard University Press, copyright © 1951, 1955, 1979, 1983 by The President and Fellows of Harvard College; THE POEMS OF EMILY DICKINSON: VARIORUM EDITION, Ralph W. Franklin, ed., Cambridge, Mass.: The Belknap Press of Harvard University Press, copyright © 1998 by The President and Fellows of Harvard College; THE POEMS OF

EMILY DICKINSON: READING EDITION, Ralph W. Franklin, ed., Cambridge, Mass.: The Belknap Press of Harvard University Press, copyright © 1998, 1999 by The President and Fellows of Harvard College.

H. D. (Hilda Doolittle): “Helen,” “Sea Rose,” “Sea Violet,” “The Walls Do Not Fall, 1” and “Wine Bowl” from COLLECTED

POEMS, 1912-1944, copyright © 1982 by The Estate of Hilda Doolittle. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp. and Carcanet Press Ltd.

Douglas, Keith: “Aristocrats,” “Gallantry,” “On a Return from Egypt,” and “Vergissmeinnicht,” from THE COMPLETE POEMS: THIRD EDITION by Keith Douglas. Copyright © 1998 by The Estate of Keith Douglas. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Dove, Rita: “Parsley” and “Dusting” from SELECTED POEMS, Pantheon, © 1993 by Rita Dove. Reprinted by permission of the author. “The Bistro Styx” from MOTHER LOVE by Rita Dove. Copyright © 1995 by Rita Dove. Used by permission of the author and W. W. Norton & Co., Inc.

Dufault, Peter Kane: “A Letter for All-Hallows (1949),” “A First Night,” and “Burden” were first published in THE NEW YORKER. Reprinted with the permission of the author.

Duffy, Carol Ann: “Warming Her Pearls” from SELLING MANHATTAN. Copyright © 1987 by Carol Ann Duffy. “Prayer”

from MEAN TIME. Copyright © 1993 by Carol Ann Duffy. Reprinted by permission of Anvil Press Poetry. “Little Red Cap” and “Anne Hathaway” from THE WORLD’S WIFE. Copyright © 1999 by Carol Ann Duffy. Reprinted by permission of the publishers Faher & Faber, Inc., an affiliate of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC and Pan Macmillan, London, UK.

Dunn, Douglas: “Thirteen Steps and the Thirteenth of March” from ELEGIES. Copyright © 1985 by Douglas Dunn. “A Removal from Terry Street” from TERRY STREET.

Copyright © 1969 by Douglas Dunn. “In the Grounds” from BARBARIANS. Copyright © 1979 by Douglas Dunn. Reprinted with the permission of Faber & Faber Ltd.

Dylan, Bob: Lyrics to “Boots of Spanish Leather” by Bob Dylan. Copyright © 1963 by Warner Bros., Inc. Copyright renewed 1991 by Special Rider Music. All rights reserved. International copyright secured. Reprinted by permission.

Eberhart, Richard: “The Fury of Aerial Bombardment” from COLLECTED POEMS 1930-1986 by Richard Eberhart. Copyright © 1960, 1976, 1987 by Richard Eberhart. Used by permission of Oxford University Press, Inc. and the author.

Eliot, T. S.: “Little Gidding” from FOUR QUARTETS, copyright © 1942 by T. S. Eliot and renewed 1970 by Esme Valerie Eliot, reprinted by permission of Harcourt, Inc. “Journey of the Magi” and “The Hollow Men” from COLLECTED POEMS

1909-1962 by T. S. Eliot, copyright © 1936 by Harcourt, Inc., copyright © 1964, 1963 by T. S. Eliot, reprinted by permission of Harcourt, Inc. and Faber & Faber Ltd. “The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock” and “The Waste Land” from THE COMPLETE POEMS AND PLAYS 1909-1950. Reprinted by permission of Faber & Faber Ltd.

Elizabeth I: “Ah Silly Pug, Wert Thou So Sore Afraid” from “A Lost Poem by Queen Elizabeth I” by L. G. Black, TIMES LITERARY SUPPLEMENT, May 23, 1968. Reprinted by permission of The Masters of the Bench of the Inner Temple.

“The Doubt of Future Foes” from POEMS OF QUEEN ELIZABETH I (Providence, Rhode Island: Brown University Press, 1964), edited by Leicester Bradner. Copyright © 1964 by Brown University/University Press of New England. Reprinted with the permission of the University Press of New England.

Empson, William: “Legal Fiction” and “Missing Dates” from COLLECTED POEMS OF WILLIAM EMPSON, copyright © 1949 and renewed 1977 by William Empson, reprinted by permission of Harcourt, Inc. and Chatto & Windus c/o The Random House Group Ltd.

Erdrich, Louise: "Birth" from BAPTISM OF DESIRE by Louise Erdrich. Copyright © 1990 by Louise Erdrich. Reprinted by permission of HarperCollins Publishers, Inc. "The Butcher's Wife" and "I Was Sleeping Where the Black Oaks Move" from JACKLIGHT by Louise Erdrich. Copyright © 1984 by Louise Erdrich, reprinted with the permission of The Wylie Agency, Inc.

Fenton, James: "A German Requiem," "Dead Soldiers," and "God, a Poem" from CHILDREN IN EXILE by James Fenton.

Copyright © 1985 by James Fenton. Also published in THE MEMORY OF WAR AND CHILDREN IN EXILE: POEMS 1968-1983. Copyright © 1983 by James Fenton. "In Paris With You" from OUT OF DANGER. Copyright © 1993, 1994 by James Fenton. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC and Peters Fraser Dunlop on behalf of James Fenton.

Ferlinghetti, Lawrence: "Sometime During Eternity ..." from A CONEY ISLAND OF THE MIND, copyright © 1958 by Lawrence Ferlinghetti. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp.

Fitzgerald, Robert: "Figlio Maggiore" from SPRING SHADE: POEMS 1931-1970, copyright © 1961 by Robert Fitzgerald. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp.

Frost, Robert: From THE POETRY OF ROBERT FROST, ed. by Edward Connery Lathem. Copyright © 1936, 1942, 1944, 1951, 1956, 1958 by Robert Frost, copyright © 1964, 1967, 1970, 1975 by Lesley Frost Ballantine, copyright © 1916, P E R M I S S I O N S A C K N O W L E D G M E N T S / 2 1

4 3

1923, 1928, 1947, 1969 by Henry Holt and Co. Published in Great Britain by Jonathan Cape. Used by permission of Henry Holt and Co., LLC and the Estate of Robert Frost and The Random House Group Ltd.

Gascoyne, David: "Yves Tanguy" and "Ecce Homo" from COLLECTED POEMS (1970) by David Gascoyne. Used by permission of Oxford University Press (UK).

Ginsberg, Allen: Part 1 from "Howl," copyright © 1955 by Allen Ginsberg, "To Aunt Rose," copyright © 1958 by Allen Ginsberg, "A Supermarket in California," copyright © 1955 by Allen Ginsberg. From COLLECTED POEMS 1947-1980 by Allen Ginsberg. Copyright © 1984 by Allen Ginsberg. Reprinted by permission of HarperCollins Publishers, Inc. and Penguin Books Ltd.

Gioia, Dana: "Prayer" and "The Next Poem" from THE GODS OF WINTER by Dana Gioia. Copyright © 1991 by Dana Gioia. Reprinted with the permission of Graywolf Press, St. Paul, MN 55114.

Gluck, Louise: "Gretel in Darkness" from THE HOUSE ON THE MARSHLAND from THE FIRST FOUR BOOKS OF POEMS by Louise Gluck. Copyright © 1968, 1971, 1973, 1974, 1975, 1976, 1977, 1978, 1979, 1980, 1985, 1995 by Louise Gluck. "Vita Nova" from VITA NOVA by Louise Gluck. Copyright © 1999 by Louise Gluck. "The Garden," p. 16

from THE WILD IRIS by Louise Gluck. Copyright © 1993 by Louise Gluck. Reprinted by permission of HarperCollins Publishers, Inc. and Carcanet Press Ltd.

Graham, Jorie: "The Geese," "At Luca Signorelli's Resurrection of the Body," and "The Surface" from THE DREAM OF

THE UNIFIED FIELD: POEMS 1974-1994 by Jorie Graham. Copyright © 1995 by Jorie Graham. Reprinted by permission of HarperCollins Publishers, Inc. and Carcanet Press Ltd.

Graves, Robert: "Love Without Hope," "In Broken Images," "Warning to Children," "The Persian Version," "To Juan at the Winter Solstice," and "The White Goddess" from COMPLETE POEMS (2000), by Robert Graves. Reprinted with the permission of Carcanet Press Ltd.

Greenlaw, Lavinia: "Skin Full," "What's Going On," and "A World Where News Travelled Slowly" from A WORLD WHERE

NEWS TRAVELLED SLOWLY. Reprinted by permission of Faber & Faber Ltd.

Guest, Barbara: "Twilight Polka Dots" from FAIR REALISM (Los Angeles: Green Integer Books, 1989), pp. 55-56.

Copyright © 1989 by Barbara Guest. Reprinted with the permission of the author and publisher. "Roses" from SELECTED POEMS. Copyright © 1995, 1993, 1989, 1976, 1973, 1968, 1962 by Barbara Guest. Reprinted with the permission of the author.

Gunn, Thom: "All Do Not All Things Well, Black Jackets," "From the Wave," "A Map of the City," "The Missing," "My Sad Captains," and "On the Move" from COLLECTED POEMS by Thom Gunn. Copyright © 1994 by Thom Gunn.

Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus and Giroux, LLC and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Gurney, Ivor: "To His Love," "The Silent One," and "First Time" from COLLECTED POEMS OF IVOR GURNEY (1982), ed. by P. J. Kavanagh. Reprinted with the permission of Carcanet Press Ltd.

Hall, Daniel: "Mangosteens" by Daniel Hall first appeared in THE NEW REPUBLIC, Dec. 6, 1993. Copyright © 1993 by Daniel Hall. Reprinted by permission of the author. "Love-Letter-Burning" from HERMIT WITH LANDSCAPE, copyright © 1990 by Daniel Hall. Reprinted by permission of Yale University Press.

Hall, Donald: "Exile" from THE ALLIGATOR BRIDE: POEMS NEW AND SELECTED by Donald Hall. Copyright © 1983

by Donald Hall. Reprinted by permission of the author.

"Independence Day Letter" from WITHOUT: POEMS by Donald Hall. Copyright © 1998 by Donald Hall. "Prophecy"

from THE ONE DAY by Donald Hall. Copyright © 1988 by Donald Hall. Reprinted by permission of Houghton Mifflin Co. All rights reserved.

Hamer, Richard, tr.: “Riddles 1, 2, 3,” “The Wife’s Lament,” and excerpt from “The Seafarer” from A CHOICE OF ANGLO-SAXON VERSE. Copyright © 1970 by Richard Hamer. Reprinted with the permission of Faber & Faber Ltd.

Harrison, Tony: “On Not Being Milton,” “Classics Society,” “Them & [uz] I & II,” “A Kumquat for John Keats,” and “The Heartless Art” from SELECTED POEMS, 2nd ed. Copyright © 1984, 1987 by Tony Harrison. Reprinted with the permission of Gordon Dickerson.

Hass, Robert: “Tahoe in August” from HUMAN WISHES by Robert Hass. Copyright © 1989 by Robert Hass. Reprinted by permission of HarperCollins Publishers, Inc. “Meditation at Lagunitas” from PRAISE by Robert Hass. Copyright © 1974, 1975, 1976, 1977, 1978, 1979 by Robert Hass. First published by The Ecco Press in 1979. Reprinted by permission.

Hayden, Robert: ” ‘Mystery Boy’ Looks for Kin in Nashville,” “Night, Death, Mississippi,” copyright © 1962, 1966 by Robert Hayden. “Mourning Poem for the Queen of Sunday,” copyright © 1966 by Robert Hayden. “Paul Laurence Dunbar,” copyright © 1978 by Robert Hayden. “Those Winter Sundays,” copyright © 1966 by Robert Hayden. From COLLECTED

POEMS OF ROBERT HAYDEN by Robert Hayden, ed. by Frederick Glaysher. Copyright © 1985 by Emma Hayden. Used by permission of Liveright Publishing Corp.

Heaney, Seamus: From BEOWULF, tr. by Seamus Heaney. Copyright © 2000 by Seamus Heaney. Used by permission of W. W. Norton & Co., Inc. and Faber & Faber Ltd. Excerpt from “Clearances,” “Digging,” “A Dream of Jealousy,” “The Forge,” “Fosterling,” “Punishment,” “The Settle Bed,” “The Skunk,” “The Skylight,” excerpt from “Squarings,” excerpt from

“Station Island,” and “Two Lorries” from OPENED GROUND: SELECTED POEMS 1966-1996 by Seamus Heaney.

Copyright © 1998 by Seamus Heaney. “Casting and Gathering” from SEEING THINGS by Seamus Heaney.
Copyright

© 1991 by Seamus Heaney. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Hecht, Anthony: “Death the Painter,” copyright © 1995 by Anthony Hecht. Reprinted by permission of the author. “A Hill,”

“The Ghost in the Martini,” “Still Life,” and “The Dover Bitch” from COLLECTED EARLIER POEMS by Anthony Hecht, copyright © 1990 by Anthony E. Hecht. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc. and the author. “The Book of Yolek” from THE TRANSPARENT MAN by Anthony Hecht, copyright © 1990
by Anthony E. Hecht.

Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

Hill, Geoffrey: “The Laurel Axe” and “Lachrimae Verae” first published in TENEBRAE (1978), copyright © 1978, 1985 by Geoffrey Hill. “Veni Coronaberis,” “The Distant Fury of Battle,” and “The Guardians” first published in FORTHE
UNFALLEN (1959), copyright © 1959, 1985 by Geoffrey Hill. “September Song” first published in KING LOG (1968),
copyright

© 1968, 1985 by Geoffrey Hill. VI, VII, VIII first published in MERCIAN HYMNS (1971), copyright © 1971, 1985 by Geoffrey Hill. From NEW AND COLLECTED POEMS, 1952-1992 by Geoffrey Hill. Copyright © 1994 by Geoffrey Hill.

Published in Great Britain in COLLECTED POEMS by Geoffrey Hill. Reprinted by permission of Houghton Mifflin Co.

and Penguin Books Ltd. All rights reserved.

2144 / PERMISSIONS ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Hine, Daryl: "Letting Go" and "Riddle" from POSTSCRIPTS by Daryl Hine, copyright © 1990 by Daryl Hine. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

Hollander, John: "Swan and Shadow" from TYPES OF SHAPE (New Haven: Yale Univ. Press, 1991). Reprinted by permission of the author. "Adam's Task" from SELECTED POETRY by John Hollander, copyright © 1993 by John Hollander.

"An Old-Fashioned Song" and "Variations on a Fragment by Trumbull Stickney" from TESSARAE AND OTHER POEMS by John Hollander, copyright © 1993 by John Hollander. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

Hope, A. D.: "Imperial Adam," "Australia," "Advice to Young Ladies," and "Inscription for War" by A. D. Hope from COLLECTED POEMS 1930-1970. Reprinted by permission of Curtis Brown Pty Ltd.

Housman, A. E.: "Crossing Alone the Nighted Ferry" and "Here Dead Lie We Because We Did Not Choose" from THE COLLECTED POEMS OF A. E. HOUSMAN. Copyright © 1936 by Barclays Bank Ltd., © 1964 by Robert E. Symons, © 1965 by Henry Holt and Co. Reprinted by permission of Henry Holt and Co., LLC and The Society of Authors as the Literary Representative of the Estate of A. E. Housman.

"Loveliest of Trees, the Cherry Now," "Reveille," "When I Watch the Living Meet," "To an Athlete Dying Young," "Is My Team Ploughing," "On Wenlock Edge the Wood's in Trouble," "From Far, from Eve and Morning," "With Rue My Heart Is Laden," "Terence, This Is Stupid Stuff . . . , "

"Astronomy," "Epitaph on an Army of Mercenaries," "Crossing Alone the Nighted Ferry," and "Here Dead Lie We Because We Did Not Choose." Reprinted by permission of

The Society of Authors as the Literary Representative of the Estate of A. E. Housman.

Howard, Richard: “Nikolaus Mardruz to his Master Ferdinand, Count of Tyrol, 1565” first appeared in THE YALE REVIEW, 83, #3 (July 1995). Copyright © 1995 by Richard Howard. Reprinted by permission of the author.

Hughes, Langston: From THE COLLECTED POEMS OF LANGSTON HUGHES by Langston Hughes, copyright © 1994

by The Estate of Langston Hughes. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc. and Harold Ober Associates, Inc.

Hughes, Ted: “The Thought-Fox,” “Wind,” “Pike,” “Theology,” Examination at the Womb Door,” “Daffodils,” and “Platform One” from COLLECTED POEMS by Ted Hughes. Copyright © 2003 by The Estate of Ted Hughes. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus, & Giroux, LLC and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Hugo, Richard: “The Lady in Kicking Horse Reservoir,” copyright © 1973 by Richard Hugo. “The Way a Ghost Dissolves,” from MAKING CERTAIN IT GOES ON: COLLECTED POEMS OF RICHARD HUGO by Richard Hugo. Copyright© 1984 by The Estate of Richard Hugo. Used by permission of W. W. Norton & Co., Inc.

Jackson, Laura Riding: From THE POEMS OF LAURA RIDING. Copyright © 2001 by the Board of Literary Management of the late Laura (Riding) Jackson. Reprinted by permission of Persea Books, Inc. (New York).

Jacobsen, Josephine: “Bus,” “The Primer,” and “Hourglass” from NEW AND SELECTED POEMS by Josephine Jacobsen.

Copyright © 1974 by Josephine Jacobsen. Reprinted with the permission of the author.

Jarrell, Randall: “The Death of the Ball Turret Gunner,” “Eighth Air Force,” “A Field Hospital,” “A Front,” “A Man Meets a Woman in the Street,” “Next Day,” and “90 North” from THE COMPLETE POEMS by Randall Jarrell. Copyright ©

1969, renewed 1997 by Mary von S. Jarrell. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Jeffers, Robinson: “Hurt Hawks” from SELECTED POEMS, copyright © 1927 by R. Jeffers, renewed © 1955 by Robinson Jeffers. “Shine, Perishing Republic,” “Boats in a Fog,” “The Purse-Seine,” and “Birds and Fishes” from THE SELECTED POETRY OF ROBINSON JEFFERS. Copyright © 1924, 1925, 1928, 1937, 1954 and renewed 1949, 1953, 1956 by Robinson Jeffers. Copyright © 1963 by Steuben Glass. Reprinted with the permission of Jeffers Literary Properties.

Jennings, Elizabeth: “One Flesh” and “My Grandmother” from COLLECTED POEMS 1953-1985 (Carcenet Press Ltd.). Reprinted by permission of David Higham Associates.

Justice, Donald: From NEW AND SELECTED POEMS by Donald Justice, copyright © 1995 by Donald Justice. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

Kiivanagh, Patrick: “Sanctity,” excerpt from “The Great Hunger,” “Epic,” and “Canal Bank Walk” from COLLECTED POEMS (N.Y.: W. W. Norton & Co, Inc., 1964). Copyright © 1964 by Patrick Kavanagh. Reprinted with the permission of Devin-Adair Publishers, Inc., Old Greenwich, CT 06830.

Kees, Weldon: “What the Spider Heard,” “Robinson,” “When the Lease Is Up,” and “For H. V.” reprinted from THE COLLECTED POEMS OF WELDON KEES, ed. by Donald Justice, by permission of the University of Nebraska Press. Copyright © 1975 by the University of Nebraska Press. Copyright © renewed by the University of Nebraska Press.

Kenney, Richard: “Aubade,” “Apples on Champlain,” and “Sawmill” from ORRERY. Copyright © 1985 by Richard Kenney.

Reprinted by permission of the author.

Keyes, Sidney: “War Poet,” “Elegy,” and excerpt from “The Foreign Gate” from COLLECTED POEMS OF SIDNEY KEYES, ed. by Michael Meyer (Routledge, 1988). Reprinted by permission of David Higham Associates.

Kinnell, Galway: “First Song” from WHAT A KINGDOM IT WAS by Galway Kinnell. Copyright © 1960, renewed 1988 by Galway Kinnell. “The Correspondence School Instructor Says Goodbye to His Poetry Students” and “After Making Love, We Hear Footsteps” from THREE BOOKS by Galway Kinnell. Copyright © 1993 by Galway Kinnell. Reprinted by permission of Houghton Mifflin Co. All rights reserved.

Kinsella, Thomas: “Ancestor,” “Tear,” and “Another September” from POEMS 1956-1973. Copyright © 1956, 1968, 1979

by Thomas Kinsella. Reprinted with the permission of Wake Forest University Press.

Kipling, Rudyard: “Tommy,” “Recessional,” and “Epitaphs of the War” from RUDYARD KIPLING’S VERSE: DEFINITIVE

EDITION. Reprinted with the permission of A. P. Watt Ltd. on behalf of the National Trust for Places of Historic Interest of Natural Beauty.

Kizer, Carolyn: “The Erotic Philosophers” from COOL, CALM & COLLECTED: POEMS 1960-2000. Copyright © 2001

by Carolyn Kizer. Reprinted with the permission of Copper Canyon Press, P.O. Box 271, Port Townsend, WA 98368-0271.

Koch, Kenneth: “To My Twenties” from NEW ADDRESSES by Kenneth Koch. Reprinted by permission of the Kenneth Koch Literary Estate. “Energy in Sweden” from ONE TRAIN by Kenneth Koch (N.Y.: Alfred A. Knopf, 1994). Copyright

© 1994 by Kenneth Koch. “Permanently,” “You Were Wearing,” and “Variations on a Theme by William Carlos Williams”

PERMISSIONS A C K N O W L E D G M E N T S / 2 1 4 5

from THANK YOU AND OTHER POEMS (N.Y.: Grove Press, 1962). Copyright © 1962 and renewed 1990 by Kenneth Koch. Reprinted by permission of the author.

Komunyakaa, Yusef: “Banking Potatoes,” “The Smokehouse,” and “Sunday Afternoons” from MAGIC CITY. Copyright ©

1992 by Yusef Komunyakaa. “Facing It” from PLEASURE DOME. Copyright © 2001 by Yusef Komunyakaa. Reprinted with the permission of Wesleyan University Press.

Kunitz, Stanley: “He,” “Robin Redbreast,” and “Touch Me” from THE COLLECTED POEMS by Stanley Kunitz. Copyright

© 2000 by Stanley Kunitz. Used by permission of W. W. Norton & Co., Inc.

Larkin, Philip: “Church Going” and “Born Yesterday” from THE LESS DECEIVED by Philip Larkin by permission of The Marvell Press, England and Australia. “Ambulances,” “Aubade,” “An Arundel Tomb,” “The Explosion,” “For Sidney Bechet,” “MCMXIV,” “Sad Steps,” “Talking in Bed,” “This Be The Verse,” “The Trees,” and “The Whitsun Weddings” from COLLECTED POEMS by Philip Larkin. Copyright © 1988, 1989 by the Estate of Philip Larkin. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Lawrence, D. H.: “Snake,” “Elemental,” “Self-Protection,” “Trees in the Garden,” “The English Are So Nice!” “Andraitx Pomegranate Flowers,” “Bavarian Gentians,” and “The Ship of Death” from THE COMPLETE POEMS OF D. H.

—

LAWRENCE by D. H. Lawrence, ed. by V. de Sola Pinto and F. W. Roberts, copyright © 1964, 1971 by Angelo Ravagli and C. M. Weekley, Executors of the Estate of Frieda Lawrence

Ravagli. Used by permission of Viking Penguin, a division of Penguin Group (USA), Inc.

Layton, Irving: “The Birth of Tragedy,” “Berry Picking,” and “The Cold Green Element” from THE COLLECTED POEMS OF IRVING LAYTON. Used by permission of McClelland & Stewart Ltd. The Canadian Publishers.

Lee, Li-Young: “Persimmons” from ROSE. Copyright © 1986 by Li-Young Lee. “Out of Hiding” from BOOK OF MY NIGHTS. Copyright © 2001 by Li-Young Lee. Reprinted with the permission of BOA Editions Ltd.

Leithauser, Brad: “Old Bachelor Brother” from THE MAIL FROM ANYWHERE by Brad Leithauser, copyright © 1990 by Brad Leithauser. “The Buried Graves” and “In Minako Wada’s House” from CATS OF THE TEMPLE by Brad Leithauser, copyright © 1986 by Brad Leithauser. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

Levertov, Denise: “Caedmon” from BREATHING THE WATER, copyright © 1987 by Denise Levertov. “Scenes from the Life of the Peppertrees” and “Triple Feature” from COLLECTED EARLIER POEMS 1940-1960, copyright © 1957, 1958, 1959, 1960, 1961, 1979 by Denise Levertov. “O Taste and See” from POEMS 1960-1967, copyright © 1964 by Denise Levertov. “Tenebrae” from POEMS 1968—1972, copyright © 1968 by Denise Levertov. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp. and Pollinger Ltd.

Levine, Philip: “They Feed They Lion” and “You Can Have It” from NEW SELECTED POEMS by Philip Levine, copyright

© 1991 by Philip Levine. “The Simple Truth” from THE SIMPLE TRUTH by Philip Levine, copyright © 1994 by Philip Levine. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

Lewis, Alun: “All Day It Has Rained” from RAIDER’S DAWN by Alun Lewis. Copyright © 1941 by Alun Lewis.

“Song” and

“Goodbye” from HA! HA! AMONG THE TRUMPETS by Alun Lewis. Copyright © 1945 by Alun Lewis. Reprinted by permission of HarperCollins Publishers Ltd.

Lewis, C. Day: “Two Songs” and “Where are the War Poets” from THE COMPLETE POEMS OF C. DAY LEWIS, published by Sinclair-Stevenson (1992), copyright © 1992 in this edition, and the Estate of C. Day Lewis. Reprinted by permission of Random House Group Ltd.

Longley, Michael: “Gorse Fires” and “Ghetto” from GORSE FIRES. Copyright © 1991 by Michael Longley. “The Linen Industry” from POEMS 1963-1983. Copyright © 1983 by Michael Longley. Reprinted with the permission of the author and Wake Forest University Press.

Lorde, Audre: “Coal” from UNDERSONG: CHOSEN POEMS OLD AND NEW by Audre Lorde. Copyright © 1973, 1970, 1968 by Audre Lorde. Used by permission of W. W. Norton & Co., Inc. and Abner Stein Ltd. “Echoes” from THE MARVELOUS ARITHMETICS OF DISTANCE: POEMS 1987-1992 by Audre Lorde. Copyright © 1993 by Audre Lorde. Used by permission of W. W. Norton & Co., Inc. and Abner Stein Ltd. “From the House of Yemanjá” from THE BLACK UNICORN by Audre Lorde. Copyright © 1978 by Audre Lorde. Used by permission of W. W. Norton & Co., Inc.

Lowell, Robert: “The Quaker Graveyard in Nantucket” and “Mr. Edwards and the Spider” from LORD WEARY’S CASTLE, copyright © 1946 and renewed 1974 by Robert Lowell, reprinted by permission of Harcourt, Inc. and Faber & Faber Ltd.

“Epilogue,” “For the Union Dead,” “Harriet” (p. 607), “My Last Afternoon with Uncle Devereux Winslow,” “Skunk Hour,” and “Water” from COLLECTED POEMS by Robert Lowell. Copyright © 2003 by Harriet Lowell and Sheridan Lowell.

Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Lowry, Malcolm: "Delirium in Vera Cruz" and "Strange Type" from SELECTED POEMS OF MALCOLM LOWRY, ed. by Earle Birney with the assistance of Margerie Lowry. Copyright © 1962 by Margerie Lowry. Reprinted by permission of City Lights Books. "The Wild Cherry" and "Eye-Opener" from THE COLLECTED POETRY OF MALCOLM LOWRY, ed. by Kathleen Scherf. Copyright by The Estate of Malcolm Lowry. Reprinted by permission of SLL/Sterling Lord Literistic, Inc.

MacCaig, Norman: "Kingfisher," "Summer Farm," and "Return to Scalpay" from COLLECTED POEMS by Norman MacCaig, published by Chatto & Windus. Used by permission of The Random House Group Ltd.

MacDiarmid, Hugh: "Another Epitaph on an Army of Mercenaries," from SELECTED POETRY, ed. by Alan Riach and Michael Grieve. Copyright © 1992 by Michael Grieve. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp. and Carcanet Press Ltd. Excerpt from "Lament for the Great Music" and excerpt from "In Memoriam James Joyce" from COMPLETE POEMS, ed. by Michael Grieve and W. R. Aitken (1993). Copyright © 1993 by Michael Grieve. Reprinted by permission of Carcanet Press Ltd.

MacLeish, Archibald: "Ars Poetica" and "The Snowflake Which Is Now and Hence Forever" from COLLECTED POEMS

1917-1982 by Archibald MacLeish. Copyright © 1985 by The Estate of Archibald MacLeish. Reprinted by permission of Houghton Mifflin Co. All rights reserved.

MacNeice, Louis: Excerpt from "Autumn Journal," "The Sunlight on the Garden," "Bagpipe Music," "London Rain," and

"Star-Gazer" from THE COLLECTED POEMS OF LOUIS MACNEICE, ed. by E. R. Dodds. Published by Faber & Faber Ltd. Reprinted with the permission of David Higham Associates Ltd.

2146 / PERMISSIONS ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

MacPherson, Jay: "The Swan" and "A Lost Soul" from POEMS TWICE TOLD: THE BOATMAN AND WELCOMING

DISASTER. Copyright © 1981 Oxford University Press.
Reprinted by permission of Oxford University Press Canada.

Mahon, Derek: "A Disused Shed in Co. Wexford," "In Carrowdore Churchyard," and "Girls on the Bridge" from COLLECTED POEMS by Derek Mahon (1999) and "The Window" are reprinted by kind permission of the author c/o
The Gallery Press, Loughcrew, Oldcastle, County Meath, Ireland.

Martinez, Dionisio D.: "In a Duplex Near the San Andreas Fault" and "What the Men Talk About When the Women Leave the Room: Steiglitz" from BAD ALCHEMY by Dionisio D. Martinez. Copyright © 1995 by Dionisio D.
Martinez. Used by permission of W. W. Norton & Co., Inc.

Maxwell, Glyn: Excerpt from "Letters to Edward Thomas" from THE BREAKAGE by Glyn Maxwell (Faber & Faber, 1988).

Copyright © 1988 by Glyn Maxwell. Reprinted by permission of Zachary Shuster Harmsworth on behalf of the author.

Meredith, William: "The Illiterate" and "Rhode Island" from EFFORT AT SPEECH: NEW AND SELECTED POEMS by William Meredith, published by TriQuarterly
Books/Northwestern University Press in 1997. Copyright © 1997 by William Meredith. All rights reserved. Used by permission of Northwestern University Press and the author.

Merrill, James: "Arabian Night" from COLLECTED POEMS
by James Merrill, ed. by J. D. McClatchy and Stephen Yenser, copyright © 2001 by the Literary Estate of James Merrill at Washington University. Used by permission of Alfred A.
Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc. "The Broken Home," "The Victor Dog," "Lost in Translation" from FROM THE FIRST

NINE: POEMS 1946-1976 by James Merrill. Copyright ©
1981, 1982 by James Merrill. Reprinted by permission of the Estate of James Merrill. "The Book of Ephraim: C" from THE CHANGING LIGHT AT SANDOVER by James Merrill.

Copyright © 1976 by James Merrill. Reprinted by permission of the Estate of James Merrill.

Merwin, W. S.: "Losing a Language" from THE RAIN IN THE TREES by W. S. Merwin, copyright © 1988 by W. S. Merwin.

"Whoever You Are" from THE RIVER SOUND by W. S. Merwin, copyright © 1999 by W. S. Merwin. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc. "The Drunk in the Furnace," "Odysseus," and "Separation," copyright © 2003 by W. S. Merwin. Reprinted with permission from The Wylie Agency.

Millay, Edna St. Vincent: "First Fig," "Second Fig," "Euclid Alone Has Looked on Beauty Bare," "Spring," "I, Being Born a Woman and Distressed," "The Buck in the Snow," "I Dreamed I Moved among the Elysian Fields," "Ragged Island," and

"Armenonville" by Edna St. Vincent Millay. From COLLECTED POEMS, HarperCollins. Copyright © 1922, 1923, 1931, 1950, 1951, 1954, 1958, 1982 by Edna St. Vincent Millay and Norma Millay Ellis. All rights reserved. Reprinted by permission of Elizabeth Barnett, literary executor.

Momaday, N. Scott: "Headwaters," "The Eagle-Feather Fan," "The Gift," and "Two Figures" from THE GOURD DANCER by N. Scott Momaday. Copyright © 1976 by N. Scott Momaday. Reprinted by permission of the author.

Montague, John: "Like Dolmens Round My Childhood, the Old People," "Old Mythology," "The Trout," and "All Legendary Obstacles" from COLLECTED POEMS by John Montague (1995). Reprinted by kind permission of Wake Forest University Press and The Gallery Press, Loughcrew, Oldcastle, County Meath, Ireland, on behalf of the author.

Moore, Marianne: "Poetry," "No Swan So Fine," "The Fish," "A Grave," "To a Steamroller," copyright © 1935 by Marianne

Moore, copyright renewed 1963 by Marianne Moore and T. S. Eliot. "What Are Years?" copyright © 1941 by Marianne Moore, copyright renewed 1972 by Marianne Moore. "Nevertheless," "The Mind Is an Enchanting Thing," copyright ©

1944 by Marianne Moore, copyright renewed 1972 by Marianne Moore. Reprinted with the permission of Scribner, an imprint of Simon & Schuster Adult Publishing Group, and Faber & Faber Ltd. from THE COLLECTED POEMS OF MARIANNE MOORE. "To a Chameleon" from THE COMPLETE POEMS OF MARIANNE MOORE, copyright © 1954

by Marianne Moore, renewed. "The Steeple-Jack" from THE COMPLETE POEMS OF MARIANNE MOORE, copyright © 1951, 1970 by Marianne Moore, renewed 1979 by Lawrence E. Brinn and Louise Crane, Executors of the Estate of Marianne Moore. Used by permission of Viking Penguin, a division of Penguin Group (USA), Inc. and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Moraes, Dom: "Kanheri Caves" and "Rendevous" from "Two from Israel" from IN CINNAMON SHADE: NEW AND SELECTED POEMS (2001) by Dom Moraes. "Snow on a Mountain" from COLLECTED POEMS 1957-1987 by Dom Moraes. Reprinted by permission of Carcanet Press Ltd.

Morgan, Edwin: "Strawberries," "King Billy," and "The Dowser" from COLLECTED POEMS. Copyright © 1982 by Edwin Morgan. Reprinted with the permission of Carcanet Press Ltd.

Moss, Howard: "Tourists" from NEW SELECTED POEMS by Howard Moss (1985). First published in A SWIM OFF THE ROCKS by Howard Moss. Copyright © 1976 by Howard Moss. "The Persistence of Song" from SELECTED POEMS of Howard Moss. Copyright © 1971 by Howard Moss.

Muir, Edwin: "Adams's Dream," "Childhood," and "The Return of the Greeks" from COLLECTED POEMS by Edwin

Muir, copyright © 1960 by Willa Muir. Used by permission of Oxford University Press, Inc. and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Muldoon, Paul: “Why Brownlee Left” from WHY BROWNLEE LEFT. Copyright © 1980 by Paul Muldoon. “Meeting the British” from MEETING THE BRITISH. Copyright © 1987 by Paul Muldoon. Reprinted with the permission of Wake Forest University Press and Faber & Faber Ltd. “Milkweed and Monarch” and “Third Epistle to Timothy” from POEMS

1968-1998 by Paul Muldoon. Copyright © 2001 by Paul Muldoon. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Murray, Les: “Noonday Axeman” and “The Quality of Sprawl” from THE VERNACULAR REPUBLIC by Les A. Murray.

Copyright © 1983, 1987, 1988 by Les A. Murray. Reprinted by permission of Persea Books, Inc. and Carcanet Press Ltd.

“Once in a Lifetime, Snow” and “Morse” from RABBITER’S BOUNTY by Les Murray. Copyright © 1992 by Les Murray.

Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC and Carcanet Press Ltd. Published in Great Britain in COLLECTED POEMS by Les Murray (1998).

Nash, Ogden: “The Cow,” “Reflections on Ice-Breaking,” “Requiem,” “Columbus,” and “The Turtle,” copyright © 1930, 1931, 1938 by Ogden Nash, renewed. Reprinted by permission of Curtis Brown, Ltd. from VERSES FROM 1929 ON and Andre Detusch Ltd., c/o Carlton Books from CANDY IS DANDY: THE BEST OF OGDEN NASH.

Nemerov, Howard: “The Goose Fish,” “A Primer of the Daily Round,” “The Blue Swallows,” “Boy with Book of Knowledge,”

“A Cabinet of Seeds Displayed,” and “Strange Metamorphosis of Poets” from THE COLLECTED POEMS OF HOWARD

NEMEROV, copyright © 1977 by Howard Nemerov. Reprinted by permission of Margaret Nemerov.

Nicholson, Norman: "Halley's Comet" from COLLECTED POEMS by Norman Nicholson. Reprinted by permission of Davis Higham Associates Ltd. "To the River Duddon" is reprinted by permission of Faber & Faber Ltd.

PERMISSIONS ACKNOWLEDGMENTS / 2147

O'Brien, Sean: "Cousin Coat" from COUSIN COAT: SELECTED POEMS, 1976-2001 by Sean O'Brien and "Welcome, Major Poet!" from DOWNRIVER by Sean O'Brien. Reprinted by permission of the publisher Pan Macmillan, London, UK.

O'Hara, Frank: "Why I Am Not a Painter," from COLLECTED POEMS by Frank O'Hara, copyright © 1971 by Maureen Granville-Smith, Administratrix of the Estate of Frank O'Hara. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc. "The Day Lady Died," "How to Get There," and "Ave Maria" from LUNCH POEMS by Frank O'Hara.

Copyright © 1964 by Frank O'Hara. Reprinted by permission of City Lights Books.

Olson, Charles: "Merce of Egypt" and "Variations Done for Gerald Van de Wiele" from COLLECTED POETRY OF

CHARLES OLSON, tr. and ed. by George Butterick. Copyright © 1987 Estate of Charles Olson (previously published poetry), © 1987 University of Connecticut (previously unpublished poetry). Reprinted with the permission of the University of California Press.

Ondaatje, Michael: "Driving with Dominic in the Southern Province We See Hints of the Circus" and "House on a Red Cliff" from HANDWRITING by Michael Ondaatje, copyright © 1987 by Michael Ondaatje. Used by permission of Ellen Levine Literary Agency/Trident Media Group and Bloomsbury Publishing PLC. "Letters and Other Worlds" from THE

CINNAMON PEELER, copyright © 1979, 1989 by Michael Ondaatje. Reprinted by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc. and Ellen Levine Literary Agency/Trident Media Group.

Ormond, John: “Cathedral Builders” and “Lament for a Leg” from CATHEDRAL BUILDERS AND OTHER POEMS by John Ormond (1991). Reprinted by permission of Glenys Ormond Thomas.

Ormsby, Eric: “Starfish” and “Skunk Cabbage” from COASTLINES by Eric Ormsby. Copyright © 1992 by Eric Ormsby.

Reprinted by permission of ECW Press, Toronto, Canada. “Origins” from FOR A MODEST GOD by Eric Ormsby. Copyright © 1997 by Eric Ormsby. Used by permission of Grove/Atlantic, Inc.

Page, P. K.: “Stories of Snow” and “Deaf-Mute in the Pear Tree” from THE HIDDEN ROOM (in 2 vols.) by P. K. Page (Erin, Ontario: The Porcupine’s Quill, 1997). Reprinted by permission of the publisher.

Palmer, Michael: “I Do Not” from THE PROMISES OF GLASS, copyright © 1999 by Michael Palmer. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp. “Of this cloth doll which” from FIRST FIGURE, copyright © 1984 by Michael Palmer. Reprinted by permission of the author.

Parker, Dorothy: “Unfortunate Coincidence,” “Resume,” and “One Perfect Rose” from DOROTHY PARKER: COMPLETE POEMS, published in Great Britain in THE COLLECTED DOROTHY PARKER. Copyright © 1999 by The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Reprinted by permission of Penguin, a division of Penguin Group (USA), Inc. and Gerald Duckworth & Co. Ltd.

“Pearl”: Excerpt from PEARL, by anonymous, ed. and tr. by Sara de Ford and others. Copyright © 1967 by Harlan Davidson, Inc. Reprinted by permission.

Pinsky, Robert: “Essay on Psychiatrists, IV and V” from SADNESS AND HAPPINESS, copyright © 1975 by Princeton University Press. Reprinted with the permission of the author and the publisher. “ABC” from JERSEY RAIN by Robert Pinsky. Copyright © 2000 by Robert Pinsky. “A Long Branch Song” and “The Street” from THE FIGURED WHEEL: NEW AND COLLECTED POEMS 1966-1996 by Robert Pinsky. Copyright © 1996 by Robert Pinsky. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC.

Plath, Sylvia: “Ariel,” “Elm,” “Tulips,” “Morning Song,” “Lady Lazarus,” and “Daddy” from ARIEL by Sylvia Plath. Copyright

© 1961, 1962, 1963, 1965 by Ted Hughes. Copyright renewed. From ARIEL by Sylvia Plath. Reprinted by permission of HarperCollins Publishers, Inc. and Faber & Faber Ltd. “Colossus” from THE COLOSSUS AND OTHER POEMS by Sylvia Plath, copyright © 1962 by Sylvia Plath. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Porter, Peter: “A Consumer’s Report,” “An Angel in Blythburgh Church,” and “An Exequy” from COLLECTED POEMS.

Copyright © 1983 by Peter Porter. Reprinted with permission of the author.

Pound, Ezra: “Portrait d’une Femme,” “The Garden,” “A Pact,” “Ts’ai Chi’h,” “In a Station of the Metro,” “The River-Merchant’s Wife: a Letter,” “Hugh Selwyn Mauberley: Life and Contacts,” “Medallion,” and “The Seafarer” from PERSONAE, copyright © 1926 by Ezra Pound. Canto I and Canto XLV from THE CANTOS OF EZRA POUND, copyright

© 1934, 1937, 1940, 1948, 1956, 1959, 1962, 1963, 1966, and 1968 by Ezra Pound. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp. and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Pratt, E. J.: “Come Not the Seasons Here” and “From Stone to Steel” from E. J. Pratt, COMPLETE POEMS, ed. by Sandra Djwa and R. G. Mayles. Copyright © 1989 by University of Toronto Press. Reprinted with permission of the publisher.

Raine, Craig: "The Onion Memory," "A Martian Sends a Postcard Home," and "For Hans Keller" from COLLECTED POEMS, 1978—1999 by Craig Raine. Reprinted by permission of David Godwin Associates on behalf of the author.

Raleigh, Sir Walter: "Fortune Hath Taken Thee Away, My Love" from "A Lost Poem by Queen Elizabeth 1" by L. G. Black, TIMES LITERARY SUPPLEMENT, May 23, 1968, 535. Reprinted by permission.

Ramanujan, A. K.: "Snakes," "Breaded Fish," and "Self-Portrait" from THE STRIDERS by A. K. Ramanujan (1966). Reprinted with the permission of the Estate of A. K. Ramanujan.

Randall, Dudley: "Ballad of Birmingham" from POEM COUNTERPOEM by Margaret Danner and Dudley Randall (Detroit: Broadside Press, 1969). Copyright © 1966 by Margaret Danner and Dudley Randall. Reprinted with the permission of Dudley Randall.

Ransom, John Crowe: From SELECTED POEMS, 3rd ed., revised and enlarged by John Crowe Ransom, copyright © 1924, 1927 by Alfred A. Knopf, Inc. and renewed 1952, 1955 by John Crowe Ransom. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc. and Carcanet Press Ltd.

Reed, Henry: "Chard Whitlow" and "Lessons of War 1, 2" from COLLECTED POEMS of Henry Reed (1991), ed. by Jon Stallworthy. Reprinted by permission of Oxford University Press (UK).

Rich, Adrienne: Parts 1 and 8 of "Eastern War Time" from AN ATLAS OF THE DIFFICULT WORLD: POEMS 1988-1991 by Adrienne Rich. Copyright © 1991 by Adrienne Rich. "Modotti" from MIDNIGHT SALVAGE: POEMS 1995-1998 by Adrienne Rich. Copyright © 1999 by Adrienne Rich. "Aunt Jennifer's Tigers," copyright © 2002, 1951 by Adrienne Rich. "Snapshots of a Daughter-in-Law," copyright © 2002, 1967, 1963 by Adrienne Rich. "Orion," copyright © 2002 by

Adrienne Rich. Copyright © 1969 by W. W. Norton & Co., Inc. “A Valediction Forbidding Mourning,” copyright © 2002

2148 / PERMISSIONS ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

by Adrienne Rich. Copyright © 1971 by W. W. Norton & Co., Inc. “Diving into the Wreck,” copyright © 2002 by Adrienne Rich. Copyright © 1973 by W. W. Norton & Co., Inc. from THE FACT OF A DOORFRAME: SELECTED POEMS

1950-2001 by Adrienne Rich. Used by permission of the author and W. W. Norton & Co., Inc.

Robinson, Edward Arlington: “Richard Cory,” “George Crabbe,” “Reuben Bright,” “Miniver Cheevy,” “The Mill,” “Mr.

Flood’s Party” are reprinted with the permission of Scribner, an imprint of Simon & Schuster, Adult Publishing Group, from THE COLLECTED POEMS OF EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON by Edwin Arlington Robinson (N.Y.: Macmillan, 1961).

Roethke, Theodore: “Root Cellar,” copyright © 1943 by Modern Poetry Association, Inc. “Child on Top of a Greenhouse,” copyright © 1946 by Editorial Publications, Inc. “My Papa’s Waltz,” copyright © 1942 by Hearst Magazines, Inc. “The Lost Son,” copyright © 1947 by Theodore Roethke. “Elegy for Jane,” copyright © 1950 by Theodore Roethke. “The Waking,” copyright © 1953 by Theodore Roethke. “I Knew a Woman,” copyright © 1954 by Theodore Roethke. “Wish for a Young Wife,” copyright © 1963 by Beatrice Roethke, Administratrix of the Estate of Theodore Roethke. “In a Dark Time,” copyright © 1960 by Beatrice Roethke, Administratrix of the Estate of Theodore Roethke. From THE COMPLETE POEMS OF THEODORE ROETHKE. Used by permission of Doubleday, a division of Random House, Inc. and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Rukeyser, Muriel: "Ballad of Orange and Grape" by Muriel Rukeyser. Copyright © 1973 by Muriel Rukeyser. "Night Feeding"

by Muriel Rukeyser. Copyright © 1951 and renewed 1979 by Muriel Rukeyser. "Rondel" by Muriel Rukeyser. Copyright © 1973 by Muriel Rukeyser. From A MURIEL RUKEYSER READER, ed. by Jan Heller Levi. Used by permission of W. W. Norton & Co., Inc. "Boy with His Hair Cut Short" by Muriel Rukeyser. Copyright © by William Rukeyser.

Reprinted by permission of International Creative Management, Inc.

Sandburg, Carl: "Chicago" from CHICAGO POEMS, copyright © 1916 by Holt, Rinehart and Winston, Inc. and renewed 1944 by Carl Sandburg, reprinted by permission of Harcourt, Inc. "Grass" from CORNHUSKERS by Carl Sandburg, copyright © 1918 by Holt, Rinehart and Winston and renewed 1946 by Carl Sandburg, reprinted by permission of Harcourt, Inc.

Sarah, Robyn: "Courtney, Mentioned in Passing, Years After" and "Relics" from QUESTIONS ABOUT THE STARS (Brick Books, 1998). Reprinted with permission of the author.

Sassoon, Siegfried: "They," "The General," "Glory of Women," "Everyone Sang," "On Passing the New Menin Gate" from COLLECTED POEMS OF SIEGFRIED SASSOON by Siegfried Sassoon, copyright © 1918, 1920 by E. P. Dutton.

Copyright © 1936, 1946, 1947, 1948 by Siegfried Sassoon. Used by permission of Viking Penguin, a division of Penguin Group (USA), Inc. and by kind permission of George Sassoon. "Christ and the Soldier" (1973) is used by kind permission of George Sassoon. Copyright © Siegfried Sassoon.

Schnackenberg, Gjertrud: "Darwin in 1881" and "Supernatural Love" from SUPERNATURAL LOVE: POEMS 1976-1992

by Gjertrud Schnackenberg. Copyright © 2000 by Gjertrud Schnackenberg. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC and Bloodaxe Books Ltd.

Schuyler, James: "Freely Espousing" and "Shimmer" from COLLECTED POEMS by James Schuyler. Copyright © 1993 by the Estate of James Schuyler. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC.

Seeger, Pete: "Where Have All the Flowers Gone?" Copyright © 1961 (Renewed) by Sanga Music, Inc. Reprinted with the permission of Sanga Music, Inc. Used by permission. All rights reserved.

Seth, Vikram: From THE GOLDEN GATE by Vikram Seth, copyright © 1986 by Vikram Seth. Used by permission of Random House, Inc.

Sexton, Anne: "The Truth the Dead Know" from ALL MY PRETTY ONES by Anne Sexton. Copyright © 1982 by Anne Sexton, renewed 1990 by Linda G. Sexton. "And One for My Dame" from LIVE OR DIE by Anne Sexton. Copyright © 1966 by Anne Sexton, renewed 1994 by Linda G. Sexton. Reprinted by permission of Houghton Mifflin Co. and Sterling Lord Literistic, Inc. All rights reserved.

Shore, Jane: "High Holy Days" from THE MINUTE HAND (Amherst: University of Massachusetts Press, 1987). Copyright

© 1987 by Jane Shore. Reprinted by permission of the publisher.

Simic, Charles: "Prodigy" and "Watch Repair" from CHARLES SIMIC: SELECTED EARLY POEMS. Copyright © 1999

by Charles Simic. Reprinted by permission of George Braziller, Inc. "A Book Full of Pictures" from HOTEL INSOMNIA by Charles Simic, copyright © 1992 by Charles Simic, reprinted by permission of Harcourt, Inc. "Cameo Appearance" from WALKING THE BLACK CAT, copyright © 1996 by Charles Simic, reprinted by permission of Harcourt, Inc.

Sissman, L. E.: "Dying: An Introduction, IV and V" and "A Deathplace" from NIGHT MUSIC: POEMS by L. E. Sissman,

ed. by Peter Davison. Copyright © 1999 by The President and Fellows of Harvard College. Reprinted by permission of Houghton Mifflin Co. All rights reserved.

Smith, Stevie: From COLLECTED POEMS OF STEVIE SMITH, copyright © 1972 by Stevie Smith. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp. and the estate of James MacGibbon.

Snodgrass, W. D.: From HEART'S NEEDLE by W. D. Snodgrass, copyright © 1959 by William Snodgrass. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc. and The Marvell Press. "Mementos, 1" from AFTER EXPERIENCE: POEMS AND TRANSLATIONS, copyright © 1967 by W. D. Snodgrass. Reprinted with permission of the author.

Snyder, Gary: "Four Poems for Robin" from THE BACK COUNTRY, copyright © 1968 by Gary Snyder. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp. "Instructions" from MOUNTAINS AND RIVERS WITHOUT END by Gary Snyder. Copyright © 1996 by Gary Snyder. Reprinted by permission of Counterpoint Press, a member of Perseus Books, LLC. "Above Pate Valley" from RIPRAP AND COLD MOUNTAIN POEMS, copyright © 1959 by Gary Snyder, is reprinted by permission of Avalon Publishing Group and the author.

Soto, Gary: "The Soup" and "Not Knowing" from NEW AND SELECTED POEMS by Gary Soto. Copyright © 1995 by Gary Soto. Used with permission of Chronicle Books LLC, San Francisco. Visit ChronicleBooks.com.

Soyinka, Wole: "Telephone Conversation," copyright © by Wole Soyinka. Reprinted by permission of the author.

Spender, Stephen: "I Think Continually of Those Who Were Truly Great" by Stephen Spender, copyright © 1964 by Stephen Spender, "Ultima Ratio Regum," copyright © 1942 and renewed 1970 by Stephen Spender, from SELECTED POEMS

PERMISSIONSACKNOWLEDGMENTS / 2149

by Stephen Spender. "Seascape," copyright © 1947 by Stephen Spender, from POEMS OF DEDICATION by Stephen Spender. Used by permission of Random House, Inc. and Ed Victor Ltd.

Stein, Gertrude: From "Stanzas in Meditation" from STANZAS IN MEDITATION AND OTHER POEMS. Used by permission of the Estate of Gertrude Stein, through its Literary Executor, Mr. Stanford Gann, Jr. of Levin & Gann, P.A.

Stevens, Wallace: From THE COLLECTED POEMS OF WALLACE STEVENS by Wallace Stevens, copyright © 1954 by Wallace Stevens and renewed 1982 by Holly Stevens. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc. and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Stevenson, Anne: "Temporarily in Oxford" from THE COLLECTED POEMS 1955-1995 (Bloodaxe Books, 2000) and

"Arioso Dolente" from GRANNY SCARECROW (Bloodaxe Books, 2000). Reprinted by permission of the publisher.

Strand, Mark: "Always" from THE CONTINUOUS LIFE by Mark Strand, copyright © 1990 by Mark Strand. Part XVI and XX from THE DARK HARBOR by Mark Strand, copyright © 1993 by Mark Strand. "The Prediction" from SELECTED

POEMS by Mark Strand, copyright © 1979, 1980 by Mark Strand. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

Swenson, May: "Motherhood" from NATURE by May Swenson. Copyright © 1994 by The Literary Estate of May Swenson.

Reprinted by permission of Houghton Mifflin Co. All rights reserved. "Cardinal Ideograms" from THE COMPLETE

POEMS TO SOLVE by May Swenson. "Waterbird" and "Goodbye, Goldeneye" from IN OTHER WORDS by May Swenson. Used with permission of The Literary Estate of May Swenson.

Tate, Allen: "Ode to the Confederate Dead" and "The Swimmers" from COLLECTED POEMS 1919-1976 by Allen Tate.

Copyright © 1977 by Allen Tate. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC.

Thomas, Dylan: "The Force That Through the Green Fuse Drives the Flower," "The Hand That Signed the Paper," copyright

© 1939 by New Directions Publishing Corp., "After the Funeral," copyright © 1938 by New Directions Publishing Corp.,

"The Hunchback in the Park," copyright © 1943 by New Directions Publishing Corp., "A Refusal to Mourn the Death, by Fire, of a Child in London," "Fern Hill," copyright © 1945 by The Trustees for the Copyrights of Dylan Thomas, "In My Craft or Sullen Art," copyright © 1946 by New Directions Publishing Corp., "Do Not Go Gentle into That Good Night," copyright © 1952 by Dylan Thomas, and "The Conversation of Prayer," copyright © 1967 by The Trustees for the Copyrights of Dylan Thomas, from THE POEMS OF DYLAN THOMAS. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp. and David Higham Associates.

Thomas, R. S.: "Welsh Language," "The View from the Window," "On the Farm," and "Lore" from COLLECTED POEMS, reprinted by permission of J. M. Dent, a division of The Orion Publishing Group, as the publisher.

Tomlinson, Charles: "Farewell to Van Gogh," "The Picture of J.T. in a Prospect of Stone," "Mr. Brodsky" from COLLECTED

POEMS (1987) and "Ararat" from THE RETURN (1987). Reprinted by permission of Carcanet Press Ltd.

Toomer, Jean: "Face," "Georgia Dusk," "Harvest Song," "Portrait in Georgia," "Reapers" from CANE by Jean Toomer.

Copyright © 1923 by Boni & Liveright, renewed 1951 by Jean Toomer. Used by permission of Liveright Publishing Corp.

Updike, John: "V.B. Nimble, V.B. Quick" from COLLECTED POEMS 1953-1993 by John Updike, copyright © 1993 by John Updike. Published in Great Britain in HOPING FOR A HOOPOE by John Updike. Used by permission of Alfred A.

Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc. and Victor Gollancz, a division of The Orion Publishing Group, as the publishers.

"I Missed His Book, But I Read His Name" from COLLECTED POEMS 1953-1993 by John Updike, copyright © 1993

by John Updike. First published in TELEPHONE POLES AND OTHER POEMS by Deutsch 1963, Hamish Hamilton 1993, copyright © 1961, 1993 by John Updike. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

and Penguin Books Ltd.

Van Duyn, Mona: "Letters from a Father" and "Falling in Love at Sixty-Five" from IF IT NOT BE I by Mona Van Duyn, copyright © 1959 by Mona Van Duyn. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

Walcott, Derek: "The Gulf" from THE GULF AND OTHER POEMS by Derek Walcott. Copyright © 1970, renewed 1998

by Derek Walcott. Used by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC and Jonathan Cape c/o The Random House Group Ltd. "XXVII" from Midsummer, "A Far Cry from Africa," "The Glory Trumpeter," "Nights in the Gardens of Port of Spain," and "Adios, Carenage" from "The Schooner Flight" from COLLECTED POEMS 1948-1984 by Derek Walcott.

Copyright

© 1986 by Derek Walcott. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC and Faber and Faber Ltd. Excerpt from OMEROS by Derek Walcott. Copyright © 1990 by Derek Walcott. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC and Faber & Faber Ltd.

Walker, Margaret: "Since 1619" and "Childhood" from THIS IS MY CENTURY: NEW AND COLLECTED POEMS by Margaret Walker. Copyright © 1987 by Margaret Walker.

Reprinted by permission of The University of Georgia Press.

Warren, Robert Penn: “Bearded Oaks,” “Masts at Dawn,” “Evening Hawk,” and “There’s a Grandfather Clock in the Hall”

from THE COLLECTED POEMS OF ROBERT PENN
WARREN. Copyright © 1998 by Estate of Robert Penn Warren.

Reprinted by permission of William Morris Agency, Inc. on behalf of the Estate of Robert Penn Warren.

Wilbur, Richard: “Piazza di Spagna, Early Morning,” “A Baroque Wall-Fountain in the Villa Sciarra,” “Love Calls Us to the Things of This World,” and “A Plain Song for Comadre” from THINGS OF THIS WORLD, copyright © 1956 and renewed 1984 by Richard Wilbur, reprinted by permission of Harcourt, Inc. “Advice to a Prophet,” copyright © 1959 and renewed 1987 by Richard Wilbur, and “Junk,” copyright © 1961 and renewed 1989 by Richard Wilbur, from ADVICE TO A PROPHET AND OTHER POEMS, reprinted by permission of Harcourt, Inc. “First Snow in Alsace” from THE BEAUTIFUL CHANGES AND OTHER POEMS,
copyright © 1947 and renewed 1975 by Richard Wilbur, reprinted by permission of Harcourt, Inc. “Cottage Street, 1953” from THE MIND-READER, copyright © 1972 by Richard Wilbur, reprinted by permission of Harcourt, Inc. and Faber & Faber Ltd. “Zea” from MAYFLIES: NEW POEMS
AND TRANSLATIONS, copyright © 2000 by Richard
Wilbur, reprinted by permission of Harcourt, Inc.

Williams, C. K.: “Repression” and “Snow: II” from FLESH
AND BLOOD. Copyright © 1987 by C. K. Williams. “The Question” from DREAM OF MIND. Copyright © 1992 by C.
K. Williams. These poems were published in SELECTED POEMS by C. K. Williams. Copyright © 1994 by C. K.
Williams. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC and Bloodaxe Books Ltd.

Williams, William Carlos: “Danse Russe,” “Portrait of a Lady,” “The Red Wheelbarrow,” “Queen-Anne’s-Lace,” “This

Is Just to Say,” “Poem,” “The Yachts” from COLLECTED POEMS: 1909-1939, vol. 1, copyright © 1938 by New Directions 2150 / P E R M I S S I O N S A C K N O W L E D G M E N T S

Publishing Corp. “A Sort of a Song,” and “Asphodel, That Greeny Flower, Book I” from COLLECTED POEMS 1939-1962, vol. 2, copyright © 1944 by William Carlos Williams, “Landscape with the Fall of Icarus” from COLLECTED POEMS 1939-1962, vol. 2, copyright © 1953 by William Carlos Williams. Reprinted by permission of New Directions Publishing Corp. and Carcanet Press Ltd.

Williamson, Greg: “Double Exposures, III and XXV” and “New Year’s: A Short Pantoum” from ERRORS IN THE SCRIPT, copyright © 2001 by Greg Williamson. Reprinted with the permission of The Overlook Press. “Outbound” from THE SILENT PARTNER by Greg Williamson. Reprinted with permission of the author and Story Line Press (www.storylinepress.com).

Wilner, Eleanor: “Reading the Bible Backwards” and “High Noon at Los Alamos” from SARAH’S CHOICE (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1989). Reprinted by permission of the author.

Wright, Charles: “Quotations” from APPALACHIA by Charles Wright. Copyright © 1998 by Charles Wright. “As Our Bodies Rise, Our Names Turn into Light” from CHICKAMAUGA by Charles Wright. Copyright © 1995 by Charles Wright.

“Chinese Journal” and “Homage to Claude Lorrain” from THE WORLD OF TEN THOUSAND THINGS: POEMS 1980-1990 by Charles Wright. Copyright © 1990 by Charles Wright. Reprinted by permission of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, LLC.

Wright, James: “A Note Left in Jimmy Leonard’s Shack,” “A Blessing,” and “Speak” from ST. JUDAS. Copyright © 1959

by James Wright. Reprinted by permission of Wesleyan University Press.

Wright, Judith: “Woman to Man,” “Train Journey,” “Eve to Her Daughters,” and “Request to a Year” from A HUMAN PATTERN: SELECTED POEMS (ETT Imprint, Sydney, 1996). Reprinted by permission of the publisher.

Wright, Kit: “A Love Song of Tooting,” “Mantles,” “My Version” from HOPING IT MIGHT BE SO by Kit Wright (Leviathan, 2000). Reprinted by permission of the author.

Wright, Richard: Reprinted from HAIKU: THIS OTHER WORLD by Richard Wright, published by Arcade Publishing, New York, N.Y. Copyright © 1998 by Ellen Wright. Reprinted by permission of the publisher and John Hawkins & Associates, Inc.

Yeats, W. B.: “Sailing to Byzantium,” “Leda and the Swan,” “Among School Children,” copyright © 1928 by The Macmillan Company; copyright renewed 1956 by Georgie Yeats. “Byzantium,” “Crazy Jane Talks with the Bishop,” copyright © 1933

by The Macmillan Company, copyright renewed 1961 by Bertha Georgie Yeats. “Lapis Lazuli,” “Long-Legged Fly,” “The Circus Animals’ Desertion,” “Under Ben Bulbin,” copyright © 1940 by Georgie Yeats, copyright renewed 1968 by Bertha Georgie Yeats, Michael Butler Yeats, and Anne Yeats. Reprinted with the permission of Scribner, an imprint of Simon & Schuster Adult Publishing Group, from THE COLLECTED WORKS OF W. B. YEATS, VOLUME 1: THE POEMS, Revised, edited by Richard J. Finneran. Rights in the British Commonwealth excluding Canada were granted by A. P. Watt Ltd. on behalf of Michael B. Yeats.

Zarin, Cynthia: “The Ant Hill” and “Song” from FIRE LYRIC by Cynthia Zarin, copyright © 1993 by Cynthia Zarin. Used by permission of Alfred A. Knopf, a division of Random House, Inc.

Every effort has been made to contact the copyright holders of each selection. Rights holders of any selection not credited should contact W. W. Norton & Co., Inc., 500 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10110, for a correction to be made in the next reprinting of our work.

Index

ABC, 1916

After the dread tales and red yarns of the Line,

A Bird, came down the Walk -, 1116

1372

A born salesman, 1764

After the Funeral, 1567

About suffering they were never wrong, 1471

Afterwards, 1162

About the Shark, phlegmatical one, 1055

After you finish your work, 1538

About twilight we came to the whitewashed pub,

Ah, Ben!, 360

1702

Ah, did you once see Shelley plain, 1019

Above Pate Valley, 1816

Ah, fading joy, how quickly art thou past!, 500

Above the fresh ruffles of the surf, 1411

Ah in the thunder air, 1289

A boy who played and talked and read with me, Ah silly pug, wert thou so sore afraid, 143

1753

Ah Sun-flower, 744

A brackish reach of shoal off Madaket, 1 592

Ah! think'st thou, Laura, then, that wealth, 713

A breath leaves the sentences and does not come

Ah what avails the sceptered race, 831
back, 1744
Aiken, Conrad, 1370
A broken ALTAR, Lord, thy servant rears, 367
Airy spirits, you who love, 707
A broken-down hotel on an inhospitable sea, Ajax, 390
1974
Alas! for Peter, not a helping hand, 730
Absalom and Achitophel: A Poem, 501
Alas, have I not pain enough, my friend, 213
A card table in the library stands ready, 1720
Alexandreis, 554
accentual meter, 2 0 2 9
alexandrine, 2 0 4 2
accentual-syllabic meter, 2 0 3 0
Ali, Agha Shahid, 1958
Accept, thou shrine of my dead saint, 363
A line in long array where they wind betwixt green
According to Brueghel, 1283
islands, 1073
A Clock stopped -, 1113
Alison, 18
“A cold coming we had of it, 1359
A little East of Jordan, 1112
a commingling sky, 1683
All around the altar, huge lianas, 1879
A construed entity too, 1701
All Day It Has Rained, 1573

Acquainted with the Night, 1237
“All Do Not All Things Well,” 1772
Across the millstream below the bridge, 1625
All Greece hates, 1312
A curious knot God made in paradise, 537
All human things are subject to decay, 517
Adam Lay I-bounden, 79
All I know is a door into the dark, 1900
Adam Posed, 562
All in green went my love riding, 1392
Adam scrivain, if evere it thee bifalle, 70 alliteration, 2029
Adam’s Curse, 1190
All kings, and all their favorites, 299
Adam’s Dream, 1338
All Legendary Obstacles, 1785
Adam’s Task, 1776
All others talked as if, 1680
Adcock, Fleur, 1849
All saints revile her, and all sober men, 1404
Adieu, farewell, earth’s bliss, 283
All’s All, 1701
Adieu, New-England’s smiling meads, 719
All the new thinking is about loss, 1919
Adlestrop, 1253
All things within this fading world hath end, 464
Adonais, 879
Also I love him: me he’s done no wrong, 1550

Advice to a Prophet, 1637
Altar, The, 367
Advice to Young Ladies, 1483
Altermann, sipping wine, reads with a look, 1884
Aeolian Harp, The, 805
Although, great Queen, thou now in silence lie, Affliction (I), 369 458
A fox may steal your hens, sir, 595
Although it is not yet evening, 1659
After Apple-Picking, 1231
Always, 1863
After great pain, a formal feeling comes -, 1117
Always so late in the day, 1863
After hot loveless nights, when cold winds stream,
Always the setting forth was the same, 1743 1436
A man adrift on a slim spar, 1221
After Making Love We Hear Footsteps, 1742
Amarantha sweet and fair, 473
2 1 5 1
2 1 5 2 / I N D E X
Ambulances, 1655
Apology for Writing So Much upon This Book, An, Ammons, A. R., 1695
499 Among School Children, 1200
apostrophe, 2 0 7 0

Among twenty snowy mountains, 1260
Apparition, The, 295
Amoretti, 190
Apples on Champlain, 1955
Amor Mundi, 1134
April again, and it is a year again, 1644
A moth ate words; a marvellous event, 11
April is the cruellest month, breeding, 1344
Amours de Voyage, 1051
A quavering cry. Screech-owl?, 1534
A mouth. Can blow or breathe, 1541
Arabian Night, 1727
A mouthful of language to swallow, 1752
Ararat, 1748
A movie of Robert, 1707
Arc Inside and Out, The, 1699
An Agony. As Now., 1857
A repeating fly, blueback, thumbthick—so gross,
An agricultural labourer, who has, 1829 1605 anapestic meter, 2 0 3 0
Are They Shadows, 235
A narrow Fellow in the Grass, 1125
Argument of His Book, The, 354
A nasty surprise in a sandwich, 1965
Ariel, 1842
A Nation of trees, drab green and desolate grey, Arioso Dolente, 1848

1481

Aristocrats, 1621

An axe angles, 1638

Armadillo, The, 1519

Ancestor (Kinsella), 1757

Armenonville, 1385

Ancestors (Brathwaite), 1806

Armistice Day, 1590

Ancient person, for whom I, 553

Armitage, Simon, 2 0 2 1

And call ye this to utter what is just, 225

Arnold, Matthew, 1087

And Did Those Feet, 746

A Route of Evanescence, 1126

And If I Did What Then?, 144

Arrest of Oscar Wilde at the Cadogan Hotel, The,

And me happiest when I compose poems, 1530

1461

—and not simply by the fact that this shading of,

Arrivants, The: A New World Trilogy, 1803

1938

Ars Poetica, 1381

And now, at last, all proud deeds done, 1784

Artillery, 378

And One for My Dame, 1764

Arundel Tomb, An, 1650

Andraitx—Pomegranate Flowers, 1290

Ashbery, John, 1736

Andrea del Sarto, 1034

As he knelt by the grave of his mother and father,

And, the last day being come, Man stood alone,

1980

1250

A short service, to be sure, 1681

And then went down to the ship, 1306

As I came to the edge of the woods, 1242

Anecdote for Fathers, 780

As I in hoary winter's night stood shivering in the

Anecdote of the far, 1260

snow, 223

A New Year's white morning of hard new ice, 1969

As I listened from a beach-chair in the shade, 1479

Angel in Blythburgh Church, An, 1787

As imperceptibly as Grief, 1125

An incident here and there, 1315

A single flow'r he sent me, since we met, 1391

An infant quirk of a pine, 1929

As I one evening sat before my cell, 378

An ingenuity too astonishing, 1613

As I sd to my, 1705

Annabel Lee, 981

As it fell out on a holy day, 112

Anne Hathaway, 2008

As I Walked Out One Evening, 1468

Anniversary, The, 299

As I was walking all alane, 102

Announced by all the trumpets of the sky, 942

Askew, Anne, 140

A Noiseless Patient Spider, 1085

As kingfishers catch fire, dragonflies draw flame,

An old, mad, blind, despised, and dying king—, 1167

871

Ask me no more where Jove bestows, 385

Another Epitaph on an Army of Mercenaries, A slumber did my spirit seal, 790

1379

A small wheel, 1891

Another September, 1757

A snake came to my water-trough, 1286

Another Sonnet to Black Itself, 346

As once, if not with light regard, 674

Answer, The, 565

A Sonnet is a moment's monument,—, 1106

Anthem for Doomed Youth, 1386

As Our Bodies Rise, Our Names Turn into Light,

Ant Hill, The, 2013

1867

Any body can die, evidently. Few, 1916

Asphodel, That Greeny Flower, 1276

anyone lived in a pretty how town, 1396

As Rochefoucauld his maxims drew, 577

A peels an apple, while B kneels to God, 1624

As some brave admiral, in former war, 549

A poem should be palpable and mute, 1381

As some fond virgin, whom her mother's care, 621

Apology for the Revival of Christian Architecture in assonance, 2037

England, An, 1835

As the cat, 1275

I N D E X / 2 1 5 3

As the team's head brass, 1255

Ballad of Birmingham, 1855

A strife is grown between Virtue and Love, 216

Ballad of Orange and Grape, 1538

Astronomy, 1179

ballad stanza, 204 1

Astrophil and Stella, 213

Ballad upon a Wedding, A, 454

A sudden blow: the great wings beating still, 1200

Ballad Which Anne Askewe Made and Sang When

As virtuous men pass mildly away, 306

She Was in Newgate, The, 140

A sweet disorder in the dress, 355

Banking Potatoes, 1950

As we get older we do not get any younger, 1563

Banks o' Doon, The, 759

Atalanta in Calydon, 1146

Baraka, Amiri, 1856

At childhood's end, the houses petered out, 2008

Barbarians in a garden, softness does, 1927

At dinner, she is hostess, I am host, 1108

Barbault, Anna Laetitia, 705
Athenian Garden, An, 1251
Barely tolerated, living on the margin, 1737
At Henry's bier let some thing fall out well, 1551
Baroque Wall-Fountain in the Villa Sciarra, A,
At home, in my flannel gown, like a bear to its floe, 1635 1552 base rhythm, 2 0 3 2
A thousand martyrs I have made, 549
basic forms, 2 0 3 9
At length, by so much importunity pressed, 641
Batter my heart, three-personed God; for You, 320
At Luca Signorelli's Resurrection of the Body, 1976 Battle-
Hymn of the Republic, 1054
At Melville's Tomb, 1410
Bavarian Gentians, 1291
At school I loved one picture's heavy greenness—,
Baxter, J a m e s K., 1701 1908
Beach Glass, 1609
At the British War Cemetery, Bayeux, 1590
Beachy Head, 715
At the end of the garden walk, 1531
Bean Eaters, The, 1587
At the round earth's imagined corners, blow, 319
Bearded Oaks, 1456
At the Tourist Center in Boston, 1894

Bear on the Delhi Road, The, 1447

At what time Jacob's race did leave of Egypt take,

Beautiful Young Nymph Going to Bed, A, 575

226

Beauty of the Husband, The, 1970

At Woodlawn I heard the dead cry, 1495

Beat! Beat! Drums!, 1072

Atwood, Margaret, 1894

Because he was a butcher and thereby, 1213

Aubade (Kenney), 1954

Because I could not stop for Death -, 1119

Aubade (Larkin), 1658

Because you will suffer soon and die, your choices,

A.U.C. 334: about this date, 1483

1911

Auden, W. H., 1465

Beethoven, Opus 111, 1610

Audible trout, 1924

Before the Birth of One of her Children, 464

Auld Lang Syne, 753

Beggar's Opera, The, 594

Aunt Jennifer's Tigers, 1791

Behn, Aphra, 540

Aunt Rose—now—might I see you, 1714

Behold her, single in the field, 803

Aurora Leigh, 948

Bells for John Whiteside's Daughter, 1367

Australia, 1481

Below the thunders of the upper deep, 984
Author to Her Book, The, 465
Bent double, like old beggars under sacks, 1387
Autumn Journal, 1487
Beowulf, 2
Autumn resumes the land, ruffles the woods, 1835
Berg, The, 1056
Ave Maria, 1730
Bermudas, 476
Avenge, O Lord, thy slaughtered saints, whose Bernstein, Charles, 1967
bones, 418
Berryman, John, 1546
Awake, my St. John! leave all meaner things, 623
Berry Picking, 1532
A ward, and still in bonds, one day, 490
Betjeman, John, 1460
A week ago, when I had finished, 1994
Between my finger and my thumb, 1899
A wind is ruffling the tawny pelt, 1820
Birches, 1223
A woman's face, with nature's own hand painted,
Birds and Fishes, 1323
260
Birney, Earle, 1447
A woman wired in memories, 1799
Birth, 2006
Axe-fall, echo and silence. Noonday silence, 1885

birth in a narrow room, the, 1586
ay, ay! ... stutrer Demosthenes, 1873
Birth of Tragedy, The, 1530
Ay, beshrew you! by my fay, 90
Bishop, Elizabeth, 1515
Bishop Orders His Tomb at Saint Praxed's Church,
Back out of all this now too much for us, 1244
The, 1014
Badger, 893
Bistro Styx, The, 1988
Bad Luck Card, 1432
Bitter Fruit of the Tree, 1428
Bagpipe Music, 1486
Bitter Withy, The, 112
Baillie, Joanna, 760
Bix to Buxtehude to Boulez, 1719
Bald heads forgetful of their sins, 1193
Black beauty, which above that common light, 346
2 1 5 4 / I N D E X
Black Jackets, 1770
Burns, Robert, 7 4 7
Black maid, complain not that I fly, 366
Bush, 1492
Black reapers with the sound of steel on stones, Bushed, 1447 1398
Busy old fool, unruly sun, 295
Black Riders and Other Lines, The, 1220
But anxious cares the pensive nymph oppressed,

Blake, William, 7 3 2
614
Blame Not My Lute, 131
Butcher's Wife, The, 2005
blank verse, 2 0 3 9
But do not let us quarrel any more, 1034
Blessed Damozel, The, 1102
But love whilst that thou mayst be loved again,
Blessing, A, 1750
231
Bloody Men, 1947
But peace, I must not quarrel with the will, 450
Blow, Blow, Thou Winter Wind, 273
But where they may return with honor's grace, 352
Blue Girls, 1368
Bynner, W i t t e r , 1269
Blue Swallows, The, 1625
By now when you say I stop somewhere waiting for B l u n d e n , E d m u n d , 1404
you, 1745
Bly, Robert, 1 7 0 4
Byron, Lord (George Gordon), 8 3 3
Boats in a Fog, 1321
By the lake at Armenonville in the Bois de Bou-Bogan, Louise, 1 4 0 6
logne, 1385
Boland, Eavan, 1 9 3 8
By the rude bridge that arched the flood, 941

Bonny Barbara Allan, 107
By the shores of Gitche Gumee, 954
Book Full of Pictures, A, 1892
By this he knew she wept with waking eyes, 1107
Book of Ephraim, The, 1725
Bytwene Mersh and Averil, 18
Book of Thel, The, 737
Byzantium, 1202
Book of Yolek, The, 1672
Boots of Spanish Leather, 1854
Cabinet of Seeds Displayed, A, 1627
Born Yesterday, 1648
Caedmon, 1680
Borough, The, 730
Caedmon's Hymn, 1
Boy Breaking Glass, 1589
Caelica, 206
Boy's Answer to the Blackmoor, The, 366
caesura, 2 0 2 8
Boy with Book of Knowledge, 1626
Call the roller of big cigars, 1256
Boy with His Hair Cut Short, 1537
Cameo Appearance, 1893
Bradstreet, Anne, 458
Campbell, Roy, 1436
Brag, sweet tenor bull, 1421
Campion, Thomas, 278
Brahma, 945

Canal Bank Walk, 1453
Brathwaite, E d w a r d K a m a u , 1803
Candy, 1437
Brave infant of Saguntum, clear, 337
Can I not sin, but thou wilt be, 361
Breaded Fish, 1802
Can life be a blessing, 501
Break, Break, Break, 994
Canonization, The, 296
Break of Day in the Trenches, 1373
Canterbury Tales, The, 17
Bresson's Movies, 1707
Cantos, The, 1306
Bridge, The, 1415
Can we not force from widowed poetry, 388
Briggflatts, 1421
canzone, 2046
Bright Star, 940
Cardinal Ideograms, 1541
Broken Appointment, A, 1154
Care-charmer Sleep, son of the sable Night, 232
Broken Home, The, 1716
Careful observers may foretell the hour, 569
B r o n t e , Emily, 1046
Carew, T h o m a s , 385
Brooke, R u p e r t , 1324
Carol of Agincourt, A, 84
Brooks, Gwendolyn, 1586

Carried her unprotesting out the door, 1587
Brown, George Mackay, 1627
Carrion Comfort, 1169
Brown, Sterling A., 1 4 2 6
Carroll, Lewis, 1135
Browning, Elizabeth Barrett, 9 4 7
Carson, Anne, 1969
Browning, Robert, 1 0 0 9
Casabianca (Bishop), 1515
B r o w n j o h n , Alan, 1 8 2 9
Casabianca (Hemans), 899
Bruisingly cradled in a Harvard chair, 1766
Castaway, The, 702
Brute Image, 1740
Casting and Gathering, 1906
Bryant, William C u l l e n , 9 0 2
catalectic, 2 0 3 0
Buckdancer's Choice, 1663
Cathedral Builders, 1681
Buck in the Snow, The, 1384
Cattle out of their byres are dungy still, lambs,
Bunting, Basil, 1421
1911
Burden, 1666
Cause you don't love me, 1432
Buried Graves, The, 1998
Causley, Charles, 1590
Burning Babe, The, 222

Cavalry Crossing a Ford, 1073

INDEX / 2155

Cavendish, Margaret, 499

Come away! come, sweet love!, 119

Caxtons are mechanical birds with many wings,

Come In, 1242

1943

Come live with me and be my love, 256

Celts, The, 1441

Come, madam, come, all rest my powers defy, 312

Certain things here are quietly American—, 1827

Come, my Celia, let us prove, 331

Chambered Nautilus, The, 974

Come Not the Seasons Here, 1270

Channel Firing, 1157

Come on, my partners in distress, 653

Chard Whitlow, 1563

Come sleep, Oh sleep, the certain knot of peace,

Charge of the Light Brigade, The, 1005

215

Chaucer, Geoffrey, 19

Comes not the springtime here, 1270

Chicago, 1252

Come to me in the silence of the night, 1128

“Childe Roland to the Dark Tower Came,” 1020

Come to your heaven, you heavenly choirs, 223

Childhood (Muir), 1336

Come, worthy Greek, Ulysses, come, 233

Childhood (Walker), 1577
common meter, 204 1
Child of Distress, who meet'st the bitter scorn, 706
Common Sense, 1829
Child on Top of a Greenhouse, 1494
Communication Which the Author Had to London,
Children, if you dare to think, 1401
Before She Made Her Will, A, 146
Chillen Get Shoes, 1428
Complacencies of the peignoir, and late, 1257
Chinese Drawings, 1270
Complaint to His Purse, 69
Chinese journal, 1866
complement, 2 0 5 5
Christ and the Soldier, 1317
Composed upon Westminster Bridge, September 3,
Christmas is my name, far have I gone, have I 1802, 795
gone, have I gone, 122
composite forms, 2 0 4 6
Christopher, Nicholas, 1973
Comus, 415
Church Going, 1649
Conch from Sicily, A, 1930
Circus Animals' Desertion, The, 1207
Concord Hymn, 941
Cities burn behind us; the lake glitters, 1686
concrete poetry, 2 0 5 1

City in the Sea, The, 976
Condemned to Hope's delusive mine, 664
City Limits, The, 1698
Condemn me not, I make so much ado, 499
Clampitt, Amy, 1609
Conjured, 1429
Clare, John, 893
Consumer's Report, A, 1786
Classics Society, 1873
contend in a sea which the land partly encloses, clause, 2 0 5 6
1275
Clay is the word and clay is the flesh, 1451
Convent Threshold, The, 1130
Clearances, 1905
Convergence of the Twain, The, 1156
Clear water in a brilliant bowl, 1266
Conversation of Prayer, The, 1570 clerihew, 2 0 4 6
coordinate, 2 0 5 7
Clod & the Pebble, The, 742 coordinating conjunction, 205 7
Close by those meads, forever crowned with flow-Cope, Wendy, 1947
ers, 610
Corinna, pride of Drury-Lane, 575 closed couplet, 2 0 4 0
Corinna's Going A-Maying, 356

closed forms, 204 8
Cormorant in Its Element, The, 1614
Closed like confessionals, they thread, 1655
Corn, Alfred, 1929
Cloud, The, 874
Coronet, The, 475
Cloud-puffball, torn tufts, tossed pillows | flaunt
Corpus Christi Carol, The, 83 forth, then chevy on an air-, 1071
Correct but cautious, that first night, we asked,
Clough, Arthur Hugh, 1051
1725
Coal, 1858
Correspondence School Instructor Says Goodbye to Cold as No Plea, 1440
His Poetry Students, Tke, 1741
Cold Green Element, The, 1531
Corso, Gregory, 1807
Cold in the earth—and the deep snow piled above Corsons Inlet, 1695
thee, 1047
Cottage Street, I 953, 1640
Cold snap. Five o'clock, 1954
Could our first father, at his toilsome plow, 562
Coleridge, Samuel Taylor, 805
Counting the Mad, 1684
Coleridge received the Person from Porlock, 1441
couplet, 2040

Colin Clout, 92

“Courage!” he said, and pointed toward the land,

Collar, The, 379

988

Collins, Billy, 1917

Courtney, Mentioned in Passing, Years After, 1956

Collins, William, 613

Cousin Coat, 1992

Colossus, The, 1836

Cow, The, 1437

Columbus, 1438

Cowley, Abraham, 470

Come Away, Come Away, Death, 275

Cowper, William, 695

2 1 5 6 / I N D E X

Crabbe, George, 723

Deeper than sleep but not so deep as death,

Cramped like sardines on the Queens, and sedated,

1537

1660

Definition of Love, The, 480

Crane, Hart, 1410

Dejection: An Ode, 828

Crane, Stephen, 1220

De la Mare, Walter, 1225

Crashaw, Richard, 468

Delia, 230

Crazy Jane Talks with the Bishop, 1204

Delight in Disorder, 355
Creeley, Robert, 1705
Delirium in Vera Cruz, 1503
Cromwell, our chief of men, who through a cloud, Denial, 374
417
Deo gracias, Anglia, 84
Cross, 1431
Description of a City Shower, A, 569
Crossing Alone the Nighted Ferry, 1180
Description of Cooke-ham, The, 288
Crossing Brooklyn Ferry, 1066
Description of the Morning, A, 568
Crossing the Bar, 1008
Deserted Village, The, 686
Crossing the street, 1716
Design, 1240
Cross of Snow, The, 956
Desire, though thou my old companion art, 218
Crown of Sonnets Dedicated to Love, A, 351 Destruction of Sennacherib, The, 834
Crucified Lord, you swim upon your cross, 1834
Dialogue between the Soul and Body, A, 477
Cruelty has a Human heart, 741 Dickey, James, 1661
Crying and crying, 1502
Dickinson, Emily, 1110
Cuckoo Song, The, 15

Did I, my lines intend for public view, 556
Cullen, Countee, 1443
Didst thou not find the place inspired, 453
Cummings, E. E., 1392
Digging, 1899
Cupid and My Campaspe, 207
Digging a new, 1957
Curnow, Allen, 1528
dimeter, 2 0 3 2
curtal sonnet, 2 0 4 4 Ding-Donging, 1426
Cyriack, Whose Grandsire, 419
Dinner Guest: Me, 1435
Dirce, 832
Dacca Gauzes, The, 1958
Directive, 1244
dactylic meter, 2 0 3 0 direct object, 2 0 5 5
Daddy, 1840
Dirge, 390
Daddy would drop purple-veined vines, 1950
Disabled Debauchee, The, 549
Daffodils, 1814
Disappointment, The, 541
Dalliance of the Eagles, The, 1078
Disarmed with so genteel an air, 565
Daniel, Samuel, 230 Discipline, 382

Danse Russe, 1272
Display thy breasts, my Julia, there let me, 358
Dark Harbor, 1864
Distant Fury of Battle, The, 1831
Darkling Thrush, The, 1155
Disused Shed in Co. Wexford, A, 1921
Darwin in 1881, 2000
Divine Image, A (Songs of Experience), 741
Daughters of Time, the hypocritic Days, 946
Divine Image, The (Songs of Innocence), 735
Davie, Donald, 1641
Diving into the Wreck, 1797
Davison, Peter, 1751
Divorced, but friends again at last, 1942
Day Lady Died, The, 1728
Dodgson, Charles Lutwidge, 1135
Day of fudgment, The, 589
Does the Eagle know what is in the pit?, 737
Days, 946
Does the road wind up-hill all the way?, 1129
Dead, The, 1044
dogwood flakes, 1512
Dead Man's Dump, 1374
Dolls Museum in Dublin, The, 1939
Dead Soldiers, 1961
Done Is a Battle, 89
Deaf-Mute in the Pear Tree, 1584
Don fuan, 837

Dear Eustatio, I write that you may write me an

Donne, John, 293

answer, 1051

Do Not Go Gentle into That Good Night, 1572

Death, 384

Do not weep, maiden, for war is kind, 1221

Death, be not proud, though some have called Don't talk to me of love. I've had an earful, 1966

thee, 320

Doomsday, 1311

Death in Leamington, 1460

D'Orleans, Charles, 77

Death is in your house, but I'm out here, 1877

Double Exposures, 2024

Death of the Ball Turret Gunner, The, 1553

double syntax, 206 1

Deathplace, A, 1767

Doubt of Future Foes Exiles My Present foy, The, Death Sentence, The, 1440

142

Death the Painter, 1673

Douglas, Keith, 1620

Death, thou wast once an uncouth hideous thing,

Douglas Tragedy, The, 97

384

Dover Beach, 1101

I N D E X / 2 1 5 7

Dover Bitch, The,] 668

Elegy for Jane, 1499

Dove, Rita, 1985

Elegy XIX. To His Mistress Going to Bed, 312

Down a broad river of the western wilds, 901

Elegy VII, 311

Downhill I came, hungry, and yet not starved, Elegy upon the Death of the Dean of Paul's, Dr.

1254

John Donne, An, 388

Down in Atlanta, 1426

Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard, 669

Dowser, The, 1619

Elemental, 1288

Dowson, Ernest, 1211

Eliot, T. S., 1340

Do ye, o congregation, 391

elision, 203 0

dramatic monologues, 204 0

Elixir, The, 383

dramatic poetry, 202 7

Elizabeth I, Queen, 142

Drayton, Michael, 235

Elliot, Jean, 677

Dream of fealousy, A, 1902

Elm, 1839

Dreams fled away, this country bedroom, raw, Emerson, Ralph Waldo, 941

1757

Emperor of Ice-Cream, The, 1256

Dream Songs, The, 1548
Empson, William, 1463 Dream Variations, 1431
end rhymes, 1031
Drink to me only with thine eyes, 331 end-stopped lines, 2 0 3 4
Driving with Dominic in the Southern Province We Energy in Sweden, 1693
See Hints of the Circus, 1935
England! Awake! Awake! Awake!, 747
Droning a drowsy syncopated tune, 1429
England in 1819, 871
Droning autumn rain, 1503
England's Dead, 897
Drummer Hodge, 1154
English Are So Nice!, The, 1290
Drunk in the Furnace, The, 1743
English sonnet, 204 3
Dryden, John, 500
enjambment, 2 0 3 4
Dufault, Peter Kane, 1665
envoy, 204 5
Duffy, Carol Ann, 2 0 0 7
Epic, 1453
Dulce Et Decorum Est, 1387
epic poetry, 2027
Dunbar, Paul Laurence, 1222
Epilogue, 1605

Dunbar, William, 86
Epistle from Mrs. Yonge to Her Husband, 643
Dunciad, The, 638
Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, 626
Dunn, Douglas, 1927
Epistle to Miss Blount, 621
Diirer would have seen a reason for living, 1331
Epitaph, 526
During Wind and Rain, 1160
Epitaph on a Hare, 696
Dusk, 1775
Epitaph on an Army of Mercenaries, 1180
Dusting, 1987
Epitaph on Elizabeth, L. H., 328
Dying: An Introduction, 1766
Epitaphs of the War, 1182
Dying Speech of an Old Philosopher, 833
Epithalamion, 195
Dylan, Bob, 1854
Equinox 1980, 1751
Erdrich, Louise, 2005
Eagle, The, 1004
Erotic Philosophers, The, 1688
Eagle-Feather Fan, The, 1861
Essay on Criticism, An, 596
Earth has not anything to show more fair, 795
Essay on Man, in Four Epistles, An, 623
Earthly Paradise, The, 1143

Essay on Psychiatrists, 1913
East Anglian Bathe, 1462
Eternity, 746
East Coast journey, 1702
Euclid Alone Has Looked on Beauty Bare, 1383
Easter 1916, 1194
Evangeline, 951
Eastern War Time, 1799
Evening Hawk, 1459
Easter Wings, 368
Even now that care, which on thy crown attends,
Eberhart, Richard, 1450
226
Ecce Homo, 1581
Even now there are places where a thought might Echo (C. Rossetti), 1128
grow—, 1921
Echoes (Lorde), 1860
Eve of St. Agnes, The, 907
Echo of the clocktower, footstep, 1972
Every day a wilderness—no, 1987
Ecstasy, The, 307
Every Friday morning my grandfather, 1806
Eden Rock, 1591
Every October millions of little fish come along the Eighth Air Force, 1553
shore, 1323
Eldorado, 980

Everyone Sang, 1319
Elegies (Dunn), 1928
Everyone suddenly burst out singing, 1319
elegy, 204 8

Eve to Her Daughters, 1579

Elegy (Keyes), 1644

Examination at the Womb-Door, 1813

Elegy, An (Jonson), 335

Exequy, An, 1788

2 1 5 8 / I N D E X

Exequy to His Matchless, Never-to-Be-Forgotten First Fig, 1382

Friend, An, 363

First having read the book of myths, 1797

Exile, 1753

First Love, 895

Experience, though noon auctoritee, 39

First Night, A, 1666

Explosion, The, 1657

first paeon, 203 5

Expostulation and Reply, 763

First Snow in Alsace, 1632

Ex-Queen Among the Astronomers, The, 1849

First Song, 1740

Eye-Opener, 1504

First Time In, 1372

eye rhymes, 203 8

Fish, The (Bishop), 1516

Ezekiel Saw the Wheel, 1059
Fish, The (Moore), 1328
Fit of Rhyme against Rhyme, A, 332
Fable, A, 566
FitzGerald, Edward, 961
Face, 1398
Fitzgerald, Robert, 1507
Facing It, 1949
Five A.M., the Fourth of July, 1756
Faerie Queene, The, 165
Five hours, (and who can do it less in?), 572
Fair is my love, and cruel as she's fair, 231
Five years have passed; five summers, with the Fair lovely maid, or if that title be, 548
length, 765
Fair seedtime had my soul, and I grew up, 781
Flat on the bank I parted, 1785
Fair Singer, The, 480
"Flawless" is the word, no doubt, for this third of
"Faith" is a fine invention, 1113
May, 1492
Falling in Love at Sixty-Five, 1631
Flea, The, 309
falling meter, 2 0 3 1
Flee fro the prees and dwelle with soothfastnesse, False Security, 1463
69
Fame is a bee, 1127

Fletcher, John, 345
Fame's pillar here at last we set, 361
Flood-tide below me! I see you face to face!, 1066
Far back when I went zig-zagging, 1795
Flower, The, 380
Far Cry from Africa, A, 1820
Flowers (Atwood), 1896
Farewell (Clare), 896
Flowers (Cope), 1948
Fare Well (De la Mare), 1226
Flowers of the Forest, The, 677
Farewell (sweet Cooke-ham) where I first obtained,
Fog over the base: the beams ranging, 1554
288
Follow Thy Fair Sun, 279
Farewell, thou art too dear for my possessing, 264 foot, 2 0 3 0
Farewell, thou child of my right hand, and joy, 323
For a good decade, 1743
Farewell to America, A. To Mrs. S. W., 719 Force That Through the Green Fuse Drives the Farewell, too little, and too lately known, 523
Flower, The, 1566
Farewell to the bushy clump close to the river, 896
Forefathers, 1404
Farewell to Van Gogh, 1746
Foreign Gate, The, 1645
Far from Home, 1974
Forerunners, The, 381

Farmer's Bride, The, 1216

Forge, The, 1900

Fate, 946

Forget Not Yet, 131

“Father, father, where are you going?”, 736

For God's sake hold your tongue, and let me love,

Father of all! in every age, 635

296

Father studied theology through the mail, 1892

For Hans Keller, 1944

Fayre is my love, when her fayre golden heares,

ForH. V. (1901-1927), 1559

194

For I can snore like a bullhorn, 1742

Fear No More the Heat o' the Sun, 276

For I will consider my Cat Jeoffry, 625

Feathers up fast, and steeples; then in clods, Forsaken Garden,
A, 1150

1643

For Sidney Bechet, 1648

Features unseen embers and tongs once worried,

For That He Looked Not upon Her, 144

1727

For the Union Dead, 1603

Feel for your bad fall how could I fail, 1547

For three years, out of key with his time, 1298

Felix Randal, 1168

Fortune hath taken thee away, my love, 158

feminine rhymes, 2037
Forty-two years ago (to me if to no one else, 1490
Fenton, James, 1961
Fosterling, 1908
Ferlinghetti, Lawrence, 1606 found poetry, 2050
Fern Hill, 1571
Fountain, The, 1643
Field Hospital, A, 1554
Four Poems for Robin, 1817
Figlio Maggiore, 1507
Four Quartets, 1360
Filling her compact & delicious body, 1548
fourteener, 2033
Filling Station, 1517
Fowls in the Frith, 19
Finch, Anne, Countess of Winchilsea, 556
Fragments, 1252
Fine Knacks for Ladies, 119
Fra Lippo Lippi, 1026

I N D E X / 2 1 5 9

Framed in her phoenix fire-screen, Edna Ward,
Get up! get up for shame! the blooming morn, 356 1640
Ghetto, 1911
“Frater Ave atque Vale,” 1008
Ghost in the Martini, The, 1669
“Fred, where is north?,” 1238

Gift, The, 1861
Freely Espousing, 1683
Gift Outright, The, 1243
free verse, 2048
Gilbert, W. S., 1144
Freneau, Philip, 716
Ginsberg, Allen, 1708
frequently unasked questions, 1968
Gioia, Dana, 1972
Fresh spring the herald of loves mighty king, 193
Girls on the Bridge, 1924
Friend of the wretched! wherefore should the eye,
Give him the darkest inch your shelf allows, 1212
714
Give me more love, or more disdain, 387
Friendship between Ephelia and Ardelia, 563
Give me my scallop-shell of quiet, 153
From epigram to epic is the course, 1626
Glanmore Revisited, 1908
From fairest creatures we desire increase, 257
Glasses with cold sleep and dazzled by the moon,
From Far, from Eve and Morning, 1177
1578
From harmony, from heavenly harmony, 524
Glooms of the live-oaks, beautiful-braided and From low to high doth dissolution climb, 804
woven, 1163
From my mother's sleep I fell into the State, 1553

Glory be to God for dappled things—, 1167
From narrow provinces, 1 523
Glory of Women, 1319
From plane of light to plane, wings dipping *Glory Trumpeter,
The, 1821*
through, 1459
Gluck, Louise, 1931
From Stone to Steel, 1271
Go and catch a falling star, 294
From the Flats, 1162
God, A Poem, 1965
From the hagg and hungry goblin, 124
God moves in a mysterious way, 695
From the House of Yemanja, 1859
God of our fathers, known of old, 1181
From the pier, at dusk, the dim, 1998
Go Down, Moses, 1057
From the Wave, 1771
God's Grandeur, 1166
Front, A, 1554
God will have all or none; serve Him, or fall, 361
Frost at Midnight, 810
Go, for they call you, shepherd, from the hill, 1089
Frost, Robert, 1227
Golden Gate, The, 1994
Fuel filler cap, 1819
Goldsmith, Oliver, 686
Fidl Fathom Five, 211

Go, lovely rose!, 393
Full many a glorious morning have I seen, 261
Gone, I say and walk from church, 1764
Full Moon, 1310
Goodbye, 1575
Funeral, The, 309
Goodbye, Goldeneye, 1543
Further in Summer than the Birds -, 1124
Goodbye, lady in Bangor, who sent me, 1741
Fury of Aerial Bombardment, The, 1450
Good Friday, 1613. Riding Westward, 317
Futility, 1390
Good Heav'n, I thank thee, since it was designed, 566
Gaily bedight, 980
“Good-morning, good-morning!” the General said,
Gallantry, 1622
1318
Garden, The (Gluck), 1931
Good-Morrow, The, 293
Garden, The (Marvell), 484
Goose Fish, The, 1623
Garden, The (Pound), 1296
Gorse Fires, 1911
Garden of Love, The, 744
Go sad or sweet or riotous with beer, 1627
Garden of Proserpine, The, 1148
Go, smiling souls, your new-built cages break, 468

Gascoigne, George, 144
Go, soul, the body's guest, 154
Gascoigne's Lullaby, 145
Go wailing verse, the infants of my love, 230
Gascoyne, David, 1580
G r a h a m , Jorie, 1975
Gasholders, russet among fields. Milldams, marl-Granted, we die for good, 1267
pools, 1833
Grass, 1253
Gather ye rosebuds while ye may, 357
Grasshopper, The, 474
Gay, John, 594
Grass resurrects to mask, to strangle, 1831
Geese, The, 1975
Grave, A, 1330
General, The, 1318
Graves, Robert, 1400
General Prologue, The (to The Canterbury Tales), Gray, Thomas, 666
19
Great Hunger, The, 1451
George Burns likes to insist that he always, 1967
Green Grow the Rashes, 747
George Crabbe, 1212
Greenlaw, Lavinia, 2015
Georgia Dusk, 1398
Green, Matthew, 645

German Requiem, A, 1963

Gretel in Darkness, 1931

Get up and Bar the Door, 110

Greville, Fulke, Lord Brooke, 206

2 1 6 0 / I N D E X

Grey over Riddrie the clouds piled up, 1618

Helen, thy beauty is to me, 975

Grieve, Christopher Murray, 1376

Hellas, 892

Groping back to bed after a piss, 1656

Helpless like this, 1803

Gr-r-r—there go, my heart's abhorrence!, 1010

Hemans, Felicia Dorothea, 897

Guardians, The, 1832

He may our prophet, and our tutor prove, 352

Guest, Barbara, 1616

Hence loathed Melancholy, 402

Gulf, The, 1822

Hence vain deluding Joys, 405

Gunn, Thorn, 1768

Henry in Ireland to Bill underground, 1551

Gurney, Ivor, 1371

heptameter, 2 0 3 3

Gut eats all day and lechers all the night, 328

Herbert, Edward, 346

Gypsies, 894

Herbert, George, 367

Her body is not so white as, 1273

Haddock Fishermen, 1628

Here at the seashore they use the clouds over &

Had we but world enough, and time, 478

over, 1608

haiku, 2 0 3 5

Here Dead Lie We Because We Did Not Choose,

Haiku: This Other World, 1 502

1180

Hail to thee, blithe Spirit!, 876

Here Follows Some Verses upon the Burning of Our

Hair—, 1398

House fuly 10th, 1666, 466

Hair—braided chestnut, 1399

Here from his prominent but thankfully, 1999

Half a league, half a league, 1005

Here in Kansas is a school, 1269

Hall, Daniel, 1 9 9 0

Here in the scuffled dust, 1733

Hall, Donald, 1753

Here is the place; right over the hill, 957

Halley's Comet, 1 562

Here lies Jonson with the rest, 360

Hand That Signed the Paper, The, 1567

Here lies, to each her parents' ruth, 323

Hanging from the beam, 1054

Here lies, whom hound did ne'er pursue, 696

Hap, 1152

Here she lies, a pretty bud, 358

Happy are men who yet before they are killed, Here they went with smock and crook, 1404

1387

Here, where the world is quiet, 1148

Happy those early days! when I, 492

Her eyes the glowworm lend thee, 359

Happy ye leaves when as those lilly hands, 190

Heritage, 1443

Hardy, Thomas, 1152

Hero and Leander, 238

Harlem, 1433

Heroes, 1705

Harlem Sweeties, 1432

heroic couplet, 2 0 4 0

Harriet, 1605

heroic quatrain, 2 0 4 1

Harrison, Tony, 1872

Her planted eye to-day controls, 946

Harry, whose tuneful and well-measured song, 416

Herrick, Robert, 354

Harvest Song, 1399

Her Triumph, 334

Haskell, 1269

He runs before the wise men: he, 1454

Hass, Robert, 1919

He saw her from the bottom of the stairs, 1228

Hatred and vengeance, my eternal portion, 704

He's gone, and all our plans, 1371

Have you dug the spill, 1432
He sipped at a weak hock and seltzer, 1461
Having been tenant long to a rich lord, 367
He stirs, beginning to awake, 1554
Hayden, Robert, 1533
He thought he kept the universe alone, 1243
Haystack in the Floods, The, 1139
He who binds to himself a joy, 746
H. D. (Hilda Doolittle), 1311
He would declare and could himself believe, 1242
He, 1545
hexameter, 2 0 3 2
Headwaters, 1861
Hid by the august foliage and fruit of the grape-Heaney, Seamus, 1899
vine, 1328
Hearing one saga, we enact the next, 1641
High Holy Days, 1952
Hear me, O God!, 333
High Noon at Los Alamos, 1881
Hear the voice of the Bard!, 740
Hill, A, 1667
Heartless Art, The, 1877
Hill, Geoffrey, 1831
Heart's Needle, 1731
Hill Summit, The, 1107
Heavy, heavy, heavy, hand and heart, 1679
Hill Wife, The, 1235

Hecht, Anthony, 1667
Hine, Daryl, 1868
He clasps the crag with crooked hands, 1004
His clumsy body is a golden fruit, 1 584
He disappeared in the dead of winter, 1472
His Golden Locks Time Hath to Silver Turned, 221
He found her by the ocean's moaning verge, 1109
His Prayer to Ben Jonson, 358
He holds a volume open in his hands, 1626
Hog Butcher for the World, 1252
He invented a rainbow but lightning struck it, 1447
Holiday squeals, as if all were scrambling for their
He is quick, thinking in clear images, 1400
lives, 1815
Helen, 1312
Hollander, John, 1775
I N D E X / 2 1 6 1
Hollow Men, The, 1356
Humpty Dumpty's Explication of Jabberwocky,
Holmes, Oliver Wendell, 974
1136
Holy Sonnets, 318
Hunchback in the Park, The, 1568
Holy Thursday [I.], 734
Hurt Hawks, 1321
Holy Thursday [II.], 741
Hush little Lily, 1428
Holy Willie's Prayer, 750

Hymn to God My God, in My Sickness, 322
Homage to Claude Lorraine, 1865
Hymn to God the Father, A (Donne), 321
Homage to Mistress Bradstreet, 1546
Hymn to God the Father, A (Jonson), 333
Home Burial, 1228
Hymn to Intellectual Beauty, 864
Home-Thoughts, from Abroad, 1017
Hope, 1046
I, 1858
Hope, A. D., 1481
I Am, 896
“Hope” is the thing with feathers -, 1114
—I am a gentleman in a dustcoat trying, 1367
Hopkins, Gerard Manley, 1166
I am a little world made cunningly, 318
Horatian ode, 2048
I am a lonely being, scarred by swords, 10
Horatian Ode, An, 486
I Am a Parcel of Vain Strivings Tied, 1045
Hot Sun, Cool Fire, 221
I am a reaper whose muscles set at sundown. All Hourglass, 1492
my oats are cradled, 1399
House of Life, The, 1106
iambic meter, 2030
House on a Red Cliff, 1935
I am inside someone, 1857

House Was Quiet and the World Was Calm, The, I am not a painter, I am a poet, 1730

1267

I Am of Ireland, 19

Housewifery, 540

I am poor brother Lippo, by your leave!, 1026

Housman, A. E., 1173

I am still hurt, Plin, 1665

Howard, Henry, Earl of Surrey, 137

I am the man who looked for peace and found,

Howard, Richard, 1778

1647

How changed is here each spot man makes or fills!,

I Am the Very Model of a Modern Major-General, 1095

1144

How do I justify this stanza?, 1995

I am: yet what I am none cares or knows, 895

How do I love thee? Let me count the ways, 947

I Asked a Thief, 745

Howe, Julia Ward, 1054

I, being born a woman and distressed, 1383

How fresh, oh Lord, how sweet and clean, 380

I bought a dollar and a half's worth of small red

Howl, 1708

potatoes, 1763

How like a man, is Man, who rises late, 1504

I bring fresh showers for the thirsting flowers, 874

How like an angel came I down!, 532
I called you because I could not stand alone, 1666
How like a winter hath my absence been, 265
I can feel the tug, 1900
How lucky that I ran into you, 1694
I cannot find it, 1503
How many dawns, chill from his rippling rest, I can't forget, 1634
1415
I Care Not for These Ladies, 278
How many paltry, foolish, painted things, 237
I caught a tremendous fish, 1516
How many years since 1619 have I been singing
I caught this morning morning's minion, king-, Spirituals?, 1576
1166
How much better it seems now, 1972
I celebrate myself, and sing myself, 1060
How Pleasant to Know Mr. Lear, 1043
Ich am of Irlonde, 19
How should I praise thee, Lord! how should my
I chopped down the house that you had been sav-rhymes, 372
ing to live in next summer, 1693
How sleep the brave who sink to rest, 673
I couldn't do it again, 1931
How Soon Hath Time, 410
I cry I cry, 1439

How strange it seems! These Hebrews in their Idea, 236
graves, 952
Idea of Order at Key West, The, 1264
How strongly does my passion flow, 545
I Did but Prompt the Age, 417
How sweet I roam'd from field to field, 732
I did not live until this time, 530
How to Get There, 1729
I Do Not, 1937
How vainly men themselves amaze, 484
I doubt not God is good, well-meaning, kind, 1446
How well do I recall that walk in state, 1087
I Dreamed I Moved among the Elysian Fields, 1384
Huffy Henry hid the day, 1548
I dreamed this mortal part of mine, 354
Huge vapors brood above the clifted shore, 712
If all the world and love were young, 152
Hughes, Langston, 1429
If aught of oaten stop, or pastoral song, 615
Hughes, Ted, 1810
If but some vengeful god would call to me, 1152
Hugh Selwyn Mauberley, 1298
If by dull rhymes our English must be chained, 916

Hugo, Richard, 1674

If Cynthia Be a Queen, a Princess, and Supreme,

Human emotions and cognition, 1968

157

2 1 6 2 / I N D E X

I felt a Funeral, in my Brain, 1115

I'll tell thee now (dear Love) what thou shalt do,

If ever two were one, then surely we, 465

301

If he from heaven that filched that living fire, 237

I looked across the rollers of the deep, 1087

If honor to an ancient name be due, 528

I Look into My Glass, 1153

If, in an odd angle of the hutment, 1553

I loved you first the time I saw you last, 1868

If, in the month of dark December, 833

II Penseroso, 405

If I should die, think only this of me, 1327

I made a posy, while the day ran by, 377

If it form the one landscape that we, the inconstant

I make a pact with you, Walt Whitman—, 1296

ones, 1477

I met a traveler from an antique land, 870

If I were giv'n to mirth, 'twould be more cross, 350

I met the Bishop on the road, 1204

“If no love is, O God, what feele I so?, 67

I'm going to try and overcome my limitation—,

I found a dimpled spider, fat and white, 1240

1949

If poisonous minerals, and if that tree, 319

I Missed His Book, but I Read His Name, 1846

If the red slayer think he slays, 945

I'm Nobody! Who are you?, 1113

If there exists a fie//—the case is cfear—, 717

Imperfect Enjoyment, The, 551

If the year is meditating a suitable gift, 1578

imperfect rhyme, 203 8

If thou dislik'st the piece thou light'st on first,

Imperial Adam, 1482

355

Implies that some therefore, 1772

If when my wife is sleeping, 1272

Impromptu, 637

If, whittier and dumper, gross carver, 1699

I'm scared a lonely. Never see my son, 1550

I grew up bent over, 1892

In a coign of the cliff between lowland and high-

I had a picture by him—a print, I think—on my
land, 1150

bedroom wall, 1865

In a Dark Time, 1501

I had a small, nonspeaking part, 1893

In a Duplex Near the San Andreas Fault, 2009

I had come to the house, in a cave of trees, 1406

In /Esop's tales an honest wretch we find, 566

I had heard, 1747

In all those stories the hero, 1705
I have a boy of five years old, 780
In an Artist's Studio, 1129
I Have a Gentle Cock, 82
In a solitude of the sea, 1156
I Have a Young Sister, 81
In a somer seson, whan softe was the sonne, 71
I have been here before, 1105
In a stable of boats I lie still, 1661
I have been one acquainted with the night, 1237
In a Station of the Metro, 1297
I have done it again, 1843
In Broken Images, 1400
I have eaten, 1274
In Carrowdore Churchyard, 1921
I have heard that hysterical women say, 1024
Incident (Cullen), 1446
I have lived in important places, times, 1453
Indeed I must confess, 471
I have met them at close of day, 1194
Independence Day Letter, 1756
I hear a river thro' the valley wander (Hollander), independent clause, 205 7 1777
Indian Burying Ground, The, 716
I hear a river thro' the valley wander (Stickney), Indian Emperor, The, 500
1252

Indian Woman's Death-Song, 901

I heard a Fly buzz - when I died -, 1121

I ne'er was struck before that hour, 895

I hear that since you left me, 1947

I never lost as much but twice -, 1110

I held it truth, with him who sings, 996

In Flanders Fields, 1225

I hold my honey and I store my bread, 1586

In her storefront living room—, 1973

I imagine this midnight moment's forest, 1810

In Honor of that High and Mighty Princess, Queen

I joy to see how in your drawn work, 193

Elizabeth, of Most Happy Memory, 458

I kenning through astronomy divine, 536

In idle August, while the sea soft, 1825

I Knew a Woman, 1500

In Italy, where this sort of thing can occur, 1667

I Know a Man, 1705

In May, when sea-winds pierced our solitudes,

I know I am, 1435

941

I know that I shall meet my fate, 1193

In Memoriam A.H.H., 996

I know the bottom, she says. I know it with my In Memoriam
[Easter 1915], 1254

great tap root, 1839

In Memoriam fames foyce, 1380

I know what the caged bird feels, alas!, 1224

In Memory of Radio, 1856
I laugh til! my jaw unhinges, 2015
In Memory of W. B. Yeats, 1472
I leant upon a coppice gate, 1155
In Minako Wada's House, 1998
I like a look of Agony, 1115
In My Craft or Sullen Art, 1 572
I like a ship in storms was tossed, 594
In 1935, the year I was born, 1866
I like the fox shall grieve, 596
Innocent decision: to enjoy, 1678
I like to see it lap the Miles -, 1117
In Nunhead Cemetery, 1218
Illiterate, The, 1608
In old Minako Wada's house, 1998
I'll tell thee everything I can, 1137
In Paris with You, 1966

I N D E X / 2 1 6 3

In pious times, ere priestcraft did begin, 501
I saw the best minds of my generation destroyed
In Praise of Limestone, 1477
by madness, starving hysterical naked, 1708
Inscription for a War, 1485
I saw the spiders marching through the air, 1596
Inscription in a Beautiful Retreat Called Fairy I scarce believe my love to be so pure, 300
Bower, 707
I see them crowd on crowd they walk the earth,

Insensibility, 1387

1044

Inside the veins there are navies setting forth, 1704

I shall never get you put together entirely, 1836

In silent night when rest I took, 466

I Sing of a Maiden, 79

In sixth grade Mrs. Walker, 2011

I sing of brooks, of blossoms, birds, and bowers,

In spite of all the learned have said, 716

354

Instructions, 1819

I Sing the man that never equal knew, 554

In such a night, when every louder wind, 563

I sing the tree is a heron, 1511

Intellect, 945

I sing this song about myself, full sad, 11

internal rhyme, 203 7

I sit in one of the dives, 1474

In the dungeon-crypts, idly did I stray, 1048

Is It Possible, 130

In the falling snow, 1 502

Is it you standing among the olive trees, 1865

In the Grounds, 1927

I slept under rhododendron, 1817

In the hickory scent, 1950

Is My Team Ploughing, 1175

In the last minutes he said more to her, 1905

I sought a theme and sought for it in vain, 1207

In the long, sleepless watches of the night, 956
I stand upon a hill and see, 1769
In the silence that prolongs the span, 1770
“Is there anybody there?” said the Traveller, 1225
In the stillness after dawn we two, 1751
Is this a holy thing to see, 741
In the Waiting Room, 1521
Is to leave all and take the thread of Love, 351
In this little urn is laid, 360
I stood with three comrades in Parliament Square,
In this strange labyrinth how shall I turn, 351
1590
In this world, the isle of dreams, 361
I strove with none, for none was worth my strife,
In Time of “The Breaking of Nations,” 1161
833
In Tooting, the tomato, 1946
I struck the board and cried, “No more, 379
Into these loves who but for passion looks, 236
I swive as well as other do, 552
intransitive, 205 5
Italian sonnet, 204 3 Introduction (“Hear the voice of the Bard!”— It could take from Monday to Thursday, 2016
Blake), 740
I tell thee, Dick, where I have been, 454 Introduction (“Piping down the valleys wild”— It has a hole in
it. Not only where I, 1979
Blake), 733

I that have been a lover, and could show it, 344
Introduction, The (Finch), 556
I that in heill was and gladness, 86
In unexperienced infancy, 534
I, the poet William Yeats, 1198
In vain, in vain,—the all-composing hour, 638
I Think Continually of Those Who Were Truly
In vain to me the smiling mornings shine, 673
Great, 1505
In vain you boast poetic names of yore, 637
I think of the Celts as rather a whining lady, 1441 inversion, 2062
I think very well of Susan but I do not know her Invisible, chimerical, 1869
name, 1249
Inviting a Friend to Supper, 326
I thought of walking round and round a space,
In wet May, in the months of change, 1788
1906
In what estate so ever I be, 82
I thought once how Theocritus had sung, 947
In Worcester, Massachusetts, 1521
It Is a Beauteous Evening, 794
In Xanadu did Kubla Khan, 809
It is a clearing deep in a forest: overhanging
I on my horse, and Love on me, doth try, 216
boughs, 1704
I placed a jar in Tennessee, 1260

It is a God-damned lie to say that these, 1379
I put your leaves aside, 1248
It is an ancient Mariner, 812
I reckon - When I count at all - , 1120
It is June, it is June, 1290
I remember the clumsy surgery: the face, 1559
It is like the first and last time I tried a Coleman,
I remember the dread with which I at a quarter 1631 past four, 1463
It is morning, Senlin says, and in the morning,
I remember the neckcurls, limp and damp as ten-1370 drils, 1499
It is not a range of a mountain, 1249
I resemble everyone, 1803
It is not what they built. It is what they knocked Irish Airman Foresees His Death, An, 1193
down,1963
irregular forms, 2 0 4 8
It is the clay that makes the earth stick to his
I said in my youth, 1491
spade, 1218
is an enchanted thing, 1335
It is the sound of lions lapping, 1492
I saw a Ship of martial build, 1056
It is true, as someone has said, that in, 1864
I saw eternity the other night, 493

It is 12:20 in New York a Friday, 1728

2 1 6 4 / I N D E X

It is yourself you seek, 1407

I would to Heaven that I were so much clay, 837

It little profits that an idle king, 992

I wrote: in the dark cavern of our birth, 1504

It mounts at sea, a concave wall, 1771

I, too, dislike it: there are things that are important

Jabberwocky, 1135

beyond all this fiddle, 1329

Jackson, Laura (Riding), 1425

It's a question of altitude, or latitude, 1740

Jacobsen, Josephine, 1491

It's a spring morning; sun pours in the window, Japan, 1917

1688

Jarrell, Randall, 1552

It seemed that out of battle I escaped, 1389

Jeffers, Robinson, 1320

It semes white and is red, 85

Jennings, Elizabeth, 1735

It's no go the merrygoround, it's no go the rick-

Jerusalem, 747

shaw, 1486

Jewish Cemetery at Newport, The, 952

It's raining on black coal and warm wet ashes, Job Davies, eighty-five, 1545

1909

John Anderson, My Jo, 754

It's the first night, I suppose, 1666

Johnson, Samuel, 655

It's very cold, Catherine is bundled in a coat, a Johnson's Cabinet Watched by Ants, 1704

poncho on top of that, high boots, gloves, 1870 Jonson, Ben, 323

It Was a Lover and His Lass, 274

Jordan (7), 373

It was a Maine lobster town—, 1602

Journey of the Magi, 1359

It was hot. A size too large, 1952

Juan's Song, 1407

It was in and about the Martinmas time, 107

fubilate Agno, 678

It was many and many a year ago, 981

Judges, who rule the world by laws, 592

It was not I who began it, 1579

fudging Distances, 1565

It was taken some time ago, 1894

funk, 1638

It was the dingiest bird, 1454

Just as my fingers on these keys, 1262

I've a pile of memories on my other, 1968

Justice, Donald, 1684

I've heard the lilting at our yowe-milking, 677

Just like as in a nest of boxes round, 500

I've heard them lilting at loom and belting, 1448

Just now the lilac is in bloom, 1325

I've known rivers, 1430

Just off the highway to Rochester, Minnesota,
I wake and feel the fell of dark, not day, 1170
1750

I wake to sleep, and take my waking slow, 1500
Just when our drawing-rooms begin to blaze, 697
I walk down the garden paths, 1245

I walked where in their talking graves, 1590
Kanheri Caves, 1883

I walk through the long schoolroom questioning,
Kavanagh, Patrick, 1450 1200

Keats, John, 905

I Wandered Lonely as a Cloud, 801

Kees, Weldon, 1559

I wander thro' each charter'd street, 744

Kenney, Richard, 1954

I want a hero: an uncommon want, 837

Kentucky water, clear springs: a boy fleeing, 1419

I wanted so ably, 1706

Keyes, Sidney, 1644

I wanted to go down to where the roots begin, 1926

Killigrew, Anne, 554

I was angry with my friend, 743

Killing Time, 2021

I was going up to say something, 1757

Kind pity chokes my spleen, brave scorn forbids,

I was sent in to see her, 1758

314

I Was Sleeping Where the Black Oaks Move, 2006

King Billy, 1618

I weep for Adonais—he is dead!, 879

Kingfisher, 1510

I went for a walk over the dunes again this morn-

King, Henry, 363

ing, 1695

Kinnell, Galway, 1740

I went into a public-‘ouse to get a pint o’beer, 1181

Kinsella, Thomas, 1757

I went to the Garden of Love, 744

Kipling, Rudyard, 1181

I whole in body, and in mind, 147

kitchenette building, 1586

I will arise and go now, and go to Innisfree, 1190

Kizer, Carolyn, 1688

I will rise, 1313

Knight and Shepherd’s Daughter, The, 113

I will strike down wooden houses; I will burn alu-

Koch, Kenneth, 1691

minum, 1753

Komunyakaa, Yusef, 1949

I wish that I had spoken only of it all, 1250

Kraken, The, 984

I wonder, by my troth, what thou and I, 293

Kubla Khan, 809

I wonder do you feel today, 1040

Kumquat for John Keats, A, 1875

I wonder, Duddon, if you still remember, 1561

Kunitz, Stanley, 1454

“I won’t go with you. I want to stay with Grandpa!,”

1597

La Belle Dame sans Merci, 917

I work all day, and get half-drunk at night, 1658

Lachrimae, 1834

I would not paint - a picture -, 1116

Lady in Kicking Horse Reservoir, The, 1675

I N D E X / 2 1 6 5

Lady Lazarus, 1843

Life, friends, is boring. We must not say so, 1549

Lady Lost, 1369

Lifeguard, The, 1661

Lady of Shalott, The, 984

Life! I know not what thou art, 706

Lady’s Dressing Room, The, 572

Light-winged Smoke, Icarian bird, 1046

Lake Isle of Innisfree, The, 1190

Like a convalescent, I took the hand, 1903

L’Allegro, 402

Like a painting it is set before one, 1544

Lamb, The, 734

Like a skein of loose silk blown against a wall, 1296

Lament for a Leg, 1681

Like as the armed knight, 140

Lament for the Great Music, 1376

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,

Lament for the Makaris, 86
262
Lamia, 918
Like Dolmens Round My Childhood, the Old Peo-Landfall in Unknown Seas, 1528
ple, 1783
Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers in New England, Like the foghorn that's all lung, 1614
The, 898
Like to the Indians, scorched with the sun, 248
Landor, Walter Savage, 831 limerick, 2 0 4 6
Langland, William, 71
Linen Industry, The, 1910
Lanier, Sidney, 1162
Lines (Composed a Few Miles above Tintern Abbey), Lanyer, Aemilia, 284
765
Lapis Lazuli, 1204
Lines Written during a Period of Insanity, 704
Larkin, Philip, 1648
Linger not, stranger; shed no tear, 1485
Last night, ah, yesternight, betwixt her lips and Listeners, The, 1225
mine, 1211
Litany, 1918
Late April and you are three; today, 1732
Little Black Boy, The, 735
Latest Decalogue, The, 1052

Little Boy Found, The, 737
Law makes long spokes of the short stakes of men,
Little Boy Lost, The, 736 1463
Little Brown Baby, 1223
Lawrence, D. H., 1284
Little Gidding, 1360
Layton, Irving, 1530
Little Lamb, who made thee?, 734
Lay your sleeping head, my love, 1465
Little Red-Cap, 2008
Lazarus, Emma, 1172
Lo! Death has reared himself a throne, 976
Leafy-with-love banks and the green waters of the Lodge, Thomas, 222
canal, 1453
Lo I the man, whose Muse whilome did maske, Lear, Edward, 1041
165
Leda and the Swan, 1200
London, 744
Lee, Li-Young, 2011
London, 1802, 795
Legal Fiction, 1463
London Rain, 1489
Leithauser, Brad, 1998
Long Branch Song, A, 1914
Lenox Hill, 1959

Longfellow, Henry Wadsworth, 951
Lessons of the War, 1564
Long-Legged Fly, 1206
Let it no longer be a forlorn hope, 468
Longley, Michael, 1910
Let man's soul be a sphere, and then, in this, 317
Long Love, That in My Thought Doth Harbor, The,
Let me not to the marriage of true minds, 266
126
Let me pour forth, 300
long meter, 204 1
Let Observation, with extensive view, 656
Long neglect has worn away, 1046
Let others sing of knights and paladins, 232
Long time he lay upon the sunny hill, 1336
Letter for All-Hallows (1949), A, 1665
Look in thy 1 glass and tell the face thou viewest,
Letters & Other Worlds, 1933
258
Letters from a Father, 1629
Lorde, Audre, 1858
Letters to Edward Thomas, 2016
Lord, how can man preach thy eternal word?, 373
Letter to Her Husband, Absent upon Public Lord Randal, 100
Employment, A, 466
Lord's lost Him His mockingbird, 1533
Let the bird of loudest lay, 270
Lord, who createdst man in wealth and store, 368,

Let the snake wait under, 1276
Lord, with what care hast thou begirt us round!, Letting Go, 1868
369
Let us go then, you and I, 1340
Lore, 1545
Levertov, Denise, 1677
Losing a Language, 1744
Levine, Philip, 1761
Lost, The, 1044
Lewis, Alun, 1573
Lost in Translation, 1720
Lewis, C. Day, 1448
Lost Son, The, 1495
Lie, The, 154
Lost Soul, A, 1831
Life (Barbault), 706
Lotos-Eaters, The, 988
Life (Herbert), 377
Louse Hunting, 1374
2 1 6 6 / I N D E X
Love bade me welcome: yet my soul drew back,
Map of the City, A, 1769
385
Margaret, are you grieving, 1068
Love Calls Us to the Things of This World, 1633
Mariana, 982
Love in fantastic triumph sat, 540

Mark but this flea, and mark in this, 309
Love in my bosom like a bee, 222
Marlowe, C h r i s t o p h e r , 2 3 8
Lovelace, R i c h a r d , 4 7 2
Marriage, 1807
Love-Letter-Burning, 1990
Marshes of Glynn, The, 1163
Loveliest of Trees, the Cherry Now, 1173
Martian Sends a Postcard Home, A, 1943
Love lives beyond, 894
Martinez, Dionisio D., 2 0 0 9
Love Me Little, Love Me Long, 117
Marvell, Andrew, 4 7 5
Love on the Farm, 1284
Mary Hamilton, 108
Lover, The: A Ballad, 641
masculine rhymes, 2037
Love's Alchemy, 303
Massachusetts Bay Psalm Book, The, 391
"Love seeketh not Itself to please, 742
Masts at Dawn, 1457
Love set you going like a fat gold watch, 1837
Maxwell, Glyn, 2 0 1 6
Love's Growth, 300
may i feel said he, 1395
Love Song of f. Alfred Prufrock, The, 1340
May I for my own self song's truth reckon, 12
Love Song of Tooting, A, 1946

M c C r a e , John, 1225

Love, That Doth Reign and Live Within My Meanwhile, somewhere in the state of Colorado, Thought, 137

armed to the teeth, 2021

Love's the boy stood on the burning deck, 1515

Medallion, 1306

Love (III), 385

Medgar Evers, 1588

Love Without Hope, 1400

Mediocrity in Love Rejected, 387

Loving in truth, and fain in verse my love to show,

Meditation at Lagunitas, 1919

213

Meditation 8, 536

Lowell, Amy, 1245

Medusa, 1406

Lowell, Robert, 1 5 9 2

Meeting the British, 1980

Lowry, M a l c o l m , 1503

Melville, H e r m a n , 1054

Lucifer in Starlight, 1110

Mementos, I, 1734

Lucks, My Fair Falcon, 133

Memorabilia, 1019

Luini in porcelain!, 1306

Memory lifts her smoky mirror: 1943, 1799

Lullaby, 1465

Men at Forty, 1685

Lully, lullay, lully, lullay, 83
Men call you fayre, and you doe credit it, 194
Luxurious man, to bring his vice in use, 482
Mending Wall, 1227
Lycidas, 410
Merce of Egypt, 1511
Lying apart now, each in a separate bed, 1735
Mercian Hymns, 1833
Lyke as a huntsman after weary chace, 192
M e r e d i t h , George, 1107
Lyke as the Culver on the bared bough, 195
M e r e d i t h , William, 1608
Lyly, John, 207
Merrill, J a m e s , 1716
lyric poetry, 2028
Merry Margaret, 91
M e r w i n , W. S., 1743
M a c C a i g , N o r m a n , 1508
Methought I Saw, 419
M a c D i a r m i d , H u g h , 1376
Methought I saw my late espoused saint, 419
Mac Flecknoe, 517
Methought I saw the grave where Laura lay, 151
M a c L e i s h , Archibald, 1381
Mew, Charlotte, 1216
M a c N e i c e , Louis, 1485
Midnight. June, 1923. Not a stir except for the M a c P h e r s o n , Jay, 1830

brough and brouhaha, 1981
Madame, ye been of alle beautee shrine, 68
Midnight. The wind yawing nor-east, 1628
M a h o n , Derek, 1921
Midsummer, 1827
main clause, 2057
Midwinter spring is its own season, 1360
Make me, O Lord, thy spinning wheel complete, Milkweed and Monarch, 1980
540
Mill, The, 1214
Maldiver Shark, The, 1055
Millay, E d n a St. Vincent, 1382
Man, 376
Milton, 746
Man Alone, 1407
Milton, J o h n , 3 9 4
Mangosteens, 1991
Milton! thou shouldst be living at this hour, 795
Man looking into the sea, 1330
Mind Is an Enchanting Thing, The, 1335
Man Meets a Woman in the Street, A, 1556
Mine—by the Right of the White Election!, 1118
Mannerly Margery Milk and Ale, 90
Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Manner of Her Will, & What She Left to London, Lord, 1054

and to All Those in It, at Her Departing, The, 147 Mine Own john Poins, 134

Mantles, 1946

Miniver Cheevy, 1213

I N D E X / 2 1 6 7

Missing, The, 1774

My dress is silent when I tread the ground, 10

Missing Dates, 1464

My father at the dictionary-stand, 2003

Mr. Brodsky, 1747

My father's body was a globe of fear, 1933

Mr. Edwards and the Spider, 1596

My first thought was, he lied in every word, 1020

Mr. Flood's Party, 1215

My Galley, 127

Mr. Over, 1439

My God, I heard this day, 376

Mrs. Snow, 1583

My God! I know, I feel thee mine, 652

Mock on, Mock on, Voltaire, Rousseau, 745

My Grandmother, 1735

Mock Song, The, 552

My Grandmother's Love Letters, 1410

Modern Love, 1107

My head, my heart, mine eyes, my life, nay, more,

Modotti, 1800

466

Momaday, N. Scott, 1861

My heart aches, and a drowsy numbness pains, 935

Monody, 1057

My heart has made its mind up, 1948

monometer, 2 0 3 1

My Heart Leaps Up, 796

monorhyme, 2 0 4 1

My heart, my dove, my snail, my sail, my, 2014

Montague, John, 1783

My Last Afternoon with Uncle Devereux Winslow,

Montagu, Lady Mary Wortley, 639

1597

Mont Blanc, 866

My Last Duchess, 1012

Moore, Marianne, 1328

My life closed twice before it's close, 1127

Moose, The, 1523

My Life had stood - a Loaded Gun -, 1122

Moraes, Dom, 1883

My lizard, my lively writher, 1501

More and more lately, as, not even minding the

My long two-pointed ladder's sticking through a slippages yet, the aches and sad softenings, 1869

tree, 1231

More, Hannah, 707

My Lord recalls Ferrara? How walls, 1778

More Lovely than Antiquity, 1270

My Love is of a birth as rare, 480

More then most faire, full of the living fire, 190

My Lute Awake!, 129
Morgan, Edwin, 1618
My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun, 267
Morning Song, 1837
My mother bore me in the southern wild, 735
Morris, William, 1139
My mother had two faces and a frying pot, 1859
Morse, 1890
My old man's a white old man, 1431
Moss, Howard, 1659
My own heart let me more have pity on; let, 1170
Most glorious Lord of lyfe that on this day, 192
My Papa's Waltz, 1494
Most of It, The, 1243
My pensive Sara! thy soft cheek reclined, 805
"Mother dear, may I go downtown, 1855
My prime of youth is but a frost of cares, 151
Motherhood, 1540
My Sad Captains, 1771
Mothers of America, 1730
" 'Mystery Boy' Looks for Kin in Nashville," 1535
Mother to Her Waking Infant, A, 760
My Sweetest Lesbia, 278
Mother, who read and thought and poured herself
My swirling wants. Your frozen lips, 1796 into me, 1848
My Version, 1947
Mourning Poem for the Queen of Sunday, 1 533

Mourn, mourn, ye Muses, all your loss deplore,
Naked she lay, clasped in my longing arms, 551 546
Naming of Parts, 1564
Move him into the sun—, 1390
Nashe, Thomas, 282
Moving from Cheer to Joy, from Joy to All, 1555
Nash, Ogden, 1437
Mower against Gardens, The, 482
Nature, That Washed Her Hands in Milk, 156
Mower to the Glowworms, The, 483
Nature's lay idiot, I taught thee to love, 311
Much have I traveled in the realms of gold, 905
Nature, which is the vast creation's soul, 527
Much Madness is divinest Sense -, 1121
Nautilus Island's hermit, 1601
Muir, Edwin, 1336
Navidad, St. Nicholas Ave., 1929
Muldoon, Paul, 1979
Near the dry river's water-mark we found, 1749
Murray, Les, 1885
Negro Speaks of Rivers, The, 1430
Musee des Beaux Arts, 1471
Neither Out Far Nor In Deep, 1240
Musical Instrument, A, 950
Nemerov, Howard, 1623
Mutability (Shelley), 864
Nepenthe, 713

Mutability (Wordsworth), 804
Neutrality Loathsome, 361
Mute is thy wild harp, now, O Bard sublime!, 711
Neutral Tones, 1153
My attention is a wild, 1700
Never Again Would Birds' Song Be the Same, 1242
My bands of silk and miniver, 1310
Nevertheless, 1334
My black face fades, 1949
Never until the mankind making, 1569
My brother comes home from work, 1761
New Colossus, The, 1172
My candle burns at both ends, 1272
New Heaven, New War, 223
my dreams, my works, must wait till after hell, 1586 New Rule, 1969

2 1 6 8 / I N D E X

New World A-Comin', 1803
Now as I was young and easy under the apple
New Year's: A Short Pantoum, 2024
boughs, 1571
New Zealand, 1703
Now as I watch the progress of the plague, 1774
Next Day, 1555
“No water so still as the, 1333
Next Poem, The, 1972
Now Go'th Sun under Wood, 15
Next to my own skin, her pearls. My mistress, 2007

Now hardly here and there a hackney-coach, 568

“next to of course god america i, 1394

Now in thy dazzling half-oped eye, 760

Nicholson, Norman, 1561

Now it is autumn and the falling fruit, 1291

Night (Bogan), 1409

No worst, there is none. Pitched past pitch of grief,

Night, The (Vaughan), 497

1169

Night, Death, Mississippi, 1534

Now sleeps the crimson petal, now the white, 995

Night Feeding, 1537

Now that I am fifty-six, 1538

Nightingale, The, 211

Now that I have your face by heart, I look, 1408

Night Piece, to Julia, The, 359

Now that the winter's gone, the earth hath lost,

Nights in the Gardens of Port of Spain, 1821

386

Night, the black summer, simplifies her smells, Now thou hast loved me one whole day, 294

1821

Now we must praise heaven-kingdom's Guardian,

Night, welcome art thou to my mind destrest, 349

1

Nikolaus Mardruz to his Master Ferdinand, Count Now Winter Nights Enlarge, 281

of Tyrol, 1565, 1778

Nudes—stark and glistening, 1374

MCMXIV, 1653

Nuns Fret Not at Their Convent's Narrow Room,

1916 seen from 1921, 1405

796

90 North, 1552

Nymph's Reply to the Shepherd, The, 152

Nobody heard him, the dead man, 1440

No Coward Soul Is Mine, 1050

O'Brien, Sean, 1992

Nocturnal Reverie, A, 563

Obscurest night involved the sky, 702

Nocturnal upon St. Lucy's Day, Being the Shortest octameter, 2

0 3 3

Day, A, 304

octave, 2042

Noel, noel, noel, 80

ode, 2048

No, it does not happen, 1801

Ode (Emerson), 943

No longer mourn for me when I am dead, 263

Ode (Gray), 668

nominal syntax, 2061

Ode (Wordsworth), 796

No more be grieved at that which thou hast done,

Ode, An (Prior), 568

261

Ode for Him, An, 360

No more of talk where God or angel guest, 425

Ode on a Distant Prospect of Eton College, 666

No more walks in the wood, 1776

Ode on a Grecian Urn, 938

No, no, go not to Lethe, neither twist, 937

Ode on Melancholy, 937

Non sum qualis eram honae sub regno Cynarae, Ode on the Poetical Character, 674

1211

Ode to a Nightingale, 935

Noonday Axeman, 1885

Ode to Bill, 1739

Noon in the intermountain plain, 1861

Ode to Death, 714

No Second Troy, 1191

Ode to Evening, 675

Nostalgia on the Lakefronts, 1686

Ode to Himself, An, 336

No Swan So Fine, 1333

Ode to Psyche, 933

Note Left in jimmy Leonard's Shack, A, 1749

Ode to the Confederate Dead, 1417

Not every man has gentians in his house, 1291

Ode to the West Wind, 872

No, the serpent did not, 1813

Ode Written in the Beginning of the Year 1746,

Nothing would sleep in that cellar, dank as a ditch,

673

1493

Odysseus, 1743

Not, I'll not, carrion comfort, Despair, not feast on

Of all the causes which conspire to blind, 596

thee, 1169

Of asphodel, that greeny flower, 1276

Not Knowing, 1997

Of A' the Airts, 752

Not like the brazen giant of Greek fame, 1172

off-rhyme, 2 0 3 8

Not marble, nor the gilded monuments, 262

Of heaven or hell I have no power to sing, 1043

Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul, 266

Of man's first disobedience, and the fruit, 421

Not my hands but green across you now, 1675

Of Many Worlds in This World, 500

Not only how far away, but the way that you say

Of Mere Being, 1268

it, 1565

O for that warning voice, which he who saw, 422

Not Waving but Drowning, 1440

Often beneath the wave, wide from this ledge,

Not with more glories, in the ethereal plain, 607

1410

Nou goth sonne under wode—, 15

Often in summer, on a tarred bridge plank stand-

noun phrase, 2061

ing, 1701

I N D E X / 2 1 6 9

Of thee, kind boy, I ask no red and white, 452
One day the amorous Lysander, 541
Of the Last Verses in the Book, 393
One day the Nouns were clustered in the street,
Of this cloth doll which, 1936
1691
Of this worlds Theatre in which we stay, 192
One face looks out from all his canvases, 1129
Of Time and the Line, 1967
One Flesh, 1735
Oft in My Thought, 78
On either side the river lie, 984
O Goddess! hear these tuneless numbers, wrung,
One must have a mind of winter, 1256
933
On English Monsieur, 325
O golden-tongued Romance with serene lute!, 905
One ought not to have to care, 1235
O Grammar rules, o now your virtues show, 217
One Perfect Rose, 1391
Oh, but it is dirty!, 1517
On First Looking into Chapman's Homer, 905
Oh! Death will find me, long before I tire, 1324
On Gut, 328
Oh, For a Bowl of Fat Canary, 207
On Hellespont, guilty of true love's blood, 238
Oh! for imperial Polydamna's art, 713
On Imagination, 722

Oh Galuppi, Baldassare, this is very sad to find!,
Onion, Memory, The, 1942
1017
Only a man harrowing clods, 1161
O'Hara, Frank, 1728
Only joy, now here you are, 218
Oh, I'm sailing away my own true love, 1854
On My First Daughter, 323
Oh Mistress Mine, 275
On My First Son, 323
Oh, to be in England, 1017
On Myself, 566
Oh Wert Thou in the Cauld Blast, 760
On Not Being Milton, 1872
Oh when the early morning at the seaside, 1462
onomatopoeia, 2 0 3 7
"Oh where are you going with your love-locks flow-
On Passing the New Menin Gate, 1320
ing, 1134
On Playwright, 325
Oh, who shall from this dungeon raise, 477
On Shakespeare, 401
Oil-slick, slack shocks, ancient engine, 1955
On Sitting Down to Read King Lear Once Again,
O king of terrors, whose unbounded sway, 562
905
Old Bachelor Brother, 1999
On Spies, 324

Old Eben Flood, climbing alone one night, 1215
On the Baptized Ethiopian, 468
Old Eddie's face, wrinkled with river lights, 1821
On the day of the explosion, 1657
Older, more generous, 1861
On the Death of Dr. Robert Levet, 664
Old-Fashioned Song, An, 1776
On the Death of the Late Earl of Rochester, 546
Old Mythologies, 1784
On the Farm, 1545
Old Vicarage, Grantchester, The, 1325
On the Late Massacre in Piedmont, 418
Old Women, The, 1627
On the long shore, lit by the moon, 1623
Olney Hymns, 695
On the Morning of Christ's Nativity, 394
Olson, Charles, 1511
On the Move, 1768
O! Mankind, 86
On the Sonnet, 916
"O'Melia, my dear, this does everything crown!", On the Welsh Language, 528 1156
On This Day I Complete My Thirty-sixth Year, 862
Omeros, 1827
On thy stupendous summit, rock sublime!, 715
O my love's like a red, red rose, 759
On Wenlock Edge the Wood's in Trouble, 1176

On a Columnar Self -, 1121
On winter mornings, 1502
On a Return from Egypt, 1622
open forms, 2048
On a starred night Prince Lucifer uprose, 1110
—Or, conversely, hungers, 1610
On a tree by a river a little tom-tit, 1146
Origins, 1926
On Being Brought from Africa to America, 720
Orion, 1795
Once I am sure there's nothing going on, 1649
Ormond, John, 1681
Once in a Lifetime, Snow, 1887
Ormsby, Eric, 1925
Once more the storm is howling, and half hid,
O Rose, thou art sick, 742 1196
O stagnant east-wind, palsied mare, 1268
Once, my braids swung heavy as ropes, 2005
O Taste and See, 1678
Once riding in old Baltimore, 1446
Others abide our question. Thou art free, 1087
Once their fruit is picked, 1640
O thou, my lovely boy, who in thy pow'r, 267
Once upon a midnight dreary, while I pondered,
O Thou that in the heavens does dwell, 750
weak and weary, 977
O Thou, that sit'st upon a throne, 680

Once upon a time there was an Italian, 1438
O thou that swing'st upon the waving hair, 474
Ondaatje, Michael, 1933
ottava rima, 2 0 4 1
One Art, 1527
Our God, Our Help, 591
One by one they appear in, 1771
Our lives avoided tragedy, 1687
One Day, The, 1753
Our sardine fishermen work at night in the dark of
One day I wrote her name upon the strand, 194
the moon; daylight or moonlight, 1322

2 1 7 0 / I N D E X

Outbound, 2023
Phillip Sparow, 94
Out of burlap sacks, out of bearing butter, 1761
Phoenix and the Turtle, The, 270
Out of Hiding, 2013
Piano, 1285
Out of the bosom of the Air, 956
Piazza di Spagna, Early Morning, 1634
Out of the Cradle Endlessly Rocking, 1073
Piazza Piece, 1367
Out of Your Sleep Arise and Wake, 80
Picture of Little T.C. in a Prospect of Flowers, The,
Outside, although November by the clock, 1766
481
Out walking in the frozen swamp one gray day,

Pictures from Brueghel, 1283

1232

Pied Beauty, 1167

Oven Bird, The, 1233

Piers Plowman, 71

Over the rim of the glass, 1669

Pike, 1812

Over these blunted, these tormented hills, 1883

Pile the bodies high at Austerlitz and Waterloo,

Owen, Wilfred, 1386

1253

O what can ail thee, Knight at arms, 917

Pillar of Fame, The, 361

O where ha' you been, Lord Randal, my son?, 100 Pindaric ode, 2 0 4 8

O wild West Wind, thou breath of Autumn's being,

Pink and a bit soft-bodied, with a somewhat jazzy,

872

1914

Owl, The, 1254

Pinsky, Robert, 1913

Owl and the Pussy-Cat, The, 1042

Piping down the valleys wild, 733

Ozymandias, 870

Pla ce bo, 94

Plain Song for Comadre, A, 1635

Pact, A, 1296

Platform One, 1815

Page, P. K., 1583
Plath, Sylvia, 1836
Painter, The, 1736
Platonic Love, 471
Palmer, Michael, 1936
Playwright, convict of public wrongs to men, 325
Palm Reader, The, 1973
Poe, Edgar Allan, 975
Pamphilia to Amphilanthus, 347 Poem (Williams), 1275
pantoum, 2 0 4 6
Poem Ended by a Death, 1850
Pantoum of the Great Depression, 1687
Poems of Our Climate, The, 1266
Paradise Lost, 420
Poem to Mr Thomas and Mr Frost, 2016
Paradoxes and Oxymorons, 1739
Poetical Sketches, 732
pararhyme, 2 0 3 8
poetic license, 2 0 3 8
Parish Register, The, 723
poetic syntax, 2 0 5 3
Parker, Dorothy, 1391
Poet of Nature, thou hast wept to know, 863
Parsley, 1985
Poetry, 1329
Parting, without a Sequel, 1368
Poison Tree, A, 743

Part otter, part snake, part bird the bird Anhinga, Pomegranate, The, 1941
1542
Poor eyes be blind, the light behold no more, 349
Passing Away, Saith the World, Passing Away, 1133 Poor soul,
the center of my sinful earth, 269
Passionate Man's Pilgrimage, The, 153
Porphyria's Lover, 1009
Passionate Shepherd to His Love, The, 256 Pope, Alexander, 596 past participle, 2 0 6 7
Portent, The, 1054
Past Ruined Ilion Helen Lives, 832
Porter, Peter, 1786
Past second cock-crow yacht masts in the harbor
Portrait d'une Femme, 1295
go slowly white, 1457
Portrait in Georgia, 1399
Patience, Though I Have Not, 128
Portrait of a Lady, 1273
Patterns, 1245
Pound, Ezra, 1295
Paul Laurence Dunbar, 1536
Pratt, E. J., 1270
Peaches, 1752
Prayer (Duffy), 2007
Pearl, 75
Prayer (Gioia), 1972

Pearl, the precious prize of a king, 75
Prayer (I), 371
Peele, George, 221
Prayer for My Daughter, A, 1196
Penelope for her Ulisses sake, 191
Prayer, the church's banquet, angels' age, 371
pentameter, 2 0 3 2
Pray thee, take care, that tak'st my book in hand, perfect rhyme, 2 0 3 8 323 Permanently, 1691
predicate, 2 0 5 5
Persian Version, The, 1402
Prediction, The, 1863
Persimmons, 2011
Prelude, The (Wordsworth), 781
Persistence of Song, The, 1659
Pressed by the moon, mute arbitress of tides, 711
Peter Quince at the Clavier, 1262
Primer, The, 1491
Pet Panther, 1700
Primer of the Daily Round, A, 1624
Philips, Katherine, 526
Princess, The, 994
INDEX / 2 1 7 1
Prior, Matthew, 566
Regeneration, 490
Prisoner, The, 1048

relative adverb, 2057
Prodigy, 1892
relative pronoun, 2057
Professor, publisher, and critic, 1995
Relic, The, 310
Prologue, The, 462
Relics, 1957
Prologue Spoken by Mr. Garrick, 655
Remember, 1128
;prose poetry, 2050
Remember how we picked the daffodils?, 1814
Prospect of Heaven Makes Death Easy, A, 590
Remembering the 'Thirties, 1641
Provide, Provide, 1241
Remember me when I am gone away, 1128
Psalm 58 (Massachusetts Bay Psalm Book), 391
Remembrance, 1047
Psalm 58: Si Were Utique (M. Sidney), 225
Remorse - is Memory - awake -, 1122
Psalm 58 (Smart), 684
Removal from Terry Street, A, 1927
Psalm 58 (Watts), 592
Renoir, whose paintings I don't much like, 1867
Psalm 114: In Exitu Israel? (M. Sidney), 226
Renunciation - is a piercing Virtue -, 1123
Psalm 114 (Massachusetts Bay Psalm Book), 392
repeton, 2046
Psalm 114 (Smart), 685

repeton couplet, 2 0 4 6
Psalm 114 (Watts), 593
Repression, 1869
Publication - is the Auction, 1123
Request to a Year, 1578
Pulley, The, 379
Requiem, 1437
Pulling up flax after the blue flowers have fallen, Resolution and Independence, 790 1910
Resume, 1391
Punishment, 1900
Retreat, The, 492
Purse-Seine, The, 1322
Return of the Greeks, The, 1337
Puzzle faces in the dying elms, 1535
Return to Scalpay, 1509
pyrrhic meter, 2031
Reuben Bright, 1213
Reveille, 1173
Quaker Graveyard in Nantucket, The, 1592 rhetorical question, 2062
Quality of Sprawl, The, 1888
Rhode Island, 1608
quantitative meter, 2036
Rhodora, The, 941
quatrain, 2041
rhyme royal, 2 0 4 1

Queen and Huntress, 345
Rhyme, the rack of finest wits, 332
Queen-Anne s-Lace, 1273
Rich, Adrienne, 1791
Question, The, 1870
Richard Cory, 1212
Question Answered, A, 746
Riddle (Hine), 1869
Quotations, 1867
riddles, 10
Right now I am the flower girl, 1896
Ragged Island, 1385
Rights of Woman, The, 705
Rag of black plastic, shred of a kite, 1543
Rime of the Ancient Mariner, The, 812
Rain, 1255
Ring Out Your Bells, 212
Raine, Craig, 1942
“Rise up, rise up, now, Lord Douglas,” she says, 97
Raleigh, Sir Walter, 151
rising meter, 2031
Ramanujan, A. K., 1801
rites for Cousin Vit, the, 1587
Randall, Dudley, 1855
River-Merchant’s Wife, The: a Letter, 1297
Ransom, John Crowe, 1367
Road Not Taken, The, 1232
Rape of the Lock, The, 604

Robin Redbreast, 1454
Raven, The, 977
Robinson, 1560
Razors pain you, 1391
Robinson, Edwin Arlington, 1212
Read and committed to the flames, I call, 1872
Roethke, Theodore, 1493
Reader, enough of this apology, 1996
Roman Fountain, 1408
Reading the Bible Backwards, 1879
Rondel, 1538
Reapers, 1398
Room on a Garden, A, 1268
Receipt to Cure the Vapors, A, 642
Root Cellar, 1493
Recessional, 1181
Rosalind's Madrigal, 222
Reconciliation, 1078
Rose Aylmer, 831
Redemption, 367
Rose-cheeked Laura, 280
Red Red Rose, A, 759
Rose, harsh rose, 1311
Red Wheelbarrow, The, 1274
Rosenberg, Isaac, 1373
Reed, Henry, 1563
Roses, 1616
Reflections on Ice-breaking, 1437

Rossetti, Christina, 1128

refrain, 2045

Rossetti, Dante Gabriel, 1102

Refusal to Mourn the Death, by Fire, of a Child in Rotate the husband and expose a hidden side. A letter he wrote from Rio de Janeiro, 1970

London, A, 1569

2 1 7 2 / I N D E X

Roundelay between Two Shepherds, A, 235

Senlin: A Biography, 1370

Row after row with strict impunity, 1417

sentence, 2055

Row us out from Desenzano, to your Sirmione Separation, 1744

row!, 1008

September 1, 1939, 1474

Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam of Naishapur, The, 961 September has come and I wake, 1487

Ruined Cottage, The, 768

September rain falls on the house, 1520

Ruined Maid, The, 1156

September Song, 1832

Rukeyser, Muriel, 1537

Serious Concerns, 1949

Rule which by obeying grows, 945

sestet, 2042

run-on lines, 2 0 3 4

sestina, 2045

Sestina (Bishop), 1520

Sacrament of the Altar, The, 8 5
Seth, Vikram, 1994
Sad Steps, 1656
Settle Bed, The, 1907
Safe in their Alabaster Chambers - (first version),
Seven threads make the shroud, 1628
1 1 1 1
Sexton, Anne, 1764
Safe in their Alabaster Chambers - (second ver-Shadows in the Water, 534
sion), 1112
Shakespeare, 1087
Safe upon the solid rock the ugly houses stand, Shakespeare, William, 257
1382
Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?, 259
Sailing to Byzantium, 1199
shaped poetry, 2 0 5 0
St. Agnes' Eve—Ah, bitter chill it was!, 907
She died in the upstairs bedroom, 1460
Salutation, The, 531
“She done put huh little hands, 1429
Salve Deus Rex Judaeorum, 284
She Dwelt among the Untrodden Ways, 789
Samson Agonistes, 450
She has finished and sealed the letter, 1368
Sanctity, 1450
She is as in a field a silken tent, 1241

Sandburg, Carl, 1252
She kept an antique shop—or it kept her, 1735
Sandpiper, 1518
Shelley, Percy Bysshe, 863
Sand pyramid, size of a child, each September, She looked over his shoulder, 1479
2013
She may count three little daisies very well, 1248
Sarah, Robyn, 1956
Shepherdess Calender, The, 159
Sassoon, Siegfried, 1317
She said: the pitying audience melt in tears, 618
Satire III, 314
She sang beyond the genius of the sea, 1264
Saturday, 639
She sat on a shelf, 1540
Sawmill, 1956
She sat up on her pillows, receiving guests, 1928
Say Not the Struggle Nought Availeth, 1053
She Walks in Beauty, 834
scansion, 2028
She Was a Phantom of Delight, 802
Scenes from the Life of the Peppertrees, 1677
She was thinner, with a mannered gauntness, 1988
Schnackenberg, Gjertrud, 2000
Shield of Achilles, The, 1479
Scholar-Gypsy, The, 1089
Shiloh, 1055

Scholars, The, 1193
Shimmer, 1684
Schooner Flight, The, 1825
Shine, Perishing Republic, 1320
Schuyler, James, 1683
Ship of Death, The, 1291
Science! true daughter of Old Time thou art!, 975
Shirley, James, 390
Scorn Not the Sonnet, 804
Shore, Jane, 1952
Seafarer, The, 12
short meter, 2 0 4 1
Sea Rose, 1311
Shot down from its enskied formation, 1787
Seascape, 1506
Should auld acquaintance be forgot, 753
Sea Similized to Meadows and Pastures, The: the Should I get married? Should I be good?, 1807
Mariners, to Shepherds: the Mast, to a May-Pole:
Shout, The, 2022
the Fish, to Beasts, 499
Show me, dear Christ, thy spouse so bright and Season of mists and mellow fruitfulness, 939
clear, 320
Seasons, The, 649
Shroud, 1628
Sea Violet, 1312
Shut in from all the world without, 958

Second Coming, The, 1196
Shut, shut the door, good John! (fatigued, I said),
Second Fig, 1382
626 Seeger, Pete, 1853
Sick Rose, The, 742
See! Here, My Heart, 86
Side by side, their faces blurred, 1650
See how they hurry, 1976
Sidney, Mary, 225
See the chariot at hand here of Love, 334
Sidney, Sir Philip, 208
See with what simplicity, 481
Sigh No More, 274
Self-Portrait, 1803
Silently my wife walks on the still wet furze, 1532
Self-Protection, 1288
Silent Noon, 1106
I N D E X / 2 1 7 3
Silent One, The, 1372
So Cruel Prison, 139
Silken Tent, The, 1241
Softly, in the dusk, a woman is singing to me, 1285
Silver Swan, The, 121
Soho Hospital for Women, The, 1851
Simic, Charles, 1891
So I would hear out those lungs, 1663
Simple Truth, The, 1783

Soldier, The, 1327

Simply by sailing in a new direction, 1528

Soliloquy of the Spanish Cloister, 1010

Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless

Solitary Reaper, The, 803

sea, 263

Some are plain lucky—we ourselves among them,

since feeling is first, 1394

1831

Since I am coming to that holy room, 322

Some days, although we cannot pray, a prayer,

Since laws were made, for every degree, 596

2007

Since 1619, 1576

Some days in May, little stars, 1914

Since there's no help, come let us kiss and part,

Some men never think of it, 1948

238

Someone said my name in the garden, 2013

Sing, cuccu, nu. Sing, cuccu, 15

Some say that love's a little boy, 1470

Sing lullaby, as women do, 145

Some that have deeper digged love's mine than I,

Sin (I), 369

303

Sir Patrick Spens, 103

Some things that fly there be-, 1110

Sissman, L. E., 1766

Some things we do take up a lot more time, 1739
Sisters, The, 1436
Something there is that doesn't love a wall, 1227
Sith Cynthia is ascended to that rest, 284
Sometime During Eternity ... , 1606
Sitting between the sea and the buildings, 1736
somewhere i have never travelled, gladly beyond,
Skeltonic verse, 2047
1395 Skelton, John, 90
so much depends, 1274
Skimming lightly, wheeling still, 1055
Song, A ("Ask me no more where Jove bestows"—
Skin Full, 2015
Carew), 385
Skirting the river road, (my forenoon walk, my Song Bewailing the Time of Christmas, So Much rest,), 1078
Decayed in England, A, 122
Skunk, The, 1902
Song for a Dark Girl, 1432
Skunk Cabbage, 1926
Song for St. Cecilia's Day, A, 524
Skunk Hour, 1601
Song for the Last Act, 1408
Slave Trade, The, 709
Song ("Go and catch a falling star"—Donne), 294
Sled Burial, Dream Ceremony, 1664
Song ("Go, lovely rose!"—Waller), 393

Sleepless as Prospero back in his bedroom, 2000
Song (“How strongly does my passion flow”—
Sleep-walking vapor, like a visitant ghost, 1671
Behn), 545
Slim in Atlanta, 1426
Song (“How sweet I roam’d from field to field”—
Slowly the poison the whole blood stream fills, Blake), 732
1464
Song (“Love a child is ever crying”—Wroth), 350
Slow, Slow, Fresh Fount, 344
Song (“Love in fantastic triumph sat”—Behn), 540
Slumber Did My Spirit Seal, A, 790
Song: Love Lives Beyond the Tomb, 894
Smart, Christopher, 678
Song (“Love what art thou? A vain thought”— Smiling Mouth, The, 77 Wroth), 353
Smith, Charlotte, 711
Song (“My heart, my dove, my snail, my sail, my”— Smith, Stevie, 1439 Zarin), 2104
Smoke, 1046
Song of a Young Lady to Her Ancient Lover, A, 553
Smokehouse, The, 1950
Song of Hiawatha, The, 954
Snake (Lawrence), 1286
Song of Myself, 1060

Snakes (Ramanujan), 1801
Songs and Ballads, 745
Snapshots of a Daughter-in-Law, 1791
Songs of Experience, 740
Snap tempered tooth chips, 1956
Songs of Innocence, 733
Snodgrass, W. D., 1731
Song (“Sweetest love, I do not go”—Donne), 298
Snowbound: A Winter Idyl, 958
Song (“The first month of his absence”—Lewis),
Snow-Flakes, 956
1574
Snowflake Which Is Now and Hence Forever, The, Song: To Celia (I), 331 1382
Song: To Celia (II), 331
Snow Man, The, 1256
Song to David, A, 680
Snow on a Mountain, 1883
Song. To My Inconstant Mistress, 387
Snow-Storm, The, 942
Song (“When I am dead, my dearest”—C. Rossetti), 1128 Snub-nosed, bone-fingered, deft with engraving Song (“Why so pale and wan, fond lover?”—Suck-tools, 1673 ling), 452
Snyder, Gary, 1816
Song: Woo’d and Married and A’, 762

2174 / INDEX

sonnet, 2042

Starfish, 1925

Sonnet (Brooke), 1324

Star-gazer, 1490

Sonnet (Gray), 673

Stasis in darkness, 1842

Sonnet, A (D. G. Rossetti), 1106

Station Island, 1903

Sonnet of Black Beauty, 346

Steal Away to Jesus, 1058

sonnet sequence, 2044

Steeple-Jack, The, 1331

Sonnets from the Portuguese, 947

Stein, Gertrude, 1248

Sonnets (Shakespeare), 257

Stella's Birthday, 570

Sonnets, Third Series (Tuckerman), 1086

Stella, since thou so right a princess art, 220

Sonnet—To Science, 975

Stella, think not that I by verse seek fame, 220

Sonnet to the Noble Lady, the Lady Mary Wroth, A, Stevenson, Anne, 1847

344

Stevens, Wallace, 1256

Sonnet II (Suckling), 452

Stickney, Trumbull, 1250

Son of the Ocean isle!, 897

Still Life, 1671
Soonest Mended, 1737
Still to Be Neat, 341
Sooty Season, The, 137
Stolen Child, The, 1188
So there stood Matthew Arnold and this girl, 1668
Stop all the clocks, cut off the telephone, 1470
Sorting out letters and piles of my old, 1734
Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening, 1237
Sort of a Song, A, 1276
Stories of Snow, 1583
So. The Spear-Danes in days gone by, 2
Strand, Mark, 1863
Soto, Gary, 1996
Strange Meeting, 1389
Soul's joy, bend not those morning stars from me,
Strange Metamorphosis of Poets, 1626
216 Strange power of song! the strain that warms the sound -poetry, 205 1
heart, 709
Soup, The, 1996
Strange room, from this angle, 1851
Southwell, Robert, 223
Strange Type, 1504
So We'll Go No More A-Roving, 836
Strawberries (Morgan), 1618
So we must say Goodbye, my darling, 1575

Straws like tame lightnings lie about the grass,
Soyinka, Wole, 1862
1508
Spain 1937, 1466
Streaked and fretted with effort, the thick, 1914
Spare, gen'rous victor, spare the slave, 567 Street, The, 1914
Speak, 1750
subject, 2055
Specially for me, she had some breaded, 1802
subordinate clause, 2057
Spender, Stephen, 1505
Success is counted sweetest, 1111
Spenser, Edmund, 159
Suckling, Sir John, 452
Spenserian sonnet, 2 0 4 3
Sudden Light, 1105
Spenserian stanza, 2042
suffixes, 2054
Spies, you are lights in state, but of base stuff, 324
Summer Farm, 1508
spirituals, 1057
Summer is late, my heart, 1455
Spleen, The (Finch), 558
Summer's Last Will, 282
Spleen, The (Green), 645
Summer's Night, A, 1222
Split the Lark—and you'll find the Music—, 1124

Sumptuous Destitution, 1969
spondaic meter, 2031
Sunday Afternoons, 1951
Sports and gallantries, the stage, the arts, the Sunday Morning, 1257 antics of dancers, 1321
Sunday shuts down on this twentieth-century eve-Sprawl is the quality, 1888
ning, 1537
Spring, The (Carew), 386
Sundays too my father got up early, 1533
Spring (Millay), 1383
Sunlight on the Garden, The, 1485
Spring and Fall, 1168
Sun Rising, The, 295
Spring is like a perhaps hand, 1393
Sunset and evening star, 1008
Spring, the sweet spring, is the year's pleasant king,
Sun Underfoot Among the Sundews, The, 1613 282 Supermarket in California, A, 1713 sprung rhythm, 2034
Supernatural Love, 2003
Squarings, 1909
Surface, The, 1979
Stand close around, ye Stygian set, 832
Surprised by Joy, 804
Standing aloof in giant ignorance, 906

Swan, The, 1830
Stand Whoso List, 134
Swan and Shadow, 1775
stanza, 2040
Swear by what the sages spoke, 1208
Stanzas (Byron), 862
Sweet Auburn! loveliest village of the plain, 686
Stanzas (Smith), 713
Sweet day, so cool, so calm, so bright, 375
Stanzas in Meditation, 1248
Sweet Echo, sweetest nymph, that liv'st unseen, Stanzas Written in Dejection, Near Naples, 870
415

I N D E X / 2 1 7 5

Sweet Nosegay, A, 146
The, 1930
Swenson, May, 1540
The airport coffee tastes less of America, 1822
Swift, Jonathan, 568
The annals say: when the monks of Clonmacnoise, Swimmers, The, 1419
1909
Swinburne, Algernon Charles, 1146
The apparition of these faces in the crowd, 1297
syllabic meter, 2035
The archivist in us shudders at such cold-, 1990
syllables, 2035
The art of losing isn't hard to master, 1527

syllables, 2028

The Assyrian came down like the wolf on the fold,

Sympathy, 1224

834

Sympathy, A Welcome, A, 1547

The awful shadow of some unseen Power, 864

Syrinx, 1614

The bed we loved in was a spinning world, 2008

The Bible is an antique Volume-, 1127

Tables Turned, The, 764

The Bishop tells us: "When the boys come back,

Table Talk, 1267

1318

Tahoe in August, 1919

The blasts of Autumn as they scatter round, 712

Take, Oh, Take Those Lips Away, 345

The blessed damozel leaned out, 1102

Talking in Bed, 1654

The blue jay scuffling in the bushes follows, 1768

Tam O'Shanter, 754

The boy stood on the burning deck, 899

Task, The, 697

The breaking waves dashed high, 898

Tate, Allen, 1417

The bride she is winsome and bonny, 762

Taylor, Edward, 536

The broken pillar of the wing jags from the clotted

Teach me, my God and King, 383

shoulder, 1321

Tear, The (Crashaw), 468

The burned and dusty garden said, 1251

Tear (Kinsella), 1758

The Bustle in a House, 1126

Tears, idle tears, I know not what they mean, 995

the Cambridge ladies who live in furnished souls,

Telephone Conversation, 1862

1393

Tell all the truth but tell it slant-, 1126

The child between them on the street, 1732

Telling the Bees, 957

The cold remote islands, 1409

Tell me not, sweet, I am unkind, 473

The Colonel in a casual voice, 1622

Tell me, thou gentle shepherd swain, 235

The conversation of prayers about to be said, 1570

Temper, The (I), 372

The cow is of the bovine ilk, 1437

Temple, The: Sacred Poems and Private Ejacula-

The critics say that epics have died out, 948

tions, 367

The crocus armies from the dead, 1836

Temporarily in Oxford, 1847

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day, 669

Tenebrae, 1679

The darkness crumbles away, 1373

Tennyson, Alfred Lord, 982

The demolition crew are petulant, 2015

tercet, 2040

The dog stops barking after Robinson has gone,

“Terence, This Is Stupid S t u f f ... ,” 1177

1560 terza rima, 2040

The doubt of future foes exiles my present joy, 142

tetrameter, 2032

The dowsed coals fume and hiss after your meal,

Thanatopsis, 903

1672

That bony potbellied arrow, wing-pumping along,

The eagle is my power, 1861

1614

Thee for my recitative, 1085

That civilisation may not sink, 1206

The end of everything approaches, 1311

That dream, her eyes like rocks studded the high,

The English are so nice, 1290

1883

The everlasting universe of things, 866

That is no country for old men. The young, 1199

The eyeless labourer in the night, 1577

That kingfisher jewelling upstream, 1510

The eyes open to a cry of pulleys, 1633

That Nature is a Heraclitean Fire and of the comfort

The fairest day that ever yet has shone, 1044

of the Resurrection, 1171

The ferry wades across the kyle. I drive, 1509
That neither fame nor love might wanting be, 324
The first month of his absence, 1574
That night your great guns, unawares, 1157
The fleet astronomer can bore, 374
That note you hold, narrowing and rising, shakes,
The flowers left thick at nightfall in the wood, 1648
1254
That poets are far rarer births than kings, 325
The flower that smiles today, 864
That's my last duchess painted on the wall, 1012
The force that through the green fuse drives the
That there should never be air, 1616
flower, 1566
That the Science of Cartography Is Limited, 1938
The forward youth that would appear, 486
That time of year thou mayst in me behold, 263
The Frost performs its secret ministry, 810
That Whitsun, I was late getting away, 1652
The glories of our blood and state, 390
That would be waving and that would be crying, The grace of Tullies eloquence doth excell, 1873
1265
The guns spell money's ultimate reason, 1505

2 1 7 6 / I N D E X

The hand that signed the paper felled a city, 1567
There is delight in singing, though none hear, 832

The harbingers are come. See, see their mark, 381

There is my country under glass, 1894

The Heart asks Pleasure - first -, 1120

There is no mirror in Mirissa, 1935

The house was quiet and the world was calm, 1267

There is one story and one story only, 1402

The hunchback in the park, 1568

There lived a wife at Usher's Well, 105

The Hun so loved the cry, one falling elephant's,

There's a certain Slant of light, 1114

1959

There's a Grandfather's Clock in the Hall, 1458

The illustration, 1328

There sat down, once, a thing on Henry's heart,

The instructor said, 1434

1549

Their Lonely Betters, 1479

There's blood between us, love, my love, 1130

Their sense is with their senses all mixed in, 1108

There, there where those black spruces crowd,

The keener tempests come: and, fuming dun, 649

1385

The king sits in Dumferling town, 103

There Was an Old Man in a Tree, 1042

The lake was filled with distinguished fish pur-

There Was an Old Man Who Supposed, 1042

chased, 1617

There Was an Old Man with a Beard, 1041

The land was ours before we were the land's, 1243

There was a roaring in the wind all night, 790

The lights off, the clock glowing 2:10, 1996

There was a shepherd's daughter, 113

The little boy lost in the lonely fen, 737

There was a time when meadow, grove, and

The mad are predators. Too often lately they har-stream, 796

bour, 1834

There was a young belle of old Natchez, 1437

Them & [uz], 1873

There was Dai Puw. He was no good, 1545

The man whose height his fear improved he, 1588

There was such speed in her little body, 1367

Theme for English B, 1434

There were never strawberries, 1618

The merchant, to secure his treasure, 568

There were three ravens sat on a tree, 101

The middle of the night, she's wide awake, care-

There will be more of this, 1944

fully lying as far away as she can from him, 1870

The roaring alongside he takes for granted, 1518

The miller's wife had waited long, 1214

The room itself. The women. The absence of

The moon is a poor woman, 1645

women, 2010

"The most beautiful girl in the college," 1956

The sea is calm tonight, 1101

The name of the product I tested is Life, 1786
These are the absolute top of the line, 1991
The nightingale, as soon as April bringeth, 211
These are the original monies of the earth, 1627
The night is dewy as a maiden's mouth, 1222
These, in the day when heaven was falling, 1180
Then it was dusk in Illinois, the small boy, 1740
These little limbs, 531
The noble horse with courage in his eye, 1621
These unshaped islands, on the sawyer's bench,
The nurse-life wheat within his green husk grow-1703
ing, 206
These were my neighbors. It's a big group pose:,
The oaks, how subtle and marine, 1456
2024
The old South Boston Aquarium stands, 1603
The silver swan, who living had no note, 121
Theology, 1813
The skunk cabbage with its smug and opulent
The only legend I have ever loved is, 1941
smell, 1926
The Owl and the Pussy-cat went to sea, 1042
The sky, lazily disdaining to pursue, 1398
The palm at the end of the mind, 1268
The sky unrolls like a rug, 1867
The pear tree that last year, 1684
The smiling mouth and laughing eyen gray, 77

The people along the sand, 1240
The snow came down last night like moths, 1632
The peppertrees, the peppertrees!, 1677
The snow falls deep; the forest lies alone, 894
The petals fall in the fountain, 1296
The soote season, that bud and bloom forth brings,
The plunging limbers over the shattered track, 137
1374
The Soul selects her own Society -, 1118
The price seemed reasonable, location, 1862
The splendor falls on castle walls, 994
The princes of Mercia were badger and raven. The stellar sea crawler, maw, 1925
Thrall, 1833
The straggled soldier halted—stared at Him—,
The rain of London pimples, 1489
1317
The rain set early in tonight, 1009
The sun is warm, the sky is clear, 870
There are no stars to-night, 1410
The sunlight on the garden, 1485
There are some days the happy ocean lies, 1506
The sunlight was falling. A part, 2024
There comes a moment in her veins, 1270
The tattered Hungarian tent, 1935
There Is a Garden in Her Face, 282
The time is come, I must depart, 146

There Is a Lady Sweet and Kind, 121
The time you won your town the race, 1174
There is a land of pure delight, 590
The trees are coming into leaf, 1656
There is a parrot imitating spring, 1985
The trees are in their autumn beauty, 1192
There is a singer everyone has heard, 1233
The tulips are too excitable, it is winter here, 1838
There is a timbre of voice, 1860
The turtle lives 'twixt plated decks, 1438

I N D E X / 2 1 7 7

The unpurged images of day recede, 1202
This day, whate'er the fates decree, 570
The veteran Greeks came home, 1337
This feast-day of the sun, his altar there, 1107
The vicious winter finally yields, 1733
This house has been far out at sea all night, 1811
The Wain upon the northern steep, 1179
This Is a Photograph of Me, 1894
The waves, like ridges of plow'd land, are high, 499
This Is fust to Say, 1274
The whiskey on your breath, 1494
This is the forest primeval. The murmuring pines
The white violet, 1312
and the hemlocks, 951
The whole place airier. Big summer trees, 1908
This is the month, and this the happy morn, 394
The wind billowing out the seat of my britches,

This is the ship of pearl, which, poets feign, 974
1494

This is the time of year, 1519

The wind doth blow today, my love, 104

This is the world we wanted, 1931

The wind flapped loose, the wind was still, 1105

This Living Hand, 940

The wind suffers of blowing, 1425

This Lime-Tree Bower My Prison, 807

The winters close, Springs open, no child stirs, This morning, flew up the lane, 1369

1546

This motley piece to you I send, 645

The wisest scholar of the wight most wise, 214

This one was put in a jacket, 1684

The witch that came (the withered hag), 1241

this poem intentionally left blank, 1968

The woods decay, the woods decay and fall, 1006

This poem is concerned with language on a very

The world is, 1678

plain level, 1739

The world is charged with the grandeur of God,

Thomas, Dylan, 1566

1166

Thomas, Edward, 1253

The World Is Too Much with Us, 802

Thomas, R. S., 1544

The worlds are breaking in my head, 1580

Thomson, James, 649

The world's great age begins anew, 892

Thoreau, Henry David, 1045

The wounds are terrible. The paint is old, 1939

Those blessed structures, plot and rhyme—, 1605

The wretched Flavia, on her couch reclined, 639

Those in the vegetable rain retain, 1583

Th' expense of spirit in a waste of shame, 267

Those long uneven lines, 1653

"They," 1318

Those transparent Dacca gauzes, 1958

They Are All Gone into the World of Light!, 494

Those were the days, 1693

They are not long, the weeping and the laughter,

Those Winter Sundays, 1533

1211

Thou art indeed just, Lord, if I contend, 1172

They are waiting for me somewhere beyond Eden

Thou art not, Penshurst, built to envious show,

Rock, 1591

328

They climbed on sketchy ladders towards God, Thou Black, wherein all colors are compos'd, 346

1681

Thou fair-hair'd angel of the evening, 733

They'd latch the screendoors, 1951

Though authors are a dreadful clan, 1846

The year revolves, and I again explore, 724

Though beauty be the mark of praise, 335
They eat beans mostly, this old yellow pair, 1587
Though I am Young and Cannot Tell, 341
They Feed They Lion, 1761
Though loath to grieve, 943
They Flee from Me, 127
Thought-Fox, The, 1810
They flee from me, that sometime did me seek, 127
Though the unseen may vanish, though insight
They fuck you up, your mum and dad, 1657
fails, 1635
The young, having risen early, had gone, 1832
Thoughts about the Person from Porlock, 1441
They said to my grandmother: “Please do not be Thou hast made me, and shall thy work decay?, bitter,” 1428
318
They say the first dream Adam our father had, Thou ill-formed offspring of my feeble brain, 465 1338
Thou, paw-paw-paw; thou, glurd; thou, spotted,
They serve revolving saucer eyes, 1849
1776
They shut me up in Prose -, 1119
Thousand Martyrs, A, 549
They sing their dearest songs—, 1160
Thou shalt have one God only; who, 1052
They that have power to hurt and will do none,

Thou sorrow, venom elf, 538

265

Thou still unravished bride of quietness, 938

They throw in Drummer Hodge, to rest, 1154

Three Ravens, The, 101

They who in folly or mere greed, 1449

Three Summers since I chose a maid, 1216

They will wash all my kisses and fingerprints off

Three weeks gone and the combatants gone, 1620

you, 1850

Three Years She Grew, 789

Think not this paper comes with vain pretense, 643

Through that pure virgin shrine, 497

Thin little leaves of wood fern, ribbed and toothed,

Throw away thy rod, 382

1086

Thus piteously Love closed what he begat, 1109

Third Epistle to Timothy, 1981

Thy praise or dispraise is to me alike, 324

Thirteen Ways of Looking at a Blackbird, 1260

Thyrsis, 1095

This Be The Verse, 1657

Thy various works, imperial queen, we see, 111

2 1 7 8 / I N D E X

Tichborne, Chidioc, 151

Tonight, grave sir, both my poor house, and I,

Tightly-folded bud, 1648

326

Time Passing, Beloved, 1643
Toomer, Jean, 1398
Timor Mortis, 82
To Penshurst, 328
T i s the year's midnight, and it is the day's, 304
To Robert Browning, 832
'Tis time this heart should be unmoved, 862
To Rosamond, 68
Tithonus, 1006
To see both blended in one flood, 468
Titwillow, 1146
To show the lab'ring bosom's deep intent, 721
To a Chameleon, 1328
To sing of wars, of captains, and of kings, 462
To a Lady: She Refusing to Continue a Dispute with
To Sir Henry Cary, 324
Me, and Leaving Me in the Argument, 567
To Sir Toby, 717
To a Locomotive in Winter, 1085
To S. M., a Young African Painter, on Seeing His
To Althea, from Prison, 472
Works, 721
To Amarantha, That She Would Dishevel Her Hair,
To speak in a flat voice, 17 50
473
To stand here in the wings of Europe, 1622
To a Mouse, 748
To the Evening Star, 733

To an Athlete Dying Young, 1174
To the Fair Clarinda, Who Made Love to Me, Imag-
To a Skylark, 876
ined More Than Woman, 548
To a Steam Roller, 1328
To the Immortal Memory and Friendship of That
To Aunt Rose, 1714
Noble Pair, Sir Lucius Cary and Sir Henry Mor-
To Autumn, 939
ison, 337
To a Waterfowl, 902
To the Infant Martyrs, 468
To be a poet and not know the trade, 1450
To the Lord General Cromwell, 417
To Be Carved on a Stone at Thoor Ballylee, 1198
To the Memory of Mr. Oldham, 523
Toccata of Galuppi's, A, 1017
To the Memory of My Beloved, the Author Mr. Wil-Today as I hang out the wash I see them again, a liam Shakespeare, 342
code, 1975
To the Muses, 732
Today I found the right fruit for my prime, 1875
To the Poor, 706
Today I pass the time reading, 1917
To the Reader, 323
Today we have naming of parts. Yesterday, 1564
To the River Duddon, 1561

To Death, 562
To the Same Purpose, 533
To draw no envy, Shakespeare, on thy name, 342
To the shade of Burns, 711
To Elizabeth, Countess of Rutland, 325
To the Sour Reader, 355
To Emily Dickinson, 1416
To the Thrice-Sacred Queen Elizabeth, 226
To Find God, 362
To the Virgins, to Make Much of Time, 357
To fling my arms wide, 1431
To turn a stone, 1881
To Fool or Knave, 324
Touching your goodness, I am like a man, 1608
To have known him, to have loved him, 1057
Touch Me, 1455
To Helen, 975
Tourists, 1660
To him who in the love of Nature holds, 903
To what purpose, April, do you return again?, 1383
To His Conscience, 361
To Wordsworth, 863
To His Coy Mistress, 478
To you, my purs, and to noon other wight, 69
To His Love (anonymous), 119
Traherne, Thomas, 531
To His Love (Gurney), 1371
Train Journey, 1578

To His Scribe Adam, 70
transitive, 2055
To Homer, 906
Trees, The, 1656
To John Donne, 326
Trees in the Garden, 1289
To Juan at the Winter Solstice, 1402
trimeter, 2032
To live in Wales is to be conscious, 1544
Triple Feature, 1678
To Lucasta, Going to the Wars, 473
trochaic meter, 2030
To make a final conquest of all me, 480
Troilus and Cressida (Dryden), 501
To Marguerite, 1088
Troilus and Criseide (Chaucer), 67
To Mercy, Pity, Peace, and Love, 735
Trout, The, 1785
To Mr. Henry Lawes, 527
Truth, 69
To Mr. H. Lawes, On His Airs, 416
Truth-loving Persians do not dwell upon, 1402
To Mistress Margaret Hussey, 91
Truth the Dead Know, The, 1764
Tomlinson, Charles, 1746
Ts 'aiChi 'h, 1296
Tommy, 1181
Tuckerman, Frederick Goddard, 1086

Tom o' Bedlam's Song, 124

Tuckett. Bill Tuckett. Telegraph operator, Hall's

To My Dear and Loving Husband, 465

Creek, 1890

To My Excellent Lucasia, on Our Friendship, 530

Tulips, 1838

To My Twenties, 1694

turn, 2042

INDEX / 2179

Turning and turning in the widening gyre, 1196

Valediction Forbidding Mourning, A (Donne), 306

Turtle, The, 1438

Valediction Forbidding Mourning, A (Rich), 1796

Twa Corbies?, The, 102

Valediction of the Book, A, 301

'Twas brillig, and the slithy toves, 1135

Valediction of Weeping, A, 300

'Twas mercy brought me from my pagan land, 720

Valentine, 1948

'Twas on a Holy Thursday, their innocent faces Van Duyn, Mona, 1629

clean, 734

Vanity of Human Wishes, The, 656

'Twas on a lofty vase's side, 668

Vanity (I), 374

'Twas Summer and the sun was mounted high, 768

Vanity, saith the preacher, vanity!, 1014

Twelve Songs, 1470

Variations Done for Gerald Van De Wiele, 1512

Twilight Polka Dots, 1617

Variations on a Fragment by Trumbull Stickney,

Twirling your blue skirts, travelling the sward,

1777

1368

Variations on a Theme by William Carlos Williams,

Twitched in her belly, or he raised a fist, 1 507

1693

Two Figures, 1862

Vaughan, Henry, 490

Two from Israel, 1884

V. B. Nimble, V. B. Quick, 1846

Two in the Campagna, 1040

Veni Coronaberis, 1836

Two Lorries, 1909

Vergissmeinnicht, 1620

Two loves I have of comfort and despair, 269

verse paragraphs, 2 0 4 0

Two roads diverged in a yellow wood, 1232

Verses on the Death of Dr. Swift, D.S.P.D., 577

Two Songs, 1448

Very, Jones, 1044

Tyger, The, 743

Very few people know where they will die, 1767

Tyger! Tyger! burning bright, 743

Victor Dog, The, 1719

View from the Window, The, 1 544

Ubi Sunt Qui ante Nos Fuerunt?, 16
Vigil Strange I Kept on the Field One Night, 1071
Ulcerated tooth keeps me awake, there is, 1629
villanelle, 2045
Ultima Ratio Regum, 1505
Vine, The, 354
Ulysses, 992
Virtue, 375
Ulysses and the Siren, 233
Vision upon the Fairy Queen, A, 151
Under Ben Bulben, 1208
Vitae summa brevis spem nos vetat incohare longam,
Under the bronze crown, 1635
1211
Under the Greenwood Tree, 273
Vita Nova, 1932
Under the separated leaves of shade, 1556
Voice, The, 1160
Under the Waterfall, 1159
vowel rhyme, 2038
Undesirable you may have been, untouchable, Voyages, 1411
1832 Unfortunate Coincidence, 1391
wade, 1328
Unhappy pen and ill accepted papers, 233
Wake! For the Sun, who scattered into flight, 961
Universal Prayer, The, 635
Wake: the silver dusk returning, 1173

Unjustly I've imposed upon my friends, 2024
Waking, The, 1 500
Unquiet Grave, The, 104
Waking from a nap, 1502
Unreal tall as a myth, 1447
Waking from Sleep, 1704
Unto the boundless Ocean of thy beauty, 230
Walcott, Derek, 1820
Up, 1898
Walker, Margaret, 1576
Up, black, striped and damasked like the chasuble,
Walking with you and another lady, 1902
1902
Walk the horses down the hill, 1560
Updike, John, 1846
Waller, Edmund, 393
Up from the bronze, I saw, 1408
Walls Do Not Fall, The, 1315
Up-Hill, 1129
War is Kind, 1221
Upon a Child That Died, 358
Warming Her Pearls, 2007
Upon a Spider Catching a Fly, 538
Warning to Children, 1401
Upon a time, before the faery broods, 918
War Poet, 1647
Upon Ben Jonson, 360
Warren, Robert Penn, 1456

Upon Julia's Breasts, 358
Waste Land, The, 1344
Upon Julia's Clothes, 359
Watch Repair, 1891
*Upon My Lady Carlisle's Walking in Hampton Court
Water*, 1602
Garden, 453
Waterbird, 1542
Upon Prue, His Maid, 360
Waterfall, The, 496
Upon the Infant Martyrs, 468
Watts, Isaac, 589
Upon Wedlock, and Death of Children, 537
Waving Adieu, Adieu, Adieu, 126 5
Up! Up! My Friend, and quit your books, 764
Way a Ghost Dissolves, The, 1674
Urania, 353
Way Down South in Dixie, 1432
2 1 8 0 / I N D E X
We are the hollow men, 1356
What the Men Talk About When the Women Leave
We are things of dry hours and the involuntary plan,
the Room, 2010
1586
What the Spider Heard, 1559
Weary Blues, The, 1429
What though they conquer us?, 1270
Weather-Cock Points South, The, 1248

What thoughts I have of you tonight, Walt Whit-Weeps out of western country something new, 1586
man, for I walked down the sidestreets under the Weep You No More, Sad Fountains, 120 trees with a headache self-conscious looking at Wee, sleeket, cow'rin, tim'rous beastie, 748
the full moon, 1713
We finished clearing the last, 1816
What was he doing, the great god Pan, 950
We have sat here in too many poetry readings,
Wheatley, Phillis, 719
1993
When all the others were away at Mass, 1905
Weigh me the fire; or canst thou find, 362
When a man hath no freedom to fight for at home,
We lay red roses on his grave, 1536
862
Welcome, Major Poet!, 1993
Whenas in silks my Julia goes, 359
Well! If the bard was weather-wise, who made, 828
When beauty breaks and falls asunder, 1407
Well then; I now do plainly see, 470
When by thy scorn, O murd'ress, I am dead, 295
Well, they are gone, and here must I remain, 807
When chapman billies leave the street, 754
Welsh Landscape, 1544
When Daisies Pied, XII
We met the British in the dead of winter, 1980

“Whenever I plunge my arm, like this, 11 59
We must look at the harebell as if, 1380
Whenever Richard Cory went down town, 1212
We passengers ride backward on the train, 2023
When first thou didst entice to thee my heart, 369
We put a prop beneath the sagging bough, 1504
When for the thorns with which I long, too long,
We Real Cool, 1 588
475
Were beth they biforen us weren, 16
When forty winters shall besiege thy brow, 258
Were I laid on Greenland’s coast, 595
When God at first made man, 379
We sat together at one summer’s end, 1190
When His Excellency Prince Norodom Chantar-
We shall sleep-out together through the dark, 1748
aingsey, 1961
Wesley, Charles, 652
When I a verse shall make, 358
Western Wind, 84
When I consider everything that grows, 259
We stood by a pond that winter day, 1153
When I Consider How My Light Is Spent, 418
West-Running Brook, 1238
When I do count the clock that tells the time, 258
We watched from the house, 2006
When I Have Fears, 906
We Wear the Mask, 1223

When I Heard the Leant 'd Astronomer, 1071

We went out, 2022

When I lie where shades of darkness, 1226

When that April with his showres soote, 19

When, in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes, 260

What are we first? First, animals; and next, 1108

When in the chronicle of wasted time, 265

What Are Years?, 1334

When in the sun the hot red acres smoulder, 1436

What art thou, Spleen, which ev'ry thing dost ape?,

When I see birches bend to left and right, 1233

558

When Israel came from Egypt's coast, 685

What bright soft thing is this?, 468

When Israel did depart th'Egyptians from among,

What can it avail, 92

392

What dire offense from amorous causes springs, When Isr'el, freed from Pharaoh's hand, 593

604

When I was a child I new red miners, 1 577

What Friendship is, Ardelia show, 563

When I Was Fair and Young, 142

What happens to a dream deferred?, 1433

When I Watch the Living Meet, 1174

What, have I thus betrayed my liberty?, 215

When Learning's triumph o'er her barbarous foes,

What heartache—ne'er a hill!, 1162

655

What is Africa to me, 1443

When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloom'd, 1078

What is it men in women do require?, 746

When Lovely Woman Stoops to Folly, 686

What is our innocence, 1334

When Love with unconfined wings, 472

What large, dark hands are those at the window,

When men shall find thy flower, thy glory pass,

1284

231

What Length of Verse?, 210

When midnight comes a host of dogs and men, 893

What needs my Shakespeare for his honored bones,

When my devotions could not pierce, 374

401

When my grave is broke up again, 310

What on Earth deserves our trust?, 526

When my love swears that she is made of truth,

What passing-bells for these who die as cattle?,

268

1386

When night's black mantle could most darkness

What's Going On, 2015

prove, 347

What Should I Say, 132

When science starts to be interpretive, 1288

What should one, 1746

When she tells him about the lump in her breast,
What summer proposes is simply happiness, 1919
2009

I N D E X / 2 1 8 1

When That I Was and a Little Tiny Boy, 276

Whoever You Are, 1745

When the fierce north wind with his airy forces,
Who has ever stopped to think of the divinity of 589

Lamont Cranston?, 1856

When the hounds of spring are on winter's traces,
Who owns these scrawny little feet? Death, 1813
1146

Who says that fictions only and false hair, 373

When the Lease Is Up, 1 560

Whose broken window is a cry of art, 1 589

When the Present has latched its postern behind

Whose is this horrifying face, 1581

my tremulous stay, 1162

Whose senses in so evil consort, their stepdame

When they were wild, 2006

Nature lays, 219

When Thou Must Home, 280

Whose woods these are I think I know, 1237

When thou, poor excommunicate, 387

Who shall doubt, Donne, where I a poet be, 326

When to Her Lute Corinna Sings, 280

Whoso List to Hunt, 126

When to the sessions of sweet silent thought, 261
Who will in fairest book of Nature know, 217
When we for age could neither read nor write, Who will remember, passing through this Gate, 393 1320
When We Two Parted, 835
Why, asks a friend, attempt tetrameter?, 1995
When You Are Old, 1190
Why Brownlee Left, 1979
When you come, as you soon must, to the streets of Why don't people leave off being lovable, 1288
our city, 1637
Why I Am Not a Painter, 1730
When you consider the radiance, that it does not Why is my verse so barren of new pride, 264 withhold, 1698
Why should I blame her that she filled my days,
Where are the War Poets?, 1449
1191
Where dips the rocky highland, 1188
Why so pale and wan, fond lover?, 452
Where dost thou careless lie, 336
why we ask you not to touch, 1968
Where has tenderness gone, he asked the mirror,
“Why, William, on that old gray stone, 763 1503
Wife of Bath's Prologue and Tale, The, 39
Where Have All the Flowers Gone?, 1853

Wife of Usher's Well, The, 105
Where, like a pillow on a bed, 307
Wife's Lament, The, II
Where she lived the close remained the best, 1674
Wilbur, Richard, 1632
Where the Bee Sucks, There Suck I, 277
Wild Bees, 1701
Where the remote Bermudas ride, 476
Wild Cherry, The, 1 504
Where they will bury me, 1847
Wild nights - Wild nights!, 1114
Whether on Ida's shady brow, 732
Wild Swans at Coole, The, 1192
Which I wish to say is this, 1249
Willed down, waited for, in place at last and for While my hair was still cut straight across my fore-good, 1907
head, 1297
Williams, C. K., 1869
While the south rains, the north, 1664
Williams, William Carlos, 1272
While this America settles in the mold of its vul-Williamson, Greg, 2023
garity, heavily thickening to empire, 1320
Will it last? he says, 1382
While you walk the water's edge, 1609
Will there be time for egg-nogs and eclogues, 1559
White as the sacrament, in my grandmother's house

Wilmot, John, Earl of Rochester, 549
the mantles, 1946
Wilner, Eleanor, 1879
White Goddess, The, 1404
Wilt thou forgive that sin where I begun, 321
White-habited, the mystic Swan, 1830
Wind, 1811
White Island, or Place of the Blest, The, 361
Windhover, The, 1166
White Knight's Song, The, 1137
Window, The (Mahon), 1923
White sky, over the hemlocks bowed with snow,
Windows, The (G. Herbert), 373
1384
Wind Suffers, The, 1425
White the October air, no snow, easy to breathe,
Wine Bowl, 1313
1729
Winters at home brought wind, 1887
Whither, 'midst falling dew, 902
Winter uncovers distances, I find, 1270
Whitman, Walt, 1060
Wintry Mind, The, 1270
Whitney, Isabella, 146
Wish, The, 470
Whitsun Weddings, The, 1652
Wish for a Young Wife, 1501
Whittier, John Greenleaf, 957

With blackest moss the flower-plots, 982

who are you, little i, 1397

With how sad steps, Oh Moon, thou climb'st the

Who decrees a great epoch? The meridian of Green-skies, 214

wich, 1827

With my forked branch of Lebanese cedar, 1619

Who died on the wires, and hung there, one of With old hours all belfry heads, 1426

two—, 1372

With Rue My Heart Is Laden, 1177

Whoever comes to shroud me, do not harm, 309

With what deep murmurs through time's silent

Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy Will, 268 stealth, 496

2 1 8 2 / I N D E X

Woman much missed, how you call to me, call to

Yes, I remember Adlestrop—, 1253

me, 1160

Yesterday all the past. The language of size, 1466

Woman's Constancy, 294

Yet Do I Marvel, 1446

Woman to Man, 1577

Yet is there hope: then Love but play thy part, 347

Wonder, 532

Yet once more, O ye laurels and once more, 410

Wood-Pile, The, 1232

Ye tradefull Merchants that with weary toyle, 191

Woodspurge, The, 1105

Yet there is no great problem in the world to-day,

Word over all, beautiful as the sky, 1078

1376

Word's gane to the kitchen, 108

You are my secret coat. You're never dry, 1992

Wordsworth, William, 763

You are the bread and the knife, 1918

World, The (Creeley), 1706

You Begin, 1896

World, The (Vaughan), 493

You Can Have It, 1761

World Where News Travelled Slowly, A, 2016

You did not come, 1154

Wouldst thou hear what man can say, 328

You do not do, you do not do, 1840

Would you believe, when you this monsieur see,

You little stars that live in skies, 206

325

You love us when we're heroes, home on leave, 1319

Wright, Charles, 1865

You must not wonder, though you think it strange,

Wright, James, 1749

144

Wright, Judith, 1577

You, once a belle in Shreveport, 1791

Wright, Kit, 1946

Your absence has gone through me, 1744

Wright, Richard, 1502

Your ashes will not stir, even on this high ground,

Written after Swimming from Sestos to Abydos, 833

1921

Written in October, 712

Your endless torments that my rest oppress, 348

Written in the Church Yard at Middleton in Sussex,

Your footprints of light on sensitive paper, 1800

711

Your hands lie open in the long fresh grass—, 1106

Written Near a Port on a Dark Evening, 112

Your mind and you are our Sargasso Sea, 1295

Wyatt, Thomas, 126

Your thighs are appletrees, 1273

Wyatt Resteth Here, 138

Your words my friend (right healthful caustics)

Wroth, Mary, 347

blame, 214

Wylie, Elinor, 1310

You saved me, you should remember me, 1932

Youth's the season made for joys, 595

Yachts, The, 1275

you've seen a strawberry, 1334

Years and years ago, these sounds took sides, 1906

You wake up filled with dread, 1898

Yeats, William Butler, 1188

You were the one for skylights. I opposed, 1908

Ye congregation of the tribes, 684

You Were Wearing, 1692

Ye distant spires, ye antique towers, 666

You who desired so much—in vain to ask—, 1416

Ye flowery banks o' bonie Doon, 759

You would think the fury of aerial bombardment,

Ye Goatherd Gods, 208

1450

Ye learned sisters which have oftentimes, 195

Yves Tanguy, 1580

Ye living lamps, by whose dear light, 483

Yes, crazy to suppose one could describe them—,

Zarin, Cynthia, 2013

1913

Z ea, 1640

Yes, injured Woman! rise, assert thy right!, 705

zeugma, 205 3

Yes! in the sea of life enisled, 1088

Zulu Girl, The, 1436